1 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Author(s)

Author(s)

CONSUMER CREDIT LAW MANUAL

NATIONAL CONSUMER LAW CENTER BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS
2010

2 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: http://www.lexis.com

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call: Commercial and General Business
James J. Motley, J.D. james.j.motley@lexisnexis.com at 800.252.9257 or 908.673.1529
For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:
Customer Services Department at (800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000
Fax Number (518) 487-3584
For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call
Your account manager or (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000

3 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Cite As

Cite As

Cite as: [Vol. no.] Consumer Credit Law Manual § [sec. no.] (Matthew Bender)

Example: 1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.01 (Matthew Bender)

4 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.
ISBN: 978-0-8205-3045-1
Library of Congress Card Number: 98-23760

5 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Foreword

Foreword

Foreword

This volume is the collaborative effort of a number of National Consumer Law Center staff attorneys and consumer law experts around the country. Deanne Loonin, Elizabeth Ryan, and Bruce Plenk are principally responsible for writing this volume. Elizabeth Renuart, Robert Hobbs, Willard Ogburn, Katherine Fitzgerald, Margot Saunders, Rita Pereira, and Jonathan Sheldon all assisted. We also want to thank Elinor Reinhardt for her editing.

All of these individuals are also indebted to the much larger number of contributors to other NCLC publications upon which this volume is based. While these individuals are too many to list here, we wish to acknowledge all those who participated in the following NCLC manuals: Fair Debt Collection, Truth in Lending, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, Fair Credit Reporting Act, Repossessions and Foreclosures, Cost of Credit, Student Loan Law, Credit Discrimination, and Access to Utility Service.

6 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Publisher's Editorial Staff

Publisher's Editorial Staff

ELINOR REINHARDT, J.D.
Director, Content Development

JAMES J. MOTLEY, J.D.
Legal Editor

JULIE E. FISHER
Index Editor

SHARON BURNS
Publishing Operations Manager

JOHN PRICE
Coordinator, Publishing Operations

JOHN F. CAPACCIONE
Publishing Operations Senior Analyst

7 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Consumer Law Publications From The National Consumer Law Center

Consumer Law Publications From The National Consumer Law Center

Consumer Law Publications From The National Consumer Law Center

Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice with CD-Rom

Fair Debt Collection with CD-Rom

Repossessions and Foreclosures with CD-Rom

Student Loan Law with CD-Rom

Access to Utility Service with CD-Rom

Truth in Lending with CD-Rom

Fair Credit Reporting Act with CD-Rom

Consumer Banking and Payments Law with CD-Rom

The Cost of Credit with CD-Rom

Credit Discrimination with CD-Rom

Consumer Arbitration Agreements with CD-Rom

Consumer Class Actions with CD-Rom

Consumer Law Pleadings on CD-Rom with Index Guide

Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices with CD-Rom

Automobile Fraud with CD-Rom

Consumer Warranty Law with CD-Rom

NCLC REPORTS Newsletter

Consumer Law in a Box CD-Rom

Stop Predatory Lending with CD-Rom

NCLC Guide to Surviving Debt

National Consumer Law Center

77 Summer Street, 10th Floor

Boston, MA 02110

617-542-8010

www.consumerlaw.org

publications@nclc.org

8 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 Consumer Credit Law Manual Scope

Scope

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 12 November 2010

Highlights

This release of Consumer Credit Law Manual contains updates and revisions to Chapters 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 15, and 16 to provide the current status of consumer credit law, including recent developments in case and statutory law.

The new 2010 edition of the Consumer Credit Law Manual Primary Source Pamphlet includes up-to-date changes to statutes and regulations.

Chapter 1--Truth in Lending. The Truth in Lending Act seeks to guarantee the accurate and meaningful disclosure of the costs of consumer credit. Regulation Z, promulgated by the Federal Reserve Board, implements the TILA. TILA covers "open-end" credit, such as that employed with most credit cards, and "closed-end" end credit, fixed-term credit transactions, such as most mortgages.

For closed-end transactions, the "annual percentage rate" must be disclosed. The coverage of APR disclosure in § 1.05[e][iii] has been expanded to include discussion of variable rate transactions.

New § 1.05[h] covers special disclosures for student loans. Lenders making private student loans are now required to provide special disclosures. There are three sets of required disclosures: (1) application and solicitation; (2) loan approval; and (3) final disclosures. Each is subject to special timing rules and detailed form and content requirements. All disclosures must be made clearly and conspicuously.

Open-end credit regulations are discussed in § 1.07. The coverage notes that the Credit Card Accountability, Responsibility and Disclosure (CARD) Act added a number of substantive protections and new disclosure requirements concerning open-end credit, and that the Board must now revise Regulation Z due to the Credit CARD Act.

Regulation Z sets forth all the items concerning credit costs and terms required to be disclosed in credit and charge card applications and solicitations. The discussion in § 1.07[2], pertaining to disclosure requirements in credit and charge card applications and solicitations, has been expanded to note that now certain additional disclosures will required to be made in a tabular format. The disclosures required to be made in tabular format will include credit and charge card applications and solicitations, account-opening disclosures, and notice of penalty rate imposition.

Chapter 2--High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections. Chapter 2 has been updated to provide the current status of the law. New case citations include: Laudani v. Tribeca Lending Corp. (In re Laudani), 401 B.R. 9, 32-33 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2009) .

Chapter 3--The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases. Chapter 3 has been updated to provide the current status of the law. New case citations include: In re Northwest Airlines Corp., 393 B.R. 352 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2008) ; Hart v. Autowest Dodge, 147 Cal. App. 4th 1258 (2007) .

Chapter 4--Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices. All fifty states have enacted at least one statute with broad applicability to most consumer transactions aimed at preventing consumer deception and abuse in the marketplace. Many of these statutes are patterned after the language found in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which prohibits "unfair or deceptive acts or practices." State UDAP statutes can be used to challenge abusive credit practices. Challenges can also be raised under RICO. Several new case citations have been provided. Of particular note, the United States Supreme Court, in Boyle v. United States, 129 S. Ct. 2237 (2009) , loosened the definition of what constitutes an association-in-fact enterprise for purposes of establishing a RICO claim. Under Boyle, an association-in-fact enterprise must have three structural features: (1) a purpose; (2) relationships among those associated with the enterprise; and (3) longevity sufficient to permit these associates to pursue the enterprise's purposes.

Chapter 5--Credit Discrimination. Chapter 5 has been updated to provide the current status of the law. New case citations include: Robinson v. Schafer, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36900 (M.D. Ga. May 6, 2008) ; Chiang v. Schafer, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64654 (D. V.I. Aug. 20, 2008) .

Chapter 6--The Cost of Credit. The oldest of the statutes that limit the cost of credit are so-called "general" usury statutes, which purport to set the maximum rate of interest that can be charged in any "loan" transaction in a given jurisdiction. Numerous federal statutes and regulations preempt state usury laws with respect to some lenders, transactions, and practices that might otherwise lead to illegal overcharges. New § 6.02[13] notes that Congress recently enacted the Military Lending Act. The Act imposes a 36% interest rate cap, bans mandatory arbitration, and imposes other restrictions on consumer credit. This is the first time that Congress has re-imposed a usury cap for certain types of credit since legislation responding to the Great Depression.

A distinct form of overcharge often occurs when credit is retired early by prepayment of the debt. Since the amount of interest due is in part a function of the time the credit is outstanding, shortening the time should reduce the amount of interest the borrower pays. But sometimes the creditor imposes hidden charges. Almost all state consumer credit statutes require the rebate of unearned interest and insurance charges. Section 6.03[1] newly notes that even in the absence of a specific statute or contract provision requiring a rebate, a court may impose such a requirement based on an equitable principle that unearned interest must be deducted upon acceleration and payment of a debt prior to maturity, and lists relevant state statutes.

The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) seeks to protect consumers from unnecessarily high settlement charges and certain abusive practices that have developed in the residential real estate industry. Section 6.09[1][a] has been updated to note that HUD has released amendments to Regulation X, most of which are effective January 1, 2010. The amendments significantly alter RESPA disclosure requirements. The new rules, among other things, standardize the good faith estimates, limit increases on most fees, unless circumstances change, and revamp settlement statements.

Chapter 8--Fair Debt Collection. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act restricts debt collectors' collection efforts and choice of venue. It establishes general standards of proscribed conduct, defines and restricts abusive collection acts, and provides specific rights for consumers. Section 8.02[1][f][vi], covering attorneys' ethical duties regarding the FDCPA, has been expanded to include discussion of ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-104(A)(2), which permits a lawyer to advise a self-represented person adverse to the lawyer's client to seek his or her own counsel and to make certain other related statements.

The FDCPA generally prohibits a collector from communicating with any person other than the consumer in connection with the collection of any debt. Section 8.03[2][e][ii], covers situation s in which debt collectors leave voicemail messages for consumers. The leading case on this issue, Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) , held that a debt collector must leave the section 1692e(11) disclosure in a voicemail that the caller is a debt collector, a statement that may not be made to third parties under section 1692c(b), thus prohibiting a debt collector from leaving messages with most third parties.

The FDCPA prohibits a collector from actually or implicitly impersonating an attorney. Section 8.03[4][g] discusses Rosenau v. Unifund Corp., 539 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2008) , in which the Third Circuit found an FDCPA deception violation where a collection letter indicated it was from the debt buyer's "Legal Department," and the unit sending the letter was not supervised or staffed by any lawyers.

The FDCPA gives consumers the right to obtain verification of a debt from the collector. The discussion in § 8.03[6][c][ii] has been expanded, noting that FTC staff has generally refused requests to provide a definitive position on what information is sufficient to verify a debt under 15 U.S.C. § 1692g. The section also notes that when the amount of the debt is disputed, the collector must verify the amount, and also that charging a fee for verification violates the FDCPA.

Section 8.05[7], which reviews certain possible barriers to FDCPA suits, has added discussion of Kelley v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 548 F.3d 600 (7th Cir. 2008) . In that case, The Seventh Circuit upheld a Rooker-Feldman defense in a post-Exxon case arising out of attorney fees awarded in connection with medical debt collections actions in small claims court. The Seventh Circuit found that certain of the plaintiff's claims were not independent of the state court judgment for the attorney fees.

Chapter 12--Student Loans and Trade School Abuses. One of the most common forms of consumer loans are student loans, and student loan collections raise numerous special issues. Federal law provides collectors and student loan debtors with many special rights and responsibilities.

The Department of Education issued proposed regulations in August 2009 to implement new Pell Grant program provisions. Under the proposed regulations students will be eligible for a second scheduled award if the student has earned in an award year at least the credit or clock hours of the first academic year of the student's eligible program and if the student is enrolled as at least a half-time student in a program leading to a bachelor's or associate degree or other recognized educational credential. A review of the proposed amendments has been added to the discussion of Pell grants in §12.02[7].

The discussion of wage garnishment in § 12.04[b] has been expanded to note that accounts should not be submitted to garnishment while a borrower is still negotiating repayment, and to review certain aspects of the rehabilitation regulations, which require that borrowers make voluntary reasonable and affordable payments.

New § 12.05[1][c] has been added to cover new in-school deferment provisions for parent PLUS borrowers created in the 2008 Higher Education Opportunity Act.

Unlike federal loans, there is no federal law requiring private student loan creditors or servicers to offer deferments or forbearances. New § 12.05[2][b] has been added to cover private loan deferments and forbearances.

Chapter 13--Foreclosure Defense. Foreclosure procedures are wholly determined by state law, the details of which vary from state to state.

A growing number of states and localities are implementing foreclosure mediation programs to help homeowners avoid foreclosure. The mortgage industry is increasingly willing to modify loans, but, because servicers are insufficiently staffed, mediation is sometimes the only chance a homeowner has for serious negotiation over modifying a loan. State and local mediation programs vary widely in design. New § 13.03[6][d][iii] reviews loan modification and mediation.

New § 13.03[6][d][xi] has been added to cover negotiating an affordable and sustainable loan modification. It includes an analysis of the net present value test. Once the terms of a proposed modification are established, the net present value of the money the investor would receive under the proposed modification is compared to what would be received if no modification were made. If the servicer can expect a greater return from modifying the mortgage, then the servicer should modify and not foreclose on the mortgage.

Several states have enacted legislation that requires mortgage holders to provide identifying information about themselves and their interest in the property when they foreclose. The disclosure requirements can serve as a basis for ascertaining claims related to the standing and real-party-in-interest status of the foreclosing party. A discussion appears in new § 13.04[2][a][v].

Chapter 16--Fair Credit Reporting. The Fair Credit Reporting Act regulates the activities of credit reporting agencies, users of credit reports, and those who furnish information about consumers to reporting agencies. The FCRA is intended to protect consumers from invasion of privacy and the dissemination of false, outdated, or misleading information by placing various obligations on persons who use or disseminate credit information about consumers. Consumer reporting agencies must adopt reasonable procedures to ensure that the information they disseminate is accurate and up-to-date and that it is furnished only to users with certain permissible purposes.

The FCRA establishes minimum standards of accuracy for creditors and other furnishers initially providing information about consumers to consumer reporting agencies. New § 16.05[2][c][i] covers furnisher accuracy and integrity guidelines. The guidelines apply to the accuracy and integrity of information furnishers are to provide to consumer reporting agencies; related regulations require furnishers to establish reasonable policies and procedures for implementing those guidelines. While having a set of policies and procedures is mandatory, compliance with all of the guidelines is not.

A furnisher's policies and procedures regarding accuracy and integrity must be in writing. The regulation requires the policies and procedures to be appropriate to the business's nature and size. Furnishers are required to periodically review and update their policies and procedures for accuracy and integrity as necessary to ensure their continued effectiveness.

2010 Consumer Credit Law Manual Primary Source Pamphlet. The updated and revised 2010 edition of the Primary Source Pamphlet includes up-to-date revisions to consumer credit regulations and statutes. Affected material includes changes to Regulation Z and the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

Index. The index has been comprehensively revised with this release.

Table of Cases. The Table of Cases has been comprehensively revised with this release.

Table of Statutes. The Table of Statutes has been comprehensively revised with this release.

UCC, Commercial Contracts, and Business Law Center. The UCC, Commercial Contracts, and Business Law Center at http://law.lexisnexis.com/practiceareas/commercial explores the latest news, trends, and issues in commercial law to help you complete your day-to-day work.

The center includes commentaries from our experts on the latest legal developments and highlights the emerging issues impacting your practice. The center is also geared to offer you the ability to comment, share, and participate in specific blogs. Explore the UCC, Commercial Contracts, and Business Law Center today!

9 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual 1.syn

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: Truth in Lending

§ 1.01 Introduction

§ 1.02 Sources of Law in Truth in Lending Cases

§ 1.03 Scope of TILA

[1] Definitions of "Credit" and "Creditor."

[a] Definition of "Consumer Credit."

[b] Definition of "Creditor."

[2] Exempt Transactions

§ 1.04 The Finance Charge

[1] Introduction to the Finance Charge

[2] Basic Definition of Finance Charge

[a] Any Charge

[b] Payable Directly or Indirectly by the Consumer

[c] Imposed Directly or Indirectly by the Creditor

[d] As an Incident to or a Condition of the Extension of Credit

[3] Examples of Finance Charges

[4] TIL's "Exclusionary" Rules: Taking Charges Out of the Finance Charge

[a] TIL Exclusions: Application Fees

[b] TIL Exclusions: Late Charges, Over-the-Limit Fees, and Other Delinquency Charges

[c] TIL Exclusions: Credit Insurance

[d] TIL Exclusions: Real Estate and Residential Mortgage Transaction Charges

[i] Classes of Real Estate Closing Charges: What's Excludable; What's Not

[A] Real Property, Title-Related Fees

[B] Document Fees; Closing Agent/Attorney Fees

[C] Notary, Appraisal, and Credit Report Fees

[D] Escrow Costs

[E] Fees for Post-Consummation Services

[e] TIL Exclusions: Security Interest Charges; Filing and Recording Fees

§ 1.05 Closed-End Credit Disclosures

[1] Introduction

[2] Required Closed-End Disclosures

[a] Form of Required Disclosures

[b] Timing of Required Disclosures

[c] Basis of Disclosures

[d] Determining Which Disclosures Are Required

[e] Special Consumer Relief Disclosures

[i] Amount Financed

[ii] Disclosure of the Finance Charge

[A] 1995 Amendments and Tolerances for Error

[iii] Annual Percentage Rate Disclosure

[iv] Disclosure of the Payment Schedule

[v] Disclosure of the Total of Payments

[vi] Disclosure of Security Interests

[f] Disclosure Requirements Tied to Actual Damage Relief Only

[i] Identity of the Creditor

[ii] Itemization of the Amount Financed

[iii] Demand Feature

[iv] Total Sale Price

[v] Prepayment Disclosures

[vi] Late Payment Charges

[vii] Insurance Charges

[viii] Security Interest Charges

[ix] Information Found Elsewhere in the Contract

[x] Mortgage Lenders' Assumption Policy

[xi] Required Deposits

[g] Special Disclosures for Variable-Rate Loans

[h] Special Disclosures for Student Loans

§ 1.06 Disclosure Requirements for Refinancings and Other Subsequent Occurrences

[1] Refinancings

[2] "Loan-Splitting" and Refinancing

[3] Rate Adjustments in Variable-Rate Transactions

[a] Adjustable Rate Mortgages

[b] Other Variable-Rate Transactions

[4] Renewals

[5] APR Reduction

[6] Court Agreements

[7] Workout Agreements

[8] Insurance Renewals

§ 1.07 Open-End Credit Regulations

[1] Scope of TIL Open-End Credit Regulations

[a] Definition of Open-End Credit

[b] Definition of "Creditor."

[c] Cardholder

[2] Required Disclosures in Applications and Solicitations

[a] APR Disclosure

[b] Teaser Rates

[c] Variable-Rate Disclosure

[d] Penalty Rates

[e] Fees for Issuance or Availability

[f] Minimum Finance Charge

[g] Transaction Charge for Purchases

[h] Grace Period for Purchases

[i] Balance Computation Method for Purchases

[j] Due and Payable Statement

[k] Additional Fee Disclosure

[i] Direct Mail Applications and Solicitations

[ii] Telephone Applications and Solicitations

[iii] Applications and Solicitations Made Available to General Public

[3] Preemption of State Laws

[4] Required Initial Disclosures

[5] Periodic Statement Requirements

[a] General Periodic Statement Requirements

[b] Change in Credit Card Account Insurance Provider

[6] Billing Error Procedures

[a] Introduction and Definitions

[b] Notice of Billing Error

[7] Additional Open-End TILA Requirements

[a] Prompt Crediting of Consumer Payments

[b] Treatment of Credit Balances

[c] Record Retention Requirements

[d] Prohibition on Terminating Accounts

[e] Restrictions on Issuing a Credit Card

[f] Credit Card Advertising

[g] Creditor Cannot Offset Consumer's Deposit Account to Pay Credit Card Account

[h] Customer's Liability for Unauthorized Use of a Credit Card

[8] Cardholder's Claims and Defenses

[9] Home Equity Lines of Credit (HELCs)

[a] Introduction and Definitions

[b] Substantive Limitations

[i] Indices for Variable-Rate HELCs

[ii] Early Termination of HELCs

[A] Fraud

[B] Default

[C] Security Endangered

[iii] Unilateral Change in Terms

[A] Events Provided for in the Contract

[B] Change Index and Margin

[C] Changes Made by Written Agreement

[D] Beneficial Changes

[E] Insignificant Changes

[F] Temporary Suspensions of Credit and Reductions of Credit Limit

[iv] Refund of Fees

[v] Nonrefundable Fees

[c] Early Disclosure Rules

[d] Additional Disclosures

[e] Additional Advertising Rules for HELCs

[f] HELC Remedies

§ 1.08 Truth in Lending Rescission Rights

[1] Scope of Rescission Rights

[2] Transactions Exempt From Rescission

[a] Transactions to Purchase or Construct a Residence Are Exempt

[b] Certain Refinancings Are Exempt

[i] Series of Advances

[c] State Agency as Creditor

[3] Required Disclosures of Rescission Rights: Who, What, and When

[a] Who Has TIL Rescission Rights?

[b] Form and Content of Notices

[c] Timing of Right to Rescind

[i] The Three-Day Unconditional Right

[ii] The Extended Right to Rescind

[4] Creditor Must Delay Performance During Rescission Period

[5] Waiver of Right to Rescind

[6] Rescission as a Defense to Foreclosure

[a] General

[b] Rescission by Recoupment After the Three-Year Period

[c] Violations Giving Rise to the Extended Right to Rescind

[i] Nondelivery

[ii] Failure to Make Material Disclosures Properly

[iii] Higher Priced Mortgage Loans

[iv] Violations Regarding the Notice of Right to Rescind

[v] Violation of Delay of Performance Rule

[7] How Rescission Works

[8] Remedies for Creditors' Noncompliance With Rescission Requirements

§ 1.09 Creditor Defenses and Counterclaims

[1] Statute of Limitations

[2] Statutory Defenses

[a] Good Faith Conformity

[b] Bona Fide Error Defense

[c] Faulty Calculation Tool Defense

[d] Correction of Errors Defense

[e] Effect of Subsequent Occurrences

[f] Governmental Agencies Acting as Creditors

[g] Assignee Liability

[h] Special Defenses Created by 1995 Amendments

[i] Retroactive Immunity (General)

[3] Creditor Defenses Not Expressly Provided by TILA

[a] Technical Violations

[b] Consumer Not Misled

[c] Waiver of TIL Rights

[d] Retroactivity of Judicial Decisions and FRB Amendments

[4] Jurisdictional and Procedural Defenses and Issues

[5] Res Judicata May Bar Claims

[6] TIL Claims and Arbitration Clauses

[a] Introduction

[b] Arbitration Clauses and TIL Rescission

[c] General Standards as to Whether Arbitration Can Limit Consumer Ability to Vindicate TIL Rights

[i] Arbitration Clauses That Preclude or Impede Class Actions

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

[B] Limit on Class Actions as Unconscionable

[ii] Arbitration Clauses That Deny Consumers Attorney Fees or Other TIL Relief

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

[B] Limits on Relief as Unconscionable

[iii] Arbitration Clauses That Impose High Fees

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

[B] High Fees as Unconscionable

§ 1.10 Consumer Remedies

[1] Standing to Bring Claims for TIL Damages

[2] Actual Damages

[3] Statutory Damages

[a] Availability of Statutory Damages

[b] Violations Giving Rise to Statutory Damages

[4] TIL Class Actions

[a] Introduction

[b] Certifying the TIL Class Action

[c] Class Action Relief

[5] Attorney Fees

[6] Right to Jury Trial

10 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.01

§ 1.01 Introduction

The Truth in Lending Act ("TILA") n1 is a cornerstone of consumer credit legislation. The statute is Congress' effort to guarantee the accurate and meaningful disclosure of the costs of consumer credit and thereby to enable consumers to make informed choices in the credit marketplace. n2

TILA is both consumer protection legislation, recognizing "the right to be informed--to be protected against fraudulent, deceitful, or grossly misleading information, advertising, labeling, or other practices, and to be given the facts he needs to make an informed choice," n3 and legislation designed to protect the "ethical and efficient lender or credit extender," thus "invigorat[ing]" competition. n4

The TILA is codified at 15 U.S.C. section 1601 et seq. It is technically Title I of the Consumer Credit Protection Act. The TILA is divided into five "parts" (if you are reading the U.S. Code) or "chapters" (if you are reading the pamphlet published by the Federal Reserve Board ("FRB")). n5 Part A n6 contains general definitions, including the method for calculating the finance charge and annual percentage rate. It also outlines the administrative enforcement of the Act, and provides criminal sanctions for willful violations.

The second part n7 of TILA distinguishes "open-end" credit, such as that employed with most credit cards, from closed-end, fixed-term credit transactions, such as most mortgages or automobile loans, and describes the particular disclosures required for each. The chapter also defines the consumer's right of rescission in transactions involving the grant of a security interest in the consumer's home, and provides for the civil liability of creditors who fail to comply with the Act's disclosure provisions. In addition, by amendment, this chapter includes special protections for consumers in high cost mortgages and creates disclosure rules for reverse mortgages, and provides certain lenders with immunity from liability for some violations of the Act.

Together, Parts A and B contain the heart of the TILA. They govern what a consumer must be told when entering a credit transaction. The remaining three TILA chapters deal with separate, although related and important, credit issues. Part C n8 addresses the advertising of credit terms. It forbids the practice of bait-and-switch advertising of credit terms (offering credit terms which are, in fact, not available) and forces a more complete disclosure of credit terms than an advertiser might otherwise give.

TILA Part D, n9 the Fair Credit Billing Act ("FCBA"), which was enacted in 1974 and took effect in 1975, outlines a resolution procedure for credit card billing disputes. Among other provisions, the chapter requires creditors to inform consumers of the dispute procedures when an account is opened, compels creditors to investigate and respond to a consumer's complaints within a set time, and forbids the collection of finance charges on incorrectly billed amounts.

Finally, TILA Part E is the Consumer Leasing Act of 1976, n10 discussed separately in Chapter 3 of this volume, and governing advertising and disclosures for those consumer personal property leases whose terms exceed four months. Because of the four month limitation, the Consumer Leasing Act does not apply to many consumer transactions. The Leasing Act is administered separately through the FRB's Regulation M.

The TILA now also contains several provisions unrelated to disclosures, but which give consumers important substantive rights. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 n11 included a provision which outlaws the use of the Rule of 78 in any precomputed consumer credit transaction with a term longer than 61 months signed after September 30, 1993. This provision is now housed in the TILA, having been codified as 15 U.S.C. section 1615. n12 Similarly, certain substantive terms are prohibited in high cost mortgages. These are codified at 15 U.S.C. section 1639(c)-(j) and discussed separately in Chapter 2 of this volume.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq. The Truth in Lending Act [hereinafter TILA] is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Servs., Ltd., 204 F.3d 748, 751 (7th Cir. 2000) ("Congress enacted TILA to ensure that consumers receive accurate information from creditors in a precise and uniform manner that allows them to compare the cost of credit."); Landreneau v. Fleet Fin. Group, 197 F. Supp. 2d 551 (M.D. La. 2002) (TILA enacted to promote informed borrowing by requiring disclosures, to protect consumers from hidden and unreasonable charges, and to allow comparison of credit terms). See, e.g., Frazier v. Washington Mutual, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35767 (W.D. Tenn. June 1, 2006) (TIL's meaningful disclosures intended to promote informed use of credit); Betancourt v. Countrywide Home Loans, 344 F. Supp. 2d 1253 (D. Colo. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 109 Cong. Rec. 2029 (1963) (remarks of Sen. Douglas).

(n4)Footnote 4. 109 Cong. Rec. 2029 (1963) (remarks of Sen. Douglas).

(n5)Footnote 5. Note that the sections are numbered differently, too.

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601-1615.

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1631-1648.

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1661-1665b.

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1666-1666j. The Fair Credit Billing Act is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1667-1667e. The Consumer Leasing Act and Regulation M are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n11)Footnote 11. Pub. L. No. 102-550 § 933, 106 Stat. 3891 (Oct. 28, 1992).

(n12)Footnote 12. For an explanation of the Rule of 78, see § 6.03[4][b][i][B] infra.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.02

§ 1.02 Sources of Law in Truth in Lending Cases

One of the complications of handling Truth in Lending ("TIL") issues is the number of sources of law. The basic source of TIL law is, of course, the statute itself. n1 As a practical matter, however, the statute will seldom provide quick answers to every day TIL questions. The most important function of the statutory text for the consumer advocate is that it serves as a check on the regulations. n2

The Federal Reserve Board, the agency with broad authority for implementation of TILA, has promulgated a comprehensive set of TIL rules known as Regulation Z. n3 Regulation Z is generally a more thorough statement of TIL law than the statute and reference to it is inescapable in almost any TILA case.

Prior to Simplification, there were several authoritative interpretations of Regulation Z. n4 As part of Simplification, all existing interpretations of Regulation Z were replaced by the Official Staff Commentary on the Regulation. n5 It tracks Regulation Z clause by clause, clarifying the intent of the Regulation, giving examples of its proper application, and, at times, inventing rules where none otherwise exist. When assessing any transaction for compliance with any Regulation Z provision, the corollary Commentary provision should also be reviewed. n6

The importance of case law to TIL is similar to its importance in other fields of law--the courts are the final arbiter of the interpretation of either the TILA or its associated regulations. n7 One difficulty is determining the value of the numerous pre-Simplification cases n8 under the current law. There is no one answer to this problem because the amendment of the TILA and Regulation Z was not uniform. On topics where the underlying statutory and regulatory provisions are substantially the same in current law as they were prior to Simplification, the old cases should still be authoritative.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Note that for loans made prior to 1982, the pre-Simplification law will generally apply. Simplification refers to the complete revision of TILA begun by Congress in 1978. The revisions were part of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 which included the Truth in Lending [hereinafter TIL] Simplification and Reform Act at Title V of DIDMCA, codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq. Because there are relatively few loans still outstanding from the pre-Simplification era, that law is increasingly less relevant.

(n3)Footnote 3. Regulation Z is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. See note 2 supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. The Federal Reserve Board Official Staff Commentary on Regulation Z is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra, and in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, App. C (6th ed. 2007).

(n6)Footnote 6. The Supreme Court has ruled that the Commentary is entitled to a high degree of deference. See Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Milhollin, 444 U.S. 555, 100 S. Ct. 790, 63 L. Ed. 2d 22 (1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. State courts are "bound by the authoritative holdings of federal courts on federal questions when there is no conflict." See, e.g., Kocsis v. Pierce, 480 N.W.2d 598 (Mich. Ct. App. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. For a compilation of pre-Simplification cases, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending Case Summaries (1977, 1980, and 1983).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.03

§ 1.03 Scope of TILA

[1] Definitions of "Credit" and "Creditor."

[a] Definition of "Consumer Credit."

TILA applies to most consumer credit transactions. The first condition for TIL coverage, therefore, is that the transaction fall within the TIL definition of "credit." Credit is defined in the Act as the right granted by a creditor to defer payment of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment. n1 The Commentary elucidates this definition, offering a list of transactions not considered "credit." n2

The list includes:

- Layaway plans, unless the consumer is contractually obligated to continue making payments. n3
- Tax liens and tax assessments. n4
- Court judgments n5 and reaffirmations of debts in bankruptcy. n6
- Home improvement progress payment transactions. n7

It is not always clear when a transaction meets the TILA definition of "credit" and some creditors may try to disguise transactions to avoid TIL coverage. For example, the "cash price" of a product may be hiked, so that a seller can postulate that there is no finance charge. n8 However, in TIL cases, as is true with consumer protection laws generally, courts look to the true nature of the transaction to determine coverage. n9 Therefore, it is important to look for disguised credit transactions that should be subject to TIL.

Secondly, the credit transaction must be "consumer" credit as defined in the Act. Consumer is defined as a "natural person" and, generally, the "consumer" must be the one to whom the credit is extended. n10 Certain non-obligors, though, may have the right to receive TIL disclosures and be entitled to exercise TIL rescission rights in transactions subject to the rescission right. n11 Accommodation parties, while not generally considered consumers, may have some TIL rights in limited circumstances. n12

Generally, except in the context of credit cards, guarantors, endorsers, and sureties, as opposed to cosigners, are not considered "consumers." n13 A fair amount of litigation under Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC") is devoted to drawing this very distinction, and, for the most part, those cases should be relevant. n14 In the credit card context, coverage of accommodation parties is considerably broader. The definition of "cardholder," which is a subcategory of "consumer," includes any natural person "who has agreed with the card issuer to pay consumer credit obligations arising from the issuance of a credit card to another natural person." n15 A person who is an authorized user without being obligated on the card is not included in the definition, however. n16

Finally, in order to fall within the scope of TILA, the consumer credit must be primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. Litigation on whether a particular transaction meets this requirement is often concerned with the meaning of "primarily." n17

As noted in the Commentary, there is no precise test for determining what constitutes the primary purpose of a credit transaction. n18 The Commentary only points for guidance to its discussion of business purposes. n19

The Commentary gives two simple examples to illustrate the "primary" purposes rule. A business account used occasionally for consumer purposes would be business-purpose credit, n20 while a personal account used occasionally for business purposes would be consumer-purpose credit. There is little doubt that "primary" is not synonymous with "exclusive." n21 At the very least, "primarily" must refer to the use of more than half the proceeds of the transaction. n22

[b] Definition of "Creditor."

The next crucial issue in determining the scope of TILA is the definition of "creditor." For most TIL transactions, n23 a creditor is defined as a person:

> "Who regularly extends consumer credit that is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than four installments (not including a down payment); and
>
> "To whom the obligation is initially payable, either on the fact of the note or contract, or by agreement when there is no note or contract." n24 Both of these prongs of the definition must be met. n25

To meet the test of "regularly" established by Regulation Z, n26 a person must have extended consumer credit more than 25 times in the preceding calendar year. n27 The numerical standard is lower for real-estate secured loans. A person also regularly extends consumer credit if the person extended credit more than five times in the preceding calendar year if each of those transactions was secured by a dwelling. n28 In high cost mortgage transactions, subject to the Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994 ("HOEP"), the numerical standard is lower still, as is discussed in Chapter 2 of this volume.

The next element of the definition of creditor mandates that the credit which the person extends meet either one of two alternative tests. n29 The credit must be either:

a) Subject to a finance charge, n30 or

b) Payable by written agreement in more than four installments. n31

While the vast majority of consumer credit transactions will meet both tests, satisfaction of only one test is sufficient for a person to be considered a creditor. n32

In addition, the obligation must be initially payable, either on the face of the note or contract, or by agreement when there is no note or contract, to the person in order for that person to be considered a creditor. n33 The person to whom the obligation is initially payable is the creditor and even if simultaneously assigned, the person to whom it is assigned is only the assignee. n34 In a section titled "Notice of New Creditor," Congress imposed in 2009 a requirement on assignees to provide notice to homeowners of the transfer of ownership of mortgage loans. n34.1 The new statutory language refers to "the creditor that is the new owner or assignee of the debt," clearly evincing a congressional intent to treat assignees as creditors, in at least some limited circumstances. Congress drove this point home by adding the new section to the list of violations in 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a) for which statutory damages are generally available. n34.2

In addition, persons who merely "arrange" for the extension of credit may no longer be considered creditors. n35 The definition of creditor under the HOEP is broader. n36

[2] Exempt Transactions

The TILA exempts several classes of transactions from its scope, including, but not limited to, credit primarily for business and agricultural purposes, n37 credit to organizations, n38 some credit transactions over $25,000, n39 student loans, n40 public utility credit, n41 and securities or commodities accounts. n42

TIL also includes a mechanism by which a state can request that the FRB exempt any class of credit transactions from TIL's requirements. n43 In 1982, the FRB granted exemptions to the same five states that had been granted exemptions prior to Simplification. n44 None of the state exemptions extends to the civil liability provisions of the TILA. n45 This assures that consumers in exempted states may continue to bring TIL damage actions based on the equivalent state disclosure requirements n46 in either state or federal court, while creditors retain the statutory defenses in the Federal TILA. n47

With respect to preemption, generally, the Federal Act does not affect any state credit disclosure law unless the state law is inconsistent with the federal law, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. n48

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(e); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(14).

(n2)Footnote 2. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1. (Some of these examples include transactions which some courts had held to be credit under pre-Simplification TIL. The Commentary weighed in against these cases, though the statute's definition of credit did not change.)

(n3)Footnote 3. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1.

(n4)Footnote 4. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1.

(n5)Footnote 5. Bonfiglio v. Nugent, 986 F.2d 1391 (11th Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1.

(n7)Footnote 7. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1.

(n8)Footnote 8. Note, though, that if the price is repayable by written agreement in 4 or more installments, it is subject to TIL irrespective of whether there is a finance charge involved.

(n9)Footnote 9. Adams v. Plaza Fin. Co., 168 F.3d 932 (7th Cir. 1999) ; Edwards v. Your Credit, 148 F.3d 427 (5th Cir. 1998) ; Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Servs., Ltd., 204 F.3d 748 (7th Cir. 2000) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 2.5 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.), for further discussion of disguised credit and credit sales.

(n10)Footnote 10. Cf. Dorothy Edwards Realtors, Inc. v. McAdams, 525 N.E.2d 1248 (Ind. Ct. App. 1988) (where bank permitted its borrowers to sell mortgaged property to third party "subject to its encumbrance," and the third party did not become personally liable on the original debt, bank had no duty to give TIL disclosures to third parties). A separate section of TILA, § 1603(a), specifically exempts credit granted to "organizations" from the statute's coverage. Prifti v. PNC Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16387 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 9, 2001) (corporations and organizations cannot be considered consumers regardless of the purposes for which credit was used); Community Nat'l Bank v. Nemo Dev. Inc., 124 P.3d 521 (Kan. Ct. App. 2005) (unpublished, not precedential) (TILA does not cover a loan to a corporation).

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 1.08[3][a] infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. An "accommodation party" is defined as "one who signs the instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument." U.C.C. § 3-419(a) (as revised in 1990). Reg. Z §§ 226.2(a)(11), 226.23(a)(1), (b), 226.17(d); Soto v. PNC Bank (In re Soto), 221 B.R. 343 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1998) . But see Citifinancial, Inc. v. Blosser, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 2645 (Ohio Ct. App. June 15, 2001) (if security interest for loan in individual's principal dwelling does not affect individual's ownership interest, then he or she is not entitled to TILA disclosures, right to rescind or to seek damages).

(n13)Footnote 13. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(11)-1; Aurora Firefighter's Credit Union v. Harvey, 516 N.E.2d 1028 (Ill. App. Ct. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Aurora Firefighter's Credit Union v. Harvey, 516 N.E.2d 1028 (Ill. App. Ct. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(m); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(8). Note that if there is more than one consumer, disclosures must be made to a consumer who is primarily liable on the account. Reg. Z § 226.5(d).

(n16)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(8)-1.

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) (loan "primarily" for personal purpose if primary purpose is to pay off a second trust deed loan on consumer's home and only 10% of proceeds used for business purposes); Tower v. Moss, 625 F.2d 1161 (5th Cir. 1980) (home improvement transaction primarily for consumer purpose although home had been leased for nominal rent).

(n18)Footnote 18. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(12).

(n19)Footnote 19. Business purpose is discussed in the Official Staff Commentary at § 226.3(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. Official Staff Commentary § 226.3(a)-2.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Palmer v. Statewide Group, 134 F.3d 378 (9th Cir. 1998) , reported in full, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 1497 (9th Cir. Feb. 2, 1998) (consumers' use of their home for child care business did not make loan a business loan).

(n22)Footnote 22. Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(ii), (iii) and (iv) for other definitions of creditor for the purposes of discounts, returns, credit card issuers, etc.

(n24)Footnote 24. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Moore v. Flagstar Bank, 6 F. Supp. 2d 496 (E.D. Va. 1997) (broker, though a lender too, at times, was not the entity to which the obligation was initially payable and, therefore, not a "creditor"); Johnson v. Thomas, 794 N.E.2d 919 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (defendant held to be an assignee, not a creditor, where retail installment contract identified home improvement contractor as the creditor even though contract simultaneously assigned itself to defendant and defendant had informed plaintiff that he was the "partner" of the creditor).

(n25)Footnote 25. Parker v. Potter, 232 Fed. Appx. 861 (11th Cir. 2007) (unpublished).

(n26)Footnote 26. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17) n.3.

(n27)Footnote 27. Every closed-end credit transaction and every open-end credit outstanding account is counted towards the numerical standards. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)(i)-4. In Armstrong v. Kittinger, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 4465 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 21, 1994) , however, the court sidestepped the fact that no evidence was presented as to how many cars the creditor had sold in the year in question (the creditor having testified that he only sold "six or eight"); instead, it let a damage award stand since it was unclear what portion, if any, the jury had allocated to TILA violations. One issue for TILA coverage may be whether a series of transactions constitutes a single open-end account or a series of closed-end credit extensions. See, e.g., Sticka v. Geller (In re Stratton), 299 B.R. 616 (Bankr. D. Or. 2003) (promissory note for $20,000 that could be adjusted to cover additional amounts of indebtedness created an open-end credit account; hence, attorney was not creditor because he only extended one open-end credit account, not several closed-end loans).

(n28)Footnote 28. Reg. Z § 226.17(a) n.3. (Note, too, that the broad definition of dwelling, Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(19), includes mobile homes, trailers, condominiums, and cooperatives, as well as traditional houses.) See, e.g., Redic v. Gary H. Watts Realty Co., 762 F.2d 1181 (4th Cir. 1985) (consumer only introduced direct evidence that 4 of 12 similar sale/leaseback transactions were disguised loans; defendant presented evidence from remaining homeowner-"grantors" that their transactions were genuine sales, thus numerical threshold to make defendant a creditor not met), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 920, 106 S. Ct. 249, 88 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1985) , modified on other grounds, 862 F.2d 314 (1988) ; Clay v. Johnson, 22 F. Supp. 2d 832 (N.D. Ill. 1998) , rev'd on other grounds, 264 F.3d 744 (7th Cir. 2001) ; Levites v. Chipman, 30 Mass. App. Ct. 356, 568 N.E.2d 639 , review denied, 410 Mass. 1102, 573 N.E.2d 984 (1991) . Cf. Garofalo v. Boyer, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 932 (Jan. 24, 2001) (defendant who made only two real estate-secured loans in previous year, and no others in year of this transaction, was not a creditor); Peterson v. Rothweiler (In re Peterson), 270 B.R. 719 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001) (borrower established that lender made six real estate-secured loans in current calendar year, but failed to established that properties were "dwellings"); Thanhauser v. Nemickas, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3370 (Conn. Super. Ct. Nov. 29, 2001) (dismissing borrowers' TILA claim because they did not allege sufficient facts to establish that mortgage lender extended dwelling-secured credit more than five times in preceding year); McDonnell v. Von Feldt, 231 Wis. 2d 239, 604 N.W.2d 305 (Ct. App. 1999) , review denied, 233 Wis. 2d 85, 609 N.W.2d 474 (2000) (borrower identified seven real estate-secured loan transactions, but lender was able to rebut by establishing that two loans were business purpose credit, for one loan he was not originating lender, and two other loans were actually made in different calendar year).

(n29)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f)(1); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i)(A).

(n30)Footnote 30. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)(i)-1; see § 1.04 infra.

(n31)Footnote 31. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i)(A). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f)(1).

(n32)Footnote 32. Ferrari v. Howard, 2002 Ohio 3539, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 3632 (Ct. App. July 11, 2002) . Note that card issuers may be creditors even without a finance charge or written 4-installment obligations. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(ii), (iii).

(n33)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f)(2); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i)(B); Official Staff Commentary §

226.2(a)(17)(i)-1. Note that open-end credit card issuers and those who honor credit cards may be creditors for some purposes even without meeting this requirement. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(ii), (iii). See Flynn v. People's Mortgage, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18891 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 18, 1998) (mortgage broker was not creditor where credit was not initially payable to broker); Barlow v. Evans, 992 F. Supp. 1299 (M.D. Ala. 1997) (agents of pawn shop, who were its President and Secretary, were not creditors where transaction was conducted in shop's name); Moore v. Flagstar Bank, 6 F. Supp. 2d 496 (E.D. Va. 1997) (entity whose role was merely the provision of form documents was not a creditor); Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16574 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 30, 1999) (insurance company not creditor; dismissed from suit challenging retailer's inclusion of credit insurance in contracts); Aiello v. First Alliance Mortgage Co. (In re First Alliance Mortgage Co.), 47 C.B.C.2d 1043, 280 B.R. 246 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2002) (founder and CEO of mortgage company was not creditor, because debt was not payable to him); Garrett v. Fleet Fin. Inc., 252 Ga. App. 47, 556 S.E.2d 140 (2001) (closing attorney for mortgage company was not creditor); Jefferson v. Briner Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41423 (E.D. Va. June 21, 2006) (broker is not a creditor); Porter v. NationsCredit Consumer Discount Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14925 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2006) (corporations that were related to the lender were not creditors when the obligation was not payable to them), reconsideration granted in part, denied in part on other grounds, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41947 (E.D. Pa. Jun 22, 2006) ; Craven v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44546 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 23, 2005) (servicer not creditor because obligation not originally payable to it, but it may be liable as an assignee).

(n34)Footnote 34. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)(i)-2; Riviere v. Banner Chevrolet, Inc., 184 F.3d 457 (5th Cir. 1999) (decision after rehearing); Mayfield v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4048 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 1999) ; Noel v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 971 F. Supp. 1102 (E.D. Mich. 1997) (applying statutory definition to find that two middle-men were creditors where obligations were made initially payable to them, but denying coverage as to one middle-man who acted as broker).

(n35)Footnote 34.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(g).

(n36)Footnote 34.2. See generally § 1.10[3][a], infra (discussing availability of statutory damages).

(n37)Footnote 35. Pub. L. No. 97-320, Title VII, § 702(a) (Oct. 15, 1982), as amended by Pub. L. No. 97-457 (Jan. 13, 1983).

(n38)Footnote 36. See § 2.02[3] infra. See Hruby v. Larsen, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42285 (D. Minn. June 30, 2005) (lender was liable as creditor under special HOEPA definition where high rate--and disguised--loan involved mortgage broker).

(n39)Footnote 37. 15 U.S.C. § 1603(1); Reg. Z § 226.3(a)(1). But see Citibank (South Dakota), N.A. v. Mincks, 135 S.W.3d 545 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) (cardholder entitled to assert TIL protections for a business transaction made using a personal consumer credit card account.) Official Staff Commentary § 226.3(a)-2.

(n40)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 1603(1); Reg. Z § 226.3(a)(2). See Chase Agri-Credit System v. Jack Spears Drilling Co., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21694 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 3, 2003) (when purpose of a loan is to benefit a corporation, the fact the loan is guaranteed by individuals does not alter its business purpose), aff'd 102 Fed. Appx. 884 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n41)Footnote 39. The exception to this exemption includes any extension of credit secured either by real property or by personal property used or expected to be used as the consumer's principal dwelling. Reg. Z § 226.3(b). See In re Costa, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1224 (Bankr. D. Mass. Apr. 22, 2008) (personal loan of $165,000 not covered by TILA, or by Massachusetts disclosure law).

(n42)Footnote 40. Until Oct. 15, 1982, the TILA applied to all student loans; since then, certain types of student loans are exempt, but the exemption is not universal and some student loans remain subject to the Act's requirements. Several courts have questioned whether programs which require service obligations in exchange for tuition assistance create credit obligations at all. See, e.g., United States v. Hugelmeyer, 774 F. Supp. 559, 562 n.3 (D. Ariz. 1991) ; United States v. Citrin, 972 F.2d 1044 (9th Cir. 1992) . Advocates representing clients with student loan problems should be aware that they present a wide array of legal (and practical) issues that are discussed in depth in National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law (2d ed. 2002).

(n43)Footnote 41. Public utilities have a limited exemption from the application of TIL. 15 U.S.C. § 1603(4); Reg. Z § 226.3(c). During the past decade, however, about half the states have deregulated one or more utilities industries to varying degrees. Depending on what is deregulated and how it is done, deregulation could mean that a utility no longer qualifies for this exemption from TIL. See National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service §§ 1.2, 1.4 (2d ed. 2001 and Supp.). The Federal Communications Commission [hereinafter FCC] has "detariffed" long-distance telephone service, which means long-distance carriers no longer file their rates with the FCC; thus, credit extended for long-distance service may no longer be subject to the TILA exemption. National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service § 2.8.2 (2003 Supp.).

(n44)Footnote 42. 15 U.S.C. § 1603; Reg. Z § 226.3.

(n45)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1633 (Part A), 1666j(b) (Part D); Reg. Z § 226.29.

(n46)Footnote 44. Maine (Parts B, D, and E of the federal TIL statute); Connecticut (Parts B and D); Massachusetts (Parts B and D); Oklahoma (Parts D and E); and Wyoming (Part B). See Official Staff Commentary § 226.29(a)-4.

(n47)Footnote 45. Reg. Z § 226.29(b)(1).

(n48)Footnote 46. Reg. Z § 226.29(b)(2).

(n49)Footnote 47. Official Staff Commentary § 226.29(b)-1. See Ives v. W.T. Grant Co., 522 F. 2d 749 (2d Cir. 1975) . But cf. In re Myers, 175 B.R. 122 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994) .

(n50)Footnote 48. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1610(a)(1), 1666j(a); Reg. Z § 226.28(a) and Appendix A; Official Staff Commentary § 226.28(a). See, e.g., Anderson v. Household Fin. Corp., 900 F. Supp. 386 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; Heastie v. Community Bank of Greater Peoria, 690 F. Supp. 716 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (TILA does not preempt state unfair and deceptive acts and practices [hereinafter UDAP] statute unless state provisions are inconsistent with TILA); People v. Fulvio, 135 Misc. 2d 93, 514 N.Y.S.2d 594 (Crim. Ct. 1987) , rev'd on other grounds, 136 Misc. 2d 334, 517 N.Y.S.2d 1008 (Crim. Ct. 1987) (TILA does not exempt N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 518); Williams v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 176 F.3d 497 (D.C. Cir. 1999) (TILA does not preempt state UDAP statute unless UDAP statute directly conflicts with TILA); Aiello v. First Alliance Mortgage Co. (In re First Alliance Mortgage Co.), 280 B.R. 246 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2002) (same); Black v. Freedom Fin. Senior Funding Corp., 92 Cal. App. 4th 917, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 (1st Dist. 2001) , review denied, 2002 Cal. LEXIS 479 (Cal. Jan. 23, 2002) (same). See Kajitani v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42388 (D. Haw. May 22, 2008) (holding state law claims for conduct that also violated TILA were preempted; other claims, such as those for oral representations used for bait and switch, were not preempted); Matter of People of the State of New York v. Applied Card Sys., Inc., 2008 N.Y. Slip Op 5780 (N.Y. 2008) (finding claims under state consumer protection law and executive law brought by state attorney general not preempted by TILA because claims sought to hold the credit card issuers to disclosure and UDAP rules not contained in TILA); Monaco v. Bear Stearns Residential Mortg. Corp., 554 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (holding consumer claim under state UDAP law not preempted by TILA where consumer was seeking additional remedies because additional penalties are not inconsistent with TILA but rather provide greater protection). But see Kajitani v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42388 (D. Haw. May 22, 2008) (finding claim under state UDAP law preempted under HOLA where basis of claim was attempt to use four-year statute of limitations period under the state law to circumvent the one-year limitations period for damages claims under TILA; allowing consumers to avail themselves of the longer period would alter rules controlling how a federal savings and loan is operated).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.04

§ 1.04 The Finance Charge

[1] Introduction to the Finance Charge

As stated above, TILA was created to guarantee the accurate and meaningful disclosure of the costs of consumer credit. The disclosure of the finance charge is at the heart of this purpose.

An accurately calculated finance charge is particularly critical as it is a necessary precondition to an accurately disclosed annual percentage rate ("APR"). The finance charge is the cost of credit as a dollar amount, and the APR reflects that cost on a yearly percentage rate basis. Together, these two disclosures are designed to provide an accurate price tag for credit. They are the two most important disclosures required under TIL, n1 and, consequently, they must be disclosed more conspicuously than any other. n2

For both creditor and consumer, determining the accurate cost of credit for TIL purposes involves breaking down the components of the total obligation into two basic classifications: the amount financed and the finance charge. The amount financed is comprised of those legitimate components of the obligation which are advanced by the lender directly to the borrower or paid to others on the borrower's behalf; the finance charge is the cost of the credit, as the explanatory phrases on a disclosure statement indicate. n3 The two categories are mutually exclusive.

To be accurate, the disclosed finance charge n4 must reflect:

a) The inclusion of all types of charges which TIL defines as part of the finance charge for that particular transaction, i.e., proper allocation of charges between the amount financed column and the finance charge; and

b) Proper computation of each component charge of the total finance charge, and proper disclosure of the resulting total charge.

There are important distinctions between the rules used to classify the component parts of the total debt under TIL, and the rules used by the law which regulates the substance of that credit transaction, most often state usury law. n5

One important distinction is between finance charges and interest. The finance charge is conceptually comparable to the total interest charge on a credit contract, but they are not the same. n6 As it is most commonly used, "interest" refers to the compensation creditors receive for the use of their money, calculated by applying a contractual interest rate to the contractual principal for the amount of time the credit is outstanding. n7 While additional types of fees and charges imposed on a credit transaction may be considered interest for purposes of the substantive regulatory law, in most states, "interest" is defined more narrowly than TIL defines the finance charge.

A second important distinction is between the amount financed and loan principal. The flip side of the differing definitions for interest and finance charge is that state law defines the principal amount of a loan more broadly than TIL defines the amount financed. Under TIL, the finance charge and amount financed are mutually exclusive terms. Charges that meet TIL's definition of a finance charge must be classified as a finance charge even if the consumer financed it as part of the loan. Therefore, it should not be surprising that the amount financed will often be less than the note principal.

Finally, there is a distinction between the APR for TIL purposes and the interest rate on the loan. First, the interest rate may refer to any one of three methods of calculating interest: add-on, discount, or actuarial. However, because the actuarial method is the only economically accurate method of reflecting the cost of installment credit, the APR must be stated in terms of actuarial rate. n8

In addition, the APR translates to a yearly percentage rate the broader measure of the cost of credit that the finance charge reflects in dollars. That is, if the finance charge includes charges which state law does not consider interest, the TIL-defined APR will reflect them, too. Therefore, the APR on a disclosure statement will often be larger than the interest rate on the accompanying note.

In general, for an outline of TIL's finance charge rules, see the following sections of the Act and Regulation Z which define the finance charge:

1) Reg. Z § 226.4(a) Reg. Z § 226.4(a): n9 This sets forth the basic, all-inclusive definition.

2) Reg. Z § 226.4(b) Reg. Z § 226.4(b): n10 This subsection lists examples of common credit charges which fall within the overall definition.

3) Reg. Z § 226.4(c)-(e) Reg. Z § 226.4(c)-(e): n11 While these categories of charges may be excluded from the finance charge, most require that in any individual case they can be excluded only when certain preconditions are met.

[2] Basic Definition of Finance Charge

The fundamental principles against which any credit-related cost must be measured for a TIL finance charge-fit boil down to four elements, as expressed in Reg. Z section 226.4(a). n12 Thus, the finance charge includes:

[a] Any Charge

Theoretically, any cost beyond what the consumer asked to borrow, payable by the consumer and added at the creditor's behest could be a charge. Particularly in home-secured loans, the creditor may offset the closing costs in part by a credit, often in exchange for a higher interest rate. Some lenders pay a credit to the consumer instead of paying a yield spread premium to a broker. Sometimes, the payment of a credit masks a broker upcharge even though the credit is applied against closing costs generally. The Official Staff Commentary suggests that these payments should not be reflected in (or subtracted from) the finance charge. n13

When the credit is applied generally to closing costs, the credit should be treated as a "deposit" (counted toward the total of closing costs) and used to reduce the total amount due from the consumer. n14 It should not affect the finance charge because it is not a credit toward a particular fee that meets the finance charge definition, such as an origination fee. Accordingly, a lender should not be allowed to apply a general credit against a specific fee in order to lower the finance charge total. Otherwise, the result would distort the purposes of the Act. The APR would be lower because the creditor applied the credit to a finance charge, lowering the number in the finance charge box on the disclosure. The Official Staff Commentary lends support to this argument because it highlights the importance of tracing a payment to particular activity in order to analyze whether it is in or out of the finance charge. n15 In its discussion of lump sum charges, the Commentary explains that one must look at the uses of the fee. If a portion of a lump sum charge is specifically for a service that is not excludable from the finance charge, that portion of the lump sum should be included in the finance charge. If the charge is for conducting or attending a closing and is primarily for services regarding items excluded from the finance charge, the entire fee is excluded even if some "incidental" finance charge services are performed. The Department of Housing and Urban Development now requires that yield spread premiums and other lender-paid broker compensation be disclosed on the settlement statement in effect as a credit against the borrower's other closing costs, regardless of how the funds are actually applied. n15.1

[b] Payable Directly or Indirectly by the Consumer

The creditor usually takes into consideration its costs of doing business in determining what interest rate or cash price to charge its customers. The Commentary describes these costs as "absorbed by the creditor" and excludes them from the finance charge unless the consumer pays a separate charge to cover some or all of those costs. n16 There should be no question that financed closing costs are payable at or before closing. However, a Tennessee federal court in Terry v. Community Bank of Northern Virginia, n17 focused on the word "payable," holding that closing costs are "payable" only when the homeowner is required to pay certain points and fees "at or before closing of a loan, not over the course of the loan." n18 A decision from a West Virginia federal court, however, expressly disavows the Terry holding. Short v. Wells Fargo Bank Minnesota, N.A, n19 relies upon the facts that the closing charges were paid out of the amount loaned and that the HUD-1 Settlement Statement acknowledges that the closing costs are paid by the homeowner. n20 The court distinguished the word "payable" from "paid" in this way: "Congress did not use the term 'paid' in § 1602(aa), instead, it used the term 'payable' which looks to the fact that the consumer bears the cost of those fees at the time of closing, not whether those fess were financed, paid separately or deducted from the loan proceeds." n21

[c] Imposed Directly or Indirectly by the Creditor

This condition can cover a wide variety of charges, and the charge does not have to be retained by the creditor to have been imposed directly or indirectly by the creditor. However, if the charge is not avoidable by the creditor--if it is imposed by a third party for services which the creditor does not require, and the creditor does not retain the charge--then it is not a finance charge. n22

A specific problem that arises in this element of the definition is brokers' fees. Before the 1995 TILA amendments, brokers' fees were in the class of charges which did not have a per se rule as to whether they were considered part of the finance charge. Commencing September 30, 1996, brokers' fees are always to be treated as a finance charge, whether paid directly to the broker or to the lender to be passed on, and whether paid in cash or financed. n23 The only circumstance under which a fee charged by a broker may be excluded from the finance charges is if the creditor itself could exclude it. For example, if the broker charges an application fee to successful and unsuccessful applicants, n24 that fee could be excluded. n25

Sometimes the creditor lists a fee on the HUD-1 Settlement Statement as paid to itself but, after receipt of a rescission letter or the initiation of a lawsuit, later claims that the fee ultimately went to a third party. In other words, the creditor argues it received no compensation even though the disclosures show that it kept the fee. One response is that consumers, regulators, and assignees have to rely upon the legally required documents that list the disbursements. The creditor is responsible for the accuracy of the HUD-1 that substitutes for the itemization of the amount financed for TIL purposes. The creditor should just list the third party's name if the fee is going to that party. The HUD-1 or itemization of the amount financed should be prima facie evidence of who received which fees and in what amounts from the borrower at closing. n26 Indeed, HUD requires lenders to name the person or firm "ultimately" receiving the payment on the HUD-1. n27

[d] As an Incident to or a Condition of the Extension of Credit

If a charge is imposed because there is a credit transaction or as a condition precedent to the extension of credit, then it should be disclosed as part of the finance charge. To meet this requirement, a charge need only be "incident to" a credit extension, and need not be a "condition of credit." In determining whether a charge is "a condition of the extension of credit," a proper question to ask is whether the credit would have been granted if the borrower did not agree to pay it. n28

In 1996, the Board interpreted the "incident to" language of the Act to mean "in connection with" and "part of the cost of credit." n29 At that time, the Board rejected the notion that a fee for a product or feature that the consumer may voluntarily select is per se excluded from the finance charge. n30

In a recent case, the Supreme Court discussed the "incident to" language when deciding whether the Board exceeded its authority by excluding over-limit fees charged by credit card issuers from the finance charge. n31 The Court was unsure whether the phrase requires a substantial or remote connection to the credit transaction. Given this uncertainty, the Court deferred to the Board's characterization of the over-limit fee as a penalty for violating the creditor's agreement, rather than related to the extension of new credit. n32 Nonetheless, the Court recognized that "incident to" means "connection to."

As a final requirement for the inclusion of a charge in the finance charge, the Act and Regulation provide that any charge of a type payable in a comparable cash transaction is not considered a finance charge. n33

Sometimes both cash and credit customers will be required to pay a charge for the same service, but the credit customers will have to pay a higher price than that paid by the cash customers. In those situations, the difference between the two charges is logically considered a finance charge.

[3] Examples of Finance Charges

Following the general definition of finance charge, n34 there is a non-exclusive list of examples. n35 Ordinarily, interest will be the largest component, and often the only component, of the finance charge. n36 The full amount of the contract interest is a finance charge irrespective of how it is calculated: n37 "add-on" or "discount" methods of computing charges for credit are explicitly included in the list of finance charge examples. n38

There are also numerous other examples of finance charges. These charges arise in the context of refinancing if, in calculating the pay-off balance for the prior transaction when refinancing, the creditor fails to rebate any unearned charges, the portion of the pay-off balance which represents the non-rebated charges must be considered as part of the finance charge in the new loan. n39

Other examples of finance charges under TIL include:

1) Service, transaction, activity and carrying charges; n40

2) Generally, "points," n41 loan fees, assumption fees, n42 finder's fees and similar charges are also finance charges; n43

3) Appraisal, investigation and credit report fees are also examples of finance charges unless they fall within one of the specific regulatory exceptions; n44

4) Credit insurance premiums are explicitly characterized as part of the finance charge, n45 although they are also the subject of one of the exclusionary rules; n46

5) Prepaid finance charges: n47 This can be a confusing area because there is no listing of "prepaid finance charge" in the statutory and regulatory examples. n48 The term prepaid finance charge is simply an umbrella term for "any finance charge paid separately in cash or by check before or at consummation of a transaction, or withheld from the proceeds of the credit at any time." n49

The fundamental rule is that the prepaid finance charge is always calculated as a component of the finance charge; n50 it is never calculated as a component of the amount financed--even if it does show up listed in the itemization of the amount financed.

Bounce loans--overdraft coverage systematically included in customers' deposit accounts--are transactions with no cash equivalent, similar to a non-purchase money loan. With bounce loans, the consumer is receiving cash, not goods or services. Thus, fees imposed for bounce loans appear to be a finance charge. Nevertheless, Regulation Z and the Commentary arguably do not treat this fee as a finance charge. n51 Rather, they seem to treat fees for overdrafts as comparable to an NSF fee for a returned check (which they assume to be the comparable cash transaction). Although the amount of an overdraft fee is often the same amount as that charged for an NSF fee on a returned check, the transactions are not comparable. Moreover, some bounce loan plans charge per-day fees as well, which clearly are not comparable to one-time NSF fees. n52

[4] TIL's "Exclusionary" Rules: Taking Charges Out of the Finance Charge

After identifying any given charge as meeting the overall definition or even finding it specifically listed as an example, advocates must then check TIL exclusionary rules to see if the charge is subject to one (or more) of them. n53 Note that the majority of the exclusions are authorized only in certain circumstances, rather than as a universal rule. Examples of TIL's exclusions are discussed below.

[a] TIL Exclusions: Application Fees

Application fees may be excluded from the finance charge if they are charged to all applicants for credit, regardless of whether credit is actually extended. n54

[b] TIL Exclusions: Late Charges, Over-the-Limit Fees, and Other Delinquency Charges

Charges for actual unanticipated late payment, for exceeding a credit limit, or for delinquency, default, n55 or a similar occurrence n56 may be excluded from the finance charge. n57 In fact, one case holds, and Regulation Z suggests, that they must be excluded from the finance charge. n58 But charges imposed for payments which are not actually late or which can be anticipated to be late should be finance charges. In Regulation Z, the Federal Reserve Board excludes over-limit charges from its definition of "finance charge" under the Truth in Lending Act. n59 The Sixth Circuit held that over-limit charges that the creditor imposes after allowing the consumer to exceed the original credit limit must be treated as finance charges, notwithstanding Regulation Z. n60 The Supreme Court, however, reversed the Sixth Circuit ruling, holding that the statute is ambiguous regarding whether over-limit fees are incident to the extension of credit under 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a) and that the Board's regulatory provision uniformly excluding over-limit fees from the finance charge is reasonable and must be followed. n61 Justice Thomas, writing for a unanimous court, wrote that the statute's ambiguity is rooted in the fact that not all charges for open-end credit are part of the finance charge, and that the statute's description of over-limit fees as imposed "in connection with an extension of credit" is not clearly within the scope of the phrase "incident to an extension of credit." The Court went on to say that the Board's view of over-limit fees as a penalty for default, rather than a fee for an extension of credit, is not contrary to the statute, and that it is easy to apply because it is a bright-line test.

[c] TIL Exclusions: Credit Insurance

The TILA exception for credit insurance has nearly swallowed the rule that credit insurance must be included as part of the finance charge since virtually all creditors do, or intend to, take advantage of the exception.

There are different types of credit insurance and different rules apply. First, premiums or other charges for insurance against interruption of the borrower's income, if written in connection with a credit transaction, must be included in the finance charge unless certain disclosures are made and certain rules are followed. n62 The most common examples of this kind of insurance are credit life insurance, n63 accident and health/disability, n64 and unemployment insurance. n65

Premiums for this insurance may be excluded from the finance charge only if the following conditions are met: n66

a) The insurance coverage is not required by the creditor and this fact is disclosed; n67

b) The premium for the initial term of the insurance coverage is disclosed. If the term of the insurance is less than the term of the transaction, the term of insurance must be disclosed, as well; n68 and

c) The consumer signs or initials an affirmative written request for the insurance after receiving the required disclosures. n69

In addition, the rules on the timing and location of insurance disclosures for closed-end transactions must be followed. n70

If, as occasionally happens, a creditor fails to provide the necessary written notice that insurance is not required, the premium is a finance charge. n71 The more common situation, though, is that the voluntariness disclosure is a part of the written disclosures, while oral information or conduct from the creditor obscures, undermines, or flatly contradicts that written notice. These practices not only can be challenged under state deceptive acts and practices statutes where they apply to the transaction, n72 but are also vulnerable to a range of other challenges, including usury and common law tort claims. n73 It is also arguable that there are TIL implications. n74

One of the newer add-on products to credit transactions (particularly car loans) is "GAP" insurance. The risk insured is the "GAP" between the outstanding loan balance and the amount paid out by the property insurer after a covered loss occurs on the collateral. In 1996, the Board revised Regulation Z to provide that GAP insurance is to be treated in the same fashion as credit life and disability insurance. n75 The revised regulation has survived legal challenge from the insurance industry. n76 A growing practice in the GAP insurance industry is being used to decrease the value of this coverage by measuring the "GAP" as the difference between the amount owed and either the insurer's estimation of the vehicle's value or the value in the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA) guidebook, whichever is greater. Often the NADA amount is greater, and the result is that the insured still owes money. For example, in the previous example, if the insurer's estimation at time of loss is $3000 and the debt balance is $5000, but the NADA value is $4000 ($1000 higher than the insurer's amount), then GAP insurance pays $1000 (the difference between the $5,000 owed and the $4000 valuation) and the insured still owes $1000 (so that car insurer pays $3000, GAP insurer pays $1000 and insured pays $1000).

Fees for debt cancellation coverage are practically per se written in connection with the credit. n77

Another type of insurance is credit property insurance related to loss of or damage to property, or against liability arising out of the ownership or use of property. n78 The premiums or other charges for this type of insurance, if written in connection with a credit transaction, must be included in the finance charge unless the exclusionary rules are followed. n79

These rules generally apply to credit property insurance "obtained from or through the creditor." n80

The rules for excluding credit property insurance from the finance charge differ somewhat from the rules to exclude credit life, disability, and unemployment. Unlike loss-of-income insurance, creditors are permitted to require that their collateral be insured. n81 To exclude credit property insurance premiums from the finance charge, the creditor need only do two things: give consumers written notice that they may choose to purchase the insurance either through the creditor or from a third party; n82 and disclose the cost if purchased through the creditor. n83 (Here, too, the premium disclosed is for the initial term, and, if less than the loan's term, the term of insurance must be disclosed, as well.) n84 In another contrast to the loss-of-income insurance, there is no requirement for an affirmative written request for property insurance.

The Regulation allows creditors to exclude single interest property insurance premiums from the finance charge under the general exclusionary rules for property insurance, though there is one additional condition: The insurer must waive all rights of subrogation against the consumer. n85 "Single interest insurance" refers only to the types of coverage traditionally included in the term "vendor's single interest insurance" ("VSI"). n86 This kind of insurance protects only the vendor's (that is, the seller's) interest in the property. n87

[d] TIL Exclusions: Real Estate and Residential Mortgage Transaction Charges

Just as there are special disclosure and rescission rules for some transactions secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, n88 there are also special finance charge rules for transactions either secured by real property or involving residential mortgages. n89

The 1995 TIL amendments contain many important changes in this area. In particular, prospectively, the exclusion for document preparation in mortgage loans was slightly expanded, and pre-consummation pest-inspection and flood hazard inspections were added to the statute's list. Closed-end mortgage lenders obtained retroactive immunity for misstatements in the finance charge and consequent misstatements in other affected disclosures when the violation alleged related to one of these charges. Other amendments offered complete or partial retroactive immunity for mishandled fees, and changed the rules prospectively. Additionally, a multi-tiered level of tolerance for error in disclosing the finance charge and related errors was created, operating both retroactively and prospectively. n90

[i] Classes of Real Estate Closing Charges: What's Excludable; What's Not

The following classes of closing costs may be excluded from the finance charge in these transactions, but only when the fees are bona fide and reasonable. n91

[A] Real Property, Title-Related Fees n92

Fees for title examination, abstract of title, title insurance, property survey, or similar purposes may, if bona fide and reasonable, be excluded. n93 Cases involving such fees hold that excessive cost would violate the bona fide and reasonable standard. n94

Where a consumer repeatedly has been refinanced by the same lender, a number of the closing fees may warrant scrutiny under the "bona fide and reasonable" analysis. Fees for full title exams and appraisals may not be reasonable if the previous loan was made only a short time earlier; it also is worth checking to make sure the work was done at all and thus that the fee is bona fide. Additionally, title insurance for subsequent refinancings also should be based on lower reissue rates. n95

[B] Document Fees; Closing Agent/Attorney Fees

This category of fees was among the subjects of the 1995 amendments, both retroactive and prospective, so it will be necessary to check those carefully to determine their impact on the analysis of any case. n96 Prospectively, 15 U.S.C. section 1605(e)(2) was amended to read that "fees for preparation of loan related documents" in a real estate secured transaction are not part of the finance charge. n97

A document preparation fee could be illegal under state law if the entity preparing the documents was engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. n98 If the lender or other entity charged a fee for preparing or filling in the blanks on legal documents and this activity was part of the entity's business, the lender or entity may be engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. n99

[C] Notary, Appraisal, and Credit Report Fees n100

These fees are also subject to this exclusion. n101 The Commentary allows the cost of verifying or confirming information relating to the excludable item, such as credit reports, to be excluded as well, though those charges, too, must be bona fide and reasonable. n102 Note that these fees, if not eligible for this special exclusion, are included among the listed examples of finance charges. n103 Some fees, such as notary fees, are regulated by state law. n104

[D] Escrow Costs

As the Act itself makes clear, the prototypical costs encompassed by this provision are "escrows for future payments of taxes and insurance." n105 Unfortunately, the current version of Regulation Z muddies that statutory provision, in allowing "amounts required to be paid into escrow or trustee accounts if the amounts would not otherwise be included in the finance charge." n106 In short, if a charge is not a finance charge when not escrowed, it does not become one by virtue of being escrowed. This provision, thus, does not create any additional exclusions. However, it does invoke the bona fide and reasonable requirement.

[E] Fees for Post-Consummation Services

Fees for such services may be excluded, but only to the extent they are incurred as part of the initial credit-granting decision, for example, checking tax lien status or determining whether the proposed collateral is subject to flood insurance requirements. n107 In contrast, fees which pay for such services during the loan term are finance charges, as they are recurring administrative fees incurred to protect the creditor's security interest. Post-consummation costs, such as monitoring the tax lien status of secured property or checking whether contractually required property insurance has been maintained, are finance charges, irrespective of whether they are collected at closing or later, when performed. n108

[e] TIL Exclusions: Security Interest Charges; Filing and Recording Fees

Some charges imposed in connection with a security interest may be excluded from the finance charge under prescribed conditions in both real-estate secured loans and non-real-estate loans. n109 This exclusion covers taxes and fees which meet the following criteria: n110

a) Are itemized and disclosed;

b) Are prescribed by law;

c) Actually are or will be paid to public officials; n111 and

d) Are for investigating, perfecting, releasing or satisfying a security interest.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosureContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. E.g., First Nat'l Bank v. Office of the Comptroller, 956 F.2d 1456 (8th Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1632(a); Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(2), 226.17(a)(2). See § 1.05[2][a] infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. Z § 226.18(b) and (d).

(n4)Footnote 4. In closed-end credit, the finance charge is disclosed at consummation. In open-end credit, the finance charge is an after-the-fact dollar amount which appears only on the periodic statements. Reg. Z § 226.7(f).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ch. 6 infra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Some states, though, in updating their consumer credit regulatory laws since 1968, adopted TIL definitions and terminology. Only if state law so defines them will there be a direct correlation.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ch. 6, §§ 6.05- 6.07 infra . See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges Ch. 4 (3d ed. 2005), for a discussion of the basic concept of interest, and Chapters 6-8 for additional charges which are sometimes considered interest under state law.

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 1.05[2][e] infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(1)-(5).

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(c)-(e).

(n12)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(a)(3)-3.

(n14)Footnote 14. This credit could be listed as a "borrower credit" in the 200 series of the HUD settlement statement, an issue governed by the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. See Regulation X, 24 C.F.R. 3500.

(n15)Footnote 15. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(c)(7)-2.

(n16)Footnote 15.1. 73 Fed. Reg. 68,244-68,245, codified at 24 C.F.R. Pt. 3500, Apps. A, C.

(n17)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(a)-2. See Jennings v. Edwards, 598 F.2d 614 (4th Cir. 1979) (filing fee absorbed by creditor was not part of finance charge). But see State ex rel. Brady v. 3- D Auto World, Inc., 2000 Del. Super. LEXIS 17 (Del. Super. Ct. Jan. 19, 2000) (UDAP enforcement action, in which court granted summary judgment to the state on the issue of whether a "carrying charge" of 20% of the outstanding balance at purchase with 0% financing constituted a hidden finance charge; court used TILA definitions to support its holding). See, e.g., Bynum v. Equitable Mortg. Group, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6363 (D.D.C. Apr. 7, 2005) (flood certification excluded from finance charge even where payment was made directly to lender; court found that lender had advanced fee to contractor and that this payment was a reimbursement).

(n18)Footnote 17. Terry v. Community Bank of N. Va., 255 F. Supp. 2d 811 (W.D. Tenn. 2003) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Terry v. Community Bank of N. Va., 255 F. Supp. 2d at 817 .

(n20)Footnote 19. 401 F. Supp. 2d 549 (S.D. W. Va. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 20. The phrase "paid from borrowers funds at settlement" appears on the top of one of the columns on page two. This statement should appear on all Settlement Statements when the lender uses the HUD standard form. For a copy of the standard form, see 25 C.F.R. 3500 App. A, reproduced in National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses Appx. K.2 (4th ed. 2009).

(n22)Footnote 21. 401 F. Supp. 2d 549, 562 (S.D. W. Va. 2005) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Reg. Z § 226.4(a)(1). But see Person v. Courtesy Motors, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4556 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 6, 2001) (portion of sales tax charged to the purchaser resulting from the dealership's inflation of the purchase price of the vehicle to offset the amount credited to the purchaser from a non-existent trade-in is a finance charge).

(n24)Footnote 23. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(6); Reg. Z § 226.4(a)(3) (Sept. 30, 1996 effective date).

(n25)Footnote 24. Cf. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(1).

(n26)Footnote 25. 61 Fed. Reg. 49,237, 49,238 (Sept. 19, 1996) . For a more extensive discussion of the brokers' fee issues and of the law that was in effect prior to implementation of the 1995 amendments, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 3.7.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n27)Footnote 26. However, one court refused to grant the consumer summary judgment when the assignee argued that the fee was simply advanced by the lender on behalf of the consumer. Bynum v. Equitable Mortgage Group, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6363 (D.D.C. Apr. 7, 2005) .

(n28)Footnote 27. 24 C.F.R. § 3500.

(n29)Footnote 28. First Acadiana Bank v. FDIC, 833 F.2d 548, 550 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Yazzie v. Ray Vicker's Special Cars, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (D.N.M. 1998) (since pawnbroker would not have extended credit if storage fee was not paid at the outset, the fee is a finance charge). The charge, of course, must also meet the other requirements.

(n30)Footnote 29. 61 Fed. Reg. 49237, 49239 (Sept. 19, 1996) .

(n31)Footnote 30. Id.

(n32)Footnote 31. Household Credit Servs. Inc v. Pfennig, 541 U.S. 232, 124 S. Ct. 1741, 158 L. Ed. 2d 450 (2004) .

(n33)Footnote 32. Id. at 1749

(n34)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a); Reg. Z § 226.4(a). The Commentary gives several examples of credit transaction charges that would not be imposed in cash transactions and, therefore, are considered finance charges. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(a)-1(ii). The Commentary also gives several examples of credit transaction charges that would also be imposed in comparable cash transactions and, therefore, are not considered finance charges. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(a)-1(i). See, e.g., Basile v. H&R Block, Inc. 897 F. Supp. 194 (E.D. Pa. 1995) (electronic filing fee charged by tax preparation service to taxpayers who participate in its "refund anticipation loan" program, as well as those who do not, is not a finance charge, since the fee is the same in comparable cash transactions); Ferrari v. Howard, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 3632 (Ohio Ct. App. July 11, 2002) (creditor must show that it charges the same documentary service charge to both cash and credit customers in other to take advantage of this exception); Tripp v. Charlie Falk Auto, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14096 (E.D. Va. Aug. 22, 2001) (car dealer processing fee was charged to both cash and credit customers and was properly excluded from the finance charge). See also Hook v. Baker, 352 F. Supp. 2d 839 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (document preparation fee assessed only to customers who finance the transaction is an undisclosed finance charge).

(n35)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a); Reg. Z § 226.4(a).

(n36)Footnote 35. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(1)-(5); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(1)-(9).

(n37)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(1).

(n38)Footnote 37. See generally § 6.05 infra for a detailed explanation of the various methods of calculating interest.

(n39)Footnote 38. Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(1).

(n40)Footnote 39. Reg. Z § 226.20(a); Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-4.

(n41)Footnote 40. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(2); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(2). See, e.g., Ferran v. Sanchez, 105 N.M. 518, 734 P.2d 758 (1987) (loan servicing fee part of finance charge); In re Fryer, 183 B.R. 322 , motion for reconsideration denied, 183 B.R. 654 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1995) (pawn charge at issue).

(n42)Footnote 41. "Points" are a fee imposed frequently by mortgage lenders and occasionally by other creditors. Points are calculated as one percent of loan principal. Thus, two points on a $100,000 mortgage is a fee of $2000. Ostensibly, points compensate lenders for processing a loan and packaging it for resale, and points are therefore sometimes called "origination fees." See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 7.2.2 (4th ed. 2009).

(n43)Footnote 42. Assumption fees are paid by a consumer to assume a credit obligation of another consumer. The Commentary points out that the assumption fee is a finance charge (for the new buyer) only when it is imposed on the new buyer. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(b)(3)-1. See also Reg. Z § 226.20(b) for a discussion of assumptions.

(n44)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(3); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(3).

(n45)Footnote 44. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(4); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(4).

(n46)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(5), (b), (c); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(7), (8).

(n47)Footnote 46. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b), (c); Reg. Z § 226.4(d).

(n48)Footnote 47. See Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(23). See, e.g., April v. Union Mortgage Co., 709 F. Supp. 809, 811 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (failure to include $1,049 prepaid finance charge as part of finance charge violates TIL even if annual percentage rate [hereinafter APR] correctly disclosed); Ferran v. Sanchez, 105 N.M. 518, 734 P.2d 758 (1987) (loan servicing fee was prepaid finance charge). Some states place caps on allowable prepaid finance charges. See Winn v. Ameriquest, 2006 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1129 (Conn. Super. Ct. Apr. 12, 2006) (discussing Connecticut law limiting the amount of any prepaid finance charges that may be charged in connection with a first mortgage loan to the greater of $2000 or 5% of the original loan amount plus five percent of any additional proceeds received by the borrower in the refinancing).

(n49)Footnote 48. 15 U.S.C. § 1605; Reg. Z § 226.4(a), (b).

(n50)Footnote 49. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(23); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(23)-2.

(n51)Footnote 50. See Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(23). See, e.g., April v. Union Mortgage Co., 709 F. Supp. 809, 811 (N.D.

Ill. 1989) (failure to include $1049 prepaid finance charge as part of finance charge violates TIL even if APR correctly disclosed); Ferran v. Sanchez, 105 N.M. 518, 734 P.2d 758 (1987) (loan servicing fee was prepaid finance charge).

(n52)Footnote 51. Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(2); Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(b)-2.

(n53)Footnote 52. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 2.5.7 (6th ed. 2007), for a fuller discussion of bounce loans. The FRB recently proposed regulating bounce loans under the Truth in Savings Act, not under TILA. 69 Fed. Reg. 31760 (June 7, 2004) . In addition, the federal banking regulators proposed interagency guidelines setting "best practices" for bounce loans. Proposed Interagency Guidance on Overdraft Protection Programs. 69 Fed. Reg. 31858 (June 7, 2004) .

(n54)Footnote 53. See also §§ 1.05[2][e][ii][A], 1.08[3][b], 1.09[2][h] infra , for the impact of the new immunity statute and increased tolerance levels for finance charge and related disclosures.

(n55)Footnote 54. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(1).

(n56)Footnote 55. United States v. Citrin, 972 F.2d 1044 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n57)Footnote 56. These include charges for reinstatement of credit privileges or for submitting as payment a check that is later returned unpaid. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(c)(2)-2. See, e.g., Opinion of the Idaho Attorney General, No. 87-11, [1980-1989 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 95,968 (Sept. 23, 1987).

(n58)Footnote 57. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(2). See Cappalli v. Nordstrom FSB, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 2492 (3d Cir. Feb. 15, 2002) (TILA requires exclusion of late charge from APR or from finance charge).

(n59)Footnote 58. Cappalli v. Nordstrom FSB, 28 Fed. Appx. 160, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 2492 (3d Cir. 2002) ; Reg. Z § 226.4(c) ("[t]he following charges are not finance charges ... .").

(n60)Footnote 59. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(2).

(n61)Footnote 60. Pfennig v. Household Credit Servs., 295 F.3d 522 (6th Cir. 2002) , cert. granted, 123 S. Ct. 2639 (2003) , rev'd 124 S. Ct. 1741 (2004) .

(n62)Footnote 61. Household Credit Servs. v. Pfennig, 124 S. Ct. 1741 (2004) .

(n63)Footnote 62. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(7); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1).

(n64)Footnote 63. Credit life insurance is sold on the life of the borrower, with the creditor or the debtor's account as the beneficiary. If the borrower dies, the insurance company will pay off the debt. See generally § 6.06[2][a] infra.

(n65)Footnote 64. Accident and health insurance ("A & H" or disability insurance) insures the borrower against the loss of income caused by an illness or accident which prevents the borrower from working. This insurance pays off the debt installments which become due during the period the borrower is out of work. See generally § 6.06[2][b] infra.

(n66)Footnote 65. Unemployment insurance insures the borrower against involuntary unemployment. In the event of such unemployment, some or all of the consumer's payments will be made. (The policies may be drafted so that benefits are quite limited.) See § 6.06[2][c] infra.

(n67)Footnote 66. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1). However, the creditor is always free to include the premium in the finance charge. See, e.g., Robinson v. Central Loan & Fin. Corp., 609 F.2d 170 (5th Cir. 1980) . If the creditor chooses to do so, the § 226.4(d) disclosures are not required.

(n68)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b)(1); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1)(i). See London v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA,

N.A., 150 F. Supp. 2d 1314 (S.D. Fla. 2001) (disclosure need not exactly track language in the statute; regulatory language, though different from the statute, is a permissible construction; purchase of credit insurance that is "not a factor" in whether the creditor will issue a credit card is sufficient). But see Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck, Clearinghouse No. 54,563, Case No. 98-1281-CIV-Moreno (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2002) (disclosure must state that the purchase of credit insurance does not influence, bring about, or contribute to the extension of credit; the issue was whether to follow the wording in the statute or the regulation and the court chose the statute; use of the word "optional" does not meet the statutory standard).

(n69)Footnote 68. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b)(2); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1)(ii). The term of the insurance may be less than the loan term in cases, for example, where the loan term exceeds an older borrower's eligibility for the coverage or, for a variety reasons, in cases of long-term loans. When a creditor retains a portion of the credit insurance premium, TIL requires the creditor to disclose that it is receiving such a payment. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(2)(B); Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226.18(c); Official Staff Commentary, § 226.18(c)(1)(iii)-2. See also Guinn v. Hoskins Chevrolet, 836 N.E.2d 681 (Ill. App. 2005) (TILA commentary requires disclosure of fact that creditor is retaining premium upcharge--additional amount retained by creditor--but does not require disclosure of the amount).

(n70)Footnote 69. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b)(2); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1)(iii).

(n71)Footnote 70. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(d)-1, -2.

(n72)Footnote 71. See Barnes v. Robert Holliday, DBA, 1990 Conn. Super. LEXIS 392 (Conn. Super. Ct. June 5, 1990) (consumer signed next to credit insurance, but the blank next to that item was not filled in; consumer was unaware of the "payment protection plan" and was never issued insurance; therefore, the $605.74 charge is a finance charge). See also Bragg v. Bill Heard Chevrolet, Inc., 374 F.3d 1060 (11th Cir. 2004) , cert. denied 125 S. Ct. 963 (2005) (plaintiff's complaint states a claim where creditor failed to include in the finance charge the costs of credit insurance products sold in connection with the credit transaction but for which creditor did not make required disclosures). But see Clark v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11264 (E.D. Pa. June 18, 2004) (plaintiff did not show a reasonable probability of success regarding claim of TIL violation where paperwork met TIL requirements for exclusion of credit property insurance from finance charge, despite alleged contrary oral representations and the fact that the documentation was filled out prior to closing with the creditor's "usual" insurer).

(n73)Footnote 72. National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.6.4.2 (7th ed. 2008).

(n74)Footnote 73. See generally Ch. 6 infra.

(n75)Footnote 74. Some courts have specifically held that where a creditor gives collateral information which undermines or contradicts accurate TIL disclosures, that renders the disclosures "unclear." Jenkins v. Landmark Mortgage Corp. of Va., 696 F. Supp. 1089 (W.D. Va. 1988) (notice of right to rescind at issue). See also Ralls v. Bank of N.Y. (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (information contained in TILA statement was inconsistent with significant terms in other documents evidencing the legal obligation of the borrower; constituted a rescindable violation). That obfuscation, in turn, means the required disclosures are not made in accordance with the mandate that all required disclosures be made "clearly and conspicuously." Further, the current Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] Commentary codifies the Board's historic position that voluntariness is a factual issue, ascertainable only "by reference to all of the circumstances of a particular transaction." Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(d)-5. See also Official Staff Commentary to revised Reg. Z §§ 226.4(b)(7) and 226.4(b)(8)-4, which reiterates the position that required non-credit insurance also is a finance charge. See Brugger v. Elmhurst Kia, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10298 (N.D. Ill. July 18, 2001) (car dealer's motion to dismiss on the voluntary issue denied where oral representations contradicted the written disclosures).

(n76)Footnote 75. 61 Fed. Reg. 49,237 (Sept. 19, 1996) . See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(b)(10); 62

Fed. Reg. 10,193, 10,196 (Mar. 6, 1997) ; Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(d)(3); 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193 (Mar. 6, 1997) .

(n77)Footnote 76. American Bankers Ins. Group, Inc. v. Board of Governors of the Fed. Reserve Sys., 3 F. Supp. 2d 37 (D.D.C. 1998) .

(n78)Footnote 77. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 1028 (May 9, 2005) (the fee is "just an increase in the price of the loan package in exchange for the loan incorporating an additional term or provision that benefits the borrower and reflects the bank's assumption of risk ... ."). A summary of the letter can be found at National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses Appx. C.3 (4th ed. 2009).

(n79)Footnote 78. Credit property insurance is commonly written in loans secured by automobiles, mobile homes, and household goods.

(n80)Footnote 79. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(c); Reg. Z §§ 226.4(b)(8), 226.4(d)(2).

(n81)Footnote 80. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(c); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2)(ii). See, e.g., In re Moore, 117 B.R. 135 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) (property insurance was "purchased through" creditor when it purchased a replacement policy for a new borrower whose pre-existing coverage had lapsed and could not be renewed).

(n82)Footnote 81. Compare 15 U.S.C. § 1605(b); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(1) (required credit life, disability, or unemployment insurance is a finance charge). Of course, creditors may require property insurance only where they have a security interest in the insured property.

(n83)Footnote 82. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(c); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2)(i). The creditor, however, may refuse to accept an insurer offered by the consumer, provided it has reasonable cause to do so. Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2) n.6. See Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck, Clearinghouse No. 54,563, Case No. 98-1281-CIV-Moreno (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2002) (where the creditor uses word "optional" to describe insurance, creditor violates requirement to disclose that consumer may purchase property insurance by a provider of consumer's choice), class cert. granted, 202 F.R.D. 310 (S.D. Fla. 2001) . See also Stump v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4304 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2005) (property insurance premium properly excluded from finance charge with general disclosure that borrower could obtain insurance from anyone acceptable to the creditor).

(n84)Footnote 83. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(c); Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2)(ii).

(n85)Footnote 84. Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2)(ii).

(n86)Footnote 85. Reg. Z § 226.4(d)(2) n.5; Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(d)-9.

(n87)Footnote 86. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(d)-10.

(n88)Footnote 87. For additional analysis of credit insurance issues and the finance charge, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 3.9.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n89)Footnote 88. See, e.g., §§ 1.07[9] (on HELC disclosures), 1.08 infra (on rescission).

(n90)Footnote 89. Thus, they apply to both purchase-money and home equity loans. A residential mortgage transaction is defined as one in which a consensual security interest, including a mortgage or deed of trust, is taken in the consumer's principal dwelling to finance the acquisition or initial construction of that dwelling. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(24). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1602(w).

(n91)Footnote 90. See §§ 1.05[2][e][ii][A], 1.08[3][b], 1.09[2][h] infra .

(n92)Footnote 91. The regulation does not define either "bona fide" or "reasonable." At a minimum, bona fide should mean that the fee is both legal and actually incurred in the amount charged. This requirement is likely to continue to apply in evaluating charges under the 1995 amendments, as the legislative history indicates that the immunity and tolerances are to protect good faith judgment errors, not to give lenders room to pad fees. Cong. Rec. S14,567 (Sept. 28, 1995) (statement of Sen. Sarbanes). See Inge v. Rock Fin. Corp., 281 F.3d 613 (6th Cir. 2002) (to prove that a document preparation fee is a finance charge, consumer need only allege that fee was not reasonable as it exceeded the actual cost of preparing the documents; specifically rejected a lender's argument that the consumer must allege facts showing the lender's charges differed from those of other local businesses).

(n93)Footnote 92. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(1); Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(i).

(n94)Footnote 93. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(1); Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(i). See, e.g., Bell v. Parkway Mortgage, Inc. (In re Bell), 309 B.R. 139 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) as amended on reconsideration by 314 B.R. 54 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) (title insurance endorsement fee of $200 excluded under § 226.4(c)(7)(i), where the charging of the fee was "customary," required by the lender, and the cost was set by the state Department of Insurance). Guise v. BWM Mortgage, 377 F.3d 795 (7th Cir. 2004) (title insurance fee would not be bona fide where insurance or endorsements were not received, or if services covered by such fee were not performed); Murry v. America's Mortg. Banc, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12045 (N.D. Ill. June 25, 2004) (excessive title insurance fee is not bona fide). Cf. Marquez v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5725 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 2, 2004) (summarily concluding that only the amount of the title fee that makes the charge unreasonable should be included in the finance charge); Scott v. IndyMac Bank, FSB, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1309 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 2, 2004) (bona fide title expenses should be excluded from the finance charge "to the extent reasonable" in order to give meaning to the tolerance); McMaster v. CIT Group/Consumer Fin., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28831 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2006) (genuine issue of material fact as to whether title fee was bona fide and reasonable when evidence indicated that consumer may have been charged twice for the title exam). But see Strang v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14135 (E.D. Pa. July 13, 2005) (title insurance excluded from finance charge; no bona fide/reasonable analysis). Madera v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co. (In re Madera), 388 B.R. 586 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (holding that appropriate standard is that lender knew or should have known that borrowers were eligible for reissue title insurance rate); Escher v. Decision One Mortg. Co., LLC (In re Escher), 369 B.R. 862 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2007) (charging higher standard fee rather than lower reissue title rate was reasonable and not a finance charge where lender neither knew nor should have known that borrowers had previous insurance policy).

(n95)Footnote 94. Compare In re Grigsby, 119 B.R. 479 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) (fee for title insurance policy was bona fide and reasonable and properly excluded from the finance charge, though not issued until three days after consummation; no evidence was presented that the charge was excessive, "either due to a relationship between [creditor and insurer] or otherwise," or illegal), vacated on other grounds, 127 B.R. 759 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) , with Mayo v. Key Fin. Servs., Inc., 2 Mass. L. Rep. 269 (Super. Ct. 1994) (title insurance premium alleged to be in excess of market rate).

(n96)Footnote 95. Johnson v. The Know Fin. Group, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9916 (E.D. Pa. May 26, 2004) (finding a title insurance charge to be unreasonable where the creditor did not abide by published state guidelines for reissue rates); Johnson v. Banc One Acceptance Corp., 278 F. Supp. 2d 450 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (same case; describing how court would analyze whether the title insurance charge is unreasonable or not bona fide, but holding that this can not be determined on a motion to dismiss because discovery is needed).

(n97)Footnote 96. See §§ 1.05[2][e][ii][A], 1.08[3][b], 1.09[2][h] infra . See Brannam v. Huntington Mortgage Co., 287 F.3d 601 (6th Cir.) , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1048, 123 S. Ct. 635, 154 L. Ed. 2d 522 (2002) (this exclusion covers not only documents related to the transfer of title but all documents; court construed Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(ii)). A document preparation fee will not be bona fide if it includes amounts for any additional purpose. Cowles v. Bank West, 687 N.W.2d 603 (Mich. Ct. App. 2004) (distinguishing facts from Brannam on this basis), appeal granted, 705 N.W.2d 28 (Mich. 2005) . Bynum v. Equitable Mortg. Group, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6363 (D.D.C. Apr. 7, 2005) (settlement closing fee counts toward finance charge where lender required that loan be closed by lender-approved title insurance company, and where lender required the fee; evidence came from a disclosure form provided to borrower at closing).

(n98)Footnote 97. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(ii). Given the legislative history, this provision, as was its earlier incarnation, should be subject to the good faith and reasonable test articulated in Regulation Z's interpretation of section 1605(e). See Bell v. Parkway Mortgage, Inc. (In re Bell), 309 B.R. 139 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) as amended on reconsideration by 314 B.R. 54 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) (copying fee and recording service fee were not finance charges when imposed by closing agent because there was no evidence that creditor required the fee or retained a portion of it; court also rejected consumer's argument that the copying fee was not a reasonable or bona fide real-estate-related fee under § 226.4(c)(7)).

(n99)Footnote 98. See, e.g., Lawson v. First Union Mortgage Co., 786 N.E.2d 279 (Ind. Ct. App. 2003) (reversing trial court's dismissal of a consumer's equitable claim for return of a document preparation fee; court held that while a lender's lay employees did not commit the unauthorized practice of law by preparing mortgage loan documents, the lender could not charge a separate fee for such documents); Eisel v. Midwest Bankcentre, 2006 Mo. App. LEXIS 1820 (Mo. Ct. App. Nov. 28, 2006) (bank engaged in unauthorized practice of law when it charged a separate document preparation fee for creating deeds of trust and loan documentation; trial court awarded treble damages pursuant to state statute and appellate court transferred case to state supreme court in light of importance of issue).

(n100)Footnote 99. The issue of non-attorneys preparing mortgage documents is a hotly contested one between the legal profession and non-legal entities. Ironically, the Federal Trade Commission and U.S. Department of Justice have weighed in on the side of the lending industry, believing that permitting non-lawyers to prepare mortgage loan documents is consumer-friendly because it supposedly increases competition and reduces the cost of document preparation. Fed. Trade Comm'n & United States Dep't of Justice, Comments on the American Bar Association's Proposed Model Definition of the Practice of Law (Dec. 20, 2002).

(n101)Footnote 100. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(4)-(6); Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(iii).

(n102)Footnote 101. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(4)-(6); Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(7)(iii).

(n103)Footnote 102. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(c)(7)-1. See Riopta v. Amresco Residential Mortgage Corp., 101 F. Supp. 2d 1326 (D. Haw. 1999) (court found that overcharge on the property appraisal did not exceed the tolerance of $35 for foreclosure cases without any analysis of whether the entire fee or only the overcharge is a finance charge, and because the lender relied upon an oral representation of the cost, which later turned out to be too low).

(n104)Footnote 103. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(4); Reg. Z § 226.4(b)(4).

(n105)Footnote 104. See Oscar v. Bank One, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6410 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 17, 2006) (when notary fee limited under state law to $2, remaining $33 of $35 fee counts toward finance charge).

(n106)Footnote 105. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(3). Prior to the 1981 revision, Regulation Z also cast this provision in terms of escrow for future payments of "taxes, insurance, and water, sewer and land rents." Reg. Z § 226.4(e)(3) (1980).

(n107)Footnote 106. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(v).

(n108)Footnote 107. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(c)(7)-3; 60 Fed. Reg. 16,771, 16,773 (Apr. 3, 1995) (Supplemental Information). The 1995 statutory amendments codified this approach with respect to pest inspection and flood hazard inspection fees. Only if conducted prior to closing are they excluded from the finance charge. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(e)(5), as amended Sept. 30, 1995.

(n109)Footnote 108. Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(c)(7)-3; 60 Fed. Reg. 16,771, 16,773 (Apr. 3, 1995) (Supplemental Information).

(n110)Footnote 109. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(d); Reg. Z § 226.4(e).

(n111)Footnote 110. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(d); Reg. Z § 226.4(e).

(n112)Footnote 111. A payment to public officials need not occur simultaneously with a consumer's transaction to be excluded from the finance charge. See Harper v. Lindsay Chevrolet Oldsmobile, 212 F. Supp. 2d 582 (E.D. Va. 2002) (amount paid by auto dealer for purchase of temporary plates in advance of consumer's transaction could be excluded from the finance charge). See also Payton v. New Century Mortgage Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2003) (excluding from the finance charge only the portion of the government recording fee that actually was paid to record the mortgage and finding that the remaining amount paid by the consumer for this service--the overcharge of $49.50--is a finance charge). See, e.g., Kai v. Aames Capital Corp., 920 So. 2d 846 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2006) (when fees were properly itemized and disclosed, public official fees did not violate TILA).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.05

§ 1.05 Closed-End Credit Disclosures

REGULATION Z CHANGES OR ADDITIONS DUE TO FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD AMENDMENTS OF JULY 30, 2008 Fed. Reg. 44,522 (July 30, 2008). The Federal Reserve Board issued a proposed rule on August 26, 2009, that includes substantial changes to Regulation Z's disclosure requirements for closed-end, home-secured credit. When a final rule is issued, the changes will be examined more comprehensively in a future update to this publication.

Regulation Z and related Commentary Section	Description of Affected or Added Regulation	Effective Date
§ 226.2(a)(6)	Definition of business day for purposes of early disclosures for covered loans.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.16(d), (e)	Advertising rules for open-end credit.	Advertisements occurring on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.17(b), (f)	Timing of closed-end disclosures and redisclosure if early disclosures become inaccurate.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.19(a)	Early disclosures for all loans secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, other than home equity lines of credit.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.23, note 48	Definition of "material" disclosures for purposes of rescission.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.24(b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i)	Advertising rules for closed-end credit.	Advertisements occurring on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.32(d)(6), (7)	HOEPA prepayment penalty prohibition.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.

§ 226.34(a)(4)	HOEPA ability to repay standard.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009.
§ 226.35 new	Higher-priced mortgage loans; prohibited acts or practices.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009, except for the escrow rules; escrow rules apply to new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after April 1, 2010; for loans secured by manufactured housing, escrow rules apply to new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2010.
§ 226.36 new	Credit secured by a consumer's principal dwelling; prohibited acts or practices.	New transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after Oct. 1, 2009, except for the servicer rules which apply to all covered loans serviced on or after Oct. 1, 2009.

[1] Introduction

As discussed above, disclosure of the finance charge is at the heart of TIL. However, this disclosure is by no means the only important TILA disclosure requirement. TILA mandates additional disclosures for both closed-end and open-ended credit. Disclosures required in closed-end credit transactions are discussed in this section. Open-ended credit disclosure requirements are discussed in § 1.07 infra.

"Closed-end" credit transactions are defined by Regulation Z as "consumer credit other than 'open-end credit.' " n2 Closed-end credit usually involves one transaction, such as a mortgage loan to buy a home, or an installment sale of an appliance, or a car loan with a fixed repayment plan as to both number and amount of payments. Open-end plans are often referred to as "revolving credit."

For covered closed-end transactions in which there is a single creditor, that creditor must make the disclosures. n3 In the rare instance in which there are multiple creditors, only one set of disclosures must be given. n4

Disclosures must be made to the consumer who is obligated in the transaction. n5 If more than one consumer is involved, disclosures may be given to any one consumer who has primary liability on the obligation. n6 However, in rescindable home secured transactions, n7 separate disclosures must be given to every consumer who has the right to rescind. n8

[2] Required Closed-End Disclosures

[a] Form of Required Disclosures

The statute n9 and Regulation Z n10 require that disclosures must be made clearly and conspicuously. The Commentary amplifies this standard to require that disclosures be made "in a reasonably understandable form." n11 If a disclosure is capable of more than one plausible interpretation, it is not clear and conspicuous. n12 The standard typically employed by the courts to judge whether a disclosure is "clear and conspicuous" is an objective one. n13 The courts will review disclosures through the eyes of the ordinary consumer. n14 If the ordinary consumer would be confused or misled by the disclosures, they are not clear and conspicuous. n14.1 Several courts hold that whether disclosures meet these standardsis a question of law to be decided by a judge. n15 Consequently, cases can be won or lost on summary judgment. In late 2003, the Federal Reserve Board proposed a more specific definition of "clear and conspicuous." n16 It intended to make the definition uniform among five regulations over which it has authority: Regulations B (relating to equal credit), E (relating to electronic fund transfers), M (relating to consumer leasing), Z (relating to truth in lending), and DD (relating to truth in savings). However, the Board withdrew its proposed uniform standard in light of industry opposition and consumer concerns. n17 Some disclosures have to be "more conspicuous" than the other required disclosures, specifically, the finance charge and the annual percentage rate. n18

The "clear and conspicuous" standard also embraces the notion of legibility. n19 The disclosures must be written n20 but may be handwritten, typed, printed by computer or any combination of these. n21 In addition, the consumer must be given a copy of the written disclosures. n22 "Conspicuousness" is a question of law to be decided by a judge. n23 Consequently, cases can be won or lost on summary judgment.

The 1980 Simplification amendments required the FRB to publish model disclosure forms and clauses upon which creditors may rely. n24 Although use of the forms and clauses is not required, the Act does give some protection to creditors choosing to use them. Creditors using the model forms as printed, if they choose the correct forms, should be immune to attacks for violations of the clear and conspicuous requirements. n25 Those not using the forms or altering them arguably carry a high burden to show they satisfy the requirements.

The FRB has promulgated the following Closed-End Models of Regulation Z:

H-1 Credit Sale Model Form (§ 226.18)

H-2 Loan Model Form (§ 226.18)

H-3 Amount Financed Itemization Model Form (§ 226.18(c))

H-4 Variable-Rate Model Clauses (§ 226.18(f))

H-5 Demand Feature Model Clauses (§ 226.18(i))

H-6 Assumption Policy Model Clause (§ 226.18(q))

H-7 Required Deposit Model Clause (§ 226.18(r))

H-8 Rescission Model Form (General) (§ 226.23)

H-9 Rescission Model Form (Refinancing) (§ 226.23)

The Models are illustrated by examples in six samples:

H-10 Credit Sale Sample

H-11 Installment Loan Sample

H-12 Refinancing Sample

H-13 Mortgage with Demand Feature Sample

H-14 Variable-Rate Mortgage Sample

H-15 Graduated-Payment Mortgage Sample

The Board has proposed sweeping changes to the model forms for closed-end mortgages. n26 More information about these disclosures will be provided in subsequent supplements, after the adoption of final regulations.

The statute's purpose is to require meaningful disclosures to consumers, n26.1 and therefore their adequacy must be assessed at least, in part, by the audience of ordinary laypersons. n27 Violation of the "meaningful" standard does not itself give rise to damages. Rather, the "meaningful" requirement should be used in interpreting whether the specific disclosures made meet statutory requirements. n28 Failure to make certain disclosures in a "meaningful" way leads to damages.

The statute requires that the disclosures must be "segregated from everything else, and shall not contain any information not directly related" to the disclosures required by Regulation Z section 226.18. n29 Contradictions on the TIL disclosure itself may also render the disclosures not clear and conspicuous. n29.1

In some cases, creditors may issue more than one TIL disclosure or there may be, in a mortgage transaction, multiple and conflicting settlement statements. n29.2 In such cases, it may be difficult for consumers or their advocates to determine what the correct disclosures are--a very nearly per se violation of the clear and conspicuous rule. On the other hand, TILA provides for redisclosure when previously provided disclosures become inaccurate. Redisclosure required or permitted by TILA by itself is not a violation of the clear and conspicuous standard. n29.3

The Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act ("E-Sign"), n30 which became effective October 1, 2000, allows disclosures that are required by federal statutes to be made electronically, as long as certain conditions are met. n31 The legislative history of the Act refers to TIL disclosures as an example of a law affected by this provision. n32 The new statute applies not only to transactions that the consumer initiates electronically, but also to traditional paper transactions. It authorizes creditors to make TIL disclosures electronically in transactions that are otherwise conducted entirely on paper, as long as the new statute's requirements satisfied. For consumer transactions, the key requirement is that the consumer must consent in a very specific way to receive electronic disclosures. n33

Prior to consenting to receive electronic disclosures, the consumer must be given a clear and conspicuous statement of:

- Any right or option to get the disclosure in non-electronic form;
- The right to withdraw consent and the procedures for and consequences of doing so;
- What transactions the consumer's consent applies to;
- The procedures for updating the information needed to contact the consumer electronically;
- How, after consenting to electronic disclosures, to get a paper copy of any disclosures, and whether any fee will be imposed. n34

The consumer must also be given a statement of the hardware and software requirements for access to and retention of electronic records. n35 Most importantly, the consumer must also either give consent electronically to receive electronic disclosures, or must confirm consent electronically. n36 In either case, the consent or confirmation of consent must be done "in a manner that reasonably demonstrates that the consumer can access information in the electronic form that will be used to provide the information that is the subject of the consent." n37

The federal E-Sign statute states that it does not affect requirements regarding the content or timing of disclosures. n38 The legislative history shows that Congress considered a requirement that disclosures be clear and conspicuous to be the an example of a "content" requirement that was unaffected by the E-sign statute. n39 In addition, another section of the statute states the general rule that it does not undermine any statutory or regulatory requirements other than those that require contracts or other records to be written, signed, or in nonelectronic form. n40

The federal statute gives federal agencies, including the FRB, authority to interpret the federal statute, but the interpretation must be consistent with the statute's rules for electronic disclosures and cannot add requirements.

In 2001, the Federal Reserve Board issued an interim rule governing electronic disclosures under TILA. n41 The rule was immediately effective and contained a mandatory compliance date of October 1, 2001. n42 After the comment period expired, however, the Board lifted the mandatory compliance date because the "Board is considering adjustments to the rules to provide additional flexibility." n43 Because the landscape of the interim rule is in doubt, it is unlikely that creditors will engineer their computer software and gear up to engage in electronic credit transactions until some rule becomes final.

The Board structured the new rules by amending certain existing provisions and by adding a new section to Regulation Z entitled "Requirements for electronic communication." n44 This addition contains the basic thrust of the Board's views on how electronic disclosures must be made. Further, the Commentary was revised in parts and new Commentary fleshes out the new Regulation Z section.

[b] Timing of Required Disclosures

The statute requires that closed-end disclosures be made "before the credit is extended." n45 Regulation Z uses the phrase "before consummation," n46 defined as "the time that a consumer becomes contractually obligated on a credit transaction." n47 A copy of the disclosures are not provided before consummation where the creditor gives a copy to the consumer to review before signing the contract, but will not permit the consumer to leave with the copy unless it is signed. Whether or when a consumer becomes "contractually obligated" is an issue of state law; it is not, theoretically, a TIL issue. n48 In 2002, the Board added a discussion in the Commentary regarding the timing rules when the creditor provides the TILA disclosure on the same form as the credit contract. n49 The Board rejected the argument that a creditor can provide a copy of the disclosure within a reasonable time after consummation, and made clear that when the disclosures are combined with the credit contract, the creditor must give the consumer a copy of the unexecuted contract to read and sign. n50

There are two exceptions to the rule that disclosures must be made prior to consummation. These are for some mail or telephone orders n51 and, in a series of sales, the creditor may delay disclosures until the due date of the first payment for the current sale. n52

Transactions which are both "residential mortgage transactions" as defined by TIL n53 and which are also subject to Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act ("RESPA"), n54 are subject to special timing rules. n55 For this category of transactions, good faith estimates of the required disclosures n56 must be made prior to consummation or delivered or mailed within three days after the consumer's written application is received, n57 whichever is earlier. n58 Depending on the terms of the transactions, these loans may also be subject to special timing rules for variable-rate transactions. The Commentary also allows creditors subject to RESPA to completely omit the itemization of the amount financed. n59

In 2008, both the Federal Reserve Board and the Congress decided it was time that borrowers who were refinancing their homes should receive early disclosures of the cost of credit. n60 The current early disclosure requirements apply only to purchase mortgage loans. The statute, signed the same day the final regulations were published in the Federal Register, amends TILA to require early disclosures on most extensions of credit secured by a dwelling. The statute and the regulations, in an effort to promote shopping, also limit the fees that a consumer may be charged, by any party, before the early disclosures are received by the consumer, to a credit report fee. n61

The statute generally provides more coverage than the regulations. More loans are covered; redisclosure is required before the closing table. Disclosures must be delivered three business days after application (the current law for residential mortgage transactions), but no less than seven business days before closing. n62 The statute goes into effect on July 30, 2009, n63 two months before the regulations are set to take effect on October 1, 2009. n64

Consumers can, in some circumstances, waive receipt of the early disclosures only in the event of a "bona fide personal emergency." n65 The Board has authority to further define bona fide personal emergency. n66

"Bona fide personal financial emergency" is also required for waiver or modification of rescission rights. n67 The consumer must receive the final disclosures no later than the waiver. n68

As with the existing timing regulations, failure to comply with the timing requirements should give rise to a claim for actual and statutory damages.

With respect to timing of disclosures in variable-rate transactions, creditors are required to provide consumers with extensive information about the variable-rate feature of closed-end adjustable rate mortgages ("ARMs") secured by the consumer's principal dwelling and with a maturity longer than one year when such loan terms are contemplated. n69 These disclosures, which include both an ARM brochure and other detailed information, must be provided to prospective borrowers when an application form is furnished or before the payment of a non-refundable fee, whichever is earlier. n70

[c] Basis of Disclosures

The disclosures must reflect the terms of the legal obligation between the creditor(s) and the consumer(s). n71 As with the definition of consummation, the "legal obligation" is determined by applicable state or other law. n72 The disclosures should reflect the legal obligation in effect at the outset of the transaction. n73

If any information necessary for an accurate disclosure is unknown, the creditor must make the disclosure based on the best information "reasonably available" and must state that the disclosure is an estimate. n74 If the loan note is ambiguous as to the legal obligation regarding, for example, a balloon payment, the consumer could argue that the TIL disclosures do not reflect the legal obligation. This argument is strong when the TIL disclosures list a specific balloon payment amount, the loan note does not but is titled "Balloon Note," and the creditor claims there is no balloon or the balloon payment differs from that disclosed. n75

As with many other disclosure rules, creditors are given considerable flexibility in making estimated disclosures. According to the Commentary, only the particular disclosure for which the exact information is unknown must be labelled as an estimate. n76 It is quite possible, however, that the accuracy of other disclosures will also be affected by the estimated disclosure. In those situations, the creditor has the option of labelling every affected disclosure as an estimate or only labelling the disclosure primarily affected as an estimate. n77

The 1995 amendments included a special rule for estimated disclosures of per diem interest. A creditor is now permitted to disclose per diem interest based on information actually known to the creditor at the time the disclosure documents are prepared. n78

In addition to labelling disclosures as estimates, creditors may also disregard what the Commentary calls "minor variations" n79 and "irregularities." n80

Sometimes in the period after a creditor has made disclosures and before consummation, a "subsequent event" may make those disclosures inaccurate. There are some limited situations in which these subsequent events require new disclosures. Specifically, there are three circumstances where a change in the interim will trigger a redisclosure requirement. n81

If the annual percentage rate changes by more than 1/8 of 1 percentage point in a "regular transaction" or 1/4 of 1 percentage point in an "irregular transaction," n82 then the creditor must disclose the changed terms prior to consummation. n83 (The APR tolerance is the key issue even if the changed terms exceed other TIL tolerances such as that for the finance charge.) Second, even where any change in the APR is within the permitted tolerance, if the APR or other disclosed terms initially were not based on proper estimates and labelled as such, redisclosure is also required. n84 Finally, new disclosures must also be made prior to consummation if a variable-rate feature is added to the credit terms. n85

Not surprisingly, the issue of solicitations and disclosures matching the legal obligation has arisen in the credit card context. In a recent Third Circuit decision, Rossman v. Fleet Bank National Ass'n, n86 the consumer signed up for a credit card that the TIL disclosures described as a "no-annual-fee Platinum Master Card." Nonetheless, just six months later, the bank imposed an annual fee, payable almost immediately. Along with the disclosure of "no annual fee," the bank had disclosed its right to "change the benefit features associated with [the] card at any time." The court held that TILA only requires disclosure of current fees, not all fees that might ever be imposed. But the court went on to evaluate whether the disclosure of "no annual fee" was a clear and conspicuous statement of the terms of the card. The court held that such a disclosure implies that there will be no fee for at least a year. If the creditor imposes an annual fee sooner than a year, the initial disclosure is not a clear and conspicuous statement of the legal obligation.

[d] Determining Which Disclosures Are Required

The TILA and the Regulation require a creditor to disclose a long list of items for each closed-end transaction. n87 Every item must be disclosed "to the extent applicable" n88 or "as applicable." n89 The Commentary attempts to give some meaning to the phrase "as applicable," n90 stating that "any disclosure not relevant to a particular transaction may be eliminated entirely." The Commentary gives two fairly obvious examples. The "total sale price" disclosure may be eliminated in a loan transaction; the "down payment" disclosure may be deleted if there is no down payment. n91

[e] Special Consumer Relief Disclosures

All of the required disclosures are not created equal. Improper disclosure of certain ones give rise to greater liability for the offending creditor than others. Violations of any disclosure requirement give rise to a right to actual damages, attorney fees and costs. n92 But since many disclosure violations are unlikely to give rise to actual damages to the average consumer, those disclosure violations which give rise to special consumer relief take on increased importance.

There is no requirement of actual damages in order to obtain the right to special relief for these violations, n93 although as with any TIL disclosure requirement, actual damages are available where they arise. Those violations which give rise to special consumer relief are listed below.

[i] Amount Financed

The amount financed must be disclosed using that term. n94 In addition, a brief description of the amount financed must be provided. n95 The Regulation suggests using the description "the amount of credit provided to you or on your behalf." n96

Failure to properly disclose the amount financed gives rise to statutory damages and attorney fees, n97 as well as any actual damages. Improper disclosure of the amount financed is also a material violation for purposes of rescission. n98

According to the Regulation, the amount financed for a loan is calculated by determining the principal loan amount and

a) Adding other amounts financed by the creditor but not included in the finance charge, and

b) Subtracting any prepaid finance charge. n99

The amount financed for a credit sale is calculated by determining the cash price and:

a) Subtracting any down payment; n100

b) Adding other amounts financed by the creditor but not included in the finance charge; n101 and

c) Subtracting any prepaid finance charge. n102

Though the formula conveys the concept underlying the amount financed in a given transaction, it may be a somewhat imprecise description. n103 Any financed fee or other charge that is not part of the finance charge and is not paid separately at consummation of the transaction must be included in the amount financed. n104

[ii] Disclosure of the Finance Charge

The finance charge must be disclosed as a dollar amount, the term "finance charge" must be used, and a brief description of the finance charge must be provided. n105 The Regulation suggests using the description "the dollar amount the credit will cost you." n106 In variable-rate transactions, the creditor has the option of modifying the description with a phrase such as "which is subject to change." n107

The finance charge may be disclosed only as a total amount. Its elements need not be itemized in the segregated disclosures (although nothing would prohibit its elements from being disclosed elsewhere). n108

The disclosure of the finance charge (along with the disclosure of the annual percentage rate) must be more conspicuous than any other required disclosure. n109 The only required disclosure which may be, but need not be, more conspicuous than the finance charge is the creditor's identity. n110 Violation of the more conspicuous requirement entitles the consumer to statutory damages, n111 as well as any actual damages.

Failure to properly disclose the amount of the finance charge gives rise to statutory damages, n112 as well as any actual damages. n113 Improper disclosure of the amount of the finance charge is also a material violation for purposes of rescission. n114

[A] 1995 Amendments and Tolerances for Error

A key issue for evaluating an inaccurate finance charge is whether the disclosure must be treated as accurate because it is within the TILA's "tolerance" for error. The 1995 amendments to TILA create a complicated system for determining tolerances for the disclosure of the finance charge for different types of transactions and claims. The finance charge tolerance for a particular claim will depend on the date of the transaction, the type of transaction, the type of relief being sought, and for some real-estate secured loans, whether or not the creditor has initiated foreclosure.

The Regulation provides a general tolerance for the disclosure of the finance charge, which applies to all non-mortgage credit. n115 If the amount financed exceeds $1,000, then the finance charge is considered accurate if it is no more than $10 above or below the exact finance charge. n116 If the amount financed is $1,000 or less, then the finance charge is considered accurate if it is no more than $5 above or below the exact finance charge. The amendments, however, create a complicated series of exceptions, limitations, and exceptions to the exceptions which apply to real estate and dwelling secured loans. n117

For advocates using TIL rescission to defend against home foreclosures, n118 the tolerance is $35 for underdisclosures. n119 The precondition on the exception is that the creditor must have initiated a judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure. n120 Overdisclosures of the finance charge will have an unlimited tolerance. n121

The tolerance for rescission remedies, except after initiation of foreclosure as discussed above, is more complicated. The general rule allows a tolerance for an understatement of $100 or one-half of one percent of the total amount of credit extended, whichever is greater. n122 There is an unlimited tolerance for an overstated finance charge. n123 Note that only the unreasonable portion of a fee under the finance charge analysis is misdisclosed; thus, only the unreasonable portion counts towards the tolerance of one half of one per cent. n124

Closed-end loans secured by real-estate or a dwelling made after September 30, 1995, are subject to a special set of finance charge tolerance rules. n125 For damage remedies, the tolerance in these transactions is $100. n126 There is an unlimited tolerance for overdisclosures. n127

For transactions refinancing the principal balance and accrued unpaid finance charges of a prior residential mortgage transaction, n128 and subsequent refinancings of such a transaction (in both cases whether or not the same creditor is involved), the finance charge tolerance is one percent of the total amount of credit extended, or $100, whichever is greater. n129 However, to qualify for this larger tolerance, the loan must not include any debt consolidation or new advances. Again, overdisclosures in any amount do not give rise to any liability. n130 However, it does not apply to high-rate mortgage transactions as defined by the statute. n131

The tolerances--at least those provided by sections 1605(f) and 1635(i)(2) for transactions entered into after September 30, 1995--are affirmative defenses that must be raised by the creditor, rather than an element of the claim that the consumer must plead. n132

In the 1995 amendments, Congress also created tolerances which apply retroactively to transactions consummated before September 30, 1995, the effective date of the Act. n133 The retroactive tolerance levels apply only to closed-end loans secured by real-estate and dwellings. n134

[iii] Annual Percentage Rate Disclosure

The "annual percentage rate" must be disclosed using that term, and a brief description of the annual percentage rate must also be provided; the Regulation suggests using the description "the cost of your credit as a yearly rate." n135 In variable-rate transactions, the creditor has the option of modifying the description with a phrase such as "which is subject to change." n136 The disclosure of the annual percentage rate (along with the disclosure of the finance charge) must be more conspicuous than any other required disclosure. n137 The only required disclosure which may be, but need not be, more conspicuous than the annual percentage rate is the creditor's identity. n138 Violation of the more conspicuous requirement should entitle the consumer to statutory damages, n139 as well as any actual damages.

The APR for a variable rate transaction is calculated like other APRs, based on the legal obligation as it exists at the time of origination. With a variable rate transaction, however, the question arises as to which interest rate to use in calculating the payment schedule on which the APR is based. The rate at origination will change; from the beginning, the note presumes a change in the rate. This choice is further complicated in notes that set an initial rate artificially low, such that the rate will, without doubt readjust to a higher rate during the note term. Variable rate transactions should be distinguished, however, from notes, such as step-rate mortgages, that provide for a series of defined adjustments in the interest rate. If the interest rate changes are pre-defined and certain at the time of origination (e.g., if the note provides that the rate will increase from 2% to 7% over five years, with one percentage point increases every year), that is a step-rate mortgage, which is not subject to the variable rate transaction disclosure rules. n139.1

The Commentary dispenses with the need for crystal balls by requiring that the APR should be calculated based on the rate in effect at the loan's inception. n139.2 If this initial rate is not calculated in accordance with the formula defined in the note for subsequent variations in the rate, then the creditor will need to calculate a composite APR. n139.3 The composite APR, in essence, averages out the initial rate and the rate calculated in accordance with formula set out in the note over the life of the loan. But this composite APR, too, reflects the market rate in effect at origination and does not account for any subsequent changes in the index.

The finance charge, total of payments, and payment schedule must also reflect the effect of the combined rates, where the initial stated rate is not the same as the rate that would apply if calculated according to the formula contained in the loan note.

[iv] Disclosure of the Payment Schedule

The creditor must disclose the payment schedule for each transaction, including:

a) The number of payments; n140

b) The amount of each payment; n141 and

c) The timing of payments scheduled to repay the obligation. n142 The payment schedule must include the amount of the payments. n143 Unless Regulation Z or the Commentary expressly provides otherwise, the payments should be disclosed as dollar amounts. An early Federal Reserve Board letter makes this clear. n144

The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998 limits the amount of private mortgage insurance ("PMI") consumers can be required to purchase, for mortgage loans consummated on or after July 1, 1999. n145 Creditors must terminate PMI automatically when certain conditions are met. In 1999, the Board amended the Commentary to provide that the payment schedule reflect the consumer's mortgage insurance payments until the date on which the creditor must automatically terminate coverage. This date occurs when the principal balance owed is 78% of the sale price. In other words, the payment schedule must list a certain number of payments in a monthly amount which includes the private mortgage insurance premium followed by the remaining number of payments in an amount which does not reflect the premium. n146

The Board added an example to the Commentary in 2003 to illustrate how mortgage insurance premiums should be disclosed on the payment schedule when some premiums are collected and escrowed at the time the loan is closed. n147 Note that since the cost of private mortgage insurance is a finance charge, it must be reflected in the finance charge disclosure and the APR. n148

[v] Disclosure of the Total of Payments

The "total of payments" must be disclosed using that term, and a brief description of the total of payments must also be provided. n149 The Regulation suggests using the description "the amount you will have paid when you have made all the scheduled payments." n150

The total of payments need not be disclosed, however, in single-payment transactions. n151 This exception does not apply if there are periodic payments of interest in addition to a single payment of principal. n152

Disclosures in a demand obligation transaction (that is, the debt is payable on demand) must be based on an assumed maturity of one year, unless an alternate maturity date is stated in the legal obligation between the parties. n153

[vi] Disclosure of Security Interests

The creditor must disclose whether it has or will acquire a security interest in the property being purchased as part of the transaction or in other property, identified by item or type. n154 A "security interest" is defined for purposes of the TILA as an interest in property that secures performance of a consumer credit obligation and that is recognized by state or federal law. n155

A security interest does not include, however, "incidental interests," interests in after-acquired property, and security interests that "arise solely by operation of law." n156 These interests may not be disclosed as security interests in the segregated disclosures regardless of whether they are recognized as such under applicable law. n157 However, nothing in the Act or Regulation prohibits the creditor from contractually reserving or enforcing these interests. n158

The term "security interest" also excludes interests in after-acquired property. n159 This exclusion presumably applies regardless of whether a security interest in after-acquired property is specifically recognized under state law. n160

The general definition of "security interest" also excludes interests that arise solely by operation of law. n161 Examples of security interests that arise by operation of law include mechanics' liens and materialmen's liens. n162 However, security interests that arise solely by operation of law nonetheless are considered security interests for purposes of rescission. n163

Despite the careful definition of security interest and the three categories of interests excluded from the definition of security interest (with the Regulation and Commentary providing long lists of excluded interests), creditors may still err on the side of inclusion in disclosing security interests without violating the "segregated" and "directly related" disclosure rules. n164 The Commentary twice gives its blessing to creditors who disclose a security interest even if they are unsure of whether an interest is a security interest under applicable law n165 or whether it is one of the interests excluded from the definition of "security interest." n166 However, this should be strictly limited to those situations where the creditor is genuinely and in good faith unsure about whether a particular interest is a security interest under state law (e.g., a right of setoff). It should not be viewed as giving creditors leeway to make overbroad disclosures of the collateral securing the transaction, a practice which the courts have refused to sanction.

If security interests are not properly disclosed the consumer is entitled to statutory damages, n167 any actual damages, and attorney fees. Improper disclosure of a security interest is not a material disclosure for the purpose of rescission. However, improper disclosure of a security interest in residential real estate in the notice of right to rescission (as opposed to disclosure in the disclosure statement) may give a right of rescission. n168

[f] Disclosure Requirements Tied to Actual Damage Relief Only

After TIL Simplification, statutory damages are no longer available for a variety of violations of the statute. n169 These provisions are tied only to actual damage relief under TIL. In addition, whether or not statutory damages are available, it may be possible to seek relief for state law unfair trade practices for disclosure violations under TIL.

Examples of disclosure requirements tied only to actual damage relief are as follows. n170

[i] Identity of the Creditor n171

Only the name of the creditor is required, but the creditor's address and/or telephone number may also be included. n172 At the option of the creditor, this disclosure may appear apart from the other disclosures. n173

[ii] Itemization of the Amount Financed

The creditor has a choice: it must either automatically disclose the itemization or it may inform the consumer, on the segregated disclosures, that a written itemization of the amount financed will be provided on request, furnishing the itemization only if the consumer in fact requests it. n174

At a bare minimum, the amount financed must be itemized under four categories:

1) The amount of any proceeds distributed to the consumer; n175

2) The amount credited to the consumer's account with the creditor; n176

3) Any amounts paid to other persons by the creditor on the consumer's behalf, with those persons identified; n177 and

4) The prepaid finance charge. n178

If the creditor pays off "negative equity" in a trade-in vehicle as part of an automobile financing transaction, this amount must be included in the amount financed. n179 The creditor should itemize it in a category such as amounts paid to others on behalf of the consumer. n180

[iii] Demand Feature n181

The fact that an obligation has a demand feature (that is, the debt is payable on demand), must be disclosed. n182 The FRB's Model Clauses suggest disclosing, "This obligation is payable on demand" or "This obligation has a demand feature." n183

This disclosure requirement applies to any transaction which includes a demand feature contemplated by the parties as part of the legal obligation.

[iv] Total Sale Price n184

In a credit sale, the "total sale price" must be disclosed, using that term. n185 In addition, a brief description of the total sale price (including the amount of any down payment) must also be provided. n186

The "total sale price" is defined n187 as the sum of

- The cash price; n188
- Any amounts that are financed by the creditor and are not included in the finance charge (e.g., title fees, credit insurance premiums); n189 and
- The finance charge. n190

[v] Prepayment Disclosures n191

For interest-bearing transactions, creditors must disclose whether there may be a prepayment penalty. For precomputed transactions, creditors must disclose whether the consumer may be entitled to a rebate of unearned interest.

[vi] Late Payment Charges

The credit must disclose any dollar or percentage charge (other than a deferral or extension charge) that may be imposed before maturity due to a late payment. n192

[vii] Insurance Charges

Premiums for insurance sold in connection with a credit transaction must be included in the finance charge unless certain disclosures are made. n193 The Regulation gives the creditor the option of including the insurance disclosures with the other segregated disclosures or giving them separately. n194 No disclosure of insurance premiums is necessary if the creditor has decided to include them in the finance charge, rather than in the amount financed. n195

The Commentary permits the disclosed monthly payments to include credit insurance premiums where the premiums are not part of either the amount financed or the finance charge. n196 Credit insurance premiums will not be part of either the amount financed or the finance charge when they are paid on a monthly basis throughout the loan term, rather than in a lump sum at the time of loan origination. If the premiums are added to the monthly payment amount in the payment schedule in these circumstances, the total of payments also should include the premiums as well. n197 In this situation, the finance charge plus the amount financed will not equal the total of payments. Some courts have required that PMI be disclosed on the TIL disclosure as required insurance, as well as included in the payment schedule, finance charge, and APR. n197.1

[viii] Security Interest Charges

A creditor will often impose a variety of charges allegedly to help perfect its security interest in the consumer's property. Some of these charges may be excluded from the finance charge if they are correctly itemized and disclosed. n198 If the disclosures are made properly, the premiums may be included in the amount financed. If they are included in the amount financed in error, they give rise to actual as well as statutory damages and to an extended right of rescission of rescindable transactions. Other errors give rise only to actual damages.

[ix] Information Found Elsewhere in the Contract

Creditors are now only required to include in the segregated disclosures a statement that the consumer should refer to the "appropriate contract document" for information about:

- Nonpayment;
- Default;
- The right to accelerate the maturity of the obligation;
- Prepayment penalties;
- Prepayment rebates;
- Further information about security interests (optional);
- In a residential mortgage transaction, n199 the creditor's policy regarding assumption of the obligation (optional). n200

The Regulation does not require the creditor to indicate which contract document is the "appropriate" one for the consumer to refer to. However, the Commentary does allow creditors to make reference to specific documents (e.g., "promissory note" or "retail installment sale contract") in place of the reference to "appropriate contract document." n201

[x] Mortgage Lenders' Assumption Policy

In a residential mortgage transaction, n202 one important factor which could presumably affect the consumer's decision to enter into the transaction is the creditor's assumption policy, that is, whether the creditor will allow the next purchaser of the house or mobile home to assume the payments of the original transaction without any increase in the term, interest rate, or payment amounts. Therefore, the TILA requires the creditor to provide a statement of whether or not a subsequent purchaser of the dwelling from the consumer may be permitted to assume the remaining obligation on its original terms. n203

Note that this disclosure is qualified. Disclosure that the subsequent purchaser "may" be allowed to assume the mortgage does not guarantee the right to assume the loan.

[xi] Required Deposits

Occasionally, a creditor will require a consumer to maintain a deposit account (frequently with itself) as a condition of the transaction. The only requirement for a creditor who requires a deposit as a condition of the transaction is to disclose that the annual percentage rate does not reflect the effect of the required deposit. n204

[g] Special Disclosures for Variable-Rate Loans

In many consumer loans, contractual provisions permit changes to the Annual Percentage Rate after consummation. These loans are commonly known as "variable-rate" transactions. The rate change may be tied to an "index" (e.g., the "prime rate") or may be completely discretionary with the creditor, but the fact remains that the consumer may not be fully cognizant of the financial significance attached to entering into a variable-rate transaction, even if his or her home is collateral for the loan. n205 As a result of Congress' concern about ARMs secured by consumers' homes, Congress enacted the Competitive Equality Banking Act of 1987, which requires creditors to impose "caps" on maximum interest rates in all adjustable rate mortgages secured by the consumer's home. n206 The FRB promulgated amendments regarding rate cap disclosures to the Regulation in order to implement the Act. n207

The Board then promulgated other amendments to the Regulation which require additional disclosures for ARMs secured by the borrower's principal dwelling with a maturity longer than one year. n208 For all other variable-rate transactions, including ARMs with a maturity of one year or shorter, or transactions not secured by the borrowers' primary residence, creditors may continue to make the shorter variable-rate disclosures similar to those prescribed by Regulation Z prior to 1987. n209 To simplify disclosure requirements, creditors may elect to give the new ARMs disclosures for any variable-rate transaction, regardless of whether it is subject to the ARM disclosure rules. n210 The reverse, however, is not allowed. n211

In 2007, the FRB and other banking agencies released illustrative information creditors can use to help consumers understand the "nontraditional" ARM products that have appeared in the market in recent years. n212 Use of these illustrations is optional. The Board did not release these examples specifically under its TIL authority. Non-use or a confusing use of these disclosures is not actionable under TILA. The illustrations explain nontraditional mortgage products, compare interest-only loans and payment option ARMs to fixed rate and traditional adjustable-rate loans, and provide information for inclusion on monthly statements for payment option ARMs. In August, the FRB and other banking agencies published another set of illustrations for comment. n213 This set addresses related issues present in many subprime loans and provides an explanation of some key features and risks of certain subprime products, including payment shock, and a chart that shows the potential consequences of payment shock in a concrete manner. Again, lenders may use these illustrations or not, as the final version will be nonbinding.

For any consumer credit "adjustable rate mortgage loan" n214 secured by the consumer's dwelling and entered into after December 9, 1987, in which the APR may increase after consummation, the Regulation now requires creditors to disclose the maximum interest rate that may be imposed during the term of the obligation. n215 The rate cap disclosure does not apply to dwelling-secured closed-end transactions in which the interest rate may not change during the term of the obligation.

In addition to the more broadly applicable interest-cap disclosure requirement, the Regulation requires more information to consumers about the variable-rate features of certain kinds of ARMs. These amendments apply to ARMs with terms of more than one year which are secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, irrespective of whether the loan is purchase money or a home equity loan. n216 An exemption applies to ARM transactions which are not secured by the borrower's principal dwelling or with a term of one year or less, n217 although creditors may make the expanded disclosures for any transaction subject to the variable-rate disclosure requirements of the Regulation, including ARMs with a term of one year or less. n218

One of the required early disclosures is an ARM brochure. n219 In addition to the standard brochure, creditors must also clearly disclose detailed, specific information about major aspects of each variable-rate loan program which the consumer is considering. n220 Creditors are required to identify the index to which interest rate changes are tied, n221 or provide a brief description of the formula used in calculating changes if no index is used. n222

These ARM disclosures, including the ARM brochure, must be provided to prospective borrowers when an application form is furnished or before the payment of a nonrefundable fee, whichever is earlier. n223

The ARM requirements also include rules for subsequent disclosures when adjustments to the interest rate in a principal-dwelling-secured ARM are made. n224 A disclosure concerning rate adjustments is required for all ARMs which are subject to the variable-rate disclosure requirements of section 226.19(b). n225 Despite the fact that many, if not most consumers, use the monthly payment to gauge their ability to repay loans, TILA has never mandated disclosure of the maximum payment for closed-end ARMs. In 2008, Congress corrected this situation and instructed the Federal Reserve Board to implement a disclosure of the maximum payment no later than February of 2011. n226 As set out in the statute, creditors must provide "examples" of changes in the payment. Among the examples must be an example of "the maximum payment amount of the regular required payments on the extension of credit, based on the maximum interest rate allowed under the contract." n227 This goes beyond what the Board currently requires in the payment schedule for variable rate loans. The statute applies to all covered transactions, secured by any "dwelling" of the consumer. The loan need not be secured by the consumer's "principal dwelling."

There are also important regulations for variable-rate transactions which are not subject to the ARM rules. For example, variable-rate transactions which are not secured by the borrower's principal dwelling or which are for a term of one year or less are subject to alternative disclosure requirements. n228

[h] Special Disclosures for Student Loans

Effective February 14, 2010, n228.1 lenders making private student loans are required to provide special disclosures. There are three sets of required disclosures: (1) application and solicitation; (2) loan approval; and (3) final disclosures. Each is subject to special timing rules and detailed form and content requirements. All disclosures must be made clearly and conspicuously. n228.2

If the consumer indicates that the loan will be used to pay for postsecondary education expenses, the creditor must calculate the required disclosures based on the entire amount of the loan, even if only a part is intended for these expenses. The creditor may rely solely on a check-box or a purpose line on a loan application to determine the applicant's intent. n228.3 The Board decided to include multi-purpose loans despite industry objections, expressing concern that without these provisions, creditors could avoid compliance by lending more than the amount a consumer needs for educational expenses.

There are several new substantive protections. TILA now requires a self-certification form, which overviews the cost of the education and the student's financial resources. Perhaps most significantly, private student loan borrowers now have a right of cancellation. Cobranding--the use by creditors who are not specifically endorsed by the educational institution of the name of the educational institution or symbols associated with the school, such as a school mascot--is restricted. n228.4 Borrowers must also be given at least thirty days from loan approval to accept a loan, although they may accept the loan less than thirty days after it is offered. n228.5 A creditor may withdraw an offer before consummation if the credit would be prohibited by law or if the creditor has reason to believe that the consumer has committed fraud in connection with the loan application. n228.6 The creditor may also change the interest rate based on adjustments to the index used for a loan, change the interest rate and terms if this will unequivocally benefit the consumer, or reduce the loan amount based upon a certification or other information received from the institution or consumer that the cost of attendance has decreased or the consumer's other financial aid has increased. n228.7 If the creditor changes the terms under these exceptions, no new disclosures are required and there is no requirement to provide a new thirty day period to accept. If the consumer requests a change and the creditor accommodates it, the creditor must once again provide the approval disclosures and thirty days to accept. n228.8

Practitioners handling a student loan case should be sure to familiarize themselves with National Consumer Law Center, Student Loan Law (3d ed. 2006 and Supp.).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosure

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 2. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(10). Open-end credit is defined at Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(20). See also § 1.07 infra.

(n2)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1631(b).

(n3)Footnote 4. Reg. Z § 226.17(d).

(n4)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1631(a).

(n5)Footnote 6. Reg. Z § 226.17(d).

(n6)Footnote 7. See Reg. Z § 226.23; § 1.08[1] infra ; Davison v. Bank One Home Loan Servs., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 514 (D. Kan. Jan. 13, 2003) (upholding the regulation).

(n7)Footnote 8. Finch v. Household Fin. Corp. III (In re Finch), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. D. Kan. Nov. 7, 2003) (husband who had an ownership interest in the property but did not live there and who did not obtain the credit not entitled to a copy of the TIL disclosure statement; only the wife who lived in the property entitled to the TIL disclosure).

(n8)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1632(a).

(n9)Footnote 10. Reg. Z § 226.17(a).

(n10)Footnote 11. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-1. Van Jackson v. Check 'N Go of Ill., Inc., 193 F.R.D. 544, 548, 549 (N.D. Ill. 2000) (disclosure of the security interest in the check was not clearly and conspicuously disclosed as it was provided outside of the federal box, included on the back under a paragraph titled "Method of Payment," and as understandable as Sanskrit); Cunningham v. H.A.S., Inc., 74 F. Supp. 2d 1157 (M.D. Ala. 1999) (written disclosures were covered up by the sales manager and borrower was directed where to sign without being given the opportunity to read before signing); Hemauer v. ITT Fin. Servs., 751 F. Supp. 1241 (W.D. Ky. 1990) (where creditor had for its own purposes (apparently to circumvent its refund obligations in the event of rescission) split what was in reality a single transaction into two separate loans, the disclosures violated the threshold TIL requirement that required disclosures to be clear, conspicuous, and grouped together); Affatato v. Beneficial Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12447 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 1998) (motion to dismiss on whether, among other things, the disclosures given in the course of making a tax refund anticipation loan were contradicted by other allegedly misleading information was denied); Bank of N.Y. v. Ralls (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) ; In re Cook, 76 B.R. 661 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1987) . Aubin v. Residential Funding Co., LLC, 565 F. Supp. 2d 392 (D. Conn. 2008) (rescission notice not clear and conspicuous where it listed the wrong dates for loan transaction and the expiration of the right to cancel and provided the consumer no information about how to count the three business days where the third day was a Saturday; distinguishing Palmer Champion Mortgage on the facts).

(n11)Footnote 12. Williams v. Empire Funding Corp., 109 F. Supp. 2d 352 (E.D. Pa. 2000) (where financing agreement contained two paragraphs, one which disclosed a three-day right to cancel, and another which discussed a one-day right to cancel, the TILA notice of right to cancel was not clearly and conspicuously disclosed); Apgar v. Homeside Lending, Inc. (In re Apgar), 291 B.R. 665 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) (notice of right to cancel given to co-owner wife not "clear" as it could be read at least four different ways); Jones v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3788 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2006) (a trier of fact could decide that Ameriquest's seven-day cancellation notice detracts from the clarity of the federal three-day form; summary judgment for the creditor denied); Washington v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50804 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2006) (followed the holding in Jones). But see Hamm v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21755 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2005) (Ameriquest's seven-day cancellation notice does not confuse the consumer; court relied on the consumer's admission that she does not wish to cancel during either the three-day or the seven-day period).

(n12)Footnote 13. Palmer v. Champion Mortgage, 465 F.3d 24, 28 (1st Cir. 2006) (objective standard); Andrews v. Chevy Chase, F.S.B., 240 F.R.D. 612 , motion for stay pending appeal granted, 474 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (E.D. Wis. 2007) (same).

(n13)Footnote 14. Palmer v. Champion Mortgage, 465 F.3d 24, 28 (1st Cir. 2006) (reviewing disclosures from the vantage point of a hypothetical average consumer); Smith v. Cash Store Mgmt., Inc., 195 F.3d 325, 327 /-/328 (7th Cir. 1999) (explaining that TIL disclosures should be viewed from the perspective of an ordinary consumer, not a federal judge); Andrews v. Chevy Chase, F.S.B., 240 F.R.D. 612 , motion for stay pending appeal granted, 474 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (E.D. Wis. 2007) (standard is based upon the perspective of an ordinary consumer, not that of a judge, federal reserve member, or English professor, citing Smith v. Cash Store Mgmt., Inc.); Jones v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (In re Jones), 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. June 13, 2007) (same).

(n14)Footnote 14.1. See Rand Corp. v. Moua, 559 F.3d 842 (8th Cir. 2009) ("[r]equiring borrowers to sign statements [waiver of rescission rights] which are contradictory and demonstrably false" undermines clear and conspicuous disclosure of the right of rescission); Tenney v. Deutsche Bank Trust Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12818 (D. Mass. Jan. 26, 2009) (requiring borrower to sign statement that they are not exercising at the same time they receive notice of the right to cancel undermines the clear and conspicuous disclosure of the notice of the right to cancel). Cf. Quiles v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107279 (D. Mass. Dec. 30, 2008) (borrower would not be confused by rescission notice that omitted date of transaction since could easily supply date, nor by failure to supply deadline, since could calculate deadline); Omar v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107284 (D. Mass. Dec. 20, 2008) (same).

(n15)Footnote 15. Handy v. Anchor Mortgage Corp., 464 F.3d 760 (7th Cir. 2006) ; Rivera v. Grossinger Autoplex, Inc., 274 F.3d 1118 (7th Cir. 2001) ; ., Smith v. Check-N-Go Inc., 200 F.3d 511 (7th Cir. 1999) ; Harper v. Lindsay Chevrolet Oldsmobile, L.L.C., 212 F. Supp. 2d 582 (E.D. Va. 2002) ; Apgar v. Homeside Lending, Inc. (In re Apgar), 291 B.R. 665 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) . See also Rodash v. AIB Mortgage Co., 16 F.3d 1142 (11th Cir. 1994) (court granted summary judgment, thereby implying that the question is a legal one); Herrera v. First Northern Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 805 F.2d 896 (10th Cir. 1986) ("reasonable minds" could not differ; therefore, no dispute of material fact). But see Knapp v. Americredit Fin. Serv., Inc., 245 F. Supp. 2d 841 (S.D. W. Va. 2003) (whether the APR and finance charge are disclosed more conspicuously than the amount financed and the total of payments is a question of fact); Landreneau v. Fleet Fin. Group, 197 F. Supp. 2d 551 (M.D. La. 2002) (court found issues of material fact and denied summary judgment).

(n16)Footnote 16. 68 Fed. Reg. 68786 (Dec. 10, 2003) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 69 Fed. Reg. 35541 (June 25, 2004) . See also 69 Fed. Reg. 16769 (Mar. 31, 2004) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 1632(a); Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2). See Brown v. Payday Check Advance, Inc., 202 F.3d 987 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 820, 121 S. Ct. 61, 148 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2000) (failure to disclose APR and finance charge more conspicuously in a payday loan constitutes a violation, but statutory damages are not available); Dixey v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 677 F.2d 749 (9th Cir. 1982) ; Mitchem v. GFG Loan Co., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3991 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 17, 2000) (same); Hartke v. Illinois Payday Loans, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14937 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 13, 1999) (failure to disclose annual percentage rate [hereinafter APR] and finance charge more conspicuously violates TILA); Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, Inc., 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) (payday loan); Yazzie v. Ray Vicker's Special Cars, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (D.N.M. 1998) (pawnbroker transaction). But see Smith v. Check-N-Go, Inc., 200 F.3d 511 (7th Cir. 1999) (circle around the due date to highlight it does not render the APR and finance charge less conspicuously disclosed in this payday loan case); Shabas v. Lighthouse Fin. Group, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17228 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 15, 1999) (court found that disclosing the "monthly percentage rate" in the federal disclosures did not render the APR or finance charge disclosures less conspicuous in this payday loan case; court misconstrued meaning of Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2), which requires the creditor to put the words "Annual Percentage Rate" (and the corresponding rate, that is, the actual percent) and "Finance Charge" (and the actual amount) more conspicuous than any other disclosures). For various exceptions to the "more conspicuous" requirement, see Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(2)-1; Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2) (referring to Reg. Z § 226.18(d) and (e)); Kramer v. Marine Midland Bank, 559 F. Supp. 273 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) ; Reg. Z § 226.18(a); see, e.g., Grey v. European Health Spas, Inc., 428 F. Supp. 841 (D. Conn. 1977) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-1.

(n20)Footnote 20. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1).

(n21)Footnote 21. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-1; Lifanda v. Elmhurst Dodge, Inc., 237 F.3d 803 (7th Cir. 2001) (tiny print in comparison to the rest of the document not clear and conspicuous, as a matter of law). See also Lacey v. William Chrysler Plymouth Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2479 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 23, 2004) (a copy of disclosures that are blank, i.e., no numbers filled in, also violates this rule).

(n22)Footnote 22. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1).

(n23)Footnote 23. Rivera v. Grossinger Autoplex, Inc., 274 F.3d 1118 (7th Cir. 2001) ; Smith v. Check-N-Go, Inc., 200 F.3d 511 (7th Cir. 1999) . See also Rodash v. AIB Mortgage Co., 16 F.3d 1142 (11th Cir. 1994) (court granted summary judgment, thereby implying that the question is a legal one); Herrera v. First Northern Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 805 F.2d 896 (10th Cir. 1986) ("reasonable minds" could not differ; therefore, no dispute of material fact). Rodrigues v. Members Mortgage Co., Inc. 323 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Mass. 2004) (court applied the ordinary consumer standard to determine whether the consumer could be confused by being required to sign a confirmation of non-cancellation before the end of the 3-day cancellation period; creditor did violate TILA for this reason); Stanley v. Household Fin. Corp. III (In re Stanley), 315 B.R. 602 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2004) (the two or more plausible interpretations must yield different results depending upon which is adopted; in this case, two different paragraphs regarding the effect of rescission were presented, one dealing with a new loan transaction, and the other dealing with a refinancing with the same creditor; none of the boxes in front of these paragraphs were checked; the notice of right to cancel was not "clear" as a result).

(n24)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b); In re Melvin, 75 B.R. 952 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (use of incorrect model rescission form is not protected by § 1604(b)).

(n26)Footnote 26. 74 Fed. Reg. 43,232 (Aug. 26, 2009) .

(n27)Footnote 26.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1601(a).

(n28)Footnote 27. Edmondson v. Allen-Russell Ford, Inc., 577 F.2d 291 (5th Cir. 1978) ; In re Cook, 76 B.R. 661 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1987) (TIL disclosures should be construed through the eyes of the borrower and not those of the lender or an attorney). Rodrigues v. Members Mortgage Co., Inc. 323 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Mass. 2004) (court applied the ordinary consumer standard to determine whether the consumer could be confused by being required to sign a confirmation of non-cancellation before the end of the 3-day cancellation period; creditor did violate TILA for this reason).

(n29)Footnote 28. See, e.g., In re Marshall, 121 B.R. 814 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1990) ; In re Hatfield, 117 B.R. 387 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1990) ; London v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., Clearinghouse No. 53,538 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 30, 2001) (where the credit insurance disclosure regarding the optional nature of the insurance was susceptible to two equally reasonable constructions and the consumer could believe that the decision to issue the credit card may be influenced by the fact that he agreed to enroll in the "LifePlus" credit insurance program, the disclosure is not meaningful).

(n30)Footnote 29. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1). For examples of some exceptions, see Reg. Z § 226.18(c)(1); Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1) n.38; Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-4 (The Commentary was amended, effective Apr. 1, 1986, to emphasize that including the security interest charges in the amount financed itemization satisfies the itemization requirements of Reg. Z §§ 226.4(e) and 226.18(o). In that situation, those charges need not be listed elsewhere.); Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1) n.37; Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-4.

(n31)Footnote 29.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(a)(1)-1 (no disclosure may obscure another disclosure). See, e.g., Busse v. Homebank L.L.C., 2009 WL 424278, at *5 (D.N.J. Feb. 18, 2008) (disclosing the note interest rate of 1% on the TIL disclosure statement renders disclosure of APR "approximately 6%" not clear and conspicuous); Andrews v. Chevy Chase, 240 F.R.D. 612 (E.D. Wis. 2007) , rev'd on other grounds, 545 F.3d 570 (7th Cir. 2008) (disclosing rate as 2% fixed on the TIL disclosure form undermines the clear and conspicuous disclosure of the APR).

(n32)Footnote 29.2. See, e.g., Laudani v. Tribeca Lending Corp. (In re Laudani), 401 B.R. 9 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2009) (borrower alleged receipt of and confusion occasioned by multiple settlement statements); NovaStar Mortgage, Inc. v. Akins, 2008 Ohio App. LEXIS 5096 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 21, 2008) (reconciling two conflicting settlement statements).

(n33)Footnote 29.3. See, e.g., Lynch v. RKS Mortgage, Inc., 588 F. Supp. 2d 1254 (E.D. Cal. 2008) ; Pulphus v. Sullivan, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7080 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 28, 2003) ("Because plaintiff has alleged that she received two contradictory disclosure statements simultaneously, not successively, Citizens can take no refuge in the regulation governing the correction of early disclosures."); Reid v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (In re Reid), 2009 WL 1351678 (Bankr. E.D. Va. May 14, 2009). But see Laudani v. Tribeca Lending Corp. (In re Laudani), 401 B.R. 9 26 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2009) (finding that even if one settlement statement was a final statement the provision of multiple statements at the same time may render the disclosures not clear and conspicuous).

(n34)Footnote 30. Pub. L. No. 106-229, 114 Stat. 464 (June 30, 2000) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 7001).

(n35)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 7003(c).

(n36)Footnote 32. Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act, Conference Report, 106th Cong., 2d Sess., 146 Cong. Rec. S. 5284 (June 16, 2000).

(n37)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c).

(n38)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(B).

(n39)Footnote 35. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(C)(i).

(n40)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(C)(ii).

(n41)Footnote 37. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(C)(ii).

(n42)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(2)(A).

(n43)Footnote 39. See Statement of Sens. Hollings, Wyden, and Sarbanes, 106th Cong., 2d Sess., 146 Cong. Rec. S. 5230 (June 15, 2000) ("[I]f a statute requires that a disclosure ... include specific language set forth clearly and conspicuously[, t]hat requirement could be met by an electronic disclosure ... which ... included the specified language, set forth clearly and conspicuously."). Accord Statement of Rep. Dingell, 106th Cong., 2d Sess., 146 Cong. Rec. H. 4358 (June 14, 2000).

(n44)Footnote 40. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(b)(1).

(n45)Footnote 41. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) .

(n46)Footnote 42. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) .

(n47)Footnote 43. 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439, 41,440 (Aug. 8, 2001) .

(n48)Footnote 44. Reg. Z § 226.36. See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.2.9 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n49)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(1). See, e.g., Fiorenza v. Fremont Inv. & Loan, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47831 (S.D.N.Y. June 20, 2008) (mere allegation that consumer did not receive disclosures until after consummation insufficient to prove a violation of the timing rule; suggesting that late disclosure may trigger damages but not rescission).

(n50)Footnote 46. Reg. Z § 226.17(b).

(n51)Footnote 47. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(13). See, e.g., Hershey v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2005 WL 1420813 (D. Minn. June 16, 2005) (date of loan closing equals consummation); Betancourt v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 344 F. Supp. 2d 1253 (D. Colo. 2004) (consummation occurred when the consumer signed the loan note). McWhorter v. Elsea, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26914 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 11, 2007) (consumer obligated when he signed a buyer's order to purchase a mobile home and was unconditionally obligated to later sign a retail installment contract; failure to give TIL disclosures at that time violated the timing rule). Some courts hold that statutory damages are not available for the failure to timely provide the TIL disclosures. See, e.g., Cabrera v. Lake Manawa Nissan, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25945 (S.D. Iowa Nov. 18, 2002) .

(n52)Footnote 48. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(13)-1. See, e.g., Caudill v. EZPawn Indiana, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 54,565, Case No. IP00-1850-C-Y/F (S.D. Ind. Sept. 2001) (consummation under Indiana law occurs when the contract is signed; timing requirement violated when the consumer signed the pawn ticket, exchanged the jewelry for the loan proceeds, and then received the TILA disclosures).

(n53)Footnote 49. 67 Fed. Reg. 16,980 (Apr. 9, 2002) .

(n54)Footnote 50. See Pulphus v. Sullivan, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7080 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 25, 2003) (motion to dismiss alleged TIL violation denied when the creditor mailed copies of the loan papers, including the TIL disclosure, to the consumer after the closing). See also Bragg v. Bill Heard Chevrolet, Inc., 374 F.3d 1060 (11th Cir. 2004) (in yo-yo sale where consumer ended up signing three different purchase contracts, a bailment agreement, and four different retail installment sales contracts, the court held that consummation occurred when the consumer signed the contract even though the financing agreement contained a condition precedent because the condition of obtaining financing was within the exclusive control of the seller and third-party lender.) See Liabo v. Wayzata Nissan, L.L.C., 707 N.W.2d 715 (Minn. Ct. App. 2006) (when the court construed the delivery sheet to constitute only a contract to purchase and not a credit agreement, no consummation for TIL purposes upon the signing of that document). See also Horton v. First State Bank of Eldorado, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7647 (S.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2006) (unsigned loan document does not trigger TIL application because consummation did not occur); Guinn v. Hoskins Chevrolet, 836 N.E.2d 681 (Ill. App. 2005) (consummation occurs when the consumer becomes contractually obligated on the credit contract and interest can accrue from that date); Cartier v. Brown Credit Lot, 2005 WL 3867414 (Ohio Mun. Ct. Apr. 4, 2005) (date of signing and date on which the creditor represented that this was a done deal equal consummation).

(n55)Footnote 51. Reg. Z § 226.17(g).

(n56)Footnote 52. Reg. Z § 226.17(h).

(n57)Footnote 53. A transaction in which a mortgage or other consensual security interest is created or retained in the consumer's principal dwelling (which includes a house, condominium, cooperative unit, mobile home or trailer if it is used as the consumer's residence) to finance its acquisition or initial construction or to finance the construction of a primary dwelling on land already owned by the consumer. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(24); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(24), as amended by 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669 (Apr. 6, 1998) ; see also Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(19). But to be under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act [hereinafter RESPA], a mobile home transaction must be considered as involving a lien on real property, 12 U.S.C. § 2602(1); Peoples Nat'l Bank v. Molz, 239 Kan. 255, 718 P.2d 306 (1986) . (This question may vary based on state law. See National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures, § 11.2 (2d ed. 2007 and Supp.). The requirement of real property does not apply to rescission rights under TILA. See § 1.08[1] infra.

(n58)Footnote 54. 12 U.S.C. §§ 2601; see also Regulation X, 24 C.F.R. §§ 3500 et seq.

(n59)Footnote 55. Though RESPA coverage was considerably broadened in 1992 to cover more than first-lien purchase-money mortgages, these special timing requirements still apply only to acquisition or initial construction situations, as TIL's definition of a residential mortgage transaction includes that limitation. The transaction must meet both tests. Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(a)-1.

(n60)Footnote 56. See Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(2) and § 1.05[2][c] infra , for a discussion of estimated disclosure rules; see also Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(a)(1)-2.

(n61)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2); Reg. Z § 226.19(a)(1). This three-day period coincides with the time period within which creditors subject to RESPA must provide good faith estimates of settlement costs. 12 U.S.C. § 2603; Reg. Z § 3500.7. See Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(a)(1)-2.

(n62)Footnote 58. Reg. Z § 226.19(a)(1); see Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(a)(1)-3 for a discussion of when under RESPA a written application has been "received."

(n63)Footnote 59. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(c)-4; 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193, 10,197 (Mar. 6, 1997) ; see § 1.05[2][f][ii] infra.

(n64)Footnote 60. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,606-44,607 (July 30, 2008) .

(n65)Footnote 61. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(6), 122 Stat.

2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(E)); Reg. Z § 226.19(a)(1)(iii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,600 (July 30, 2008) . The credit report fee is discussed in more detail at § 4.3.4A.3, infra.

(n66)Footnote 62. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(4), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(A)).

(n67)Footnote 63. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(c)(1), 122 Stat. 2654, 2857 (2008).

(n68)Footnote 64. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,594 (July 30, 2008) .

(n69)Footnote 65. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(6), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(F)).

(n70)Footnote 66. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(6), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(F)(i)).

(n71)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(d).

(n72)Footnote 68. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(6), 122 Stat. 2654, 2857 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(F)(iii)).

(n73)Footnote 69. Reg. Z § 226.19(b). See § 1.05[2][g] infra.

(n74)Footnote 70. Reg. Z § 226.19(b).

(n75)Footnote 71. Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(1).

(n76)Footnote 72. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1)-1. See Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Serv., 204 F.3d 748 (7th Cir. 2000) (TIL violated if an "alternative" payment schedule given to the consumer was mandatory and conflicted with the payment schedule listed in the TIL disclosures); Demando v. Morris, 206 F.3d 1300 (9th Cir. 2000) ; Hubbard v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, 91 F.3d 75 , amended by 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 25750 (9th Cir. Oct. 2, 1996) (creditor liable for variable rate change notice if it did not accurately reflect the legal obligation between the parties); Ralls v. Bank of N.Y. (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (court found that contradictions between the TIL disclosure and the loan note and mortgage regarding the total of payments and the payment schedule violated the mandate that the disclosures reflect the legal obligation; irrelevant that homeowner did not read all of the documents since they were confusing in any case); Affatato v. Beneficial Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12447 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 1998) (tax refund anticipation lender's motion to dismiss denied based, in part, on consumer's claim that the loan application and loan documents did not constitute an integrated agreement and court could look to other allegedly misleading information communicated to the consumer). Compare Szumny v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18665 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 1999) (allegations that purported security interest may be overbroad under FTC rule or state law does not by itself create a TIL disclosure violation); Acevedo v. Bally Total Fitness Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18029 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 9, 1999) . Cf. Carmichael v. The Payment Ctr., Inc., 336 F.3d 636 (7th Cir. 2003) (APR accurately reflected the legal obligation stated in the note; no violation even though the APR did not accurately reflect the relation between the disclosed finance charge and amount financed due to a huge overstatement of the finance charge). But where the legal obligation contains a typographical error, which is then construed against its drafter (the creditor), disclosure of the correct terms in the TILA statement is no violation. Veale v. Citibank, F.S.B., 85 F.3d 577 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n77)Footnote 73. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1)-1.

(n78)Footnote 74. Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(2); Graves v. Tru-Link Fence Co., 905 F. Supp. 515 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (in home improvement loan, where payments begin 30 days after completion of work, creditor must disclose an estimated date, not the 30-day formula); Danziger v. San Jacinto Sav. Ass'n, 732 S.W.2d 300 (Tex. 1987) (where creditor knew finance charge and other disclosures were estimates, it was a TILA violation not to disclose that fact). Cf. Jensen v. Ray Kim Ford, Inc., 920 F.2d 3 (7th Cir. 1990) (failure to denote estimated trade-in value on auto loan as such might violate TILA, but borrowers waived the argument). But see Comer v. Person Auto Sales, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 2d 478 (M.D.N.C. 2005) (failure to mark a disclosure as an estimate where the car dealer knew the sales tax was understated is not a violation; amount financed would not have changed since the extra sales tax would not have been financed).

(n79)Footnote 75. Cf. EMC Mortgage Corp. v. Davis, 167 S.W.3d 406 (Tex. App. 2005) .

(n80)Footnote 76. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(2)-2.

(n81)Footnote 77. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(2)-2.

(n82)Footnote 78. 15 U.S.C. § 1631(c); Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(2)(ii). Apparently creditors can "stack" this tolerance with the $100 tolerance if the finance charge is understated due to other errors in other components of the finance charge. See 61 Fed. Reg. 49,237, 49,242 (Sept. 19, 1996) . Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(2)(ii)-1; 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193, 10,197 (Mar. 6, 1997) (see specific example).

(n83)Footnote 79. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(3).

(n84)Footnote 80. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(4).

(n85)Footnote 81. Reg. Z § 226.17(f), Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(f)-1 and (f)-2.

(n86)Footnote 82. See Reg. Z § 226.22(a) for definitions of "regular" and "irregular" transactions.

(n87)Footnote 83. Reg. Z § 226.17(f).

(n88)Footnote 84. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(f)-1. (Presumably if a change in the finance charge is within its $10 tolerance, no redisclosure for it is required.) See Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(2) for a discussion of the permissible use of estimates.

(n89)Footnote 85. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(f)-2.

(n90)Footnote 86. 280 F.3d 384 (3d Cir. 2002) . Cf. Roberts v. Fleet Bank (R.I.), 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19117 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 20, 2001) (consumer offered a "fixed rate," and contract contained a change of terms provision; change in the rate did not occur for over a year after the account was opened; case decided before the appellate decision in Rossman).

(n91)Footnote 87. 15 U.S.C. § 1638; Reg. Z § 226.18.

(n92)Footnote 88. 15 U.S.C. § 1638.

(n93)Footnote 89. Reg. Z § 226.18.

(n94)Footnote 90. See generally Official Staff Commentary § 226.18-1.

(n95)Footnote 91. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18-1.

(n96)Footnote 92. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(1), (3). See § 1.10[2] infra.

(n97)Footnote 93. See § 1.10[3] infra.

(n98)Footnote 94. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.18(b).

(n99)Footnote 95. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.18(b).

(n100)Footnote 96. Reg. Z § 226.18(b).

(n101)Footnote 97. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n102)Footnote 98. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u); Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48.

(n103)Footnote 99. Reg. Z § 226.18(b).

(n104)Footnote 100. The down payment is defined as an amount, including the value of any property used as a trade-in, paid to a seller to reduce the cash price of goods or services purchased in a credit sale transaction. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(18). As a general rule, the amount of the down payment must be disclosed as part of the disclosure of the total sale price, but not part of the amount financed. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(7); Reg. Z § 226.18(j). For discussion of the complex rules regarding disclosure of downpayments, trade-ins, and pickup payments, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.6.2.2 (6th ed. 2007).

(n105)Footnote 101. The Commentary provides guidance regarding the disclosure of "negative equity" which occurs in credit sales when down payments involve a trade-in and an existing lien that exceeds the value of the trade-in. See Supplementary Information to Commentary changes in 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669, 16,673 (Apr. 6, 1998) .

(n106)Footnote 102. The prepaid finance charge, while used sometimes to calculate the amount financed, is not ever a component of a properly disclosed amount financed. Rather, where the principal amount of the credit obligation includes charges classified by TIL as finance charges, they must be subtracted from the principal in calculating the amount financed.

(n107)Footnote 103. See § 1.04[1], [2] supra.

(n108)Footnote 104. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(b)(2)-1.

(n109)Footnote 105. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(3); Reg. Z § 226.18(d); Hyde v. Hutto Enters., Inc., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16655 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 29, 1994) (violation where agreement expressed finance charge in numerical form as "pawn shop charge"); see generally § 1.04 supra for a discussion of what must be included in the finance charge.

(n110)Footnote 106. Reg. Z § 226.18(d).

(n111)Footnote 107. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(d)-1.

(n112)Footnote 108. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(d)-1. See also 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(3); Blon v. Bank One, Akron N.H., 519 N.E.2d 363 (Ohio 1988) (no requirement to itemize finders' fee). Johnson v. Banc One Acceptance Corp., 278 F. Supp. 2d 450 (E.D. Pa. 2003) . See also Stump v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4304 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2005) (no requirement to itemize the finance charge).

(n113)Footnote 109. 15 U.S.C. § 1632(a); Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2).

(n114)Footnote 110. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2); see Reg. Z § 226.18(a) concerning disclosure of the creditor's identity.

(n115)Footnote 111. See § 1.10[3] infra.

(n116)Footnote 112. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3); see § 1.10[3] infra for a discussion of statutory damages.

(n117)Footnote 113. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a), paragraph following § 1640(a)(4). However, overdisclosures of the finance charge in real-estate-secured loans do not trigger liability. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(1)(B); see also Vandenbroeck v.

Commonpoint Mortgage Co., 22 F. Supp. 2d 677 (W.D. Mich. 1998) (adding a document preparation fee unnecessarily to the finance charge resulting in an overstatement did not violate TILA). See § 1.10[2] infra for a discussion of actual damages.

(n118)Footnote 114. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u); Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48.

(n119)Footnote 115. Reg. Z § 226.18(d)(2). NOTE: Between September 1995 and 1996, there was a technical error on the books from the 1995 amendments which appeared to provide a retroactive tolerance of $200 to non-mortgage credit. Congress corrected that technical error in September 1996, retroactive to Sept. 30, 1995.

(n120)Footnote 116. See, e.g., Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) ; Keenan v. Huntington Acceptance Co., 91 Ohio App. 3d 795, 633 N.E.2d 1164 (1993) . Except for the transactions which continue to be subject to the $10 standard tolerance, these cases have been effectively overruled by the changes in the statute.

(n121)Footnote 117. Pub. L. No. 104-29 (Sept. 30, 1995). It is also found beginning at 140 Cong. Rec. H9513 (Sept. 27, 1995). These various issues are summarized below. For a more extensive discussion, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.6.3.2 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.).

(n122)Footnote 118. 15 U.S.C. § 1635.

(n123)Footnote 119. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2); Reg. Z § 226.23(h)(2)(i). Bynum v. Equitable Mortg. Group, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6363 (D.D.C. Apr. 7, 2005) .

(n124)Footnote 120. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2); Reg. Z § 226.23(h)(2)(i).

(n125)Footnote 121. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2); Reg. Z § 226.23(h)(2)(i).

(n126)Footnote 122. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.23(g)(1)(i).

(n127)Footnote 123. Reg. Z § 226.23(g)(1)(ii). See also VanDenBroeck v. Commonpoint Mortgage Co., 22 F. Supp. 2d 677 (W.D. Mich. 1998) (adding a document preparation fee unnecessarily to the finance charge resulting in an overstatement did not violate TILA). See also Strang v. Wells Fargo, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14135 (E.D. Pa. July 13, 2005) (overdisclosure of the finance charge is not actionable). But cf. JP Morgan Chase Bank v. Tecl, 808 N.Y.S.2d 432 (N.Y. App. Div. 2005) (court erroneously concluded that the correct finance charge that is higher than the disclosed finance charge is not actionable; court applied the "overstated" rule to the correct finance charge, not to the disclosed one--which was understated).

(n128)Footnote 124. See Marquez v. New Century, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5725 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 5, 2004) ; Scott v. IndyMac Bank, F.S.B., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1309 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 2004) ; Quinn v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1053 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 26, 2004) ; Walker v. Gateway Fin. Corp., 286 F. Supp. 2d 965 (N.D. Ill. 2003) ; Guise v. BWM Mortgage, L.L.C., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14914 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 26, 2003) . See also Johnson v. Know Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9916 (E.D. Pa. May 26, 2004) (same but applying this holding to the calculation of points and fees for HOEPA purposes).

(n129)Footnote 125. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f). September 30, 1995 was the effective date of the amendments.

(n130)Footnote 126. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(1)(A); Reg. Z § 226.18(d)(1)(i).

(n131)Footnote 127. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(1)(B); Reg. Z § 226.18(d)(1)(ii).

(n132)Footnote 128. The term residential mortgage transaction is defined at 15 U.S.C. § 1602(w). It generally includes purchase money security interests on the consumer's dwelling to finance acquisition or construction.

(n133)Footnote 129. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.23(g)(2).

(n134)Footnote 130. Reg. Z § 226.23(g)(2)(ii).

(n135)Footnote 131. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.23(g)(2). See 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa) and Ch. 2 infra .

(n136)Footnote 132. Inge v. Rock Fin. Corp., 281 F.3d 613 (6th Cir. 2002) (construing § 1605(f), but relevant language of § 1635(i)(2) is identical).

(n137)Footnote 133. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(3).

(n138)Footnote 134. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a) (1996). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.6.3.2.5 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n139)Footnote 135. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(4); Reg. Z § 226.18(e). See, e.g., Addison v. Britt, 350 S.E.2d 158 (N.C. Ct. App. 1986) (failure to disclose APR is "one of the most material violations a creditor can commit").

(n140)Footnote 136. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(e)-1. APRs can be checked through an online program offered by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. See www.occ.ustreas.gov/aprwin.htm. The companion CD-ROM to National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.), includes two programs for calculating APRs using the actuarial method. Both prepare amortization tables. While the online program has the disadvantage of not preparing an amortization table, which would enable the calculation to be checked, it is a helpful way to double-check APRs calculated by other methods, and may be given more credibility by a judge since it is government-sponsored.

(n141)Footnote 137. 15 U.S.C. § 1632(a); Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2); Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing of Cookeville, TN, 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) (finance charge not disclosed more conspicuously in a payday loan transaction); Yazzie v. Ray Vicker's Special Cars, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (D.N.M. 1998) (same regarding a pawn ticket); Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4053 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 1, 1996) ("annual percentage rate" and "finance charge" equally prominent as "amount financed" and "total of payments"); In re Cervantes, 67 B.R. 816 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) ("annual percentage rate" not more conspicuous than "total of payments").

(n142)Footnote 138. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(2); see Reg. Z § 226.18(a) concerning disclosure of the creditor's identity.

(n143)Footnote 139. In re Cervantes, 67 B.R. 816 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) . See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.6.5.3 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.). Court decisions to the contrary are discussed in this section.

(n144)Footnote 139.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1)-11.

(n145)Footnote 139.2. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1)-8.

(n146)Footnote 139.3. Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1)-8.

(n147)Footnote 140. See, e.g., Northwest Sav. Ass'n v. Distler, 354 Pa. Super. 187, 511 A.2d 824 (1986) (an erroneous disclosure that a $5,000 loan at 7% APR required only 120 monthly payments of $52 each, for a total of payments of $6,420, was a TIL violation); Conroy v. Village Bank & Trust Co., [1980-1989 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 96,907 (D. Conn. 1982) (disclosed 37 payments when only 36 required).

(n148)Footnote 141. Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, Inc., 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) . A similar requirement of the amount of the regular monthly payment is included in the advance disclosures required for high rate mortgage loans. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(2). Obviously, these disclosures should be consistent.

(n149)Footnote 142. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(6); Reg. Z § 226.18(g). See Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, Inc., 35 F.

Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) . See Jones v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3788 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2006) ; Washington v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50804 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2006) (creditor did not comply with TILA because it listed only the first and last payment due date and the total number of payments but did not include the payment frequency; irrelevant that the consumer testified she assumed the payments were due monthly); Kitchen v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 55,628 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 25, 2005) (No. 1:04-CV-2750-BBM) (TILA violation where the creditor listed only the first date the payments started but failed to list the interval, i.e., "monthly"). But see Hamm v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21755 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2005) (creditor need not state the interval, i.e., "monthly," when this was clear on other documents and the consumer believed her payment was due monthly).

(n150)Footnote 143. See, e.g., Turner v. E-Z Check Cashing, 35 F. Supp. 2d 1042 (M.D. Tenn. 1999) . Cf . Douglas v. Foundation Funding Group, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13918 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 24, 2005) (overdisclosure of the final payment is actionable where it is not the result of an overstated finance charge.

(n151)Footnote 144. FRB Letter No. 469 [1969-1974 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 30,669 (Apr. 19, 1971).

(n152)Footnote 145. 12 U.S.C. §§ 4901 et seq. Certain high-rate mortgages and mortgages purchased on the secondary market by Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are exempt from the Act. 12 U.S.C. § 4902(f). Some special rules apply to these loans.

(n153)Footnote 146. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(g)-5. In calculating the payment schedule, creditors may rely on assumptions used for variable-rate transactions and discounted and premium variable-rate transactions. Id.

(n154)Footnote 147. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(g)-5; 68 Fed. Reg. 16,185 (Apr. 3, 2003) .

(n155)Footnote 148. See Supplementary Information accompanying the 1999 and 2003 Commentary changes, 68 Fed. Reg. 16,185, 16,188 (Apr. 3, 2003) ; 64 Fed. Reg. 16,614, 16,615 (Apr. 6, 1999) . PMI is a finance charge since creditors require its purchase in transactions in which the borrower cannot make a 20% down payment on the purchase of a house. See Official Staff Commentary § 226.4(a)(1)-1.

(n156)Footnote 149. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(5); Reg. Z § 226.18(h).

(n157)Footnote 150. Reg. Z § 226.18(h). But see Mize v. Joe's Auto Sales, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1648 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 26, 2005) (court held that the description of the total of payments was not confusing even though it read--"the amount you will have to pay after you have made all payments as originally scheduled"; court held that the numbers disclosed [39 payments totaling $3919.10] on a loan of $3294.70 clearly tell the consumer the accurate information; court relied on Carmichael v. The Payment Center, 336 F.3d 636 (7th Cir. 2003) which the Federal Reserve Board repudiated in 2004).

(n158)Footnote 151. Reg. Z § 226.18(h) n.44.

(n159)Footnote 152. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(h)-3.

(n160)Footnote 153. Reg. Z § 226.17(c)(5).

(n161)Footnote 154. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(9); Reg. Z § 226.18(m). See Leon v. Washington Mut. Bank, 164 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (undisclosed security interest in goods "now or hereafter attached" to the real property purchased was TIL violation); Mitchem v. American Loan Co., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5785 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 13, 2000) (failure to disclose security interest in post-dated check is violation); Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) , aff'd, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12512 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 1999) (under-disclosure of the security interest as it was described in the mortgage note violates TIL). See Vaden v. IndyMac Bank, F.S.B., 2003 U.S.

Dist. LEXIS 16907 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003) (merely putting the number "2" under the heading "security" on the TILA disclosure is not a proper disclosure of the security interest taken in the consumer's home).

(n162)Footnote 155. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25). See Hahn v. McKenzie Check Advance of Ill., LLC, 202 F.3d 998 (7th Cir. 2000) (relying upon Smith to hold that post-dated check is security for the loan, even though the consumer agreed in the loan note to pay a $25 fee if the check is dishonored and attorney fees necessary to collect); Smith v. Cash Store Mgmt., Inc., 195 F.3d 325 (7th Cir. 1999) (payday lender can obtain a security interest in a post-dated check because the check secures payment beyond the mere promise to repay and can be collateral for the loan; disclosing the post-dated check as security did not, therefore, violate TILA); Davis v. Cash for Payday, Inc., 193 F.R.D. 518, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6484 (N.D. Ill. 2000) . But see Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Serv., Ltd., 204 F.3d 748, 754 (7th Cir. 2000) (creditor's requirement that consumer pay $250 to be held in an account in order to get $500 loan did not create a security interest in the $250; court stated that "the real effect of the cash collateral required by Chartwell was not to make the loans more secure, but to reduce the amounts of the loans").

(n163)Footnote 156. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25).

(n164)Footnote 157. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-1, -2; see Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1).

(n165)Footnote 158. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-2. Other relevant state or federal law, however, may prohibit taking or enforcing certain types of security interests. See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions, Chapter 3 (6th ed. 2005).

(n166)Footnote 159. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25); Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(m)-4. Cf. Doubet v. USA Fin. Servs., Inc., 714 F. Supp. 980 (C.D. Ill. 1987) (where security agreement took security interest in "consumer goods now owned or hereafter acquired ... ," the language was not an after-acquired property clause, therefore, the creditor's failure to disclose it in the disclosure statement constituted a violation of § 226.18(m)).

(n167)Footnote 160. See, e.g., U.C.C. §§ 9-108, 9-204. [Note that the 1999 revisions to Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code [hereinafter U.C.C.], effective July 1, 2001, omit § 9-108 as no longer necessary and rephrase § 9-204 without renumbering it or changing its substance.]

(n168)Footnote 161. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25). Note, however, that if a creditor has an interest that arises by operation of law (such as a vendor's lien), but also takes an independent security interest in the same property (such as a U.C.C. security interest), the latter interest must generally be disclosed. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-4.

(n169)Footnote 162. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-5. See, e.g., Malone v. Safety Guard Mfg. Co., 748 F.2d 312 (5th Cir. 1984) (construction lien); Cox v. First Nat'l Bank of Cincinnati, 633 F. Supp. 236 (S.D. Ohio 1986) .

(n170)Footnote 163. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25). See also Reg. Z §§ 226.15, 226.23; see § 1.08 infra.

(n171)Footnote 164. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1).

(n172)Footnote 165. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-1, -2.

(n173)Footnote 166. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-2. See, e.g., Goldberg v. Delaware Olds, Inc., 670 F. Supp. 125 (D. Del. 1987) (bank's right of setoff may be included in "federal box" even though not a security interest).

(n174)Footnote 167. See paragraph following 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(4). See also Van Jackson v. Check'n Go of Ill., Inc., 193 F.R.D. 544 (N.D. Ill. 2000) .

(n175)Footnote 168. See § 1.08 infra.

(n176)Footnote 169. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n177)Footnote 170. Note that this is not an exhaustive list.

(n178)Footnote 171. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.18(a). For a discussion of the definition of creditor, see § 1.03[1][b] supra.

(n179)Footnote 172. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(a)-1.

(n180)Footnote 173. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(a)-1.

(n181)Footnote 174. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.18(c); Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(c)-1. Cf. Shelton v. Mutual Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 738 F. Supp. 1050 (E.D. Mich. 1990) (not a violation of TIL to automatically give consumer itemization of amount financed). Johnson v. Banc One Acceptance Corp., 278 F. Supp. 2d 450 (E.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n182)Footnote 175. Reg. Z § 226.18(c)(i).

(n183)Footnote 176. Reg. Z § 226.18(c)(ii).

(n184)Footnote 177. Reg. Z § 226.18(c)(iii).

(n185)Footnote 178. Reg. Z § 226.18(c)(iv).

(n186)Footnote 179. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(18)-3. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.7.3.4.1 (6th ed. 2007); Parra v. Borgman Ford Sales, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16666 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 5, 2001) . Note, however, that if the consumer trades in a vehicle with negative equity and makes a cash down payment, the creditor has the option of netting out the two amounts and disclosing only the net amount of negative equity as part of the amount financed. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.7.3.1 (6th ed. 2007).

(n187)Footnote 180. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(18)-3; Parra v. Borgman Ford Sales, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16666 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 5, 2001) .

(n188)Footnote 181. Reg. Z § 226.18(i).

(n189)Footnote 182. Reg. Z § 226.18(i). Regulation Z treats demand clauses completely differently from balloon payments, even though they can function in exactly the same way. From the borrower's standpoint, when a demand clause is exercised, it triggers a large payment that is the equivalent of a balloon payment.

(n190)Footnote 183. Reg. Z app. H-5, Demand Feature Model Clauses.

(n191)Footnote 184. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(7); Reg. Z § 226.18(j).

(n192)Footnote 185. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(7); Reg. Z § 226.18(j). See, e.g., Goldsby v. H & I Fitness, LTD., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26680 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 18, 2003) (violation when the "total sales price" was left blank).

(n193)Footnote 186. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(8); Reg. Z § 226.18(j).

(n194)Footnote 187. Reg. Z § 4.7.5 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.). For a discussion of how the total sales price can be different for the same transaction where a customer pays a down payment on a car and trades in a car with negative equity, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.6.2 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n195)Footnote 188. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(9).

(n196)Footnote 189. See Reg. Z § 226.18(b)(2).

(n197)Footnote 190. Reg. Z § 226.18(d).

(n198)Footnote 191. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(11); Reg. Z § 226.18(k). Note that for high rate loans made after October 1, 1995, prepayment penalties are prohibited in most instances. See also McAnaney v. Astoria Fin. Corp., 357 F. Supp. 2d 578 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (document preparation, fax, and recording fees charged as part of the payoff of a mortgage loan may constitute a prepayment penalty if they are a condition of payment in full, which triggers disclosure).

(n199)Footnote 192. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(10); Reg. Z § 226.18(1).

(n200)Footnote 193. See Reg. Z § 226.4(d); see § 1.04[4][c] supra. See also Clark v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11264 (E.D. Pa. June 18, 2004) (creditor disclosed the cost of the property insurance premium on the HUD-1 settlement statement and put the statement regarding the selection of the insurer on the TIL form; court held no violation), subsequent proceedings, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20657 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 13, 2004), 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23060 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 16, 2004) .

(n201)Footnote 194. Reg. Z § 226.17(a)(1) n.38.

(n202)Footnote 195. See Robinson v. Central Loan & Fin. Corp., 609 F.2d 170 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n203)Footnote 196. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(g)-1.

(n204)Footnote 197. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(h)-2). See, e.g., Nave v. Community America Credit Union (In re Nave), 303 B.R. 223 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2003) (where credit insurance premiums were charged on a monthly basis and not financed, the creditor may add these premiums to the total of payments) (Note: in this case, it is not clear whether the insurance premiums were reflected in the payment schedule or appeared only in the total of payments; the Commentary rule applies to the payment schedule; if the premiums were not reflected in the payment schedule and only appeared in the total of payments, TILA is violated).

(n205)Footnote 197.1. See, e.g., Altamirano v. Copiague Funding Corp., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62762 (D. Conn. Aug. 18, 2008) (where final TIL disclosure included PMI in the payment schedule but did not list it as a required form of insurance, while other loan documents did, the TIL disclosure was capable of conflicting interpretations and not clear and conspicuous); Madel v. GMAC Mortg. Corp. (In re Madel), 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 2367 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. Nov. 8, 2004) (where the final TIL disclosure showed that the monthly payment was $300 higher than originally disclosed in the preliminary TIL disclosure statement, yet PMI was not specifically listed as required insurance on the final disclosure and was only enumerated in the first payment letter, such a disclosure was not clear and conspicuous).

(n206)Footnote 198. Reg. Z § 226.4(e). Specifically, taxes and fees prescribed by law and actually paid to public officials, and "nonfiling insurance" premiums that do not exceed fees that otherwise would be payable.

(n207)Footnote 199. See Ch. 6 infra.

(n208)Footnote 200. Reg. Z § 226.18(p).

(n209)Footnote 201. Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(p)-1.

(n210)Footnote 202. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(24).

(n211)Footnote 203. Reg. Z § 226.18(q); see Reg. Z § 226.20(b) for disclosure requirements when the obligation is actually assumed.

(n212)Footnote 204. Reg. Z § 226.18(r).

(n213)Footnote 205. Some lenders use the LIBOR as the index. These rates can be verified by trying this Internet website: www.hsh.com/indices/libor.html.

(n214)Footnote 206. 12 U.S.C. § 3806, § 1204 of Pub. L. No. 100-86, 101 Stat. 662 (effective Dec. 9, 1987). The Act also applies to open-end credit. Congress later enacted the Home Equity Loan Consumer Protection Act, Pub. L. No. 100-709 (Nov. 23, 1988), which imposed new disclosure and substantive requirements for open-end lines of credit secured by the consumer's home. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.10 (6th ed. 2007).

(n215)Footnote 207. Reg. Z § 226.30.

(n216)Footnote 208. Reg. Z §§ 226.18(f)(2), 226.19(b).

(n217)Footnote 209. Reg. Z § 226.18(f)(1).

(n218)Footnote 210. Reg. Z § 226.18(f) n.43.

(n219)Footnote 211. 52 Fed. Reg. 48,665 (Dec. 24, 1987) .

(n220)Footnote 212. FRB Press Release, Agencies Issue Final Illustrations of Consumer Information for Nontraditional Mortgage Products (May 31, 2007), available at www.federalreserve.gov/boarddocs/press/bcreg/2007/20070531/default.htm. The illustrations also appeared in 72 Fed. Reg. 31,825 (June 8, 2007) . The proposed version of these illustrations can be found at 71 Fed. Reg. 58,673 (Oct. 4, 2006) .

(n221)Footnote 213. 72 Fed. Reg. 45,495 (Aug. 14, 2007) .

(n222)Footnote 214. An "adjustable rate mortgage loan" is defined as "any consumer loan secured by a lien on a one- to-four family dwelling unit, including a condominium unit, cooperative housing unit, or mobile home, where the loan is made pursuant to an agreement under which the creditor may, from time to time, adjust the rate of interest." 12 U.S.C. § 3806(d)(2), as amended Oct. 28, 1992.

(n223)Footnote 215. Reg. Z § 226.30(a). See 52 Fed. Reg. 43,178 (Nov. 9, 1987), corrected at 52 Fed. Reg. 45,611 (Dec. 1, 1987).

(n224)Footnote 216. Reg. Z § 226.19(b); Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(b)-1. In 1996, Congress amended TILA to allow creditors the option of giving a statement that the periodic payments may increase or decrease substantially together with the maximum interest rate and payment amount for a $10,000 loan amount in lieu of giving the fifteen-year historical example. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a). The glitch is that Congress apparently limited this change to "residential mortgage transactions" which means purchase money mortgages. The FRB, however, when amending Regulation Z to conform to the statutory change, expanded the applicability of this alternative disclosure option to all variable rate loans with a term of greater than one year and secured by a consumer's principal dwelling. 62 Fed. Reg. 63,441, 63,442 (Dec. 1, 1997) .

(n225)Footnote 217. Reg. Z § 226.18(f)(1).

(n226)Footnote 218. Reg. Z § 226.18(f)(1) n.43.

(n227)Footnote 219. Reg. Z § 226.19(b)(1).

(n228)Footnote 220. Reg. Z § 226.19(b)(2); Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(b)(2)-1.

(n229)Footnote 221. One commonly used index in the subprime market is the "LIBOR" (London Interbank Offered Rate). To verify LIBOR rates, see www.bba.org.uk. Click on "Libor."

(n230)Footnote 222. Reg. Z § 226.19(b)(2)(ii); Official Staff Commentary § 226.19(b)(2)(ii)-1. If the LIBOR is used as an index, rates can be verified by trying at: www.bba.org.uk. Click on "Libor." The LIBOR rates are listed by country and by duration. The loan note should state the specific LIBOR rate that applies. For example, if the loan note states that the "six-month LIBOR" rate applies, use the U.S. "6m" LIBOR rate for the date in question. In a recent case, the court certified a class in a case alleging a violation of TILA because the creditor failed to adequately identify the index. The disclosure only mentioned "the LIBOR" and did not specify which particular LIBOR index applied. Abel v. Keybank USA, N.A., 313 F. Supp. 2d 720 (N.D. Ohio 2004) .

(n231)Footnote 223. Reg. Z § 226.19(b).

(n232)Footnote 224. Reg. Z § 226.20(c). See Collier v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35619 (N.D. Tex. May 26, 2006) (no violation when creditor provided a timely adjustment notice that, inter alia, maintained the bi-weekly payment schedule but reduced the payments by re-amortizing them based on a full thirty-year term and stated the number of remaining payments).

(n233)Footnote 225. Reg. Z § 226.20(c) requires the adjustment notice be given "in a variable-rate transaction subject to section 226.19(b)," which are those secured by the consumer's principal dwelling and with terms of more than one year. These requirements have been in place since December 1, 1987. Under prior TIL rules, however, under some circumstances, an adjustment to a variable-rate transaction might constitute a "new transaction," which would require new disclosures.

(n234)Footnote 226. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, §§ 2502(a)(6), 2502(c)(2), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(C)).

(n235)Footnote 227. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(a)(6), 122 Stat. 2654, 2856 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(C)(ii)).

(n236)Footnote 228. Reg. Z § 226.18(f)(1); Official Staff Commentary § 226.18(f)-1. Those variable-rate transactions which are secured by the borrower's principal dwelling and with a term of greater than one year are subject to Reg. Z § 226.18(f)(2) and § 226.19(b). For discussion of the alternative disclosure requirements, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.8.3 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n237)Footnote 228.1. 74 Fed. Reg. 41,194, 41,194 (Aug. 14, 2009) .

(n238)Footnote 228.2. Reg. Z § 226.46(b).

(n239)Footnote 228.3. Id.

(n240)Footnote 228.4. Reg. Z § 226.48(a); Official Staff Commentary § 226.48(a)-1 to (a)-3.

(n241)Footnote 228.5. Reg. Z § 226.48(c); Official Staff Commentary § 226.48(c)-1.

(n242)Footnote 228.6. Reg. Z § 226.48(c)(3).

(n243)Footnote 228.7. Id.

(n244)Footnote 228.8. Reg. Z § 226.48(c)(4).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.06

§ 1.06 Disclosure Requirements for Refinancings and Other Subsequent Occurrences

[1] Refinancings

The basic working principle of Regulation Z is that a refinancing is a new transaction that requires all new disclosures to the consumer. n1 The problem for consumers is not this principle, but, instead, the fairly narrow definition of "refinancing."

A "refinancing" occurs where an existing obligation subject to closed-end TIL disclosures is satisfied and replaced with a new obligation to the same creditor undertaken by the same consumer. n2 The key terms are "satisfaction" and "replacement" n3 and both terms must be met absolutely. n4 To qualify as a refinancing, the new obligation must completely replace the prior obligation, regardless of whether the prior obligation's terms are changed. n5 For example, a new loan completely replacing a cancelled loan is a refinancing, even if the terms of the new loan are indistinguishable from those of the old one. n6 Whether the creditor's purchase of required property insurance after consummation ("force-placed insurance") requires new disclosures is unsettled, and may depend on the type of coverage provided by the insurance. n7

Another important requirement for refinancings is that they must involve both the original creditor (or an assignee or servicer of the original creditor) and the original consumer from the original obligation. n8 An obligation refinanced by some other creditor is not a "refinancing," but, rather, a new transaction that definitely requires new disclosures.

Typical examples of refinancings include consolidation of several existing obligations, disbursement of additional proceeds to the consumer or the consumer's other creditors, or the rescheduling of payments. n9 Unfortunately, other examples that may come to mind are probably specifically excluded from the scope of refinancing, even if they meet the cancellation/replacement rule of the definition. n10

[2] "Loan-Splitting" and Refinancing

For a variety of reasons (few of which are to benefit the consumer), a creditor may wish to split what the consumer views as a single transaction into two theoretically distinct ones. n11 One form may present the issue of whether there was a genuine refinancing, or whether the creditor was engaging in loan-splitting. Courts assess these transactions carefully, and may do so by identifying the following factors: the debtor's intended purpose for the credit, and needs he was seeking to meet; the debtor's expectation as to the "number and sequence" of transactions; the method and clarity of the creditor's communication to the borrower about its proposal for the loan terms; the creditor's internal policies "particularly with reference to initial 'enabling' loans to finance the cost of application for a larger loan"; the extent to which such policies are the rationale for structuring the loan; and the nature and results of any bargaining. Most important is the borrower's "awareness and intent." n12

[3] Rate Adjustments in Variable-Rate Transactions

[a] Adjustable Rate Mortgages

An adjustment to the interest rate in a variable-rate transaction subject to the disclosure rules for ARMs requires new disclosures to the consumer regardless of whether there is a corresponding adjustment to the payment. n13 In these transactions, disclosures must be made at least 25, but no more than 120, calendar days before a payment is due in a changed amount. n14 This timing rule applies equally to the changes which are required when an ARM is converted to a fixed-rate transaction. n15 If no payment change is required by a change to the rate, disclosures must be made at least once each year in which a new rate is implemented. n16 The required disclosures include:

- The current and prior interest rates;
- The index values on which the current and changed rate is based; n17
- The extent of any foregone rate changes;
- The effects of the adjustment including the new payment;
- A statement of the loan balance; and
- The payment which would be required to fully amortize the loan balance if it is different from the payment required under the contract. n18

Violation of these ARM requirements may give rise to statutory damages as well as actual damages. n19

[b] Other Variable-Rate Transactions

For transactions which are not subject to the disclosure rules for adjustable rate mortgages, the change of the APR in accordance with a variable-rate feature is not considered a refinancing as long as the variable-rate feature was properly disclosed originally. n20 However, new TIL disclosures are required if the creditor increases the annual percentage rate in accordance with a variable-rate feature that was not previously disclosed. n21 Similarly, new disclosures are also required if the creditor adds a variable-rate feature to the obligation. n22 Disclosures in both instances are required even if the original obligation is not cancelled and replaced by a new one. n23

The current requirements for adjustments to variable-rate transactions not subject to the ARM rules are derived without substantive change from prior law. Under the Old Act, courts interpreting both Official Board Interpretation 226.810 and Old Regulation Z section 226.8(b)(8) n24 held that APR increases in variable-rate contracts are new extensions of credit requiring new disclosures if the variable nature of the original contact was not properly disclosed. n25 The current rule for non-ARM n26 variable-rate transactions remains essentially unchanged.

[4] Renewals

The renewal of a single payment obligation (that is, only one payment of interest and principal is required) on its original terms is not considered a refinancing. n27 The Commentary to the current rules on refinancings broadens this exception to include transactions which require periodic payments of interest and a final payment of principal. n28

The Commentary also allows the exception to disclosure rules even if accrued unpaid interest is added to the principal balance. n29 Thus, under the Commentary, a consumer could enter into a ten-year loan of $10,000 at 12% APR, with monthly interest-only payments of $100, and a final payment of the principal of $10,000. If the consumer never made any interest payments, he would owe $22,000 at the end of the ten years. If this sum were "renewed" on its original terms, that is, for ten years with monthly interest payments of $100 (thereby creating a negative amortization situation) and a final payment of the principal of $22,000, under the Commentary this would not be considered a refinancing.

Payday and auto title lenders will frequently "rollover," "renew," or "extend" the single payment loan by charging a new fee. n30 This fee is often the same amount as the original finance charge imposed. Some lenders may take a new post-dated check and provide some receipt or other document evidencing the "new" transaction. Since these are single payment loans, arguably a "new" transaction occurs each time the loan is renewed. However, the Seventh Circuit found that where the creditor imposed a new fee for each extension, this act did not, of itself, equate to a refinancing. n31 The opinion recited no evidence that a new post-dated check was required and new documentation provided facts that reveal an intent to create a "new" loan.

[5] APR Reduction

A new obligation that has a lower annual percentage rate than the original obligation with a corresponding change in the payment schedule is not considered a refinancing. n32 Examples would include a shortened maturity date, reduced number of payments, or smaller required payments; however, the Commentary makes clear that this exception does not apply if the maturity is lengthened or if the payment amount or number of payments is increased beyond that remaining on the existing transaction. n33 The Commentary also notes, however, if the annual percentage rate is first reduced and then later is increased (even if it remains below its original level), the increase would be considered a refinancing, requiring new disclosures. n34

[6] Court Agreements

Another exception to the general refinancing disclosure rules covers agreements made in the context of litigation. n35 Examples of such agreements include reaffirmation of debts discharged in bankruptcy, n36 settlement agreements, and post-judgment agreements. n37 It is important to note that these agreements, which are basically voluntary agreements between the parties and are not considered refinancings, are distinguished from court judgments, which are not even considered to be extensions of credit. n38

[7] Workout Agreements

Often when a consumer is in default, the creditor and consumer will agree to change the terms of an obligation to (seemingly) give the consumer an opportunity to avoid some of the consequences of default (litigation, repossession). For example, the consumer may agree to make higher payments or give additional security for the obligation; in return, the creditor will not file suit. These "workout agreements" are not considered refinancings and do not require additional disclosures unless the annual percentage rate is increased or additional credit is advanced (that is, beyond the unpaid balance, earned finance charge, and new insurance premiums). n39

[8] Insurance Renewals

Sometimes "optional" insurance, such as credit insurance, is renewed prior to the expiration of the obligation and the cost of the new insurance premium (and the cost of financing that premium) is added to the payment schedule. Such a renewal is not a refinancing, assuming that the appropriate disclosures were provided for the initial purchase of the insurance, even though the renewal creates an additional charge which will increase the size of the payments. n40

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosureReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingState Regulation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. Z § 226.20(a). Refinancings after December 9, 1987 of obligations that are secured by the consumer's dwelling and that allow for interest rate changes are also subject to the new disclosures of maximum interest rates. See Reg. Z § 226.30.

(n2)Footnote 2. Reg. Z § 226.20(a). But see Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-3 (re: required disclosures for the addition of a variable-rate feature even in the absence of the satisfaction/replacement feature).

(n3)Footnote 3. The parties' contract and applicable law determines whether that has occurred. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-1.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Garofalo v. Boyer, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 932 (Jan. 24, 2001) (loan modification did not change the amount owed or the interest rate; no new note signed by the parties, and the old debt was never extinguished; therefore, no new disclosures required); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Russell, 519 N.W.2d 460 (Minn. Ct. App. 1994) (existing obligation was not satisfied and replaced where car buyer cancelled credit disability insurance and extended service contract, and unused premiums were applied to loan balance and monthly payments reduced). Sheppard v. GMAC Mortgage Corp. (In re Sheppard), 299 B.R. 753 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (court found that the loan modification did not meet the threshold definition of a refinancing; therefore, the loan modification exceptions to refinancing rule did not apply).

(n5)Footnote 5. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-1.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Begala v. PNC Bank, N.A., 163 F.3d 948 (6th Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 868, 120 S. Ct. 166, 145 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1999) , second lawsuit on same issue dismissed, 214 F.3d 776 (6th Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1145, 121 S. Ct. 1082, 148 L. Ed. 2d 958 (2001) ; Bone v. Hibernia Bank, 493 F.2d 135 (9th Cir. 1974) . See also Jackson v. American Loan Co., 202 F.3d 911 (7th Cir. 2000) (payment of an extension fee in a single payment loan does not, alone, equate to a refinancing). But see Temores v. Overland Bond & Inv. Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11878 (N.D. Ill. July 29, 1999) (agreement to change payment terms in an installment loan financing the purchase of a car can be a refinancing).

(n7)Footnote 7. Compare Pauley v. Bank One Colorado Corp., 205 B.R. 272 (D. Colo. 1997) (no new disclosures required as court found that the cost of the insurance fit into the exception in Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(4)); Adams v. GMAC Mortgage Corp., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17854 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 8, 1994) (creditor's purchase of force-placed insurance is not a refinancing requiring new disclosures; court dismissed, without discussion, as "unsupportable" borrower's allegation that it included unauthorized coverages), with Hogan v. Valley Nat'l Fin. Servs. Co., Clearinghouse No. 40,428 (D. Colo. 1995) (court denied creditor's motion to dismiss, holding that if plaintiff proved allegations that unauthorized, credit loss coverage was included, the premiums could be a finance charge and the purchase of unauthorized coverage could constitute a new credit transaction requiring new disclosures).

(n8)Footnote 8. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-5.

(n9)Footnote 9. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-1. See Temores v. Overland Bond & Inv. Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11878 (N.D. Ill. July 29, 1999) . Unfortunately, at best, refinancings merely require new disclosures and not comparisons of the terms of the old and new obligations, for example, when a consumer refinances an existing 10% APR mortgage with a no-interest doctor's bill to produce a new 18% consolidation mortgage loan.

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. Z § 226.20(a); Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-2.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 6.5.3.2 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.), on "the two-contract dodge" in home improvement sales.

(n12)Footnote 12. Thorp Loan & Thrift Co. v. Buckles (In re Buckles), 189 B.R. 752, 762 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1995) ; Kane v. Equity One, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23810 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2003) (claim of loan splitting will not be dismissed where the complaint alleges that the loan was split into two transactions in contravention of the consumer's expectations). See generally FTC v. Citigroup, Inc., 239 F. Supp. 2d 1302, 1307 (N.D. Ga. 2001) (denying motion to dismiss claim that finance company violated TILA by loan splitting, i.e., "giving the borrower immediate cash, tying him to a home equity loan, and effectively nullifying the TILA three-day rescission period"). But see Stokes v. World Savings Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13602 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2001) (no TIL violation to split home purchase financing into two loans, one for 80% of purchase price and one for amount over 80%, where the two loans had different terms and there was no evidence that borrower intended to get a single loan); accord Rendler v. Corus Bank, N.A., 272 F.3d 992 (7th Cir. 2001) .

(n13)Footnote 13. These charge notice rules apply to variable-rate mortgages secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, with terms greater than one year. Reg. Z § 226.20(c). Collier v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35619 (N.D. Tex. May 26, 2006) (creditor cannot rely upon the subsequent occurrence defense regarding variable rate adjustment notices).

(n14)Footnote 14. These charge notice rules apply to variable-rate mortgages secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, with terms greater than one year. Reg. Z § 226.20(c); Fidler v. Central Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 210 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) (dispute of material fact as to whether creditor mailed the adjustment notice in a timely way resulted in the denial of the creditor's motion for summary judgment; consumer's denial of receipt was contained in affidavit), vacated, in part, reaff'd, in part, claim dismissed, mot. denied, in part, 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(c)-1.

(n16)Footnote 16. Reg. Z § 226.20(c).

(n17)Footnote 17. Only the index values must be disclosed. Thus, the margin used in calculating the rate need not be disclosed. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(c)(2)-1.

(n18)Footnote 18. Reg. Z § 226.20(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Essex Home Mortgage Servicing Corp. v. Fritz, 740 So. 2d 1224 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1999) ($2,000 statutory damages limited to first misdisclosure as it only affected the first rate change; consumer presented no evidence that any subsequent changes were made in error as a result of this misdisclosure).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Reg. Z § 226.18(f) and Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-3. See, e.g., National City Bank v. Parker, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 2607 (Ohio Ct. App. June 27, 1990) (variable-rate car loan; no refinancing occurred, thus new disclosures not required each time interest rate increased where all disclosures had been properly made at consummation).

(n21)Footnote 21. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-3.

(n22)Footnote 22. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-3.

(n23)Footnote 23. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)-3.

(n24)Footnote 24. The text of OBI § 226.810 and Old Reg. Z § 226.8(b)(8) may be found in § 8, at p. 76 and § 8, App. A4, respectively, of National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending in Transition (1982).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Nash v. First Fin. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 703 F.2d 233 (7th Cir. 1983) ; Brown v. Marquette Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 686 F.2d 608 (7th Cir. 1982) ; Hughes v. Cardinal Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 566 F. Supp. 834 (S.D. Ohio 1983) (APR increase without proper disclosure constituted "refinancing"); Preston v. First Bank of Marietta, 16 Ohio App. 3d 4, 473 N.E.2d 1210 (1983) . See also Moore v. Coral Nat'l Bank, 409 A.2d 679 (Me. 1979) .

(n26)Footnote 26. As used here, "ARM" refers to those adjustable rate mortgages subject to Reg. Z § 226.19(b), which are secured by the borrower's principal dwelling and are written for a term of longer than one year. Adjustment notices for ARMs are governed by Reg. Z § 226.20(c).

(n27)Footnote 27. Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(1). This represents a substantive change from the Old Regulation. See In re Scaife, 825 F.2d 357 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(1)-1.

(n29)Footnote 29. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(1)-1.

(n30)Footnote 30. See National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 7.5.5 (3d ed. and supp.).

(n31)Footnote 31. Jackson v. American Loan Co., Inc., 202 F.3d 911 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n32)Footnote 32. Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(2); Colman v. Wendover Funding, Inc., 89 F.3d 849 (10th Cir. 1996) , reported in full at 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 14251 (10th Cir. June 12, 1996) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(2)-2. See Hart v. GMAC Mortgage Corp. (In re Hart), 246 B.R. 709 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (loan modification not a refinancing as it lowered the APR and consequently reduced the monthly payment).

(n34)Footnote 34. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(2)-1. The increase must be accomplished by satisfaction and replacement of the old obligation to meet the general definition of a refinancing.

(n35)Footnote 35. Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(3).

(n36)Footnote 36. See 11 U.S.C. § 524(c).

(n37)Footnote 37. Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(3)-1.

(n38)Footnote 38. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(14)-1. Note that court approval of reaffirmation agreements are included in the non-credit list; reaffirmations generally, which do not always need the approval of the court, are included in the non-refinancing list.

(n39)Footnote 39. Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(4); Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(4)-1. See Hart v. GMAC Mortgage Corp. (In re Hart), 246 B.R. 709 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (loan modification not a refinancing as it lowered the APR and consequently reduced the monthly payment; forbearance agreement not a refinancing because it resulted from the homeowner's default and the rate did not increase nor did the repayment amount exceed the unpaid balance plus earned finance charges); Garofalo v. Boyer, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 932 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 24, 2001) (loan modification did not change the amount owed or the interest rate; no new note signed by the parties and the old debt was never extinguished; therefore, no new disclosures required). See also Scott v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage Inc., 326 F. Supp. 2d 709 (E.D. Va. 2003) (no right to rescind a loan modification because new TIL disclosures are not required if the APR does not increase and the consumer does not allege that additional credit was extended).

(n40)Footnote 40. Reg. Z § 226.20(a)(5); Official Staff Commentary § 226.20(a)(5)-1.

16 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.07

§ 1.07 Open-End Credit Regulations

Important Note: Major changes have recently been made to TILA and Regulation Z's provisions regarding credit cards and open-end credit, and the statutory changes necessitate further changes to Regulation Z that should go into effect by February 22, 2010. These further changes have not yet been announced, and thus cannot be included in this chapter.

The Credit Card Accountability, Responsibility and Disclosure (CARD) Act (hereinafter Credit CARD Act), passed in May 2009, adds a number of substantive protections and new disclosure requirements concerning open-end credit, many of which are effective February 22, 2010. Before enactment of the Credit CARD Act, the Federal Reserve Board had issued a final rule in January 2009 making wholesale revisions to Regulation Z's open-end credit provisions, effective July 2010.

The FRB must now revise Regulation Z due to the Credit CARD Act, and that revision should be accomplished by the Credit CARD Act's February 22, 2010 effective date. We expect that many of the provisions of the new rule will be similar to the January 2009 rule. This chapter includes the January 2009 rule, and retains its announced July 2010 effective date. But significant portions of this rule will be revised in part, and will instead go into effect on February 22, 2010. The next scheduled update of this chapter will include those changes. See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, Chapter 5 (2009 supp.).

[1] Scope of TIL Open-End Credit Regulations

The next set of TILA provisions apply to revolving charge accounts, credit cards and other forms of open-end credit including open-end credit secured by the consumer's dwelling. n1 These provisions can be found in TILA Chapter 2 and essential interpretations are found at Regulation Z Subpart B n2 and the Commentary. n3

TILA requires specific disclosures to be made throughout the existence of an open-end credit account. n4 Disclosures are required in the advertisement of open-end credit, n5 at the opening of an account, and before the first use of a credit card or open-end account. n6 For credit cards, TILA requires disclosures to be given even earlier, in conjunction with applications and solicitations. n7 TILA also requires a periodic (usually monthly) statement with certain disclosures to be sent to the card user or holder of the open-end account. n7.1 Disclosures are required if an account is renewed or the terms of the account changes. n7.2 Model forms appear in the appendices to Regulation Z, particularly Appendix G. It is important to note that some disclosures can now be made electronically. The Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act, n8 effective October 1, 2000, was enacted to validate electronic signatures, electronic documents, and electronic disclosures. If its requirements, particularly the consumer consent and confirmation of consent requirements, are met, it overrides TILA's requirement that disclosures be made in writing. n9

TILA Chapter 4 includes the FCBA, n10 which provides important consumer protection in credit card transactions. Some of these protections apply broadly to credit card transactions, including nonconsumer, business cards and credit cards which do not involve open-end credit. n11 The Regulation briefly interprets the several sections of the FCBA. n12

[a] Definition of Open-End Credit

Open-end credit is defined in the Regulation n13 by reference to an "open-end credit plan" in which a creditor:

a) "Reasonably contemplates" repeated transactions;

b) Prescribes the terms of the transactions; and

c) Provides for a finance charge which may be computed from time-to-time on an outstanding unpaid balance.

The Regulation and Commentary amplify this definition. The Regulation defines open-end credit as "consumer credit" n14 extended by a "creditor" n15 under a plan in which:

a) The creditor reasonably contemplates repeated transactions;

b) The creditor may impose a finance charge from time to time on an unpaid balance. If the finance charge is pre-computed at the inception of the transaction, it is not an open-end transaction; and

c) The amount of credit that may be extended to the consumer during the term of the plan (up to any limit set by the creditor) is generally made available to the extent that any outstanding balance is repaid. n16

According to the Commentary, the plan must meet all three criteria n17 and also be a contractual arrangement between creditor and customer. n18 But the plan can have one or several features, such as a secured credit line, an overdraft line, or other programs, with different rate structures (multifeatured plans).

In 1998, after many proposals and much debate, the FRB amended the Official Staff Commentary to include one new provision. To dispel the myth that the reasonableness of a creditor's expectation of repeat transactions is measured on purely subjective bases, it added the following statement:

> The determination of whether a creditor can reasonably contemplate repeated transactions requires objective analysis. Information that much of the creditor's customer base with accounts under the plan make repeated transactions is relevant to the determination, particularly when the plan is opened primarily for the financing of infrequently purchased products or services. n19

The Board went on to explain, in Supplementary Information, that certain factors could be considered in making an individualized factual determination:

- whether a credit line was limited to the purchase of items not likely to be purchased in multiples; a greater variety of products and services available increases the likelihood that the expectation was reasonable;

- whether the credit was established for the purpose of purchasing a designated item;

- where the plan was established to finance the purchase of a designated item, the amount of the purchase compared to the credit line. The establishment of a $5,000 line to purchase a $4,500 satellite dish was an example of a situation where a creditor was not likely to reasonably assume repeated transactions. The Board notes that the availability of add-on sales which were nominal in amount compared to the initial transaction would not make the expectation reasonable;

- whether the creditor reasonably solicited customers for repeated transactions. For example, if a $10,000 line was filled with a $9,000 roof job, a purported solicitation of the customer for a siding job would not appear to be a bona fide offer; and

- whether the creditor had data showing that customers actually made repeated purchases. n20

Federal courts asked to decide whether creditors have extended genuine or spurious open-ended credit have largely ignored the plain language of the new addition to the commentary and the five factors listed above. n21 In Benion v. Bank One, N.A., n22 the Seventh Circuit upheld the "reasonableness" of a creditor's expectations of repeated transactions. The court did analyze the new material, but determined that it did not specifically forbid the credit practice at issue in that case, which appeared to fit neatly into a regulatory loophole. The court noted that

> [w]hen an activity of a technical and specialized character is comprehensively regulated by an expert agency, as consumer credit disclosures are comprehensively regulated by the Federal Reserve Board (and no one doubts that this particular agency is a repository of genuine expertise), courts should generally leave the plugging of loopholes to the agency, lest the court's reparative efforts create confusion and disrupt the regulatory scheme. n23

Even after Benion, spurious open-end credit remains in litigation elsewhere. n24 It can still be argued that TILA and other consumer protection statutes are supposed to be liberally construed to effectuate their purpose, and that Congress left the matter for case-by-case analysis by courts in light of all the facts and circumstances. In addition, the deceptive use of open-end credit to finance large ticket items, such as satellite dishes, can be attacked under fraud or unfair or deceptive theories. In Carlisle v. Whirlpool Finance National Bank, n25 a jury awarded $580 million in two individual cases joined for trial. The trial court, though reducing the award to $300 million, found that the evidence revealed a malicious sales practice designed to target and take advantage of the poor, under-educated, elderly, and African-American citizens. Because the lender structured the loans as open-end, the payments would have lasted for eight years, rather than thirty-six months, at $34 each, the payment schedule which the consumers understood to be the arrangement. n26

More recently, a bankruptcy court decided that a home equity line of credit constituted spurious open-end credit. n27 In that case, the creditor extended two home-secured loans to the homeowners, a first lien fixed-term loan that refinanced the existing mortgage lien and a second line of credit which paid off certain credit card debt. In reaching its conclusion, the court highlighted the following factors: the creditor disbursed the entire line of credit at closing; the terms called for interest-only payments for the first three years which would result in no reduction of principal during that time; the draw period only lasted for the first three years; the creditor knew that the homeowners would not likely pay more than the interest-only payments during the draw period, given their limited monthly income and, consequently knew that the line of credit would not replenish during that time.

Note that the label of a plan or account does not determine its nature for TIL purposes. n28 A close review of the terms of a credit plan is necessary to determine whether it involves open-end credit or closed-end credit under TIL. n29 For example, many real estate transactions, including home equity "lines of credit," may be merely "so-called" open-end transactions. For instance, if advances are separately negotiated or approved, the "self-replenishing" aspect of open credit is not met. n30 Likewise, if there is no draw period, the self-replenishing and repeated transaction aspects are absent. n31

[b] Definition of "Creditor."

Any person who "regularly" extends open-end consumer credit (that is subject to a finance charge or payable by written agreement in more than four installments) is considered a "creditor" for all TIL purposes, regardless of whether a credit card is involved. n32 A person who regularly extends open-end credit is required to make the open-end disclosures set out in Subpart B of the Regulation. n33 These creditors will also be subject to all other TIL requirements.

Second, any "card issuer" of a "credit card" n34 is required to make the Subpart B open-end credit disclosures, regardless of whether the open-end credit is subject to a finance charge or is payable in more than four installments. n35 In addition, the card issuer need not be the party to whom the obligation is initially payable to be a creditor. n36 In Neff v. Capital Acquisitions & Management Co., the Seventh Circuit held that a card issuer does not include a party who purchases a delinquent credit card account and does not grant any further extensions of credit. n37 However, one of the debt collectors in the case was Capitol One, which is a major card issuer. The lower court explicitly refused to accept the argument that by being a card issuer already, Capital One was a creditor for all subsequent extensions of credit, not just the cards that it issued, n38 and the Seventh Circuit did not consider the argument. n39

Whether a card issuer who purchases delinquent credit card accounts is a creditor under TILA is of some concern, because some card issuers are buying up delinquent accounts and soliciting these cardholders for a "new" credit card as a tactic to revive old debt. n40 TILA coverage is actually probably more important for some of the substantive credit card rights n41 than to receive periodic statements, which was the basis of the TILA claim in Neff, because TILA does not require periodic statements if an account is considered delinquent. n42

Third, any "card issuer" that extends closed-end credit that is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than four installments is subject to the applicable open-end disclosures of Subpart B and the FCBA, as well as the closed-end provisions of Subpart C. n43

Finally, a person who honors a credit card is a creditor for the purposes of the provisions relating to discounts, disclosing a finance charge imposed at the time of the transaction, and crediting returns and refunds. n44

[c] Cardholder

A cardholder is statutorily defined as "any person to whom a credit card is issued." n45 Note that a cardholder need not be a consumer or even a natural person under the definition in TILA. However, Regulation Z limits "cardholders" to "natural persons" except with respect to the rules on unauthorized use and unsolicited issuance of credit cards, which apply to organizations and businesses. n46 When a cardholder dies, the cardholder's estate is not considered a cardholder for purposes of TILA. n47 Effective July 2010, the Commentary makes clear that the purpose of a card is determined when it is issued. n47.1 Thus, when a consumer-purpose credit card is issued, all of the provisions of Regulation Z apply, even to occasional extensions of credit for business purposes made using that consumer-purpose credit card. n47.2 For example, a consumer may assert a billing error with respect to an extension of credit on a credit card, even if the extension was made for business purposes. n47.3

A cardholder also includes "any person who has agreed with the card issuer to pay obligations arising from the issuance of a credit card to another person." n48 Thus, unlike other consumer credit, guarantors and co-obligors of credit card accounts have the co-extensive rights under TILA. n49 Authorized users, however, who are not obligated on the card are not included in the definition of "cardholder." n50 Employees who are co-obligors on cards issued to their employers for business purposes are also not considered "cardholders." n51

A person in whose name a credit card was issued should also be considered a cardholder, and therefore a consumer, at least for the dispute resolution provisions of TILA, even if the card was actually provided to an imposter. n52 However,some courts haveaccepted the argument that a victim of identify theft is not a "cardholder" under TILA, because the creditor did not issue the card to the victim; rather, the creditor issued it to the thief. n53

[2] Required Disclosures in Applications and Solicitations

The Regulation sets forth all the items concerning credit costs and terms required to be disclosed in credit and charge card applications and solicitations. n54 The disclosures must be in writing, but they do not need to be in a form that the consumer can keep. n55 Information on APRs (including variable-rate information), fees for the issuance or availability of a card, minimum and transaction charges, grace periods, balance computation methods and charge card repayment, to the extent applicable, must be provided in the form of a table with headings. n56 Beginning in July 2010, additional disclosures will required to be made in a tabular format, and those disclosures are subject to certain requirements. In total, the disclosures required to be made in the tabular format will include:

- Credit and charge card applications and solicitations; n56.1
- Account-opening disclosures; n56.2
- Convenience check disclosures; n56.3
- Change-in-terms notices; n56.4
- Notice of penalty rate imposition. n56.5

The disclosures required to be made in a tabular format must be "readily noticeable." n56.6 They must be made using at least a 10-point font. n56.7 In addition, disclosures of any purchase APRs in the tabular format for credit card application/solicitation and account-opening disclosures must be made in 16-point type, except for penalty APRs. n56.8

Effective July 2010, if the table is provided electronically, the table must be provided in close proximity to the application or solicitation. n56.9 This standard was established by amendments to TILA found in the April 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Act. n56.10 Although the Act referred to "Internet" solicitations, the FRB has since amended Regulation Z to apply them to all electronic solicitations, as well as applications. n56.11

If a consumer accesses a credit card application or solicitation electronically, such as on-line at a home computer, the issuer must provide the required disclosures in electronic form in order to meet the requirement to provide disclosures in a timely manner on or with the application or solicitation. n56.12 The issuer is not permitted to mail paper disclosures to the consumer because such disclosures would not be "on or with" the application. n56.13

In contrast, if a consumer is physically present in the card issuer's office, and accesses a credit card application or solicitation electronically, such as via a terminal or kiosk, the issuer may provide disclosures in either electronic or paper form, provided the issuer complies with the other timing and delivery requirements. n56.14

A brief summary of the required disclosures is set out below.

[a] APR Disclosure

Credit card issuers are required to disclose each periodic rate that may be used to compute the finance charge on an outstanding balance, expressed as a corresponding APR. n57 A periodic rate is defined as a rate of finance charge that is or may be imposed by a creditor on a balance for a day, a week, a month, or other subdivision of a year. n58 A periodic rate does not include a transaction charge, even if it is computed as a percentage of the transaction amount, that is not connected to a period of time. n59 The length of time a creditor must abide by a rate disclosed in the application and solicitation disclosure depends on the circumstances and may be a question of fact. n60 Effective July 2010, this type size requirement has been reduced to 16-point type. n60.1 In addition, it will apply to introductory rates as well, but continue to exclude penalty rates and oral disclosures. n60.2

Whenever more than one rate applies for a category of transactions, the card issuer is required to disclose the range of balances to which each rate applies. n60.3

Effective February 2010, amendments to TILA will place certain substantive restrictions on the ability of credit card issuers to increase the APR an outstanding balance. n60.4 In addition, issuers are required to give forty-five days' notice before increasing the APR on future transactions. n60.5

[b] Teaser Rates

Card issues that offer "teaser" or introductory rates are required to disclose the "regular" rate that would apply to the card account. n61

The bankruptcy reform legislation enacted in April 2005 amended TILA to provide for additional "temporary" or introductory rate disclosures in credit card applications and solicitations. n62 The new provisions require that applications and solicitations offering a temporary APR must use the term "introductory" when providing that rate, n63 except when the rate is listed in the table required by section 1632(c). n64

The disclosures must also identify in a clear and conspicuous manner:

- The time period during which the introductory rate will apply; n65 and

- The permanent fixed APR or, for variable rate plans, the APR that will apply when the introductory period ends. n66

These disclosures must be made in a "prominent location closely proximate to the first listing of the temporary" APR. n67 The statute does not require that the temporary and permanent rates be side-by-side, but the Board could interpret "clear and conspicuous" in this context to require a side-by-side comparison.

If the introductory rate is revocable "under any circumstances or upon any event," the application or solicitation must clearly and conspicuously disclose in a prominent manner a "general" description of the circumstances that may result in a revocation of the temporary APR. n68 The APR that will apply if the temporary APR is revoked must also be disclosed. n69

The new disclosures only apply when a "temporary" APR is involved, which the statute defines as "any rate of interest applicable to a credit card account for an introductory period of less than one year, if that rate is less than an annual percentage rate that was in effect within sixty days before the date of mailing the application or solicitation." n70 This definition is confusing as it is unclear what APRs can be used as the comparison measure for this definition. Conceivably, an unscrupulous creditor could attempt to evade the rule entirely by treating a little-used APR or an APR for an entirely different program as the measure of comparison.

[c] Variable-Rate Disclosure

For accounts subject to a variable-rate, the credit card issuer is also required to disclose that the rate is variable and how the rate is determined. n71

[d] Penalty Rates

A penalty rate is an increase in the initial APR triggered by a specific event, such as a late payment. Credit card issuers must disclose the initial rate, the penalty rate that may apply, and the specific event or events that may result in imposing the increased rate. n72 Some credit card issuers have been imposing penalty rates not only for late payments to the issuer, but for any adverse information on the consumer's credit report, or a drop in the consumer's credit score. n73 A review of credit card solicitations shows that some creditors are disclosing that a late payment to other creditors will trigger a penalty rate, but so far creditors have not disclosed that a mere drop in credit score may be the trigger. This may arguably violate the requirement to disclose the specific event that may trigger a penalty rate, because a drop in credit score is not always caused by late payments--it could be caused by being "maxed" out on revolving accounts, an excessive numbers of inquiries, or a number of other factors. n74

The Credit CARD Act also requires issuers to provide a forty-five day notice before imposing an increased APR on an account, including a penalty rate. Effective February 2010, the Credit CARD Act restricts the ability of issuers to impose penalty rates on outstanding balances as well as during the first year of an account.

Effective July 2010, all disclosures that refer to a penalty rate must use the term "penalty APR." Special rules will apply to penalty rates that consist of the loss of an introductory rate.

[e] Fees for Issuance or Availability

Credit card issuers are required to disclose any annual or other periodic fee or any one-time fee imposed for the issuance or availability of a credit or charge card. n75 This disclosure is limited to fees related to opening the account, such as one-time membership fees. The annual fee as disclosed in a TILA solicitation disclosure has an implied term of one year. n76 Thus, if an issuer states in a TILA disclosure that there is no annual fee, it violates TIL by imposing an annual fee prior to the expiration of a one-year period.

[f] Minimum Finance Charge

Credit card issuers must disclose any minimum or fixed finance charge that could be imposed for any period during which any extension of credit that is subject to a finance charge is outstanding. n77

[g] Transaction Charge for Purchases

Credit and charge card issuers must disclose any transaction charge imposed in connection with the use of the card to purchase goods and services. n78 This provision does not cover fees for cash advances. n79

[h] Grace Period for Purchases

Credit card issuers must disclose the date by which, or the period within which, any credit extended under credit card accounts for the purchase of goods or services must be repaid to avoid incurring a finance charge. n80

[i] Balance Computation Method for Purchases n81

In making this disclosure, card issuers are required to identify the balance computation method used on the account by the name provided in the Regulation's definitions of the most common balance computation methods. n82

[j] Due and Payable Statement n83

Charge card issuers must disclose that charges incurred by use of a charge card are payable when the periodic statement reflecting those charges is received by the cardholder. n84

[k] Additional Fee Disclosure

Credit and charge card issuers are required to disclose fees for cash advances, late payments or exceeding a credit limit. n85

Effective July 2010, the FRB has added another fee to the list: returned-payment fees. n85.1 Furthermore, the options for disclosing a fee that varies by state have been revised to provide that a creditor may disclose either: (1) the specific fee applicable to the consumer's account; or (2) the range of fees, if the disclosure includes a statement that the amount of the fee varies by state and refers the consumer to a table (that must be provided with the application/solicitation table) where the amount of the fee applicable to the consumer's state is disclosed. n85.2 Listing the amount of the fee for all states in the application/solicitation table is no longer permitted. n85.3

The Board has published several model forms in conjunction with the disclosure rules. n86 As with other model forms, proper use of the model forms will generally place a creditor in compliance with TILA. n87

There are also specific disclosure rules for different types of application and solicitations. These are listed below.

[i] Direct Mail Applications and Solicitations n88

Card issuers who make direct mail applications and solicitations to open a credit or charge card account must make the required disclosures described above on or with an application that is mailed to consumers. n89

[ii] Telephone Applications and Solicitations n90

These requirements apply if a telephone conversation between a card issuer and consumer may result in the issuance of a card as a result of a card issuer-initiated offer to open a credit or charge card account for which the card issuer does not require any application. It also applies where the card issuer initiates the contact and at the same time takes application information over the telephone. These requirements do not apply where no card will be issued.

The general requirements for telephone applications and solicitations are oral disclosure of the APR, annual or periodic fee, minimum finance charge, transaction charges, grace period, balance computation method, and the due and payable statement if applicable. n91 There are also alternative disclosures available to telephone solicitations and applications. n92

[iii] Applications and Solicitations Made Available to General Public n93

Card issuers may satisfy these disclosure requirements in any of three ways: a) Provision of all the required credit disclosures including indicated information; n94 or b) limited initial credit disclosures; n95 or c) no credit disclosures by providing a statement on the application or solicitation that there are costs associated with the use of the credit or charge card and that the applicant can contact the card issuer to request specific information. n96 The Regulation makes the options available to both credit and charge card issuers.

[3] Preemption of State Laws

State laws relating to the terms of credit required to be disclosed or the manner in which such terms must be disclosed are preempted as to any credit or charge card application or solicitation and as to any renewal notice for any account subject to TILA. n97 State laws relating to disclosures concerning credit and charge cards other than in applications, solicitations, or in renewal notices are not preempted as long as they are not inconsistent with TIL requirements. State laws regarding the enforcement of the requirements or of any prohibitions against unfair and deceptive acts or practices (such as state "mini-FTC acts") also are not preempted. n98

[4] Required Initial Disclosures

Before the first transaction on an open-end credit account or a credit card account, the creditor must make several disclosures to the consumer about the terms and conditions of the account. n99 Initial disclosures must be provided to the consumer before the first transaction by which the customer becomes obligated on the plan. Disclosures must be given before the first purchase in a situation when the consumer simultaneously opens a plan and makes a purchase. n100 Once the consumer has received the disclosures, he or she must either reject the plan or accept it by use.

If an account is closed and the consumer or creditor seeks to reopen it, new initial disclosures must be provided. n101 If the account is closed as a housekeeping matter and then reopened on the same terms and conditions, new initial disclosures need not be given. n102

In general, all open-ended credit disclosures must be made "clearly and conspicuously, in writing, in a form that the consumer may keep." n103 There are a few exceptions, two of which involve the initial disclosure. n104

"Conspicuous" is not defined, although some guidance can be found from the UCC's definition of what is conspicuous. Under the UCC, whether a term or clause is conspicuous is a question of law to be decided by the court. The standard is whether a reasonable person (here, the customer) "ought to have noticed it." n105 The Commentary specifies that the disclosures need not be segregated or located in any particular place, and the numerical amounts or percentages need not be in any particular type size. n106

All disclosures required by Subpart B, including initial disclosures, must be in writing. n107 Only in two instances--when a creditor makes a solicitation or takes an application for open-end credit by telephone, n108 or when a merchant or creditor imposes a surcharge as a condition to use of a credit card n109--does Regulation Z authorize oral disclosure of open-end credit terms.

The only required terminology for initial open-end disclosures are the terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate." The terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate" must be more conspicuous than other required disclosures, n110 but only when the terms are used with a corresponding numerical amount or percentage rate. n111

TIL requires seven initial disclosures, to the extent applicable: n112

1) The conditions under which a finance charge may be imposed together with either the time period, if any, in which the customer may pay without incurring additional finance charges or the fact that there is no free ride period;

2) The method of determining the balance on which the finance charge is imposed;

3) The method of determining the amount of the finance charge, including any minimum or fixed amount;

4) Each "periodic rate," the range of balances to which it is applicable, and the corresponding nominal annual percentage rate;

5) Identification of other charges which may be imposed and their method of computation in accordance with FRB regulations;

6) If the indebtedness is or will be secured, a statement to that effect with an appropriate identification of the collateral;

7) A statement as to billing error rights and the right to assert claims and defenses in a form prescribed by the FRB (with periodic transmittal of a statement of such rights).

The FRB also specifies several variable-rate disclosures that must be made in the initial disclosures: n113

First, each periodic rate that may be used to compute the finance charge must be disclosed. n114 A periodic rate does not include a transaction charge, even if it is computed as a percentage of the transaction amount, which is not connected to a period of time. n115 The variable-rate disclosure must also state the circumstances under which the rate may increase, any limitations on the increase and the effects of the increase. n116 The disclosure must also reveal when the increase takes effect. n117 Two recent cases demonstrate the complexity of the variable rate calculations, as well as their disclosure under TILA form. In Demry v. Citibank (South Dakota), N.A., n118 the creditor calculated interest rates on the last business day of the calendar month, but did not apply them until the first day of the billing cycle following the month the rate is calculated. In Stein v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, n119 the TILA disclosure stated that the initial interest rate for a home equity line of credit was calculated using the index when the account was "opened," which the creditor construed as the date of the application for credit, but the consumer understood to be the date of the approval for credit.

In addition, for any consumer credit open-end plan secured by the consumer's dwelling entered into after December 9, 1987, Regulation Z required the creditor to disclose the maximum interest rate that may be imposed during the term of the plan. n120

In cases where creditors advertise introductory rates which are in effect for a certain period, usually a short period of time, the creditor must disclose in the initial disclosure statement:

1) The initial discounted rate (expressed as a periodic rate and an annual percentage rate) and how long that rate will remain in effect;

2) The current rate which would be applied under the index if there were no discount (with the parallel periodic rate and annual percentage rate);

3) The circumstances under which the rate may increase;

4) Any limitations on the increase; and

5) The effect of the increase. n121

[5] Periodic Statement Requirements

[a] General Periodic Statement Requirements

Once the customer has taken advantage of the credit offered under the open-end credit plan, or used a credit card, the creditor n122 is obligated to send periodic statements disclosing the following information: n123

a) The beginning balance;

b) The amount and date of each credit extension with an identification of each;

c) The amount credited during the billing period;

d) The amount of the finance charge, itemized to show the application of various rates, and the amount of any minimum or fixed charges; n124

e) Each periodic rate, the range of balances to which it applies, and the corresponding annual percentage rate;

f) The total finance charge and the range of balances to which it applies;

g) The balance on which the finance charge is computed and how the balance was determined;

h) The outstanding balance at the end of the period;

i) The time within which payment must be made to avoid additional finance charges; and

j) The date on which the payment is due or the earliest date on which a late payment fee may be charged and the amount of the fee

k) The creditor's address for billing error purposes; and

l) A warning statement regarding the effect of paying only the minimum monthly payment.

Charge card issuers must make the same disclosures, except for those related to finance charges. n125

The periodic statement must be mailed or delivered to the consumer, n126 unless the consumer opts to pick it up. n127 The federal E-Sign Act allows electronic delivery if the consumer and the creditor have gone through its consent and confirmation-of-consent requirements. n128

The timing of the statements is also prescribed by statute. If there is no amount owing, no statement need be sent. n129 A creditor is only required to establish that it sent the periodic statement, and need not prove the consumer actually received the statement. n130 However, simply showing that a creditor's normal business practice is to send periodic statements is not sufficient; the creditor must also show that the particular periodic statement at issue was delivered to the post office or processed according to the general business practice. n131

In addition to the initial disclosures and the periodic disclosures, the creditor must provide two types of subsequent disclosures: A periodic statement as to the customer's billing error rights, n132 and a change in terms notice. n133

With respect to renewals, the Regulation implements the disclosure requirements for credit and charge card renewals provided in TILA. n134

[b] Change in Credit Card Account Insurance Provider

Credit card issuers that offer credit insurance (typically, life, disability, and unemployment insurance) on the outstanding balance on an account are required to make certain disclosures to their insured consumer cardholders if the card issuers change insurance providers. n135

A notice must be sent at least 30 days before a change in insurance providers occurs. n136 The regulation specifies the information that must be provided in the notice.

TILA specifically provides that none of its disclosure requirements about changes in insurance coverage shall be construed as superseding any provision of state law which is applicable to the regulation of insurance. n137

[6] Billing Error Procedures

[a] Introduction and Definitions

The next set of required disclosures relate to billing error procedures. These procedures are intended to make the creditor listen to the consumer who has a dispute about a computerized bill or who does not understand the bill. The procedures apply to open-end credit accounts as well as all consumer credit cards. Effective July, 2010, creditors are required to include a reference that information about consumers' right to dispute transactions is included in the account agreement or other account-opening disclosures. n137.1 This reference must be made directly beneath the account-opening table, but not in the table. n137.2

The billing error procedures are an option made available to consumers. They are separate and apart from other dispute rights under TILA, such as protections for unauthorized use of a credit card n138 and a credit card holder's right to assert claims and defenses against a card issuer. n139 Failure to invoke the billing procedures does not preclude a consumer from asserting these other protections. n140 It also does not preclude them from raising a billing error as a defense in a collection action. n141 Unfortunately, creditors have wrongfully asserted in a number of cases that cardholders are barred from raising any disputes if they do not follow the billing procedures by sending a written notice within 60 days. This argument is not supported by the provisions of TILA and Regulation Z, n142 and so far the courts have consistently rejected it. n143

Creditors have also argued that the lack of a billing error notice waives a consumer's rights under other provisions of TILA and even under state or common law. n144 In a cluster of cases brought in Connecticut superior courts, a major credit card issuer even used the failure to send a billing error notice to affirmatively pursue collection lawsuits, arguing that the lack of a billing error notice barred the cardholder from disputing the amount due. The courts in cursory opinions have accepted this argument even when the cardholder has disputed the amount due. n145 In these cases, the cardholders did not argue that failure to raise a billing error dispute only affects TILA rights and not the ability to contest charges in a collection action or that § 1643(b) of TILA places the burden of proof on the creditor to show that the use of the card was authorized. It appears that credit card issuers commonly allege in their collection actions that the cardholder has not sent a FCBA notice as a means to show that the amount owed is not disputed; n146 this tactic of course ignores the possibility of disputes raised under other provisions of TILA and other laws or even that the debt was not incurred by the consumer who was sued.

Consumers are not required to have a good faith belief that they actually do not owe the disputed amount in order to invoke FCBA's billing error procedures. n147

Another source of similar rights which applies to some open and closed end mortgage transactions is the RESPA. This statute requires servicers of "federally-related" mortgage loans to respond promptly to written requests from borrowers that allege an error in the account or seek information. n148 RESPA's coverage is broader than that of TIL's billing error provisions in that it is not restricted to open-end credit, although it only applies to federally-related mortgages. RESPA requires the servicer to acknowledge receipt of the borrower's inquiry within twenty days, as opposed to the thirty days allowed by the FCBA, n149 but is otherwise quite similar to the TIL billing error procedures. RESPA provides a private cause of action for actual damages and for statutory damages if there is a pattern or practice of violations. n150

The regulation defines billing errors as certain practices found on a customer's periodic statement. n151 These include:

> 1) An extension of credit that was not made, n152 or a credit extension which was not made in the amount reflected on the statement; n153 This can include an allegation that the creditor charged the consumer for a transaction for which the consumer is not liable, because the debt was owed by another person;

2) An unauthorized extension of credit, i.e., an extension of credit to someone without actual, implied or apparent authority to use the credit card or account, even if the cardholder received benefit from the unauthorized use; n154

3) An extension of credit that is not properly identified under the specific rules for identification of transactions;

4) An extension of credit for property or services that was not accepted by the consumer or the consumer's designee. Whether acceptance has occurred is a matter of state law, and will, in most states, depend on application of UCC principles; n155

5) An extension of credit for property or services not delivered to the consumer or the consumer's designee as agreed. n156 This provision includes nondelivery, late delivery, delivery to the wrong place, delivery of the wrong quantity, delivery of property or services different from that agreed upon, and the consumer's refusal to accept delivery because the goods did not comply with the contract, n157 but it does not include a dispute that relates to the quality of property or services that the consumer has accepted; n158

6) Failure to include a payment or other credit to the account;

7) Computational or accounting error in the credit related portion of the statement; n159

8) An extension of credit for which the consumer requests additional clarification or documentation; n160 and

9) Failure to send the periodic statement to the consumer's last known address, if the creditor had received the address, in writing, at least 20 days before the end of the billing cycle for the periodic statement. n161

A billing error can also consist of billing someone who was issued a credit card but had not requested it, in violation of the TIL prohibition against unsolicited issuance. n162

The consumer is entitled to actual and statutory damages under section 1640(a) for any violation of the Fair Credit Billing Act ("FCBA"). n163

Whether the improper assessment of a finance charge can be a billing error is the subject of some dispute. While such an error could conceivably fit into one or more billing error categories, the Fifth Circuit and other courts have taken a narrow view in a series of cases brought by consumers who used the services of a debt settlement company called Debt Relief Services Marketing (DSRM). n164 DSRM advised consumers to send billing error disputes challenging the assessment of finance charges during the history of the account based on the issuer's alleged failure to give proper TIL disclosures. Most of the courts in these cases have held that such challenges were not proper billing error disputes. n165 These courts believed that the challenges did not fit in the category of requests for "additional clarification including documentary evidence thereof" because such requests only apply to "extensions of credit," and finance charges are not extensions of credit. n166 In addition, some of these courts rejected the argument that the improper assessment of finance charges was a "computation error," because the courts believe this argument merely restated the "additional clarification" claim they had rejected. n167

[b] Notice of Billing Error

The consumer's billing error rights are triggered by the consumer sending a notice of billing error in a timely and proper fashion. n168 The consumer's billing error notice must be received by the creditor no later than 60 days after the creditor first transmitted the first periodic statement that reflects the billing error. n169 If the error is a failure to send a statement, the sixty-day period runs from the time when the creditor should have transmitted the periodic statement. n170

The billing error notice must be in writing n171 and must include sufficient information to enable the creditor to identify the cardholder's name and account number. n172

In order to state a claim for violation of the billing error procedures, a consumer may need to plead compliance with these notice requirements. n173 Note that the Commentary, effective July 2010, clarifies that the consumer need not send a notice to the merchant in a billing error dispute involving purchases not accepted or not delivered as agreed. n173.1 There are certain procedures a creditor must follow after receiving the billing error notice. n174 In brief, the creditor must acknowledge receipt of the billing error notice within 30 days of receiving it, unless it has already investigated and resolved the billing error during that time period. n175

The creditor must conduct a "reasonable" investigation. n176 Effective July 2010, the Commentary provides additional guidance as to what constitutes a reasonable investigation with respect to investigation of unauthorized use. n176.1 This Commentary is similar to that in Regulation Z § 226.12(b) as to what constitutes a reasonable investigation, which is discussed at § 5A.10.6, infra. Reasonable steps for investigating other types of billing errors will depend on the type of error. n176.2 If the creditor determines that the billing error occurred, it must correct the error and credit the account with any disputed amount and related charges (including charges imposed for the error resolution process, documentation, etc.), and mail or deliver a correction notice to the consumer. n177

If the creditor determines that there was no billing error, or a different error than that complained of, the creditor must: mail or deliver to the consumer an explanation of its reasons for concluding that the billing error asserted by the consumer was wrong in whole or in part; furnish copies of any documentary evidence if the consumer so requests; and correct any different error discovered and credit the account with any disputed amount and related charges (including charges imposed for the error resolution process, documentation, etc.). n178 An ambiguous and cursory statement that does not set forth a legitimate justification for rejecting the dispute is insufficient. n179 Nor does an explanation meet the statutory standard if it fails to mention the liability theory that the creditor argues at trial. n180 If the creditor thus determines that the consumer owes all or part of the disputed amount, the creditor must follow specified actions. n181 Even if the creditor's resolution does not favor the consumer, a consumer's invocation of the billing error procedures may present a defense in a collection action. For example, many card issuers will bring collection actions using a common law theory of "account stated" or "action on an account," which requires that the parties agree that a debt is valid and due. n182 The fact that a consumer had raised a billing error claim may mean the creditor cannot meet the elements of an account stated claim, because the consumer does not agree that the debt is valid. n183 TIL's protection against unauthorized use may also prevent the creditor from bringing an account stated claim in some states, as the TILA specifically imposes on the creditor the burden of showing that the use of the card was authorized. n184

Once the consumer has properly notified the card issuer of a billing error, neither the creditor nor its agent may report the disputed amount as delinquent to any person, including a credit reporting agency or a collection agency. Nor may the creditor directly or indirectly threaten to make such a report. n185 Even if the resolution does not favor the consumer, if the consumer notifies the creditor in writing that the consumer still disputes the charge, the creditor must report the amount as disputed if it reports it as delinquent. n186

The creditor must investigate and resolve the billing error dispute within two complete billing cycles (or ninety days, if that is sooner). n187 If the billing error notice is received mid-cycle, as is probably the most common situation, the creditor has the rest of that cycle, and then two complete cycles, to take the proper steps--unless that time frame is longer than ninety days. n188 The creditor must meet the timeframes for investigation even if the billing error qualifies for another type of investigation under TILA, such as an investigation for unauthorized use or pursuant to a cardholder's right to assert claims and defenses against the merchant. n189

The creditor may not impose a charge related to any aspect of the error-resolution procedure. n190 In general, FCBA and Regulation Z require the creditor to suspend all collection activity over the disputed amount during the billing error resolution period. n191 The card issuer may pursue normal collection activities on any undisputed and delinquent amounts, including presumably reporting the amount as delinquent to a credit bureau. n192 Liability for an FCBA violation occurs when the creditor fails to meet any of the procedural requirements of the FCBA or violates any of its prohibitions. n193 The FCBA does not mandate that the creditor achieve any particular resolution, only that it undertake proper steps to investigate and follow its procedural requirements. Effective July 2010, the Commentary clarifies that the creditor must make a substantive final resolution within the time limits for investigation. If a creditor fails to complete the investigation and fails to provide a written explanation as to why there was no error or a different error, or otherwise fails to comply with the error resolution procedures required in such cases, the creditor generally must credit the disputed amount and related finance or other charges to the consumer's account. n193.1

[7] Additional Open-End TILA Requirements

Additional TILA requirements relating to open-end credit include the following.

[a] Prompt Crediting of Consumer Payments

TIL requires that open-end creditors n194 and credit card issuers n194.1 promptly credit payments made by the consumer.

Prior to passage of the Credit CARD Act, creditors often used an early hour cut-off time, such as 9:00 or 10:00 a.m., for crediting payments received that day. n194.2 In that case, if a consumer's payment had been received on the payment due date it would have been considered late, because in all likelihood the U.S. Postal Service would not have delivered the mail so early in the morning. The Credit CARD Act amends TILA's prompt posting requirement to specifically set 5:00 p.m. as the payment cut-off time. n195

[b] Treatment of Credit Balances

For credit cards, charge cards, and open-end accounts, creditors must appropriately identify on periodic statements any credit balance, n196 and refund the amount within seven business days n197 from receipt of a written request from the consumer.

[c] Record Retention Requirements

The open-end creditor and card issuer must keep evidence of compliance with the disclosure and procedural requirements of TIL for two years. n198

[d] Prohibition on Terminating Accounts

Congress amended TILA in April 2005 to prohibit a creditor from terminating an open-end account prior to its expiration date solely because the consumer has not incurred a finance charge. n199 Despite the fact it is a substantive prohibition, it is actually not a part of FCBA, but included in the open-end credit disclosures at section 1637. Thus, it applies to all open-end accounts, not just credit cards. This provision is effective within twelve months after the date of publication of final regulations by the FRB. n200 The FRB has issued proposed rules as part of its revision of the open-end provisions of Regulation Z, but they are not yet final. n201

[e] Restrictions on Issuing a Credit Card

A credit card issuer may not issue a credit card, except in response to an explicit oral or written request or application for the card from a consumer or business (or when renewing a card which the customer has already accepted). n202

The card issuer may solicit the consumer's request or application, by mail, telephone, print or broadcast advertising, and this is commonly done. n203

In 1999, in response to the widespread marketing of cards that from the outset had both credit and non-credit features, the FRB tightened the Commentary provisions that define when a creditor can issue an unsolicited non-credit device that has potential credit features. n204 The changes were made effective March 31, 1999, although compliance was optional until March 31, 2000. The new Commentary allows a creditor to add a credit feature to an unsolicited non-credit card at the consumer's specific request. However, an unsolicited non-credit card can be issued only if the issuer does not propose to connect the card to any credit plan. If the issuer includes promotional materials about credit features when it sends the cards to the customer, this demonstrates that the issuer proposes to connect the card to a credit plan and makes unsolicited issuance unlawful. n205 Likewise, mailing the TIL credit disclosures or an account agreement along with the card shows that the creditor is proposing to connect it to a credit plan. n206 The fact that the consumer has to contact the issuer and activate the card to access the credit makes no difference--it is still unlawful to send the consumer the card. n207

While the pre-1999 version of the Commentary n208 was less clear about the legality of unsolicited issuance of a non-credit card that had credit features that could be activated by a telephone call, a court still interpreted the statute and regulations to prohibit this practice. n209

A creditor can issue unsolicited personal identification numbers ("PINs"), such as those used for automated tellers or point-of-sale terminals, to existing cardholders as long as the PINs cannot be used alone to obtain credit, but must be used in conjunction with the card. n210

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, a creditor is permitted to use lists of consumers provided by credit bureaus to extend "firm offers of credit" to these consumers. n211 However, if a "firm offer of credit" is accompanied by the credit card itself, it will violate TILA's prohibition against unsolicited issuance, despite being permissible under the FCRA. n212

The restriction on unsolicited issuance of a credit card may be helpful in credit card collection cases as well, especially involving identity theft victims. n213

TILA statutory damages, as well as actual damages, are available for violations of the prohibition against issuance of unsolicited credit cards. n214 If an unsolicited issuance claim is brought affirmatively, it is subject to TILA's one-year statute of limitations. n215

Initial disclosures need not be provided to the customer until just before the first transaction by which the customer becomes obligated on the plan, and sometimes not even then. n216 Once the consumer has received the disclosures, he or she may reject the plan or accept it by use.

[f] Credit Card Advertising

A commercial message in any medium which promotes consumer credit transactions, including a mail solicitation of credit card applications, is regulated to some extent for open-end and credit card credit. n217 The advertising must be truthful, in that if it mentions specific credit terms, it may state only those terms that the creditor actually plans to make available. n218

If the advertiser expressly or impliedly mentions any specific terms of a credit plan, even if they are not required disclosures (such as seller's points, or the minimum periodic payment), n219 or mentions terms required to be disclosed under Regulation Z section 226.6, such as finance charge, periodic rate, annual percentage rate or security interest, n220 the advertiser must also include information as to:

a) Any minimum, fixed, transaction, activity or similar charge which may be imposed;

b) If periodic rates are to be applied, those periodic rates expressed as annual percentage rates;

c) Any membership or participation fee; and

d) A variable-rate feature, if one exists.

For additional details, see the Commentary. n221 No direct civil liability attaches to violation of these provisions, although a violation arguably would violate a state deceptive practices statute. n222

[g] Creditor Cannot Offset Consumer's Deposit Account to Pay Credit Card Account

TIL provides that the card issuer cannot take funds out of a deposit account to satisfy a credit card debt except under an automatic payment plan previously authorized by the cardholder in writing. n223 Even then, the card issuer must not take out the automatic payments with respect to a disputed amount upon timely notice. n224

The Regulation allows the card issuer to take a consensual security interest in the deposit account, and to enforce that interest. n225 But the security interest must be affirmatively agreed to by the consumer (presumably boilerplate language would not suffice), be disclosed in the initial disclosures, and be taken and enforced only through procedures equally available to other creditors. n226 The Commentary specifies that the security interest may not be the functional equivalent of the right of offset. n227 The card issuer can also accept payments on a credit card indebtedness under an automatic payment plan. n228

[h] Customer's Liability for Unauthorized Use of a Credit Card

TIL precludes customer (business or consumer) liability for unauthorized use of a credit card, except in narrowly defined circumstances. n229 "Unauthorized use" means the use of the credit card by a person other than the cardholder who does not have actual, implied or apparent authority for such use, and from which the cardholder receives no benefit. n230 Effective July 2010, the Commentary clarifies that a cardholder can be liable for unauthorized use by a person who has permission to use a card, even if the person is not officially listed as an authorized user. If the cardholder gives a credit card and grants authority to make transactions to a person, the cardholder is liable for transactions by that person even if the person exceeds the authority given, unless and until the cardholder has notified the creditor that use of the card by that person is no longer authorized. n230.1

Unfortunately, the definition of unauthorized use leaves the cardholder open to merchant fraud. If the cardholder receives some benefit from the use of the card, even if the use is not authorized, it is not an "unauthorized use" under the definition. n231

Whether a person has actual, implied or apparent authority to use the card is a question of state law. n232 Effective July 2010, the Commentary clarifies that implied or apparent authority includes instances in which the cardholder gives a credit card and grants authority to make transactions to a person, unless and until the cardholder has notified the creditor that use of the card by that person is no longer authorized. n232.1 This appears to support the view that it is the actions of the principal, not the supposed agent, that create implied or apparent authority. The card issuer has the burden of proving that the user had actual, implied or apparent authority and that the conditions for imposing liability on the cardholder have been met. n233 Apparent authority must be proved through actions of the principal, not those of the supposed agent. n234 An authorized user is different than a joint account holder, who is fully liable on the account. A recent Fourth Circuit case has revealed, however, that some credit card issuers may not be able to distinguish between who is a joint account holder versus solely an authorized user. In Johnson v. MBNA, n235 the card issuer attempted to hold the plaintiff liable for an account after the primary card holder filed for bankruptcy. The plaintiff claimed she was an authorized user and the card issuer was unable to show that the plaintiff was a joint account holder, because it did not have the original account agreement, having destroyed it pursuant to its document retention policy. In many states authorized users may not be liable on a credit card account.

The cardholder or any other person may give the card issuer notice of the loss, theft, or possible unauthorized use of the credit card. n236 The notice can be oral or in writing. n237 Once notice is given, the customer's liability for unauthorized use is frozen at the amount of unauthorized use, or $50, whichever is less. n238

The card issuer must prove several elements to impose the $50 maximum liability on the cardholder for unauthorized use. The creditor must prove that the card was accepted by the cardholder. Thus, if a consumer did not apply for or request a credit card, the use of the card by another should be unauthorized use by definition. n239 This definition of unauthorized use may be important for consumers who are victims of identity theft, which is the fastest-growing crime in this country. n240 An "accepted credit card" includes a renewal or substitute for an accepted card; n241 however, a creditor cannot issue a renewal or substitute card if the account has been closed. n242 The creditor must also prove that the card issuer has provided a means to identify the cardholder or authorized user. n243

The card issuer must also give "adequate notice" to the customer, before the unauthorized use occurs, n244 of the maximum potential liability and how to notify the card issuer of the loss or theft of the card.

[8] Cardholder's Claims and Defenses

For a card issuer to be subject to the consumer's claims and defenses against a merchant, the credit card must have been used to purchase goods or services. The consumer can assert the claims or defenses whether the card was physically presented in the course of the transaction or not. n245 The credit card must have been used directly to purchase the goods or services.

A check guarantee card does not operate as a credit card for the purpose of this section. Nor does a debit card when used as a debit card. If the debit card also has credit card features and is used as a credit card, the protections of this section apply. n246

There are three conditions which must be met before a consumer who has used a credit card can assert claims or defenses as to the merchant against the card issuer. n247 The cardholder must have made a good faith attempt to resolve the matter with the merchant. Whether this has been done is a question of fact. No particular procedures are mandated. n248 Second, the amount of credit involved in the disputed transaction must be more than $50. n249 Third, the transaction must have occurred in the same state as the cardholder's current address or within 100 miles from that address. n250 The location of a transaction is a matter of state law. There are some exceptions to these conditions. n251

A consumer invokes her rights to assert claims or defenses under TILA by withholding payment or as a defense in a collection action by the creditor. There is no independent right of action for this provision, so the consumer generally must wait for the creditor to bring an enforcement action for the consumer to assert these rights in litigation. n252 However, a consumer should be able to bring an action for actual and statutory damages under section 1640(a) if the creditor violates Regulation Z provisions concerning cardholder claims or defenses, such as the prohibitions against adverse credit reporting regarding withheld payments. n253 The unauthorized use protections can be used defensively as well. TILA provides that in an action to collect a credit card debt, the creditor bears the burden of showing that the use of the credit card was authorized. n254 And while an affirmative claim under the unauthorized use provisions would be subject to TILA's one-year statute of limitations, n255 a defensive use could be raised after the one year. The fact that TILA imposes on the creditor the burden of showing that the use was authorized might even arguably preclude the use of an "account stated" cause of action in credit card collection actions. n256

[9] Home Equity Lines of Credit (HELCs)

[a] Introduction and Definitions

In 1988, Congress passed the Home Equity Loan Consumer Protection Act, n257 amending TILA to give consumers important new information about home equity lines of credit ("HELCs") at an earlier stage in the application process than current open-end disclosure rules require. The Act also provides important new substantive consumer protection requirements on HELCs. The 1989 rules promulgated by the FRB to carry out the provisions of the 1988 Act n258 apply to any agreement to open a HELC plan or any application to open a HELC made after November 7, 1989. n259

The HELC rules apply to open-end credit plans secured by the consumer's "principal dwelling." Unlike the definition of "principal dwelling" for purposes of rescission under TIL, n260 the HELC rules will apply to the consumer's second or vacation home, as well as to primary residences. n261 If the creditor has a security interest in a consumer's dwelling which contains a "spreader" clause (also known as a "dragnet" or cross-collateralization clause) securing future loans, the HELC disclosures, in general, apply if any open-end plan is subsequently opened. n262

Sample HELC disclosures and one set of HELC model disclosure clauses are included in Appendix G of the Regulation. n263 As with other model forms, proper use of the HELC model disclosure clauses will generally place a creditor in compliance with TILA. n264

Below is a summary of the additional rules applicable to HELCs.

First, in addition to complying with all of the other provisions for advertising open-end credit, n265 creditors must also comply with requirements for advertising HELCs. n266 Generally, the advertising requirements are "triggered" by any reference in a home equity advertisement to the payment terms of the HELC (including the length of the plan, any reference to how the minimum payments are determined, and the timing of such payments) or by any reference to finance charges, APRs, or other charges (i.e., terms required to be disclosed under section 226.6(a) and 226.6(b) of the Regulation). n267 While TILA creates no liability on the part of creditors for violating credit advertising rules, there may be state law remedies, and TIL statutory and actual damages may be available if the advertising violation is repeated on an application or solicitation.

The "trigger" then requires the creditor to clearly and conspicuously set forth:

a) Fees. Any loan fee that is a percentage of the plan's credit limit (e.g., "points") as well as an estimate of other fees that may be imposed for opening the plan. That estimate may be stated as a single dollar amount or a reasonable range. n268

b) APR. Any periodic rate used to compute the finance charge expressed as an APR, n269 although the APR disclosed under HELC rules does not include any costs other than interest.

c) Maximum APR. The highest APR which may be imposed in a variable-rate plan. n270

One of the most common abuses in advertising HELCs had been the use of "teaser rates" or discounted initial rates. That is, creditors would often advertise very low rates for HELCs without also clearly disclosing that the HELCs were variable-rate plans and that the discounted teaser rates would soon be replaced by substantially higher rates based on the index and margin of the plan. Now if a creditor states a "teaser rate," it must also state the period of time that rate will be in effect until the non-discounted rate is imposed. n271 In addition, the creditor must state a "reasonably current" APR, with equal prominence to the teaser rate, that would have otherwise been in effect using the current index and margin. n272

The Act and the Regulation also prohibit misleading statements about deductibility. n273 The bankruptcy reform legislation enacted in April 2005 amended this provision to require additional disclosures at the time of application regarding tax deductibility. n274 In cases in which an extension of credit from the HELC exceeds the fair market value of the dwelling, the creditor must tell the consumer that the interest on that portion of the credit extension which exceeds the fair market value of the home is not tax-deductible for federal income tax purposes. n275 Similarly, the Act and Regulation prohibit the use of the term "free money" or other similarly misleading terms. n276

Finally, a HELC advertisement may not refer to a minimum periodic payment without also disclosing, if applicable, that the plan contains a "balloon payment" (generally, a very large payment at the end of the term of a HELC). n277

A balloon payment is any repayment option under which--

> (1) the account holder is required to repay the entire amount of outstanding balance as of a specified date or at the end of a specified period of time, as determined in accordance with the terms of the agreement pursuant to which such credit is extended, and
>
> (2) the aggregate amount of the minimum periodic payments required would not fully amortize such outstanding balance by such date or at the end of such period.

If making only the minimum payments in an open-end HELC plan will result in a balloon payment, any ad mentioning the minimum payment must disclose that a balloon payment "will" (not "may") result. n278

[b] Substantive Limitations

There are also some important substantive limitations on HELCs which apply to assignees and holders, as well as the original creditors. These include the following:

[i] Indices for Variable-Rate HELCs

The Act and Regulation prohibit variable-rate HELCs unless the controlling index is both publicly available and not under the control of the creditor. n279

[ii] Early Termination of HELCs n280

With the exception of the three circumstances described below, creditors may not terminate a HELC and accelerate payment of the outstanding balance before the scheduled expiration of the HELC plan.

[A] Fraud

A creditor may terminate the plan if there has been fraud or material misrepresentation by the consumer in connection with the plan. n281

[B] Default

A creditor may also terminate the plan and accelerate the balance if the consumer has failed to meet the repayment terms of the agreement. n282

[C] Security Endangered

A creditor may terminate the plan based on any action or inaction by the consumer that adversely affects the creditor's security of the HELC plan, or any right of the creditor in such security. n283

[iii] Unilateral Change in Terms

With the exception of the circumstances described below, a creditor may not unilaterally change the terms of a HELC plan, including increasing any fees or imposing any new fees, after the account has been opened. n284

[A] Events Provided for in the Contract

A creditor may implement changes set forth in the contract that are contemplated on the occurrence of an event, as long as the triggering event and the resulting change are stated with specificity. n285

However, a creditor may not include a general or "boilerplate" provision in its contract stating that it reserves the right to change the fees imposed by the plan or other terms of the plan. n286

[B] Change Index and Margin

In a variable-rate HELC, a creditor may change the index and margin used under the plan if the original index becomes unavailable, as long as historical fluctuations in the two indices were substantially similar and the new index and margin will produce a "substantially similar" new APR. n287

[C] Changes Made by Written Agreement

Creditors may change the terms after a plan is opened if the consumer expressly agrees in writing to the change at that time. n288 However, the subsequent agreement may not violate the other provisions of the Regulation.

[D] Beneficial Changes

After the plan has been entered into, creditors may make changes that "unequivocally benefit" the consumer for the remainder of the plan. n289

[E] Insignificant Changes

The Act allows unilateral changes in "insignificant terms," while the Regulation permits "insignificant changes" to terms. n290

[F] Temporary Suspensions of Credit and Reductions of Credit Limit

The circumstances under which a creditor may temporarily prohibit additional extensions of credit or reduce the credit are:

- Decline in appraised value n291
- Material change in consumer's circumstances n292
- Default of material obligations n293
- Governmental action on rate n294

- Governmental action on security interest n295
- Unsafe/unsound practice. n296

The Federal Reserve Board in the Commentary would also allow the creditor to suspend credit privileges if a consumer requested it. If the HELC plan had two cosigners, each having the ability to borrow on the plan, the agreement may permit any of the consumers to request suspension of future advances. A creditor could require all cosigners to request reinstatement. n297

[iv] Refund of Fees

A creditor must refund all fees paid by the consumer to anyone in connection with an application for a HELC if any disclosed term changes (other than one resulting from a variable-rate index change) before the plan is opened, and if, as a result of the change, the consumer decides not to enter into the plan. n298

The Federal Reserve Board in the Commentary would also allow the creditor to suspend credit privileges if a consumer requested it. If the HELC plan had two cosigners, each having the ability to borrow on the plan, the agreement may permit any of the consumers to request suspension of future advances. A creditor could require all cosigners to request reinstatement. n299

[v] Nonrefundable Fees

Neither the creditor nor any other person may impose a nonrefundable fee in connection with an application for a HELC until three business days after the disclosure and required brochure have been received by the consumer. n300

[c] Early Disclosure Rules

There are also early disclosure rules required by the Act. The rules for the form of the required disclosures are different from TIL requirements for closed-end and most other open-end credit transactions in that the disclosures provided at the time of a HELC application need not be in a form the consumer may keep. n301 However, the disclosures still must be clear and conspicuous and in writing. n302

Most of the early disclosures must be grouped together and "segregated" from unrelated information provided to the consumer in connection with the application. n303 The brochure and the variable-rate information may be provided either separately from or with the other disclosures. However, under the Regulation, greater flexibility is permitted in complying with the segregation standard than currently exists for closed-end credit.

The information required to be given to consumers when they receive an application for home equity plans is listed in the Regulation and must be provided only to the extent applicable. n304 Both creditors and third parties providing an application must also furnish consumers with a brochure prepared by the Board describing home equity plans, or a suitable substitute. n305

These requirements apply not only to creditors, but, in some limited circumstances, the disclosure duties also apply to third parties who provide application to consumers. Third parties are required to provide disclosures only if they have the disclosures for a creditor's particular home equity plan in their possession. n306

Regulation Z requires in all cases that third parties give the HELC brochure at the time an application is given to the consumer. n307 The information may be provided electronically if the consumer goes through the consent and confirmation-of-consent procedures mandated by the federal E-Sign statute. n308

[d] Additional Disclosures

In addition to these early disclosures given with a HELC application, the creditor must also provide additional disclosures at the time of opening a HELC plan. n309 Generally, the HELC creditor must give all of the open-end credit initial disclosures n310 and repeat, as applicable, a few of the early HELC disclosures. All of the disclosures must be given before the first transaction is made under the HELC plan. n311

[e] Additional Advertising Rules for HELCs

Creditors offering HELCs must comply with all the provisions for advertising open-end credit. n312 In addition, there are special requirements for advertising HELCs. n313 The Board issued new rules on July 30, 2008 significantly amending the special HELC advertising requirements. n314 These rules are effective October 1, 2009. n315

Generally, the advertising requirements are "triggered" by any reference in an HELC advertisement to payment terms (including the length of the plan, any reference to how the minimum payments are determined, and the timing of such payments) or by any reference to finance charges, APRs, or other charges (i.e., terms required to be disclosed under in the initial account opening disclosures under sections 226.6(a) and 226.6(b) of Regulation Z). n316

The "trigger" then requires the creditor to set forth:

a) Fees. Any loan fee that is a percentage of the plan's credit limit (e.g., "points") as well as an estimate of other fees that may be imposed for opening the plan. That estimate may be stated as a single dollar amount or a reasonable range. n317

b) APR. Any periodic rate used to compute the finance charge expressed as an APR. n318

c) Maximum APR. The highest APR which may be imposed in a variable-rate plan. n319

In addition to these affirmative disclosures, TILA and Regulation Z prohibit the use of the term "free money" or other similarly misleading terms to refer to a HELC plan. n320

The HELC advertising disclosures must be made in a clear and conspicuous manner. The Board issued new requirements for Internet, television, and oral HELC advertisements, which are effective October 1, 2009.

[a] Internet advertisements. To be clear and conspicuous, the required disclosures must not be obscured by graphical displays, shading, coloration, or other devices. n321

[b] Television advertisements. To be clear and conspicuous, the required disclosures must not be obscured by graphical displays, shading, coloration, or other devices. n322 In addition, the disclosures must be displayed in a manner that allows the consumer to read them. n323

[c] Oral advertisements. To be clear and conspicuous, the required disclosures must be made at a speed and volume sufficient for a consumer to hear and comprehend them. n324

Other provisions of the new rules include special disclosures for "teaser rates," n325 prohibitions on misleading statements about tax deductibility, n326, and new balloon payment disclosures. n327

[f] HELC Remedies

In adopting the Home Equity Loan Consumer Protection Act specifically as part of TILA, n328 Congress has necessarily provided consumers with the remedies available under the civil liability section of TILA n329 for any violation other than advertising. n330 The civil liability provision applies to any failure "to comply with any requirement imposed under this chapter," n331 and HELC is undeniably a component of the chapter.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingState Regulation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1631 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Reg. Z §§ 226.5-226.16.

(n3)Footnote 3. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.5-226.16.

(n4)Footnote 4. National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 11.8 (4th ed. 2009).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1663; Reg. Z § 226.16.

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a); Reg. Z § 226.6.

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c); Reg. Z § 226.5a.

(n8)Footnote 7.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b); Reg. Z § 226.7.

(n9)Footnote 7.2. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(d) and (i); Reg. Z § 226.9.

(n10)Footnote 8. Pub. L. No. 106-229, 114 Stat. 464 (June 30, 2000) (codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 7001 et seq.).

(n11)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1). See § 1.05[2][a] supra for further discussion of the requirements of this new statute.

(n12)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1666-1666j.

(n13)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1645; Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(8), (17).

(n14)Footnote 12. Reg. Z § 226.13.

(n15)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(i).

(n16)Footnote 14. See § 1.03[1][a] supra.

(n17)Footnote 15. See § 1.03[1][b] supra.

(n18)Footnote 16. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(20). See, e.g., In re Woods, 66 B.R. 984 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) (failure to meet any of the criteria of § 226.2(a)(20)). Some businesses have an "open account" arrangement with consumers, where consumers are permitted to obtain services and the charges are placed on the consumer's "account." If these businesses have a contractual arrangement permitting the consumers to defer payment, these "open accounts" may be considered open-end credit under TILA. See, e.g., Sticka v. Geller (In re Stratton), 299 B.R. 616 (Bankr. D. Or. 2003) (client executed promissory note for attorney fees incurred in her divorce that could be adjusted to cover additional amounts of indebtedness for ongoing services; note created an open-end credit account; account not covered by TILA because no evidence attorney extended more than 25 of these accounts, thus not meeting the test for "creditor" under TILA).

The FRB's January 2009 changes to Regulation Z revised this Commentary to clarify that the creditor may "occasionally or routinely" verify credit information but such verification may not be done as a condition of granting a consumer's request for a particular advance under the plan. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-5 (effective July 1, 2010).

In addition, the January 2009 changes added a provision permitting creditors to verify collateral values in connection with a particular advance or to comply with federal, state, or other law. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-6 (effective July 1, 2010). This provision was added to specifically address compliance with Regulation U, which requires a bank in connection with margin lending (i.e., lending against stocks) to not advance funds in excess of certain collateral value. 74 Fed. Reg. 5,244, 5,261 (Jan. 29, 2009) .

(n19)Footnote 17. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-1.

(n20)Footnote 18. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-2.

(n21)Footnote 19. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-3, as amended, 63 Fed. Reg. at 16,674 . The reference to "infrequently purchased products or services" is a reference to the legislative history of the 1980 Truth in Lending Simplification Act of 1980 amendment.

(n22)Footnote 20. 63 Fed. Reg. at 16,670 .

(n23)Footnote 21. See Speakman v. Household Retail Servs., Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11153 (N.D. Ill. July 9, 1999) ; Rendler v. Corus Bank, N.A., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14246 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 3, 1998) .

(n24)Footnote 22. 144 F.3d 1056 (7th Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963, 119 S. Ct. 406, 142 L. Ed. 2d 329 (1998) . For a thorough discussion of this case, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.2.3.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n25)Footnote 23. 144 F.3d. at 1059 .

(n26)Footnote 24. See also Myers v. First Tennessee Bank, N.A., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4177 (M.D. Ala. March 30, 2000) (nationwide class certified; satellite dish case).

(n27)Footnote 25. Carlisle v. Whirlpool Fin. Nat'l Bank, Civil Action No. CV 97-068 (Circuit Court, Hale County, Ala., Post Trial Order, Aug. 25, 1999).

(n28)Footnote 26. For a discussion of claims that can be used to attack overreaching creditor behavior, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses Ch. 11, 12 (3d ed. 2005 and supp.).

(n29)Footnote 27. Merriam v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp. (In re Merriam), 333 B.R. 22 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n30)Footnote 28. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-6.

(n31)Footnote 29. See Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)-3, as amended by 63 Fed. Reg at 16,674 (Apr. 6, 1998) ; see also Supplemental Information, 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669, 16,670 (Apr. 6, 1998) . For additional analysis of "spurious" open-end credit, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.2.3 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n32)Footnote 30. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20)-6.

(n33)Footnote 31. Reg. Z § 226.5b(5)(i).

(n34)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i).

(n35)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f) also defines a creditor as any person who honors a credit card and offers a discount which is a finance charge. Since a discount of any size is seldom a finance charge, assuming that the creditor complies with the requirements of 15 U.S.C. § 1666f(b), the alternate definition is virtually nugatory.

(n36)Footnote 34. "Credit card" is statutorily defined as "any card, plate, coupon book or other credit device existing for the purpose of obtaining money, property, labor or services on credit." 15 U.S.C. § 1602(k). The Regulation also requires that the card be one "that may be used from time to time" to obtain credit. Reg. Z § 22.62(a)(15). The Regulation now defines "charge card" as "a credit card on an account for which no periodic rate is used to compute a finance charge." Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(15).

(n37)Footnote 35. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(iii).

(n38)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(iii). See Robb v. Capital Acquisitions & Mgmt. Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22689 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2002) . But see Canaday v. Household Retail Servs., Inc., 119 F. Supp. 2d 1258 (M.D. Ala. 2000) (when plaintiff alleged that open-end credit account was spurious, court would not hold card issuer liable as creditor because obligation not initially payable to it), aff'd without op., 268 F.3d 1067 (11th Cir. 2001) .

(n39)Footnote 37. 352 F.3d 1118 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n40)Footnote 38. Robb v. Capital Acquisitions & Management Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22689 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 21, 2002) .

(n41)Footnote 39. Neff v. Capital Acquisitions & Management Co., 352 F.3d 1118 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n42)Footnote 40. In addition to Neff, see, e.g., Carbajal v. Capital One, F.S.B., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20065 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 10, 2003) .

(n43)Footnote 41. See, e.g., §§ 5.9.4 (unauthorized use protections) and 5.9.6 (cardholder's claims and defenses).

(n44)Footnote 42. Reg. Z § 226.5(b)(2).

(n45)Footnote 43. Reg. Z § 226.2(17)(iv); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(17)(iv)-1.

(n46)Footnote 44. Reg. Z § 226.2(17)(ii). See Swift v. First USA Bank, 1999 Dist. LEXIS 8208 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999) (vendor that provided telecommunications services paid for by the card issuer's credit card, but that did not offer a discount, held not to be a creditor).

(n47)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(m).

(n48)Footnote 46. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(8); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(8)-2.

(n49)Footnote 47. Hess v. Citibank, (South Dakota), N.A., 459 F.3d 837 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n50)Footnote 47.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.3(a)-2, effective July 2010.

(n51)Footnote 47.2. Official Staff Commentary § 226.3(a)-2(ii), effective July 2010.

(n52)Footnote 47.3. Id.

(n53)Footnote 48. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(m).

(n54)Footnote 49. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(11).

(n55)Footnote 50. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(8)-1.

(n56)Footnote 51. Id.

(n57)Footnote 52. Baker v. Citibank, N.A., 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998) (construing "cardholder" in state law in manner consistent with TILA, court held that identity theft victim was "cardholder" because card was issued in her name, even though imposter received card). Cf. People v. Collins, 405 N.W.2d 182 (Mich. App. Ct. 1987) (upholding criminal conviction against identify thief for use of credit card against "cardholder"; victim was "cardholder" despite the fact that she did not request the card and it was not physically issued to her).

(n58)Footnote 53. Monogram Credit Card Bank v. Morris, 2002 WL 31360695 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. May 10, 2002) (identity theft victim could not bring TIL claim against creditor because creditor never issued victim a credit card). Cf. MacDermid v. Discover Fin. Servs., 488 F.3d 721 (6th Cir. 2007) (issuer did not violate TILA by sending disclosures to post office box set up by forger instead of victim's residence; court did not rule on whether victim was "consumer" but held that issuer did not fail to make disclosures by sending to addressed specified on the application); Frazier v. Washington Mut., Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35767 (W.D. Tenn. June 1, 2006) (person whose signature was forged on closed-end loan documents cannot bring TIL claim).

(n59)Footnote 54. Reg. Z § 226.5a(a) and (b). The disclosure requirements for credit card accounts differ from those for charge card accounts. Credit card issuers would have to provide all the applicable disclosures except for the due and payable statement disclosure; see § 1.07[2][j] infra. Charge card issuers would have to provide the applicable disclosures discussed in § 1.07[2][e], [g], [h], and [k] infra.

(n60)Footnote 55. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(1) and n.8.

(n61)Footnote 56. Reg. Z § 226.5a(a)(2)(i). These rules do not apply to home equity plans accessible by a credit or charge card subject to the Home Equity Loan Consumer Protection Act; overdraft lines of credit tied to asset accounts that are accessed by check guarantee or debit cards; or lines of credit accessed by check guarantee or automated teller machine (ATM) cards. Reg. Z § 226.5a(a)(3).

(n62)Footnote 56.1. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(3)(i), 226.5a(a)(2), effective July 2010.

(n63)Footnote 56.2. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(3)(iii), 226.6(b)(1), effective July 2010.

(n64)Footnote 56.3. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(3)(v), 226.9(b)(3), effective July 2010.

(n65)Footnote 56.4. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(3)(vi), 226.9(c)(2)(iii)(B), effective July 2010.

(n66)Footnote 56.5. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(3)(viii), 226.9(g)(3)(ii), effective July 2010.

(n67)Footnote 56.6. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(a)(1)-1.

(n68)Footnote 56.7. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(a)(1)-3, effective July 2010.

(n69)Footnote 56.8. Reg. Z §§ 226.5a(b)(1), 226.6(b)(2)(i), effective July 2010.

(n70)Footnote 56.9. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(2)(vi)(B), effective July 2010.

(n71)Footnote 56.10. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(7), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1304 (2005).

(n72)Footnote 56.11. Reg. Z § 226.5(c)(1), effective July 2010.

(n73)Footnote 56.12. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(a)(2)-6(i).

(n74)Footnote 56.13. Id.

(n75)Footnote 56.14. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(a)(2)-6(ii).

(n76)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(i)(I); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(1).

(n77)Footnote 58. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(21).

(n78)Footnote 59. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(21)-2. Janos v. Wells Fargo Bank N.A., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6758 (D. Ariz. Feb. 14, 2006) . However, these transaction charges must generally be disclosed under other provisions of Regulation Z. § 226.5a.

(n79)Footnote 60. Roberts v. Fleet Bank (R.I.) N.A., 342 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2003) (question of fact whether creditor that advertised a "fixed" APR in solicitation letter, then raised APR pursuant to a change-in-terms provision thirteen months later, violated TILA).

(n80)Footnote 60.1. Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(1).

(n81)Footnote 60.2. Id., effective July 2010.

(n82)Footnote 60.3. Id.

(n83)Footnote 60.4. 5 U.S.C. § 1666i-1(a) (effective Feb. 22, 2010), added by Pub. L. No. 111-24, § 01(b), 123 Stat. 1736 (May 22, 2009).

(n84)Footnote 60.5. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5.8.4.3.2 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.).

(n85)Footnote 61. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(b)(1)-6.

(n86)Footnote 62. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1303 (2005). This provision is effective within twelve months of the legislation's enactment, which was April 20, 2005, or within twelve months after the date of publication of final regulations by the Board, whichever is later. Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1303(b)(2)(2005).

(n87)Footnote 63. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(A)(i).

(n88)Footnote 64. Commonly referred to as the "Schumer box." The teaser-rate disclosure also does not apply to envelopes or other enclosures in which the application or solicitation is mailed. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(B).

(n89)Footnote 65. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(A)(ii) and (iii).

(n90)Footnote 66. Id.

(n91)Footnote 67. Id.

(n92)Footnote 68. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(C)(i).

(n93)Footnote 69. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(C)(ii).

(n94)Footnote 70. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(6)(D)(i).

(n95)Footnote 71. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(i)(II); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(1)(i). Misrepresentations concerning the nature of the index may be an issue. See, e.g., Lum v. Bank of America, 361 F.3d 217, 2004-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74326 (3d Cir. 2004) , cert. denied, 125 S. Ct. 271 (2004) (alleging conspiracy by major banks to fix and inflate "prime rate" that was used as index for many open end products, and that this "prime rate" was not the best rate offered to banks' customers; appeals court upheld dismissal of RICO and Sherman Act claims).

(n96)Footnote 72. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(b)(1)-7. Similar disclosures about penalty rates must be included in the initial disclosures. If the penalty rate is based on an index and an increased margin, the index and margin must be disclosed.

(n97)Footnote 73. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5.4.3.2.4 (6th ed. 2007).

(n98)Footnote 74. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 14.5 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n99)Footnote 75. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(ii)(I), (4)(A)(i); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(2).

(n100)Footnote 76. Rossman v. Fleet Bank (R.I.) N.A., 280 F.3d 384 (3d Cir. 2002) . But see Gaynoe v. First Union Direct Bank, N.A., 571 S.E.2d 24 (N.C. Ct. App. 2002) (use of terms "annual fee" and "annual interest rate" does not contractually create a fixed rate for one year each time the annual fee is paid; plaintiff did not bring a TILA claim).

(n101)Footnote 77. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(ii)(II); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(3).

(n102)Footnote 78. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(ii)(III), (4)(A)(ii); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(4).

(n103)Footnote 79. But see Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(8).

(n104)Footnote 80. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(iii)(I); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(5).

(n105)Footnote 81. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(A)(iv); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(6).

(n106)Footnote 82. Reg. Z § 226.5a(g). See Official Staff Commentary § 226.5a(b)(6)-1. For an explanation of balance computation methodology, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 5.4.3.7 (6th ed. 2007).

(n107)Footnote 83. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(4)(A)(iii); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(7).

(n108)Footnote 84. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(4)(A)(iii); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(7).

(n109)Footnote 85. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(1)(B), (c)(4)(B); Reg. Z § 226.5a(b)(8), (9), (10). Fees for late payments and exceeding a credit limit are not considered finance charges under TILA. The Supreme Court recently affirmed the FRB's considerable discretion to exclude these types of fees from treatment as finance charges under TILA. Household Credit Servs. v. Pfennig, 124 S. Ct. 1741 (2004) . For an analysis of how over-limit fees actually operate, and the unfairness of their imposition, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 11.8 (4th ed. 2009). See id. at § 11.7.2.2.1 for a discussion of the growth in over-limit fee income for credit card issuers.

(n110)Footnote 85.1. Reg. Z § 226.5a(a)(4), effective July 2010.

(n111)Footnote 85.2. Id.

(n112)Footnote 85.3. Id.

(n113)Footnote 86. Reg. Z app. G, G-10(A), G-10(B), G-10(C), G-11, G-12, G-13(A), G-13(B).

(n114)Footnote 87. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b).

(n115)Footnote 88. Reg. Z § 226.5a(c).

(n116)Footnote 89. Reg. Z § 226.5a(c).

(n117)Footnote 90. Reg. Z § 226.5a(d). The Regulation makes alternative disclosures available to telephone solicitations and applications for both credit and charge card issuers. Reg. Z § 226.5a(d)(2). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(2)(B).

(n118)Footnote 91. Reg. Z § 226.5a(d)(1). See 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(2)(A). The Federal Trade Commission's Telemarketing Sales Rule also imposes disclosure requirements and restrictions when consumers are subjected to telephone solicitations for credit cards. 16 C.F.R. § 310. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.9.4.7.4 (6th ed. 2004 and Supp.).

(n119)Footnote 92. Reg. Z § 226.5a(d)(2). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(2)(B).

(n120)Footnote 93. Reg. Z § 226.5a(e). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(3), (c)(4)(c).

(n121)Footnote 94. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(3)(B); Reg. Z § 226.5a(e)(1).

(n122)Footnote 95. Reg. Z § 226.5a(e)(2)(i). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(3)(D).

(n123)Footnote 96. Reg. Z § 226.5a(e)(3). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(c)(3)(C).

(n124)Footnote 97. 15 U.S.C. § 1610(e); Reg. Z § 226.28(d).

(n125)Footnote 98. 15 U.S.C. § 1610(e); Reg. Z § 226.28(d).

(n126)Footnote 99. Where both a creditor and an agent for the creditor exist, each may send a statement which reflects the customer's obligation to that creditor. For example, when an American Express Gold Card is issued through a bank, the customer may have different obligations to each, depending on the use of the card. Each creditor could send a separate initial disclosure statement reflecting only the amounts owed to it. Official Staff Commentary § 226.6-2.

(n127)Footnote 100. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a); Reg. Z § 226.5(b)(1). See, e.g., Wadesboro Rainbow Farm Supply, Inc. v. Lookabill, 357 S.E.2d 373 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) ; Rubino v. Circuit City Stores, 758 N.E.2d 1 (Ill. App. Ct. 2001) (whether the disclosures were given at the proper time is a question of fact). See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.2.7 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n128)Footnote 101. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(b)(1)-3.

(n129)Footnote 102. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(b)(1)-2.

(n130)Footnote 103. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(1). Whether the consumer was given disclosures in a form the consumer could keep prior to consummation has been a contentious issue in closed-ended transactions, especially in the automobile finance context. This is generally an issue of fact. Rubino v. Circuit City, 324 Ill. App. 3d 931, 259 Ill. Dec. 156, 758 N.E.2d 1 (1st Dist. 2001) , appeal denied, 198 Ill. 2d 608, 262 Ill. Dec. 624, 766 N.E.2d 244 (2002) (trial court entitled to find that consumer received credit card agreement in a form he could keep, given that application form signed by consumer stated that he had received a copy of the agreement).

(n131)Footnote 104. The exceptions for the initial disclosure are that a finance charge imposed at the time of the transaction need not be disclosed in writing and that the notice as to manner of payment need not be disclosed in a form that the consumer can keep. Reg. Z. § 226.5(a)(1), nn.7 and 8.

(n132)Footnote 105. U.C.C. § 1-201(10).

(n133)Footnote 106. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(a)(1)-1.

(n134)Footnote 107. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(1).

(n135)Footnote 108. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(1). Note, however, that if the credit card solicitation occurs by telephone and the seller represents that there is a high likelihood of credit card approval, the FTC's Telemarketing Sales Rule may prohibit advance fees altogether. 16 C.F.R. § 310.4(a)(4), as amended by Fed. Reg. 4,580 (Jan. 29, 2003). See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.9.4.7.4 (2003 Supp.).

(n136)Footnote 109. Reg. Z § 226.9(d). See Reg. Z § 226.5 n.7.

(n137)Footnote 110. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(a)(2)-1.

(n138)Footnote 111. Reg. Z § 226.5(a)(2). See also Greisz v. Household Bank, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (N.D. Ill. 1998) , aff'd on other grounds, 176 F.3d 1012 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n139)Footnote 112. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a).

(n140)Footnote 113. Reg. Z § 226.6(a)(2) n.12; Official Staff Commentary § 226.6(a)(2).

(n141)Footnote 114. Reg. Z § 226.6(a)(2).

(n142)Footnote 115. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(21). Janos v. Wells Fargo Bank N.A., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6758 (D. Ariz. Feb. 14, 2006) . However, these transaction charges will generally be required to be disclosed as either finance charges under Regulation Z. § 226.6(a)(4) or "other charges" under Regulation Z. § 226.6(b), depending on their nature.

(n143)Footnote 116. Reg. Z § 226.6(a)(2) n.12.

(n144)Footnote 117. Official Staff Commentary § 226.6(a)(2)-6.

(n145)Footnote 118. 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1000 (S.D.N.Y. Jan 24, 2003) , aff'd, 81 Fed. Appx. 368 (2d Cir. 2003) .

(n146)Footnote 119. 279 F. Supp. 2d 286 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) . The court held that the creditor was correct because it had also listed on the TILA disclosure a rate of 5.25% APR as the initial rate. This rate turned out to be the rate calculated using the index on the date of application, not the date of approval for credit. If this reasoning seems confusing, query what an ordinary consumer would be able to understand.

(n147)Footnote 120. Reg. Z § 226.30(b). See 52 Fed. Reg. 43,178 (Nov. 9, 1987) , corrected at 52 Fed. Reg. 45,611 (Dec. 1, 1987) . This disclosure requirement applies to all open-end credit plans allowing for interest rate changes during the term of the obligation. It does not apply to open-end credit plans in which the interest rate may not change during the term of the obligation.

(n148)Footnote 121. Official Staff Commentary § 226.6(a)(2)-10.

(n149)Footnote 122. Where both a creditor and an agent for the creditor exist, each may send a statement which reflects the customer's obligation to that creditor. For example, when an American Express Gold Card is issued through a bank, the customer may have different obligations to each, depending on the use of the card. Each creditor could send a separate periodic statement reflecting only the amounts owed to it. Official Staff Commentary § 226.7-2.

(n150)Footnote 123. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b); Reg. Z § 226.7.

(n151)Footnote 124. Under Regulation Z, issuers are not required to include genuine late charges and charges imposed for exceeding a credit limit, or "over-limit" fees, in the calculation of the finance charge. Reg. Z § 226.4(c)(2). The Sixth Circuit held that over-limit fees must be disclosed as finance charges when the card issuer permits the consumer to exceed the credit limit. Pfennig v. Household Credit Servs., 295 F.3d 522 (6th Cir. 2002) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 18716 (6th Cir. Sept. 3, 2002) . The Supreme Court, however, reversed the Sixth Circuit ruling, holding that the statute is ambiguous regarding whether over-limit fees are incident to the extension of credit under 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a) and that the Board's regulatory provision uniformly excluding over-limit fees from the finance charge is reasonable and must be followed. Household Credit Servs. v. Pfennig, 124 S. Ct. 1741 (2004) .

(n152)Footnote 125. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(iii); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)(iii)-1.

(n153)Footnote 126. Reg. Z § 226.5(b)(2).

(n154)Footnote 127. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(b)(2)(ii)-3. A revised version of this Commentary, published at 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) , clarifies that the consumer must initiate the request for this option. The date for mandatory compliance with the interim rules that were published along with this change to the Commentary was suspended by 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439 (Aug. 8, 2001) , but that announcement made no mention of the Commentary changes.

(n155)Footnote 128. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(B), (C). See Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(b)(2)(ii)-3, as published at 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) , mandatory date for compliance with interim rules suspended by 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439 (Aug. 8, 2001) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 4.2.9.3, 5.3.6 (6th ed. 2007).

(n156)Footnote 129. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b); Reg. Z § 226.7. If an account is deemed uncollectible, or delinquency or collection proceedings have begun, or if the debtor has filed bankruptcy, no periodic statement need be sent. Reg. Z § 226.5(b)(2). However, a creditor that has erroneously reported as overdue any account that was paid in full has created a new account and must send periodic statements. Saunders v. Ameritrust of Cincinnati, 587 F. Supp. 896 (D. Ohio 1984) . See Schell v. First Union Direct Bank, N.A., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 613 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 19, 2000) (bank did not have to send periodic statement to cardholder who had zero balance, even though he had built up a positive balance in a special customer-retention program that would have resulted in a rebate of paid finance charges).

(n157)Footnote 130. Reg. Z § 226.7; McIntyre v. Household Bank, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25629 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 21, 2004) (noting that Reg. Z merely requires the periodic statement to be "furnished" rather than received).

(n158)Footnote 131. McIntyre v. Household Bank, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25629 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 21, 2004) .

(n159)Footnote 132. Reg. Z § 226.9(a).

(n160)Footnote 133. Reg. Z § 226.9(c).

(n161)Footnote 134. 15 U.S.C. 1637(d); Reg. Z § 226.9(e).

(n162)Footnote 135. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(g); Reg. Z § 226.9(f).

(n163)Footnote 136. Reg. Z § 226.9(f)(1). See 15 U.S.C. § 1637(g)(1).

(n164)Footnote 137. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(g)(4).

(n165)Footnote 137.1. Reg. Z § 226.6(b)(2)(xv), effective July 2010.

(n166)Footnote 137.2. Reg. Z § 226.6(b)(1)(ii), effective July 2010.

(n167)Footnote 138. 15 U.S.C. § 1643; Reg. Z § 226.12(b). A consumer can raise unauthorized use as a billing error, but is not required to do so. Some state statutes provide analogous billing error dispute rights. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1747/-/1747.95 (Song-Beverly Credit Card Act). Cf. Davis v. Md. Bank, N.A., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26468 (N.D. Cal. June 18, 2002) (noting that because FCBA provides similar protections to California's Song-Beverly Credit Card Act, it would not be contrary to California public policy to enforce Delaware choice of law provision.

(n168)Footnote 139. 15 U.S.C. § 1666i; Reg. Z § 226.12(c).

(n169)Footnote 140. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(3)-3 (unauthorized use protections do not require invoking billing error provisions); Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(c)-1 (cardholders' preservation of claims and defenses operates independently of the billing error procedures). See People's Bank v. Scarpetti, 1998 Conn. Super. LEXIS 351 (Feb. 5, 1998) (consumer allowed to raise unauthorized use as defense despite not having given notice and invoked billing error procedures); Crestar Bank v. Cheevers, 744 A.2d 1043 (D.C. App. 2000) (consumer could raise unauthorized use as defense to collection suit without having sent billing error notice); Citibank (South Dakota) v. Mincks, 135 S.W.3d 545 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n170)Footnote 141. See Citibank (South Dakota) v. Mincks, 135 S.W.3d 545 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) (only penalty for failing to invoke billing error procedures is loss of protections granted under § 1666; absurd result if failure to invoke billing error procedures forfeited consumer's right to contest validity of debt in collection lawsuit).

(n171)Footnote 142. With respect to unauthorized use, the Commentary specifically states that the protections do not depend upon the cardholder's invoking the billing error procedures. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(3)-3. See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5A.9.3 (2009 supp.).

(n172)Footnote 143. People's Bank v. Scarpetti, 1998 Conn. Super. LEXIS 351 (Feb. 5, 1998) (consumer allowed to raise unauthorized use as defense despite not having given notice and invoked billing error procedures); Crestar Bank v. Cheevers, 744 A.2d 1043 (D.C. App. 2000) ; Citibank (South Dakota) v. Mincks, 135 S.W.3d 545 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n173)Footnote 144. One creditor has argued that failure to send a billing error notice waived the common law defense of payment in a collection action. Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Proctor, 804 N.E.2d 975 (Ohio App. Ct. 2004) . Another creditor reportedly argued that a claim for violation of the TILA requirement of prompt posting of payments at § 1666c is subject to the billing error procedures.

(n174)Footnote 145. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Currea, 2006 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1137 (Conn. Super. Apr. 13, 2006) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Lovell, 2006 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1134 (Conn. Super. Apr. 13, 2006) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Babuscio, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3603 (Conn. Super. Dec. 21, 2005) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Forcinelli, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3584 (Conn. Super. Dec. 21, 2005) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Kilberg, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3585 (Conn. Super. Dec. 21, 2005) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Todd, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3586 (Conn. Super. Dec. 21, 2005) ; Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Gemske, 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3588 (Conn. Super. Dec. 21, 2005) . However, in one of these cases the court granted summary judgment only as to liability and held that the consumer was entitled to a hearing on the issue of damages. Citibank v. Morgan, 2006 Conn. Super. LEXIS 573 (Conn. Super. Feb. 27, 2006) .

(n175)Footnote 146. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A. v. Martin, 807 N.Y.S.2d 284 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2005) . This case sets out guidelines for the prima facie case that a creditor or collector must establish when bringing a collection action in New York. While the case is positive in that it rejects attempts by creditors and collectors to seek collection judgments without sufficient documentation, it does seem to accept the statement of "no FCBA dispute filed" as a proper element of a collection action.

(n176)Footnote 147. See Kurz v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 273 F. Supp. 2d 474 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) , subsequent proceeding at 324 F. Supp. 2d 444 (S.D.N.Y 2004) (denying motion for attorney fees). See also Langenfeld v. Chase

Bank USA, N.A., 537 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (N.D. Okla. 2008) ; Raney v. First Nat'l Bank of Neb., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64445 (E.D. Ky. Sept. 8, 2006) . But see Eicken v. USAA Fed. Sav. Bank, 498 F. Supp. 2d 954 (S.D. Tex. 2007) (creditor permitted to show "significant compelling evidence" that cardholder lacked good faith belief that a billing error actually existed; court characterizes this defense as applying to a "very narrow set of circumstances") (Eicken II).

(n177)Footnote 148. 12 U.S.C. § 2605(e).

(n178)Footnote 149. Compare 12 U.S.C. § 2605(e)(1)(A), with Reg. Z § 226.13(c)(1).

(n179)Footnote 150. 12 U.S.C. § 2605(f).

(n180)Footnote 151. Not all billing errors are found on a periodic statement. A billing error has occurred when a creditor reports as delinquent an amount that has been paid in full. Saunders v. Ameritrust of Cincinnati, 587 F. Supp. 896 (D. Ohio 1984) .

(n181)Footnote 152. Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(1).

(n182)Footnote 153. 15 U.S.C. § 1666(b)(1).

(n183)Footnote 154. Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(1). See also Reg. Z § 226.12(b).

(n184)Footnote 155. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(a)(3)-1.

(n185)Footnote 156. 15 U.S.C. § 1666(b)(3); Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(3).

(n186)Footnote 157. 15 U.S.C. § 1666(b)(3); Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(3).

(n187)Footnote 158. 15 U.S.C. § 1666(b)(3); Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(3); Beaumont v. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5276 (S.D.N.Y Mar. 28, 2002) (no billing error when consumer returned products due to dissatisfaction); Greisz v. Household Bank, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (letter complaining only of "unsatisfactory service" did not trigger billing error rights), aff'd on other grounds, 176 F.3d 1012 (7th Cir. 1999) . In Beaumont, the consumer returned products and services approximately one year after purchase, thus presumably precluding him from arguing that he did not accept or he refused delivery of the goods. However, the consumer alleged that the goods and products were not the same as those he had been promised by the merchant. The court failed to consider that this return could fit within the definition of a billing error under Reg. Z § 226.12(a)(3) as a situation in which the merchant delivered goods "different from that agreed upon." Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(a)(3)-1. However, it would appear the consumer also failed to send the billing dispute within the required timeframe. The consumer can raise a dispute over the quality or service of goods defensively pursuant to TILA's preservation of a cardholder's claims and defenses against a merchant. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5.9.5 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n188)Footnote 159. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(a)(5)-1.

(n189)Footnote 160. Reg. Z § 226.8 ns.16, 17, 20. Under Reg. Z § 226.8, the creditor can escape liability for failure to properly identify each credit transaction by treating an inquiry for clarification or documentation as a billing error. See Burnstein v. Saks Fifth Ave. & Co., 208 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (a request for clarification can constitute a billing error triggering creditor's obligations for resolution).

(n190)Footnote 161. Reg. Z § 226.13(a)(7).

(n191)Footnote 162. Kennedy v. Victoria's Secret Stores, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19525 (E.D. La. Sept. 28, 2004) . This might be a billing error claim that would be useful for victims of identity theft.

(n192)Footnote 163. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a); see, e.g., Purcell v. Universal Bank, N.A., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7061 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 28, 2003) (actual damages may include damages from denial of subsequent credit application due to negative information submitted to credit reporting agency in violation of the Fair Credit Billing Act [hereinafter FCBA]); Burnstein v. Saks Fifth Ave., 208 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (evaluating an actual damages claim for a FCBA violation), subsequent proceeding at 85 Fed. Appx. 430 (6th Cir. 2003) (appeal mooted by jury finding of fact adverse to plaintiff); Belmont v. Associates Nat'l Bank, 119 F. Supp. 2d 149 (E.D.N.Y. 2000) (imposing statutory damages). Statutory damages are calculated as double the finance charge, but amendments to the statute have made it unclear whether there are a floor and a cap on statutory damages, and, if so, in what amounts. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.6.2.2 (6th ed. 2007).

(n193)Footnote 164. Esquibel v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., 276 Fed. Appx. 393 (5th Cir. Tex. 2008) ; Langenfeld v. Chase Bank USA, N.A., 537 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (N.D. Okla. 2008) ; Cunningham v. Bank One, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1189 (W.D. Wash. 2007) .

(n194)Footnote 165. Esquibel v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., 276 Fed. Appx. 393 (5th Cir. Tex. 2008) ; Langenfeld v. Chase Bank USA, N.A., 537 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (N.D. Okla. 2008) ; Cunningham v. Bank One, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1189 (W.D. Wash. 2007) . But see Gengo v. Target Nat'l Bank, 513 F. Supp. 2d 842 (S.D. Tex. 2007) ; Raney v. First Nat'l Bank of Neb., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64445 (E.D. Ky. Sept. 8, 2006) ; Eicken v. USAA Fed. Sav. Bank, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38843 (S.D. Tex. June 12, 2006) (Eicken I).

(n195)Footnote 166. Esquibel v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., 276 Fed. Appx. 393 (5th Cir. Tex. 2008) ; Langenfeld v. Chase Bank USA, N.A., 537 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (N.D. Okla. 2008) ; Cunningham v. Bank One, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1189 (W.D. Wash. 2007) .

(n196)Footnote 167. Esquibel v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., 276 Fed. Appx. 393 (5th Cir. Tex. 2008) ; Langenfeld v. Chase Bank USA, N.A., 537 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (N.D. Okla. 2008) .

(n197)Footnote 168. Reg. Z § 226.13(b)(1). See Plutchok v. European Am. Bank, 143 Misc. 2d 149, 540 N.Y.S.2d 135 (Dist. Ct. 1989) ; see Dawkins v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 109 F.3d 241 (5th Cir. 1997) ; Greisz v. Household Bank, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (N.D. Ill 1998) .

(n198)Footnote 169. Reg. Z § 226.13(b)(1).

(n199)Footnote 170. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(b)(1)-1. The Commentary seems unduly restrictive, given that the failure to provide a periodic statement means that a consumer will not have received any notice that a billing error has occurred and thus may not be in a position to discover the error within 60 days. However, the Commentary also provides that as soon as a creditor does provide a statement, the consumer has an additional 60 days to assert any billing errors on that statement. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(b)(1)-1. Cf. Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Proctor, 156 Ohio App. 3d 60, 2004 Ohio 623, 804 N.E.2d 975 (Ohio Ct. App. Ct.2004) (consumer's allegation that he never received periodic statements created genuine issue of fact whether consumer waived FCBA rights by failing to send billing error notice within 60 days of disputed charges).

(n200)Footnote 171. See, e.g., Davis v. Md. Bank, N.A., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26468 (N.D. Cal. June 18, 2002) (plaintiff's telephone call to dispute charges insufficient to preserve billing error claim). Payne v. Diner's Club Int'l, 696 F. Supp. 1153 (S.D. Ohio 1988) ; Bank One of Columbus, NA v. Henslee, 1988 Ohio App. LEXIS 1203 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 29, 1988) (no written notice). But see Saunders v. Ameritrust of Cincinnati, 587 F. Supp. 896 (D. Ohio 1984) . An erroneous report of an outstanding balance was a new account created by the creditor. Since the consumer did not know that the creditor had created the account, did not receive periodic statements, and did not expect periodic statements because the amount had been paid in full, the consumer did not have to provide written notice to trigger the billing error provisions.

(n201)Footnote 172. Reg. Z § 226.13(b)(2).

(n202)Footnote 173. Turk v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8862 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 20, 2001) (insufficient for cardholders to plead that they sent "timely billing inquiries" to creditor; cardholders required to plead that they met all of notice requirements for billing error procedures).

(n203)Footnote 173.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(a)(3)-3 (effective July 2010).

(n204)Footnote 174. Reg. Z § 226.13(c)(1).

(n205)Footnote 175. Reg. Z § 226.13(c)(1). See General Elec. Capital Fin., Inc. v. Bank Leumi Trust Co., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 485 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 19, 1999) (consumer's second notice of billing error, to which creditor did not respond, was not "substantially the same" as first notice, so consumer had FCBA claim).

(n206)Footnote 176. Reg. Z § 226.13(f).

(n207)Footnote 176.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(f)-3.i, effective July 2010.

(n208)Footnote 176.2. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(f)-3, effective July 2010.

(n209)Footnote 177. Reg. Z § 226.13(e).

(n210)Footnote 178. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(f). 15 U.S.C. § 1666(a)(3)(b)(ii); Reg. Z § 226.13(f).

(n211)Footnote 179. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Owens, 951 S.W.2d 915 (Tex. App. Corpus Christi 1997) (interprets parallel provisions regarding unauthorized use).

(n212)Footnote 180. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Owens, 951 S.W.2d 915 (Tex. App. Corpus Christi 1997) .

(n213)Footnote 181. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(g).

(n214)Footnote 182. For a discussion of account stated claims, see National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection, § 14.5.2 (5th ed. 2004).

(n215)Footnote 183. Cf. Discover Bank v. Walker, 787 N.Y.S.2d 677 (N.Y. Sup. App. 2004) (consumer defeated creditor's motion for summary judgment on account stated claim by notifying card issuer of unauthorized use).

(n216)Footnote 184. Cf. Bank of New York (Del.) v. Santarelli, 128 Misc. 2d 1003, 491 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. County Ct. 1985) (in account stated action, TILA required card issuer to prove each charge on the account was authorized by the borrower).

(n217)Footnote 185. 15 U.S.C. § 1666a. This would also violate the consumer's rights under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act § 701, 15 U.S.C. § 1691(e); see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 3.4.4 (4th ed. 2005).

(n218)Footnote 186. 15 U.S.C. § 1666a(b); see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5.8.8.2 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n219)Footnote 187. Reg. Z § 226.13(c)(2).

(n220)Footnote 188. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(c)(2)-1.

(n221)Footnote 189. Interim Award on Liability Phase of Arbitration Hearing, Hassibi v. Bank One Trust, Clearinghouse 55,634 (Feb. 3, 2006) (arbitration award), reported at www.nclc.org/unreportedcases.

(n222)Footnote 190. Of course, it could not assess such a charge unless it had been disclosed in the initial disclosure statement or change of terms notice. Official Staff Commentary § 226.6(b)(2)-1. An erroneous charge would trigger billing error procedures.

(n223)Footnote 191. Reg. Z § 226.13(d)(1); Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(d)(1)-1. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5A.9.6.4 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.), for further discussion of prohibitions of collection activities during a billing error dispute.

(n224)Footnote 192. Regulation Z § 226.13(d)(1), n.30.

(n225)Footnote 193. Vrlaku v. Citibank, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43080 (D.N.J. Sep. 23, 2005) (insufficient to allege that creditor's response to a billing error dispute was "improper"; plaintiff must specify how creditor failed to meet its obligations under the FCBA, such as by failing to acknowledge dispute or conduct investigation).

(n226)Footnote 193.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.13(c)(2)-2, effective July 2010.

(n227)Footnote 194. 15 U.S.C. § 1666c; Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17).

(n228)Footnote 194.1. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17).

(n229)Footnote 194.2. See, e.g., Lawrence v. Household Bank, 343 F. Supp. 2d 1101 (M.D. Ala. 2004) (9:00 a.m. cut-off for payment posting); Landreneau v. Fleet Fin. Group, 197 F. Supp. 2d 551 (M.D. La. 2002) (9:00 a.m. cut-off for payment posting); Bond v. Fleet Bank, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22324 (D.R.I. Oct. 10, 2002) ; Schwartz v. Citibank (S.D.), Nat'l Ass'n (C.D. Cal. May 5, 2000), available at www.consumerlaw.org/unreported (class action settlement notice in case challenging 10:00 a.m. cut-off); Marsh v. First U.S.A. Bank, N.A., C.N. 3-99CV0783-T (N.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 1999). Cf. Johnson v. Capital One Bank, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 (Cal. Ct. App. 2004) (breach of contract claim for failing to promptly post payments; summary judgment granted for defendant on basis that Virginia state law limits defendant's liability to TILA for conduct that could be subject of TIL claim).

(n230)Footnote 195. 15 U.S.C. § 1666c(a) (effective Feb. 22, 2010), as amended by Pub. L. No. 111-24, § 104(1), 123 Stat. 1741 (May 22, 2009).

(n231)Footnote 196. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.7(a)-1, 226.7(i)-1.

(n232)Footnote 197. 15 U.S.C. § 1666d; Reg. Z § 226.11. See also Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(6), Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(6). A creditor is open when personnel are available to make loan distributions, open new accounts, and handle credit transaction inquiries. It is not open for purposes of this provision when it has its windows open only for limited purposes, such as deposits, withdrawals, bill paying or related services.

Oral requests are not sufficient to trigger the creditor's responsibility to refund credit balances. See Fatahi v. Fleet Bank (R.I.) Nation Ass'n, 2002 Mass. Super. LEXIS 240 (Mass. Super. Ct. Feb. 19, 2002) (creditor did not violate TILA when it refused consumer's requests for refund of credit balance, because consumer failed to establish that requests were in writing).

(n233)Footnote 198. Reg. Z § 226.25.

(n234)Footnote 199. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(h), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1306 (2005).

(n235)Footnote 200. Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1306(b)(2) (2005).

(n236)Footnote 201. 72 Fed. Reg. 32,948, 32,977 /-/32,978, 33,014 (June 14, 2007).

(n237)Footnote 202. 15 U.S.C. § 1642; Reg. Z § 226.12(a). Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(2)-3; see In re DiRienzo, 254 B.R. 334, 341 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2000) (bank that was subsidiary of retailer could issue new card when accounts were assigned to it). The Commentary imposes a "one-for-one rule": in general, a creditor may not issue more than one credit card as a renewal or substitute for an accepted card. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(2)-5. A creditor may, however, replace an accepted combined debit/credit card with a credit card and a separate debit card. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(2)-6(i).

(n238)Footnote 203. An example of a prohibited solicitation would be "I'm calling from 'Money Center Bank' to inform you that we are sending you our Mastercard."

(n239)Footnote 204. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(1)-7, published at 46 Fed. Reg. 16,614 (Apr. 6, 1999)
.

(n240)Footnote 205. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(1)-7(ii).

(n241)Footnote 206. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(1)-7(ii).

(n242)Footnote 207. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(1)-7(ii). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(15)-2, which was revised at the same time as § 226.12(a)(1)-7 to add as an example of a credit card "a card or device that can be activated upon receipt to access credit, even if the card has a substantive use other than credit, such as a purchase-price discount card." The Commentary underscores the point by adding that "[s]uch a card or device is a credit card notwithstanding the fact that the recipient must first contact the card issuer to activate the credit feature."

(n243)Footnote 208. The pre-1999 version of the Commentary provided:

> "7. Issuance of non-credit cards. The issuance of an unsolicited device that is not, but may become, a credit card, is not prohibited provided:
>
> - The device has some substantive purpose other than obtaining credit, such as access to non-credit services offered by the issuer;
> - It cannot be used as a credit card when issued; and
> - A credit capability will be added only on the recipient's request."

For example, the card issuer could send a check guarantee card on an unsolicited basis, but could not add a credit feature to that card without the consumer's specific request. The re-encoding of a debit card or other existing card that had no credit privileges when issued would be appropriate after the consumer had specifically requested a card with credit privileges. Similarly, the card issuer may add a credit feature, for example, by reprogramming the issuer's computer program or automated teller machines, or by a similar program adjustment.

(n244)Footnote 209. Swift v. First USA Bank, 1999 U.S. Dist LEXIS 8208 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999) (ruling on motion to dismiss).

(n245)Footnote 210. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(1)-8.

(n246)Footnote 211. 15 U.S.C. § 7.3.4 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.); see National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 5.3.8 (5th ed. 2002 and Supp.).

(n247)Footnote 212. Munoz v. Seventh Ave., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13715 (N.D. Ill. July 14, 2004) ("firm offer of credit" accompanied by form preprinted with account number constituted "credit card" that was issued unsolicited in violation of TILA).

(n248)Footnote 213. Many debt buyers do not have paper documentation of the accounts they buy, only an electronic list of debtors. Thus, they may not have documentation that a borrower actually requested a credit card. For more on credit card collection abuses and debt buyers, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 11.7.2.3.8 (3d ed. 2005).

(n249)Footnote 214. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a). The prohibition against unsolicited issuance is contained in Part B of TILA (which § 1640 refers to as "this part"). TILA's restrictions on statutory damages liability apply only to certain disclosures referred to in §§ 1637 and 1638, not to § 1642's prohibition against unsolicited issuance of credit cards.

(n250)Footnote 215. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e). See Borg v. Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., 247 Fed. App'x 627 (6th Cir. 2007) (card was "issued" at a discrete point in time when the account was opened, and "issuance" did not encompass the entire time the card was active).

(n251)Footnote 216. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5(b)(1)-1.

(n252)Footnote 217. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1661-1663. Reg. Z § 226.16; Official Staff Commentary § 226.16. The definition of an advertisement can be found at Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(2) and Official Staff Commentary § 226.2 (a)(2), as amended by 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669 (Apr. 6, 1998) .

(n253)Footnote 218. The definition of "advertisement" can be found at Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(2) and Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(2), as amended by 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669 (Apr. 6, 1998) .

(n254)Footnote 219. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(a)-2.

(n255)Footnote 220. Reg. Z § 226.16(b); Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(b).

(n256)Footnote 221. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16.

(n257)Footnote 222. See Smeyres v. General Motors Corp., 820 F.2d 782 (6th Cir. 1987) .

(n258)Footnote 223. 15 U.S.C. § 1666h.

(n259)Footnote 224. 15 U.S.C. § 1666h; Reg. Z § 226.13(d)(1).

(n260)Footnote 225. Reg. Z § 226.12(d)(2).

(n261)Footnote 226. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(d)(2)-1.

(n262)Footnote 227. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(d)(2)-1. See generally In re Clark, 161 B.R. 290 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 1993) (prohibiting offset of credit union shares against credit card account).

(n263)Footnote 228. Reg. Z § 226.12(d)(3).

(n264)Footnote 229. 15 U.S.C. § 1643.

(n265)Footnote 230. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(o).

(n266)Footnote 230.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(1)(ii)-3, effective July 2010. Prior case law held the same. Minskoff v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 98 F.3d 703 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Towers World Airways Inc. v. PHH Aviation Sys. Inc., 933 F.2d 174 (2d Cir. 1991) ; Stieger v. Chevy Chase Sav. Bank, 666 A.2d 479 (D.C. App. Ct. 1995) .

(n267)Footnote 231. 15 U.S.C. § 1643; Reg. Z n.22. See Draiman v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 892 F. Supp. 1096 (N.D. Ill. 1995) . See Citibank (South Dakota), N.A. v. Gifesman, 63 Conn. App. 188, 773 A.2d 993 (2001) (cardholder who received a $25 per month stipend for permitting a third party to be a secondary user on his account could not claim unauthorized use, even if the unauthorized use may have been committed by someone other than the secondary user, because the cardholder benefited from the use).

(n268)Footnote 232. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(1)-1. See, e.g., First Nat'l Bank v. Fulk, 57 Ohio App. 3d 44, 566 N.E.2d 1270 (1989) (former wife was "authorized user" under state law); Minskoff v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co, 98 F.3d 703 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n269)Footnote 232.1. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(1)(ii)-3, effective July 2010.

(n270)Footnote 233. 15 U.S.C. § 1643(b). See Minskoff v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 98 F.3d 703 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Citibank (S.D.) v. Gifesman, 773 A.2d 993 (Conn. App. Ct. 2001) ; Crestar Bank v. Cheevers, 744 A.2d 1043 (D.C. App. 2000) .

(n271)Footnote 234. Blaisdell Lumber Co. v. Horton, 242 N.J. Super. 98, 575 A.2d 1386 (App. Div. 1990) (when a former live-in companion stole his girlfriend's card, which contained only her name on the card, there was no apparent authority for a merchant to let the boyfriend sign his name using her card); Elder-Beerman v. Nagucki, 561 N.E.2d 553 (Ohio Ct. App. 1988) (apparent authority must be established by act of the principal, not the agent; creditor's evidence that unauthorized user was cardholder's girlfriend, whom he had helped with utility bills and allowed occasionally to use a different credit card did not show she had actual or apparent authority to use the one in question). One court of appeals has held that a failure to review and object to unauthorized charges does not create apparent authority, because permitting liability in such instances would conflict with TILA's intent in placing the risk of fraud on card issuers, not cardholders. DBI Architects v. American Express Travel-Related Services Co., 388 F.3d 886 (D.C. Cir. 2004) . The D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals drew support for its conclusion from the fact that a cardholder is not required to contest charges using the billing error procedures of FCBA in order to be protected against unauthorized use. The court ultimately concluded that the cardholder did indeed create apparent authority, not because the cardholder failed to review the statements, but because the cardholder continued to send corporate checks paying off the balances for almost a year. Carrier v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 383 F. Supp. 2d 334 (D. Conn.) , aff'd, 180 Fed. Appx. 296 (2d Cir. 2006) (unpublished summary order) (cardholder created apparent authority in office manager to incur fraudulent charges by failing to review bills and paying them over a two-year period without contesting charges); DBI Architects v. Am. Express Travel-Related Servs. Co., 388 F.3d 886 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (failure to review statements alone does not create apparent authority because permitting liability in such instances would conflict with TILA's intent in placing the risk of fraud on card issuers, not cardholders).

(n272)Footnote 235. 357 F.3d 426 (4th Cir. 2004) . The plaintiff brought her case under the Fair Credit Reporting Act for the card issuer's failure to properly investigate her assertion that she was merely an authorized user. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 10.2.2.1 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.). See also Cleveland Trust Co. v. Snyder, 9 Ohio Op. 3d 329, 380 N.E.2d 354 (Ohio Ct. App. 1978) (wife of cardholder was not liable where she was issued "related card" on husband's account but never signed agreement to be responsible for account); Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stover, 513 N.E.2d 361 (Ohio Mun. Ct. 1987) (following Cleveland Trust v. Snyder).

Even if authorized users are not generally liable under state law, spouses of cardholders may be liable for credit card debt in community property states or under state necessaries doctrines. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection § 14.6 (5th ed. 2004 and Supp.) for a discussion of the doctrine of necessaries. However, a creditor would be required to show that the debts were incurred for "necessaries." See Fifth Third Bank/Visa v. Gilbert, 478 N.E.2d 1324 (Ohio Mun. 1984) (father not liable for his minor daughter's unauthorized charges under necessaries doctrine, because none of purchases were for "necessaries").

(n273)Footnote 236. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(3)-2.

(n274)Footnote 237. Reg. Z § 226.12(b)(3).

(n275)Footnote 238. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(1)-2.

(n276)Footnote 239. See North Am. Capital Corp. v. O'Hara, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1078 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. Aug. 24, 2001) (father was not liable for charges on a credit card that was sent unsolicited to him, which his son with a similar name had used without authorization). If the consumer did not request the card, the card issuer is also in violation of the restrictions against issuing an unsolicited credit card. See § 1.07[7][d] supra.

(n277)Footnote 240. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.). If an imposter requests a credit card in the consumer's name, the use of the card should be considered unauthorized since the consumer did not request the card.

(n278)Footnote 241. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(l); Reg. Z § 226.12(b)(2)(i) and n.21.

(n279)Footnote 242. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(a)(2)-1 ("renewal" does not encompass the opening of a new account after a previous account was closed).

(n280)Footnote 243. 15 U.S.C. § 1643(a)(1)(F); Reg. Z § 226.12(b)(2)(iii); Crestar Bank v. Cheevers, 744 A.2d 1043 (D.C. App. 2000) (consumer not liable for $50 because creditor did not prove it provided means of identification).

(n281)Footnote 244. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(b)(2)(ii)-1.

(n282)Footnote 245. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(c)(1)-1. The Commentary mentions mail and telephone orders specifically, but Internet purchases would also fall under the general rule it enunciates.

(n283)Footnote 246. Official Staff Commentary § 226.12(c)(1)-1.

(n284)Footnote 247. Reg. Z § 226.12(c)(3)(ii).

(n285)Footnote 248. In Montgomery Ward v. Horgan, 448 A.2d 15 (Vt. 1982) , the buyer had called and written notes on payment stubs. This was found to be a reasonable effort, even though the creditor claimed it had no record of the complaints.

(n286)Footnote 249. Reg. Z § 226.12(c)(3)(ii).

(n287)Footnote 250. Reg. Z § 226.12(c)(3)(ii).

(n288)Footnote 251. Reg. Z § 226.12 n.26.

(n289)Footnote 252. Beaumont v. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5276 (S.D.N.Y Mar. 28, 2002) .

(n290)Footnote 253. Reg. Z § 226.12(c)(1) and (2). See Moynihan v. Providian Fin. Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13732 (D. Md. July 14, 2003) (suggesting that cardholder may bring affirmative claim for violation of section 1666i if claim involves violation of a TILA provision).

(n291)Footnote 254. 15 U.S.C. § 1643(b).

(n292)Footnote 255. One Beacon Ins. Co. v. Null, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13513 (E.D. Pa. July 19, 2004) .

(n293)Footnote 256. Cf. Bank of New York (Del.) v. Santarelli, 128 Misc. 2d 1003, 491 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. County Ct. 1985) (in account stated action, TILA required card issuer to prove each charge on the account was authorized by the borrower). For a discussion of account stated claims in credit card collection cases, see also National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 11.7.2.3.8 (3d ed. 2005).

(n294)Footnote 257. Pub. L. No. 100-709, 102 Stat. 4725 (Nov. 23, 1988), codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1637a.

(n295)Footnote 258. 54 Fed. Reg. 24,671 (June 9, 1989) . Many of these comments were incorporated into the Official Staff Commentary, see 55 Fed. Reg. 13,103 (Apr. 9, 1990) .

(n296)Footnote 259. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b-3.

(n297)Footnote 260. See Reg. Z § 226.15.

(n298)Footnote 261. 15 U.S.C. § 1637a(d). Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b-1.

(n299)Footnote 262. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b-6.

(n300)Footnote 263. Reg. Z app. G, G-14A, G-14B, G-14C, G-15.

(n301)Footnote 264. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b).

(n302)Footnote 265. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1663; Reg. Z § 226.16; Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(d)-5.

(n303)Footnote 266. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b; Reg. Z § 226.16(d).

(n304)Footnote 267. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(b)-7 for examples of triggering terms. "No annual fee," "no points," "we waive closing costs" are triggering terms for home equity lines of credit [hereinafter HELC] plans. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(d)-1. A note of caution about APRs: APRs required to be disclosed by the HELC rules do not include any costs other than interest. Reg. Z § 226.14(b). By comparison, closed-end APRs reflect costs other than interest, such as "points," which are ordinarily included in the finance charge, as well as interest.

(n305)Footnote 268. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(i).

(n306)Footnote 269. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(2); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(ii).

(n307)Footnote 270. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(3); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(iii).

(n308)Footnote 271. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(d)(3); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(2).

(n309)Footnote 272. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(d)(1), (2); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(2).

(n310)Footnote 273. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(b); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(4).

(n311)Footnote 274. 15 U.S.C. § 1637a(a)(13), amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1302(a)(1) (2005). This provision is effective within twelve months of the legislation's enactment, which was April 20, 2005, or within twelve months after the date of publication of final regulations by the Board, whichever is later. Pub. L. No. 109-8, tit. 13, § 1302(c)(2)(2005).

(n312)Footnote 275. 15 U.S.C. § 1637a(a)(13).

(n313)Footnote 276. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(c); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(5).

(n314)Footnote 277. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(e); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(3).

(n315)Footnote 278. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(d)-7.

(n316)Footnote 279. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(a); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(1)(i), (ii).

(n317)Footnote 280. Note that rules for early termination of reverse mortgages are found at Pub. L. No. 103-325, 108 Stat. 2160, codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1648. See 15 U.S.C. § 1647(b); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(2). See Flagstar Bank v. Charter One Bank, 2005 Mich. App. LEXIS 2094 (Mich. Ct. App. Aug. 25, 2005) (lender may not unilaterally terminate HELC except in limited circumstances as set forth in TILA).

(n318)Footnote 281. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(b)(1); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(2)(i).

(n319)Footnote 282. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(b)(2); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(2)(ii).

(n320)Footnote 283. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(b)(3); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(2)(iii).

(n321)Footnote 284. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(1); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3). The prohibition on changing terms applies to all terms of the contract. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)-1. The FRB, however, states that a creditor may pass on the consumer increases in fees and charges imposed by third parties over which the creditor has no control, i.e., increases in taxes, property insurance, and certain credit insurance. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)-2.

(n322)Footnote 285. Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3)(i).

(n323)Footnote 286. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)(i)-2.

(n324)Footnote 287. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3)(ii); Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)(ii)-1.

(n325)Footnote 288. Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3)(iii).

(n326)Footnote 289. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(F), (4)(A); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3)(iv).

(n327)Footnote 290. Compare 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(1), with Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(3)(v).

(n328)Footnote 291. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(A).

(n329)Footnote 292. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(C); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(B).

(n330)Footnote 293. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(D); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(C).

(n331)Footnote 294. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(E)(i); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(E).

(n332)Footnote 295. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(c)(2)(E)(ii); Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(E).

(n333)Footnote 296. Reg. Z § 226.5b(f)(vi)(F).

(n334)Footnote 297. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)(vi)-5. The problem of only one cosigner desiring a cash advance could arise when a couple is divorcing.

(n335)Footnote 298. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(d); Reg. Z § 226.5b(g).

(n336)Footnote 299. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(f)(3)(vi)-5. The problem of only one cosigner desiring a cash advance could arise when a couple is divorcing.

(n337)Footnote 300. 15 U.S.C. § 1647(e)(1); Reg. Z § 226.5b(h).

(n338)Footnote 301. 15 U.S.C. § 1637A(b)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.5b(a)(1); Official staff Commentary § 226.5b(a)(1)-1.

(n339)Footnote 302. Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(a)(1)-1.

(n340)Footnote 303. 15 U.S.C. § 1637A(b)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.5b(a)(1); Official Staff Commentary § 226.5b(a)(1)-3.

(n341)Footnote 304. Reg. Z § 226.5b(d).

(n342)Footnote 305. 15 U.S.C. § 1637A(e); Reg. Z § 226.5b(e).

(n343)Footnote 306. Reg. Z § 226.5b(c). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637A(c).

(n344)Footnote 307. 15 U.S.C. § 1637A(c)(1)(B); Reg. Z § 226.5b(c).

(n345)Footnote 308. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(B), (C). See the FRB's interim rule, Reg. Z § 226.5b(c)(2), as published at 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001), mandatory compliance date suspended, 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439 (Aug. 8, 2001). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 4.2.9.3, 5.3.6 (6th ed. 2007).

(n346)Footnote 309. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a)(8); Reg. Z § 226.6(c).

(n347)Footnote 310. See § 1.07[2] supra. See also 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a)(8)(A).

(n348)Footnote 311. Reg. Z § 226.5(b).

(n349)Footnote 312. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(d)-7. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1663; Reg. Z § 226.16.

(n350)Footnote 313. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b; Reg. Z § 226.16(d).

(n351)Footnote 314. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522 (July 30, 2008) .

(n352)Footnote 315. Id. at 44,523.

(n353)Footnote 316. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(b)-7 (examples of triggering terms). "No annual fee," "no points," and "we waive closing costs" are triggering terms for HELC plans. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16(d)-1.

(n354)Footnote 317. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(i).

(n355)Footnote 318. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(2); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(ii).

(n356)Footnote 319. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(a)(3); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(1)(iii).

(n357)Footnote 320. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(c); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(5).

(n358)Footnote 321. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16-3; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,605 (July 30, 2008) .

(n359)Footnote 322. Official Staff Commentary § 226.16-4; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,605 (July 30, 2008) .

(n360)Footnote 323. Id.

(n361)Footnote 324. Id.

(n362)Footnote 325. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(d); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(2).

(n363)Footnote 326. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(b)(1); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(4).

(n364)Footnote 327. 15 U.S.C. § 1665b(e); Reg. Z § 226.16(d)(3); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,599 (July 30, 2008) .

(n365)Footnote 328. Pub. L. No. 100-709, § 2A, 102 Stat. 4725 (Nov. 23, 1988). See also Consumers Union v. Federal Reserve Bd., 736 F. Supp. 337 (D.D.C. 1990) „ remanded in part, 938 F.2d 266 (D.C. Cir. 1991) .

(n366)Footnote 329. 15 U.S.C. § 1640.

(n367)Footnote 330. Cf. Smeyres v. General Motors Corp., 820 F.2d 782 (6th Cir. 1987) . For a fuller discussion of liability for violations of the HELC advertising requirements, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 5.11.12 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n368)Footnote 331. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

17 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.08

§ 1.08 Truth in Lending Rescission Rights

[1] Scope of Rescission Rights n1

In addition to being entitled to a disclosure statement prior to consummating a credit transaction, a homeowner has a right under TIL to rescind most transactions for which the home is taken as collateral, other than transactions for the purchase of the home.

TIL rescission rights arise automatically only when the transaction meets all of the following criteria: n2

a) It is a consumer credit transaction, n3

b) In which a nonpurchase lien or security interest is or will be placed, n4

c) On the consumer's principal dwelling.

TIL's threshold requirement that the transaction be extended by a creditor n5 who regularly extends consumer credit applies, too. The definition of "regularly" varies, n6 depending upon the type of security taken, or the type of credit extended. Generally, it means the creditor must extend consumer credit 26 times, or six times if secured by a dwelling, in the previous calendar year or in the current calendar year. n7 For lenders who originate high-cost, HOEP mortgages, n8 the threshold for meeting the "regularly" requirement is lower. See Chapter 2 of this volume.

There are also rescission rights associated with certain open-end credit plans that are secured by the consumer's principal dwelling. These rights generally arise with each of the following occurrences: n9

a) Opening an account;

b) Each credit extension under a plan unless it is in accordance with a previously established credit limit for the plan;

c) Increasing the credit limit;

d) Adding to an existing account a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling; and

e) Increasing the dollar amount of the security interest taken in the dwelling to secure the plan. n10

Note that the credit need not provide the right to rescind at the time of each credit extension or advance made under an existing open-end credit plan secured by the consumer's principal dwelling as long as the credit extended does not exceed the previously established credit limit for the loan. n11

Even if the lender did not expressly incorporate TIL protections into the contract, it may be equitably estopped from denying that the right of rescission applies, though such an argument would be available only in certain factual situations. n12

[2] Transactions Exempt From Rescission

The following transactions are exempt from TIL rescission provisions:

[a] Transactions to Purchase or Construct a Residence Are Exempt

The largest group of non-rescindable credit transactions involving a home are those to finance the construction or purchase of a home or to finance the construction of a primary dwelling on land already owned by the consumer. n13 The purpose of the financing is the key.

[b] Certain Refinancings Are Exempt

The second largest category of non-rescindable credit transactions involving a home are refinancings which meet three criteria: n14

a) There are no new advances; n15

b) The prior credit was secured by the same property; and

c) The new credit is extended by the original creditor. n16

A new creditor consolidating or refinancing any credit, even refinancing a purchase money or construction loan, must comply with the TIL rescission provisions if the consumer's home is taken as collateral. n17

[i] Series of Advances

When a creditor makes a series of advances as part of a closed-end credit transaction, whether the right of rescission applies to each advance depends on the manner in which the creditor has structured the transaction. Sometimes the creditor will treat the series of advances as a single transactions for disclosure purposes. For example, a consumer may enter into a loan for the whole amount necessary for a home improvement job, but the creditor may pay out the proceeds in a series of advances as the work is done. If the creditor gave the consumer the TIL disclosures for the full amount at the outset of the transaction, then the consumer has the right to rescind only then, not at the time of each advance.

On the other hand, a series of advances may be structured as separate loans with separate disclosures. For example, a consumer may give a creditor a mortgage in an amount sufficient to cover not just an initial loan, but also future potential loans. If the terms of the future loans are known at the time the mortgage is signed, the creditor could make all the TIL disclosures then, and the consumer would only have the right to rescind at that time. If, however, the terms of the future loans are imposed later via new loan notes, and the creditor gives or should have given separate TIL disclosures for these later advances, then the right to rescind applies to each advance. n18

[c] State Agency as Creditor

There are no rescission rights for transactions in which a state agency is the creditor. n19 County, municipal, and township creditors do not have the same exemption, n20 and ordinary rescission rules therefore apply to those transactions.

[3] Required Disclosures of Rescission Rights: Who, What, and When

[a] Who Has TIL Rescission Rights?

Any consumer "whose ownership interest is or will be subject to the security" interest has the right to rescind the transaction and to receive the disclosures. n21 As a result, owners of the secured property who are not obligors on the note or other contract are entitled to the TIL rescission notice and an opportunity to rescind the transaction. n22 It must be the principal residence of a person with an ownership interest, however. n23

In contrast to non-rescindable transactions, where required disclosures can be given to only one of multiple consumers, n24 each person having a right to rescind must receive both notice of the right to rescind and the material TIL disclosures. n25 Furthermore, each person must receive two copies of the notice, n26 one to keep and one to use if the option is exercised according to the intent of that provision. n27

If there are two borrowers, but the lender provides only one set of disclosures, the question may arise as to which borrower received the disclosures. This question is irrelevant if both borrowers seek rescission. Since rescission by one borrower is effective as to both, n28 it does not matter which borrower has an extended right to rescind. If only one of the borrowers seeks rescission, that borrower needs to prove that the disclosures were given only to the other borrower. n29

If more than one consumer n30 has a right to rescind, one person's exercise of that right is effective as to all of them. n31 Thus, if both spouses have a right to rescind, either one of them, acting alone, can rescind and both of them are bound by that action. n32 While either consumer, acting alone, can rescind, there may be reasons to join both in an action to enforce rescission. A ruling upholding the rescission will affect the status of the encumbrances on the home as to both the rescinding consumer's and the non-rescinding consumer's interests. In addition, if the creditor is required to refund money there may be questions about which consumer is entitled to it, and if the rescinded loan is rewritten as part of a settlement, the creditor may require the non-rescinding consumer to agree to the new terms. A non-rescinding consumer may be willing to be named as a party in the rescission complaint solely to assist the rescinding consumer's claim. In such a case the complaint should specifically describe the non-rescinding consumer's role, and the attorney should get a signed statement from him or her to this effect.

Since there are serious consequences for failure to deliver required disclosures, disputes sometimes arise over whether they were given. If debtors testify that they did not receive the notice and material disclosures, the burden shifts to the creditor to produce "some positive evidence (testimonial or documentary) to indicate that TILA disclosures were given." n33

However, even if the creditor produces a copy of the information with an acknowledgment of receipt signed by the debtor, that is not necessarily conclusive. The Act provides that written acknowledgment of receipt of any required disclosures or rescission notices does no more than create a rebuttable presumption of delivery in a rescindable transaction. n34 If such a document is produced by the creditor, the burden is on the debtor to prove nonreceipt. n35

The consumer may rely on documentary evidence, testimony, or both to rebut the presumption. n36

Another section of TILA, section 1641(b), provides that a consumer's acknowledgment of receipt of a statement is conclusive proof that the statement was received. This conclusive presumption only applies to assignees, however, not original creditors, and even as to an assignee it only applies if the assignee had no knowledge to the contrary at the time of the assignment. n37 More significantly, by its terms this section is inapplicable where the rebuttable presumption of section 1635(c) applies.

[b] Form and Content of Notices

Like the other required disclosures, the notice of the right to rescind must be given "clearly and conspicuously in writing, in a form that the consumer may keep." n38 The "clear and conspicuous" requirement is not simply one of legibility. n39

For closed-end transactions, the rescission right disclosures must be on a separate document. n40 The open-end rescission notice may be physically separated from the material disclosures or combined with the material disclosures, as long as the information required to be included is set forth in a clear and conspicuous manner. n41

For both types of credit, the notice must identify the transaction n42 and must disclose the following information: n43

- The retention or acquisition of a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling; n44
- The consumer's right to rescind; n45
- How to exercise the right to rescind, with a form for that purpose, designating the address of the creditor's place of business;
- The effects of rescission; n46 and
- The date the rescission period expires. n47

The Commentary states that additional information may be provided with the closed-end notice, such as:

- A description of the property subject to the security interest;
- A statement that joint owners may have the right to rescind and that a rescission by one is effective for all;
- The name and address of an agent of the creditor who is to receive notice of rescission. n48

Model right of rescission notices are provided in appendices to the Regulation. n49

A creditor who uses the correct model form is deemed to be in compliance except as to numerical disclosures. n50 The creditor may delete unnecessary material or rearrange the format if these changes do not affect the substance, clarity, or meaningful sequence of the form. n51 However, if the creditor uses the wrong model form or alters the model forms in other ways, n52 it cannot take advantage of this safe harbor.

Some creditors have fashioned a rescission notice that has one paragraph spelling out the right to rescind for new loans and another for refinancings. If the copy of the notice given to the consumer has neither paragraph checked, the notice does not comply with the Act's requirement that the effects of rescission be disclosed, and the extended rescission period is available. n53

In accordance with the federal E-Sign statute, the FRB has adopted an interim rule regarding electronic provision of the notice of the right to rescind, although it has suspended the mandatory compliance date. n54

In addition to the mandatory notice of rescission rights, each consumer must be given a copy of the disclosure statement with all "material" information correctly disclosed. n55 If these material disclosures are not properly supplied, the consumer has an extended right to rescind. The material disclosures must be provided clearly and conspicuously. n56

The five material disclosures that must be properly provided for closed-end transactions in order to terminate the consumer's cancellation rights after the initial three-day cooling-off period are: n57

a) The APR, including applicable variable-rate disclosures; n58

b) The finance charge; n59

c) The amount financed; n60

d) The total of payments; and

e) The payment schedule.

There are new tolerance standards for accuracy of "the finance charge and other disclosures affected by any finance charge" which apply both prospectively and retroactively, so even loans consummated prior to the enactment of the 1995 amendments will be judged by these standards. n61

Where a consumer seeks to use rescission as a remedy outside the context of foreclosure defense, the 1995 amendments allow lenders a generous tolerance for error in finance charge disclosure: inaccuracy which does not exceed 1/2 of 1% of the total amount of credit extended is considered within the range of "accurate" for most transactions. n62 In the case of certain transactions which refinance a purchase-money mortgage, n63 anywhere downstream from the original mortgage, the tolerance for error is 1% of the amount of the credit extended. n64 The special refinance tolerance only applies, though, where there are no new funds advanced and no other debts consolidated. n65 The refinance tolerance is generally available irrespective of whether the lender is the original one or a new one, but it does not apply to those high cost mortgages which are subject to HOEP. n66

There is also a third tolerance level relevant to rescission where the consumer is raising the extended rescission right as a defense to a foreclosure. In these cases, the maximum amount by which the finance charge can be understated is only $35. n67 Further, a consumer may rescind a loan in foreclosure if a mortgage broker fee that should have been included in the finance charge was omitted, without regard to the dollar amount involved, or if the creditor uses the wrong model form. n68 This special foreclosure tolerance is both retroactive and prospective. n69

In addition to creating a generally wider target for accuracy, the 1995 amendments also immunized closed-end home equity lenders from liability for misdisclosing the finance charge and other affected disclosures if the error arose from the way certain specific charges were treated. Here, too, the immunity is retroactive, except for grandfathered cases in progress. n70

The material disclosures for open-end transactions are provided in the initial TIL disclosure statement: n71

a) The APR including applicable variable-rate disclosures; n72

b) The method of determining the finance charge and the balance upon which a finance charge will be imposed, as explained in 12 C.F.R. section 226.6;

c) The amount or method of determining any membership or participation fees;

d) For HELCs, the plan's payment terms, including the length of the draw period and repayment period, an explanation of how the minimum periodic payment will be determined, the timing of the payments; and, if applicable, that the minimum repayment would not repay any of the principal or may repay less than the outstanding balance, and a statement that a balloon payment may result. n73

For high cost mortgages which are covered by the HOEPA, n74 materiality encompasses some additional requirements.

[c] Timing of Right to Rescind

[i] The Three-Day Unconditional Right

The statute provides for an initial three-day period during which the consumers have an unconditional right to change their minds and cancel the transaction for any reason, or for no reason. This period may be extended under certain circumstances as is discussed below. n75

The statute and Regulation set forth precise rules for calculating the three days. Unless the right to rescind has been validly waived as discussed in § 1.08[6] infra, the consumer may exercise the right to rescind until midnight of the third business day n76 following the latest of the following events:

- Consummation of the transaction; n77
- Delivery of a proper notice of the right to rescind; n78 or
- Delivery of all the material disclosures correctly made. n79

[ii] The Extended Right to Rescind

If the creditor does not meet certain requirements under TIL, the three-day clock never starts ticking, and so the right to rescind can extend for three years. n80

Where the mandatory information was not properly delivered, n81 the right to rescind continues until whichever of the following events occurs first:

a) The expiration of three years after consummation of the transaction; n82

b) The transfer of all of the consumer's interest in the property; n83 or

c) The sale of the property. n84

For example, a foreclosure sale of the consumer's principal residence will generally terminate the consumer's right to rescind. n85 The right to rescind may, however, continue through any redemption period. n86

One event which is notable by its absence from the statutory list of events cutting off the unexpired rescission right is the loan pay-off. n87 The issue may arise where a loan subject to the rescission right has been refinanced. Though one case, King v. California, n88 has held that a refinancing cut off the right to rescind the earlier mortgage because it was no longer in effect, the analysis was virtually nonexistent. The D.C. and Sixth Circuits have rejected King. n89 In addition, a number of district court and bankruptcy court decisions have permitted refinanced loans to be rescinded, so long as the earlier loans were within the three-year period and the earlier loans independently had violations giving rise to the extended rescission right. n90

[4] Creditor Must Delay Performance During Rescission Period

To facilitate TIL's three-day cooling-off period, creditors are required to delay their own contractual performance until the rescission period has expired. Unless the consumer has validly waived the right of rescission, the creditor must not disburse any money (other than in escrow), perform any services, or deliver any materials until the rescission period has expired and the creditor is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded. n91

TIL may not be the only source of rescission rights, particularly in the area of home improvement sales. Under a FTC rule, there is a three-day cooling-off period for door-to-door sales. n92 Every state has enacted some type of analogous cancellation right for home solicitation sales. n93

[5] Waiver of Right to Rescind

The consumer may modify or waive the right to rescind if the consumer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency. n94 However, the consumer's waiver will not automatically insulate the creditor from liability for failure to provide the right of rescission. n95 These waivers, like any other, must be voluntary and knowing, so the consumer must be given notice of the right before a waiver can be effective.

To modify or waive the right to rescind, the consumer must give the creditor a dated written statement (and not a form printed for this purpose) n96 that:

a) Describes the emergency; n97

b) Specifically modifies or waives the right to rescind; n98 and

c) Bears the signature of all consumers entitled to rescind. n99

[6] Rescission as a Defense to Foreclosure

[a] General

Perhaps the most important aspect of TIL's extended rescission right for consumers is its value as a defense to foreclosure. If the transaction is one subject to the rescission right, and there are valid grounds for exercising the extended right, rescission is a complete defense to foreclosure. n100 Since a valid rescission automatically voids the security interest, as well as eliminating the obligation to pay finance or other charges, the creditor is unsecured and, therefore, has no interest in the property upon which to foreclose. Furthermore, the courts may enjoin the foreclosure sale of a home until the homeowner's rescission claim has been adjudicated. n101

The use of rescission as a foreclosure defense has proven so valuable in protecting consumers that in enacting the 1995 amendments to TIL, Congress carved it out for special rules of benefit to borrowers. Lenders are held to stricter standards in these cases. These special defensive rescission standards apply to loans consummated both before and after the enactment of the 1995 amendments. n102 These include:

- Finance charge and related tolerance: $35; any overdisclosed amount; n103
- Brokers Fees as a Finance Charge: the law in effect at the time the loan is consummated applies n104 and not even the $35 tolerance should protect an error. n105

- Form of Notice of Right to Cancel: the creditor must use or have used the appropriate FRB model form or a comparable one; n106

- The liberalized immunity rules relating to treatment of certain closing costs, including those imposed by settlement agents, do apply to defense rescission.

These special defensive standards apply whether the creditor has initiated a judicial or non-judicial foreclosure, and whether the consumer raises rescission in a separate action or as a defense in the foreclosure case. n107 All the statute requires is that the consumer be exercising rescission rights "after" the initiation of a foreclosure. n108

[b] Rescission by Recoupment After the Three-Year Period

Although there is a three-year limitation on the consumer's affirmative right to cancel, n109 courts have applied traditional common law principles of recoupment to TIL rescission. n110 The line of cases approving rescission by way of recoupment beyond three years, however, was severely undercut by the Supreme Court in Beach v. Ocwen Federal Bank. n111 The court barred this use of federal TIL rescission, although it expressly noted it had no occasion in Beach to consider the issue where rescission by recoupment is allowed by state law. n112 The new defensive rescission provisions discussed above specifically recognize the possibility that rescission may be raised by recoupment, leaving that question to state law for determination. n113

An important post-Beach decision, Fidler v. Central Cooperative Bank (In re Fidler), n114 unequivocally adopts this view, allowing rescission by recoupment under the Massachusetts Consumer Credit Cost Disclosure Act. The court noted that the limitations period in the state statute was not identical to that in TILA, and, in any event, the interpretation of the state statute was a matter of state law. Fidler can also be read more broadly to adopt the view that rescission by recoupment is allowed whenever state law recognizes recoupment. n115

[c] Violations Giving Rise to the Extended Right to Rescind

[i] Nondelivery

The statute clearly contemplates that the consumer has an extended right to rescind when required rescission information and forms or the enumerated "material" disclosures n116 are not delivered to the consumer, n117 as does the Regulation. n118 All persons entitled to rescind under the Regulation must receive two copies of the rescission notice and one copy of the material disclosures. n119 Whether the consumer received the mandated information will frequently be a disputed question of fact. n120 However, the consumer's actual knowledge is irrelevant if the disclosures were not given in the proper form. n121

[ii] Failure to Make Material Disclosures Properly

If a creditor fails to make any of the specified material disclosures, n122 the consumer has the extended rescission right. n123 A misstatement of these disclosures by any amount that is not de minimis constitutes a material nondisclosure, n124 unless the lender is protected by the 1995 TIL amendments. n125

[iii] Higher Priced Mortgage Loans

In rulemaking in July 2008, the Board added a new category of mortgage loans that, like HOEPA loans, are subject to substantive prohibitions, effective October 1, 2009. n126 These loans, called higher priced loans, were intended to cover the subprime market. n127

Although the Board identified three practices requiring substantive protection for higher priced mortgage loans--lending without regard to ability to repay, prepayment penalties longer than two years, and failure to escrow property taxes and insurance--it only chose to make one of those practices a trigger for rescission. n128 Under the new rule, if a higher priced mortgage loan contains a prepayment penalty in violation of the new Regulation Z § 226.35(b)(2), that mortgage will be subject to the extended right of rescission. n129

This new "material" disclosure applies only to closed-end loans. Home equity lines of credit and bridge loans--loans made on an existing home to finance a new home--are excluded per se from the definition of higher priced loans. n130 Although the definition of higher priced mortgages includes home purchase loans--and all the substantive restrictions will apply to home purchase loans--the right to rescission remains limited to non-purchase money mortgages.

[iv] Violations Regarding the Notice of Right to Rescind

Violations of the requirements regarding the notice of right to cancel which must be given to the consumer form the second category of "trigger" violations giving rise to the extended rescission right. n131 The 1995 amendments give lenders a safe harbor for only one specific violation regarding the notice, discussed below. In all other respects, a violation regarding the contents of the notice still triggers the right to rescind.

The importance of the 1995 amendments is felt when examining which FRB model form or comparable one was chosen to provide information concerning the effects of rescissions.

Widespread noncompliance with the forms requirement led to industry claims of widespread exposure to liability for extended rescission claims. The avenue taken by Congress was to retroactively absolve covered lenders of any civil, criminal, administrative, or rescission liability for using the wrong model form, or a comparable notice based on the wrong model form. n132 Two categories of loans consummated prior to the September 30, 1995 enactment date of the new amendments are exempt from this broad grant of immunity. A grandfather clause excludes certain actions commenced before June 1, 1995, including those in which a timely notice of the right to cancel had been sent to the creditor prior to that date. n133 More importantly, the retroactive immunity does not protect lenders when the consumer is using rescission to defend against a judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure initiated by the lender. n134 The creditor may delete unnecessary material or rearrange the format of the model form if these changes do not affect the substance, clarity, or meaningful sequence of the form. n135 However, if the creditor uses the wrong model form or alters the model forms in other ways, n136 it cannot take advantage of the safe harbor. Creditors are not required to use the model forms but may create their own forms as long as the notice meets the requirement of the statute and Regulation Z. n137

Some creditors have fashioned a rescission notice that has one paragraph spelling out the right to rescind for new loans and another for refinancings. If the copy of the notice given to the consumer has neither paragraph checked, the notice does not comply with the Act's requirement that the effects of rescission be disclosed, and the extended rescission period is available. n138

In any event, the retroactive immunity is limited to the selection of the wrong form--all other requirements regarding the notice are unaffected.

Giving the refinancing notice of right to cancel when the transaction is not in fact a refinancing gives rise to the extended right to cancel. n139 Creditors may give the refinancing form in error where:

- The prior indebtedness is not owed to the same creditor; n140
- The prior indebtedness is not secured by the consumer's principal residence; or
- There is no prior indebtedness.

The notice of the right to rescind must be a clear and conspicuous notice of the borrower's rescission rights. n141 An unclear or ambiguous description of the effects of rescission violates this standard. n142 Adding information about a contradictory state law right to cancel violates this standard. n143 If the expiration date for the three-day cooling-off period is not properly disclosed as required by Regulation Z sections 226.15(b)(5) and 226.23(b)(5), that too is a violation giving rise to the extended right. n144 The fact that the creditor actually offered the proper three-day period for cancellation is no defense if it was not disclosed properly. n145 Nor is it relevant whether the consumer suffered actual prejudice due to the errors in the notice. n146

Some lenders attempt to burnish their public image by giving the consumer a period that appears to be longer than three days to rescind the transaction. One court has concluded that giving a consumer a separate form providing a one-week right to cancel may undermine the TIL right to cancel, thereby extending the rescission period. n147 The court held that the two rescission notices together could confuse the borrower about the length of each rescission period and the consequences of choosing one method of rescission over the other.

Another court held that disclosing a longer period for exercising the right to cancel is a violation, reasoning that a contrary interpretation would allow the three-day period to be modified at the discretion of the lender. In addition, if the creditor gives the consumer a separate notice of the longer rescission period, it may set forth different rules for sending the rescission notice, counting the days, or other matters, all of which should render the TIL rescission notice not clear and conspicuous. n148

[v] Violation of Delay of Performance Rule

Whether a creditor's violation of the requirement that it delay performance during the rescission period (if there was no valid emergency waiver) n149 gives rise to the extended right may depend upon the nature of the creditor's violation. There is persuasive precedent for arguing that such a circumvention of the rescission right will trigger the extended time period, but the case law suggests that the advocate should take care in framing the claim and stating the argument.

More than most types of premature performance, spiking (home improvement loan in which the contractor begins work during the cooling-off period) n150 in a home improvement transaction should be viewed as the type of egregious violation of the delay of performance rule which triggers the extended rescission right, even under the Third Circuit's more restrictive test. n151 Spiking may violate both TILA and state Home Solicitation Sales Acts, which allow a cooling-off period for door-to-door sales. n152

A variation on standard spiking is the "two-contract dodge," which attempts to legitimize spiking by separating the contract from the work and a subsequent "direct loan" from a third party which then pays off the sales contract with a "refinancing" or "debt consolidation" loan. It is important to note that, while assignees are only liable for statutory damages for TIL violations which are apparent on the face of the loan documents assigned, n153 assignees are subject to the rescission right to the same extent as the original creditor. n154 However, advocates should also consider raising claims beyond TIL rescission for spiking or for the two-contract variant.

[7] How Rescission Works

To exercise either the basic right or the extended right, the first step in the rescission process is for the consumer to send the notice informing the creditor that he or she is electing to cancel. The consumer must exercise the right in writing, by notifying the creditor of the cancellation by mail, telegram, or other means. n155 When the consumer rescinds, the security interest or lien arising by operation of law on the property becomes automatically void. n156 The promissory note is also voided, since it is part of the "transaction." n157 The second automatic consequence is that the consumer's liability to pay "any finance or other charge" also is cancelled by operation of law. n158

The second step in the rescission process takes the ball into the creditor's court, creating a two part obligation. Within twenty calendar days of receiving the rescission notice, the creditor must return to the consumer any amount of money or property that has been given to anyone in connection with the transaction n159 because the consumer has no legal liability for any such charges upon rescission. Courts have permitted the required refund to take the form of an offset against the balance which the consumer is required to tender. n160 The creditor also must take affirmative steps to reflect the fact that the security interest was automatically terminated by the rescission.

In a refinancing by the same creditor, only the new money portion of the refinancing is subject to rescission. The creditor's security interest, however, will probably be a single mortgage deed or deed of trust that covers the whole debt, not just the new money portion. State real estate law may offer the creditor a procedure to record a reduction in the amount secured through a modified mortgage or deed of trust. If not, the creditor should, before the twenty-day period for taking action expires, ask a court, pursuant to its equitable authority, to modify the rescission procedures. The court could, for example, order the existing mortgage deed reformed.

Once the creditor has fulfilled its duties, the consumer must tender any money or property that has been delivered by the creditor to the consumer. n161 Regulation Z specifically provides that the courts have equitable authority to modify steps 2 and 3 of the process. n162 In 2004, the FRB Staff added language to the Commentary to make clear that the modification of step two (the creditor's obligation to return money or property and cancel the security interest) or three (the consumer's tender) "does not affect a consumer's substantive right to rescind and to have the loan amount adjusted accordingly." Further, "[w]here the consumer's right to rescind is contested by the creditor, a court would normally determine whether the consumer has a right to rescind and determine the amounts owed before establishing the procedures for the parties to tender any money or property." n163 The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has instructed banks that this means that "a consumer's right to rescind is not affected by the sequence of the rescission procedures or a court order modifying those procedures in both open- and closed-end credit." n164

[8] Remedies for Creditors' Noncompliance With Rescission Requirements

The potential for damages against a noncompliant creditor in a rescission case are greater than in a nonrescission TIL case. First, TIL Simplification made it clear that if the creditor violates any of the requirements of the rescission provisions, a court may award statutory and actual damages for the disclosure violations in addition to rescinding the transaction. n165 Moreover, violations of the rescission provisions are among the violations which themselves give rise to statutory and actual damages. n166 Thus, violations of the rescission notice requirement n167 would give rise to a damage claim under 15 U.S.C. section 1640, as would violations of the delay of performance rule. n168

Where premature performance operated to undermine the consumer's unqualified three-day cooling off right, it is possible to argue that actual damages equal the amount the consumer would otherwise have to tender. n169 Further, the creditor's failure to properly respond to the consumer's cancellation notice gives rise to a separate damage claim. n170

While assignees are only liable for statutory damages for TIL violations which are apparent on the face of the loan documents assigned, n171 assignees are subject to the rescission right to the same extent as the original creditor. n172 In addition to being liable for statutory damages for disclosure violations appearing on the face of the document, an assignee is independently liable for its own violation of the Act if it fails to respond properly to a rescission notice. n173 A few courts have held that an assignee who rejects or ignores the consumer's rescission is not liable for statutory damages unless the disclosure violations on which the rescission is based are apparent on the face of the documents. n174 These courts reason that section 1640(a) only imposes statutory damages liability on "any creditor." Since the assignee is not a creditor, these courts reason that it cannot be liable for statutory damages except under the assignee liability provisions of section 1641, which impose liability only where the violation is apparent on the face of the documents. But because the assignee in this situation is being held liable for its own action--its failure to rescind--rather than the disclosure violations of the original creditor, this assignee liability standard is a poor fit. Also, it is clear that Congress intended assignees to be liable under section 1640(a), because section 1640(b) provides that "a creditor or assignee has no liability under this section" if it corrects errors within a certain time period. If assignees had no liability under section 1640(a), there would be no need for Congress to establish defenses for them. n175 Attorney fees are available in rescission cases. n176

One court has held, n177 however, and another court has suggested, n178 that attorney fees are available against an assignee in a rescission case only if the underlying violation was apparent on the face of the contract. These courts reason that, while rescission is always available against an assignee by virtue of section 1635(c), the right to attorney fees arises under section 1640(a), which makes them available against a "creditor" who fails to comply with TILA. These courts perceive the award of attorney fees at the end of a successful rescission action as separate from rescission, and require the award to meet the test of section 1641(e) that the violations be apparent on the face of the assigned documents. This approach is flawed because it treats the attorney fee award for a rescission action as something separate from rescission. Nonetheless, as a precaution, in cases where the underlying violations are not apparent on the face of the documents, attorneys may wish to rescind against both the original creditor and the assignee. The original creditor is still liable for rescission even though it no longer holds the obligation. n179

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawPurchase & SaleRemediesRescission & Restitution

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. This chapter deals with rescission of home-secured transactions. Pursuant to the Higher Education Opportunity Act of 2008 and the regulations adopted by the Federal Reserve Board under it, there is also a right to rescind certain private student loans. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(e)(7).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1635; Reg. Z §§ 226.15 (open-end credit), 226.23 (closed-end credit). See also Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(11), (12), (14), (17), (19), (24), and (25) and corresponding commentary sections.

(n3)Footnote 3. For purposes of the rescission rule, the term "transaction" encompasses the addition of a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling to an existing transaction. Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(1) n.47. However, only the addition of the security interest is rescindable, not the underlying transaction. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(a)(1)-5.

(n4)Footnote 4. Security interests in the consumer's principal dwelling that arise solely by operation of law, e.g., mechanic's and materialmen's liens, are sufficient to create a right of rescission. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(25); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(25)-5. However, only those automatic liens which are part of the credit transaction are subject to the rescission right. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(a)-3, 226.23(a)(1)-1. See Basnight v. Diamond Developers, Inc., 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D.N.C. 2001) (a deed of trust creates a security interest even if it is never recorded); see also In re Tomasevic, 275 B.R. 86 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2001) (purchase money loan is non-rescindable; disclosure violations do not convert it to a non-purchase money loan). But see Milligan v. Sentry Exteriors, Inc., 2005 WL 1229791, at *3 (D.N.J. May 24, 2005) (potential mechanics lien in favor of contractor who arranged secured home-improvement loan does not create right to rescind initial home-improvement contract; court draws untenable distinction between lien securing performance of consumer credit obligation and one securing payment for goods and services; also holds that mechanics lien does not arise solely by operation of law because it arises only upon breach and an arbitrator must approve it). Scott v. Koons, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7560 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 27, 2006) (no right to rescind transaction that did not include security interest in home); Horton v. First State Bank, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7647 (S.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2006) (If a credit transaction is never consummated, so a security interest is never created, it is not rescindable).

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 1.03[1] supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. See generally § 1.03[1] supra, for elaboration on the definition of "regularly."

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i)(A) n.3; Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)(i)-3, -4.

(n8)Footnote 8. Certain high-cost mortgages are subject to special requirements under the Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa); Reg. Z § 226.32.

(n9)Footnote 9. Reg. Z § 226.15; Official Staff Commentary § 226.15.

(n10)Footnote 10. However, Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(c)-1 states that a creditor may continue to allow transactions under an existing open-end credit plan during a rescission period that results solely from the addition of a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling.

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(4); Reg. Z § 226.15(a)(11); Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(a)(1)-2.

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Bernasek, 235 Kan. 726, 682 P.2d 667 (1984) (facts necessary to establish equitable estoppel were not present in case where rescission notice given in otherwise exempt transaction); United Cos. Lending Corp. v. Skwozinski (In re Skwozinski), 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 1306 (Bankr. D.N.H. July 18, 2001) (equitable estoppel shown where borrower signed closing documents in reliance on lender's misrepresentation that he had three-day right to rescind business loan).

(n13)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(1); Reg. Z § 226.23(f)(1). See, e.g., Bestrom v. Bankers Trust Co. (In re Bestrom), 114 F.3d 741 (8th Cir.) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 950, 118 S. Ct. 370, 139 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1997) ; Peoples Nat'l Bank v. Molz, 239 Kan. 255, 718 P.2d 306 (1986) (transaction to finance acquisition of mobile home is not subject to rescission); D&Y, Inc. v. Winston, 536 A.2d 1169 (Md. Ct. App. 1988) (land installment contract to purchase dwelling was exempt as a residential mortgage transaction); Joyce v. Cloverbrook Homes, Inc., 81 N.C. App. 270, 344 S.E.2d 58 (1986) (rescission does not cover purchase of principal residence secured by that residence). See Bolden v. Greenpoint Mortg. Funding, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20508 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 13, 2004) (purchase money loan); Scott v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 326 F. Supp. 2d 709 (E.D. Va. 2003) , (purchase money loan), aff'd without op., 67 Fed. Appx. 238 (4th Cir. 2003) ; Hanson v. Ridge Homes, 1975 Ohio App. LEXIS 6106 (Ohio Ct. App., Belmont County July 8, 1975) (credit to finance construction of home on land already owned by consumer exempt under older version of Reg. Z). See, e.g., Norwest Bank v. Lopez, 76 P.3d 624 (Haw. App. 2003) . Emery v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6817 (D. Ariz. Feb. 16, 2006) ; Taylor v. Nelson, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3860 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2006) (loan to purchase home); Nix v. Option One Mortgage Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2289 (D.N.J. Jan. 19, 2006) (if loan is to purchase the consumer's personal residence, it is not rescindable); Vanhoose v. Advantage Homes, Inc., 2003 WL 24270520 (Ct. of C.P. of Ohio, Ross County, July 17, 2003); Perkins v. Cent. Mortgage Co., 422 F. Supp. 2d 487 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (loan is non-rescindable when consumers obtained it to pay off construction loan and finance completion of home after contractor walked off job).

(n14)Footnote 14. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(2); Reg. Z § 226.23(f)(2). See, e.g., Kucera v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 754 F.2d 280 (8th Cir. 1985) . Note that there is no corresponding refinancing exception for open-end credit. Reg. Z § 226.15(f). Thus, if a closed-end loan is refinanced by the same creditor with a home equity line of credit, it should be rescindable. See Rohner, The Law of Truth in Lending P 8.02[2][b] n.75 (Supp.).

(n15)Footnote 15. If the refinancing involves a new advance, only the amount of the new advance is rescindable. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(f)-4; Fidler v. Central Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 210 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) , vacated, in part, reaff'd, in part, on other grounds, 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(2); Reg. Z § 226.23(f)(2); Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(f)(2)-4.

(n17)Footnote 17. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.2(a)(24)-5, 226.20(a)-5, 226.23(f)-4. See, e.g., Weeden v. Auto Workers Credit Union, Inc., 173 F.3d 857 (6th Cir.) , reported in full at 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5272 (6th Cir. Mar.

19, 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076, 120 S. Ct. 790, 145 L. Ed. 2d 667 (2000) (refinancing of a residential mortgage by a creditor other than the original creditor is rescindable); Apaydin v. Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank (In re Apaydin), 201 B.R. 716 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996) (acquisition financing credit refinanced by a different creditor was rescindable). But see Stone & Stone Pension Plan v. Alston, 12 Conn. App. 670, 533 A.2d 898 (1987) (mortgage loan not refinancing and not rescindable when used to acquire term sales contract).

(n18)Footnote 18. Reg. Z, § 226.23(f)(4); Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(f)-6.

(n19)Footnote 19. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(3); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(f)(2), 226.23(f)(3).

(n20)Footnote 20. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(f)-2; 226.23(f)-5.

(n21)Footnote 21. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(1)(i), 226.15(b), 226.17(d), 226.23(a)(1), 226.23(b); Soto v. PNC Bank (In re Soto), 221 B.R. 343 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1998) ; Apgar v. Homeside Lending, Inc. (In re Apgar), 291 B.R. 665 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) . See § 1.08[3][c] infra.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(11) (definition of consumer for purposes of right of rescission includes a natural person whose interest in his or her principal dwelling will be subject to the security). The ownership interest does not include inchoate rights such as dower interests. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(11)-2. E.g., Westbank v. Maurer, 276 Ill. App. 3d 553, 213 Ill. Dec. 360, 658 N.E.2d 1381 (1995) . See Eveland v. Star Bank, NA 976 F. Supp. 721 (S.D. Ohio 1997) ; Jones v. Novastar Mortg., Inc. (In re Jones), 298 B.R. 451 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2003) (wife who co-signed mortgage securing loan to husband has right to rescind). But see Citifinancial, Inc. v. Blosser, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 2645 (June 15, 2001) (erroneously concluding that creditor did not have to give TIL disclosures to husband whose wife gave security interest on her interest in the home; court does not cite Reg. Z provision to the contrary); Moazed v. First Union Mortg. Corp., 221 F.R.D. 28 (D. Conn. 2004) (erroneously concluding that non-obligor spouse who put up home as collateral cannot rescind; court appears to be unaware of contrary Reg. Z and Commentary provisions).

(n23)Footnote 23. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(11). See also § 1.08[1] supra.

(n24)Footnote 24. In non-rescindable transactions, the required disclosures may be given to any consumer who is primarily liable on the account. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(d) (open-end), 226.17(d) (closed-end).

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); Reg. Z §§ 226.5(b), 226.23(b). See also Cintron v. Bankers Trust Co., 682 So. 2d 616 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996) ; § 1.08[3][b] infra .

(n26)Footnote 26. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b), 226.23(b). See, e.g., Stone v. Mehlberg, 728 F. Supp. 1341, 1353 (W.D. Mich. 1989) (each person with an ownership interest must receive two copies; fact that joint obligors are husband and wife is irrelevant, as spouses are not interchangeable under TILA rescission provisions); Elsner v. Albrecht, 460 N.W.2d 232 (Mich. Ct. App. 1990) (same); Kocsis v. Pierce, 480 N.W.2d 598 (Mich. Ct. App. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Stone v. Mehlberg, 728 F. Supp. 1341, 1353 (W.D. Mich. 1989) (requirement of two notices to each obligor is not a mere technicality; effective exercise of the right "obviously depends upon the delivery of one copy of the rescission notice to the creditor and the retention by the obligor of the other copy"); Elsner v. Albrecht, 460 N.W.2d 232 (Mich. Ct. App. 1990) . See also § 1.08[6][c][i] infra, on what constitutes delivery of the required TIL information.

(n28)Footnote 28. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(4), 226.23(a)(4).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Duren v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 15469 (D.C. Cir. June 7, 2000) (unpublished, citation limited) (TILA does not create a presumption that, where a single set of documents was provided, the consumer seeking rescission did not receive the set).

(n30)Footnote 30. As discussed at the beginning of this subsection, the definition of consumer for purposes of the rescission right includes any natural person whose ownership interest in his or her principal dwelling is subject to the security interest irrespective of whether the person is obligated on the note or not. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(11).

(n31)Footnote 31. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(4), 226.23(a)(4).

(n32)Footnote 32. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(a)(4)-1, 226.23(a)(4)-1. See also FDIC v. Hughes, 684 F. Supp. 616, 624 (D. Minn. 1988) ; In re Gurst, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7524 (E.D. Pa. July 25, 1988) ; Desrosiers v. Transamerica Fin. Corp. (In re Desrosiers), 212 B.R. 716 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) (in addition, res judicata consequences can occur where one spouse rescinds and files an affirmative case that is later dismissed. If the dismissal is a final adjudication on the merits, the other spouse may be prevented from subsequently rescinding the transaction).

(n33)Footnote 33. In re Pinder, 83 B.R. 905, 913 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) (emphasis in original). See also In re Herbert, 86 B.R. 433 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) (where debtor testified as to nonreceipt, burden shifted to more knowledgeable creditor to produce disclosure statement; if none produced, court cannot assume one exists). Cf. Eveland v. Star Bank, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 20351 (6th Cir. Aug. 19, 1999) (upholding jury finding that debtors were given rescission forms where testimony was conflicting). See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 4.2.7 and 10.3.2 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.), for additional cases on delivery.

(n34)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(c). See Walker v. Michael W. Colton Trust, 33 F. Supp. 2d 585 (E.D. Mich. 1999) ; National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.3.1 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n35)Footnote 35. In re Pinder, 83 B.R. 905, 913 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n36)Footnote 36. Payne v. Equicredit Corp. of Am., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8919 (E.D. Pa. May 20, 2002) (testimony unnecessary). See In re Underwood, 66 B.R. 656 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1986) (court was persuaded that notice had not been delivered by the consumer's affidavits and testimony, the discrepancy in dates on the Notice of Right to Cancel and disclosure statement, and the creditor's failure to introduce witnesses to rebut the consumer's assertion of nondelivery). See also Walker v. Michael W. Colton Trust, 33 F. Supp. 2d 585 (E.D. Mich. 1999) (court would give no effect to acknowledgment if consumer proved that signature was forged); Jackson v. US Bank Nat'l Ass'n Trustee (In re Jackson), 245 B.R. 23 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000) (debtors rebutted acknowledgment of receipt of HOEPA advance look disclosures through their testimony and by showing that disclosures included a loan amount that was not contemplated until after date on which creditor claimed to have mailed disclosures); Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) , aff'd, 237 B.R. 590 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (debtor's positive, unqualified testimony that he did not receive disclosures, countered only by vague and confused creditor testimony, rebutted presumption of receipt); Cole v. Lovett, 672 F. Supp. 947 (S.D. Miss. 1987) (evidence that borrowers signed documents seeing only signature lines and were given impression they were bound to proceed with contract rebuts the presumption of delivery of the notices), aff'd without opinion, 833 F.2d 1008 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Cintron v. Bankers Trust Co., 682 So. 2d 616 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996) (facts which consumers alleged to rebut presumption are not clear from the decision, but they were sufficient to reverse trial court's grant of summary judgment in foreclosure action). But cf. Young v. 1st Am. Fin. Servs., 992 F. Supp. 440 (D.D.C. 1998) (court found that the consumer failed to rebut presumption of delivery by failing to show that the notice, though mailed to him after settlement, did not reach him in time to give him three days to cancel; court incorrectly calculated when the three days began to run as consumer, by definition, did not have three days to cancel if the notice was not mailed until after the closing and the expiration date on the notice gave only three days from closing to cancel); In re Rhoades, 80 B.R. 938, 940 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1987) (the creditor had in its records a copy of a rescission notice with a signed acknowledgment of receipt; the court, applying the clear and convincing evidence standard, held that the debtor did not rebut the presumption because she testified that she had thrown out "some loan papers," though she testified that they were for an earlier loan, and had found other papers in the course of preparing for trial). But cf. Gaona v. Town & Country Credit, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20443 (D. Minn. Nov. 20, 2001) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, remanded, 324 F.3d 1050 (8th Cir. 2003) (consumers' testimony that no rescission notices were in their file was insufficient to rebut presumption of receipt, as there could be other explanations for their absence).

(n37)Footnote 37. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(b).

(n38)Footnote 38. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(1), 226.17(a)(1). These general requirements apply to all disclosures required by subparts B (open-end credit) and C (closed-end credit), respectively. Since the rescission notices are among the disclosures required by those subparts (§ 226.15 and § 226.23, respectively), those general requirements are applicable. See also 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b), 226.23(b) (required information concerning notice of right to rescind must be given clearly and conspicuously).

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Porter v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc., 961 F.2d 1066 (3d Cir. 1992) (ambiguous notice did not provide clear notice of consumer's rescission rights).

(n40)Footnote 40. Reg. Z § 226.23(b). See Reynolds v. D&N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) . So long as the required information is clear and conspicuous, some other information, such as the itemization of the amount financed, may appear on that document. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(b)-2. See also Reg. Z app. H.

(n41)Footnote 41. Reg. Z § 226.15(b); Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(b)-2, app. G.

(n42)Footnote 42. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b), 226.23(b). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(b)-3.

(n43)Footnote 43. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b); 226.23(b).

(n44)Footnote 44. See, e.g., Reynolds v. D&N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) .

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Murphy v. Empire of Am. FSA, 583 F. Supp. 1563, 1566 (W.D.N.Y. 1984) , aff'd on other grounds, 746 F.2d 931 (2d Cir. 1984) ("right to rescind notice" was an FRB model form and, therefore, sufficient even though it did not use the word "consummation").

(n46)Footnote 46. Violation found in Reynolds v. D&N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) . This particular requirement was the subject of some of the 1995 statutory amendments to TILA. See § 1.08[6][c] infra.

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) (rescission notice which omitted the expiration date, although it stated that the right expired three business days after July 16, violated TILA and entitled the borrowers to rescind the transaction); Williamson v. Lafferty, 698 F.2d 767 (5th Cir. 1983) (failure to fill in expiration date violated pre-Simplification TILA). Cf. Kramer v. Home Sav. of Am., F.S.B., 721 So. 2d 1239 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) (notice that gave borrower four days instead of three to rescind did not violate TILA).

(n48)Footnote 48. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(b)-3, 226.23(b)-3.

(n49)Footnote 49. Reg. Z apps. G and H.

(n50)Footnote 50. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b).

(n51)Footnote 51. Id. See Stanley v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Stanley), 315 B.R. 602 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2004) ; Cruz v. Household Fin. Consumer Discount Co. (In re Cruz), Clearinghouse No. 55629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Nov. 1, 2004) (Bankr. No. 03-17888); Finch v. Household Fin. Corp. III (In re Finch), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. D. Kan. Nov. 7, 2003) (creditor's additions and alterations to form also made it less concise and less clear, but court finds it unnecessary to decide whether these flaws alone would extend right to rescind).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Finch v. Household Fin. Corp. III (In re Finch), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. D. Kan. Nov. 7, 2003) .

(n53)Footnote 53. Id.

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b), 226.23(b)(1), as published at 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001), mandatory compliance date suspended, 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439 (Aug. 8, 2001).

(n55)Footnote 55. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a), 226.23(a); Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(b)-1, 226.23(b)-1. With the 1995 amendments to TIL, the target range for what constitutes a "correct" disclosure broadened considerably in the case of the finance charge and disclosures affected by an error in the finance charge.

(n56)Footnote 56. The definition of "material disclosure" requires the material information to be disclosed "as required in this title." 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u). "This title" requires that the disclosures be made clearly and conspicuously. The quoted language would be surplusage if those general requirements were not considered incorporated by it. See also Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a), 226.17(a), setting forth general requirements for all disclosures required by Subparts B and C, respectively, which encompasses both the rescission notices and material disclosures. At least one court has stated, however, that a creditor's failure to disclose the finance charge and the APR "more conspicuously" than the other disclosures, would not extend the right of rescission. Malfa v. Household Bank, F.S.B., 825 F. Supp. 1018 (S.D. Fla. 1993) . Standards for what constitutes "clearly and conspicuously" are discussed at § 1.05[2][a] (closed-end) and § 1.07[2] (open-end) supra.

(n57)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u); Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(3) n.48; Barsky v. Commercial Credit Corp. (In re Barsky), 210 B.R. 683 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) (failure to properly disclose a security interest is not a "material" non-disclosure for rescission purposes). See Mayfield v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4048 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 1999) (possibility of mechanic's lien need not be disclosed under TILA and would not be a material disclosure in any event).

(n58)Footnote 58. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(a)(3)-2. Cf. In re Ramsey, 176 B.R. 183 (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1994) . Borrower who brings action based on overstatement of the actual APR must demonstrate "detrimental reliance" on the overstatement in order to be entitled to the three-year rescission period. N.B.: 1995 TILA amendments provide that an overstatement of the finance charge and affected disclosures may be considered accurate. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1605(f)(1)(B) (prospectively), 1649(a)(3)(c) (retroactively), 1635(i)(2) (prospective and retroactive rescission as a foreclosure defense).

(n59)Footnote 59. See, e.g., In re Underwood, 66 B.R. 656 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1986) ($7,680 understatement of finance charge is a failure to correctly make a material disclosure). See also Hunter v. Richmond Equity Corp., Clearinghouse No. 43,060, No. CV85-P-2734-5 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 23, 1987).

(n60)Footnote 60. Cf. In re Ramsey, 176 B.R. 183 (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1994) (no rescission based on inaccurate disclosure of total amount financed, where borrower himself requested changes in terms and so was fully aware of them).

(n61)Footnote 61. But see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i) (special rule for rescission as foreclosure defense, discussed below). Certain cases already in progress are exempted from the retroactive immunity. See generally § 1.05[2][e][ii][A] supra for tolerance levels applicable outside the rescission context.

(n62)Footnote 62. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(A). In contrast, the general tolerance was set at $100, 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(1)(A). It seems that retroactively, the general $200 tolerance may serve as a floor for these percentage-based rescission tolerances, though that apparently was not the intent. See § 1.05[2][e][ii][A] supra, § 1.09[2][h] infra.

(n63)Footnote 63. That is, residential mortgage transactions as defined in 15 U.S.C. § 1602(w), which themselves are exempt from the rescission right. See § 1.08[2] supra.

(n64)Footnote 64. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(B).

(n65)Footnote 65. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(B). The language of the statute casts as absolute the requirement that there must be no new funds advanced to qualify. However, creditors are likely to ask the FRB to interpret "new advances" to exclude the cost of refinancing. Cf. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(f)-4. See also Statement of Sen. D'Amato, Cong. Rec. S14567 (Sept. 28, 1995).

(n66)Footnote 66. 15 U.S.C. § 1605(f)(2)(B). Apparently all HOEP loans, including no new-advance refinances, will be subject to the 1/2 of 1% tolerance.

(n67)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2). Overstating the finance charge is considered accurate under the new amendment.

(n68)Footnote 68. Reg. Z § 226.23(h)(1)(I); Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(h)(i)-1. See also Santoro v. CTC Foreclosure Serv. Corp., 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 5024 (9th Cir. Mar. 20, 2001) (unpublished, citation limited) (defensive rescission allowed only if inclusion of borrower-paid broker fees in amount financed was disclosure violation under law in effect at time of consummation).

(n69)Footnote 69. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(4). See generally § 1.08[6] infra.

(n70)Footnote 70. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1649(a), (b). Editor's Note: These provisions were intended to apply only to closed-end, real-estate secured lenders, though a drafting error made them appear more broad. A retroactive technical correction was adopted in 1996.

(n71)Footnote 71. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u); Reg. Z § 226.15(a)(3) n.36.

(n72)Footnote 72. Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(a)(3)-3.

(n73)Footnote 73. Reg. Z § 226.15(a)(3) n.36. See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.15(a)(3)-2 (repayment terms required by § 226.6(e)(2) for the repayment phase as well as the draw phase are material disclosures; other required initial disclosures or § 226.5b disclosures do not give rise to the extended right, though violations may give rise to civil or administrative liability).

(n74)Footnote 74. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1602(aa), 1639. See generally Ch. 2 infra.

(n75)Footnote 75. See § 1.08[6][c] infra.

(n76)Footnote 76. For rescission purposes only, "business days" means all calendar days except Sundays and specified legal holidays. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(6); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(6)-2. The Commentary was amended effective April 9, 2002, to state that when New Year's Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day, or Christmas Day falls on a weekend but is observed on the preceding or following weekday, the actual day rather than the observed day is considered the non-business day. For example, if July 4th falls on a Saturday but government offices are closed on the preceding Friday, Saturday is a holiday and Friday is a business day. 66 Fed. Reg. 16,980, 16,982 (Apr. 9, 2002) .

(n77)Footnote 77. Consummation is the point at which the consumer becomes contractually obligated on a credit transaction, determined by reference to state law. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(13); Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(13). O'Brien v. Aames Funding Corp., 374 F. Supp. 2d 764 (D. Minn. 2005) (consummation occurred when borrower became obligated, even though closing on a second loan and providing those proceeds to the first lender was a condition precedent to the first lender's obligation to disburse funds).

(n78)Footnote 78. The date of "delivery" is the date upon which the required material disclosures and notice of right to rescind are given to the consumers in a form they may keep. Reg. Z §§ 226.5(a)(1), 226.17(a)(1).

(n79)Footnote 79. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(4), 226.23(a)(3).

(n80)Footnote 80. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(f); Reg. Z § 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3). See § 1.08[6][c] infra. The Massachusetts statute of limitations on truth in lending claims is four years for damages and rescission. Mass. Gen. L. 140D § 10(f) and 260 § 5A. See In re Myers, 175 B.R. 122 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994) ; Bourgeois v. Mortgage Funding Corp. (In re Bourgeois), No. 95-12036-WCH, Adv. No. 95-1541, Clearinghouse No. 52,162 (Bankr. D. Mass. Mar. 6, 1998).

(n81)Footnote 81. See §§ 1.08[3][b] and 1.08[6][c] infra for discussion of the proper disclosure of the mandatory information.

(n82)Footnote 82. For open-end transactions, the three years is measured from "the occurrence giving rise to the right of rescission," Reg. Z § 226.15(a)(3), rather than loan consummation, as is the case with closed-end transactions. Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(3). But cf. Pocatello R.R. Employees Fed. Credit Union v. Galloway, 117 Idaho 739, 791 P.2d 1318 (Ct. App. 1990) (court erroneously applies one-year statute of limitations to rescission claim where material disclosure violations had been alleged and proven). See also Belini v. Washington Mutual Bank, 412 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 2005) (stating that suit for damages for failure to respond properly to rescission notice must be filed within one year after "occurrence," which court says is probably twenty days after creditor's receipt of rescission notice).

(n83)Footnote 83. Weber v. Langholz, 39 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (1995) (rule applied). See also Dailey v. Leshin, 2001 Fla. App. LEXIS 8304 (June 20, 2001) (right to rescind expires upon signing of contract to sell home, whether or not contract is irrevocable; presumably right would "reawaken" if sale fell through); Willis v. Friedman, Clearinghouse No. 54,564 (Md. Spec. App. May 2, 2002) (under Maryland's foreclosure procedure, which is a hybrid between judicial and non-judicial, right to rescind expires upon foreclosure sale, but if borrower rescinds prior to sale the rescission can be raised as an objection to the sale during the ratification stage).

(n84)Footnote 84. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(f); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3). In order to cut off rescission rights, the TIL Regulation requires that all of the consumer's interest have been transferred. Reg. Z §§ 226.23(a)(3), 226.15(a)(3). See Kemezis v. Matthew, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47330 (E.D. Pa. June 16, 2008) (dismissing rescission claim because property sold). Blue v. Fremont Inv. & Loan, 562 F. Supp. 2d 33 (D.D.C. 2008) (foreclosure sale eight months before rescission complaint filed barred rescission).

(n85)Footnote 85. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(a)(3)-3. See, e.g., Bestrom v. Bankers Trust Co. (In re Bestrom), 114 F.3d 741 (8th Cir. 1997) (where purchase money mortgagor bought house at foreclosure sale and the state redemption period had passed, homeowner lost legal title; new mortgage to re-acquire property back from foreclosing lender constituted an "acquisition" loan and not subject to rescission right [note that court mistakenly concluded that this mortgage loan was not subject to "TILA"]); Hallas v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 406 F. Supp. 2d 1176 (D. Or. 2005) (foreclosure sale terminated right to rescind).

(n86)Footnote 86. Walker v. Contimortgage (In re Walker), 232 B.R. 725, 732 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1999) ("once there has been a final foreclosure sale of the borrower's principal residence and the redemption period has expired, the right to rescind will be terminated"). But see Marschner v. RJR Fin. Servs., Inc., 382 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Mich. 2005) (right to rescind did not continue during redemption period when consumer did not in fact redeem); Williams v. G.M. Mortgage Corp., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29365 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 18, 2004) (rescission right terminates upon foreclosure sale, not upon expiration of redemption period).

(n87)Footnote 87. See Abele v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc., 77 B.R. 460, 467 (E.D. Pa. 1987) , aff'd mem., 845 F.2d 1009 (3d Cir. 1988) (though TILA enumerates circumstances upon which right to rescind expires, repayment of the credit extended is not one of them). Reg. Z, § 226.23(a)(3).

(n88)Footnote 88. 784 F.2d 910 (9th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802, 108 S. Ct. 47, 98 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1987) . See also Coleman v. Equicredit Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 969, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 22, 2002) (after refinancing "there is nothing to rescind"). See also Monaco v. Bear Stearns Residential Mortgage Corp., 554 F. Supp. 2d 1034

(C.D. Cal. 2008) (under King, federal courts in Ninth Circuit may not give effect to rescission post-refinancing).

(n89)Footnote 89. Duren v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 15469, at *7 (D.C. Cir. June 7, 2000) ("[W]e disagree with First Government's contention that the refinancing of the 1994 loan rendered unavailable TILA's statutory rescission remedy, notwithstanding the Ninth Circuit's terse suggestion to the contrary in King. ..."). Barrett v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 445 F.3d 874, 879 (6th Cir. 2006) .

(n90)Footnote 90. E.g., Mayfield v. Vanguard Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 710 F. Supp. 143 (E.D. Pa. 1989) (both current and prior refinanced loan rescinded); Abele v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc., 77 B.R. 460, 467 (E.D. Pa. 1987) , aff'd mem., 845 F.2d 1009 (3d Cir. 1988) (4 in series of refinancings rescinded); In re Milbourne, 108 B.R. 522 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) ; see also Wiggins v. Avco Fin. Servs., 62 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 1999) (rescission allowed even though debtors paid off loan after sending rescission notice); In re Tucker, 74 B.R. 923 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (debtor could have rescinded earlier, refinanced loans, though did not seek rescission). See, e.g., Payton v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2003) . See also Pac. Shore Funding v. Lozo, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 283 (App. 2006) (spelling out monetary impact of rescinding refinanced loan).

(n91)Footnote 91. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(c), 226.23(c).

(n92)Footnote 92. 16 C.F.R. § 429. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 9.2.1 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n93)Footnote 93. National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 9.2.2 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n94)Footnote 94. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(d); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(e), 226.23(e). In 1994, Congress directed the FRB to study the question of whether waivers should be made more easy to obtain on new creditor refinances where there are no new advances. See 59 Fed. Reg. 65,771 (Dec. 21, 1994) . The FRB issued a report to Congress on "Consumer Waivers of the Right of Rescission Under the Truth in Lending Act" in March 1995. Advocates should monitor developments.

(n95)Footnote 95. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(e)-1, 226.23(e)-1.

(n96)Footnote 96. See, e.g., Hunter v. Richmond Equity Corp., Clearinghouse No. 43,060, No. CV-P-2734-S (N.D. Ala. Nov. 23, 1987) (pre-printed waiver forms prohibited); Wiggins v. Avco Fin. Servs., 62 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 1999) (use of pre-printed form to waive right to rescission was violation).

(n97)Footnote 97. See, e.g., Mortgage Mint Corp. v. Morgan, 708 P.2d 1177 (Or. Ct. App. 1985) (handwritten statement describing consumers' need for immediate disbursal of funds for daughter's medical attention and waiving right of rescission was valid, in absence of evidence of overreaching by the creditor, even though the reasons for the waiver were false; the lender had no duty to investigate the facts underlying the waiver to determine if the reasons were genuine); Feinerman v. Barrett, 673 A.2d 1341 (Me. 1996) (part of typed waiver of right to cancel which contained a description of the emergency was handwritten; Maine court held a valid waiver applying Massachusetts TIL (identical to federal TIL on this point)). But see Palmer v. Statewide Group, Inc., 134 F.3d 378 (9th Cir. 1998) , reported in full at 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 1497 (9th Cir. Feb. 2, 1998) (waiver which lacked description of the emergency, stating only that consumer had a "personal financial emergency," was invalid).

(n98)Footnote 98. See, e.g., In re Rivera, Clearinghouse No. 47,715 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1991) (handwritten note that consumer wanted to close right away due to hardship did not act as waiver of right to rescind; it did not specifically waive right to cancel; apparently note had also been written upon instruction of creditor's agent).

(n99)Footnote 99. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(e), 226.23(e).

(n100)Footnote 100. Family Fin. Servs. v. Spencer, 677 A.2d 479 (Conn. App. Ct. 1996) (creditor's failure to accept rescission notice nullified the mortgage, barring creditor from foreclosure); Yslas v. D.K. Guenther Builders, Inc., 342 So. 2d 859 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1977) ; Willis v. Friedman, Clearinghouse No. 54,564 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. May 2, 2002); Community Nat'l Bank & Trust v. McClammy, 525 N.Y.S.2d 629 (App. Div. 1988) (if rescission claim established, would be defense to a foreclosure on a nine-year-old mortgage).

(n101)Footnote 101. See, e.g., Lopez v. Delta Funding Corp., Clearinghouse No. 52,140, No. CV 98-7204 (CPS) (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 1998) (foreclosure sale enjoined; indigent elderly homeowners not required to post bond); Thomas v. F.F. Fin., Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3696 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 11, 1989) (preliminary injunction granted against foreclosure where homeowner-plaintiff alleged she had rescinded, the creditor-defendant had failed to tender back to borrower fees and costs collected as required, and mortgage was null and void; court held no bond was required, since there was no prior mortgage on the property and therefore there was adequate security against any damages arising from injunction for creditor-defendant even if it prevailed on the merits).

(n102)Footnote 102. For finance charge and related tolerance, see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2); for brokers fees as a finance charge, see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(A).; for form of notice of right to cancel, see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(B). The 1996 revision of Regulation Z applied the special foreclosure defense rescission rules only to closed-end transactions (Reg. Z § 226.23(h)), though this is contrary to the clear letter of the statute and consequently challengeable.

(n103)Footnote 103. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2). Other TIL remedies may not be subject to this special tolerance rule, even in foreclosure.

(n104)Footnote 104. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(A). See Santoro v. CTC Foreclosure Serv. Corp., 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 5024 (9th Cir. Mar. 20, 2001) (unpublished, citation limited).

(n105)Footnote 105. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1) provides that the broker-fee-based right applies "in addition to any other right of rescission" available under § 1635. See Supplementary Information to 1996 revision of Regulation Z, 61 Fed. Reg. 49,237, 49,243 (Sept. 19, 1996) ("The 1995 Amendments also allow a consumer to rescind a loan in foreclosure if a mortgage broker fee was not properly disclosed, without regard to the dollar amount involved." Emphasis added). The 1997 Commentary makes clear that if a broker fee which should have been included in the finance is entirely omitted, the consumer may rescind without regard to the amount. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(h)(1)(i); 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193, 10,198 (Mar. 6, 1997). If the amount of the broker fee is included in the finance charge, the $35 tolerance applies. The accuracy of the finance charge is based upon the accuracy of the total charge, rather than upon its component parts. Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(h)(1)(i) and (h)(2); 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193, 10,198 (Mar. 6, 1997) .

(n106)Footnote 106. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(B). Note all other notice requirements were unaffected by the amendments, and, hence, remain in place.

(n107)Footnote 107. See Riopta v. Amresco Residential Mortgage Corp., 101 F. Supp. 2d 1326 (D. Haw. 1999) .

(n108)Footnote 108. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2). See. Stump v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4304 at *23 n.3 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2005) ($35 tolerance did not apply where no foreclosure had been initiated and bankruptcy automatic stay prohibited initiation of foreclosure).

(n109)Footnote 109. See § 1.08[3][c] supra.

(n110)Footnote 110. Barsky v. Commercial Credit Corp. (In re Barsky), 210 B.R. 683 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) ; Fidler v. Century Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 210 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) , vacated, in part, reaff'd, in part, 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) ; Botelho v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc. (In re Botelho), 195 B.R. 558 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996) , aff'd, Case No. 96-12279-EFH (D. Mass. Mar. 7, 1997); In re Shaw (Shaw v. Federal Mortgage & Inv. Corp.), 178 B.R. 380 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1994) ; Westbank v. Maurer, 276 Ill. App. 3d 553, 213 Ill. Dec. 360, 658 N.E.2d 1381

(1995) ; FDIC v. Ablin, 532 N.E.2d 379 (Ill. App. Ct. 1988) (four-year old contract); Community Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. McClammy, 525 N.Y.S.2d 629 (App. Div. 1988) (TIL rescission claims, if established, would be permitted as defense to foreclosure on 8-year old contract); Dawe v. Merchants Mortgage & Trust Corp., 683 P.2d 796 (Colo. 1984) . Contra Beach v. Great W. Bank, 692 So. 2d 146 (Fla. 1997) , aff'd sub nom. Beach v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 523 U.S. 410, 118 S. Ct. 1408, 140 L. Ed. 2d 566 (1998) .

(n111)Footnote 111. 523 U.S. 410, 118 S. Ct. 1408, 140 L. Ed. 2d 566 (1998) . See also Williams v. EMC Mortgage Corp. (In re Williams), 276 B.R. 394 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2002) (following Beach). Cf. Wepsic v. Bankers Trust Co., 23 Fed. Appx. 694, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24754 (9th Cir. 2001) (unreported, citation limited) (applying 3-year bar).

(n112)Footnote 112. Beach, 140 L. Ed. 2d at 574 n.6 . See, e.g., Fidler v. Central Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 210 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) , vacated, in part, reaff'd, in part, 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) (earlier decision allowing federal TIL rescission by recoupment beyond three years reversed in conformance to Beach, but rescission by recoupment beyond three years upheld pursuant to Massachusetts law). For a more complete discussion of Beach, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 6.3.3.1 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n113)Footnote 113. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(3). There are still arguments that can be raised in favor of rescission by recoupment in some situations. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 6.3.3.2 to 6.3.3.7 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.). Many states have disclosure statutes that are similar in at least some respects to TILA. Connecticut, Maine, Oklahoma, and Wyoming are of particular importance because they, like Massachusetts, have been exempted by the FRB from some of the requirements of TILA. Official Staff Commentary § 226.29(a)-4. In those states, whether rescission can be asserted by way of recoupment will be a question of state, not federal, law.

(n114)Footnote 114. 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) . Accord Bourgeois v. Mortgage Funding Corp. (In re Bourgeois), No. 95-12036-WCH, Adv. No. 95-1541, Clearinghouse No. 52,485 (Bankr. D. Mass. Mar. 16, 1998) (pre-Beach case allowing rescission by recoupment under Massachusetts disclosure law). Cf. Green Tree Acceptance, Inc., v. Anderson, 981 P.2d 804 (Okla. Civ. App. 1999) (applying Beach reasoning to bar rescission by recoupment after 3-year period under Oklahoma disclosure law).

(n115)Footnote 115. The Fidler court stated: "[e]ven if this case were governed by TILA, § 1635(i)(3), which provides that '[n]othing in this subsection affects a consumer's right of rescission in recoupment under State law,' would direct my inquiry to [the Massachusetts TIL-type statute] and other Massachusetts law concerning recoupment." 226 B.R. at 736 n.6 .

(n116)Footnote 116. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u); Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(3) n.48; see Pulphus v. Sullivan, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7080 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 25, 2003) (providing two different disclosure statements at closing was material violation). The required "material" disclosures are discussed at § 1.08[3] supra. See Kitchen v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., Clearinghouse No. 55,628 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 29, 2005) (No. 1:04-CV-2750-BBM) (materiality not determined by whether reasonable consumer would view information as significant, but by whether disclosure is listed in § 1602(u)).

(n117)Footnote 117. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(f).

(n118)Footnote 118. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3).

(n119)Footnote 119. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(b), 226.23(b). See Weeden v. Auto Workers Credit Union, Inc., 173 F.3d 857 (6th Cir.) , reported in full at 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5272 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076, 120 S. Ct. 790, 145 L. Ed. 2d 667 (2000) (right to rescind is extended if each obligor is not given two copies of notice of right to rescind). See also Webster v. Centex Home Equity Corp. (In re Webster), 300 B.R. 787 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 2003) (failure to give two copies of notice of right to cancel extends right to rescind); Payton v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2003) (failure to provide two completed copies of rescission notice is basis for rescission).

(n120)Footnote 120. Clay v. Johnson, 77 F. Supp. 2d 879 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (whether borrowers were delivered a blank notice of right to cancel is question of fact that will not be decided on a motion to dismiss). See also Jones v. Novastar Mortg., Inc. (In re Jones), 298 B.R. 451 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2003) (borrower's testimony of non-receipt is sufficient to rebut presumption of receipt and create issue for trial); Payton v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2003) (fact question where creditor had her signature acknowledging receipt of two completed copies but she only had uncompleted copies and denied receipt); Bell v. Parkway Mortg., Inc. (In re Bell), 309 B.R. 139 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) . See Kajitani v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42388 (D. Haw. May 22, 2008) (denying lender's motion for summary judgment in part because consumer did not receive copies of the disclosures at closing and in part because those material disclosures received in the mail post-closing were misleading and confusing); Burrows v. Orchid Island TRS, LLC, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21120 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2008) (denying lender's motion to dismiss rescission claim because borrower rescinded more than two weeks after closing when borrower alleged that he was not provided with copies at closing and disclosures were mailed to an incorrect address).

(n121)Footnote 121. Weeden v. Auto Workers Credit Union, Inc., 73 F.3d 857 (6th Cir.) , reported in full at 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5272 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076, 120 S. Ct. 790, 145 L. Ed. 2d 667 (2000) (consumer granted extended right to rescind even though she was a realtor who may have known about rescission rights); Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) . But see ContiMortgage Corp. v. Delawder, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3410 (Ohio Ct. App. July 30, 2001) (taking oral disclosure of right to rescind and borrower's actual knowledge into account in determining that notice was satisfactory).

(n122)Footnote 122. The material disclosures are specifically defined by the statute and regulation. See § 1.08[3] supra.

(n123)Footnote 123. See, e.g., Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) , aff'd, 237 B.R. 590 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (debtor had 3 years to rescind where creditor failed to give her required disclosure statement or notice of right to rescind); England v. MG Invs., Inc., 93 F. Supp. 2d 718 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) .

(n124)Footnote 124. Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) . In Steele, the court of appeals held that "any understatement of the finance charge is material because any understatement would be of some significance to a reasonable consumer." It is the disclosure that is "material," not the degree of accuracy. The court did not rule out the possibility that some overcharges could be so small as to be de minimis. However, the court strongly implied that the standard would be the tolerance levels then provided in Reg. Z § 226.18(d) n.41: $5 for a transaction with an amount financed of $1,000 or less; $10 for larger amounts financed. In Steele itself, the understatement was approximately $24.00. Mayo v. Key Fin. Servs., Inc., 424 Mass. 862, 678 N.E.2d 1311 (1997) (1995 amendments not applicable so the $10 standard applied; understatement by more than $10 is statutorily defined as "material").

(n125)Footnote 125. See generally § 1.05[2][e][ii][A] supra, § 1.09[2][h] infra.

(n126)Footnote 126. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522 (July 30, 2008) .

(n127)Footnote 127. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,532 (July 30, 2008) .

(n128)Footnote 128. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,532 (July 30, 2008) .

(n129)Footnote 129. Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,601 (July 30, 2008) (including the prepayment penalty limitation on the list of material disclosures).

(n130)Footnote 130. Reg. Z § 226.35(a)(3); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n131)Footnote 131. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3); Rodash v. AIB Mortgage Co., 16 F.3d 1142 (11th Cir. 1994) ; Reynolds v. D&N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) ; Jenkins v. Landmark Mortgage Corp. of Va.,

696 F. Supp. 1089, 1095 (W.D. Va. 1988) ; Apaydin v. Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank (In re Apaydin), 201 B.R. 716 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996) ; In re Melvin, 75 B.R. 952, 956 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) . See also Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) ; Williamson v. Lafferty, 698 F.2d 767, 768 (5th Cir. 1983) (pre-Simplification case, but still good law).

(n132)Footnote 132. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(2).

(n133)Footnote 133. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(b).

(n134)Footnote 134. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(B). See § 1.08[6] supra.

(n135)Footnote 135. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b).

(n136)Footnote 136. Id. See Stanley v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Stanley), 315 B.R. 602 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2004) ; Cruz v. Household Fin. Consumer Discount Co. (In re Cruz), Clearinghouse No. 55629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Nov. 1, 2004) (Bankr. No. 03-17888); Finch v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Finch), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. D. Kan. Nov. 7, 2003) (creditor's additions and alterations to form also made it less concise and less clear, but court finds it unnecessary to decide whether these flaws alone would extend right to rescind).

(n137)Footnote 137. McKenna v. First Horizon Home Loan Corp., 429 F. Supp. 2d 291 (D. Mass. 2006) .

(n138)Footnote 138. See Finch v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Finch), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 2049 (Bankr. D. Kan. Nov. 7, 2003) . See also Merriman v. Beneficial Mortgage Co. (In re Merriman), 329 B.R. 710 (D. Kan. 2005) (affirming details of bankruptcy court's grant of rescission when creditor checked wrong box on hybrid rescission notice).

(n139)Footnote 139. Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (court notes that, even if technical violation is insufficient to extend rescission period, this error is substantively misleading).

(n140)Footnote 140. See id.

(n141)Footnote 141. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a). See also Stanley v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Stanley), 315 B.R. 602, 612 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2004) (notice was not clear and conspicuous where it had separate paragraphs for new loans and refinancings, but no indication of which one applied to the particular transaction).

(n142)Footnote 142. See Reynolds v. D & N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) ; Apgar v. Homeside Lending, Inc. (In re Apgar), 291 B.R. 665 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) (notice that was addressed just to the consumer's husband, who was the obligor on the note and co-owned the home, was not clear and conspicuous because it was ambiguous about whether and how the consumer herself could rescind).

(n143)Footnote 143. Williams v. Empire Funding Corp., 109 F. Supp. 2d 352 (E.D. Pa. 2000) .

(n144)Footnote 144. See, e.g., Jackson v. Grant, 890 F.2d 118 (9th Cir. 1989) (notice of right to cancel specified Mar. 1 as expiration date, but event constituting consummation did not occur until Apr. 29, so a proper notice was never delivered and consumer had extended right to rescind); Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) (rescission notice which omitted the expiration date, although it stated that the right expired three business days after July 16, violated TILA and entitled the borrowers to rescind the transaction); Williamson v. Lafferty, 698 F.2d 767 (5th Cir. 1983) . But cf. Jenkins v. Landmark Mortgage Corp., 696 F. Supp. 1089 (W.D. Va. 1988) (consumer advised that rescission notice expired Aug. 28, when, due to later delivery of "material" disclosures, it expired Aug. 31; court indicated that, standing alone, would not have triggered the three-year period: no discussion of § 226.23(b)(5) requirement). Bonney v. Wash. Mutual Bank, No. 08-30087 (D. Mass. July 30, 2008), available at www.consumerlaw.org/unreported (magistrate's recommendation) (recommending denial of lender's motion to dismiss when both expiration date and transaction date left blank; noting that the magistrate had changed his mind based on borrower's briefing regarding how business days are calculated for TIL purposes); Aubin v. Residential Funding Co., 565 F. Supp. 2d 392 (D. Conn. July 11, 2008) (denying lender's motion to dismiss when both the transaction and expiration dates disclosed one day too early; actual expiration date fell on a Saturday, which the court found to be surprising and therefore not clear to the average consumer).

(n145)Footnote 145. Williams v. Empire Funding Corp., 109 F. Supp. 2d 352 (E.D. Pa. 2000) . One court has held that disclosing a longer period than three days for exercising the right to cancel is a violation, reasoning that a contrary interpretation would allow the three-day period to be modified at the discretion of the lender. Henlon v. Goldome Credit Corp., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17464 (S.D. Fla. July 14, 1988) . But see Hawaii Community Fed. Credit Union v. Keka, 11 P.3d 1 (Haw. 2000) .

(n146)Footnote 146. Weeden v. Auto Workers Credit Union, 173 F.3d 857 (6th Cir.) , reported in full at 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5272 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076, 120 S. Ct. 790, 145 L. Ed. 2d 667 (2000) (consumer granted extended right to rescind even though she was a realtor who may have known about rescission rights); Williams v. Empire Funding Corp., 109 F. Supp. 2d 352 (E.D. Pa. 2000) .

(n147)Footnote 147. Jones v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3788 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2006) . But see Hamm v. Ameriquest Mortgage Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21755 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2005) (rejecting the same argument without extended analysis).

(n148)Footnote 148. Kitchen v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 55,628 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 29, 2005) (No. 1:04-CV-2750-BBM), available at www.consumerlaw.org/unreported; Henlon v. Goldome Credit Corp., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17464 (S.D. Fla. July 14, 1988) . But see Hawaii Cmty. Fed. Credit Union v. Keka, 11 P.3d 1 (Haw. 2000) .

(n149)Footnote 149. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(c), 226.23(c). See § 1.08[5] supra.

(n150)Footnote 150. "Spiking" was coined to describe a contractor's practice of doing token work and then telling the consumer the contract was not cancelable.

(n151)Footnote 151. The Third Circuit held that a violation of the delay requirements of Reg. Z § 226.23(c) is not per se a violation which gives rise to a continuing right to rescind. Smith v. Fidelity Consumer Disc. Co., 898 F.2d 896, 904-05 (3d Cir. 1990) . However, this decision, like others, recognizes that, under some circumstances, the premature performance may so undermine the information given about the rescission right that the written notice requirement is thereby violated.

(n152)Footnote 152. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.8.2.2 (6th ed. 2004 and Supp.).

(n153)Footnote 153. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(a).

(n154)Footnote 154. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(c). See, e.g., Mount v. LaSalle Bank Lake View, 926 F. Supp. 759 (N.D.Ill. 1996) , summ. judgment granted, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10252 (N.D. Ill. June 30, 1998) ; Stone v. Mehlberg, 728 F. Supp. 1341 (W.D. Mich. 1989) .

(n155)Footnote 155. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(a)(2), 226.23(a)(2). In 2004, the FRB amended the Commentary to provide that when the consumer sends a rescission notice, sending it to an entity that would qualify as the creditor's or assignee's agent under state law may be effective in some circumstances. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(a)(2)-1, 226.23(a)(2)-1, as amended by 69 Fed. Reg. 16769 (Mar. 31, 2004) (also establishing bright-line rule that sending rescission notice to servicer is effective unless creditor has designated a different agent to receive it).

(n156)Footnote 156. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(b); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(d)(1), 226.23(d)(1). See § 1.08[6] supra, on rescission as a defense to foreclosure. See also Willis v. Friedman, Clearinghouse No. 54,564 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. May 2, 2002) ("[o]nce the right to rescind is exercised, the security interest in the debtor's property becomes void ab initio"). But see Bynum v. Equitable Mortg. Group, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6363, at *45 n.11 (D.D.C. Apr. 7, 2005) (citing Large with approval; when lender contests rescission, security interest is not automatically void); Bertram v. Beneficial Consumer Discount Co., 286 F. Supp. 2d 453 (M.D. Pa. 2003) ; Johnson v. GMAC Mortg. Corp., 162 S.W.3d 110, 120, 121 (Mo. App. 2005) (citing Large with approval). Lippner v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 544 F. Supp. 2d 695 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (holding that security interest becomes void upon mailing of the rescission letter); Ricotta v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13816 (D. Colo. Feb. 22, 2008) (denying lender's motion for summary judgment since genuine issue of material fact whether loan was void upon attempted rescission day after consummation, even though borrower made payments for more than three years after rescinding). But see Dawson v. Thomas (In re Dawson), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1074 (Bankr. D.D.C. Apr. 9, 2008) (characterizing as "minority position" automatic operation of rescission "notwithstanding § 1635(b)"; only notice of rescission was filing of complaint); Bank of N.Y. v. Jordan, 2007 Ohio 4293 (Ohio Ct. App., Cuyahoga County Aug. 23, 2007) (asserting that rescission does not occur automatically but only when a court orders it or a creditor takes steps to honor the right of rescission).

(n157)Footnote 157. Arnold v. W.D.L. Invs., Inc., 703 F.2d 848, 849 (5th Cir. 1983) (notes cancelled along with mortgage); Elsner v. Albrecht, 185 Mich. App. 72, 460 N.W.2d 232 (1990) (consumer can rescind " 'the transaction,' including pendent documents such as the promissory note").

(n158)Footnote 158. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(b); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(d)(1), 226.23(d)(1). See Beneficial Mortgage Co. v. Leach, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 2240 (Ohio Ct. App. May 9, 2002) , appeal denied, 96 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 775 N.E.2d 856 (2002) (ordering points and fees credited to the consumer). But see Coleman v. Equicredit Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 969 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 22, 2002) (erroneously rejecting consumer's claim that upon rescission all payments made should be returned or credited to principal).

(n159)Footnote 159. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(b); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(d)(2), 226.23(d)(2). This time period was increased from 10 days by TIL Simplification to give the creditor a better opportunity to determine if the consumer has properly rescinded. S. Rep. No. 368, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 29, reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. 234, 264.

(n160)Footnote 160. E.g., Harris v. Tower Loan of Miss., Inc., 609 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1980) ; Rudisell v. Fifth Third Bank, 622 F.2d 243 (6th Cir. 1980) ; Mayfield v. Vanguard Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 710 F. Supp. 143 (E.D. Pa. 1989) ; Bilal v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Bilal), 296 B.R. 828, 839 (D. Kan. 2003) .

(n161)Footnote 161. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(b); Reg. Z §§ 226.15(d)(3), 226.23(d)(3). See also Abbott v. Shaffer, 564 F. Supp. 1200, 1208 (D. Utah 1983) (tender deficient because consumer tendered only the loan documents, not the loan proceeds); Quenzer v. Advanta Mortgage Corp. (In re Quenzer), 274 B.R. 899 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2001) , rev'd, remanded, 288 B.R. 884 (D. Kan. 2003) (tender amount is principal minus closing costs and all payments); Large v. Conseco Fin. Servicing Corp., 292 F.3d 49 (1st Cir. 2002) (in contrast to common law rescission, borrower need not first return the loan proceeds to effect rescission); Basnight v. Diamond Developers, Inc., 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D.N.C. 2001) (where creditor refused to cancel, borrower's duty to return the property never arose).

(n162)Footnote 162. Reg. Z §§ 226.15(d), 226.23(d). See, e.g., Ralls v. Bank of New York (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (court recognizes that it has authority to eliminate the debtor's obligation entirely and to require creditor to refund all the debtor's payments, but denies this remedy here on the ground that it should be reserved for cases where the creditor attempts to cheat or deceive the consumer; the court does, however, subtract the debtor's payments from the creditor's unsecured proof of claim); Reynolds v. D & N Bank, 792 F. Supp. 1035 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (court gave creditor 20 days from date of its order upholding consumer's right to rescind to comply with its obligations). For an extensive discussion of issues that arise in exercising the extended rescission right, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 6.6 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.), and for practical tips for enforcing rescission, see § 6.9. See Quenzer v. Advanta Mortgage Corp. (In re Quenzer), 266 B.R. 760 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2001) , rev'd, remanded, 288 B.R.

884 (D. Kan. 2003) (for meticulous analysis of the court's equitable modification authority). See Johnson v. GMAC Mortg. Corp., 162 S.W.3d 110, 120-21 (Mo. App. 2005) (in contrast to common law, tender is not prerequisite for TIL rescission). See Ramirez v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Ramirez), 329 B.R. 727 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2005) (fact that debt would be unsecured in bankruptcy justifies modification).

(n163)Footnote 163. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.15(d)(4)-1 (open-end credit), 226.23(d)(4)-1 (closed-end credit) (emphasis added). Cf. Stanley v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Stanley), 315 B.R. 602, 615-16 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2004) (agreeing with this interpretation of Reg. Z, but finding it contrary to the Act because voiding of the security interest is a step in the rescission procedure; court was also concerned to avoid a windfall to the debtor).

(n164)Footnote 164. Comptroller of the Currency, OCC Bulletin 2004-19 (May 7, 2004), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/bulletin/2004-19.doc.

(n165)Footnote 165. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1635(g), 1640(g). See, e.g., Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) ; Curry v. Fidelity Consumer Disc. Co., 656 F. Supp. 1129 (E.D. Pa. 1987) (damages as well as rescission); In re Moore, 117 B.R. 135 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) (statutory damages for disclosure violations available by way of recoupment); In re Underwood, 66 B.R. 656 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1986) .

(n166)Footnote 166. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a) (text following subparagraph (a)(4)). See, e.g., Buick v. World Sav. Bank, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48801 (E.D. Cal. June 11, 2008) (finding lender's failure to honor rescission notice "a distinct and actionable violation"); Brannon v. Bridge Capital Corp., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41949 (M.D. Ala. May 27, 2008) (awarding statutory damages for failure to make disclosures and for failure to honor rescission notice); Ebron v. First Franklin Fin. Corp. (In re Ebron), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 917 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Mar. 25, 2008) (denying lender's motion to dismiss statutory damages claim for failure to respond to rescission notice); Lippner v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 544 F. Supp. 2d 695 (N.D. Ill 2008) (finding assignee who failed to respond to proper rescission notice liable for statutory damages); In re Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45676 (N.D. Ill. June 25, 2007) (denying motion to dismiss statutory damages claim when lender failed to respond to rescission notice). But cf. Dawson v. Thomas (In re Dawson), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1074 (Bankr. D.D.C. Apr. 9, 2008) (granting rescission but denying claim for statutory damages for failure to honor right of rescission; creditor not obligated to rescind until court orders creditor to do so; only notice of rescission was filing of complaint).

(n167)Footnote 167. See also In re Kenderdine, 118 B.R. 258 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) (failure to correctly disclose on the rescission note the date the right to rescind expired violated 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a) and Reg. Z § 226.23(b)(5) and gave rise to a claim for statutory damages). But see 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(2); § 1.08[6][c][iii] supra , on the one violation for which Congress gave immunity.

(n168)Footnote 168. See Smith v. Fidelity Consumer Disc. Co., 898 F.2d 896 (3d Cir. 1989) .

(n169)Footnote 169. This may arise in the home improvement context, in a spiking or two-contract dodge case. See § 1.08[6][c][iv] supra.

(n170)Footnote 170. See, e.g., Gerasta v. Hibernia Nat'l Bank, 575 F.2d 580 (5th Cir. 1978) ; Abel v. Knickerbocker Realty Co., 846 F. Supp. 445 (D. Md. 1994) ; Elliott v. ITT Corp., 764 F. Supp. 102 (N.D. Ill. 1991) ; In re Wright, 133 B.R. 704 (E.D. Pa. 1991) . See also Gombosi v. Carteret Mortgage Corp., 894 F. Supp. 176 (E.D. Pa. 1995) (failure to honor a rescission request is a separate violation, giving rise to a separate claim for damages; dicta), aff'd without opinion, 91 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 1996) .

It is necessary to draft your pleadings properly to request such damages in order to receive them; see, e.g., Rowland v. Magna Millikin Bank, 812 F. Supp. 875 (C.D. Ill. 1992) , in which damages were denied because not properly requested in complaint. See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Law Pleadings With Disk, Number One, Ch. 8 (1994).

(n171)Footnote 171. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(a). See § 1.09[3] infra.

(n172)Footnote 172. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(c). See § 1.09[2][g] infra. See, e.g., Stone v. Mehlberg, 728 F. Supp. 1341, 1348 (W.D. Mich. 1989) ; In re Myers, 175 B.R. 122 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994) (Freddie Mac, an assignee, liable for rescission, damages and fee claims; facial violation requirement of Massachusetts equivalent of § 1641(a) does not affect action against assignee by consumer who has right to rescind). But cf. Brodo v. Bankers Trust Co., 847 F. Supp. 353 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (allowed rescission, but refused to assess damages and attorney fees against assignee). But see Coleman v. Equicredit Corp. of Am., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 969 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 22, 2002) (erroneously stating that assignee is liable for rescission only where violations are apparent on face of contract; court is apparently unaware of § 1635(c)). Belini v. Washington Mutual Bank, 412 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 2005) (debtor can seek rescission against assignee as though that assignee were original creditor under either Mass. TILA or federal TILA); Hammox v. Heartland Home Fin., Inc., 2005 WL 1130347, at *2 (E.D. Tenn. May 13, 2005); Adams v. Nationscredit Fin. Servs. Corp., 351 F. Supp. 2d 829, 834 (N.D. Ill. 2004) ; Pulphus v. Sullivan, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13234 (N.D. Ill. July 14, 2004) . See also Kane v. Equity One, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23810 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2003) (rescission available against assignee, but not monetary penalty or attorney fees unless violation is apparent on face of document). But see Murry v. America's Mortg. Banc, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12045 (N.D. Ill. June 25, 2004) (misreading statute; stating that rescission is available against assignee only if violation is apparent on face of documents).

(n173)Footnote 173. Failure to respond to a proper rescission notice gives rise to a separate claim for statutory damages, apart from damages for any disclosure violations. See, e.g., Shepeard v. Quality Siding & Window Factory, Inc., 730 F. Supp. 1295, 1301 n.8 (D. Del. 1990) . Cf. In re Myers, 175 B.R. 122 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994) (assignee Freddie Mac liable for statutory damage and fee claims for nondelivery of disclosures; facial violation requirement of state equivalent of § 1641(a) does not affect action against assignee by consumer who has right to rescind, as § 1641(e) corollary "otherwise provides" for assignee liability).

(n174)Footnote 174. Payton v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2003) ; Walker v. Gateway Fin. Corp., 286 F. Supp. 2d 965 (N.D. Ill. 2003) ; Brodo v. Bankers Trust Co., 847 F. Supp. 353 (E.D. Pa. 1994) . See also Siner v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12924 (E.D. Pa. July 8, 2004) (assignees not liable for rescission violations; no discussion of liability if underlying disclosure violations are apparent on face of documents); Kane v. Equity One, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23810 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2003) (same).

(n175)Footnote 175. See Fairbanks Capital Corp. v. Jenkins, 225 F. Supp. 2d 910, 916-17 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (accepting this rationale as basis for assignee liability for attorney fees for refusing rescission; finding it unnecessary to rule whether assignee is also liable for statutory damages for rescission violation).

(n176)Footnote 176. See, e.g., Weeden v. Auto Workers Credit Union, Inc., 173 F.3d 857 (6th Cir.) , reported in full at 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5272 (6th Cir. Mar. 19, 1999) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1076, 120 S. Ct. 790, 145 L. Ed. 2d 667 (2000) (awarding fees in rescission case); Steinbrecher v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc. Co., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10480 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 9, 1990) (attorney fee award of $11,248.35 in TILA rescission case litigated in debtor's bankruptcy; court noted that, in addition to the monetary judgment awarded to the debtor and the extinguishments of the creditor's claim, "there is a societal benefit to the successful assertion of private attorney general statutes beyond the monetary recovery obtained by a particular plaintiff"); Ralls v. Bank of New York (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) ; Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) , aff'd, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12512 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 1999) (awarding fees). But cf. Brodo v. Bankers Trust Co., 847 F. Supp. 353 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (attorney fees not awarded against assignee).

(n177)Footnote 177. Brodo v. Bankers Trust Co., 847 F. Supp. 353 (E.D. Pa. 1994) . See also Lippner v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 544 F. Supp. 2d 695 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (finding assignee liable for attorney fees since violations apparent on the face of the document).

(n178)Footnote 178. Rowland v. Novus Fin. Corp., 949 F. Supp. 1447 (D. Haw. 1996) .

(n179)Footnote 179. See Myers v. Citicorp Mortgage, 878 F. Supp. 1553 (M.D. Ala. 1995) (former holder of obligation was liable for TIL violations even though it had assigned the obligation to another entity; note that Congress enacted § 1641(f) in response to this case to exempt servicers, but did not otherwise affect its holding); see generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 6.9 (6[th] ed. 2007).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.09

§ 1.09 Creditor Defenses and Counterclaims

Several defenses against TILA actions are available to creditors, and the defenses apply, for the most part, to both open- and closed-end credit transactions.

[1] Statute of Limitations

Like all statutory causes of action, TILA claims are subject to a statute of limitations. There is a one-year statute of limitations for TILA actions. n1 That is, an action for civil liability under TILA must be filed within one year from the date of occurrence of the violation. There are two circumstances in which courts permit the filing of suit more than one year after the TIL disclosures were or should have been provided.

First, when there is a right of rescission, the one-year statute for statutory damages runs from the date required rescission procedures are violated, even though those violations occur up to three years after initial TIL disclosures were due. n2 Second, under principles of equity, a creditor's fraudulent concealment of facts may toll the statute of limitations, in effect extending the limitation period.

For open- and closed-end credit disclosures and for violations of the rescission process, n3 the one-year limitations period begins not the day of, but the day after the occurrence triggering the running of the period. n4 States granted exemptions may have a longer statute of limitations period. n4.1

There are different triggering dates for the running of the statute of limitations for open- and closed-end credit disclosure violations. Closed-end credit disclosures generally must be made before consummation of the transaction, n5 and the triggering date is the date of consummation itself. n6 If disclosures are never made, the consummation date remains the triggering date. n7 But if the disclosures are made after the consummation date, the limitation period begins to run from the date closed-end disclosures are actually given. n8

The running of the statute of limitations period for open-end credit is somewhat different than for closed-end credit. The initial disclosure statement must be given to the consumer before the first transaction which obligates the consumer to the plan. n9 However, the consumer will often be unable to discover a disclosure statement error upon receipt of the initial statement. The limitations period should not begin to run until the transaction charge is subsequently incurred and appears on a subsequent statement. n10

Open-end credit also involves repeated billings and it is common for the same error to occur on successive billing statements. In such cases, a new statutory period begins each time the defective statement is given, thereby extending the time for bringing an action to a year from receipt of the last billing. n11 Similarly, the limitations period may not begin to run until a later time for some FCBA n12 violations.

The FCBA is part of the TILA to which the one-year statute of limitations generally applies. When a consumer sends a notice of a billing error, FCBA provides that a creditor:

- Must acknowledge the receipt of the billing error notice in 30 days;
- Must investigate and resolve the billing error dispute within two billing cycles or 90 days;
- May not attempt to collect the amount disputed prior to resolution of the dispute;
- May not threaten to report adversely on the consumer's credit standing during the pendency of correction of billing error procedures;
- May not report disputed amounts as delinquent until after correction of error procedures are completed; and
- Must report subsequent resolution of any delinquencies to whomever delinquencies were initially reported. n13

Some of these requirements have a specific time frame for the creditor to fulfill its duties under FCBA, e.g., thirty days to acknowledge the receipt of a billing error notice. For those requirements, the statute of limitations for a violation of that duty runs from the end of the time frame. n14 Other violations of FCBA, for example, a failure to report the resolution of a billing dispute to the credit bureau to which it reported the delinquency, are continuing violations. In such cases, an action is timely even if filed more than a year after the billing dispute was resolved. n15 A claim for a violation of the limits on liability for unauthorized use provision n16 accrues when the consumer's account is debited with the charge. n17

Although there is no separate statute of limitations for rescission, the combination of the one-year limitation with the rules of rescission commonly means that monetary damage claims for rescission violations may be brought up to just over four years after consummation of the consumer credit transaction. n18

The end of the statute of limitations period may be much later because the right to rescind may itself extend for up to three years in the event the creditor failed to provide all material disclosures and proper notice of the right to rescind. n19 The consumer may rescind at any time during this extended period, and the creditor's failure to respond properly to the rescission gives rise to a cause of action and damage claim at that time. The creditor's failure thus may occur up to three years and twenty days after the transaction date, and the one-year statute of limitations begins to run only then. n20

Some extensions of credit are set up in a way that creates repeat transactions. Payday loans, in which the borrower enters into a new agreement with each rollover, are the prime example. n21 Each rollover may be a separate failure to disclose, starting a new one-year period for filing suit. n22 Auto pawn transactions may be set up in the same way. n23

Fraudulent concealment of a TILA violation may toll the statute of limitations, thus extending the time in which a consumer may raise a TIL claim. The doctrine of fraudulent concealment is a matter of equity to be applied to avoid unjust results. n24

In addition, if the statute of limitations has run and bars the filing of a suit, a consumer nevertheless may often be able to raise TILA claims as a defense by way of recoupment. n25 In this manner, a creditor's monetary recovery is reduced by the amount of the available TIL recovery. In some cases, it may also be possible to deal with a TIL statute of limitations problem by pleading a parallel cause of action under state law, such as an unfair and deceptive acts and practices ("UDAP") claim. n26 If the state law claim has a more generous statute of limitations, the consumer may be able to win at least the remedies allowed by state law.

Though, in the past, rescission claims were permitted after the three-year period had run where raised by recoupment, the Supreme Court in Beach v. Ocwen Federal Bank has foreclosed this possibility as a matter of federal law. n27 Rescission claims "relevant under" TILA can still be raised by way of recoupment under state law. n28

Since most creditor actions against consumers are filed in state court, state law will decide whether a consumer's TILA claim may be raised as a recoupment defense. The vast majority of federal and state courts have determined that TILA claims may be raised defensively after the limitations period has expired. n29

TIL claims may also be raised by way of recoupment in bankruptcy after the limitations period has run. n30 Bankruptcy can be an important forum for raising such claims, as it can offer a vehicle for recoupment when state law would otherwise provide none. Note that if the creditor's original claim is withdrawn, the consumer may not be permitted to proceed with a recoupment counterclaim as an independent action if filed after the limitations period. n31

[2] Statutory Defenses

[a] Good Faith Conformity

TILA provides that creditors are not liable for acts done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any FRB rule, regulation, or interpretation, or with any interpretation or approval by an authorized Federal Reserve official or employee. n32 Similarly, the creditor is deemed to be in compliance with the disclosure requirements provided it uses the appropriate model forms or clauses promulgated by the FRB as part of Regulation Z. n33 This good faith defense, if successful, shields the creditor from actual and statutory damages, attorney fees, and costs as provided by section 1640, the civil liability section of the Act. n34 However, the conformity defense should not defeat the exercise of a consumer's right to rescind a transaction. n35

Under the New Act, the creditor's good faith defense is limited to conformity with the Regulation and the Commentary, which is now the vehicle for providing official FRB staff interpretations. n36 The good faith conformity defense provides no protection for creditor's reliance on court decisions. n37

If the creditor misreads or misconstrues the provision, it is not entitled to the defense, n38 even if the mistake is a reasonable one. n39 However, where the provision is ambiguous and the creditor reasonably construes the provision as applying to its act or omission, it may be entitled to the conformity defense. n40 Whether the creditor's construction was a reasonable one requires a case-by-case determination. Whether a creditor acted in good faith is a question of fact, which cannot be determined on the pleadings. n41

[b] Bona Fide Error Defense

TILA's "bona fide error" defense provides that a creditor or assignee will not be held liable where it "shows by a preponderance of evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error." n42 The defense does not include errors of legal judgment, and is sometimes called the clerical error defense.

With a successful bona fide error defense, a creditor "may not be held liable in any action brought under this section [§ 1640] or section 1635." n43 The defense therefore insulates a creditor from statutory liability for both disclosure violations and for violations of the section governing rescission procedures. n44 However, the bona fide error defense probably does not defeat the right of rescission itself.

The creditor has the burden of establishing three necessary elements of the bona fide error defense: n45

1) The error must have been unintentional;

2) It must have been the type of error falling within the statutory notion of bona fide error; and

3) Finally, the creditor must have been maintaining procedures reasonably adapted to avoid the error.

To raise this affirmative defense, the creditor must first plead it in its answer, or the defense will be waived. n46

[c] Faulty Calculation Tool Defense

This is a narrow defense, applicable only to erroneous disclosures of the finance charge or annual percentage rate. n47

[d] Correction of Errors Defense

The fourth statutory defense requires a creditor to have acted promptly to correct errors. n48 Although the TILA itself suggests that any error may be corrected, n49 courts will generally not allow the correction of informational as opposed to clerical or mathematical errors. n50 The statutory subsection that creates the correction of error defense states that the creditor has no liability "under this section [1640] or section 1607 of this title or section 1611 of this title." n51 Section 1607 deals with administrative enforcement and section 1611 deals with criminal penalties. By contrast, the section creating the bona fide error defense states that a creditor may not be held liable in any action brought "under this section [1640] or section 1635 of this title." n52 Section 1635 is the section that authorizes rescission. While there are no cases addressing the issue, the clear implication of the explicit mention of rescission in the bona fide error defense but not in the correction of error defense is that the latter defense does not apply to rescission. Allowing rescission even after the creditor corrects an error makes sense, since if the creditor's error involved a material disclosure the consumer should be given the opportunity to evaluate whether to rescind the transaction in light of the different terms. It is true that the correction of error defense explicitly protects the creditor from liability under section 1640, and 1640 mentions rescission in several places. However, the bona fide error defense protects the creditor in any action brought under either "this section [1640] or section 1635," demonstrating that, when Congress intended to grant protection from rescission it mentioned rescission explicitly. A creditor cannot use a contract clause to expand its correction-of-error rights. n53

[e] Effect of Subsequent Occurrences

A creditor pleading the fifth defense must show that initially correct disclosures became inaccurate because of subsequent occurrences. With this defense, TILA provides that there is no violation when properly disclosed information becomes inaccurate because of actions subsequent to the delivery of the disclosures. n54

[f] Governmental Agencies Acting as Creditors

Another statutory defense may be raised only by government agencies, which are exempt from TIL civil and criminal liability. Even so, a government agency must nonetheless make proper TIL disclosures. Moreover, when a government agency assigns a consumer credit contract, the assignees will be liable for violations apparent on the face of the disclosure. n55 Rescission, however, may be allowed against federal or local agencies.

[g] Assignee Liability

The extent of an assignee's liability for TIL violations depends upon what remedy is being sought and upon the nature of the violation. In cases of rescission, and for high-cost mortgages subject to the HOEPA, special rules relating to assignees apply. n56

A consumer may assert the rescission rights under section 1635 against an assignee to the full extent they would have been available against the originating creditor. n57 This right of rescission against an assignee applies whether or not the TILA violation on which the rescission is based was apparent on the face of the disclosure statement. n58

In contrast, when civil liability under section 1640 is sought, assignees are liable only for those disclosures which are apparent on the face of the documents assigned. n59 As a practical matter, this means that if by looking at the promissory note, disbursal statement, RESPA settlement statement or the like, an error in the TIL disclosures would be discernible, the assignee should be liable. n60 Duplicate charges for the same type of fee should also be apparent on the face of the documents. n61 (This limited liability provision extends only to "voluntary" assignees.) Moreover, except in a transaction subject to the right to rescind, n62 innocent assignees are entitled to an irrebuttable presumption of delivery of disclosures where there is a written acknowledgment of receipt. n63

TIL violations may occur in transactions which are subject to the FTC's "holder" rule, which makes assignees liable generally for any claims and defenses which a buyer could have asserted against a seller. The courts are split on the impact of the rule for TIL claims. n64 The Third, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits and a number of district court decisions have, however, concluded that the TILA assignee provisions override the FTC Holder Rule. n65

There is also a good argument that the defense that the violation is not apparent on the face of the documents assigned only applies when the consumer brings an affirmative action to enforce TIL liability, not to defenses and setoffs that the consumer asserts after an assignee sues on the debt. The language of section 1641(a) reads: "any civil action for a violation of this subchapter or proceeding under section 1607 of this title [relating to administrative enforcement] which may be brought against a creditor may be maintained against an assignee" only if the violation is apparent on the face of the documents. The common meaning of a "civil action" is an affirmative suit, not a defense. This understanding of the term is consistent with Congress' use of it elsewhere in TILA. For example, in section 1640(e), in setting the limitations period for TIL claims, Congress referred to an "action" as something distinct from a defense or setoff. In contrast to section 1641(a), other defenses created by TILA, such as the effect of a signed acknowledgment of receipt of the TIL disclosures, apply more broadly to "any action or proceeding by or against" an assignee, n66 showing that Congress knew how to apply a defense to a setoff or recoupment claim when it wanted to.

As a general rule, assignees are liable only for TIL violations if the violation is apparent on the face of the disclosure statement. n67

If the obligation is a high-cost mortgage covered by the Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act (HOEPA), the creditor is subject to "all claims and defenses" (not just those arising under TILA) that could be asserted against the original creditor. n68

[h] Special Defenses Created by 1995 Amendments

The TILA Amendments of 1995 created some new defenses which may protect a lender from liability. The amendments offered retroactive immunity from liability for certain specific violations and granted a wider tolerance level for the finance charge disclosure and other disclosures affected by it.

Though these newly created defenses are in general quite generous to lenders, Congress carved out a special set of rules to be applied when a TIL violation is alleged as part of a rescission defense against a foreclosure. n69 The defensive rescission standards are both retroactive and prospective.

These new defenses are discussed generally below. n70

[i] Retroactive Immunity (General)

The retroactive immunity provisions apply only to closed-end real estate or dwelling secured transactions consummated prior to September 30, 1995. n71 There is a grandfather clause, exempting certain cases in progress from this retroactive immunity.

In contrast to the bona fide error defense authorized by the statute, n72 this immunity is intended to protect lenders against good faith errors in legal judgment in determining how to treat a particular charge. It is not intended to give them room to safely pad loan fees, n73 and, thus, should not protect lenders imposing fees that are not bona fide.

There is no civil, criminal, administrative, or rescission liability n74 arising from the way the creditor treated for disclosure purposes the following types of charges:

a) Taxes on security instruments or notes where required for recording the security instrument; n75

b) Loan document preparation fees in real-estate secured loans; n76

c) Appraisal fees, pest inspection fees, or flood hazard inspections, if conducted prior to closing in real estate secured loans; n77

d) Fees and amounts imposed by third party closing agents, if the creditor does not require the imposition of the charges or services provided, and does not retain the charges. (Note that this will ordinarily apply only to incidental fees incurred by the closing agent, not to the fee for the closing agent's own services. Where a third party agent conducts a closing, in the vast majority of cases it is because the lender requires that a third party agent be used.) n78

Second, except in connection with a rescission claim being asserted to defend against foreclosure, n79 there is no liability for any disclosure error resulting from the way a borrower-paid mortgage broker fee was treated. n80 This does not provide immunity against liability under any other statute or common law theory. n81

Borrower-paid brokers' fees are now included in the finance charge as a per se rule. n82

Third, if a covered lender's only error was to select the wrong FRB model form (or a comparable one), no TIL liability will attach. However, all the other requirements regarding the notice of right to cancel remain in place, and a violation of any other requirement will still lead to liability. n83 This provision does not apply in connection with rescission in a foreclosure defense. n84

Fourth, there are new rules regarding the tolerance for error in disclosing the finance charge and related disclosures, except in defensive rescission. Even if an alleged finance charge error does not arise out of the treatment of one of the charges listed above, a covered creditor may still benefit from this retroactive immunity. n85

Finally, as noted earlier, while allowing "close enough" to be the measure for determining liability as a general rule, if the lender is trying to foreclose on the consumer's home, it will be held to a stricter standard of compliance. n86 The new defensive rescission standards apply both retroactively and prospectively. n87

[3] Creditor Defenses Not Expressly Provided by TILA

Below is a discussion of some defenses often raised by creditors in response to allegations of TIL violations.

[a] Technical Violations

It is not a defense that the violation is technical or de minimis. The Act now specifies certain allowable inaccuracies in the APR and finance charge. n88

A 2009 First Circuit decision, Melfi v. WMC Mortgage Corp., n88.1 erroneously construes another set of TIL amendments--the 1995 Rodash fix--as justification for retreating from the strict compliance standard. n88.2 The 1995 amendments created a very narrow and specific set of prospective and retroactive tolerances and immunities. Congress could have eliminated substantive TIL rights altogether, or provided larger tolerances or a substantial compliance standard, but did not. The mere fact that it intended to benefit lenders with the amendments that it did adopt is not a reason to construe the statute as creating defenses for lenders that Congress did not adopt. n88.3

[b] Consumer Not Misled

It is also not a defense to TIL liability that the debtor was not misled by the violation or that the debtor knew about the error and was not damaged by it. n89 Creditors may be more successful in alleging that the debtor provided faulty information that directly led to the TIL violation. n90 But creditors have not been able to hide behind minor consumer errors unrelated to the TIL violation, such as inadvertently entering into a transaction under a maiden name instead of a married name. n91

[c] Waiver of TIL Rights

A general boilerplate waiver of release in the credit agreement which discharges a creditor from any claims arising out of a transaction is not effective to waive or release the creditor for its TILA violations. n92 Less clear is the effect of a specific waiver containing a clear reference to TILA claims. n93 At the least, the standard criteria that a waiver should be a voluntary relinquishment of a known right should be applicable. n94

[d] Retroactivity of Judicial Decisions and FRB Amendments

Creditors often argue that a court's TIL decision favorable to consumers should have only prospective application; that is, creditors should not be expected to comply with a disclosure requirement of which they argue they were unaware. However, in the federal court system, when a court applies a rule of federal law to the parties before it, that rule is the controlling interpretation of federal law and must be given full retroactive effect in all cases still open to direct review and as to all events, regardless of whether such events predate or postdate the announcement of the rule. n95

Similar questions arise when the FRB amends Regulation Z or the Commentary. The Act provides that amendments to Regulation Z or the Commentary that require new or different disclosures are, except in special circumstances, to be effective on the October 1 that is at least six months after the date of promulgation. n96 This rule only applies to changes affecting disclosure requirements, however. Further, this rule applies only to changes. When an amendment clarifies "an unsettled or confusing area of law," rather than effecting a substantive change, it has been applied retroactively. n97

[4] Jurisdictional and Procedural Defenses and Issues

TIL actions may be brought "in any United States district court, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction," n98 allowing the consumer to sue in either state or federal court. TILA is one of several federal statutes providing for concurrent state and federal court jurisdiction.

TIL suits in federal court, being based on a federal statute, need not satisfy diversity or amount in controversy requirements and may also be brought in federal bankruptcy court where the TIL claim arises from the administration of the debtor's estate. n99

A consumer plaintiff in state court who wishes to avoid removal may do so by framing the cause of action under state law and seeking only relief provided by state law, even if the same disclosure inadequacies would constitute TIL violations. n100 A consumer defendant in state court who would prefer a federal forum cannot create a basis for a section 1441 removal by filing a TIL counterclaim; the federal question must appear in the complaint. n101 Faced with a completely non-federal complaint, the consumer could get a federal forum only through bankruptcy removal n102 or filing a TIL complaint in a separate, parallel action in federal court.

Consumer TILA claims often arise out of a broader dispute with a creditor. Consequently, claims such as deceptive practices, fraud, state warranty law, and state disclosure law claims are frequently included with TILA claims. Since these other claims are frequently state claims, providing no independent basis of federal jurisdiction, consumers must depend on pendent court jurisdiction to raise them in federal court.

Civil actions filed on or after December 1, 1990 are governed by the codification of the principles of pendent and ancillary jurisdiction contained in the Judicial Improvements Act of 1990. n103 This Act should be consulted in addressing issues of federal court jurisdiction.

A creditor counterclaim on the underlying debt is a state law claim and presents no independent basis for federal jurisdiction. When a consumer has filed a TIL claim in federal court, the creditor's counterclaim must meet the test for supplemental jurisdiction included in the Judicial Improvements Act of 1990 as must a consumer's pendent state claims. n104

Sometimes a consumer who counterclaims under TILA against a state court collection suit will also file a separate, affirmative TILA action in federal court. The creditor might seek a stay of the federal court action, arguing priority or greater progress of the state court action.

Under the Supreme Court's "exceptional circumstances" test, a TILA action in federal court should normally be resistant to a motion for stay. n105 Nevertheless, the district court will have some discretion in the matter n106 and can legitimately weigh a number of factors, including the relative progress of the state and federal proceedings. n107

[5] Res Judicata May Bar Claims

Whether an earlier judgment bars a later TILA action will depend on exactly what was at issue in the earlier case and is, consequently, a case-by-case determination. n108 Generally, res judicata does not apply where a consumer brings a TIL action after having previously brought and adjudicated a state law claim involving disclosure requirements different from those required by TILA. n109 Similarly, a rescission action may not be barred by prior TIL litigation which did not involve rescission. n110 Res judicata usually applies if the litigants in the new suit are the same as in the previous suit or are in privity with the previous litigants. n111

While the doctrine of collateral estoppel can also bar relitigation of issues, it will not bar a TIL claim filed after the conclusion of a collection action unless the TIL issues were actually litigated in the collection action. Collateral estoppel generally applies only if the party against whom the estoppel is asserted was a party to the prior adjudication; the issues which form the basis of the estoppel were actually litigated and decided on the merits in the prior suit; the resolution of the particular issues was necessary to the court's judgment; and those issues are identical to issues raised in the subsequent suit. n112

A related doctrine is judicial estoppel, which prevents a party from raising issues in a legal proceeding that are inconsistent with a position the party has previously advanced. n113 Courts have applied this doctrine to bar TIL rescission claims that debtors failed to list as assets in earlier bankruptcy proceedings. n114 Where a potential TIL claim was not listed in an earlier bankruptcy case, the consumer should consider moving to reopen that case to list the claim. Debtors are generally permitted to reopen bankruptcy cases and amend the schedules, including the list of property claimed as exempt, as long as the debtor has acted in good faith and no prejudice will result. n115

[6] TIL Claims and Arbitration Clauses

[a] Introduction

Often the consumer's loan contract will contain a clause subjecting all claims to arbitration. Another chapter n116 analyzes generally applicable challenges to arbitration clauses, such as:

- Unconscionability;
- Misrepresentation;
- Waiver;
- Lack of mutuality;
- Repeat player bias and other arbitration service provider bias; and
- Interpretation of the clause not to include the particular dispute or parties.

There are four arbitration issues, however, that have particular relevance to TIL cases: the effect of rescission on arbitration clauses, and whether an arbitration clause is enforceable if it precludes class actions, denies attorney fees or other TIL relief to the prevailing consumer, or imposes high arbitration costs.

[b] Arbitration Clauses and TIL Rescission

Rescission under TILA is self-executing: the security interest becomes void automatically by operation of law, the consumer's obligation to pay finance and other charges is cancelled, and the creditor has the obligation to take various steps, such as returning the consumer's payments. n117 If the consumer rescinds, there is no contract. If there is no contract, there can be no binding arbitration clause.

Arbitration agreements are not binding if the whole contract of which they are a part is void. n118 Decisions considering contracts that have been cancelled or voided under various statutes or common law rules hold that the arbitration clause has no effect. n119 In Cardegna v. Buckeye Check Cashing, the Florida Supreme Court decided that in a consumer's claim against a payday lender, the entire contract was void ab initio because it was illegal should be decided by a court, and not an arbitrator. n120

The U.S. Supreme Court reversed the Florida court in February, 2006. n121 The Court stated that whether a contract is void is for the arbitrator to decide, not the court. n122 Thus, if there is a dispute as to whether the consumer has rescinded properly under TIL, that issue would be for the arbitrator because it goes to the validity of the agreement as a whole. This decision will almost certainly dramatically affect this area of the law.

Courts will generally not enforce an arbitration agreement where the parties never entered into the agreement. Similarly, they should not enforce an arbitration agreement that is only provisionally entered into, subject to the consumer's automatic right to cancel.

Only a handful of cases, however, have considered whether arbitration clauses continue to be effective after the consumer sends a rescission notice. In what will become a pair of oft-cited opinions in this area, the First Circuit in Large and Thompson has ruled that, where the creditor disputes the basis for the rescission, an arbitrator and not the court must decide whether the rescission is proper. n123 The rescission is not automatic where the very basis for the rescission is disputed. The court was concerned that a consumer could send an invalid rescission letter and avoid an otherwise valid arbitration agreement.

The leading pro-consumer decision is Wilson v. Par Builders II, n124 where the court denied the creditor's motion to stay an action pending arbitration. It found that the issue of whether the arbitration clause was enforceable when the transaction was rescinded under TILA is a question for the court, not the arbitrator, to decide.

Even where courts follow Large and accept that the enforceability of a rescission clause is for the arbitrator and not the court to decide, there are a number of contexts where the consumer should still be able to avoid the arbitration requirement. These include:

- Where there is no dispute that rescission is effective, such as when the consumer rescinds during the three-day period, or where the creditor does not dispute the claim that its disclosures are defective, only the tender amount or obligation; n125

- Where the consumer seeks injunctive relief to restrain the creditor from foreclosing and to require it to terminate its security interest, if the arbitrator lacks authority to grant or enforce injunctive relief; n126

- Where relief is sought from a bankruptcy court which has discretion in a "core" proceeding, to hear a dispute, and not to refer it to arbitration, and courts consistently utilize that discretion to hear the dispute; n127 and

- Where the arbitration clause excludes self-help remedies. n128

[c] General Standards as to Whether Arbitration Can Limit Consumer Ability to Vindicate TIL Rights

TIL is a very carefully drafted statute, evidencing Congressional intent to allow private enforcement of the Act's disclosure requirements, even where it is difficult to prove actual damages. An arbitration requirement drastically changes this enforcement scheme, and effectively eliminates class actions. Attorney fees and other remedies may be limited. And the costs of arbitration may so exceed the consumer's possible recovery that individual actions are deterred, even where a prevailing consumer is able to recover all costs.

Arbitration's limit on the effectiveness of the private TIL remedial scheme can be challenged using two different approaches--that the arbitration clause is unenforceable because it conflicts with the Congressional purpose behind TIL n129 or because the clause is unconscionable. n130

An arbitration clause is enforceable only "[so] long as the prospective litigant effectively may vindicate [his or her] statutory cause of action in the arbitral forum." n131 A clause that waives the plaintiff's right to pursue statutory remedies is invalid as against public policy. n132 If a litigant cannot effectively vindicate a statutory cause of action through arbitration, there is a conflict between arbitration and the federal statute's underlying purposes, and the arbitration clause becomes unenforceable. n133

In addition, a growing number of state and federal courts have struck down arbitration clauses as unconscionable. n134 Courts may find arbitration clauses to be unconscionable when some aspect of their language, or some circumstance(s) surrounding their making and/or contemplated implementation render them particularly unfair.

In some cases, such as arbitration clauses that explicitly limit consumer remedies in ways that undermine consumer protection statutes, the substantive unconscionability of a clause may be identified from the face of the clause itself. However, with respect to many other types of unconscionability challenges, such as challenges based upon cost, significant discovery may be necessary to develop an adequate factual record. While most courts require a showing of both procedural and substantive unconscionability, the two factors are often seen as playing against one another in a sliding scale relationship. n135

As a practical matter, many of the grounds for striking down an arbitration clause as inconsistent with TIL overlap with grounds for finding an arbitration clause unconscionable, and a consumer should argue both.

[i] Arbitration Clauses That Preclude or Impede Class Actions

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

Many arbitration clauses explicitly preclude class actions, and even those that are silent are generally interpreted by federal courts not to allow class actions. n136

There is a strong argument that arbitration clauses that forbid class actions conflict with the explicit Congressional intent to effectuate private attorney general enforcement of TILA through class actions. TILA makes creditors liable not only for actual damages in a class action, but also for statutory damages. n137 As is true for individual statutory damage claims, TILA sets guidelines for determining the amount of a class-wide statutory damages award, including a list of factors to consider and a cap. The cap is 500 times the standard cap for individual awards. n138

Nevertheless, many recent court decisions have found no conflict between TILA and an arbitration clause that limits the class action remedy. n139 Only a few courts have ruled otherwise. n140

In 2006, there were even more cases focusing on whether waiver of the right to bring an arbitration on a class-wide basis is unconscionable. Favorable cases for consumers include those from the New Jersey Supreme Court in Muhammad, n141 a Michigan federal court in Wong, n142 an Ohio appellate court, n143 a number of California appellate courts, n144 and a Pennsylvania trial court. n145 A number of courts during that period reached the opposite conclusion. n146 Opinions to the contrary, often based on an insufficient showing of procedural unconscionability, were issued by a Florida appellate court, n147 a New Jersey court, n148 the highest courts of Maryland, n149 and North Dakota, n150 federal courts interpreting Georgia law, n151 and a federal court interpreting Texas law. n152

When the specific provisions for class actions were added to TILA in 1974, Congress stated that "potential class action liability is an important encouragement to the voluntary compliance which is so necessary to insure nationwide adherence to uniform disclosure." n153 The intent of the class action damages provision was to balance TILA's purpose "to provide creditors with a meaningful incentive to comply with the law without relying upon an extensive new bureaucracy" with its concern that creditors not be subjected to enormous penalties for technical violations. n154 The class action remedy is not merely a procedural device; it is an important substantive right under TILA. And class actions make it possible for individuals to play the role of private attorneys general that Congress envisioned. TILA class action lawsuits have raised and successfully challenged abusive industry practices such as charging consumers for a deceptive insurance product, n155 manipulating TILA disclosures to hide credit costs instead of disclosing them, n156 and burying grossly inflated charges in the price of the goods sold. n157 In the absence of class action lawsuits, many of these abusive practices would continue unabated.

[B] Limit on Class Actions as Unconscionable

A number of state and federal courts have held that a waiver of the right to class-wide relief is evidence of an arbitration clause's substantive unconscionability. For example, a federal district court applying California's contract and consumer protection law held that the express class action ban in AT&T's consumer arbitration clause was substantively unconscionable, because it was effectively one-sided as it applied only against consumers and because it would prevent consumers from vindicating their rights in cases involving general practices that result in small amounts of individual damages. n158

In Szetela v. Discover Bank, n159 the California Court of Appeals found unconscionable an arbitration clause that restricted class actions because the clause was one-sided and unfair to customers who had small claims, and because it would serve as a disincentive for Discover to avoid the type of conduct that might lead to a class action, in effect granting it license to push the boundaries of good business practices.

A second, ACORN v. Household International, Inc., n160 struck down as unconscionable an arbitration clause that explicitly limits class actions. In a third case, a Florida appellate court found substantive unconscionability in part based on the arbitration clause's restriction on class actions. The court found the class action essential to pursuit of individual rights where the amount in controversy for each class member is small. n161

Similarly, in Powertel, Inc. v. Bexley, n162 a Florida intermediate appellate court struck down an arbitration clause in a cellular telephone service provider's contract with its consumers in part because it would prohibit class actions, noting that the class action device was the most economically feasible way to address the kinds of claims asserted in that case. There have been three important additions to the case law in this area in 2005. Perhaps the most important is the decision of the California Supreme Court in Discover Bank v. Superior Court (Boehr). n163 The court held as follows:

> [D]amages in consumer cases are often small and because "[a] company which wrongfully exacts a dollar from each of millions of customers will reap a handsome profit," ... "the class action is often the only effective way to halt and redress such exploitation." ... Moreover, such class action or arbitration waivers are indisputably one-sided. "Although styled as a mutual prohibition on representative or class actions, it is difficult to envision the circumstances under which the provision might negatively impact Discover [Bank], because credit card companies typically do not sue their customers in class action lawsuits."

Similarly, a Missouri Court of Appeals held in Whitney v. All-Tel Communications that a class action ban was unconscionable. n164 The court stated:

In Kinkel v. Cingular Wireless, Inc., similarly, an Illinois Court of Appeals held that a contract's "limitation on class arbitration is unconscionable and thus unenforceable." n165

Other courts, however, have rejected the argument that a prohibition of consumer class actions by itself renders an arbitration clause substantively unconscionable. n166

Challenges that provisions in arbitration clauses are unconscionable are often factually intensive disputes in which consumers should be given the opportunity to present evidence. n167 As a result, courts have often held that consumers should be given an opportunity to take discovery to develop an adequate factual record. n168 These principles have been applied by several courts in the setting of challenges to class action bans. Several court decisions striking down class action bans in particular cases have focused heavily on the factual records put forward by the plaintiffs. In one case, for example, a court struck down a class action ban after a two-day evidentiary hearing during which the plaintiffs presented expert testimony that no consumer lawyer in the state would be able to handle a case of that sort on an individual basis. n169 In another case, the Washington Supreme Court struck down a class action ban when the factual record included both similar testimony from consumer law experts and also discovery responses establishing that no consumers had arbitrated any individual cases in that state against that defendant. n170

By the same token, some of the court decisions enforcing class action bans have based their holdings on the fact that the plaintiffs in those cases had failed to introduce admissible evidence that the class action bans were exculpatory in those cases. n171

Some courts have recognized that there will be some cases in which an evidentiary record is necessary, but some cases in which the sums at issue are so small that courts can apply common sense to recognize that class action bans are exculpatory. n172

[ii] Arbitration Clauses That Deny Consumers Attorney Fees or Other TIL Relief

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

Some arbitration agreements or rules require each party to bear their own attorney fees and costs. Such a provision conflicts with the creditor's explicit liability under TILA for the costs of the action and the consumer's attorney fees if the consumer prevails. n173

The right to recover attorney fees and costs is a critical and integral part of TILA. n174 It makes enforcement of TILA practical and deters creditors from contesting meritorious claims. n175 Denial of attorney fees makes it unlikely that a prospective litigant "effectively may vindicate [his or her] statutory cause of action in the arbitral forum." n176 Such a provision renders the clause unenforceable. n177

The same reasoning applies to arbitration clauses that undercut other TIL rights, such as the right to pursue an important statutory remedy--statutory damages--in the arbitral forum. Shortening the statute of limitations would also be inconsistent with TILA and would bar at least some consumers from vindicating their statutory claims. n178

[B] Limits on Relief as Unconscionable

A limitation on statutory attorney fees has also been found to be unconscionable. n179 The unconscionability argument is somewhat weaker when the arbitrator has the authority to award fees to a prevailing consumer, but does not usually do so. n180 On the other hand, if an award of attorney fees to a prevailing consumer is mandatory under a statute, then providing discretion to the arbitrator in deciding whether to provide those fees could lead to an unconscionability finding.

Some arbitration agreements or the rules of certain arbitration mechanisms require that the consumer's claim be brought to arbitration within a set period of time, or the claim is forfeited. This period of time may be substantially shorter than the applicable limitations period for bringing the action in court. Such a limitation has been found to be unconscionable. n181

[iii] Arbitration Clauses That Impose High Fees

[A] Conflict With TIL Statute?

Arbitration filing fees, daily arbitration charges, room charges, motion charges, and the like often make an arbitration proceeding infeasible for consumer claims. n182 The United States Supreme Court in Randolph has stated that excessive arbitration fees can make an arbitration agreement unenforceable, as inconsistent with a grant of federal statutory rights. n183 The Court found, however, that the burden was on the consumer to prove the costs were inconsistent with the statute, and on the facts before it that the consumer in Randolph had not met this burden. To establish that an arbitration clause is unenforceable because of the cost to the consumer, the consumer must show that amount of costs involved deterred him or her from vindicating rights under TILA through arbitration. n184

Some clauses require the consumer to advance the costs of arbitration, but give the arbitrator the authority to allocate costs at the end of arbitration. This authority does not cure the entry barriers caused by the requirement of upfront costs, which would deter most consumers. n185 Similarly, clauses which provide that the creditor will pay all the initial fees, but that fees will be charged to the consumer if the consumer loses, deter enforcement of TILA because they greatly increase the risk to the consumer.

Because of the Supreme Court's ruling in Randolph, the consumer must have an opportunity to conduct discovery on the fee issue. n186 Simply providing the consumer with the arbitration mechanism's fee schedule does not fulfill this right to discovery.

[B] High Fees as Unconscionable

A growing number of courts have found high arbitration fees to be unconscionable. n187 Of particular note are a number of recent cases. A federal court in Tennessee found an arbitration clause unconscionable because American Arbitration Association ("AAA") rules impose fees and costs beyond those present in a case before a judge. n188 The court relied on the individual's affidavit that her income was $7253, and concluded that this showed she could not afford to pay AAA fees and costs.

Neither the fact that the AAA may have waived some of its fees nor the company's offer during litigation to pay for the fees was sufficient to save the arbitration clause. The possibility of high fees will discourage some from pursuing litigation, and companies should not be able to craft unconscionable clauses only to alter them for those few who press the matter.

The California Court of Appeals also has recently refused to enforce an arbitration clause where the record showed that the arbitration proceeding would cost the parties many times more than a court action and that the consumer would be required to pay at least part of that amount. n189 An appeals court in the state of Washington has similarly found that an impoverished consumer cannot be required to arbitrate a $1500 claim where there was evidence that the consumer's filing fee would be $2000. n190

An Ohio appellate court also found an arbitration clause unconscionable where a contract limited consumer remedies to the amount paid to the merchant ($265), and uncontroverted evidence showed that the cost of the arbitration proceeding for the consumer would have been at least $500. n191

The Third Circuit has ruled that consumers must be able to conduct discovery into arbitration costs to prove that resort to arbitration will deny them a forum to vindicate their statutory rights. n192 Some courts have focused not on the ability of plaintiffs to pay arbitration fees, however, but upon the relationship of those fees to the amount at issue. n193

The burden is on the consumer to prove that arbitration costs are inconsistent with statutory rights. The consumer must show that amount of costs involved deterred the consumer from vindicating rights under TILA through arbitration. n194

These decisions and others make clear that if a detailed and persuasive factual case is not made, the court will enforce an arbitration clause. n195

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingLiabilityContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e) (TILA actions must be brought "within one year from the date of the occurrence of the violation"). The Massachusetts statute of limitations on truth in lending claims is four years for damages and rescission. Mass. Gen. L. 260 § 5A. See One Beacon Ins. Co. v. Null, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13513 (E.D. Pa. July 19, 2004) (one-year statute of limitations applies to claim for violation of § 1643 regarding unauthorized use of credit card). Cf. Rodrigues v. Members Mortg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 2d. 202 (D. Mass. 2004) (statute of limitations for statutory damages for disclosure violation is one year; rescission based on same disclosure violation lasts for three years).

(n2)Footnote 2. Clay v. Johnson, 77 F. Supp. 2d 879 (N.D. Ill. 1999) , rev'd on other grounds, 264 F.3d 744 (7th Cir. 2001) (plaintiff is entitled to statutory damages for disclosure violation if suit filed within 1 year, and to statutory damages for rescission violation if right to rescind is exercised within 3 years); Jackson v. US Bank Nat'l Ass'n Trustee (In re Jackson), 245 B.R. 23 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000) (one-year statute of limitations only bars damages for disclosure violations, not damages for refusing to respond to valid, timely, rescission notice). See McNinch v. Mortgage Am., Inc. (In re McNinch), 250 B.R. 848 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000) (statute of limitations for damages for rescission violation runs from date of violation, which is the failure to act, and which becomes a violation 20 days after the creditor receives the notice).

(n3)Footnote 3. Notwithstanding the one-year statute of limitations, the right of rescission may extend up to three years. Consequently, the one-year limitations period may be triggered up to three years after disclosures are required. See § 1.08 supra.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Maahs v. United States, 840 F.2d 863 (11th Cir. 1988) ; Lawson v. Conyers Chrysler, Plymouth & Dodge Trucks, Inc., 600 F.2d 465 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See, e.g., Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 260, § 5A (four-year statute of limitations for violations of Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 140D); Mass. Gen. Laws ch. ch. 140D, § 10(f) (right to rescind expires four years after closing).

(n6)Footnote 5. Reg. Z § 226.17(b). See § 1.05[2][b] supra.

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Moor v. Travelers Ins. Co., 784 F.2d 632 (5th Cir. 1986) ; King v. California, 784 F.2d 910 (9th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802, 108 S. Ct. 47, 98 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1987) ; Steib v. St. James Bank & Trust Co., 642 F. Supp. 910 (E.D. La. 1986) (date promissory note is signed in closed-end transaction begins running of the one year period; even though not all the funds were immediately disbursed, the finance charge was imposed almost immediately).

(n8)Footnote 7. King v. California, 784 F.2d 910 (9th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802, 108 S. Ct. 47, 98 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1987) ; Wachtel v. West, 476 F.2d 1062 (6th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 874, 94 S. Ct. 161, 38 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1973) ; Lawson v. Nationwide Mortgage Corp., 628 F. Supp. 804 (D.D.C. 1986) . See also Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (date that loan was consummated was an issue of fact precluding summary judgment, given that documents and parties' affidavits were in conflict regarding the issue); McNinch v. Mortgage Am., Inc. (In re McNinch), 250 B.R. 848, 857 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000) (consummation occurs when there is a "meeting of the minds"; consummation occurs when the parties agree on essential terms and intend them to be binding, even if a formal document with additional terms is adopted at a later date).

(n9)Footnote 8. Postow v. OBA Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 627 F.2d 1370 (D.C. Cir. 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See § 1.07[2] supra.

(n11)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Goldman v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 532 F.2d 10, 21 (7th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 870 (1976) ; Larobina v. First Union, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3549 (Conn. Super. Ct. Dec. 13, 2001) (for open-ended credit, statute of limitations begins to run when consumer is on notice that a violation has occurred).

(n12)Footnote 11. Ralph J. Rohner & Fred H. Miller, Truth in Lending P 12.05[4][a] (2000); Schmidt v. Citibank (South Dakota) N.A., 645 F. Supp. 214 (D. Conn. 1986) , further proceedings, 677 F. Supp. 687 (D. Conn. 1987) .

(n13)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1666.

(n14)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1666a. See § 1.07[6] supra for more details of a creditor's duty under the FCBA.

(n15)Footnote 14. Burnstein v. Saks Fifth Ave. & Co., 208 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Mich. 2002) ; Steimel v. Trans Union Corp., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4100 (E.D. Pa. May 4, 1988) . Kennedy v. Victoria's Secret Stores, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19525 (E.D. La. Sept. 28, 2004) (suit may be filed within one year of creditor's failure to respond properly to timely notice of billing error).

(n16)Footnote 15. Burnstein v. Saks Fifth Ave. & Co., 208 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Mich. 2002) ; Steimel v. Trans Union Corp., 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4100 (E.D. Pa. May 4, 1988) .

(n17)Footnote 16. 15 U.S.C. § 1643.

(n18)Footnote 17. Draiman v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 892 F. Supp. 1096 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 18. But see Blue v. Fremont Inv. & Loan, 562 F. Supp. 2d 33 (D.D.C. 2008) (rejecting argument that one-year statute of limitations can be added to three-year rescission period to create four-year limitations period for damages claim).

(n20)Footnote 19. See § 1.08[3][c] supra.

(n21)Footnote 20. See McNinch v. Mortgage Am., Inc. (In re McNinch), 250 B.R. 848 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000) (statute of limitations for damages for rescission violation runs from date of violation, which is the failure to act, and which becomes a violation 20 days after the creditor receives the notice). See, e.g., Ralls v. Bank of N.Y. (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (rescission claim allowed where notice of rescission sent within three years and suit filed less than one year later, even though suit was filed outside three-year period); Mayfield v. Vanguard Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 710 F. Supp. 143 (E.D. Pa. 1989) (violation of failing to honor the consumer's exercise of the right to rescind occurs on the 21st day after creditor's receipt of the notice). Cf. Wiggins v. Avco Fin. Servs., 62 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 1999) (damages claim for nondisclosure must be brought within one year of consummation even if same disclosure violations also extend time for rescission; no discussion of damages for failure to respond to rescission notice); Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (claim for statutory damages for failure to recognize the plaintiff's right to rescind was not barred by the statute of limitations when the claim was brought within one year after the expiration of the 20-day period after rescission). Belini v. Washington Mutual Bank, 412 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 2005) (statute of limitations begins to run, at earliest, on date creditor received rescission notice, and "likely 20 days later"). See also McIntosh v. Irwin Union Bank & Trust Co., 215 F.R.D. 26, 30 (D. Mass. 2003) (suggesting that if a claim for rescission is timely because it was exercised within the three-year period set by section 1635(f), then the consumer can also seek damages for disclosure violations even if they would normally be barred by the one-year statute of limitations. But see Brown v. Nationscredit Fin. Servs. Corp., 349 F. Supp. 2d 1134 (N.D. Ill. 2005) ; Bell v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24289 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2004) ; Rodrigues v. Members Mortg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Mass. 2004) (rejecting this argument). Jones v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3788 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2006) (although statutory damages for disclosure violations were time-barred, statutory damages for failure to respond properly to rescission notice were not, when complaint was filed within one year of rescission).

(n22)Footnote 21. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 2.5.5 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n23)Footnote 22. Arrington v. Colleen, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20651 (D. Md. Aug. 7, 2000) . See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.) § 4.9.4 (discussion of whether renewal of payday loan is a refinancing), and § 8.6.3.1 (discussion of multiple transactions in context of statutory damages issues).

(n24)Footnote 23. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 2.5.2 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n25)Footnote 24. The four leading cases holding that the TILA statute of limitations may be equitably tolled are Ellis v. GMAC, 160 F.3d 703 (11th Cir. 1998) ; Ramadan v. Chase Manhattan Corp., 156 F.3d 499 (3d Cir. 1998) ; King v. California, 784 F.2d 910 (9th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802, 108 S. Ct. 47, 98 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1987) ; and Jones v. TransOhio Sav. Ass'n, 747 F.2d 1037 (6th Cir. 1984) . See Weil v. Long Island Sav. Bank, FSB, 77 F. Supp. 2d 313 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (statute of limitations tolled until secret kickback scheme was revealed by publication of OTS investigation); Camunas Cordova v. Banco Bilbao Vizcaya De P.R., 73 F. Supp. 2d 133 (D.P.R. 1999) (recognizing equitable tolling, but holding it inapplicable on facts where consumer could have discovered any disclosure violations more than a year before action filed); Kent v. Celozzi-Ettleson Chevrolet, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17282 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 1, 1999) (discovery rule applies to TIL claim; defendant's motion to dismiss denied). See also Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Dearborn Title Corp., 118 F.3d 1157 (7th Cir. 1997) (holding that fraudulent concealment tolls RESPA statute of limitations, analogizing to TILA); Cardiello v. Money Store, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7107 (S.D.N.Y. May 31, 2001) ; In re Consolidated "Non-Filing Insurance" Fee Litig., 195 F.R.D. 684 (M.D. Ala. 2000) ; Rizzo v. H&R Block, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13259 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 10, 2000) (TIL limitations period is subject to equitable tolling); Kerby v. Mortgage Funding Corp., 992 F. Supp. 787 (D. Md. 1998) ; Anderson v. FNMA, Clearinghouse No. 42,568 Civ. No. 87-0236 (E.D. Va. Nov. 25, 1987) (denies creditor's motion to dismiss based on statute of limitations where consumers alleged fraudulent concealment, citing Jones); Burton v. U.S. Postal Serv., 612 F. Supp. 1057 (N.D. Ohio 1985) (citing Jones in a non-TIL case, court held fraudulent concealment could toll statute of limitations if that would serve the congressional purpose); Roberson v. Cityscape Corp. (In re Roberson), 262 B.R. 312 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2001) ; Matthews v. New Century Mortgage Corp., 185 F. Supp. 2d 874 (S.D. Ohio 2002) (statute of limitations equitably tolled when borrowers were not given opportunity to review TILA disclosures and did not receive copies of any disclosures or loan documents at closing). Reiser v. Residential Funding Corp., 380 F.3d 1027 (7th Cir. 2004) (either equitable tolling or equitable estoppel may apply); Tammerello v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11746 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 2005) ; McAnaney v. Astoria Fin. Corp., 357 F. Supp. 2d 578 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) ; Bolden v. Aames Funding Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44091 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 25, 2005) ; Jackson v. Adcock, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16888 (E.D. La. Aug. 20, 2004) ; Gonzalez v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22705 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 1, 2004) (denial of motion to dismiss). But see Bryant v. Mortgage Capital Res. Corp., 197 F. Supp. 2d 1357 (N.D. Ga. 2002) (no equitable tolling when violations were readily apparent on the face of disclosure documents); Greer v. Bank One, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13715 (N.D. Ill. July 23, 2002) , aff'd, 54 Fed. Appx. 232, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 26352 (7th Cir. 2002) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 54 Fed. Appx. 450, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 566 (7th Cir. 2003) . Note also that the three-year period for the extended right to rescind certain real estate-secured loans is not subject to equitable tolling because it is a statute of repose, not a statute of limitations. See Williams v. EMC Mortgage Corp. (In re Williams), 276 B.R. 394 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2002) ; Garrett v. Fleet Fin. Inc., 252 Ga. App. 47, 556 S.E.2d 140 (2001) ; National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.2.3.1 (5th ed. 2003 and Supp.). See also Ephraim v. e*HomeCredit Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13916* (M.D. Pa. Mar. 13, 2006) ; Veal v. Crown Auto Dealerships, Inc., 236 F.R.D. 572 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (equitable tolling can be established on class-wide basis if plaintiff can show a fraudulent scheme by defendant to conceal the true cost and benefit of the product); Deaville v. Capital One Bank, 425 F. Supp. 2d 744 (W.D. La. 2006) ; Benjamin v. Centier Bank, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9315 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 15, 2006) ; Veal v. Crown Auto Dealerships, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8243 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 21, 2006) ; Porter v. NationsCredit Consumer Discount Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14925 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2006) (denying creditor's motion for summary judgment; statute of limitations may be tolled when closing documents and a post-closing postcard said that plaintiff had not purchased credit insurance), reconsideration denied in part, granted in part on other issues, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41947 (E.D. Pa. June 22, 2006) .

(n26)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e), 1605(i)(7). See, e.g., Moor v. Travelers Ins. Co., 784 F.2d 632 (5th Cir. 1986) ; Roberson v. Cityscape Corp. (In re Roberson), 262 B.R. 312 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2001) .

(n27)Footnote 26. See Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Dearborn Title Corp., 118 F.3d 1157 (7th Cir. 1997) (allowing trial court to consider a fraudulent conveyance claim based on a RESPA violation even where the RESPA violation claim is itself time-barred).

(n28)Footnote 27. 523 U.S. 410, 118 S. Ct. 1408, 140 L. Ed. 2d 566 (1998) ; Williams v. EMC Mortgage Corp (In re Williams), 276 B.R. 394 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2002) ; Garrett v. Fleet Fin., 556 S.E.2d 140 (Ga. Ct. App. 2001) . But see Bank of N.Y. v. Waldon, 751 N.Y.S.2d 341 (Sup. Ct. 2002) (three-year period for rescission is subject to equitable tolling).

(n29)Footnote 28. See Fidler v. Central Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) (rescission by recoupment allowed under Massachusetts statute that parallels TILA).

(n30)Footnote 29. See, e.g., In re Werts, 48 B.R. 980 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1985) ; Soto v. PNC Bank (In re Soto), 221 B.R. 343 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1998) ; Money Store/Delaware, Inc. v. Kamara, 1997 Del. Super. LEXIS 280 (Del. June 19, 1997) ; Key Sav. Bank, F.S.B. v. Dean, 695 So. 2d 808 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997) (set off of actual damages available even though statute of limitations prevented rescission); First Trust Nat'l Ass'n v. Chiang, 242 A.D.2d 599, 662 N.Y.S.2d 137 (1997) ; Groves v. Construction Equip. Fed. Credit Union, 1997 Tex. App. LEXIS 6683 (Tex. App. Dec. 18, 1997) ; Ballew v. Associates Fin. Serv., 450 F. Supp. 253 (D. Neb. 1976) ; First State Bank of Crosset v. Phillips, 13 Ark. App. 157, 681 S.W.2d 408 (1984) ; Ex parte Fletcher, 429 So. 2d 1041 (Ala. 1982) ; Dawe v. Merchants Mortgage & Trust Corp., 683 P.2d 796 (Colo. 1984) ; Household Fin. Co. v. Gibson, Clearinghouse No. 21,412 (Cal. Mun. Ct. 1977). But see Beach v. Great W. Bank, 692 So. 2d 146 (Fla. 1997) (TILA damage claim in recoupment allowed, but rescission defense rejected), aff'd sub nom. Beach v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 523 U.S. 410, 118 S. Ct. 1408, 140 L. Ed. 2d 566 (1998) .

(n31)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Barsky v. Commercial Credit Corp. (In re Barsky), 210 B.R. 683 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997) ; Fidler v. Central Coop. Bank (In re Fidler), 210 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) , vacated, in part, reaff'd, in part, 226 B.R. 734 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) ; Botelho v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc. (In re Botelho), 195 B.R. 558 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996) , aff'd, Case No. 96-12279-EFH (D. Mass. Mar. 7, 1997); In re Coxson, 43 F.3d 189 (5th Cir. 1995) (TIL claim can be raised defensively by way of adversary proceeding objecting to proof of claim in a chapter 13 case); In re Jones, 122 B.R. 246 (W.D. Pa. 1990) ; In re Werts, 48 B.R. 980 (E.D. Pa. 1985) ; In re Bishop, 79 B.R. 94 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1987) . See also In re Shaw, 178 B.R. 380, 1994 Bankr. LEXIS 2167 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1994) (TIL rescission by recoupment allowed in bankruptcy court against creditor's proof of claim); In re Galea'i, 31 B.R. 629 (Bankr. D. Hawaii 1981) (existence of prior state court collection action justified recoupment claim in bankruptcy).

(n32)Footnote 31. Savings Bank of Rockville v. Wielgos, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1764 (Conn. Super. Ct. June 29, 2001) .

(n33)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(f). See, e.g., Cades v. H&R Block, Inc., 43 F.3d 869 (4th Cir. 1994) (creditor, relying on official commentary, properly based the APR of the loan on a maturity date of one year). But cf. In re Melvin, 75 B.R. 952 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (use of an incorrect FRB model form is not protected by § 130(f)).

(n34)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(b). See Rubino v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 2001 Ill. App. LEXIS 54 (Feb. 9, 2001) (use of model form is complete defense). The model forms defense does not, however, apply to numerical disclosures (see Gibson v. Bob Watson Chevrolet-Geo, 112 F.3d 283 (7th Cir. 1997)) and the creditor must have selected the "appropriate" model form. See, e.g., Porter v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc. Co. (In re Porter), 961 F.2d 1066 (3d Cir. 1992) (creditor incorrectly gave the model rescission notice for a new loan instead of a refinanced loan); Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (creditor violated TILA when it gave a notice of rescission for a refinanced home-secured loan instead of a new loan; not entitled to model forms defense). Some creditors are now actually combining the two forms into a single form; in those cases, it is especially critical to determine whether the correct box is checked off, i.e., whether the box for a new loan versus a refinancing is appropriately checked off.

(n35)Footnote 34. It also operates as a defense to administrative and criminal enforcement under §§ 1607 and 1611.

(n36)Footnote 35. Cf. FDIC v. Hughes Dev. Co., 684 F. Supp. 616 (D. Minn. 1988) , aff'd, 938 F.2d 889 (8th Cir. 1991) (rescission is not a "penalty" within the meaning of 15 U.S.C. § 1612(b) (governmental exemption); rather, purpose of rescission is to return parties to status quo ante); French v. Wilson, 446 F. Supp. 216 (D.R.I. 1978) ("bona fide error" defense (prior to 1980 amendments) held inapplicable against rescission because it shielded against "liability" under 15 U.S.C. § 1640, not to "rescission" under § 1635); Pfennig v. Household Credit Servs., 295 F.3d 522 (6th Cir. 2002) (good faith conformity defense provides immunity from "civil liability," thus court dismissed plaintiff's claim for monetary damages, but not her claim for non-monetary equitable relief), rev'd on other grounds, 124 S. Ct. 1741, 158 L. Ed. 2d 450 (2004) .

(n37)Footnote 36. Reg. Z app. C; Official Staff Commentary app. C-1 ("individual interpretations generally will not be issued separately from the Commentary"). Under the Old Act, creditors frequently claimed reliance on unofficial staff interpretations, written and oral. The majority of courts found such reliance misplaced. Ives v. W.T. Grant Co., 522 F.2d 749 (2d Cir. 1975) (reliance defense not available for staff letters or pamphlets); Brown v. U.S. Life Credit Corp., 602 S.W.2d 94 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) (reliance on FRB Opinion Letter insufficient because the opinion is not a rule, regulation or interpretation). But see Welmaker v. W.T. Grant Co., 365 F. Supp. 531 (N.D. Ga. 1972) (creditor not liable where it relied on FTC and FRB staff opinions, advice, and negotiations).

(n38)Footnote 37. Hamilton v. Southern Disc. Co., 656 F.2d 150 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck, Clearinghouse No. 54,563 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2002).

(n39)Footnote 38. Sentinel Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Office of Thrift Supervision, 946 F.2d 85 (8th Cir. 1991) (creditor's "mistaken belief that it could ignore the Commentary and rely on its supposed compliance with general mandates of Regulation Z does not entitle it to statutory good faith defense found in 15 U.S.C. § 1640(f)"); Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck, Clearinghouse No. 54,563, Case No. 98-1281-Moreno (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2002) (creditor's mistaken interpretation of Reg. Z does not entitle it to the good faith conformity defense); Cannon v. Cherry Hill Toyota, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 362 (D.N.J. 2001) (creditor not entitled to rely on its interpretation of Official Staff Commentary section when interpretation was "preposterous").

(n40)Footnote 39. Valencia v. Anderson Bros. Ford, 617 F.2d 1278 (7th Cir. 1980) , rev'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 205, 101 S. Ct. 2266, 68 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1981) (creditor's mistaken interpretation of Reg. Z, even if honest and reasonable, is not a defense under § 1640(f)); Kessler v. Associates Fin. Servs. Co., 573 F.2d 577, 579 (9th Cir. 1977) ; Smith v. Wells Fargo Credit Corp., 713 F. Supp. 354 (D. Ariz. 1989) ; Pearson v. Easy Living, Inc., 534 F. Supp. 884 (S.D. Ohio 1981) . See also Hendley v. Cameron-Brown Co., 840 F.2d 831 (11th Cir. 1988) ; Warren v. Darnell, 164 Ill. App. 3d 273, 115 Ill. Dec. 225, 517 N.E.2d 636 (1987) .

(n41)Footnote 40. Charles v. Krauss Co., 572 F.2d 544 (5th Cir. 1978) (creditor's good faith belief that its contract form complied with the literal language of § 226.801 forms exception provided a good faith defense); Brown v. Coleman Invs., 993 F. Supp 439 (M.D. La. 1998) (dealer relied on Commentary provision about dealer upcharges, which court characterizes as ambiguous); Baldwin v. Laurel Ford Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 32 F. Supp. 2d 894 (S.D. Miss. 1998) (assignee who relied on good faith interpretation of FRB's dealer upcharge Commentary, which court considered ambiguous, entitled to defense).

(n42)Footnote 41. Leon v. Washington Mut. Bank, F.A., 164 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. 2001) .

(n43)Footnote 42. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c). See Warren v. Darnell, 164 Ill. App. 3d 273, 115 Ill. Dec. 225, 517 N.E.2d 636 (1987) . See Yarnall v. Four Aces Emporium, Inc. (In re Boganski), 322 B.R. 422 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2005) (no bona fide error where clerk made handwritten changes to some disclosures but failed to change APR, where this was a failure to follow lender's own protocol; even a cursory check would have revealed the error, and lender did not correct the error after discovering).

(n44)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c).

(n45)Footnote 44. The prior version of the bona fide error defense did not apply to rescission. Old TILA § 130(c), 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c); French v. Wilson, 446 F. Supp. 216 (D.R.I. 1978) .

(n46)Footnote 45. See Turner v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 537 F.2d 1296 (8th Cir. 1976) ; Mirabal v. GMAC, 537 F.2d 871 (7th Cir. 1976) ; In re Underwood, 66 B.R. 656 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1986) ; Associates Fin., Inc. v. Cedillo, 89 Ill. App. 3d 179, 411 N.E.2d 1194 (1980) ; Ellis v. Hensley, [1974-1980 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 97,606, Clearinghouse No. 27,967 (Ohio Ct. App. 1979); Ballard v. Hillcrest State Bank, 592 S.W.2d 373 (Tex. Civ. App. 1979) ; see also Pedro v. Pacific Plan of Cal., 393 F. Supp. 315 (N.D. Cal. 1975) (where appraisal fee was expunged from account since appraisal had not been conducted, but fee appeared in pre-printed disclosure form, creditor had not met its burden of proving procedures to avoid the error). See also Webster v. Centex Home Equity Corp. (In re Webster), 300 B.R. 787 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 2003) (no bona fide error where creditor presented no evidence of a safety catch or rechecking mechanism).

(n47)Footnote 46. Ray v. City Motors, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22809 (S.D. W. Va. June 30, 1998) ; Fair v. Dartmouth Plan, Inc., [1974-1980 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide P 96,940 (D. Conn. 1982).

(n48)Footnote 47. Reg. Z § 226.14 n.31a (open-end); Reg. Z § 226.22 n.45d (closed-end).

(n49)Footnote 48. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(b). See, e.g., In re Mitchell, 75 B.R. 593 (Bankr E.D. Pa. 1987) (if disclosures were inaccurate at date of closing, creditor had 60 days to make correct disclosures). See, e.g., Yarnall v. Four Aces Emporium, Inc. (In re Boganski), 322 B.R. 422 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2005) (rejecting correction of error defense where there was no evidence that lender ever corrected the error).

(n50)Footnote 49. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(b) (no liability "for any failure to comply with any requirement imposed") (emphasis added).

(n51)Footnote 50. Hamilton v. Southern Disc. Co., 656 F.2d 150 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Thomka v. A.Z. Chevrolet, Inc., 619 F.2d 246 (3d Cir. 1980) ; Nigh v. Koons Buick Pontiac GMC, Inc., 143 F. Supp. 2d 563 (E.D. Va. 2001) cert. granted, 124 S. Ct. 1144, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1041 (2004) ; Pearson v. Easy Living, Inc., 534 F. Supp. 884 (S.D. Ohio 1981) ; Hardin v. Cliff Pettit Motors, Inc., 407 F. Supp. 297 (E.D. Tenn. 1976) ; Forrester v. Century Fin. Co., Clearinghouse No. 19,434 (N.D. Ga. 1974). See also Molenbeek v. Western Mich. Auto & Truck Outlet, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3433 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 15, 2001) (correction of errors defense probably does not apply to timing error). Contra Kukonu v. Beneficial Fin. Co., Clearinghouse No. 22,524 (D. Hawaii 1978); Baker v. Sunny Chevrolet, Inc., 349 F.3d 862 (6th Cir. 2003) (court allowed a creditor to rely on the correction of error defense where the violation was failure to provide disclosures prior to consummation).

(n52)Footnote 51. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(b).

(n53)Footnote 52. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c).

(n54)Footnote 53. Abercrombie v. Wells Fargo Bank, 417 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (N.D. Ill. 2006) .

(n55)Footnote 54. 15 U.S.C. § 1634; Reg. Z § 226.17(e). Smith v. Fidelity Consumer Disc. Co., 898 F.2d 896 (3d Cir. 1990) (fee intended for payment of official fee to clear title, but retained by the creditor because the lienholder had gone out of business, is not a finance charge; creditor did not use fee as intended, but through no fault of its own, and, thus, was protected from liability by the subsequent occurrence defense); see, e.g., Harris v. Research Fed. Credit Union, [1974-1980 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 97,737 (E.D. Mich. 1979). See also Billions v. White & Stafford Furniture Co., 528 So. 2d 878 (Ala. Ct. Civ. App. 1988) (changing APR disclosure from 21.00% to 20.99% is a subsequent occurrence and favored the consumer to boot).

Note that, in some cases, new disclosures may be required, however. See Reg. Z §§ 226.17(e), 226.17(f), 226.19, and 226.20.

(n56)Footnote 55. In re Gillespie, 110 B.R. 742 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) ; Kasket v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp., 695 So. 2d 431 (Fla. Dist. App. Ct. 1997) (bank to which Resolution Trust Co. assigned obligation was subject to recoupment claim for TIL damages).

(n57)Footnote 56. See Ch. 2, § 2.06 infra .

(n58)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(c). But see Coleman v. Equicredit Corp. of Am., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 969 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 22, 2002) (in dicta, court questions whether right of rescission automatically extends to assignees).

(n59)Footnote 58. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(c).

(n60)Footnote 59. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(a). The limitation also applies to administrative enforcement under 15 U.S.C. § 1607. Kennedy v. BMW Fin. Servs., 363 F. Supp. 2d 110, 118 (D. Conn. 2005) (assignee not liable for overstatement of fees for title, registration, and licensing); Pulphus v. Sullivan, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13234 (N.D. Ill. July 15, 2004) ; Siner v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc. 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12924 (E.D. Pa. July 8, 2004) (assignee not liable for statutory damages for rescission violations unless disclosure violations are apparent on face of documents); Parker v. Potter, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32924 (M.D. Fla. May 24, 2006) (assignee has no duty to inquire beyond face of document to determine whether appropriate disclosures were made); McMaster v. CIT Group/Consumer Fin., Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28831 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2006) (assignee has no duty of inquiry). See Marcelos v. Dominguez, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91916 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 21, 2008) (fact question whether highly unusual $200,000 broker fee, apparent on face of documents, made assignee liable; note, however, that court erroneously appears to treat assignee's liability for rescission as depending on violation being apparent on face of documents).

(n61)Footnote 60. Brown v. Mortgagestar, 194 F. Supp. 2d 473 (S.D. W. Va. 2002) (discrepancies between TILA disclosure, deed of trust, and note were sufficient for assignee liability); England v. MG Invs., Inc., 93 F. Supp. 2d 718 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (denying assignee's motion for summary judgment where inaccuracy of disclosures was apparent from comparison of note to disclosure statement); Mount v. LaSalle Bank Lake View, 926 F. Supp. 759 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (violation of clear and conspicuous disclosure requirement is apparent on face of the statement). See also Vaden v. IndyMac Bank, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16907 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003) (use of the wrong model form is apparent on the face of the documents, as is identifying the collateral with a number instead of a description); Johnson v. Thomas, 794 N.E.2d 919 (Ill. App. 2003) (visible use of liquid paper to change the disclosures, without evidence such as the consumer's initials to show consent to the changes, is apparent on the face of the documents).

(n62)Footnote 61. But see Murry v. America's Mortgage Banc, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12045 (N.D. Ill. June 29, 2004) (erroneously concluding that violation was not apparent on face of documents where consumer was charged twice for title insurance; decision also misconstrues assignees' liability for rescission).

(n63)Footnote 62. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(c). In a transaction subject to the right of rescission, a written acknowledgment of receipt entitles the assignee to no more than a rebuttable presumption of delivery. Id. See Bryant v. Mortgage Capital Res. Corp, 197 F. Supp. 2d 1357 (N.D. Ga. 2002) ("rebuttable presumption" standard in § 1635(c) trumps the "conclusive proof" standard in § 1641(b), even with respect to assignees).

(n64)Footnote 63. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(b). If the assignee knew when it acquired the debt that there was no delivery, it is not entitled to this irrebuttable presumption.

(n65)Footnote 64. E.g., Cox v. First Nat'l Bank of Cincinnati, 633 F. Supp. 236 (S.D. Ohio 1986) ; In re Stewart, 93 B.R. 878 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) . See also Chandler v. MVM Constr., Inc., 501 S.E.2d 533 (Ga. App. 1998) (citing Holder Rule as one basis for conclusion that assignee's liability must be decided by jury).

(n66)Footnote 65. See, e.g., Ellis v. GMAC, 160 F.3d 703 (11th Cir. 1998) ; Taylor v. Quality Hyundai, 150 F.3d 689 (7th Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1141, 119 S. Ct. 1032, 143 L. Ed. 2d 41 (1999) ; Walker v. Wallace Auto Sales, Inc., 155 F.3d 927 (7th Cir. 1998) ; Brown v. Coleman Invs., 993 F. Supp. 416 (M.D. La. 1998) (Holder Rule does not subject assignee to liability for disclosure violations not apparent on face of contract); Cemail v. Viking Dodge, Inc., 982 F. Supp. 1296 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n67)Footnote 66. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(b) (emphasis added).

(n68)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(a). See, e.g., Balderos v. City Chevrolet, 214 F.3d 849 (7th Cir. 2000) (assignee not liable where documents assigned did not reveal whether charge was passed on to credit customers); Ellis v. GMAC, 160 F.3d 703 (11th Cir. 1998) (dealer upcharge not apparent on face of disclosure statement); Walker v. Wallace Auto Sales, Inc., 155 F.3d 927 (7th Cir. 1998) (even actual knowledge not sufficient if violation is not apparent from face of assigned documents); England v. MG Invs., Inc., 93 F. Supp. 2d 718 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (denying assignees' motion for summary judgment where inaccuracy of disclosures was apparent from comparison of note to disclosure statement); Johnson v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 785 F. Supp. 1003 (S.D. Ga. 1991) (assignee not liable for failure to include brokers' fee in finance charge because not apparent on face of disclosures that a broker was required); Shepeard v. Quality Siding & Window Factory, Inc., 730 F. Supp. 1295 (D. Del. 1990) (assignee who received two contracts from a home improvement loan and was defending claimed violations on second one could not rely on first one, even assuming it was the operative disclosure form, to evidence proper disclosure when, on its face, it had several violations); Brown v. Mortgagestar, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 2d 473 (S.D. W. Va. 2002) (discrepancies between TILA disclosure, deed of trust, and note were sufficient for assignee liability). But see Kane v. Equity One, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23810 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2003) (assignee does not have duty of additional inquiry; no liability for assignor's loan splitting).

(n69)Footnote 68. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d). There is an exception if the creditor could not, using ordinary due diligence, determine from specified loan documents that HOEPA covered the transaction.

(n70)Footnote 69. See § 1.08[6] supra.

(n71)Footnote 70. For a more extensive analysis, see §§ 1.04[4][d], 1.05[2][e][ii][A], 1.08[3][b] supra .

(n72)Footnote 71. The Truth in Lending Act Amendments of 1995, Pub. L. No. 104-29 § 4 (Sept. 30, 1995), creating 15 U.S.C. § 1649, as corrected by the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-208, § 2107(a) (Sept. 30, 1996).

(n73)Footnote 72. See § 1.09[2][b] supra. That applies to arithmetic errors, not to errors in legal judgment.

(n74)Footnote 73. "It is obviously not intended to give lenders the right to pad fees up to the tolerance limit ... ." Cong. Rec. S14567 (Sept. 28, 1995) (statement of Sen. Sarbanes). "This legislation provides greater flexibility for honest mistakes. ..." 141 Cong. Rec. 314567 (Sept. 28, 1995) (statement of Sen. D'Amato). But see Egert v. FT Mortgage Cos., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11212 (N.D. Ill. July 16, 1999) (finding no good faith requirement for tolerances).

(n75)Footnote 74. For this group of charges, the immunity applies to rescission in foreclosure defense, as well as affirmative rescission and damages.

(n76)Footnote 75. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(1)(A).

(n77)Footnote 76. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(1)(B).

(n78)Footnote 77. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(1)(B). Fees for post-consummation services are not protected by this immunity.

(n79)Footnote 78. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(1)(C). In real estate loans, the agent's fees may qualify for a different exclusion from the finance charge, though.

(n80)Footnote 79. See § 1.08[6] supra.

(n81)Footnote 80. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(1)(D). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(A), (4).

(n82)Footnote 81. See National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, 11.5.4.3 (3d ed. and supp.).

(n83)Footnote 82. The Truth in Lending Act Amendments of 1995, Pub. L. No. 104-29 § 2 (Sept. 30, 1995) (adding 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(6)).

(n84)Footnote 83. 15 U.S.C. § 1649(a)(2). See § 1.08[6][c][iii] supra, for a more detailed discussion of this defense. See also § 1.08[3][b], [c] supra.

(n85)Footnote 84. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(1)(B), (2).

(n86)Footnote 85. See §§ 1.04[4][d] and 1.05[2][e][ii] supra .

(n87)Footnote 86. See § 1.08[3][b], [6] supra.

(n88)Footnote 87. 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(4).

(n89)Footnote 88. See Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) ("unearned" interest should have been disclosed and was not de minimis because finance charge "is somehow more important than other required disclosures"); Shroder v. Suburban Coastal Corp., 729 F.2d 1371, 1380 (11th Cir. 1984) (liability will flow from "even minute deviations"); Riopta v. Amresco Residential Mortgage Corp., 101 F. Supp. 2d 1326 (D. Haw. 1999) ; Acevedo v. Bally Total Fitness Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18029 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 9, 1999) ; Clay v. Johnson, 77 F. Supp. 2d 879 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (damages are mandatory for technical violation); Pinkett v. Moolah Loan Co., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17276 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 1, 1999) ; Smith v. Cash Store Mgmt., Inc., 195 F.3d 325 (7th Cir. 1999) (creditors are strictly liable for TILA inaccuracies, even if they are not misleading); Gibbons v. Interbank Funding Group, 208 F.R.D. 278 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (technical or minor violations of TILA or Reg. Z impose liability); Decos v. Jojo Motors, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6873 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 17, 2002) (failure to provide copy of TILA disclosures that consumer can keep is not a de minimis violation); Basnight v. Diamond Developers, 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (M.D.N.C. 2001) (technical violations of TILA impose liability; creditor liable for misdated notice of right to rescind); Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck, 202 F.R.D. 306 (S.D. Fla. 2001) ("black letter law" that once a court finds a TILA violation, even if technical, it must impose liability); Gilkey v. Central Clearing Co., 202 F.R.D. 515 (E.D. Mich. 2001) (lenders are generally strictly liable under TILA for inaccuracies, even absent a showing that the inaccuracies are misleading); Lifanda v. Elmhurst Dodge, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9210 (N.D. Ill. June 29, 2001) (TILA requires absolute compliance and even technical violations form the basis for liability); Rodrigues v. U.S. Bank (In re Rodrigues), 278 B.R. 683 (Bankr. D.R.I. 2002) (courts must impose strict liability for technical or minor violations of TILA); Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, 52 Va. Cir. 319, 2000 Va. Cir. LEXIS 282 (Va. Cir. Ct. June 14, 2000) (Consumer Leasing Act is a strict liability statute; once a court finds a violation, no matter how technical, it has no discretion regarding the imposition of liability); Vaden v. IndyMac Bank, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16907 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003) ; Bilal v. Household Fin. Corp. (In re Bilal), 296 B.R. 828, 832 (D. Kan. 2003) ; Floyd v. Security Fin. Corp., 181 F. Supp. 2d 1137 (D. Nev. 2001) ; Johnson v. Thomas, 794 N.E.2d 919, 926 (Ill. App. 2003) (even technical violations provide basis for liability). But see Cowen v. Bank United, FSB, 70 F.3d 937 (7th Cir. 1995) (affirming district court that a $10 fee improperly excluded from the finance charge was "de minimis" as it was within the tolerances of Reg. Z § 226.18(d), but noting that "hypertechnicality reigns" with respect to TILA violations; interestingly, this case has been cited for the latter proposition several times); ContiMortgage Corp. v. Delawder, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3410 (Ohio Ct. App. July 30, 2001) (when lender only provided one copy of a notice of right to rescind for two borrowers, it was a technical mistake that did not violate TILA; court also held that to be no TILA violation for post-dated waiver of right to rescind, but even if there was a violation, it was technical; court's opinion extremely hostile to TILA's strict liability); Lattier-Holmes v. Peoples State Bank, 796 So. 2d 176 (La. App. 2d Cir. 2001) , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 897, 123 S. Ct. 197, 154 L. Ed. 2d 167 (2002) (technical violation was not material and did not give rise to statutory damages). The decision in Holmes is perplexing, because the violation in question was a gross misstatement of an APR--the creditor stated an APR of 14.36% when the actual APR was 31.11%. The violation was neither technical nor immaterial. See also Rodrigues v. Members Mortg. Co., 323

F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Mass. 2004) (even if creditor's listing of address of assignee as agent to receive rescission notice, without listing its own address, violated TILA, it would not extend right to rescind because it is a minor deviation with no potential for actual harm).

(n90)Footnote 88.1. 568 F.3d 309 (1st Cir. 2009) . See also Santos-Rodriguez v. Doral Mortgage Corp., 485 F.3d 12, 17 n.6 (1st Cir. 2007) (asserting that the 1995 amendments adopt a clear and conspicuous standard in place of "hyper-technicality").

(n91)Footnote 88.2. Melfi v. WMC Mortgage Corp., 568 F.3d 309, 313 (1st Cir. 2009) .

(n92)Footnote 88.3. Id.; The Homeownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 104-29, § 8, 109 Stat. 274, 275 (Sept. 30, 1995) (codified as 15 U.S.C. § 1635(i)(2)).

(n93)Footnote 89. Rodash v. AIB Mortgage Co., 16 F.3d 1142 (11th Cir. 1994) ; Porter v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc., 961 F.2d 1066 (3d Cir. 1992) (rescission notice given was not clear notice of consumer's right; no matter that borrower may not have been confused by--or even have read--the notice; TILA is a strict liability statute); Zamarippa v. Cy's Car Sales, Inc., 674 F.2d 877 (11th Cir. 1982) ; Charles v. Krauss Co., 572 F.2d 544 (5th Cir. 1978) , reh'g denied, 575 F.2d 881 (5th Cir. 1978) ; Williams v. Empire Funding Corp., 109 F. Supp. 2d 352 (E.D. Pa. 2000) ; Rendler v. Corus Bank, N.A., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5093 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2000) (whether borrowers expected to receive two simultaneous loans is irrelevant to whether giving two sets of disclosures was TIL violation); Bank of New York v. Ralls (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (irrelevant that homeowner did not read all of the disclosures). See also Stutsman County State Bank v. FDIC, 207 F.3d 464 (8th Cir. 2000) (restitution order upheld even though creditor presented evidence that it had told consumers orally and in a letter about fee that was omitted from disclosure statement); Vaden v. IndyMac Bank, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16907 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003) ; Kurz v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 273 F. Supp. 2d 474 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) . Jones v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3788 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2006) .

(n94)Footnote 90. See, e.g., Conrad v. Smith, 42 Wash. App. 559, 712 P.2d 866 (1986) (borrower's preloan conduct, in obfuscating the true consumer purpose of the loan, led the court to deny rescission because the loan was ostensibly for commercial purposes). See Milhollin v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 531 F. Supp. 379 (D. Or. 1981) , aff'd and rev'd in part on other grounds, 588 F.2d 753 (9th Cir. 1978) , rev'd on other grounds, 444 U.S. 555, 100 S. Ct. 790, 63 L. Ed. 2d 22 (1980) (where consumer gave creditor incorrect figure, creditor not liable for understating an estimated down payment).

(n95)Footnote 91. Clay v. Johnson, 22 F. Supp. 2d 832 (N.D. Ill. 1998) , reconsid. denied, 50 F. Supp. 2d 816 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (consumer's allegedly unclean hands not a defense); Harris v. McCrory Corp., Clearinghouse No. 24,478 (N.D. Ga. 1976) (recommendation of special master).

(n96)Footnote 92. Parker v. DeKalb Chrysler Plymouth, 673 F.2d 1178 (11th Cir. 1982) ; see also Myers v. American Fin. Sys., 615 F.2d 368 (5th Cir. 1980) (parol evidence was admissible under a Georgia statute to determine whether debtor, who signed an agreement releasing the creditor from "all claims" in connection with a wrecked vehicle held as security by the creditor, intended to release his TIL claim).

(n97)Footnote 93. Compare Parker v. DeKalb Chrysler Plymouth, 673 F.2d 1178 (11th Cir. 1982) (while invalidating waiver because release contains no reference to TILA, court refuses to apply absolute rule that all releases of TILA claims are null and void), with Buford v. American Fin. Co., 333 F. Supp. 1243 (N.D. Ga. 1971) (any release of TILA claims are null and void). See Abercrombie v. Wells Fargo Bank, 417 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (N.D. Ill. 2006) (clause requiring consumer to give creditor the opportunity to correct any violations is invalid; it would gut TILA since a consumer who received corrected disclosures after having signed the contract would be unable to use them to shop for credit); Tucker v. Beneficial Mortgage Co., 437 F. Supp. 2d 584 (E.D. Va. 2006) (enforcing release waiving TIL claims, which consumers signed when they opted in to class action settlement negotiated by state attorney general; releases were not presented by creditor acting in its own interest, and attorney general's bargaining power was equal to creditor's).

(n98)Footnote 94. Mills v. Home Equity Group, Inc., 871 F. Supp. 1482 (D.D.C. 1994) (work-out agreement on defaulted loan negotiated by attorney which purported to waive TIL claims did not waive the consumer's right to exercise her extended rescission right; to be valid, she would have had to know she had it, and explicitly waived it. See § 1.08[6] infra).

(n99)Footnote 95. Harper v. Virginia Dep't of Taxation, 509 U.S. 86, 113 S. Ct. 2510, 125 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) (overruling the more complex test set forth in Chevron Oil Co. v. Huson, 404 U.S. 97, 92 S. Ct. 349, 30 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1971)) .

(n100)Footnote 96. 15 U.S.C. § 1604(d). The statute gives the FRB authority to allow a longer or shorter phase-in period in certain circumstances.

(n101)Footnote 97. See, e.g., Cowen v. Bank United, FSB, 70 F.3d 937 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Pettola v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 44 F. Supp. 2d 442 (D. Conn. 1999) (Commentary merely interpreted existing law rather than changing it, so may be applied retroactively); McPhillips v. Gold Key Lease, Inc., 38 F. Supp. 2d 975 (M.D. Ala. 1999) (if agency Commentary clarifies unsettled law, but does not change law, it may be applied retroactively); Barlow v. Evans, 992 F. Supp. 1299 (M.D. Ala. 1997) (applying Commentary revision because it was meant to clarify rather than change existing law concerning pawn transactions); Smith v. Highland Bank, 915 F. Supp. 281 (N.D. Ala. 1996) (giving retroactive application to FRB Commentary provision that favored creditor, where it was a clarification rather than a change), aff'd on other grounds, 108 F.3d 1325 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n102)Footnote 98. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e). For TIL actions seeking only damages, this choice exists even in those states which have been granted an exemption from Regulation Z in favor of similar state law, because the state exemptions extend to the Regulation Z disclosure rules, but not to the TILA's civil liability provisions in section 1640. 15 U.S.C. § 1610(a)(2). Melvin v. U.S. Bank N.A., Clearinghouse No. 54,569, Civil Action No. 01-30082 (D. Mass. Sept. 28, 2001). However, a consumer in an exempted state may not be able to rescind under section 1635 of TILA, but would need to use the analogous state law provision.

(n103)Footnote 99. See Williams v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (In re Williams), 244 B.R. 858 (S.D. Ga. 2000) (bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over TIL claim arising from creditor's actions in securing reaffirmation agreement while bankruptcy case was pending; court can hear class-wide claim but only for debtors who filed their bankruptcy cases in that judicial district).

(n104)Footnote 100. Schwartz v. Visa Int'l Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2001) (UDAP claim based on TIL violation not removable); Monday v. Coast to Coast Wireless Cable, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2970 (M.D. Ala. Feb. 19, 1997) ; Walker v. Commercial Credit Corp., 192 B.R. 260 (M.D. Ala. 1996) (TILA does not provide basis for removal of complaint based on state usury law); McCrae v. Commercial Credit Corp., 892 F. Supp. 1385 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; Anderson v. Household Fin. Corp. of Ala., 900 F. Supp. 386 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; Bonds v. H&R Block, Inc., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6648 (N.D. Ill. June 1, 1990) ; Walker v. Atwood Chevrolet-Olds, 189 F. Supp. 2d 594 (S.D. Miss. 2001) (because the plaintiff had viable state law claims, court remanded case back to state court, finding that the "artful pleading" doctrine requiring removal was not implicated); Brown v. Vickers Employees Credit Union, 162 F. Supp. 2d 528 (S.D. Miss. 2001) (consumer's state law claims for misrepresentation were not disguised TILA claims and thus did not warrant removal under the artful pleading doctrine); Howell v. Grant Holding, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9400 (D. Minn. May 12, 2004) (where TIL and HOEPA violations were among several alternate bases for state law claim, it was not removable).

(n105)Footnote 101. Bastrop Loan Co. v. Burley, 392 F. Supp. 970 (W.D. La. 1975) . See also General Elec. Capital Auto Lease, Inc. v. Mires, 788 F. Supp. 948 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (creditor-plaintiff cannot remove case to federal court based on consumer-defendants' TIL counterclaim).

(n106)Footnote 102. See Collier Consumer Bankruptcy Practice Guide (Matthew Bender).

(n107)Footnote 103. 28 U.S.C. § 1367, Pub. L. No. 101-650, 104 Stat. 5113 (1990). But see Campbell v. Machias Sav. Bank, 865 F. Supp. 26 (D. Me. 1994) , in which the court granted pendent jurisdiction over the borrower's state law claims following dismissal of the federal TILA claim, seemingly without considering the new standards; and Fairley v. Turan-Foley Imports, Inc., 864 F. Supp. 4 (S.D. Miss. 1994) (similar holding). See, e.g., Hinson v. Norwest Fin. S.C., Inc., 239 F.3d 611 (4th Cir. 2001) (district court did not abuse its discretion in remanding state claims to state court after TILA claims settled); Wepsic v. Bankers Trust Co., 23 Fed. Appx. 694, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24754 (9th Cir. Nov. 5, 2001) (district court did not abuse its discretion in declining supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims after it dismissed borrower's TILA claims); Clement v. Amscot Corp., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1292 (M.D. Fla. 2001) (dismissing without prejudice state usury claims after dismissing TILA claim); Prifti v. PNC Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16387 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 9, 2001) (dismissing state UDAP claims after dismissing TILA claims); Melvin v. U.S. Bank N.A., Clearinghouse No. 54,569, Civil Action No. 01-30082 (D. Mass. Sept. 28, 2001) (supplemental jurisdiction is discretionary when plaintiff's federal claims are dismissed early in the litigation); Fielder v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 98 F. Supp. 2d 1104 (W.D. Mo. 2000) (remanding plaintiff's state claims after dismissing TILA claims).

(n108)Footnote 104. See Bastrop Loan Co. v. Burley, 392 F. Supp. 970 (W.D. La. 1975) . See also General Elec. Capital Auto Lease, Inc. v. Mires, 788 F. Supp. 948 (E.D. Mich. 1992) (creditor-plaintiff cannot remove case to federal court based on consumer-defendants' TIL counterclaim); Johnson v. Aronson Furniture Co., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14454 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 1998) (declining supplemental jurisdiction over collection counterclaim in a TILA/RICO class action citing chilling effect; only link between the TILA claim and the collection counterclaim is the initial execution of the contract, which is insufficient to support a finding that they are so related as to form part of the same case or controversy); Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14506 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 1996) (court declined jurisdiction over counterclaims citing "tremendous chilling effect" on private enforcement of the Consumer Leasing Act). Cf. Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10902 (S.D.N.Y. June 14, 2002) (declining jurisdiction over collection counterclaims in an Equal Credit Opportunity Act [hereinafter ECOA] class action, citing concerns that allowing supplemental jurisdiction would undermine ECOA's enforcement scheme).

(n109)Footnote 105. See Rodash v. AIB Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 46,796 (S.D. Fla. order denying defendant's motion to dismiss or stay Apr. 21, 1992).

(n110)Footnote 106. Moses H. Cone Memorial Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 19, 103 S. Ct. 927, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1983) . See Kent v. Celozzi-Ettleson Chevrolet, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17282 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 1, 1999) (granting stay in favor of state court case raising similar claims).

(n111)Footnote 107. Moses H. Cone Memorial Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. at 15 , 16, 21. When the district court considers the relevant factors, the balance should be "heavily weighted in favor of the exercise of jurisdiction." Id. at 16 . The relative progress of the state and federal cases is a key factor. Murphy v. Uncle Ben's, Inc., 168 F.3d 734 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n112)Footnote 108. See, e.g., Smith v. Wells Fargo Credit Corp., 713 F. Supp. 354 (D. Ariz. 1989) (state court action involving, inter alia, TIL disclosure violations did not bar a subsequent action based on rescission notice violations in conjunction with same transaction which were not alleged or litigated in prior action); Desrosiers v. Transamerica Fin. Corp. (In re Desrosiers), 212 B.R. 716 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1997) (previous affirmative TILA suit filed by husband dismissed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(b) is res judicata to the filing of an adversary case in a bankruptcy proceeding filed by husband and wife; wife's claims barred under an "identity of interests" standard articulated in Gonzalez v. Banco Cent. Corp., 27 F.3d 751, 755 (1st Cir. 1994)). Cf. Smith v. RBC Mortgage, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10282 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2006) (must be adjudication on merits, not dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction).

(n113)Footnote 109. White v. World Fin. of Meridian, Inc., 653 F.2d 147 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Ralph J. Rohner & Fred H. Miller, Truth in Lending P 12.02[4] (2000). But see In re Laubach, 77 B.R. 483 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (doctrine of merger bars raising state and federal law claims arising from a transaction on which a previous successful federal TILA action was based; merger does not bar, however, rescission-based claims based on the same transaction); Weston v. AmeriBank, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20287 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 30, 1999) (res judicata barred TIL claim that could have been asserted in earlier class action).

(n114)Footnote 110. See, e.g., Eubanks v. Liberty Mortgage Banking Ltd., 976 F. Supp. 171 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (New York does not have compulsory counterclaim rule, so prior foreclosure judgment did not bar TIL damage suit); Smith v. Wells Fargo Credit Corp., 713 F. Supp. 354 (D. Ariz. 1989) (state court action involving, inter alia, TIL disclosure violations did not bar a subsequent action based on rescission notice violations in conjunction with same transaction which were not alleged or litigated in prior action). See also In re Laubach, 77 B.R. 483 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (doctrine of merger bars raising state and federal law claims arising from a transaction on which a previous successful federal TILA action was based; merger does not bar, however, rescission-based claims based on the same transaction). Dye v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 2007 WL 4418195 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 17, 2007) (foreclosure judgment was not res judicata as to appraiser); White v. Long Beach Mortg., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84830 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2007) (prior foreclosure judgment does not bar claims that could have been raised as permissive counterclaims); Daniels v. Funding USA, Inc. (In re Daniels), 350 B.R. 619 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2006) (most of debtor's TIL claims not barred by foreclosure judgment because not compulsory counterclaims).

(n115)Footnote 111. R.G. Fin. Corp. v. Vergara-Nunez, 446 F.3d 178 (1st Cir. Apr. 21, 2006) (applying Puerto Rico law) (servicer is in privity with a related corporation that extended the loan, so res judicata applies); Albano v. Norwest Fin. Haw., Inc., 244 F.3d 1061 (9th Cir. 2001) ; R.G. Fin. Corp. v. Garcia (In re Garcia), 340 B.R. 680 (Bankr. D. P.R. 2006) (related corporations, one of which was servicer for loan made by the other, are in privity for res judicata purposes). See also Spinney v. Greenwich Capital Fin. Prods., Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26009 (D. Haw. May 3, 2006) (non-TILA case filed by mother and son is barred by prior foreclosure judgment entered against mother).

(n116)Footnote 112. Walker v. Contimortgage, 232 B.R. 725, 1999 Bankr. LEXIS 464 (N.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n117)Footnote 113. New Hampshire v. Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 750/-/51, 121 S. Ct. 1808, 149 L. Ed. 2d 968 (2001) . See also Burnes v. Pemco Aeroplex, Inc., 291 F.3d 1282, 1286/-/87 (11th Cir. 2002) (even a party who was not a creditor in the bankruptcy case can raise judicial estoppel; inadvertent error does not create estoppel, but intentional manipulation can be inferred from failure to list valuable claim that debtor was pursuing during the bankruptcy); Browning v. Levy, 283 F.3d 761, 775/-/76 (6th Cir. 2002) (declining to infer intent where debtor had no motive for concealing the claim); Judicial Estoppel and Unscheduled Claims: Trap for the Unwary, 22 NCLC REPORTS, Bankruptcy and Foreclosures Ed. 14 (Jan./Feb. 2004).

(n118)Footnote 114. Petroski v. First Horizon Home Loans Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13159 (E.D. Pa. July 9, 2004) ; Tennyson v. Challenge Realty (In re Tennyson), 313 B.R. 402 (Bankr. W.D. Ky. 2004) .

(n119)Footnote 115. See, e.g., In re Goswami, 304 B.R. 386 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2003) . But see Barger v. City of Cartersville, 348 F.3d 1289, 1297 (11th Cir. 2003) (debtor should not be allowed to reopen bankruptcy case to list omitted asset since this would reduce incentives for truthful initial disclosure of assets).

(n120)Footnote 116. See § 6.08[5][i] infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreement (5th ed. 2007). This volume also discusses the scope of the Federal Arbitration Act, construction of arbitration clauses to exclude certain parties or claims, the effect of state law, and challenges to clauses that purport to limit explicit statutory remedies.

(n121)Footnote 117. See § 1.08[7] supra.

(n122)Footnote 118. See Sphere Drake Ins. v. All Am. Ins. Co., 256 F.3d 587 (7th Cir. 2001) , cert. denied sub nom. American Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. Sphere Drake Ins. Ltd., 538 U.S. 961, 123 S. Ct. 1754, 155 L. Ed. 2d 512 (2003) .

(n123)Footnote 119. See, e.g., Ex parte Payne, 741 So. 2d 398 (Ala. 1999) (where seller backed out of contract because financing condition was not satisfied, arbitration clause does not bind buyer); Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Sec. Corp., 14 Cal. 4th 394, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 (1996) (arbitration clause unenforceable where contract containing it was void due to fraud in the factum; party's assent to the contract is negated by fraud in the execution); Party Yards, Inc. v. Templeton, 751 So. 2d 121 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) (arbitration clause in contract that is illegal due to usury is void); Fastfunding The Co., Inc. v. Betts, 758 So. 2d 1143 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) (same); Island House Developers v. AMAC Constr. Co., 686 So. 2d 1377 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997) (where contract is void under state law because contractor was not licensed, arbitration clause is also void); Ackel v. Ackel, 696 So. 2d 140 (La. App. 5th Cir.) , writ denied, 703 So. 2d 1310 (La. 1997) (whether contract is void as against public policy is not arbitrable).

(n124)Footnote 120. 894 So. 2d 860 (Fla. 2005) .

(n125)Footnote 121. 546 U.S. 440, 126 S. Ct. 1204, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1038 (2006) .

(n126)Footnote 122. Id.

(n127)Footnote 123. Large v. Conseco Fin. Servicing Corp., 292 F.3d 49 (1st Cir. 2002) . See also Thompson v. Irwin Home Equity Corp., 300 F.3d 88 (1st Cir. 2002) . A number of federal courts have now ruled that the arbitrator and not the court must consider whether a transaction has been rescinded under Truth in Lending. See Anderson v. Delta Funding Corp., 316 F. Supp. 2d 554, 562, 563 (N.D. Ohio 2004) ; Bertram v. Beneficial Consumer Discount Co., 286 F. Supp. 2d 453, 459 (M.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n128)Footnote 124. 879 F. Supp. 1187 (M.D. Fla. 1995) (the borrower's other challenges to the mandatory arbitration did not fare as well).

(n129)Footnote 125. Cf. Thompson v. Irwin Home Equity Corp., 300 F.3d 88 (1st Cir. 2002) (dispute over adequacy of creditor's rescission form must be submitted to arbitration). See also, Chapman v. Mortgage One Corp., 359 F. Supp. 2d 831 (E.D. Mo. 2005) . In Chapman, the creditor had marked the note rescinded and did not dispute the consumer's claim that the consumer had rescinded the note within the three-day rescission period. Since the contract was clearly rescinded, the court had no problem finding that its terms became void, and the arbitration clause thus became unenforceable.

Large, note 110 supra , distinguished between cases where "the creditor acknowledges that the right of rescission is available or because the appropriate decision maker has so determined" from cases where "a lender disputes a borrower's purported right to rescind." Only in the latter case, the arbitrator must decide whether the conditions for rescission have been met.

(n130)Footnote 126. Whether effective injunctive relief is available under a particular arbitration program and clause should be thoroughly investigated and analyzed. Note that in Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (1991) , a plaintiff claimed that an arbitration clause was unenforceable because it did not allow for broad equitable relief. The Supreme Court rejected the challenge, finding that the rules of the arbitration program did not limit the types of relief the arbitrator could award. Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (W.D. Mich. 2000) (arbitration clause unenforceable because, inter alia, it failed to give arbitrator the power to grant declaratory and injunctive relief). See Broughton v. CIGNA Healthplans, 21 Cal. 4th 1066, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334, 988 P.2d 67 (1999) (case seeking injunctive relief in the public interest cannot be forced into arbitration, although damages portion may; court declines to decide whether cases seeking less sweeping injunctive relief can be forced into arbitration); Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Ass'n, 99 Cal. App. 4th 1345, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193, 2002 Cal. App. LEXIS 4375 (1st Dist. 2002) , review denied, 2002 Cal. LEXIS 7253 (Cal. Oct. 23, 2002) . See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 7.7.2.5 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n131)Footnote 127. Such an action involves a "determination of the validity, extent or priority of liens." 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(1)(K). See, e.g., Zimmerman v. Continental Airlines, 712 F.2d 55, 8 C.B.C.2d 1202 (3d Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1038, 104 S. Ct. 699, 79 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1984) (bankruptcy judge has discretion to decide whether to enforce arbitration clause or hear dispute itself). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.2.3 (5th ed. 2007). For a discussion of litigating a Truth in Lending claim in bankruptcy, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice § 13.4.4 (6th ed. 2000 and Supp.).

(n132)Footnote 128. Franklin v. Hartland Mortgage Ctrs., Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24016 (N.D. Ill. June 18, 2001) , motion to strike denied, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24238 (N.D. Ill. June 18, 2001) . But see Thompson v. Irwin Home Equity Corp., 300 F.3d 88 (1st Cir. 2002) ("Assuming arguendo that the [debtors'] demand for rescission of the loan agreement under TILA constitutes a self-help remedy, the same cannot be said of their subsequent commencement of litigation in federal court challenging [the creditor's] refusal to cooperate with their attempt at self-help.").

(n133)Footnote 129. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1985) . See also Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (1991) . See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (4th ed. 2004).

(n134)Footnote 130. 9 U.S.C. § 2. Section 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act states that arbitration clauses are enforceable "save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract."

(n135)Footnote 131. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 637 n.19, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 3359 n.19, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444, 462 (1985) (international antitrust case; court upheld arbitration agreement but announced general standards for evaluating the validity of arbitration agreements).

(n136)Footnote 132. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 637 n.19, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 3359 n.19, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444, 462 (1985) .

(n137)Footnote 133. Paladino v. Avnet Computer Techs., 134 F.3d 1054 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n138)Footnote 134. See, e.g., Ingle v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 328 F.3d 1165 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Circuit City Stores v. Adams, 279 F.3d 889 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1112, 122 S. Ct. 2329, 153 L. Ed. 2d 160 (2002) ; Ticknor v. Choice Hotels Int'l, Inc., 265 F.3d 931 (9th Cir. 2001) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1133, 122 S. Ct. 1075, 151 L. Ed. 2d 977 (2002) ; Shankle v. B-G Maint. Mgmt. of Colo., Inc., 163 F.3d 1230 (10th Cir. 1999) ; Ting v. AT&T, 182 F. Supp. 2d 902 (N.D. Cal. 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 319 F.3d 1126 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Brennan v. Bally Total Fitness, 198 F. Supp. 2d 377 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) ; Prevot v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 133 F. Supp. 2d 937 (S.D. Tex. 2001) ; Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (W.D. Mich. 2000) ; Nicholson v. Labor Ready, Inc., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23494 (N.D. Cal. May 23, 1997) ; Knepp v. Credit Acceptance Corp. (In re Knepp), 229 B.R. 821 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1999) ; Harold Allen's Mobile Home Factory Outlet, Inc. v. Butler, 825 So. 2d 779 (Ala. 2002) ; American Gen. Fin., Inc., v. Branch, 793 So. 2d 738 (Ala. 2000) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 949, 122 S. Ct. 342, 151 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2001) ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (2000) ; Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc., 28 Cal. 3d 807, 171 Cal. Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165 (1981) ; Mercuro v. Superior Court, 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (2d Dist. 2002) , review denied, 2002 Cal. LEXIS 3328 (Cal. May 15, 2002) ; Flores v. Transamerica HomeFirst, Inc., 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (1st Dist. 2001) , review denied, 2002 Cal. LEXIS 298 (Cal. Jan. 16, 2002) ; Bolter v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. App. 4th 900, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 (4th Dist. 2001) , review denied, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 4031 (Cal. June 13, 2001) ; McCoy v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. App. 4th 354, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 504 (4th Dist. 2001) , review denied, opinion withdrawn by order of court, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 3784 (Cal. June 20, 2001) ; Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco, Inc., 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (2d Dist. 2000) ; Villa Milano Homeowners Ass'n v. Il Davorge, 84 Cal. App. 4th 819, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (4th Dist.) , reh'g denied, 2000 Cal. App. LEXIS 901 (Cal. App. 2000) ; Patterson v. ITT Consumer Fin. Corp., 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563

(1st Dist. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1176, 114 S. Ct. 1217, 127 L. Ed. 2d 563 (1994) ; Worldwide Ins. Group v. Klopp, 603 A.2d 788 (Del. 1992) ; Powertel, Inc. v. Bexley, 743 So. 2d 570 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1999) , review denied, 763 So. 2d 1044 (Fla. 2000) ; Ballard v. Southwest Detroit Hosp., 119 Mich. App. 814, 327 N.W.2d 370 (1982) ; Iwen v. U.S. W. Direct, 293 Mont. 512, 977 P.2d 989 (1999) ; Teleserve Sys. v. MCI Telecommunications Corp., 230 A.D.2d 585, 659 N.Y.S.2d 659 (4th Dep't 1997) , appeal denied, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10626 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't Sept. 30, 1997) ; Williams v. Aetna Fin. Co., 83 Ohio St. 3d 464, 700 N.E.2d 859 (1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1999) ; Myers v. Terminix Int'l Co., 91 Ohio Misc. 2d 41, 697 N.E.2d 277 (Ct. App. 1998) ; Zak v. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 713 A.2d 681 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1998) ; In re Turner Bros. Trucking Co., 8 S.W.3d 370 (Tex. App. Texarkana 1999) ; Sosa v. Paulos, 924 P.2d 357 (Utah 1996) ; Arnold v. United Cos. Lending Corp., 204 W. Va. 229, 511 S.E.2d 854 (1998) . In claiming that an arbitration clause is unconscionable, the consumer should have an opportunity to present evidence as to the commercial setting, purpose, and effect of the arbitration provision. See, e.g., Montrosse v. Conseco Fin. Servicing Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20792 (S.D. W. Va. Dec. 20, 2000) .

(n139)Footnote 135. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (2000) .

(n140)Footnote 136. See Champ v. Siegel Trading Co., 55 F.3d 269, 275 (7th Cir. 1995) ; American Centennial Ins. Co. v. National Cas. Co., 951 F.2d 107, 108 (6th Cir. 1991) ; Baesler v. Continental Grain Co., 900 F.2d 1193, 1195 (8th Cir. 1990) ; Protective Life Ins. Corp. v. Lincoln Nat'l Life Ins. Corp., 873 F.2d 281, 282 (11th Cir. 1989) (per curiam); Del E. Webb Constr. v. Richardson Hosp. Auth., 823 F.2d 145, 150 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Western Seas Shipping Co., 743 F.2d 635, 637 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1061, 105 S. Ct. 544, 83 L. Ed. 2d 431 (1984) . Note that some state courts find these federal decisions, which are based on the Federal Arbitration Act, not to be applicable to state court litigation. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 9.4 (4th ed. 2004).

(n141)Footnote 137. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(1) and text following § 1640(a)(4) ("In determining the amount of award in any class action, the court shall consider, among other relevant factors, the amount of any actual damages awarded ... ."); 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(B).

(n142)Footnote 138. The cap for a statutory damage award in a class action is $500,000 (or 1% of the creditor's net worth), as compared to $1000 for an individual claimant in a transaction not secured by real property. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2).

(n143)Footnote 139. Randolph v. Green Tree Fin. Corp., 244 F.3d 814 (11th Cir. 2001) ; Johnson v. West Suburban Bank, 225 F.3d 366 (3d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1145, 121 S. Ct. 1081, 148 L. Ed. 2d 957 (2001) ; Bowen v. First Family Fin. Servs., 233 F.3d 1331 (11th Cir. 2000) ; Lloyd v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8279 (D. Del. Feb. 22, 2001) , aff'd without opinion, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 239 (3d Cir. Jan. 7, 2002) , reported in full, 27 Fed. Appx. 82, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 1027 (3d Cir. 2002) ; Gray v. Conseco, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14821 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2000) ; Marsh v. First USA Bank, N.A., 103 F. Supp. 2d 909 (N.D. Tex. 2000) ; Thompson v. Illinois Title Loans, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 232 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 2000) ; Wood v. Cooper Chevrolet, Inc., 102 F. Supp. 2d 1345 (N.D. Ala. 2000) ; Sagal v. First USA Bank, N.A., 69 F. Supp. 2d 627 (D. Del. 1999) , aff'd without opinion, 254 F.3d 1078 (3d Cir. 2001) ; Zawikowski v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 514 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 7, 1999) ; Lopez v. Plaza Fin. Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5566 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 25, 1996) .

(n144)Footnote 140. Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (W.D. Mich. 2000) . See also Johnson v. Tele-Cash, Inc., 82 F. Supp. 2d 264 (D. Del. 1999) , rev'd on this ground sub nom. Johnson v. West Suburban Bank, 225 F.3d 366 (3d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1145, 121 S. Ct. 1081, 148 L. Ed. 2d 957 (2001) ; Bantolina v. Aloha Motors, 419 F. Supp. 1116, 1120 (D. Haw. 1976) ; Powertel, Inc. v. Bexley, 743 So. 2d 570 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1999) , review denied, 763 So. 2d 1044 (Fla. 2000) .

(n145)Footnote 141. Muhammad v. County Bank of Rehoboth Beach, 189 N.J. 1 (2006) .

(n146)Footnote 142. Wong v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49444 (E.D. Mich. July 20, 2006) .

(n147)Footnote 143. Schwartz v. Alltel Corp., 2006 Ohio 3353 (2006) .

(n148)Footnote 144. Lee v. AT&T Wireless Servs., Inc., 2006 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 4582 (Cal. Ct. App. May 26, 2006) ; Klussman v. Cross Country Bank, 134 Cal. App. 4th 1283 (Dec. 15, 2005) ; Aral v. Earthlink, Inc., 134 Cal. App. 4th 544 (Nov. 29, 2005) . See also Ramsdell v. Lenscrafters, Inc., 135 Fed. Appx. 130 (9th Cir. June 15, 2005) (California law); Tamayo v. Brainstorm USA, 154 Fed. Appx. 564 (9th Cir. Sept. 21, 2005) (California law); Laster v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 407 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (S.D. Cal. 2005) .

(n149)Footnote 145. Thibodeau v. Comcast, 2006 Phila. Ct. Com. Pl. LEXIS 59 (Pa. C.P. Jan. 24, 2006) . But see Dambrosio v. Comcast Corp., 2006-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75079, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35871 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 27, 2005) , vacated by agreement, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48163 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 12, 2006) .

(n150)Footnote 146. See, e.g., Sherr v. Dell, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51864 (S.D.N.Y. July 27, 2006) ; Delta Funding Corp. v. Harris, 189 N.J. 28 (2006) (New Jersey Supreme Court, on the same day it ruled in Muhammad, found no unconscionability in class action waiver in another case, based on the facts of that case); Tillman v. Commercial Credit Loans, Inc., 629 S.E.2d 865 (N.C. Ct. App. 2006) ; Spann v. American Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 582 (Tenn. Ct. App. Aug. 30, 2006) (Utah law).

(n151)Footnote 147. Fonte v. AT&T Wireless Servs., Inc., 903 So. 2d 1019 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. June 15, 2005) .

(n152)Footnote 148. Cunningham v. Citigroup, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33805 (D.N.J. Dec. 16, 2005) .

(n153)Footnote 149. Walther v. Sovereign Bank, 872 A.2d 735 (Md. 2005) .

(n154)Footnote 150. Strand v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n ND, 693 N.W.2d 918 (N.D. 2005) .

(n155)Footnote 151. Caley v. Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., 428 F.3d 1359 (5th Cir. 2005) (Georgia law); Jenkins v. First Am. Cash Advance of Ga., L.L.C., 400 F.3d 868 (11th Cir. 2005) (Georgia law).

(n156)Footnote 152. Provencher v. Dell, Inc., 409 F. Supp. 2d 1196 (C.D. Cal. 2006) (Texas law).

(n157)Footnote 153. See S. Rep. No. 93-278, at 15 (1973) (quoting 1972 F.R.B. Ann. Rep. on Truth in Lending 13).

(n158)Footnote 154. S. Rep. No. 93-278 to accompany S. 2101, Truth in Lending Act Amendments 14-15 (June 28, 1973).

(n159)Footnote 155. See Adams v. Plaza Fin. Co., 168 F.3d 932 (7th Cir. 1999) , reh'g denied, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5231 (7th Cir. Mar. 18, 1999) ; Edwards v. Your Credit, 148 F.3d 427 (5th Cir. 1998) , amended, reh'g, en banc, denied, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 20916 (5th Cir. Aug. 17, 1998) .

(n160)Footnote 156. See Minnesota v. First Alliance Mortgage Co., C9-98-11416 (Dist. Ct., 2d Judicial Dist. Minn. Mar. 10, 1999) (order for final judgment).

(n161)Footnote 157. See Balderos v. City Chevrolet, 214 F.3d 849 (7th Cir. 2000) ; Walker v. Wallace Auto Sales, Inc., 155 F.3d 927 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n162)Footnote 158. Ting v. AT&T, 182 F. Supp. 2d 902, 930-31 (N.D. Cal. 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 319 F.3d 1126 (9th Cir. 2003) . See also Al-Safin v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 394 F.3d 1254 (9th Cir. 2005) (provision in arbitration clause that barred employees from bringing or participating in class actions was unconscionable).

(n163)Footnote 159. 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 862 (4th Dist. 2002) , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1226, 123 S. Ct. 1258, 154 L. Ed. 2d 1087 (2003) .

(n164)Footnote 160. 211 F. Supp. 2d 1160 (N.D. Cal. 2002) .

(n165)Footnote 161. Bellsouth Mobility LLC v. Christopher, 819 So. 2d 171 (Fla. App. 2002) . See also Comb v. Paypal, Inc., 218 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (N.D. Cal. 2002) ; Luna v. Household Fin. Corp. III, 236 F. Supp. 2d 1166 (W.D. Wash. 2002) ; Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1104-05 (W.D. Mich. 2000) (holding arbitration clause unconscionable for violation of state consumer protection statute's explicit provision of class-wide recovery); Leonard v. Terminix Int'l Co., 854 So. 2d 529 (Ala. 2002) ; State ex rel. Dunlap v. Berger, 567 S.E.2d 265 (W. Va. 2002) .

(n166)Footnote 162. 743 So. 2d 570 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1999) , review denied, 763 So. 2d 1044 (Fla. 2000) . See also Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1087, 1104-05 (W.D. Mich. 2000) (holding arbitration clause unconscionable for violation of state consumer protection statute's explicit provision of class-wide recovery).

(n167)Footnote 163. 2005 Cal. LEXIS 7319 (Cal. June 27, 2005) .

(n168)Footnote 164. 173 S.W.3d 300 (Mo. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n169)Footnote 165. 828 N.E.2d 812, 814 (2005) .

(n170)Footnote 166. See Edelist v. MBNA Am. Bank, 790 A.2d 1249, 1261 (Del. Super. Ct. 2001) ("The surrender of that class action right was clearly articulated in the arbitration amendment. The [c]ourt finds nothing unconscionable about it and finds the bar on class actions enforceable."); Pick v. Discover Fin. Servs., Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15777, at *16 (D. Del. Sept. 28, 2001) ("[I]t is generally accepted that arbitration clauses are not unconscionable because they preclude class actions.").

(n171)Footnote 167. See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 6.2 (5th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n172)Footnote 168. Id. § 2.4.

(n173)Footnote 169. Reuter v. Davis, 2006 WL 3743016, at *4 (Fla. Cir. Ct. Dec. 12, 2006).

(n174)Footnote 170. Scott v. Cingular Wireless, 161 P.3d 1000 (Wash. 2007) .

(n175)Footnote 171. In re Cotton Yarn Antitrust Litig., 505 F.3d 274, 285 (4th Cir. 2007) .

(n176)Footnote 172. Fiser v. Dell Computer Corp., 144 N.M. 464 (N.M. 2008) .

(n177)Footnote 173. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n178)Footnote 174. Baron v. Best Buy Co., Inc., 79 F. Supp. 2d 1350 (S.D. Fla. 1999) (opinion granting stay pending appeal).

(n179)Footnote 175. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.9.1,(6th ed. 2007) for a discussion of the purposes of the TILA attorney fee provision.

(n180)Footnote 176. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 637 n.19, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 3359 n.19, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444, 462 (1985) .

(n181)Footnote 177. Baron v. Best Buy Co., 75 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (S.D. Fla. 1999) . See also McCaskill v. SCI Mgmt. Corp., 285 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002) , upheld on reconsideration, 298 F.3d 677 (7th Cir. 2002) ; Perez v. Globe Airport Sec. Servs., 253 F.3d 1280 (11th Cir. 2001) , vacated, 294 F.3d 1275 (11th Cir. 2002) ; Graham Oil Co. v. ARCO Prods. Co., 43 F.3d 1244 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 907, 116 S. Ct. 275, 133 L. Ed. 2d 195 (1995) (Petroleum Marketing Practices Act); Gourley v. Yellow Transp., LLC, 178 F. Supp. 2d 1196 (D. Colo. 2001) (agreement denying attorney fees violates public policy); Horenstein v. Mortgage Mkt., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21463 (D. Or. Jan. 7, 1999) , aff'd, 9 Fed. Appx. 618, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 9267 (9th Cir. 2001) (employment case); DeGaetano v. Smith Barney, Inc., 983 F. Supp. 459 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) ; Alexander v. Anthony Int'l, Ltd. P'ship, 341 F.3d 256, 267 (3d Cir. 2003) (Virgin Islands Wrongful Discharge Act); Romano v. ManorCare, Inc., 861 So. 2d 59, 63 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004) ; Holt v. O'Brien Imports, 862 So. 2d 87, 90 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) . But see Livingston v. Associates Finance, Inc., 339 F.3d 553 (7th Cir. 2003) (AAA rules allow attorney fees to be awarded if they are authorized by law, so no conflict with TIL that limits defendant's fees; court ignores language that also allows fees where TIL does not allow); Faber v. Menard, Inc., 367 F.3d 1048, 1055 (8th Cir. 2004) (clause denying attorney fees to ADEA claimant enforced; arbitrator decides remedial issue); Hawkins v. Aid Ass'n for Lutherans, 338 F.3d 801, 807 (7th Cir. 2003) (same).

(n182)Footnote 178. Circuit City Stores v. Adams, 279 F.3d 889, 894 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1112, 122 S. Ct. 2329, 153 L. Ed. 2d 160 (2002) (arbitration clause that "imposes a strict one year statute of limitations on arbitrating claims ... would deprive [the employee] of the benefit of the continuing violation doctrine available in FEHA suits"); Graham Oil Co. v. ARCO Prods. Co., 43 F.3d 1244 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 907, 116 S. Ct. 275, 133 L. Ed. 2d 195 (1995) ; In re Managed Care Litig., 132 F. Supp. 2d 989, 1000 (S.D. Fla. 2000) ("[a]dditionally, the one year statute of limitations raises grave concerns that Dr. Porth's statutory claims will not be adjudicated appropriately in an arbitration forum"; refusing to compel arbitration with respect to Dr. Porth's statutory claims, though compelling arbitration with respect to his common law claims despite the limitations issue); Parilla v. IAP Worldwide Services VI, Inc. 368 F.3d 269, 277, 278 (3d Cir. 2004) (employer's clause requiring employee to provide notice of discrimination claims within thirty days is unconscionable); Alexander v. Anthony Int'l, Ltd. P'ship, 341 F.3d 256, 266, 267 (3d Cir. 2003) (same); Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Ingle, 328 F.3d 1165, 1175 (9th Cir. 2003) (employer's one-year limitations period is unconscionable for unreasonably shortening applicable statutory period).

(n183)Footnote 179. Perez v. Globe Airport Sec. Servs., 253 F.3d 1280 (11th Cir. 2001) , vacated, 294 F.3d 1275 (11th Cir. 2002) ; Broughton v. CIGNA Healthplans, 21 Cal. 4th 1066, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334, 988 P.2d 67 (1999) ; Maciejewski v. Alpha Sys. Lab, Inc., 73 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 390 , review granted and opinion superseded, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 986 P.2d 170 (1999) , vacated and transferred, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198, 11 P.3d 954 (2000) ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc., 68 Cal. App. 4th 374, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255 (1st Dist. 1998) , review granted, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 274, 973 P.2d 51 (1999) , rev'd, superseded, remanded, 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (2000) ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc., 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 (1st Dist. 1997) , review denied, (Apr. 16, 1997); see also Baron v. Best Buy Co., 75 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (S.D. Fla. 1999) .

(n184)Footnote 180. Stehli v. Action Custom Homes, Inc., 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 4464 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 24, 1999) .

(n185)Footnote 181. Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc., 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 (1st Dist. 1997) , review denied (Apr. 16, 1997).

(n186)Footnote 182. For example, in Cole v. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs., 105 F.3d 1465, 1480 (D.C. Cir. 1997) , the parties stipulated that arbitrators' fees are commonly $500 to $1000 per day. The American Arbitration Association [hereinafter AAA] requires that claimants who request an in-person hearing for a small claim pay all fees and costs. In disputes valued at between $10,000 and $100,000, a consumer must pay a filing fee of $500 to $1250, a daily hearing fee of $150, a daily room rental fee of $150, and a portion of the arbitrator's fee of $100 to $350 per hour. AAA, Commercial Dispute Resolution Procedures, www.adr.org/rules/commercial/commercial_rules.html (visited July 20, 2000).

(n187)Footnote 183. Green Tree Fin. Corp.-Alabama v. Randolph, 531 U.S. 79, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2000) .

(n188)Footnote 184. Hale v. First USA Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8045 (S.D.N.Y. June 12, 2001) . Cf. Lloyd v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8279 (D. Del. Feb. 22, 2001) (burden not met where creditor will front arbitration costs and costs will be no higher than in court proceeding), aff'd without opinion, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 239 (3d Cir. Jan. 7, 2002) , reported in full, 27 Fed. Appx. 82, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 1027 (3d Cir. 2002) ; Vera v. First USA Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9052 (D. Del. Apr. 19, 2001) (consumer did not meet burden); Kennedy v. Conseco Fin. Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17704 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2000) (where creditor agreed to pay 100% of arbitration costs, agreement is enforceable); Brown v. Surety Fin. Serv., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5734 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2000) (fees not unreasonable); Livingston v. Associates Finance, Inc., 339 F.3d 553 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n189)Footnote 185. Wood v. Cooper Chevrolet, Inc., 102 F. Supp. 2d 1345 (N.D. Ala. 2000) . See also Floss v. Ryan's Family Steak Houses, Inc., 211 F.3d 306 (6th Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1072, 121 S. Ct. 763, 148 L. Ed. 2d 664 (2001) (expressing concern that requirement that employee pay half of arbitration fees as condition of pursuing ADA and FLSA dispute could prevent employees from prosecuting claims, but invalidating arbitration agreement on other grounds); Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 110, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 764, 6 P.3d 669, 687 (2000) (risk of having to bear substantial arbitration costs "deters the exercise of the constitutional right of due process").

(n190)Footnote 186. Contra Livingston v. Associates Fin., Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8678 (N.D. Ill. June 22, 2001) (report and recommendation of magistrate judge).

(n191)Footnote 187. See Circuit City Stores v. Adams, 279 F.3d 889 (9th Cir. 2002) , cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1112, 122 S. Ct. 2329, 153 L. Ed. 2d 160 (2002) ; Ting v. AT&T, 182 F. Supp. 2d 902, 933-34 (N.D. Cal. 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 319 F.3d 1126 (9th Cir. 2003) ; Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 124 F. Supp. 2d 958 (W.D. Va. 2000) (arbitration fees of several thousand dollars are so unfair as to make the arbitration agreement unconscionable; fees serve to bar rather than provide a means for an economical solution to controversies); Knepp v. Credit Acceptance Corp. (In re Knepp), 229 B.R. 821 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1999) (arbitration was unconscionable when it would cost the consumer initially anywhere from $500 to $7000, plus daily costs of hundreds of dollars, to arbitrate a dispute and the consumer, being in bankruptcy, could not afford that amount); Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc., 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (2d Dist. 2000) (one factor cited in finding an arbitration clause unconscionable is that it required an employee to front all fees in the arbitration); Ramirez v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 76 Cal. App. 4th 1229, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916 (1st Dist. 1999) , review granted and opinion superseded, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 995 P.2d 137 (2000) , review dismissed, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 199, 11 P.3d 955 (2000) ; Maciejewski v. Alpha Sys. Lab, Inc., 73 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 390 , review granted and opinion superseded, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 986 P.2d 170 (1999) , vacated and transferred, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198, 11 P.3d 954 (2000) ; Patterson v. ITT Consumer Fin. Corp., 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 (1st Dist. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1176, 114 S. Ct. 1217, 127 L. Ed. 2d 563 (1994) ; Brower v. Gateway 2000, 246 A.D.2d 246, 676 N.Y.S.2d 569 (1st Dep't 1998) ($4,000 fee, only $2,000 of which would be refunded if the consumer prevailed); Licitra v. Gateway, Inc., 189 Misc. 2d 721, 728, 734 N.Y.S.2d 389, 394 (Civ. Ct. 2001) (tracing the National Arbitration Forum's arbitration fees and concluding that "[i]t is obvious that these costs can make arbitration not a viable alternative for many consumers"); Williams v. Aetna Fin. Co., 83 Ohio St. 3d 464, 700 N.E.2d 859 (1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1999) ; Myers v. Terminix Int'l Co., 91 Ohio Misc. 2d 41, 697 N.E.2d 277 (Ct. App. 1998) (fees not only excessive, but not disclosed to the consumer in the original arbitration agreement); Alexander v. Anthony Int'l, Ltd. P'ship, 341 F.3d 256, 269, 270 (3d Cir. 2003) ; Murphy v. Mid-West Nat'l Life Ins. Co. of Tenn., 78 P.3d 766 (Idaho 2003) ; D.R. Horton, Inc. v. Green, 96 P.3d 1159 (Nev. 2004) . But see Rollins, Inc. v. Foster, 991 F. Supp. 1426 (M.D. Ala. 1998) (high fees could lead to an unconscionability finding, but not justified based on the facts of this case); Commercial Credit Corp. v. Leggett, 744 So. 2d 890 (Ala. 1999) (no unconscionability when the consumer must pay $125, the other party then pays for the first day of the arbitrator's time, and the losing party pays all remaining fees).

(n192)Footnote 188. Cooper v. MRM Inv. Co., 199 F. Supp. 2d 771 (M.D. Tenn. 2002) . Cooper has been affirmed both as to the unaffordability of the fees and the irrelevance of the company's offer during litigation to pay for the fees. But the Sixth Circuit ordered the case to be remanded to reconsider the decision in light of the AAA's new fee schedule that significantly reduces an employee's up-front arbitration costs in an employment dispute. Cooper v. MRM Investment Co., 367 F.3d 493 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n193)Footnote 189. Szetela v. Discover Bank, 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 862 (4th Dist. 2002) , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1226, 123 S. Ct. 1258, 154 L. Ed. 2d 1087 (2003) .

(n194)Footnote 190. Mendez v. Palm Harbor Homes, Inc., 111 Wash. App. 446, 45 P.3d 594 (2002) .

(n195)Footnote 191. O'Donoghue v. Smythe, Cramer Co., 2002 Ohio 3447, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 3571 (Ct. App. 2002) (July 3, 2002).

(n196)Footnote 192. Blair v. Scott Specialty Gases, 283 F.3d 595 (3d Cir. 2002) . See also Kloss v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 310 Mont. 123, 54 P.3d 1 (2002) .

(n197)Footnote 193. E.g., McNulty v. H & R Block, 843 A.2d 1267, 1274 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2004) ("This arbitration clause requires a consumer to pay $50.00 in the hopes of receiving, at most, $37.00 ... . [T]his is a situation where the costs of arbitration, minimal though they may seem, work to preclude the individual presentation of claims"). A detailed discussion of AAA and NAF arbitration fees and whether they are unconscionable is found in NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements §§ 4.3.2.3, 4.3.2.4 (4th ed. 2004).

(n198)Footnote 194. Green Tree Fin. Corp. v. Randolph, 531 U.S. 79, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2000) ; Blair v. Scott Specialty Gases, 283 F.3d 595 (3d Cir. 2002) ; Gruber v. Louis Hornick & Co., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8764 (S.D.N.Y. May 22, 2003) ; Fluehmann v. Associates Fin. Servs., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5755 (D. Mass. Mar. 29, 2002) ; Hale v. First USA Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8045 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) . Cf. LLoyd v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8279 (D. Del. Feb. 22, 2001) (burden not met where creditor will front arbitration costs and costs will be no higher than in court proceeding); Vera v. First USA Bank, N.A., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9052 (D. Del. Apr. 19, 2001) (consumer did not meet burden); Kennedy v. Conseco Fin. Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17704 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2000) (where creditor agreed to pay 100% of arbitration costs, agreement is enforceable); Brown v. Surety Fin. Serv., Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5734 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2000) (fees not unreasonable).

(n199)Footnote 195. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (5th ed. 2007). See, e.g., Faber v. Menard, Inc., 367 F.3d 1048, 1054 (8th Cir. 2004) ("Faber has not provided the evidence necessary to estimate the length of the arbitration and the corresponding amount of arbitrators' fees (e.g., sophistication of the issues, average daily or hourly arbitrator costs in the region). He has also failed to provide evidence of his particular financial situation."); Owner-Operator Independent Drivers Ass'n, Inc. v. Swift Transp. Co., 288 F. Supp. 2d 1033 (D. Ariz. 2003) ("the plaintiffs have not cited the Court to any evidence establishing that any such costs that might reasonably be incurred would in fact be prohibitive to the affected plaintiffs"); Livingston v. Associates Fin., Inc., 339 F.3d 553, 557 (7th Cir. 2003) ("the Livingstons have not offered any specific evidence of arbitration costs that they may face in this litigation, prohibitive or otherwise, and have failed to provide any evidence of their inability to pay such costs, even though the district court permitted discovery on that very question").

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 1 Truth in Lending

1-1 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 1.10

§ 1.10 Consumer Remedies

[1] Standing to Bring Claims for TIL Damages

Violations of TIL requirements give rise to several remedies: actual damages, individual statutory damages, class action statutory damages, and attorney fees. Injunctive and declaratory relief are not specifically mentioned in TILA, but several courts have found that this relief is also available. n1 In general, liability arises when any creditor fails to comply with requirements "with respect to any person." n2 The mere loss of a statutory right to disclosure is an injury that gives the consumer standing for Article III purposes. n3

Parties who are liable include the creditor--the person to whom the transaction is initially payable on its face. n4 The creditor is liable for actual and statutory damages. n5 Given the limited definition of creditor, there will not often be multiple creditors, n6 but they are likely to be jointly and severally liable for the damage award.

The liability of an assignee depends on several factors. For ordinary transactions, assignees are liable for monetary damages only for violations which are apparent on the face of the documents. n7 Also, rescission is available against assignees to the same extent as it would be against the creditor. There may be greater liability for assignees of high cost mortgage transactions subject to the HOEPA. n8

[2] Actual Damages

The most likely source of actual damages in TIL cases is the dollar difference between the misstated disclosures and the hidden, correct amount. The reported TIL actual damages decisions are divided over whether a consumer must establish detrimental reliance upon inaccurate financial disclosures to obtain the corresponding dollar amount as actual damages or whether more objective standards of liability apply. n9

A TILA statutory provision which may help define actual damages is the restitution scheme included in the Act in 1980. TILA actual damages may include consequential damages, even including emotional distress caused by the creditor's disclosure violations. n10 It is also possible, although difficult, to obtain missed opportunity damages. n11

[3] Statutory Damages

[a] Availability of Statutory Damages

Any creditor who violates certain TILA requirements is liable to the consumer, in an individual action, for twice the finance charge. n12 If the transaction giving rise to the claim is closed-end and real property or dwelling secured, the statutory damages are limited to not less than $200 nor more than $2000, as a result of 1995 amendments to the Act. n13 The floor and ceiling amounts for violations occurring after July 30, 2008 for transactions secured by real estate or a dwelling were increased. n14 These "statutory damages" are available in addition to actual damages, costs, and attorney fees. n15 Contrary to the plain language of the statute, the Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Justice Ginsburg, held that the $100/$1000 limits on TILA statutory damages limit clause (i), thus applying this ceiling to all leases and all non-real-estate loans. n16 Justice Ginsburg reasoned that before the 1995 amendment, the lower courts had consistently held that the $1000 cap applied to both clause (i), relating to loan transactions, and clause (ii), relating to leases, even though the cap was only located in clause (ii). Moreover, she explained that there is no independent evidence, outside of the statutory language, that Congress intended to change the rules for statutory damage recoveries. Justice Ginsburg noted that Congress retained the "liability under this subparagraph" language, which, in her view, applies the limits to all claims addressed in section 1640(a)(2)(A), since a "subparagraph" is a unit that follows a capital letter, whereas a "clause" follows a lower case Roman numeral. More broadly, the Koons case affirms that statutory damages equal twice the finance charge, with applicable minimums and maximums based on the type of transaction. For open-end credit not secured by real estate or a dwelling, beginning February 22, 2010, statutory damages will be double the finance charge with a minimum of $500 and a cap of $5,000. There will be no cap for "an established pattern or practice" of noncompliance. n16.1

To obtain statutory damages, the consumer need not show that the creditor intended or knew about the violation or that the consumer was deceived. n17 The consumer need not even have been aware of the information in the disclosure statement. n18 The consumer is also not required to show any actual damages. n19 In addition, statutory damages may be awarded even after the loan in question has been paid off. n20 In 1974, Congress amended the TILA to provide for only a single statutory recovery even for multiple disclosure violations committed in a single transaction or open-end account. n21 Nevertheless, it is still possible to win multiple damages for multiple violations in certain situations.

First, the statute prohibits multiple statutory damages only for disclosure violations. For other violations--such as refusing to implement a consumer's rescission, n22 or including a prohibited term or engaging in a prohibited practice in a HOEPA loan n23--there is no prohibition. Thus, one statutory damage award can be made for a disclosure violation, another for a refusal to rescind, another for including a prohibited term in a HOEPA loan, and yet another for engaging in a prohibited practice in a HOEPA loan.

Second, the statute as amended expressly provides that, if a creditor continues to violate the act after a consumer has recovered damages, the consumer may seek additional recoveries. n24

Multiple obligors are limited to one recovery of statutory damages. n25 This limitation does not apply to class actions or actual damage claims. n26

[b] Violations Giving Rise to Statutory Damages

As a general rule, statutory and actual damages are available for any violation of TILA Part B (credit transactions), with some important exceptions for specified disclosure items. n27 They are also available for violations of Part D (credit billing) or Part E (consumer leases). n28

The Act unequivocally provides for statutory damages for the failure to disclose those specific items listed in 15 U.S.C. section 1640(a)(3). For closed-end disclosures, statutory damages are available for the failure to disclose accurately: n29

- The amount financed; n30
- The unitemized finance charge; n31
- The annual percentage rate; n32
- The total of payments; n33
- The number, amount, and due dates or periods of payments; n34 and
- A statement that a security interest has been retained. n35

Statutory damages also appear to be available for violation of two requirements regarding identification of the holder of an obligation. The first of these requirements was added in 1995. It requires servicers to provide the name, address, and telephone number of the owner or master servicer of a loan on the borrower's request. n35.1 The second was added as part of the Helping Families Save Their Homes Act of 2009. It requires third-party transferees of mortgage loans to notify borrowers of the transfer. n35.2

For open-end disclosures, statutory damages are unequivocally available for the failure to disclose any of the full range of information required to be in the initial disclosure and to make those disclosures in a timely fashion, n36 and, with regard to periodic statements, for the failure to disclose:

- The amount of the finance charge, itemized if appropriate; n37
- Periodic rates; n38
- The annual percentage rate; n39
- The balance upon which the finance charge is computed; n40
- The new balance; n41
- The free-ride period; n42 and
- The address for billing errors. n43

Statutory damages are more broadly available for violations of Parts B (Credit Transactions) and D (Fair Credit Billing). n44

[4] TIL Class Actions

[a] Introduction

Many TILA violations are unusually well-suited to class action treatment. Violations are often apparent on the face of the written documents and typically are identical for each class member. In addition, class certification is important for TIL cases, "where the small amounts of money involved and the difficult financial situations of many of the litigants may inhibit individual litigation." n45

The TILA explicitly provides for class action relief comprised of actual damages, statutory damages not to exceed the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth, and attorney fees. n46

This discussion concentrates on two TIL class action issues--class certification and class monetary remedies--and covers TIL class actions in federal court only. n47

A final warning is in order: The inclusion of arbitration clauses by some creditors in their loan papers may present an obstacle to TIL class actions. n48

[b] Certifying the TIL Class Action

The plaintiff's motion for class certification should be made very early in a case, but not too early. The motion should await review of the defendant's answer to the TIL class action complaint and the development of enough discovery that the plaintiff class can carry its burden of proving the elements for class certification. n49 In addition, the defendant's motion to dismiss is usually resolved before class certification.

Any motions for summary judgment by either side should await determination of the class certification issue.

TIL class actions are nearly always brought as actions for damages under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3). TIL actions will rarely qualify under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2), since they do not primarily seek equitable relief. Consequently, the TIL class action will have to qualify under both Rules 23(a) and 23(b)(3), and meet prerequisites dealing with numerosity, n50 commonality, n51 typicality, n52 adequacy of representation, n53 predominance of common questions of law or fact, n54 and superiority of the class action to other methods to adjudicate the controversy.

Adequacy of representation can be particularly troublesome in a TIL case because the class recovery is limited to the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth. In an individual TIL action, a successful consumer is guaranteed a recovery of double the finance charge, subject, at least in some cases, to a minimum of $100 or $200 and a maximum of $1,000 or $2,000. n55 In TIL classes with large numbers of class members, each member's maximum recovery often will be far less than these amounts.

This discrepancy between the potential recovery for each consumer in an individual versus a class action raises several questions. However, courts generally are not troubled by the issue that the class representative is deciding for other class members that their recovery will be less than in an individual action as long as the class action notice clearly discloses the choice to class members so that they can opt out if they choose. n56

[c] Class Action Relief

The relief available in a TILA class action is attorney fees n57 plus actual damages n58 plus statutory damages in an amount not more than the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth. n59 Class action statutory damages do not require individual calculation, but are awarded to the class as a whole. n60 As with an individual action, statutory damages are only available for certain TIL violations, n61 and the consumer can recover both actual and statutory damages, as applicable, for the same violation. n62

The statutory damage formula in an individual action--twice the finance charge, with a minimum of $200 and a maximum of $2000 in real property-secured transactions--does not apply to class actions. Instead, statutory damages are "such amount as the court may allow" up to a maximum of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth, whichever is less. n63

[5] Attorney Fees

TILA provides that in the case of "any successful action" to enforce TILA monetary liability or rescission, the creditor is also liable for the "costs of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court." n64

Consumers are awarded TILA attorney fees in "any successful action." n65

An action is successful even if the consumer prevails on only one TILA count, and even if other TILA and other state or federal claims are not successful or not addressed. n66 The size of the fee award in some circumstances may depend on how many of the claims are successful, but not whether fees should be awarded. A court can award attorney fees after a settlement on the merits because a settlement can be a successful action, n67 even where the creditor does not admit a TILA violation and claims the settlement is responsive to other of the consumer's legal claims. n68 However, language in a 2001 U.S. Supreme Court decision, Buckhannon Board and Care Home v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources, casts some doubt on whether a settlement that is not incorporated into a court order can be the basis for attorney fees. n69 Attorneys should therefore take care about the manner in which a settlement is documented in light of the Supreme Court's decision. Buckhannon rejected the "catalyst" theory, under which courts had held a plaintiff a prevailing party even if a favorable order was never entered, as long as the suit achieved the desired result by bringing about a voluntary change in the defendant's behavior. In doing so, the Court reaffirmed its view that both "enforceable judgments on the merits and court-ordered consent decrees" can establish that a party has prevailed and is entitled to a fee award. n70 The Court's frequent references to "court-ordered consent decrees" and a footnote in which it appears to back off from the view that fee awards are allowed for "private settlements" n71 may give defendants an argument that fees cannot be awarded for TIL settlements that are not incorporated into a court order but are, for example, accomplished by means of mutual releases and a dismissal of the case.

TILA states that the creditor "is liable to such person [i.e., the consumer] in an amount equal to the sum of" the damage award and attorney fees. n72 Thus, fees are usually paid directly to the consumer and not the consumer's attorney, n73 allowing the consumer and his or her attorney to calculate the attorney's compensation. TILA provides no attorney fees for prevailing creditors, even if the consumer's action is frivolous or in bad faith. n74

Successful TILA consumers must be awarded attorney fees and these fees are not limited by the amount of the consumer's damage recovery. n75 Similarly, it is impermissible to limit the fee award by the contingent fee recoverable or awards in similar cases. n76

The exact amount is in the court's discretion, and an appellate court will only review the amount for an abuse of discretion. n77 But the U.S. circuit courts have developed standards for calculating these awards, and failure to follow these standards or even failure to show clearly that these standards were followed may be an abuse of discretion. n78

In calculating fees, courts begin with a "lodestar": the number of allowable hours times an hourly rate. n79 There is a strong presumption that the lodestar amount represents an adequate and appropriate fee award. n80 The allowable hours are those hours claimed and documented by the attorney that were reasonably expended in reaching a favorable result. n81 Defendants often assert, and courts sometimes examine, the nature and number of claims made in relation to the claims upon which relief is granted. n82

Attorney fees should compensate not only for attorney time, but also for that of paralegals and law clerks who work on the case. n83 The work of paralegals and law student interns should be compensated at the fair market value of those services. n84 An attorney's travel time may be compensable. n85

The lodestar, with certain narrow exceptions discussed in this subsection, will, in all but the most extraordinary circumstances, form the upper limit for a fee award. n86 However, attorneys should be familiar with the leading attorney fee calculation cases for their circuit, as these factors are still utilized in establishing the hourly rate and in justifying the hours claimed. n87 The lodestar figure is presumed reasonable unless one of the parties carries the burden of showing why the figure should be adjusted up or down. n88

TILA also requires that, in any successful TIL action, the creditor is liable to the consumer for "the costs of the action." n89 In order to obtain reimbursement for costs, the plaintiff must take care to justify the expenses. n90

If the TILA action is successful, but the attorney fee award is inadequate, this issue alone may be appealed. n91 Even if the consumer does not wish to pursue the appeal, the attorney has standing to pursue the appeal.

[6] Right to Jury Trial

Whether a party to a TIL action may demand a jury trial as a matter of right is an issue that has been litigated only infrequently. n92 The TILA does not specify whether jury trials are available in TILA actions. n93 The Fourth Circuit in Barber v. Kimbrell's, Inc., n94 to date the most authoritative opinion on point, held that there is a constitutional right to a jury trial in a TILA suit for damages. n95

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re Consolidated "Non-Filing Insurance" Fee Litig., 195 F.R.D. 684, 692 (M.D. Ala. 2000) ; Sarafin v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 446 F. Supp. 611, 614 (N.D. Ill. 1978) ; Welmaker v. W.T. Grant Co., 365 F. Supp. 531, 545 (N.D. Ga. 1973) (enjoining illegal TILA conduct).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Demando v. Morris, 206 F.3d 1300 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 1.03[1][b] supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Multiple creditors must choose which of them will make disclosures. See Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.5(d)-1, 226.17(d)-1.

(n7)Footnote 7. The 1995 amendments, adding 15 U.S.C. § 1641(c), seem only to have changed the rule for assignees of real-property secured credit in very subtle ways.

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally Ch. 2 infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. The most detailed judicial analysis of the actual damage provision appears in In re Russell, 72 B.R. 855 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) . See Ray v. City Motors, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22809 (S.D. W. Va. June 30, 1998) (following Russell and awarding difference between finance charge charged and finance charge disclosed); Lopez v. Orlor, 176 F.R.D. 35 (D. Conn. 1997) ; Iuteri v. Branhaven Motors, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 41,259 (D. Conn. Nov. 14, 1985); Sutliff v. County Savings & Loan Co., 533 F. Supp. 1307 (N.D. Ohio 1982) ; Hill v. Allright Mortgage Co. (In re Hill), 213 B.R. 934 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996) , aff'd, 213 B.R. 943 (D. Md. 1977) ; In re Russell, 72 B.R. 855 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) ; Preston v. First Bank of Marietta, 473 N.E.2d 1210 (Ohio Ct. App. 1983) . But see Wiley v. Earl's Pawn & Jewelry, Inc., 950 F. Supp. 1108 (S.D. Ala. 1997) ; Swanagan v. Al Piemonte Ford Sales, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11167 (N.D. Ill. July 8, 1999) ; Anderson v. Rizza Chevrolet, Inc., 9 F. Supp. 2d 908 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (to recover actual damages, consumer must show that she would have sought and obtained a different warranty or a lower price if dealer upcharge had been disclosed); Batcher v. Mid City Motors, Inc., Civ. Action No. 97-1105-A-M2 (M.D. La. Nov. 3, 1998); Murray v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago (In re Murray), 239 B.R. 728, 734 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (actual damages measured by amount of undisclosed broker fee and attorney fee; "unexplained, inscrutable, and improperly disclosed" charges are actual damages). For full analysis of detrimental reliance standards of proof, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 8.5.4 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.). See also Peters v. Jim Lupient Oldsmobile Co., 220 F.3d 915, 917 (8th Cir. 2000) (requires consumer to show that: (1) he read the TIL disclosure statement; (2) he understood the charges being disclosed; (3) had the disclosure statement been accurate, he would have sought a lower price; and (4) he would have obtained a lower price); Hamilton v. O'Connor Chevrolet, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11474 (N.D. Ill. June 23, 2004) (plaintiffs must show they were stopped from getting better credit elsewhere; cites Nevarez); Nevarez v. O'Connor Chevrolet, Inc., 303 F. Supp. 2d 927 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (plaintiffs could not show detrimental reliance where they could not read or understand English and therefore could not have relied upon the contract); Haun v. Don Mealy Imports, Inc., 285 F. Supp. 2d 1297 (M.D. Fla. 2003) (plaintiff must allege facts in complaint that, if proven, would constitute actual damages; in this case plaintiff summarily claimed actual damages under TILA without identifying any injury at all that was caused by the alleged TILA violation). Accord Cannon v. Cherry Hill Toyota, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 362 (D.N.J. 2001) ; Parra v. Borgman Ford Sales, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16666 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 5, 2001) ; Gourrier v. Joe Myers Motors, Inc., 78 S.W.3d 651 (Tex. App. 2002) , opinion withdrawn, substituted opinion, 2002 Tex. App. LEXIS 5839 (Tex. App. Aug. 8, 2002) . See also Marshall v. Webb Chevrolet, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10250 (N.D. Ill. June 5, 2002) (TIL actual damages need not be calculated with scientific precision or mathematical accuracy); Burnstein v. Saks Fifth Ave. & Co., 208 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (lost access to credit due to a negative report submitted to a credit reporting agency by a creditor in violation of the credit billing provisions of TILA can be actual damages, as long as causation is shown). See also Warburton v. Foxtons, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39615 (D.N.J. June 13, 2005) (requiring detrimental reliance even where plaintiffs allege that defendant violated TILA's timing requirements; for timing claims, plaintiffs must allege that they would have sought, and obtained, a loan at a lower price); Yarnall v. Four Aces Emporium (In re Boganski), 322 B.R. 422 (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) (no actual damages for disclosure violation where payday borrower did not show that he would have rejected the payday loan if he had been advised of the actual APR); Egipciaco-Ruiz v. R&G Mortgage Corp, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40857 (D. P.R. Sept. 21, 2005) (actual damages for TILA disclosure violations available when consumer can show that, "had he been properly informed, he would have engaged in different or less-expensive transaction"; awarded damages for lost work in association with the litigation). Cf. Ephraim v. Ehomecredit Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13916 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 13, 2006) (detrimental reliance standard satisfied with allegation that plaintiff suffered financial and other harm as direct and proximate result of creditor conduct).

(n10)Footnote 10. For full discussion of restitution scheme methods of calculating damages, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 8.5.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n11)Footnote 11. Another provision which sheds some light on what actual damages might be is the correction-of-error-defense. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(b). See Fabricant v. Sears, Roebuck, Clearinghouse No. 54,563 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2002) (if plaintiff proves she could have entered into a more favorable transaction if disclosures had been made, she can recover difference between what she paid and what she would have paid; if she proves that she would not have entered into transaction at all, remedy is to restore her to original position). See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 8.5.5.3 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.). But see Perrone v. GMAC, 232 F.3d 433 (5th Cir. 2000) (rejecting correction of error as analogy), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 971, 121 S. Ct. 1601, 149 L. Ed. 2d 468 (2001) ; Mayberry v. Ememessay, Inc., 201 F. Supp. 2d 687 (W.D. Va. 2002) (damages denied where consumer had no intent or desire to shop for better terms); Tripp v. Charlie Falk Auto, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14096 (E.D. Va. Aug. 22, 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 12. But see Strange v. Mongram Credit Card Bank, 129 F.3d 943 (7th Cir. 1997) (applying clause in statute setting $100 floor and $1000 in leasing cases to statutory damages in other actions).

(n13)Footnote 13. The Truth in Lending Act Amendments of 1995, Pub. L. No. 104-29, § 6 (Sept. 30, 1995), amending 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A).

(n14)Footnote 14. Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 2502(b), 122 Stat. 2654, 2857 (2008) (codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A)(ii)).

(n15)Footnote 15. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A) and (3).

(n16)Footnote 16. Koons Buick Pontiac GMC, Inc. v. Nigh, 543 U.S. 50 ; 125 S. Ct. 460 ; 160 L. Ed. 2d 389 (2004) , reversing, 319 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2003) (holding that the 1995 amendments eliminated the $1000 cap on statutory damages for non-mortgage, non-lease transactions subject to clause (i)). A case from the Seventh Circuit provided a view in dicta similar to that of the Supreme Court. Strange v. Monogram Credit Card Bank, 129 F.3d 943 (7th Cir. 1997) . Reaching the issue only because it was "a matter of considerable commercial interest," Strange, 129 F.3d at 947 . The court concluded that the $100 floor and $1000 ceiling survived the 1995 amendments. The court noted that neither clause (i) nor (ii) was changed and that, prior to the 1995 amendments, the $1000 cap in the final clause had been understood as limiting both clauses (i) (non-leasing cases) and (ii) (leasing cases). The court concluded that the 1995 amendment "was designed simply to establish a more generous minimum and maximum for certain secured transactions, without changing the general rule on minimum and maximum damage awards for the other two parts of § 1640(a)(2)(A)." Id., 129 F.3d at 947 .

(n17)Footnote 16.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A)(iii) (effective Feb. 22, 2010), added by Pub. L. No. 111-24, § 107, 123 Stat. 1734, 1743 (May 22, 2009).

(n18)Footnote 17. Zamarippa v. Cy's Car Sales, Inc., 674 F.2d 877 (11th Cir. 1982) ; Smith v. Chapman, 614 F.2d 968 (5th Cir. 1980) ; Dzadovsky v. Lyons Ford Sales, Inc., 593 F.2d 538 (3d Cir. 1979) ; McGowan v. King, Inc., 569 F.2d 845 (5th Cir. 1978) ; In re Norris, 138 B.R. 467 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (TILA violation presumed to injure borrower by frustrating legislative purpose; debtor need not establish actual harm); Shepeard v. Quality Siding & Window Factory, Inc., 730 F. Supp. 1295, 1299 (D. Del. 1990) ; Warren v. Darnell, 517 N.E.2d 636 (Ill. App. Ct. 1987) ; Ralls v. Bank of New York (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Ralls v. Bank of New York (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Demando v. Morris, 206 F.3d 1300 (9th Cir. 2000) ; Pinkett v. Moolah Loan Co., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17276 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 1, 1999) ; Edwards v. Your Credit, Inc., 148 F.3d 427 (5th Cir. 1998) , amended, reh'g, en banc, denied, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 20916 (5th Cir. Aug. 17, 1998) ; Herrera v. First Northern Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 805 F.2d 896 (10th Cir. 1986) ; Mars v. Spartanburg Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 713 F.2d 65 (4th Cir. 1983) ; Huff v. Stewart-Gwinn Furniture, 713 F.2d 67 (4th Cir. 1983) (creditor liable for technical violation even though borrower suffered no damage or actual injury and was not misled as a result of the violations); Dryden v. Lou Budke's Arrow Fin. Co., 630 F.2d 641 (8th Cir. 1980) (creditor's abandonment of transaction and his refund of the consumer's money does not relieve liability; the consumer need not show any actual damages); Smith v. Chapman, 614 F.2d 968 (5th Cir. 1980) (an objective standard is to be used in determining TILA violations; the consumer need not be deceived for there to be a violation); Dzadovsky v. Lyons Ford Sales, Inc., 593 F.2d 538 (3d Cir. 1979) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Vollett v. Remy, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 5012 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 15, 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Former 15 U.S.C. § 1640(g), as amended by Pub. L. No. 94-240, § 407 (1974).

(n23)Footnote 22. See § 1.08 supra.

(n24)Footnote 23. See Ch. 2 infra.

(n25)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(g).

(n26)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(d). Herrera v. First Northern Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 805 F.2d 896 (10th Cir. 1986) (TIL Simplification applies to a pre-1980 transaction, so only one statutory damages recovery was awarded to several obligors). See Brown v. Marquette Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 686 F.2d 608 (7th Cir. 1982) .

(n27)Footnote 26. See McCullough v. Bank of Stamford, Inc., 14 Conn. L. Trib. 35 No. 44,553 (D. Conn. Feb. 10, 1988) (each obligor may recover separate actual damages).

(n28)Footnote 27. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1631-1647. The exceptions are for some specific open-end disclosures required by 15 U.S.C. § 1637, and some of the closed-end disclosure requirements of 15 U.S.C. § 1638.

(n29)Footnote 28. See Ch. 3 infra.

(n30)Footnote 29. "Accuracy" has taken on a new, somewhat Orwellian meaning, in light of the increased level of tolerance and other immunity given certain mortgage lenders in the 1995 amendments. These amendments limit liability both retroactively and prospectively. See generally §§ 1.08[3][b], 1.09[2][h] supra .

(n31)Footnote 30. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(2). See § 1.05[2][e][i] supra. Cannon v. Cherry Hill Toyota, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 362 (D.N.J. 2001) (statutory damages are available for misstatements in itemization of amount financed).

(n32)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(3). See § 1.05[2][e][ii] supra; Larson v. Lynch Ford, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9211 (N.D. Ill. June 29, 2001) (improper treatment of deferred downpayment threw off amount financed, so statutory damages available). See also § 1.04 supra.

(n33)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(4). See Ray v. City Motors, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22809 (S.D. W. Va. June 30, 1998) (awarding statutory damages for underdisclosure of APR); see § 1.05[2][e][iii] supra.

(n34)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(5). See § 1.05[2][e][v] supra.

(n35)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(6). See § 1.05[2][e][iv] supra.

(n36)Footnote 35. 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(9). Statutory damages are also recoverable if there is an inaccurate disclosure of the security interest. See Doubet v. USA Fin. Servs., Inc., 714 F. Supp. 980 (C.D. Ill. 1987) ; In re Perkins, 106 B.R. 863 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) ; Hill v. GFC Loan Co., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4345 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 15, 2000) . See generally § 1.05[2][e][vi] supra.

(n37)Footnote 35.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(f)(2).

(n38)Footnote 35.2. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(g); Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 404 (May 20, 2009). See Six Ways to Find Out Who Owns and Services the Mortgage, 27 NCLC REPORTS Bankruptcy and Foreclosures Ed. 27 (May/June 2009). See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 8.6.5.6A (2009 supp.).

(n39)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(a). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n40)Footnote 37. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(4). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n41)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(5). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n42)Footnote 39. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(6). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n43)Footnote 40. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(7). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n44)Footnote 41. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(8). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n45)Footnote 42. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(9). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n46)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(10). See § 1.07[4] supra.

(n47)Footnote 44. For detained discussion of violations giving rise to statutory damages, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.6 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n48)Footnote 45. Williams v. Chartwell Fin. Servs., 204 F.3d 748, 760 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n49)Footnote 46. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n50)Footnote 47. NCLC's Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide covers class case selection criteria, defining the class, drafting the complaint, class discovery, preliminary motions, class briefs, representing the named plaintiff at deposition, class notice, negotiations and settlement, stipulation of proposed settlement, the fairness hearing, administration of class notice, scrip settlements, distribution of benefits and cy pres provisions. National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide (6th ed. 2006).

(n51)Footnote 48. See Gammaro v. Thorp Consumer Disc. Co., 828 F. Supp. 673 (D. Minn. 1993) (after creditor insisted on arbitration, court refused to order arbitrator to decide TIL claims on behalf of the class, holding that in the absence of explicit authorization for class actions in the arbitration clause, it lacked authority to compel arbitration of class claims). But see Randolph v. Green Tree Fin. Corp., 178 F.3d 1149 (11th Cir. 1999) (arbitration clause will be enforceable only if it provides "an effective and easily accessible forum" for small TIL claims), cert. granted, 529 U.S. 1052, 120 S. Ct. 1552, 146 L. Ed. 2d 458 , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 531 U.S. 79, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2000) ; McCarthy v. Providential Corp., 122 F.3d 1242 (9th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 921, 119 S. Ct. 275, 142 L. Ed. 2d 227 (1998) (dismissing appeal from district court's order compelling arbitration but refusing to submit class claims to arbitration).

(n52)Footnote 49. See Arroyo v. Wagon Wheel Auto Sales, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 3612 (Aug. 11, 2000) (class certification denied where discovery not pursued to show how many consumers were given defendant's standard form).

(n53)Footnote 50. To certify a TIL class action, the court must find that the class is so numerous that joinder is impractical. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1). Numerosity is rarely in issue in TIL class litigation. A creditor may not defeat class certification by dividing the class into subclasses based on factors that are immaterial to the plaintiffs' claims. Yazzie v. Ray Vicker's Special Cars, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1230 (D.N.M. 1998) . See also Powell v. Advanta Nat'l Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14048 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 4, 2001) (court may make reasonable inference of numerosity). But see Roman v. First Franklin Fin. Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3968 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 2, 2001) (fact that lender makes a large number of loans is insufficient to show number that have this defect); Van Slee v. Don McCue Chevrolet Geo, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13956 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 4, 2001) (sampling of contracts insufficient to show numerosity without evidence about how many customers received rebate offer on which TIL claim was based).

(n54)Footnote 51. In TIL class actions, the TIL violation will usually involve an error common to the whole class and so this requirement is usually easily met. Johnson v. Aronson Furniture Co., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14454 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 1998) . But see Hickey v. Great W. Mortgage Corp., 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3357 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 17, 1995) (order decertifying class, in part, because question of whether third party charging fees was creditor's agent was a fact-intensive, individual question), summ. judgment granted, in part, summ. judgment denied, in part, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4495 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 4, 1995) . Murry v. America's Mortgage Banc, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11751 (N.D. Ill. May 5, 2005) (commonality satisfied where claim is related to standard formula used by defendants to determine title insurance charges); adopted in relevant part by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42900 (N.D. Ill. June 5, 2006) . (commonality satisfied where claim is related to standard formula used by defendants to determine title insurance charges). Mirfasihi v. Fleet Mortgage Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16701 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 11, 2005) (common question related to telemarketing information-sharing practice that allegedly violated TILA and FCRA), rev'd on other grounds, 450 F.3d 745 (7th Cir. 2006) ; but see Reiser v. Residential Funding Corp., 236 F.R.D. 425 (S.D. Ill. 2005) (finding plaintiffs failed to satisfy commonality requirement when defendants showed that settlement provider performed varying services to borrowers in association with closing and did not have a standardized practice).

(n55)Footnote 52. The named TIL class representative usually alleges that the creditor used a common practice affecting all class members; typicality should present no difficulty in such a case. See, e.g., Johnson v. Aronson Furniture Co., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14454 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 1998) ; Johnson v. Rohr-Ville Motors, Inc., 189 F.R.D. 363 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (typicality established where claims arise from same allegedly unlawful practice, course of conduct, and standardized form documents). But see Hickey v. Great W. Mortgage Corp., 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3357 (N.D. Ill.

Mar. 17, 1995) (class decertified, in part, because class definition overbroad and plaintiff's claim atypical for many class members; question at issue was purpose for which courier fees were charged), summ. judgment granted, in part, summ. judgment denied, in part, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4495 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 4, 1995) . See Weil v. Long Island Sav. Bank, FSB, 200 F.R.D. 164 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) (immaterial differences in named plaintiffs' claims do not make them atypical); Gilkey v. Central Clearing Co., 202 F.R.D. 515 (E.D. Mich. 2001) (atypical facts that are not related to central legal issues do not prevent class certification); Fabricant v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 202 F.R.D. 310 (S.D. Fla. 2001) (named plaintiff's claim can be typical even though she is eligible only for statutory damages while other class members may be eligible for actual damages). Murry v. America's Mortgage Banc, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11751 (N.D. Ill. May 5, 2005) (typicality satisfied where the issue is a standard disclosure regarding title insurance charges). Cf. McIntyre v. Household Bank, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25629 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 21, 2004) (claims and defenses regarding named plaintiff are substantially different from those of most class members and therefore the class fails the typicality requirement). In re Community Bank of N. Va., 418 F.3d 277 (3d Cir. 2005) (allegation of common scheme satisfies typicality, even when some plaintiffs may have additional state or federal law claims); Veal v. Crown Auto Dealerships, Inc., 236 F.R.D. 572 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (typicality satisfied because named plaintiff's claims share "same essential characteristics" with class members); McKenna v. First Horizon Home Loan Corp., 429 F. Supp. 2d 291 (D. Mass. 2006) (plaintiff's claim is typical because it is based on standard use of form); Mirfasihi v. Fleet Mortgage Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16701 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 11, 2005) (claim is typical because based on common practice that was standardized); rev'd on other grounds, 450 F.3d 745 (7th Cir. 2006) ; Porter v. Nationscredit Consumer Discount Co., 229 F.R.D. 497 (E.D. Pa. 2005) (claim by named plaintiff alleging misleading conversations prior to purchase of credit life insurance does not satisfy typicality because the claim is unique to her experience).

(n56)Footnote 53. This requirement is met where the class representative has no interests antagonistic to the other class members, has sufficient interest in the outcome of the litigation, and is represented by a qualified, experienced attorney. See, e.g., Greisz v. Household Bank, 176 F.3d 1012 (7th Cir. 1999) (court's view of attorney's proven lack of qualification defeats class certification).

(n57)Footnote 54. In the typical TIL class action, this requirement is met because the alleged TIL violation is the same for each consumer, making issues of law and fact the same for all class members. See Hoffman v. Grossinger Motor Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4172 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 25, 1999) (standard practice of inflating selling price to conceal hidden finance charge), summ. judgment granted, mot. dismissed, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19377 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 9, 1999) . A class action seeking primarily injunctive or declaratory relief need not meet this standard, even if some monetary relief is also sought. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2); Fielder v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 175 F.R.D. 313 (W.D. Mo. 1997) , mot. denied, partial summ. judgment denied, 10 F. Supp. 2d 1101 (W.D. Mo. 1998) , partial summ. judgment granted, in part, partial summ. judgment denied, in part, 19 F. Supp. 2d 966 (W.D. Mo. 1998) , vacated, remanded, mot. denied, 188 F.3d 1031 (8th Cir. 1999) ; Hamilton v. Ohio Sav. Bank, 82 Ohio St. 3d 67, 694 N.E.2d 442 (1998) . See Rivera v. Grossinger Autoplex, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13073 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 1, 2000) (misallocation of GAP insurance to amount financed is common issue), aff'd in part, 274 F.3d 1118 (7th Cir. 2001) ; Abel v. Keybank, 313 F. Supp. 2d 720 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 4, 2004) (certifying class seeking statutory damages for TILA violations in connection with form contracts for student loans). Commonality can be established where the creditor followed a standard procedure that violated TILA, such as failing to give copies of the disclosure statement to the consumer until after consummation. Lozada v. Dale Baker Oldsmobile, Inc., 197 F.R.D. 321 (W.D. Mich. 2000) .

(n58)Footnote 55. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A).

(n59)Footnote 56. See, e.g., Goldman v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 532 F.2d 10 (7th Cir. 1976) ; Chevalier v. Baird Sav. Ass'n, 72 F.R.D. 140 (E.D. Pa. 1976) .

(n60)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n61)Footnote 58. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(1). See § 1.10[2] supra for a discussion of actual damages.

(n62)Footnote 59. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(B).

(n63)Footnote 60. Bolin v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 231 F.3d 970 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n64)Footnote 61. See § 1.10[3] supra.

(n65)Footnote 62. See § 1.10[3] supra.

(n66)Footnote 63. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(B). For a more extensive discussion of class action issues in TIL cases, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.8 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.). For an analysis of class actions generally, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide (6th ed. 2006).

(n67)Footnote 64. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3). See, e.g., Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1986) (attorney fees must be awarded in a successful TIL rescission action; $135/hour was reasonable and reflected prevailing rates in similar TIL litigation); In re Mattera, 144 B.R. 687 (E.D. Pa. 1992) ; First Union Nat'l Bank of Ga. v. Big John's Auto Sales, Inc., 203 Ga. App. 797, 417 S.E.2d 416 (1992) (amount of attorney fees is to be determined by the court).

(n68)Footnote 65. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n69)Footnote 66. See, e.g., Postow v. OBA Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 627 F.2d 1370 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ; McGowan v. Credit Ctr. of N. Jackson, Inc., 546 F.2d 73 (5th Cir. 1977) ; Greene v. Gibraltar Mortgage Inv. Co., 529 F. Supp. 186 (D.D.C. 1981) ; see also City of Riverside v. Rivera, 477 U.S. 561, 106 S. Ct. 2686, 91 L. Ed. 2d 466 (1986) ; Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Love v. Deal, 5 F.3d 1406 (11th Cir. 1993) ; Jones v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc. Co., 93 B.R. 66 (E.D. Pa. 1988) ; Kramer v. Marine Midland Bank, 577 F. Supp. 999 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) ; Payton v. New Century Mortgage Corp., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3876 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2004) (although plaintiff did not recover for TILA statutory damages claim, plaintiff did obtain rescission and therefore court granted fees for work on both claims); Johnson v. Thomas, 794 N.E.2d 919 (Ill. App. 2003) (no reduction in fees and costs where appellate court reduced number of TILA violations from three to two). Mourer v. Equicredit Corp. of America, 313 B.R. 701 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2004) (consumers succeeded where they prevailed on one claim out of four). But cf. Scott v. Forest Lake Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge, 668 N.W.2d 45 (Minn. App. 2003) (upholding trial court's division of fees request by seven, where consumer prevailed on only one of seven state law claims against automobile dealership; court did not analyze whether claims were related). Dykstra v. Wayland Ford, Inc.,134 Fed. Appx. 911 (6th Cir. 2005) (where creditor violated TILA but violation did not trigger statutory damages under § 1640, attorney fees are not available; court declined to apply language allowing for fees for "foregoing liability" to include violations broader than those that trigger an award).

(n70)Footnote 67. Kissinger v. Board of Trustees, 5 F.3d 177 (3d Cir. 1993) ; Sablan v. Department of Fin., 856 F.2d 1317 (9th Cir. 1988) ; Gram v. Bank of La., 691 F.2d 728 (5th Cir. 1982) ; James v. Home Constr. Co., 689 F.2d 1357 (11th Cir. 1982) ; Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ; Knighton v. Watkins, 616 F.2d 795 (5th Cir. 1980) ; In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) (approval of $6 million TILA and RICO class settlement, plus almost $1 million in attorney fees and expenses); In re Szostek, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8021 (E.D. Pa. July 6, 1989) ; Freeman v. B & B Assocs., 595 F. Supp. 1338 (D.D.C. 1984) , rev'd on other grounds, 790 F.2d 145 (D.D.C. 1986) ; In re Mattera, 128 B.R. 107 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) , aff'd, 144 B.R. 687 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (though settlement precluded a ruling on the merits, court assessed probable merits of various claims in allocating hours for fee computation); see also Maher v. Gagne, 448 U.S. 122, 100 S. Ct. 2570, 65 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1980) (Civil Rights Act case). Short v. Wells Fargo Bank Minn., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37988 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2006) (at the time of settlement only one of plaintiff's eight claims had been dismissed; plaintiff therefore prevailed to some extent on all of the remaining claims through her monetary settlement); Williams v. Viking Dodge, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27469 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2006) (offer of judgment settling for modest amount still results in a final judgment for the plaintiff and therefore plaintiff prevailed).

(n71)Footnote 68. Freeman v. B & B Assocs., 595 F. Supp. 1338 (D.D.C. 1984) , rev'd on other grounds, 790 F.2d 145 (D.D.C. 1986) ; Poussard v. Commercial Credit Plan, 479 A.2d 881 (Me. 1984) .

(n72)Footnote 69. Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. West Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001) .

(n73)Footnote 70. 532 U.S. at 605, 121 S. Ct. at 1840, 149 L. Ed. 2d at 863 .

(n74)Footnote 71. Id. at n.7.

(n75)Footnote 72. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a); see also Freeman v. B & B Assocs., 790 F.2d 145 (D.C. Cir. 1986) ; Smith v. South Side Loan Co., 567 F.2d 306 (5th Cir. 1978) ; cf. Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 730 n.19, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 1539 n.19, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747, 759 n.19 (1986) . Mourer v. Equicredit Corp. of America, 313 B.R. 701 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2004) (consumers succeeded where they prevailed on one claim out of four). But see James v. Home Constr. Co., 689 F.2d 1357 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n76)Footnote 73. See Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Ehlert v. Ward, 588 S.W.2d 500 (Mo. 1979) .

(n77)Footnote 74. Semar v. Platte Valley Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 791 F.2d 699, 703 n.10 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n78)Footnote 75. Strange v. Monogram Credit Card Bank of Ga., 129 F.3d 943 (7th Cir. 1997) ; Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985) ; In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983) ; Reneau v. Mossy Motors, 622 F.2d 192 (5th Cir. 1980) ; Johnson v. Johnson Chevrolet, Inc., 633 F.2d 716 (5th Cir. 1980) ; Price v. Franklin Inv. Co., 574 F.2d 594 (D.C. Cir. 1978) ; Freeman v. B & B Assocs., 595 F. Supp. 1338 (D.D.C. 1984) , rev'd on other grounds, 790 F.2d 145 (D.C. Cir. 1986) ; Redic v. Gary H. Watts Realty Co., 586 F. Supp. 699 (W.D.N.C. 1984) , rev'd on other grounds, 762 F.2d 1181 (4th Cir. 1985) ; Allright Mortgage Co. v. Hill, 213 B.R. 943 (D. Md. 1997) (reversing bankruptcy court's use of "cost-benefit" analysis to reduce fee award); see also City of Riverside v. Rivera, 477 U.S. 561, 106 S. Ct. 2686, 91 L. Ed. 2d 466 (1986) ; Krosscent Trust III v. EMC Mortgage Corp., 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 10015 (Cal. App. Oct. 24, 2003) (remanding to the district court to redetermine attorneys fees in TILA case where the district court grossly reduced the attorneys fees request by evaluating the fee petition only on the basis of the amount in controversy. The court specifically noted that fees for a claim resolved before trial should not be reduced simply because trial was not needed and that the court should consider fees associated with the "full effort legitimately expended in obtaining a favorable result"). But see Mirabal v. GMAC, 576 F.2d 729 (7th Cir. 1978) .

(n79)Footnote 76. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989) ; see also Yohay v. City of Alexandria Employees Credit Union, Inc., 827 F.2d 967 (4th Cir. 1987) ; Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) (district courts must compare TIL attorney's work to rates earned by attorneys in similarly complicated federal litigation, and not merely by reference to TIL cases; artificially low hourly rates for TIL claims will not be tolerated); In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n80)Footnote 77. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Strange v. Monogram Credit Card Bank of Ga., 129 F.3d 943 (7th Cir. 1997) ; Mares v. Credit Bureau of Raton, 801 F.2d 1197 (10th Cir. 1986) ; Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) ; Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp. (Lindy II), 540 F.2d 102 (3d Cir. 1976) ; Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974) ; Warren v. Darnell, 164 Ill. App. 3d 273, 517 N.E.2d 636 (1987) .

(n81)Footnote 78. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Reneau v. Mossy Motors, 622 F.2d 192 (5th Cir. 1980) (mere statement that "all the factors" were weighed is not enough); McGowan v. King, Inc., 616 F.2d 745 (5th Cir. 1980) . See also guidelines for attorney fees in Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens Council of Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 106 S.

Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) ; Ex parte Edwards (Edwards v. Alabama Farm Bureau Mut. Cas. Ins. Co.), 591 So. 2d 491 (Ala. 1990) (failure of trial court to articulate its reasons for reducing legal services attorneys' requested fees of $75,301.56 to $9,00.00 requires reversal and remand for adequate determination), later proceeding, 601 So. 2d 82 (Ala. 1992) ; GMAC Mortgage Corp. v. Larson, 232 Ill. App. 3d 697, 597 N.E.2d 1245 (1992) (fee set as a percentage of benefit to the borrowers found improper); Mt. Vernon Mem'l Estates, Inc. v. Wood, 88 Ill. App. 3d 666, 410 N.E.2d 995 (1980) . See also Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 33 Fed. Appx. 23, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 6061 (3d Cir. 2002) (unpublished, citation limited) (remanding TIL fee award for trial court to articulate in greater detail its rationale for granting full request).

(n82)Footnote 79. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) (civil rights case, but Court stated that the standards "are generally applicable in all cases in which Congress has authorized an award of attorney's fees to a 'prevailing party' "); see also Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) . Brannon v. Bridge Capital Corp., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41949 (M.D. Ala. May 27, 2008) (TILA case where court awarded lodestar amount without adjustment).

(n83)Footnote 80. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n84)Footnote 81. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) . See Bostic v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 87 F. Supp. 2d 611 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (15% reduction because of inadequate documentation in TIL case); Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 55 Va. Cir. 499 (2000) (hours were excessive, but court takes into account fact that issues were complex and attorney did good job). Arch v. Nissan, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12198 (N.D. Ill. June 7, 2005) (TIL case) (eleven hours to research and prepare complaint alleging several federal and state claims, including TILA theory of first impression, is not excessive; however, time spent by experienced attorneys on duplicative or administrative tasks disallowed); Harris v. River View Ford, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25867 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 19, 2001) (TIL case) (allowing time for class action allegations that were not certified but reducing time for status conferences from 3.3 hours to 1.4 hours each, and reducing by half the hours billed for drafting amended complaints to 2.25 hours per complaint). See also Williams v. Viking Dodge, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27469 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2006) (cutting by half the one hour of paralegal time charged for printing, formatting, and serving forms; disallowing an undocumented $40 internet search fee); Rockwell v. Talbott, Adams & Moore, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10170 (D. Neb. Feb. 21, 2006) (awarding just over $5000 when attorney sought over $30,000 in light of excessive time spent on preparation of a simple case, overstaffing of the case and failure to delegate work from attorney to paralegals and other assistants); Turner v. Beneficial Nat'l Bank, 405 F. Supp. 2d 929 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (reducing fee in case--for representing individual class representative who then opted out of class action settlement--from lodestar amount of over $185,000 to $16,525, when requested amount was thirty-seven times greater than individual plaintiff's recovery, more than 6800 times her actual loss of $27, and much of the requested time was for class action work, not work on behalf of only this individual).

(n85)Footnote 82. See Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 483 U.S. 711, 107 S. Ct. 3078, 97 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1987) (Delaware Valley II) (O'Connor, J., concurring). See also Payne v. Equicredit Corp. of Am., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8919 (E.D. Pa. May 20, 2002) (adjusting fee downward where consumer prevailed only on TIL claims, and only against one defendant). Short v. Wells Fargo Bank Minn., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37988 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2006) (plaintiff's claims arose out of a common core of facts; court did not separate work by claim, although one of plaintiff's eight claims had been dismissed); Chavarria v. Fleetwood Retail Corp. of New Mexico, 115 P.3d 799 (N.M. Ct. App. 2005) (allowing fees for work on non-fee-generating claims when they had common legal elements with fee-generating claims), review granted, 115 P.3d 2130 (N.M. 2005) .

(n86)Footnote 83. Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989) ; Postow v. Oriental Bldg. Ass'n, 455 F. Supp. 781 (D.D.C. 1978) , aff'd sub nom. Postow v. OBA Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 627 F.2d 1370 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ; Frazier v. Franklin Inv. Co., 468 A.2d 1338 (D.C. 1983) ; Merchandise Nat'l Bank v. Scanlon, 86 Ill. App. 3d 719, 408 N.E.2d 248 (1980) ; see also City Consumer Servs., Inc. v. Horne, 631 F. Supp. 1050 (D. Utah 1986) . Cf. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989) (reserving for another day issue of fees for legal assistants).

(n87)Footnote 84. Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989) . This means that such services should be compensated at the normal billing rate charged to clients, and not the worker's hourly wage or her cost to the employer, provided that these kinds of expenses are normally billed to clients. Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n88)Footnote 85. Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992) ; In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983) ; In re Mattera, 128 B.R. 107 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) (travel time allowed but deduction made); DeCarlo v. Perales, 963 F. Supp. 181, 185 (N.D.N.Y. 1997) (travel time awarded at reduced rates). Arch v. Nissan, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12198 (N.D. Ill. June 7, 2005) (travel time allowed because it reflects lost opportunity, whether the attorney works on contingency or hourly-rate basis).

(n89)Footnote 86. See generally City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 2640, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992) ; Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Envtl. Def. Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254 (D.C. Cir. 1994) .

(n90)Footnote 87. District of Columbia Circuit: Environmental Defense Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (Resource Conservation and Recovery Act); McKenzie v. Kennickell, 875 F.2d 330 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (Civil Rights Act of 1964); Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Civil Rights Act of 1964); see also Etta v. Seaboard Enters., Inc., 674 F.2d 913 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (TILA); Greene v. Gibraltar Mortgage Inv. Co., 529 F. Supp. 186 (D.D.C. 1981) (TILA).

First Circuit: Coutin v. Young & Rubicam Puerto Rico, Inc., 124 F.3d 331 (1st Cir. 1997) (§ 1988 case); Brewster v. Dukakis, 3 F.3d 488 (1st Cir. 1993) ; Phetosomphone v. Allison Reed Group Inc, 984 F.2d 4 (1st Cir. 1993) (Title VII): DeJesus v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 951 F.2d 3 (1st Cir. 1991) (TILA); Segal v. Gilbert Color Sys., Inc., 746 F.2d 78 (1st Cir. 1984) (20 U.S.C. § 1875 case).

Second Circuit: LeBlanc-Sternberg v. Fletcher, 143 F.3d 765 (2d Cir. 1998) (§ 1988 case); Mautner v. Hirsch, 32 F.3d 37 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Lunday v. City of Albany, 42 F.3d 131 (2d Cir. 1994) (20 U.S.C. § 1988); City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp. (Grinnell II), 560 F.2d 1093 (2d Cir. 1977) (private antitrust case); City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp. (Grinnell I), 495 F.2d 448, 1974-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74986 (2d Cir. 1974) (private antitrust case); Seabrook v. Postal Fin. Servs., 527 F. Supp. 1006 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) (TILA).

Third Circuit: Washington v. Philadelphia County Court of Common Pleas, 89 F.3d 1031 (3d Cir. 1996) (civil rights); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp. (Lindy II), 540 F.2d 102, 117 (3d Cir. 1976) (antitrust case); Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp. (Lindy I), 487 F.2d 161 (3d Cir. 1973) (antitrust case); Johnson v. Second Nat'l Fund Corp., 515 F. Supp. 1380 (E.D. Pa. 1981) (TILA).

Fourth Circuit: Diamond Star Bldg. Corp. v. Sunset Builders Inc., 30 F.3d 503 (4th Cir. 1994) (copyright infringement suit); Run Creek Coal Sales v. Caperton, 31 F.3d 169 (4th Cir. 1994) (§ 1988); Hyatt v. Shalala, 6 F.3d 250 (4th Cir. 1993) (EAJA); Barber v. Kimbrell's, Inc., 577 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1978) ; Vaughns v. Board of Educ. of Prince George's County, 598 F. Supp. 1262 (D. Md. 1984) .

Fifth Circuit: Walker v. United States HUD, 99 F.3d 761 (5th Cir. 1996) (§ 1988 case), cert. denied, mot. granted sub nom., Walker v. City of Mesquite, 528 U.S. 1131, 120 S. Ct. 969, 145 L. Ed. 2d 840 (2000) ; Watkins v. Fordice, 7 F.3d 453 (5th Cir. 1993) ; Powell v. C.I.R., 891 F.2d 1167 (5th Cir. 1990) (26 U.S.C. § 7430(c)(2)(A)(i)); Wheeler v. Mental Health & Mental Retardation Auth., 752 F.2d 1063, 1073 (5th Cir. 1985) ; Harris v. Tower Loan of Miss., Inc., 609 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1980) (TILA); McGowan v. King, Inc, 616 F.2d 745 (5th Cir. 1980) (TIL).

Sixth Circuit: Wooldridge v. Marlene Indus., 898 F.2d 1169 (6th Cir. 1990) ; Coulter v. Tennessee, 805 F.2d 146 (6th Cir. 1986) ; Louisville Black Police Officers v. City of Louisville, 700 F.2d 268 (6th Cir. 1983) (§ 1988 case); Northcross v. Board of Educ. of Memphis City Schs., 611 F.2d 624 (6th Cir. 1979) , cert. denied, 447 U.S. 911 (1980) (§ 1988 case).

Seventh Circuit: Jaffee v. Redmond, 142 F.3d 409 (7th Cir. 1998) (§ 1988 case); People Who Care v. Rockford Bd. of Educ., 90 F.3d 1307 (7th Cir. 1996) (§ 1988 case), reh'g, en banc, denied, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 26453 (7th Cir. Oct. 8, 1996) ; Smith v. Village of Maywood, 17 F.3d 219 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Skelton v. General Motors Corp., 860 F.2d 250 (7th Cir. 1988) (Federal Magnuson Moss Act); Lynch v. City of Milwaukee, 747 F.2d 423 (7th Cir. 1984) (§ 1988 case); Henry v. Webermeier, 738 F.2d 188 (7th Cir. 1984) (§ 1988 case); In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936, 938 (7th Cir. 1983) (TILA).

Eight Circuit: Missouri v. Jenkins, 838 F.2d 260 (8th Cir.) , aff'd, 491 U.S. 274, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989) ; Loggins v. Delo, 999 F.2d 364 (8th Cir. 1993) (§ 1988); Murphy v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 629 F.2d 556, 561 (8th Cir. 1980) (TILA); Brown v. Bathke, 588 F.2d 634 (8th Cir. 1978) (§ 1988 case); Dougherty v. Hoolihan, Neils, & Boland, Ltd., 531 F. Supp. 717 (D. Minn. 1982) .

Ninth Circuit: Morales v. City of San Rafael, 96 F.3d 359 (9th Cir. 1996) (§ 1988 case), amended, reh'g, en banc, denied, 108 F.3d 981 (9th Cir. 1997) ; Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536 (9th Cir. 1992) ; Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392 (9th Cir. 1992) ; Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985) (TILA); Boncyk v. Cavanaugh Motors, 673 F.2d 256 (9th Cir. 1981) (TILA); Kessler v. Associates Fin. Servs. Co., 639 F.2d 498 (9th Cir. 1981) (TILA); Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, 526 F.2d 67 (9th Cir. 1975) , cert. denied, 425 U.S. 951 (1976) (a Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 case); In re Jansen, 47 B.R. 641 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1985) .

Tenth Circuit: Phelps v. Hamilton, 120 F.3d 1126 (10th Cir. 1997) (§ 1988 case); Joseph A. v. New Mexico Dep't of Human Servs., 28 F.3d 1056 (10th Cir. 1994) ; Homeward Bound v. Hissom Memorial Ctr., 963 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1992) (Rehabilitation Act).

Eleventh Circuit: Love v. Deal, 5 F.3d 1406 (11th Cir. 1993) (Voting Rights Act); Church of Scientology v. City of Clearwater, 2 F.3d 1509 (11th Cir. 1993) ; Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) (TILA).

See also Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992) ; City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992) ; Texas State Teachers Ass'n v. Garland Indep. Sch. Dist., 489 U.S. 782 (1989) ; Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 483 U.S. 711 (1987) (Delaware Valley II).

(n91)Footnote 88. City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992) ; see also Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) ; Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ; Ex parte Edwards, 601 So. 2d 82 (Ala. 1992) (creditor's claim that 490 hours were unreasonable was not supported by specific challenge to excessive, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary hours; court concluded the time was reasonable); Payne v. Equicredit Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8919 (E.D. Pa. May 20, 2002) (approving $300/hour for highly experienced attorney). Mourer v. Equicredit Corp. of America, 313 B.R. 701 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2004) (TILA case); Harris v. River View Ford, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25867 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 19, 2001) (TILA case) (fee award not reduced although plaintiff recovered less than full monetary amount sought; court noted that the goal of fees in a TILA case is to enable plaintiffs to bring cases despite limited damages). But cf. Fogle v. William Chevrolet/Geo, Inc., 275 F.3d 613 (7th Cir. 2001) (affirming trial court's reduction of hourly rate from $310 to $185).

(n92)Footnote 89. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n93)Footnote 90. Hamm v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 549 F. Supp. 2d 1018 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (discounting most of requested reimbursement for costs where plaintiff did not justify substantial costs incurred for transcript fees, filing fees, and computer legal research; court also failed to grant reimbursement for duplicative transactions involving both postage and fax expenses).

(n94)Footnote 91. Price v. Franklin Inv. Co., 574 F.2d 594 (D.C. Cir. 1978) . The merits judgment and the attorney fee are separate appealable orders. Herbert v. Federal Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n, 102 B.R. 407 (E.D. Pa 1989) (citing White v. Department of Employment Security, 455 U.S. 445, 452-53 n.14, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 1167 n.14, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325, 331-32 n.14 (1982)) .

(n95)Footnote 92. E.g., Barber v. Kimbrell's, Inc., 577 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1978) ; Mosley v. Nat'l Fin. Co., 440 F. Supp. 621 (M.D.N.C. 1977) ; Warren v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., [1969-1973 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 98,968 (N.D. Ga. 1973); In re McCormick, 61 B.R. 595 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1986) (bankruptcy debtors have right to trial by jury on complaint for TIL violations). See also Good Housekeeping Shop v. Hines, 247 S.E.2d 142 (Ga. Ct. App. 1978) (determination of TILA attorney fees is question for court, not jury).

(n96)Footnote 93. See Barber v. Kimbrell's, Inc., 577 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1978) (TILA and its legislative history are inconclusive on jury trial issue). But cf. Good Housekeeping Shop v. Hines, 247 S.E.2d 142 (Ga. Ct. App. 1978) (TILA expressly provides that court should decide what attorney fees are reasonable).

(n97)Footnote 94. 577 F.2d 216 (4th Cir. 1978) . The liability sections of TILA have been amended since this decision, but in ways immaterial to its rationale.

(n98)Footnote 95. See also Kobs v. Arrow Serv. Bureau, 134 F.3d 893 (7th Cir. 1998) (citing Barber with approval in concluding that FDCPA statutory damages should be decided by jury); Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 440 F. Supp. 621 (M.D.N.C. 1977) (right to jury trial under TILA); In re McCormick, 61 B.R. 595 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1986) (right to jury trial for TILA action seeking damages and rescission even in bankruptcy court). But see Warren v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., [1969-1973 Transfer Binder] Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 98,968 (N.D. Ga. 1973) (no right to jury trial in TILA action); Duren v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 15469 (D.C. Cir. June 7, 2000) (no right to jury trial on TIL rescission claim since it is an equitable claim). But cf. Bank of New Haven v. Liner, 1993 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2939 (Conn. Super. Ct. Nov. 9, 1993) (since foreclosure is an equitable action, no right to jury trial on defenses, including TILA).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual 2.syn

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Chapter 2: High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

§ 2.01 Introduction

§ 2.02 Coverage of the Act

[1] The Annual Percentage Rate Trigger

[2] APR Calculations in Foreclosure Rescue Scams

[3] The Points and Fees Trigger

[4] Points and Fee Trigger Calculations in Foreclosure Rescue Scams

[5] Expanded Definition of Creditor

§ 2.03 Disclosure Requirements

§ 2.04 Substantive Regulations and Remedies

[1] Limitations on Prepayment Penalties

[2] Prohibition of Interest Rate Increases on Default

[3] Limitation on Balloon Payments

[4] Prohibition of Negative Amortization

[5] Limitations on Due-on-Demand Clauses

[6] Limitation on Prepaid Payments

[7] Extending Credit Without Regard to Ability to Pay

[8] Payments to Home Improvement Contractors

[9] FRB's Power to Prohibit Unfair Trade Practices

§ 2.05 Remedies

§ 2.06 Additional Provisions: Extension of Assignee Liability

§ 2.07 "Higher-Priced" Mortgage Loans: Prohibited Acts or Practices

[1] Introduction

[2] The Annual Percentage Rate Trigger

[3] Prohibited Acts or Practices

[4] Remedies

§ 2.08 Loans Secured by the Consumer's Principal Dwelling: Prohibited Acts or Practices

[1] Introduction

[2] Coercion of Appraisers

[3] Servicing Practices

[4] Remedies

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.01

§ 2.01 Introduction

In 1994 Congress passed high rate home equity loan protections designed to prevent some predatory lending practices targeted at vulnerable consumers. n1 The Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act ("HOEPA") created a special class of regulated closed-end loans made at high annual percentage rates or with excessive costs and fees. HOEPA is an amendment to the Truth in Lending Act ("TILA"). n2

It is to be hoped that the legislation will reverse the trend of the past decade which has made predatory home equity lending a growth industry. It tells legitimate lenders that there are limits--not quite "anything goes," even in a period of deregulatory fervor--and it provides consumers who are victimized by unethical lenders with an additional avenue for relief. However, it is not expected that these amendments to the TILA will cure the problem of abusive home equity lending entirely. The law continues to allow high rate home equity loans to be made, albeit with fewer terms designed to hide the true disadvantages and risks of such loans. Additionally, it does nothing to regulate abusive terms in transactions defined outside the class of protected loans.

These weaknesses underscore the importance of considering other causes of action in addition to the high rate home equity loan protections. In fact, the legislative history makes clear that the new law does not preempt more protective alternative laws n3 and does not preclude attacks on loans which are not covered by the bill. n4 Other provisions of the TILA, especially including rescission, as discussed elsewhere in this volume, will continue to be of primary importance in attacking abusive loans. In addition, state unfair trade practice law, n5 warranty law, n6 usury, n7 unconscionability, n8 fraud and old-fashioned contract law create remedies which an advocate can use to challenge predatory mortgages.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection Act

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994 [hereinafter HOEPA], Subtitle B of Title I of the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act, Pub. L. No. 103-325 (1994), codified at § 129 (15 U.S.C. § 1639) and in §§ 31 and 32 of Regulation Z. Official Staff Commentary which fleshes out relevant provisions of Regulation Z has been published at 61 Fed. Reg. 14,952 (April 4, 1996), 62 Fed. Reg. 10,193 (March 6, 1997) , and 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669 (April 6, 1998). In December 2001, the Federal Reserve Board amended the HOEPA regulations and commentary. 66 Fed. Reg. 65,604 (Dec. 20, 2001). In doing so, it lowered the annual percentage rate trigger and tightened the points and fees trigger.

(n2)Footnote 2. Foster v. Equicredit Corp., No. 99-6393, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1881 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 25, 2001) (HOEPA amends the Truth in Lending Act [hereinafter TILA] and is governed by the same statute of limitations); Harris v. EMC Mortgage Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12251 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 10, 2002) (same).

(n3)Footnote 3. See H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-652, at 147, 162 (1994) (accompanying H.R. 3474). For further discussion of legislative history, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 9.1.2 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.).

(n4)Footnote 4. H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-652, at 147, 159 (1994) (accompanying H.R. 3474).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ch. 4 infra.

(n6)Footnote 6. National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law (3d ed. 2006 and supp.).

(n7)Footnote 7. See generally Ch. 6 infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally § 6.09 infra.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.02

§ 2.02 Coverage of the Act

There are two triggers for the special protections of the law. These triggers are found in the Truth in Lending ("TIL") definition section at 15 U.S.C. section 1602(aa). The first of the two triggers is based on the annual percentage rate ("APR") for the loan. The other is based on the total amount of points and fees charged. These triggers are discussed below.

In addition to the trigger requirements, all covered loans must be "consumer credit" transactions and must be secured by the consumer's principal dwelling. n1

Certain transactions are exempt from the high rate protections. As in the case of the rescission provision of TILA, "residential mortgage transactions" are exempted. n2 That term is generally defined by TILA to include purchase money security interests used to finance the acquisition or initial construction of the consumer's dwelling. n3 Consequently, all refinancing and other home equity loans are covered, but purchase and construction loans are generally not. n4

As with rescission, loan products deliberately designed to evade the terms of the Act should be covered. n5 However, the law contains an explicit exemption for reverse mortgages n6 and for open-end credit. n7

It is anticipated that some creditors will seek to evade the high rate home equity loan protections discussed in this chapter by structuring abusive loans as open-end credit. n8 When that occurs, the transaction should be carefully examined to make sure that it meets the definition in the statute and the regulations. The definition of open-end credit is contained in 15 U.S.C. section 1602(i) and is amplified by Regulation Z section 226.2(a)(20). n9 The Board took action to curb attempts to circumvent HOEPA by structuring home loans as open-end lines of credit when it revised Regulation Z in December 2001. After October 1, 2002, the new rule prohibits creditors from attempting to evade HOEPA in this fashion. n10 The Commentary discusses the factors to consider in determining the "amount financed" for purposes of applying the points and fees trigger. n11 Whenever coverage is in question, practitioners should submit to the court their own calculations of the triggers giving rise to coverage. n11.1

[1] The Annual Percentage Rate Trigger

The first category of covered loans under the Act is loans for which the APR at the time of consummation exceeds by more than ten percentage points the yield on treasury securities having comparable maturities at the time the loan is made. n12 The relevant date for selecting the comparable treasury bond rates will be the fifteenth day of the month immediately preceding the month in which the application for an extension of credit is received by the creditor. n13 Treasury bond rates do fluctuate over time. Since coverage is determined as of the date of consummation, a loan will not be included if rates increase subsequently.

The necessary yields to determine whether a particular loan is covered are published in a variety of places. n14 For the purpose of evidence in litigated cases, the Federal Reserve publications or the Wall Street Journal's published records should suffice.

All of the applicable requirements for calculating the annual percentage rate will apply. n15 It will be the accurate rate which controls, so the APR must be evaluated for errors. Where an error is found, for example, because the creditor has misallocated a component of the finance charge to the amount financed, the correct rate should be calculated and coverage should be evaluated based on that number.

For adjustable rate loans, coverage will be determined by evaluating the APR on the date of consummation. If a teaser rate is involved, the properly calculated composite APR is the relevant one. n16

[2] APR Calculations in Foreclosure Rescue Scams

The phrase "foreclosure rescue scam" describes various types of schemes targeted at homeowners already facing foreclosure and in financial distress. n17 One of the more common and insidious versions occurs when homeowners deed their property to the "rescuers" or third parties either unknowingly or believing that they are saving their home. These transactions take the form of sale/leaseback contracts or complicated trust arrangements. Rarely are any of these transactions structured as a loan. However, the courts will assess these scams under the prism of the equitable mortgage doctrine. n18 Once the court finds the transaction to be, in reality, an equitable mortgage, the next issue is whether the "rescuer" qualifies as a creditor for TILA and HOEPA purposes.

To determine whether a foreclosure rescue transaction meets the HOEPA APR trigger, one can consider the terms of the repurchase portion of the transaction alone or the unified impact of the sale and the repurchase. When the homeowner's repurchase price is higher than the sale price, the lost equity is arguably a finance charge that should be considered in the calculation. Foreclosure rescue scams are structured in a variety of ways, however, so other ways of determining the APR may be appropriate for a particular case.

Assume that the homeowner's regular monthly mortgage payment was $733.76 per month (this would be the monthly payment on a $100,000 thirty-year mortgage at 8%). Assume also that the homeowner was $10,000 in arrears on mortgage payments and $2000 in arrears on property taxes but had $40,000 in equity in the property. A typical rescuer might pay the combined $12,000 arrearage in exchange for a quit claim deed on the property and allow the homeowner to "rent" the property for $1233.76 per month (the $733.76 regular mortgage payment plus $500 toward the $12,000 arrearage) for twenty-four months, followed by a balloon payment of $60,000 to exercise an option to reacquire the home.

The annual percentage rate for a $12,000 loan with this payment schedule is 154.15%. Assuming that the "application" date of the sale/leaseback was June 1, 2006, this APR is well in excess of the HOEPA APR trigger of 14.99% (the Treasury bond rate of 4.99% on the 15th of the prior month plus 10%). n19

[3] The Points and Fees Trigger

The alternative trigger for coverage is the charging of total points and fees in excess of 8% of the total loan amount. n20 However, for coverage under this section to apply, the total points and fees must exceed the set floor, which will change

each year on January 1 by the amount the APR change in the consumer price index as reported on June 1 of the year before the adjustment. n21 For 2009, the floor is $583. n22

There is an explicit four-part definition of points and fees under the Act (for loans consummated after October 1, 2002). n23 It includes specified charges that are payable by the consumer at or before closing. These charges include, first, all items included in the finance charge for the loan, other than interest and time-price differential. n24

The second element of points and fees is "all compensation paid to mortgage brokers." n25 The total compensation of the broker is to be included whether or not the use of the broker was required by the creditor. n26 The fee must be counted irrespective of whether it is denominated as a finance charge or not. n27 Because the definition refers to "all compensation," advocates should be alert to the possibility that the broker may receive an undisclosed kickback from the lender. There will be some dispute as to how to treat these fees. For purposes of calculating the APR trigger, it would not matter if the interest rate or points concealed a kickback. n28 Either way, the broker compensation is reflected in the APR.

An issue arises when the broker (as opposed to the lender) provides a credit against the closing costs. A broker might provide a credit against his own broker fee if the lender pays him a yield spread premium and he has charged the consumer a fee directly. If the broker credits an amount against the direct broker fee listed on the settlement statement, then arguably the amount of the broker fee for HOEPA points and fees purposes (and for finance charge purposes) could be reduced by the amount of the credit. n29 When the credit is larger than direct broker fee or when the creditor provides a credit, refer to Section 1.04[2] supra , regarding the consequences to the finance charge analysis. However, if the broker received a yield spread premium, that amount arguably is a point and fee as discussed in the next section.

Problems arise when cash from the loan proceeds is siphoned off by a broker or employee of a brokerage firm or other third party. In these cases, the settlement statement, if it lists this activity at all, will show the "legitimate" broker fee on one line and this additional payout on another line with or without the name of the recipient. In one case, the settlement statement revealed $10,500 paid to a third-party entity (owned by an employee of the brokerage firm) that the consumer did not understand or apparently authorize. The brokerage firm separately received $6350. The court held that the $10,500 was not a "broker" fee (and, thus, not a point and fee) because the employee was not a director or officer of the brokerage firm and the firm never received any of this money. n30 In contrast, another federal court in the same district refused to dismiss the HOEPA claim in a case in which the consumer alleged that the lender's employees who were vice-presidents in the firm caused fees to be disbursed to separate companies in which they were involved. n31 The court held that the fees could be disguised broker fees and, if so, the loan would be covered under HOEPA.

The third element of points and fees is real estate charges included under 15 U.S.C. section 1605(e) other than escrow charges for future payment of taxes. n32 These charges do not count toward the points and fees trigger if they meet the following three part exception:

1) The charge is reasonable;

2) The creditor receives no direct or indirect compensation; and

3) The charge is paid to a third party unaffiliated with the creditor. n33

The fourth element applies to loans entered into on or after October 1, 2002. The points and fees trigger for these loans includes premiums and other charges for credit life, accident, health, loss-of-income insurance and debt cancellation coverage written in connection with the loan in the points and fees trigger. n34 This is a significant step forward in addressing loan-packing practices. To include the credit insurance premium or debt cancellation charge in the points and fees trigger, the credit insurance must be written in connection with the loan transaction. n35 The "written in connection" language will exclude charges for pre-existing policies owned by the borrower before entering into the loan transaction or those purchased after consummation. Thus, the premiums paid for insurance purchased on a monthly basis after the loan was signed cannot be counted in the points and fees trigger. n36 Significantly, the Commentary states that premiums paid at or before closing are included regardless of whether they are paid in cash or financed, and whether the amount represents the entire premium for the coverage or an initial payment. n37 Finally, debt cancellation charges are included in the points and fees trigger whether or not the coverage is considered insurance under applicable law. n38

[4] Points and Fee Trigger Calculations in Foreclosure Rescue Scams

To determine whether a foreclosure rescue transaction n39 meets the HOEPA points and fees trigger, one can consider the terms of the repurchase portion of the transaction alone or the unified impact of the sale and the repurchase. Foreclosure rescue scams are structured in a variety of ways, however, so other ways of determining the points and fees may be appropriate for a particular case.

For most foreclosure rescue transactions, the APR trigger will present a clearer analysis. n40 However, the following example illustrates the application of the points and fees trigger in a hypothetical foreclosure rescue transaction.

Assume that the homeowner's regular monthly mortgage payment was $733.76 per month (this would be the monthly payment on a $100,000 thirty-year mortgage at 8%). Assume also that the homeowner was $10,000 in arrears on mortgage payments and $2000 in arrears on property taxes but had $40,000 in equity in the property. A typical rescuer might pay the combined $12,000 arrearage in exchange for a quit claim deed on the property and allow the homeowner to "rent" the property for $1233.76 per month (the $733.76 regular mortgage payment plus $500 toward the $12,000 arrearage) for twenty-four months, followed by a balloon payment of $60,000 to exercise an option to reacquire the home. Assume further that the rescuer charged the homeowner an up-front fee of $500 and required the homeowner to make two additional monthly payments of $400 to the rescuer while the rescuer was finalizing the transaction. Finally, assume that the rescuer required the homeowner to pay $300 for an appraisal before closing but funneled the money to an appraisal company owned by the rescuer.

All of these up-front charges, totaling $1600, at least arguably count toward the HOEPA points and fees trigger as they were "payable directly or indirectly by the consumer and imposed directly or indirectly by the creditor as an incident to or a condition of the extension of credit." n41 These points and fees would amount to 13.3% of the total loan amount of $12,000, n42 exceeding the HOEPA triggers of $528 (the floor for 2006) and 8% of the total loan amount.

Note that this example provides a road map for calculating the points and fees trigger in the most conservative manner. Alternatively, if the rescuer structures the deal to capture a profit by creating a difference between the homeowner's "sale" price for the property and a much larger "repurchase" price in those cases in which there is a "repurchase" contract, the difference arguably is a finance charge and, consequently, a point and fee.

In conventional loans, the charges that count toward the points and fees trigger are usually paid out of the proceeds of the loan at closing (or paid by the lender before closing and then added to the principal of the loan). Sometimes, however, borrowers pay these charges in cash before closing or bring cash to the closing. With foreclosure rescue scams, the points and fees analysis is clearest if the homeowner made cash payments to the rescuer at or before closing. Charges may also count toward the points and fees trigger if the rescuer paid them at or before closing and then added them to the amount the consumer agreed to pay to repurchase the home. n43

[5] Expanded Definition of Creditor

These home equity protections create a special definition of creditor for high rate loans. Any person who makes two or more mortgages which qualify for coverage under the triggers or who makes one or more such mortgage through a mortgage broker is covered. n44

Interestingly, if individuals or entities become creditors because they meet the expanded definition of creditor under HOEPA, they are a creditor for all TIL purposes. The language added by HOEPA to the definition of "creditor" is written as a separate, free-standing definition, apparently independent of the general definition. Under this interpretation, anyone who originates two HOEPA loans, or one HOEPA loan through a broker, meets the definition of "creditor" even if the debt is not initially payable to that creditor and is not payable by agreement in more than four installments. Under this reading, a mortgage broker who originated one or more HOEPA loans would be a "creditor" even if the obligation was payable to a separate lender. The Fourth Circuit recently addressed this issue, aligning itself with several other courts and placing itself at odds with the first decision to discuss this question. n45

The Fourth Circuit case arose in the context of whether certain closing costs were paid to an affiliate of the creditor for purposes of counting them towards the HOEPA points and fees trigger. An affiliate of the broker received the fees, and the homeowners argued that the broker constituted a "creditor" under this arguably independent sentence in 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f). The court decided that section 1602(f) could be read sensibly to mean that the first sentence must be met first. That sentence indicates that both of the requirements contained therein must be met before an entity can be a creditor under the Act. Therefore, the last sentence in that section does not override that mandate. The last sentence cannot stand alone, the court reasoned, because it has no tie to any current transaction. Arguably, any person could be a creditor even if it was not the creditor in the loan in question. A reading of the last sentence also shows that it refers to a brokered loan. According to the court, Congress meant that the "broker" and "creditor" be separate and distinct entities. Even though the second and third sentences in section 1602(f) clearly are stand-alone sentences, the court stated that they predated the HOEPA amendments to that provision and Congress "added the last sentence of § 1602(f) as a patch to extend the first-sentence definition of 'creditor' in the context of mortgages to include persons who have originated only two prior high-cost mortgages." n46 Finally, the court held that Regulation Z and its Commentary n47 support its reading of the statute and rejected the homeowners' attack on the validity of the regulation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection Act

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. Z § 226.32(a). By defining covered loans to include "consumer credit," Congress presumably intended to reference the Federal Reserve Board's [hereinafter FRB] definition of that term in Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(12). The term "dwelling" is defined in 15 U.S.C. § 1602(a)(v) and Regulation Z § 226.2(a)(19). It includes one- to four-family housing units, condominiums, cooperatives, and mobile homes.

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1). See, e.g., Taylor v. Nelson, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3860 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2006) (consumer used the two mortgage loans at issue to purchase her home; therefore, the transactions were not covered by HOEPA). Provencher v. T&M Mortg. Solutions, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47616 (D. Me. June 18, 2008) (HOEPA did not apply to loan made to consumer to pay off tax lien and re-acquire title from the town, even though she alleged that she had obtained title prior to closing the loan; construing Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(24)-5i to require consumer to have both purchased and acquired some interest in the home prior to loan closing to take transaction out of the residential mortgage exemption); Johnson v. Scala, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73442 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 1, 2007) (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 1, 2007) (holding that HOEPA did not apply where the transaction admittedly was a purchase money loan).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(w). The Commentary defines this phrase to include a loan for financing the construction of a primary dwelling on land already owned by the consumer. Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(24)-7, as amended by 63 Fed. Reg. 16,669 (Apr. 6, 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Flynn v. People's Mortgage, Inc., No. 98-C3760, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18891 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 18, 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See generally § 1.08 supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. This problem was anticipated by Congress as the legislation specifically directs the FRB to study the question of whether open-end borrowers are adequately protected and to submit recommendations to Congress. Pub. L. No. 103-325, § 157 (Sept. 23, 1994). See, e.g., Merriam v. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp. (In re Merriam), 333 B.R. 22 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 2005) (in a case in which the creditor extended two home-secured loans to the homeowners, a first lien fixed-term loan that refinanced the existing mortgage lien and a second line of credit that paid off certain credit card debt, the home equity line of credit constituted spurious open-end credit; in reaching its conclusion, the court highlighted the following factors: the creditor disbursed the entire line of credit at closing; the terms called for interest-only payments for the first three years that would result in no reduction of principal during that time; the draw period only lasted for the first three years; the creditor knew that the homeowners would not likely pay more than the interest-only payments during the draw period, given their limited monthly income and, consequently, knew that the line of credit would not replenish during that time; as to the HOEPA status of this transaction, the court held that neither of the loans alone was a HOEPA loan and treating the loans as one big loan with both sets of points and fees did not push the transaction into HOEPA).

(n9)Footnote 9. That definition is set out more fully and analyzed in Ch. 1, § 1.07[1][a] supra . See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(20).

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. Z § 226.34(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(b)-1. The Board indicates that the determination of the amount financed is a factual one. Factors in calculating the amount of credit that would have been extended if the loan had been structured as a closed-end loan include: the amount of money the consumer originally requested, the amount of the first advance or the highest outstanding balance, or the amount of the credit line. "The amount of the credit line is considered only to the extent that it is reasonable to expect that the consumer might use the full amount of credit." Id.

(n12)Footnote 11.1. See Laudani v. Tribeca Lending Corp. (In re Laudani), 401 B.R. 9, 32-33 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2009) (rejecting HOEPA claim where creditor provided court with detailed calculations of both triggers, but borrower provided no calculations or evidence of coverage beyond "bald assertions that the APR was calculated improperly").

(n13)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1)(A); Reg. Z § 226.32(a)(i).

(n14)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1)(A); Reg. Z § 226.32(a)(i). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(a)(1)(i)-2 (if the 15th is not a business day, the creditor must use the yield as of the immediately preceding business day).

(n15)Footnote 14. The Federal Reserve website provides the necessary information. Go to www.federalreserve.gov/releases. Scroll down to "Weekly Releases" and under "H.15," click on "historical data." Scroll down to "Treasury constant maturities." Find the comparable term and then click on "weekly."

(n16)Footnote 15. This includes the following general tolerance levels: a) 1/8 of 1% (or 1/4 of 1% in the case of irregular transactions); b) any overdisclosure; or c) an annual percentage rate [hereinafter APR] error resulting from an understated finance charge of no more than $100. The tolerance levels applicable in rescission matters, Reg. Z § 226.23(g), do not apply in evaluating the Home Opportunity and Equity Protection [hereinafter HOEP] trigger. Reg. Z §

226.31(g).

It is a bit unclear how the Board's "additional" tolerance of § 226.22(a)(5) fits into the HOEP trigger tolerance, since it keys off of both the finance charge-related $100 tolerance (which applies) and the rescission tolerance levels (which do not). However, given the Board's clear intent that the loose rescission standards not apply to the HOEP trigger, the § 226.22(a)(5) tolerance should logically only be applicable when it is keyed to the $100 finance charge-related tolerance.

(n17)Footnote 16. See § 1.05[2][g] supra. Moore v. Chase Bank, 2008 WL 961161 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 7, 2008) (rejecting the consumer's argument that the maximum relevant rate permitted in the ARM loan note is the relevant APR; rather, the APR disclosed at closing must be used).

(n18)Footnote 17. See National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 11.6.7 (4th ed. 2009).

(n19)Footnote 18. See § National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 2.5.3 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.); National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses §§ 7.5.2.1, 11.6.7 (4th ed. 2009).

(n20)Footnote 19. In this example, the 10% APR trigger for junior lien mortgages is used. Since the rescuer only paid the delinquent amount of the existing first mortgage, not the full balance, a conservative approach treats the transaction with the rescuer as a junior lien mortgage loan.

(n21)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(1)(B); Reg. Z § 226.32(a)(1)(ii).

(n22)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. 1602(aa)(3); Reg. Z. § 226.32(a)(ii).

(n23)Footnote 22. 73 Fed. Reg. 46,190 (Aug. 8, 2008) .

(n24)Footnote 23. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1). The fourth part of the definition, premiums for credit insurance, was added by the FRB's final revisions to Regulation Z and the Commentary published on December 20, 2001. The changes became mandatory on October 1, 2002. Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(iv). For loans consummated prior to October 1, 2002, only the first three parts of the definition are applicable.

(n25)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4)(A); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(i). See Reg. Z § 226.4.

(n26)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4)(B); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(ii).

(n27)Footnote 26. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4)(B); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(ii). See also 60 Fed. Reg. 15,466 (Mar. 24, 1995) (explanation of § 226.32(b)(1)).

(n28)Footnote 27. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(b)(1)(ii)-1.

(n29)Footnote 28. Some of the hidden fees to brokers may be concealed in the finance charge, and so would be recaptured by the APR trigger, as in the case of yield-spread premiums, whereby brokers and creditors split an increase in the interest rate. See, e.g., Culpepper v. Inland Mortgage Co., 132 F.3d 692 (11th Cir. 1998) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 144 F.3d 717 (11th Cir. 1998) , class cert. granted, 189 F.R.D. 668 (N.D. Ala. 1999) , class cert. granted, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11846 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 22, 1999) , stay granted, mot. denied, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15986 (N.D. Ala. July 19, 1999) , aff'd by, sub nom. at 253 F.3d 1324 (11th Cir. 2001) , cert. denied, mot. granted, 122 S.Ct. 930, 151 L. Ed. 2d 893 (2002) ; National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 8.4 (4th ed. 2005 and supp.); National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 12.2.1.5 (3d ed. 2005 and Supp.). Advocates should also be aware that RESPA prohibits kickbacks and fee-splitting arrangements except for services performed. 12 U.S.C. § 2607, Reg. X, 24 C.F.R. § 3500.14; U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, RESPA Statement of Policy 1999- 1 Regarding Lender Payments to Mortgage Brokers, 64 Fed. Reg. 10,080 (Mar. 1, 1999) . Now that many of these loans may also be subject to RESPA, which authorizes treble damages for a violation of that provision, there is an additional means of addressing this problem. See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption,and Industry Abuses, Chapter 12 (3d ed. 2005 and Supp.) See also Webster v. Centex Home Equity Corp. (In re Webster), 300 B.R. 787 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 2003) (bankruptcy court counted the yield spread premium as a point and fee, by focusing on the "all compensation" broker language in section 1602(aa)(4)(B) of the statute). But see Bell v. Parkway Mortgage, Inc. (In re Bell), 309 B.R. 139 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (deciding without analysis that the yield spread premium is not paid by the consumer at or before closing relying on a case that, after some lengthy analysis on the issue of whether a yield spread premium is a finance charge [finding that it is], held merely that the consumer failed to allege that the premium was a "prepaid" finance charge); Collins v. Canton Home Improvement (In re Canton), 310 B.R. 299 (2004) (court used a dictionary definition of "payable" to find that the consumer must pay the yield spread premium "at once," otherwise, it does not qualify as a point and fee. However, that sixth edition Black's Law Dictionary definition has been superseded by the seventh edition which defines "payable" as a sum "that is to be paid"); Sigle v. Canton Home Improvement (In re Sigle), 310 B.R. 303 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 2004) (same judge; identical opinion).

(n30)Footnote 29. See Morrison v. Brookstone Mortgage Co., 415 F. Supp. 2d 801 (S.D. Ohio 2005) (broker credit reduces the point and fees total for HOEPA calculations purposes).

(n31)Footnote 30. Cunningham v. Equicredit Corp. of Ill., 427 F. Supp. 2d 838 (N.D. Ill. 2006) . The court failed to consider the fact that the Act defines a finance charge as the cost of credit to the consumer. In this set of facts, the lender knew that $10,500, over 10% of the loan amount, was paid to this third party because either it or its closing agent prepared the settlement statement and disbursed the loan proceeds. The court rejected an argument that the $10,500 constituted a finance charge on the grounds that the lender must have retained a portion of the fee, which it did not do. However, the question is whether the creditor imposed the fee directly or indirectly, not whether the lender retained a portion of the fee. If the creditor knew this fee was paid in other transactions involving the same brokerage firm or if it had reason to suspect that embezzlement may be involved, then, arguably, the creditor indirectly imposed the charge by disbursing it.

(n32)Footnote 31. Durham v. The Loan Store, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2005) , subsequent proceedings, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33550 (N.D. Ill. May 16, 2006) .

(n33)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4)(C); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(iii). See Reg. Z § 226.40(c)(7).

(n34)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(aa)(4)(C); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(iii). See Reg. Z § 226.40(c)(7). For examples, see Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(b)(1)(ii)-2. "Affiliate" is defined by reference to the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1841(k); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(2). It includes any company that controls, or is controlled by or is under common control, with the creditor. See Lopez v. Delta Funding Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23318 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 1998) .

(n35)Footnote 34. Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(iv).

(n36)Footnote 35. Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(iv).

(n37)Footnote 36. For a discussion of "written in connection with a credit transaction," see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 3.9.4.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n38)Footnote 37. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(b)(1)(iv)-1.

(n39)Footnote 38. Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(1)(iv).

(n40)Footnote 39. See National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry

Abuses § 11.6.7 (4th ed. 2009) for general discussion of foreclosure rescue scams.

(n41)Footnote 40. See an example of the APR calculation in § 2.02[2], supra .

(n42)Footnote 41. 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.32(b), 226.4.

(n43)Footnote 42. In this example, the homeowner paid the points and fees up front in cash. In a standard mortgage loan, the points and fees are often paid out of the proceeds of the loan and then financed as part of that loan. In that case, the "total loan amount" as defined by HOEPA is the proceeds of the loan minus the points and fees.

(n44)Footnote 43. One court counted the $10,000 fee imposed by the rescuer to be paid when and if the homeowner exercised his "option" to repurchase the property against the loan of $11,113.99 that covered the mortgage arrearage, approximately five months of payments going forward, and $5000 to the homeowner. Perry v. Queen, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17120 (M.D. Tenn. Feb. 27, 2006) .

(n45)Footnote 44. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); Reg. Z § 226.2 n.3.

(n46)Footnote 45. Cetto v. LaSalle Bank, N.A., 518 F.3d 263 (4th Cir. 2008) ; Wilson v. Bel Fury Invs. Group, LLC, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35740 (D. Neb. Feb. 6, 2006) (foreclosure rescue scam case); Dawson v. Thomas (In re Dawson), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 1074 (Bankr. D.D.C. Apr. 9, 2008) (applying the "regularly extends" and "to whom payable" language of Regulation Z § 226.2(a)(17) without directly addressing this issue; finding broker was not a creditor for HOEPA liability); Carter v. Alston, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28365 (E.D. Va. Nov. 10, 2005) ; Viernes v. Executive Mortgage, Inc., 372 F. Supp. 2d 576 (D. Haw. 2004) . See also Hruby v. Larsen, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42281 (D. Minn. June 17, 2005) (court applied the "to whom payable" rule without commenting on this issue). But see Anderson v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, Inc., 259 F. Supp. 2d 1143 (W.D. Wash. 2003) .

(n47)Footnote 46. Cetto v. LaSalle Bank, N.A., 518 F.3d 263, 271 (4th Cir. 2008) .

(n48)Footnote 47. Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(17)(i) n.3; Official Staff Commentary § 226.2(a)(17)-1 (transaction counts toward numerical tests only if it meets four-installment/finance-charge requirement and is originally payable to the creditor).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.03

§ 2.03 Disclosure Requirements

New disclosure requirements applicable to covered loans are found in 15 U.S.C. section 1639. n1 The new disclosures do not replace the existing disclosure requirements under 15 U.S.C. section 1638, but, rather, are supplementary. n2 The new disclosures will have to be made in conspicuous type size. n3

For all covered loans made before October 1, 2002, the creditor must make the following disclosures: n4

> 1) "You are not required to complete this agreement merely because you received these disclosures or have signed a loan application."
>
> 2) "If you obtain this loan, the lender will have a mortgage on your home. You could lose your home and any money you have put into it, if you do not meet your obligations under the loan."

For fixed-rate loans, the creditor must also disclose the annual percentage rate and the amount of the regular monthly payment. n5 For variable rate loans, the additional disclosures include the annual percentage rate, the amount of the regular monthly payment, a statement that the interest rate and the monthly payment may increase, and the amount of the maximum potential monthly payment, based on the maximum allowable interest rate set by contract for that loan. n6

For loans consummated on or after October 1, 2002, the HOEPA notice must include two additional important pieces of information. First, the creditor must state the total amount the consumer will borrow, defined to be the face amount of the note (i.e., the principal). n7 This information is intended to alert consumers to a common tactic of high cost lenders: inflating the loan amount to refinance a first lien mortgage (so the new lender can be in first lien position); finance high fees and costs; and pad the principal, without the knowledge or consent of the borrower. n8 Further, the Board created a special tolerance for the disclosure of the total amount borrowed. The creditor may disclose a total amount borrowed above or below the actual amount of no more than $100. If the regular payment is affected by the misdisclosure of the total amount borrowed, the error is acceptable as long as the total amount borrowed is within the tolerance. n9

Second, if the amount borrowed does include premiums or charges for optional credit insurance or debt cancellation coverage, that fact must be stated grouped together with the disclosure of the amount borrowed. n10 The consumer must agree to the purchase of these products before delivery of the HOEPA notice. n11 The Board revised its model HOEPA notice accordingly. n12

The disclosures required for covered loans must be given not less than three business days prior to consummation of the transaction. n13 Where there is an issue regarding delivery of disclosures, the lender's procedures should be scrutinized to determine if delivery most likely took place. n14 Once disclosures are made, the terms of the loan may not be changed if they make the disclosures inaccurate, unless new disclosures are made. n15

Some lenders may add information to the HOEPA notice or may include a separate notice or letter when the HOEPA notice is provided. While a lender can provide more information than required by law, the additional verbiage, if inconsistent with the required language, may violate the clear and conspicuous requirement in 15 U.S.C. section 1632. This violation could trigger the rescission remedy, where applicable. n16 Remember, the required language must be in conspicuous type size in relation to non-mandated information. However, one court held that adding the note rate with a one-sentence explanation to the HOEPA notice in a less conspicuous location than the APR disclosure did not violate the clear and conspicuous requirement when the note rate explanation did not contradict the other required information. n17 The court did not address the conspicuous type size mandate, however.

The Federal Reserve Board created a model HOEPA disclosure form which creditors may use. n18 However, one court held that the creditor must modify the form if the monthly payments will vary, in this case, because of the addition of an FHA insurance premium. n19

In 2001, the FRB issued an interim rule governing electronic disclosures under TILA. n20 The rule was immediately effective and contained a mandatory compliance date of October 1, 2001. n21 After the comment period expired, however, the Board lifted the mandatory compliance date because the "Board is considering adjustments to the rules to provide additional flexibility." n22 Because the landscape of the interim rule is in doubt, it is unlikely that creditors will engineer their computer software and gear up to engage in electronic credit transactions until some version of the rule becomes final. The interim regulation makes clear that the HOEPA notice can be given electronically, provided the creditor complied with the E-Sign Act's consumer consent provisions. In the spring of 2007, the FRB published proposed regulations that remove certain portions of the interim rules and retain others. n23 As of August 31, 2007, the agency had not finalized the proposals.

The Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act, n24 effective October 1, 2000, was enacted to validate electronic signatures, electronic documents, and electronic disclosures. If its requirements, particularly the consumer consent and confirmation-of-consent requirements, are met, it overrides TILA's requirement that disclosures be made in writing. n25 The new federal statute applies to all transactions, not just those that the consumer initiates electronically, and it allows electronic disclosures even when all the other documents are paper. n26

Failure to properly make the necessary disclosures will give rise to civil liability under 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a) and enhanced damages pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(4). n27

In addition, failure to make the new disclosures will constitute a failure to make "material disclosures" under the amended Act. n28 Thus, failure to properly make the new disclosures will give rise to an extended right to rescind the transaction for up to three years from the date of consummation. n29

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosureReal Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection Act

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The regulations for the new disclosures are in Reg. Z §§ 226.31 and 226.32. See Official Staff

Commentary § 226.32(c) for additional guidance, especially with regard to disclosure of regular payments and worst-case variable rate payment examples.

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.31(a). For a discussion of the general closed-end disclosure requirements, see Ch. 1, § 1.05 supra .

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(1). In the 2001 revisions to the HOEPA regulations, the Board added the conspicuous type size requirement to Regulation Z in order to conform to the statute. Reg. Z § 226.32(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(1); Reg. Z § 226.32(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.32(c). Since the accurate APR must be disclosed, revisions in the 1995 amendments to TILA which affect the general tolerance for the disclosure of the APR similarly affect that disclosure for the purposes of HOEP. Revisions which affect the APR tolerance rule are discussed in Ch. 1, §§ 1.04[4][d], 1.05[2][e][ii][A], 1.08[3][b], 1.09[2][h] supra .

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(a)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.32(c)(4). All adjustable-rate mortgage loans made since Dec. 9, 1987, must specify a maximum interest rate. Absent any applicable usury ceiling, it can be as high as the creditor likes, but a cap must be included in the contract. 12 U.S.C. § 3806(a); Reg. Z § 226.30.

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. Z § 336.32(c)(5).

(n8)Footnote 8. 66 Fed. Reg. 65,604, 65,611 (Dec. 20, 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Reg. Z § 226.32(c)(3) and (5).

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. Z § 226.32(c)(5); Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(c)(5)-1.

(n11)Footnote 11. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(c)(3)-1.

(n12)Footnote 12. Reg. Z app. H, at H-16.

(n13)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(b)(1); Reg. Z § 226.31(c)(1). The Commentary clarifies that this means the consumer must receive the disclosures then. It is not adequate to mail them within that time frame. Official Staff Commentary § 226.31(c)-1; 61 Fed. Reg. 14,954 (Apr. 4, 1996) . "Business day," for these purposes, is defined to exclude only Sundays and federal holidays. See Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(6), as amended by 61 Fed. Reg. 49,237 (Sept. 19, 1996) .

(n14)Footnote 14. A federal court in Pennsylvania sifted through evidence introduced at trial on this issue and held that notices were not provided to several homeowners. Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) , costs and fees proceedings at, remanded by 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 6061 (3d Cir. Apr. 3, 2002) . See also Jackson v. US Bank Nat'l Ass'n Trustee (In re Jackson), 245 B.R. 23 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000) (based upon typed date on HOEPA notice, consumer's testimony, lack of credibility of lender's witnesses, and the fact that the HOEPA notice listed the loan amount as $19,000, which amount had not been approved as of the date listed on the notice, court held notice not timely); Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 , aff'd, 237 B.R. 590 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (court found HOEPA notice was not given based on consumer's testimony and creditor's failure to rebut it).

(n15)Footnote 15. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(b)(2)(A); Reg. Z § 226.31(c)(1)(i); Official Staff Commentary § 226.31(c)(1)(i)-1 (this includes situations where the disclosures were labeled as estimates; and where the change was from a formal written agreement).

In some situations where new disclosures are required, they may be made by telephone at least three days before confirmation. For the telephone provisions to apply, three conditions must be met:

- The change must be initiated by the consumer;
- The creditor must provide the new disclosures in writing at the time of consummation; and
- The creditor and consumer must certify in writing at the time of consummation that the new disclosures were provided by telephone not later than three days prior to the date of consummation of the transaction.

15 U.S.C. § 1639(b)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.31(c)(1)(ii); Official Staff Commentary § 226.31(c)(1)(ii).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Ralls v. Bank of N.Y. (In re Ralls), 230 B.R. 508 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Lewis v. Delta Funding Corp. (In re Lewis), 290 B.R. 541 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Model Form H-16, Reg. Z App. H.

(n19)Footnote 19. Jeanty v. Washington Mutual Bank, F.A., 305 F. Supp. 2d 962 (E.D. Wis. 2004) (the creditor failed to properly disclose the "regular payment" on the HOEPA form and did not modify it to take into account that fact that payments would vary).

(n20)Footnote 20. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) . See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 4.2.9.3 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n21)Footnote 21. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,329 (Mar. 30, 2001) .

(n22)Footnote 22. 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439, 41,440 (Aug. 8, 2001) .

(n23)Footnote 23. 72 Fed. Reg. 21,141 (Apr. 30, 2007) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Pub. L. No. 106-229, 114 Stat. 464 (2000) (codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 7001 et seq.). The statute is discussed in more detail in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 4.2.9.3 (6th ed. 2007).

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1).

(n26)Footnote 26. This E-sign statute applies to disclosures required by HOEPA, and other provisions of TILA, as discussed at § 1.05[2][a] supra.

(n27)Footnote 27. Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) ; Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 , aff'd, remanded, 237 B.R. 590 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (court properly awarded $2,000 for failure to give the HOEPA notice in the first transaction; unfortunately, the district court, when affirming the bankruptcy court, improperly reduced a separate statutory award for TIL violations in the second non-HOEPA loan.

(n28)Footnote 28. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u) (as amended). See Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48 (as amended). Failure to disclose a balloon payment on the notice triggers rescission as is evident from a perusal of Regulation Z and the Commentary. Specifically, Regulation Z § 226.23(a)(3) n.48 specifies that material disclosures include the disclosures referred to in § 226.32(c). Regulation Z § 226.32(c)(3) requires that the HOEPA early disclosure include an accurate statement of the "regular payment." The Board defined "regular payment" to include a balloon payment. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(c)(3)-2.

(n29)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 1635; Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(3); Decision One Mortgage Co., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 33881 (6th Cir. Dec. 19, 2000) (court recognized the right to rescind for failure to give the HOEPA notice; court conditioned rescission upon payment of loan balance, however); Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Lending Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) . But see Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 , aff'd, remanded, 237 B.R. 590 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999) (court refused to rescind the first loan which was quickly refinanced, using the rationale that the lender did everything it would have done if the loan had been rescinded, i.e., the lender canceled the lien and returned all payments made by the homeowner [no payments were credited as the homeowner made none]; the lender had not, however, credited the account with the closing costs which the court erroneously failed to consider). See Official Staff Commentary § 226.23(d)(2)-1.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.04

§ 2.04 Substantive Regulations and Remedies

Below is a list of prohibited terms for covered high-cost loans. Most of these prohibitions are not absolute and, therefore, care should be taken to make sure that where an exception is invoked, the creditor has met the preconditions to the exception.

As part of the FRB's review of the HOEPA regulations and commentary during 2000-2001, it decided to create a new section within Regulation Z titled: "Prohibited acts or practices in connection with credit secured by a consumer's dwelling." By doing so, the Board separated the prohibited contract provisions (these remain in section 226.32) from the prohibited acts or practices (now in new section 226.34). n1 Section 226.34 contains three familiar prohibitions related to home improvement contractors, ability to repay, and notice to the assignee, as well as two newcomers related to refinancings within one year and structuring a loan as open-end to evade HOEPA. A discussion of each follows.

[1] Limitations on Prepayment Penalties

All prepayment penalties are prohibited for covered loans with a complex five-part exception. n2 Prepayment penalties are defined to include any method of calculating a rebate less favorable than the actuarial method. n3 This will eliminate use of the Rule of 78 in covered loans unless the exception applies. n4

To invoke the exception, the creditor is required to meet all five preconditions contained in the statute. First, measured as of the time the loan is consummated, the loan must not cause the consumer to pay more than 50% of his or her monthly gross income toward "monthly indebtedness payments." n5 The second prerequisite to the exception is that the income and expenses of the consumer must be verified by a financial statement signed by the consumer, and by a credit report.

The third precondition to the exception is that it does not apply to repayments by refinancing with the creditor who made the initial mortgage or with an affiliate of that creditor. n6 The fourth prerequisite is that the penalty can only be imposed during the first five years of the loan, calculated from the date on which the mortgage is consummated. n7 The final prerequisite is that the penalty must be legal under other applicable law. n8 This preserves state law limits on prepayment penalties. n9

The Federal Reserve Board issued regulations in 2008 that broaden the prohibition against prepayment penalties. n10 However, these changes will not be effective until October 9, 2008. n11

As with the current rules, the amendments define prepayment penalties to include any method of calculating a rebate less favorable than the actuarial method. n12 Like its current counterpart, the regulation contains a multi-part exception that creditors must meet in order to legally charge a prepayment penalty in a HOEPA loan. However, the Board narrowed, changed, and added exceptions.

First, by the terms of the loan, the penalty will expire after two years following consummation, an improvement over the current five-year duration limitation. n13

Second, the amount of the periodic payment of principal and interest or both may not change during the four-year period following consummation. n14 Examples of when payment changes do and do not violate this condition appear in the Commentary. n15

Third, like the current rule, at consummation, the consumer's total monthly debt payments, including amounts owed under the mortgage, cannot exceed fifty percent of the consumer's monthly income. n16 However, the verification requirements differ from the current rules but a track new verification regime applicable to the repayment ability standard in revised Regulation Z § 226.34(a)(4). n17 In addition, the Commentary specifies that creditors may verify debt with a credit report. n18 The new Commentary also allows creditors to not count amounts paid by the consumer in cash at closing or amounts from the loan proceeds that directly repay an existing debt as "debt" for purposes of this analysis. n19 Creditors can consider the combined debt-to-income ratios for loans involving joint applicants. n20

Fourth, the prepayment penalty cannot apply if the source of the repayment funds is a refinancing by the same creditor or an affiliate of the creditor. n21 The Board tightened this condition by covering affiliates of the creditor.

Fifth, the prepayment penalty must be otherwise permitted by law, as in the current rule. n22

[2] Prohibition of Interest Rate Increases on Default

A covered loan may not include a term which increases the interest rate in the event of a default. n23

[3] Limitation on Balloon Payments

Balloon payments are large payments which come due during a loan term, usually at the end of a loan. Balloon payments are prohibited in covered loans which have a term of less than five years. n24

The FRB has created a limited exception to the prohibition on balloon payments by exempting some "bridge" loans connected with the construction or acquisition of a dwelling from the prohibition on balloon payment terms. n25 Since most of those loans would be subject to the "residential mortgage transaction" exception, n26 the FRB's additional protection for these loans would seem to have little impact. However, where this exception is invoked, it creates an exception only for the balloon term and not to other protections under HOEPA. n27

[4] Prohibition of Negative Amortization

Negative amortization, which occurs when the payments due each period are insufficient to cover the interest on the loan as it comes due, is entirely prohibited in covered loans. n28

[5] Limitations on Due-on-Demand Clauses

The Board added due-on-demand clauses to the list of prohibited provisions for loans entered into on or after October 1, 2002. n29 A "due-on-demand" or "call" provision allows the creditor to call in the loan or accelerate the note at any time. The Board believed due-on-demand clauses raise the same concerns as short-term balloon provisions: they both allow a creditor to force the consumer to refinance by demanding a large payment (either the balloon amount or the remaining balance due) within a relatively short time after loan consummation. n30 Exercising its authority under HOEPA, the Board decided to ban the use of these clauses entirely, except in three circumstances.

The exceptions are listed in Regulation Z and examples are found in the Commentary. n31 Like the prepayment penalty exceptions, creditors should include these limitations in the contract provision itself in order to comply with HOEPA.

A due-on-demand provision will not violate HOEPA if it can be exercised only when: (1) there is fraud or material misrepresentation by the consumer in connection with the loan; (2) the consumer fails to meet the repayment terms of the agreement for an outstanding balance; n32 or (3) there is any action or inaction by the consumer that adversely affects the creditor's security for the loan, or any right of the creditor in such security.

[6] Limitation on Prepaid Payments

The amendments preclude taking more than two prepaid payments in covered loans. n33

[7] Extending Credit Without Regard to Ability to Pay

A problem that has plagued an increasing portion of the mortgage loan market is the making of loans which the lender knew or should have known the consumer would be unable to repay. n34

HOEPA addresses this issue through a compromise provision which prohibits a creditor from engaging in "a pattern or practice of extending credit to consumers [in covered loans] based on the consumers' collateral without regard to the consumers' repayment ability, including the consumers' current and expected income, current obligations, and employment." n35 The Federal Reserve Board amended Regulation Z in 2008 and removed the pattern and practice requirement because the burden on the consumer to prove this element would leave many homeowners without a realistic remedy. n36 This change became effective October 1, 2009. n37

In addition, the 2008 amendments remove the presumption of illegality if the creditor fails to verify and document the consumer's ability to repay, revise the verification and documentation standards, and create a safe harbor for creditors. n38

The current pattern and practice requirement is a curious provision because it makes an individual consumer establish not only that the lender has made a loan based on the consumer's equity and without regard to her repayment ability, but also that the loan is part of a "pattern or practice" of making loans on that basis. This makes such cases difficult and expensive by extending the scope of relevant discovery in an individual case to include the lender's general underwriting practices, and, essentially, its entire loan portfolio.

Congress did not define "pattern or practice," nor had the Federal Reserve Board provided any guidance concerning an injured consumer's burden regarding such proof until it revised the Commentary effective on October 1, 2002. n39

Essentially, the courts were left to determine the meaning of a phrase that is susceptible to different interpretations, though now, at least, a bit more guidance from the Board exists.

For loans consummated on or after October 1, 2001, Regulation Z contains a presumption that the creditor violated the repayment ability provision if the creditor engages in a pattern or practice of making HOEPA loans without verifying and documenting the consumer's ability to repay. n40

For loans made after October 1, 2009, the Board has removed the pattern and practice requirement, and revamped the general standard. The Supplementary Information in the Federal Register discusses the background, relevant data, and rationale supporting the Board's actions. For applicable loans, the new rules prohibit creditors from making loans to consumers "based on the value of the consumer's collateral without regard to the consumer's repayment ability as of consummation, including the consumer's current and reasonably expected income, employment, assets other than the collateral, current obligations, and mortgage-related obligations." n41 The words in italics are new. Further, the modified section no longer contains the presumption of violation if the creditor did not verify and document the consumer's repayment ability.

These changes clarify that: 1) repayment ability is assessed as of the date of consummation; 2) the income and assets of the consumer must be reasonably expected; and 3) the lender must take into account not merely the principal and interest payment when assessing ability to repay but also the property tax and insurance costs required by the lender. The rest of the new regulation and the related Commentary teases out the parameters of this general standard and creates an exception and a rebuttable presumption.

In addition to the factors that creditors must consider when deciding whether to grant or deny credit, the new rules mandate that the creditor verify the consumer's repayment ability. n42 To accomplish this, the creditor must validate current and reasonably expected income and assets and current obligations. n43 It can rely upon information from the Internal Revenue Service, including tax returns and W-2 forms, payroll receipts, records from financial institutions, or other third party documents that provide reasonably reliable evidence of income and assets. n44

The information obtained must be specific to the consumer. A credit report is acceptable to document current obligations. n45

A creditor who is extending new credit to a current customer or refinancing its own loan need not obtain a document previously collected from the customer if the creditor has no information that would reasonably lead it to believe that the document has changed since the receipt of its original version. n46

If a creditor relies upon expected income, the expectation must be reasonable and the creditor must verify this income. n47

If the consumer has two sources of income but the creditor depends upon only one source to ascertain repayment ability, the creditor need only verify the one source. n48 If two persons jointly apply for credit, the lender must verify the repayment ability of both, unless it relies only on the income and assets of one of the applicants in assessing repayment ability. n49

Regulation Z creates an exception to these verification rules in this situation: when the amounts of income and assets that the creditor relied upon in assessing ability to repay are not materially greater than the amounts of the consumer's income or assets that the creditor could have verified by following the rules at the time of consummation. n50

In addition to this exception, Regulation Z creates a presumption of compliance if the creditor meets three conditions. n51 First, the creditor must verify the consumer's repayment ability following the Regulation Z rules described above. n52 Second, the creditor must use the largest payment of principal and interest scheduled in the first seven years of the loan term taking into account current obligations and mortgage-related obligations as defined in the rules. n53 Third, the creditor must underwrite the loan using either a debt-to-income ratio that takes into account the total debt obligations or the income the consumer will have after paying debt obligations, i.e., residual income. n54 The presumption is not available if a mortgage loan has either of following characteristics: during the first seven years it either negatively amortizes or contains a balloon payment. n55

The consumer may rebut the presumption with evidence that the creditor disregarded repayment ability despite following these procedures.

[8] Payments to Home Improvement Contractors

There are also special requirements for payments to home improvement contractors. When a creditor finances a home improvement contract, payments in covered loans may not be made in an instrument payable directly to the contractor alone. n56 The payment must be made either to the consumer only or in a jointly payable instrument. n57 At the election of the consumer, payments may also be made through a third party escrow agent based on an agreement signed by the consumer, the creditor, and the contractor before the date of payment. n58

One issue likely to arise under this provision is whether a particular loan involves a home improvement contract. Certainly, any time the creditor knows or has reason to know that a payment is being made from the loan proceeds to a contractor, this provision should be invoked.

[9] FRB's Power to Prohibit Unfair Trade Practices

The FRB is required under the Act to prohibit acts or practices in connection with loans which the Board finds to be unfair, deceptive, or designed to evade the provisions of Section 1639. n59 In addition, the Board is to prohibit acts or practices related to refinancing which the Board finds to be abusive or otherwise not in the interests of the borrower. n60

The Board held hearings and obtained public comment on a variety of issues relevant to HOEPA in 1997. n61 The next year, the Board released a Joint Report to the Congress Concerning Reform to the Truth in Lending Act and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. n62 While agreeing that abusive mortgage practices continue despite HOEPA, the Board suggested only modest changes to that Act. With one exception, the Board has issued no regulations on this subject. n63

Federal and state agency and media attention on predatory mortgage lending heated up in 2000. HUD and the Department of the Treasury held a series of hearings to obtain evidence and suggestions about regulatory action. n64 The Federal Reserve Board once again scheduled hearings and requested comments on ways it could take regulatory action under the authority delegated to it by Congress to deal with predatory practices in the home-equity lending market. n65 In 2001, the Board issued final changes to Regulation Z and the Commentary, adding two new prohibited acts: the refinancing of HOEPA loans within one year unless the refinancing is in the borrower's interest or acts or practices to evade this rule; and the structuring of loans as open-end to evade HOEPA. The only remaining issue for the Board is whether and how to regulate the refinancing of special mortgage products, such as Habitat for Humanity or other low-rate mortgage loans and deferred payment loans often made by municipalities to help low-income homeowners obtain essential home repairs. Given the amount of time and effort the Board put into obtaining evidence of abuses and in drafting regulations over the last few years, it is unlikely the Board will tackle other abusive acts and practices or amend the HOEPA regulations any time in the near future.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionUnfair & Deceptive Credit PracticesReal Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection Act

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Compare Reg. Z § 226.32, with Reg. Z § 226.34.

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(6), (7); Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(6), (7).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(6), (7); Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(6), (7). See Ch. 6, § 6.03[4][b] infra , for an explanation of the actuarial rebate method. Both the statute and the regulation define the "actuarial method" by reference to 15 U.S.C. § 1615(d) and the explanation accompanying the regulation suggests that other more expansive state law definitions of that term might generate prepayment penalties within the meaning of the act and regulations. See 60 Fed. Reg. 15,467 (Mar. 24, 1995) (explanation of § 226.32(d)(6)). See also Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(6)-1; National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 5.6 (3d ed. 2005 and Supp.) for an explanation of the actuarial rebate method.

(n4)Footnote 4. The Rule of 78 is an anachronistic, shorthand formula for approximating the rebate of unearned charges upon the early termination of credit which has been widely used by creditors because it has an inherent bias in the creditors' favor--the rebate to the consumer will always be smaller under the Rule of 78 than under the technically precise actuarial method. See Ch. 6, § 6.03[4][b] infra . See also National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 5.6.3.3 (3d ed. 2005 and Supp.)

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(2)(A)(i); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(iii).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(2)(B); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(ii). The term "affiliate" is defined for these purposes as it is in § 2(k) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1841(k); 15 U.S.C. § 1639(k); Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(2). That definition is "any company which controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with another company."

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(2)(C); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(i).

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(2)(D).

(n9)Footnote 9. In other words, a national lender that meets the other exceptions nevertheless violates HOEPA if a particular state's law prohibits such a penalty. See Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa.) , aff'd, 237 B.R. 590 (E.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522 (July 30, 2008) .

(n11)Footnote 11. More specifically, the changes apply to new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after October 1, 2009. Official Staff Commentary § 226.1(d)(5)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,605 (July 30, 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(6); Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008).

(n13)Footnote 13. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(i); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(iv); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(7)(iv)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,610-44,611 (July 30, 2008) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(iii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Id.

(n18)Footnote 18. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(7)(iii)-2; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,610 (July 30, 2008) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(7)(iii)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,610 (July 30, 2008) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7)(ii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Reg. Z § 226.32(b)(2).

(n22)Footnote 22. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(7); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n23)Footnote 23. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(d); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(4). This applies to "default rate" provisions. It does not prohibit a routine rate change in a variable-rate transaction in accordance with the contract when the index rises, even if it happens that the debtor is in default then. Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(d)(4)-1. See also Lopez v. Delta Funding Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23318 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 1998) (mortgage loans undeniably contained provisions for an increased interest rate upon default; issue at preliminary injunction stage was whether consumers could demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of their claim that the loans were covered by HOEPA; court found that loans were covered and granted injunction to stop the foreclosures of certain named plaintiffs); Dailey v. Leshin, 792 So. 2d 527 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001) (case remanded to allow the trial court to hear a motion to amend adding in a HOEPA claim based upon allegation that the lender filed an affidavit in the foreclosure action imposing a default interest rate of 18%; not clear whether the note contained a default interest rate provision), rev. denied, 821 So. 2d 294 (Fla. 2002) .

(n24)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(e); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(1); Official Staff Commentary § 226.32(c)(3)-2; 62 Fed. Reg. 10,139, 10,198 (Mar. 6, 1997) (if the term of the loan is for five or more years, the balloon payment must be disclosed).

(n25)Footnote 25. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(1)(ii).

(n26)Footnote 26. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(w); Reg. Z § 226.2(a)(24).

(n27)Footnote 27. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(1)(ii).

(n28)Footnote 28. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(f); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(2). For further discussion of negative amortization, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 4.3.1.2 (4th ed. 2009).

(n29)Footnote 29. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(8).

(n30)Footnote 30. See the discussion in 65 Fed. Reg. 81,438, 81,444 (Dec. 26, 2000) and in 66 Fed. Reg. 65,604, 65,611 (Dec. 20, 2001) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(8); Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.32(d)(8)(ii)-(iii).

(n32)Footnote 32. The Commentary states that the consumer must actually fail to make payments. A creditor may not terminate and accelerate if the consumer, in error, sent a payment to the wrong location, such as a branch rather than the main office. The filing of bankruptcy alone cannot trigger the demand clause unless the consumer fails to meet the repayment terms of the agreement. Further, this exception for failing to repay does not override any state or other law that requires a creditor to cure, or otherwise place a duty on the creditor before it can terminate the loan and accelerate. Official Staff Commentary §§ 226.32(d)(8)(ii)-1.

(n33)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(g); Reg. Z § 226.32(d)(3).

(n34)Footnote 34. Causes of action, other than under HOEPA, can be alleged to attack this type of behavior. See, e.g., Opportunity Mgmt. Co., Inc. v. Frost, 1999 Wash. App. LEXIS 336 (Wash. Ct. App. Feb. 16, 1999) (allegation that making a loan which lender knew or had reason to believe was destined to fail stated UDAP claim). But see Bankers Trust Co. v. Brown, 107 P.3d 609 (Okla. Civ. App. 2004) . See also National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses Ch. 11, 12 (4th ed. 2009).

(n35)Footnote 35. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(h); Reg. Z § 226.32(e)(1). See also H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 652, 103d Cong. 2d

Sess. 147, 160 (1994); 1994 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1987 (accompanying H.R. 3474); Bankers Trust Co. v. Brown, 107 P.3d 609 (Okla. Civ. App. 2004)) .

(n36)Footnote 36. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,545-44,546 (July 30, 2008) .

(n37)Footnote 37. More specifically, the changes apply to new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after October 1, 2009. Official Staff Commentary § 226.1(d)(5)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,605 (July 30, 2008) .

(n38)Footnote 38. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4); Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603, 44,611-44,613 (July 30, 2008) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)-2.

(n40)Footnote 40. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4).

(n41)Footnote 41. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) (emphasis added).

(n42)Footnote 42. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(ii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(A), (C); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n44)Footnote 44. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(A); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) . The creditor may use an electronic retrieval service for obtaining the consumer's W-2 or tax return information. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(A)-1, (A)-2; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,611-44,612 (July 30, 2008) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(A)-4; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,612 (July 30, 2008) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(A)-5; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,612 (July 30, 2008) .

(n47)Footnote 47. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)-3; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,611 (July 30, 2008) .

(n48)Footnote 48. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,611 (July 30, 2008) .

(n49)Footnote 49. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)-2; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,611 (July 30, 2008) .

(n50)Footnote 50. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(ii)(B); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n51)Footnote 51. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(iii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n52)Footnote 52. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(iii)(A); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n53)Footnote 53. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(iii)(B); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) . To calculate the maximum scheduled payment, the creditor should follow the guidance in Official Staff Commentary § 226.17(c)(1). Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(iii)(B)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,612 (July 30, 2008) .

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(iii)(C); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n55)Footnote 55. Reg. Z § 226.34(a)(4)(iv); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) ; Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(4)(iv)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,613 (July 30, 2008) .

(n56)Footnote 56. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(i). Reg. Z § 226.32(e)(2).

(n57)Footnote 57. If there is more than one consumer primarily obligated on the note, all such consumers must be listed as joint payees with the contractor. See 60 Fed. Reg. 15,467 (Mar. 24, 1995) (explanation of § 226.32(e)(2)).

(n58)Footnote 58. See 60 Fed. Reg. 15,467 (Mar. 24, 1995) (explanation of § 226.32(e)(2)). If the creditor chooses to use an affiliate as an escrow agent, RESPA requires that certain disclosures be made. Regulation X, 24 C.F.R. § 3500.15. See 60 Fed. Reg. 15,467-68 (Mar. 24, 1995) (explanation of § 226.32(e)(2)).

(n59)Footnote 59. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(l)(2)(A).

(n60)Footnote 60. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(l)(2)(B).

(n61)Footnote 61. 62 Fed. Reg. 23,189 (Apr. 29, 1997) . Senators Grassley and Breaux also co-sponsored a hearing before the Senate Special Committee on Aging in March 1998 which highlighted some of the continuing mortgage abuses which plague senior citizens. Equity Predators: Stripping, Flipping and Packing Their Way to Profits: Hearing Before the Special Committee on Aging, United States Senate, 105th Cong. 18 (1998).

(n62)Footnote 62. Joint Report to the Congress Concerning Reform to the Truth in Lending Act and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Department of Housing and Urban Development, July 1998.

(n63)Footnote 63. The Board is treating failure to provide the notice of liability to assignees which must be contained in a covered transaction as a prohibited act or practice. Failure to include the notice should then arguably give rise to enhanced damages and civil liability for a violation. Reg. Z § 226.32(e)(3). See 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(4).

(n64)Footnote 64. See HUD's web site, where it created a special space for predatory lending updates--www.hud.gov/fha/predlend.html.

(n65)Footnote 65. See 65 Fed. Reg. 42,889 (July 12, 2000) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.05

§ 2.05 Remedies

The violation of any provision of the new law gives rise to standard TIL civil liability under 15 U.S.C. section 1640(a) for actual damages, statutory damages, attorneys' fees and costs. In addition, failure to make the new disclosures will constitute a failure to make "material disclosures" under the amended Act. n1 Thus, failure to properly make the new disclosures will give rise to an extended right to rescind the transaction for up to three years from the date of consummation. n2 This should apply equally to failure to make the necessary disclosures at all, failure to make accurate disclosures, and failure to follow the proper disclosure procedures required under section 1639(a).

Inclusion of any of the prohibited terms discussed above will give rise to civil liability under 15 U.S.C. section 1640(a) and enhanced damages pursuant to 15 U.S.C. section 1640(a)(4). n3 In addition, inclusion of a prohibited term gives rise to the extended right to rescind the loan under 15 U.S.C. section 1635. n4

There are also special enhanced damages for violations of 15 U.S.C. section 1639 available under 15 U.S.C. section 1640(a)(4), unless the creditor demonstrates that the failure to comply is not material. The enhanced damages include all finance charges and fees paid by the consumer.

With respect to enhanced damages, a substantial issue will be the meaning of the term "material" as used in section 1640(a)(4). Although, based on the statutory language, it is the creditor's burden to establish that a violation is not material, presumably many creditors will seek that protection on a variety of grounds.

In enacting the amendments, Congress made clear that it did not intend to limit more restrictive state laws. n5 This means that there is no new preemption of state laws that more stringently regulate consumer credit. In addition to the existing administrative enforcement provision, n6 a state's attorney general may bring actions to enforce the 1995 amendments. n7 There is a three-year limitations period for such actions, which may be brought in federal or state court. The state Attorney General is required to provide prior written notice and a copy of the complaint to the federal agency responsible for administrative enforcement unless prior notice is not feasible. The federal agency may then intervene if it so chooses.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingLiabilityBanking LawConsumer ProtectionUnfair & Deceptive Credit PracticesReal Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection Act

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1602(u) (as amended). See Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48 (as amended).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1635; Reg. Z § 226.23(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Ch. 1, § 1.10 supra .

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(j); Reg. Z § 226.23 n.48 (defining those limitations incorporated in § 226.32(d) as "material" for rescission purposes). For a full discussion of the rescission remedy, see Ch. 1, § 1.08 supra . Note that although it is clear that rescission will be available for including prohibited terms in mortgages, it is less clear that Congress intended to provide the rescission remedy for the pattern and practice of disregarding the consumer's ability to repay or for paying a home improvement contractor directly.

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(ii).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1607.

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.06

§ 2.06 Additional Provisions: Extension of Assignee Liability

One of the contributing causes to abusive loan schemes is the transfer of fraudulently obtained mortgages to assignees who then assert the protections of a holder in due course.

For some home improvement loans, this problem is addressed by the Federal Trade Commission's Holder Rule which abrogates the traditional protections of a holder in due course for certain loans. n1 In other cases, it may be possible to avoid application of assignee protections by establishing that the assignee is not a holder in due course. n2

Assignees also have some potential liability for TILA violations under existing law, including liability for rescission when that remedy is available. n3 All of those remedies will continue to be available for assignees of loans covered by the new home equity protections. n4

In addition, the high rate loan protections provide that assignees of covered mortgages are liable for all claims and defenses with respect to the assigned mortgage that the consumer could assert against the originator. n5 There are, however, certain limitations on damages discussed below. n6 However, assignees will continue to be entitled to protection from liability if they legitimately could not have known that the assigned mortgage was a covered loan.

An assignee will not be held liable under the act when it "demonstrates, by a preponderance of the evidence, that a reasonable person exercising ordinary due diligence" could not have determined that the loan was covered. n7

The standard created by new section 1641(d) is generally an objective one. The actions of the assignee are generally irrelevant as long as a "reasonable person exercising ordinary due diligence" could not have determined that the loan was covered. However, as stated above, the lender will be charged (subjectively) with any actual knowledge it does possess.

Where assignees are found to be liable, they will be subject to the full range of claims which could have been asserted against the maker of the loan. This includes liability for the originator's unfair trade practices, fraud, consumer credit abuses, RICO violations, and any other claims within the imagination of litigators and the limits of Rule 11.

However, damages on those actions will be limited to the amounts permissible under 15 U.S.C. section 1641(d)(2) and (3). Note that these limitations apply only to the extent that the action is made permissible solely by section 1641(d)(1). They are inapplicable if the action against an assignee is available under another provision of section 1641 or by any other means of establishing assignee liability.

There are two substantive limits. For actions brought under TILA, liability is available to the extent of the "amount specified in § 1640." n8 This limitation will rarely come into play since most TILA cases brought against assignees will continue to be brought under section 1641(a) or (c).

For actions based on any other claim, damages are limited to the amount of all remaining indebtedness and the total amount already paid by the consumer. n9 When damages are awarded both on TILA and on other claims, the TILA damages must be offset against the damages awarded on the other claims. n10

Read together, it is clear that the maximum damages available against an assignee who is liable under section 1641(d) is the amount of the loan then due, plus the amount already paid on the loan. It does not matter under the statute whether the payments were made to the original creditor or to the assignee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingLiabilityContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsEnforcementDuties & Liabilities of PartiesTypes of PartiesHolders in Due CourseRightsReal Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection ActReal Property LawFinancingSecondary FinancingAssignees & PriorityReal Property LawFinancingSecondary Mortgage MarketGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Ch. 14 infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Ch. 14 infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(a), (c). See Ch. 1, §§ 1.08[8], 1.09[2][g] supra .

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(1). See also H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-652, at 163 (1994) (assignee liability provisions for covered loans are "not intended to limit assignee liability under other portions of the TILA ... or other causes of action").

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(1). By its plain language, the statute does not limit assignee liability to TILA or HOEPA violations. Literally, Congress eliminated the holder in due course doctrine that can protect an assignee if that assignee purchases a high cost loan as defined by HOEPA. This means that a consumer could sue a holder of a HOEPA loan for state law or other federal law violations that she or he could raise against the original creditor without raising any TILA/HOEPA claims. See VanDenBroeck v. ContiMortgage Corp., 53 F. Supp. 2d 965 (W.D. Mich. 1999) . The court specifically rejected the argument that federal law creates the consumer's claims because the causes of action could not have been brought against the assignee but for § 1641(d)(1). VanDenBroeck v. ContiMortgage Corp., 53 F. Supp. 2d 965, 968 (W.D. Mich. 1999) . The 2001 Commentary reinforces the plain language of the statute. Official Staff Commentary § 226.34(a)(2)-3. The new language states: "For such loans, a purchaser's or other assignee's liability for all claims and defenses that the consumer could assert against the creditor is not limited to violations of the act." See also Bryant v. Mortgage Capital Res. Corp., 197 F. Supp. 2d 1357 (N.D. Ga. 2002) ; Rodrigues v. U.S. Bank (In re Rodrigues), 278 B.R. 683, 688 (Bankr. D.R.I. 2002) ("The legislative history indicates Congress's intent to establish a strict liability standard for assignees of such loans."); Short v. Wells Fargo Bank Minn., N.A., 401 F. Supp. 2d 549 (S.D. W. Va. 2005) (assignee is subject to all federal or state claims and defenses if the loan is covered by HOEPA; loan note contained the HOEPA notice to assignees), subsequent proceedings, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37988 (S.D. W. Va. June 8, 2006) ; Schwartz v. Bann-Cor Mortgage,197 S.W.3d 168 (Mo. App. 2006) (assignees of HOEPA loans are subject to state secondary mortgage loan law claims); Cazares v. Pacific Shore Funding, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1081 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2006) (court recognized that liability for prepayment penalties illegal under state law can extend to the assignee in a HOEPA loan). But see Harvey v. EMC Mortgage Corp. (In re Harvey), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 642 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. June 9, 2003) (court disagrees that HOEPA assignee liability provision allows all claims and defenses to be raised against assignee without looking at the operative law to see whether claims against assignees are foreclosed but refuses to define the scope of liability at this stage of the case; however, the court rejects the assignee's argument that § 1641(d)(1) only results in creating assignee liability if the law under which the claim was asserted provides for assignee liability since this argument makes § 1641(d)(1) superfluous).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(1). See Durham v. The Loan Store, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2005) (court refused to dismiss, finding that complaint sufficiently alleged that assignee received notice that loan was subject to HOEPA and that the documents facially revealed HOEPA coverage under the points and fees trigger), subsequent proceedings, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33550 (N.D. Ill. May 16, 2006) ; Cooper v. First Gov't Inv. Corp., 238 F. Supp. 2d 50 (D.D.C. 2002) . But see McMaster v. CIT Group/Consumer Fin., Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28831 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2006) (assignee could not tell that a $91 title examination fee was unreasonable when the evidence beyond the loan documents showed that it may be duplicative of the attorney's closing fee; summary judgment granted to the assignee).

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(2)(A).

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(2)(B).

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1641(d)(3).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.07

§ 2.07 "Higher-Priced" Mortgage Loans: Prohibited Acts or Practices

[1] Introduction

On July 30, 2008, the Federal Reserve Board released final regulations that prohibit four acts or practices in mortgage loans that carry APRs exceeding a new "higher-priced" APR trigger. n1 This trigger is significantly lower than the HOEPA APR trigger and is tied to a different index. The rule covers all higher-priced loans secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, including purchase loans. It only excludes loans to finance the initial construction of a home, a temporary or bridge loan with a term of twelve months or less, and a home equity line of credit. n2 The Supplementary Information in the Federal Register discusses the background, relevant data, and rationale supporting the Board's actions.

New section 226.35 is effective for transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after October 1, 2009, except for the escrow provision. The escrow rule applies to most new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after April 1, 2010. However, the regulation applies to new transactions secured by manufactured housing for which the creditor receives an application on or after October 1, 2010.

[2] The Annual Percentage Rate Trigger

A first lien loan secured by the consumer's principal dwelling meets the APR trigger if its annual percentage rate exceeds the average prime offer rate for a comparable transaction by 1.5% or more percentage points. The APR on a subordinate lien loan must exceed the average prime offer rate for a comparable transaction by 3.5% or more percentage points. n3

The relevant date is the date the creditor sets the interest rate on the consumer's mortgage loan. n4

[3] Prohibited Acts or Practices

If a loan meets the APR trigger, Regulation Z imposes four restrictions on creditors who originate higher-priced mortgage loans.

First, the creditor must evaluate the consumer's ability to repay using the same standards set in the revised rules applicable to HOEPA loans. n5

Second, a higher-priced loan may not include a prepayment penalty (as defined in Regulation Z § 226.32(d)(6)) unless the creditor can show that:

- The penalty is otherwise permitted by law;
- Under the terms of the loan, the penalty will not apply for longer than two years from consummation;
- Under the terms of the loan, the penalty will not apply if the source of the prepayment funds is a refinancing by the same creditor or an affiliate; and
- The amount of the periodic payment of principal and/or interest is fixed for the four years following consummation. n6

Third, the creditor must establish an escrow account before consummation for the payment of property taxes and premiums for mortgage-related insurance, insurance covering the loss or damage to the home, or insurance protecting the creditor against the consumer's default or other credit loss for all covered first lien loans required by the creditor. n7 A premium for optional insurance need not be escrowed. n8

The escrow account must remain in place for the life of the loan, unless cancelled by the consumer. Regulation Z allows the consumer to cancel the escrow account by tendering a dated written request to the creditor or servicer at any time after one year from consummation. n9

Fourth, as with HOEPA loans, the creditor cannot structure a home-secured loan as an open-end plan to evade the higher-priced loan protections. n10

[4] Remedies

The Board implemented this regulation under the authority granted to it by Congress in section 1639(l). n11 This section requires the Board to prohibit acts or practices in connection with mortgage loans that the Board finds to be unfair, deceptive, or designed to evade the provisions of this section. n12 In the Supplementary Information accompanying the proposed regulation, the Board listed the remedies it believes are available under section 1640 for a creditor violation of the substantive rules that appear in sections 226.35 and 226.36 of Regulation Z. These include:

- Actual damages under section 1640(a)(1);
- Statutory damages of up to $2,000 under section 1640(a)(2), capped in a class action;
- Special statutory damages for a section 1639 violation of all the sum of all finance charges and fees paid by the consumer; and
- attorney fees and costs n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection ActBanking LawConsumer ProtectionBanking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosure

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. Z § 226.35; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603-44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(3); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. Z § 226.35(a)(1); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Reg. Z § 226.35(a)(1); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) ; Official Staff Commentary § 226.35(a)(2)-3; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,613 (July 30, 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(1); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(2); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,603 (July 30, 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(3); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Official Staff Commentary § 226.35(b)(3)(i)-3; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,613 (July 30, 2008) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(3)(iii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. Z § 226.35(b)(4); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Supplementary Information accompanying the final regulation. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,529, 44,536, 44,539, 44,557 (July 30, 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(l)(2)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. 73 Fed. Reg. 1,672, 1,716-1,717 (Jan. 9, 2008) .

28 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 2 High Rate Home Equity Loan Protections

1-2 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 2.08

§ 2.08 Loans Secured by the Consumer's Principal Dwelling: Prohibited Acts or Practices

[1] Introduction

On July 30, 2008, the Federal Reserve Board announced expanded regulation of most loans secured by the consumer's principal dwelling originated in all segments of the mortgage market. This rule appears in a new section of Regulation Z. n1 It extends to creditors, mortgage brokers, and servicers. The rule addresses abuses related to coerced appraisals and to servicing practices involving the dilatory crediting of payments, the pyramiding of late fees, and the tardy response to requests for payoff statements. Home equity lines of credit and loans not secured by the consumer's principal dwelling are the only types of consumer mortgage loans not covered. n2

The Supplementary Information in the Federal Register discusses the background, relevant data, and rationale supporting the Board's actions. Section 226.36 is effective for new transactions for which the creditor receives an application on or after October 1, 2009, except for the servicer rules which apply to all covered loans serviced on or after October 1, 2009.

[2] Coercion of Appraisers

Regulation Z prohibits creditors, mortgage brokers, and their affiliates from directly or indirectly coercing, influencing, or encouraging any appraiser to misstate or misrepresent the value of the consumer's principal home when appraised in connection with a consumer credit transaction secured by that property. n3 This rule represents the first time the Board has regulated mortgage brokers.

Examples of actions that violate the coercion prohibition include:

- Implying to an appraiser that current or future use of the appraiser depends on the value the appraiser sets for the consumer's dwelling; n4

- Excluding an appraiser from consideration of future use because the appraiser reports a value of the home that does not meet or exceed a minimum threshold; n5

- Informing the appraiser of a minimum reported value of a consumer's principal dwelling that is needed to approve the loan; n6

- Failing to pay the appraiser because the appraiser did not value the home at or above a certain amount; n7 and

- Conditioning an appraiser's compensation on loan consummation. n8

If a creditor knows, at or before loan consummation, that a violation of this rule occurred, it may not extend credit based upon that appraisal, unless the creditor documents that it acted with reasonable diligence to determine that the appraisal does not materially misstate or misrepresent the value of the dwelling. n9 The creditor is deemed to have acted with reasonable diligence if it relies upon an appraisal other than the one involving the violation to extend the credit. n10 A misstatement or misrepresentation is not "material" if it does not affect the credit decision or the terms on which the credit is extended. n11

[3] Servicing Practices

For the first time, Regulation Z addresses certain activities of "servicers." The new rule covers three practices.

First, a servicer must credit payments to the consumer's loan account as of the date of receipt. n12 The servicer need only credit the payment as of the date of receipt. It need not actually post the payment on the date of receipt. n13

There are two exceptions to this "same-day" requirement: (1) when a delay in posting does not result in any charge to the consumer or in the reporting of negative information to a consumer reporting agency; n14 and (2) when a servicer specifies in writing requirements for the consumer to follow in making payments but accepts a payment that does not conform to these requirements. n15 In this latter case, the servicer must credit the nonconforming payment within five days after receipt.

The date of receipt is the date when the payment (in whatever form) reaches the servicer. n16

Second, a servicer cannot impose any late or delinquency fee when the only delinquency is attributable to the late or delinquency fee itself and the payment is otherwise a full payment for the applicable period and is paid on its due date or during an applicable grace period. n17

Third, a servicer must provide an accurate statement of the amount that would be necessary to pay off an account in full as of a specific date within a reasonable time of the receipt of a request from a consumer or the consumer's representative. n18 Payoff statements must be accurate when issued. n19

[4] Remedies

The Board implemented this regulation under the authority granted to it by Congress in section 1639(l). n20 This section requires the Board to prohibit acts or practices in connection with mortgage loans that the Board finds to be unfair, deceptive, or designed to evade the provisions of this section. n21 In the Supplementary Information accompanying the proposed regulation, the Board listed the remedies it believes are available under section 1640 for a creditor violation of the substantive rules that appear in sections 226.35 and 226.36 of Regulation Z. These include:

- Actual damages under section 1640(a)(1);

- Statutory damages of up to $2,000 under section 1640(a)(2), capped in a class action;

- Special statutory damages for a section 1639 violation of all the sum of all finance charges and fees paid by the consumer; and

- Attorney fees and costs. n22

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawFinancingFederal RegulationsHome Owners Equity Protection ActBanking LawConsumer ProtectionBanking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosure

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. Z § 226.36; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Reg. Z § 226.36; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1)(i)(A); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1)(i)(B); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1)(i)(C); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1)(i)(D); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(1)(i)(E); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Reg. Z § 226.36(b)(2); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(b)(2)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(b)(2)-2; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Reg. Z § 226.36(c)(1)(i); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(c)(1)(i)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. Z § 226.36(c)(1)(i); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) ; Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(c)(1)(i)-1; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. Z § 226.36(c)(2); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(c)(1)(i)-3; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Reg. Z § 226.36(c)(1)(ii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Reg. Z § 226.36(c)(1)(iii); 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,604 (July 30, 2008) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Official Staff Commentary § 226.36(c)(1)(iii)-4; 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,614 (July 30, 2008) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Supplementary Information accompanying the final regulation. 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,529, 44,563, 44,566, 44,570 n.119, 44,572 (July 30, 2008) .

(n21)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(l)(2)(A).

(n22)Footnote 22. 73 Fed. Reg. 1,672, 1,716-1,717 (Jan. 9, 2008) .

29 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual 3.syn

§ 3.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3: The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

§ 3.01 Introduction to the Consumer Leasing Act and Repossessions of Automobile Leases

§ 3.02 Scope of the CLA

[1] Leases That Exceed Four Months

[2] Leases for Less Than $25,000

[3] CLA Does Not Apply to Credit Sales

[4] Consumer Leases Only

[5] CLA Applies to Lessors, Arrangers of Leases, Certain Assignees

[6] Real Property Leases Are Not Covered

[7] Other Exempt Property

§ 3.03 Required Lease Disclosures Under the CLA

[1] Timing and Form of Disclosures

[a] Old Regulation Requirements

[b] New Regulation Requirements

[c] State Disclosure Statutes

[2] Specific Required Disclosures

[a] Description of Property

[b] Payments Made at Lease Consummation

[c] The Schedule and Amount of Lease Payments

[d] Official Fees and Taxes

[e] Other Charges

[f] Insurance

[g] Identification of Express Warranties

[h] Party Responsible for Maintenance; Excess Wear and Use

[i] Security Interest

[j] Late Payment and Default Charges

[k] Purchase Option

[l] Interest on Security Deposit

[m] Liability for Difference Between Estimated and Realized Value

[n] Right to an Appraisal

[o] Initial Capitalized Cost, Sticker Price and Residual Value

[p] Total of Payments

[q] Special Open-End Lease Requirements

[r] Early Termination and Default Charges

[3] Common Closed-End Automobile Lease Disclosure Violations

[a] Trade-Ins and Down Payments

[b] Official Fees and Taxes

[c] Express Warranties

[d] Excess Mileage

[e] Purchase Option

[f] Failure to Define Key Terms Used to Compute Early Termination or Default Charges

[g] Early Termination Formulas Not Clearly Disclosed

[h] Failure to Disclose Penalty at Both Voluntary and Involuntary Early Termination

[i] Failure to Follow Disclosed Termination Methodology

[4] Regulation M's Treatment of Electronic Disclosures

[5] Remedies: Disclosure Violations

§ 3.04 Required Advertising Disclosures

§ 3.05 Early Termination and Default Penalties

[1] Applicable Laws

[a] Consumer Leasing Act

[b] UCC Article 2A and Common Law Contract Principles

[c] State Leasing Statutes

[d] State Deceptive Practices Legislation

[e] Other Theories in the Nature of Fraud

[f] Unconscionability

[2] Early Termination Charges Based on an Adjusted Lease Balance

[3] Early Termination Charges Based on the Remaining Payments

[4] Remedies: Unreasonable Early Termination Penalties

§ 3.06 Remedies for CLA Violations

§ 3.07 Procedural Issues and Defenses

[1] Statute of Limitations

[2] Jurisdiction

[3] Leasing Act Statutory Defenses

[a] Assignee Liability

[b] Correction Defense

[c] Bona Fide Error Defense

[d] Good Faith Conformity With FRB Rulings and Official Interpretations

§ 3.08 Repossession Issues

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.01

§ 3.01 Introduction to the Consumer Leasing Act and Repossessions of Automobile Leases

Many of the most important consumer remedies for leasing abuses can be found in the federal Consumer Leasing Act ("CLA"). n1 There are two major sources of CLA law beside the statute itself and existing case law. The first is Federal Reserve Board ("FRB") Regulation M on Consumer Leasing, n2 including model forms and instructions. This regulation is found at 12 C.F.R. Part 213. The second source of CLA law is the FRB Official Staff Commentary on Regulation M.

The FRB in 1996 issued a new Rule to amend Regulation M on Leasing, containing the most significant changes to the Regulation since its enactment. n3 The New Regulation was effective October 31, 1996, but compliance was optional until January 1, 1998. n4 The Commentary has also been updated. n5

All leases signed and advertised disseminated beginning January 1, 1998 were required to comply with the New Regulation. However, because compliance with the New Regulation was optional until that time, this volume will cover significant issues in both the former regulation and the New Regulation. n6

The only other primary source of precedent is the relatively small number of state and federal cases interpreting the Act. Truth in Lending ("TIL") case law is useful precedent for certain CLA issues, particularly those involving remedies and defenses. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1667 et seq. The Consumer Leasing Act [hereinafter CLA] is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. Regulation M is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. 61 Fed. Reg. 52,246-52,281 (Oct. 7, 1996) , amended by 62 Fed. Reg. 15,364 (Apr. 1, 1997) and by 63 Fed. Reg. 52,107 (Sept. 29, 1998) . Further proposed changes to this Regulation concerning electronic disclosures were published for comment at 63 Fed. Reg. 14,538 (Mar. 25, 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 62 Fed. Reg. 51,006 (Sept. 30, 1997) , as corrected by 62 Fed. Reg. 53,733 (Oct. 16, 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 62 Fed. Reg. 16,053 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Note also that this chapter covers the topic of automobile and other consumer leases. It does not cover leases of real property, apartments, or mobile home park space. It also does not deal with rent-to-own transactions which are covered in Ch. 6, § 6.05[5], and Ch. 7 infra .

(n7)Footnote 7. For further discussion of Truth in Lending [hereinafter TIL], see Ch. 1 supra.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.02

§ 3.02 Scope of the CLA

The CLA applies to the following leases:

[1] Leases That Exceed Four Months n1

If a lease is terminable without penalty before four months have expired, the courts have held that such a lease is not covered by the Act. n2 For example, a majority of courts have held that rent-to-own appliance ("RTO") leases that are terminable at any time without penalty are not covered by the Act. n3

[2] Leases for Less Than $25,000

The CLA does not apply to leases where the total contractual obligation exceeds $25,000. n4 The "total contractual obligation" is not defined in the CLA, but probably includes the total of lease payments plus any trade-in allowance or initial payment.

[3] CLA Does Not Apply to Credit Sales

The CLA does not apply to transactions that meet all of TIL's technical requirements for a credit sale. For example, where the lessor/creditor does not satisfy TIL's definition of "creditor," the transaction cannot be a credit sale, n5 but is instead a lease as long as it otherwise meets the CLA requirements for a lease. n6

[4] Consumer Leases Only

The CLA applies only to "consumer leases," defined as being primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. n7 Only natural persons are protected under the CLA. n8

[5] CLA Applies to Lessors, Arrangers of Leases, Certain Assignees

The CLA only applies to lessors who regularly engage in leasing, offering to lease, or arranging to lease under a consumer lease. n9 "Arranging to lease" means to provide or offer to provide a lease which will be extended by another whereby the arranger receives a fee or other tangible consideration or participates in the preparation of the lease documents. n10 The term "lessor" applies not only to the lessor, but to assignees of the lessor, if the assignees are substantially involved in the transaction. n11 An automobile dealer, for example, is a lessor under the Act if it is the originating lessor, even if it immediately assigns the lease to the party that drafted the lease and lease disclosures. n12

A federal trial court in BMW Financial Services has reached the preposterous conclusion that a creditor cannot at the same time be a lessor and an assignee, within the meaning of those terms in the CLA, but that, for some CLA requirements, it is a lessor, and for others it is an assignee. n13 When it is a lessor, it can be liable for that CLA violation, but when it is treated as an assignee, it can only be liable for that violation if it is apparent on the face of the lease.

For one thing, this flies in the face of clear United States Supreme Court precedent in Cenance discussing the status of assignees involved in a credit sale--at the time, creditor was defined under TIL in the same way as lessor is defined in the CLA today. The Supreme Court found that the auto financer could be both a creditor and an assignee at the same time, and that such a creditor is liable for all disclosure violations, even if it would not be so if it merely were just an assignee. n14 It is particularly strange that the BMW court ignores Cenance because the BMW court quotes from the first sentence of a Commentary provision, where Cenance is specifically referenced in the second sentence of that same provision. n15

The BMW court also accepts that the creditor (BMW Financial Services) was substantially involved in the lease, meeting the Cenance test. It also admits that the Second Circuit and federal courts in its own federal district have found assignees to be lessors under this CLA test. n16 Nevertheless, the court decides to create its own paradigm, classifying the finance company either as a lessor or as an assignee separately for each of the alleged CLA violations. It then concludes that BMW is a lessor for some violations, but an assignee for others. It is hard to believe that another court would follow this tortured and confusing logic.

Clearly, the correct interpretation followed by all other courts is that some assignees are lessors and some are not. When an assignee is not, it is only liable as an assignee. When the assignee is also a lessor, it is liable also as a lessor, and not just as an assignee.

[6] Real Property Leases Are Not Covered n17

The determination as to whether mobile homes, houseboats, or other items are real or personal property is to be based on the law of the state where the property is situated at the time the property is offered for lease. n18

[7] Other Exempt Property

The FRB Official Staff Commentary to Regulation M exempts certain specific leases from the Act's coverage. Safety deposit box leases are exempted. n19 So are the following leases incidental to a service: home entertainment systems requiring the consumer to lease equipment that enables a television to receive the transmitted programming; propane gas service where the consumer must lease a propane tank to receive the service; and burglar alarm systems requiring the installation of leased equipment that triggers a telephone call when a home is burglarized. n20

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer Leasing

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Smith v. ABC Rental Sys. of New Orleans, Inc., 618 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980) , aff'g 491

F. Supp. 127 (E.D. La. 1978) ; Givens v. Rent-A-Center, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 160 (S.D. Ala. 1988) , aff'd, 885 F.2d 879 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ch. 6, *§ 6.05[5]*and Ch. 7 infra , for discussion of rent-to-own transactions.

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(1). See also Grion v. Milford Gateway, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 50,430 (D. Conn. 1994); Delta Leasing Servs. Corp. v. Gentile, 1994 Conn. Super. LEXIS 564 (Mar. 1 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Ayers v. National Vehicle Mgmt. Co., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16635 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 23 1992) . For a further discussion of TIL and the definition of creditor, see § 1.03[1] supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Ayers v. National Vehicle Mgmt. Co., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16635 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 23 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(1). See Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.2(a)(3) for a definition of agricultural purposes; Clement v. American Honda Fin. Corp., 145 F. Supp. 2d 206 (D. Conn. 2001) (consumer's submission of documentary evidence not rebutted by lessor sufficient to prove lease for consumer purposes). See also Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(e)-5, reprinted in 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(1); Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.2(a)(9); Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(j)-1, reprinted in 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(3).

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.2(a)(4). Cf. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(h)-2, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Jordan v. Schaumburg Toyota, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2553 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 24, 1999) ; Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(h)-3, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) . See also Kennedy v. BMW Financial Services, N.A., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18031 (D. Conn. Oct. 3, 2003) (refusing to dismiss claim against assignee). But cf. Bescos v. Bank of Am., 105 Cal. App. 4th 378 (2003) (court finds no coverage under state leasing law because consumer did not prove assignee bank's substantial involvement, where consumer only proved that bank had reviewed the consumer's application to determine credit-worthiness).

(n12)Footnote 12. Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5548 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 21, 1999) , rev'd on other grounds, 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 533 U.S. 929 (2001) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Kennedy v. BMW Financial Services, 363 F. Supp. 2d 110 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Cenance, 452 U.S. 155 (1981) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(h)-3.

(n16)Footnote 16. Citing Turner v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 180 F.3d 451 (2d Cir. 1999) ; Hildabrand v. DiFeo Partnership, 89 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Conn. 2000) ; Pettola v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 44 F. Supp. 2d 442 (D. Conn. 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 1667(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(e)-8, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(e)-7, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,059 (Apr. 4, 1997) . See also Ysasi v. Nucentrix Broadband Networks, Inc., 205 F. Supp. 2d 683 (S.D. Tex. 2002) (consumer could not avoid television transmission equipment exemption by narrowing claim to remote control accompanying that equipment).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.03

§ 3.03 Required Lease Disclosures Under the CLA

[1] Timing and Form of Disclosures

[a] Old Regulation Requirements

The Old Regulation M mandates the disclosure of fifteen different terms, as applicable. These are discussed below in § 3.03[2]. The timing and form of the disclosures are also prescribed by the regulations and discussed below.

Under the Old Regulation, the disclosures must be made prior to the lease's consummation (as defined by state law), n1 on a dated written statement identifying the lessor and lessee, n2 and a copy of the statement must be given to the lessee at that time. n3 While the requirement of a written statement is met if the disclosures are included in the lease itself, n4 it is not enough if the disclosures appear on the original of the lease, but not on the copy provided to the consumer. n5 The disclosures must be on one page only--interpreted to mean both sides of one page n6--and above the place for the lessee's signature. n7

Lease disclosures must be clear, conspicuous, and in meaningful sequence, n8 so as to be in a reasonably understood form. n9 Regulation M contains model forms that meet this standard, n10 but lessors need not use the model forms. n11 All disclosures must be made in English, except in Puerto Rico, n12 but foreign language translations that do not contradict the English version are permitted where the lessor so chooses or where federal or state law so requires. n13

Where a lessor does not know information that must be disclosed, the lessor can label the information as an estimate or approximation and provide an estimate or approximation. This must be a reasonable estimate. n14

A lease being renegotiated or extended is considered a new lease subject to all disclosure requirements. n15

[b] New Regulation Requirements

As discussed above, there have been a number of important changes in the CLA regulations. With respect to the timing and form of required disclosures, New Regulation section 213.3(a) replaces Old Regulation section 213.4(a). The disclosures must continue to be made clearly and conspicuously, but the requirement of a meaningful sequence is deleted. Instead, the regulation sets out a particular order for most disclosures within a segregated box, and does not require a meaningful sequence for the non-segregated, required disclosures.

In addition, the New Regulation deletes the requirement that disclosures be on one page and above the consumer's signature, in a certain type size. n16 Nevertheless, the FRB indicates that the clear and conspicuous standard provides consumers with the same protection as these deleted requirements.

The English language requirement from the Old Regulation is liberalized. The disclosures may be made in a language other than English, provided that they are made available in English upon the consumer's request. n17

The FRB has issued an interim rule on Regulation M electronic disclosures, n18 effective on March 30, 2001, but with compliance voluntary until some future date that the FRB has not yet specified. n19 Because of this, few, if any, lessors are taking advantage of the interim rule to make electronic disclosures.

The interim rule allows any disclosure that must be in writing under Regulation M to be made electronically. n20 With the exception of the advertising disclosures, the lessor must first obtain the consumer's consent and the lessee must demonstrate the ability to access the information electronically. n21 The disclosure can be e-mailed to the consumer or posted on a website, if the consumer is notified of the posting and the information is left on the website for at least ninety days. n22

The New Regulation substantially reorganizes and changes the format of disclosure requirements. The requirement that the disclosures be made prior to consummation has been moved to section 213.3(a)(3). A new requirement is that the disclosures be made in a form the consumer may keep. n23

One of the most significant changes in the New Regulation is the requirement that enumerated disclosures be segregated from the rest of the required disclosures and from other lease information. The segregated disclosure (commonly called the federal box) must be separate from other information and shall contain only the following information:

a) The amount due at lease signing (which includes for automobile leases both the itemization of the amount due and how the amount due will be paid);

b) The payment schedule and total of periodic payments;

c) Other charges;

d) Total of payments;

e) The eleven step payment calculation;

f) The early termination notice (i.e., the warning that the charge can be substantial, not the actual disclosure of the early termination method);

g) The statement referencing the other required disclosures found elsewhere on the disclosure form;

h) The warning and amount or method of determining the charges for excessive wear or use; and

i) The end of term purchase option price (not the purchase option price earlier in the lease).

The headings, content, and format for the segregated disclosures shall be in a manner substantially similar to the applicable model form. No additional information can be included in the segregated box. Even information required by state law cannot be included. n24

Lessors can get into trouble when they re-write a vehicle transaction. Dealers may provide the vehicle to the consumer contingent on the financing going through, then cancel the transaction, but then re-write the transaction at some later time as a lease on terms less favorable to the consumer. The dealer will have violated the CLA if it backdates that lease to when the consumer received the vehicle, so that the disclosures are made at a date well after the dealer states the transaction was consummated. n25 Where the lessor offers a lease contingent on the lease being assigned, but the lessor later cancels the transaction because the assignment did not go through, then the lessor cannot defend a disclosure violation by arguing that the lease was never finalized. The obligation to make disclosures is not dependent on the signing of a written agreement or on whether a condition to the lease has been met. n26

[c] State Disclosure Statutes

In the mid and late 1990s, a number of states enacted consumer leasing or motor vehicle leasing laws, many of which set out disclosure requirements. States with statutes setting out leasing disclosure requirements include California, n27 Colorado, n28 Connecticut, n29 District of Columbia, n30 Florida, n31 Hawaii, n32 Illinois, n33 Indiana, n34 Iowa, n35 Kansas, n36 Louisiana, n37 Maine, n38 Maryland, n39 Michigan, n40 New Hampshire, n41 New Jersey, n42 New York, n43 Oklahoma, n44 South Carolina, n45 Washington, n46 West Virginia, n47 and Wisconsin. n48

These statutes may have additional disclosure provisions not required by Regulation M; they may apply to leases outside the scope of the CLA (such as leases over $25,000 n49 they may have longer or different limitation periods n50 and they may offer a different remedial scheme (such as treble damages and enhanced damages if the consumer is over 62 years old. n51 There is little uniformity among state statutes, and the state statutes themselves were frequently amended in the late 1990s to comply with current Regulation M and for other reasons. Consequently, practitioners should refer to the version of their state statute, if any, in effect at the time the lease was signed.

[2] Specific Required Disclosures

The CLA and Regulation M set out a number of disclosures that are required in consumer leases. The required disclosures are summarized below.

[a] Description of Property n52

The lessor must provide a brief description of the leased property sufficient to identify the property to both the lessor and lessee. n53 The FRB's model forms specify for vehicle leases the vehicle's year, make, model, body style, and vehicle identification number. n54 The instructions to the FRB model forms indicate that the vehicle identification number is not required. The form for furniture leases lists the item's name, color, stock number, manufacturer and quantity. n55

A lease that misidentifies the property should violate the description requirement. For example, the wrong vehicle identification number or model should trigger a CLA violation. n56

[b] Payments Made at Lease Consummation

Under the Old Regulation, the lessor must disclose the total amount to be paid at lease consummation, identifying the purposes to which that payment is made. n57 Examples are refundable security deposits, advance lease payments, trade-in allowances, mechanical breakdown protection, registration fees, and capitalized cost reductions. n58

Only payments paid at consummation should be disclosed here; when consummation occurs is determined by state law. n59 The trade-in amount must be included in the total due at lease consummation. n60

This disclosure requirement has been substantially changed under the New Regulation, and has been renumbered section 213.4(b), from section 213.4(g)(2). The New Regulation requires an itemization by type and also of amount of all amounts to be paid prior to or at lease signing. The Old Regulation only required a total amount. Note, however, that where a consumer seeks waiver of some of the amount due at lease inception, the lessor's agreement to do so does not make the prior disclosed amount inaccurate or lead to a CLA violation. n61

[c] The Schedule and Amount of Lease Payments

The lessor must disclose the number of lease payments, the amount of each payment, the due dates, and the total of such periodic payments. n62 The disclosure must be placed among the segregated disclosures in a form that is substantially similar to the FRB model forms. n63 The model forms provide sample language. n64

[d] Official Fees and Taxes

The lessor must disclose the total amount that will be payable during the entire lease term for official fees, registration, certificate of title, license fees, or taxes. n65 If this amount is not known, the lessor must use a good faith estimate. n66

It is not enough for the lessor to disclose the amount of different fees. The lease must indicate the total amount of all of these different figures. Consumers may not be asked to do this arithmetic for themselves. n67 The Commentary provides amplification as to how certain taxes are to be treated. Taxes paid at lease signing are disclosed both as an amount paid at lease signing and as part of the total of taxes. n68 Taxes that are part of a periodic payment are disclosed as part of the total of taxes, as part of the total of periodic payments, and as part of the disclosure of the components of the periodic payment. n69

[e] Other Charges

Lessors are required also to disclose other charges that are not included in the periodic payments n70 or included in the payments at consummation or elsewhere. n71 If the total states that there are no "other" charges, then it is a CLA violation to assess a disposition fee or some other fee that must be treated as an "other" charge. n72

[f] Insurance

The lessor must briefly identify required insurance in connection with the lease: the types and amount of coverage and the cost to the consumer if provided by the lessor, or the types and amounts of coverage required to be purchased by the consumer. n73

[g] Identification of Express Warranties

The lessor must identify express warranties made by the lessor or manufacturer with respect to the leased property. n74 Typically, the lessor makes no warranties, and, instead, disclaims any warranties. Although disclosure of such a disclaimer is not required under the CLA, its disclosure is permitted as additional information. n75

[h] Party Responsible for Maintenance; Excess Wear and Use

The lease must disclose which party, usually the consumer, is responsible for maintaining or servicing the property, with a brief statement of that responsibility. n76

This provision has been changed in some respects. The New Regulation is renumbered section 213.4(h) from section 213.4(g)(8), and certain stylistic changes have been made. The New Regulation also states more clearly that the standards disclosed must be reasonable. Clear disclosure of unreasonable standards for wear and use should be a disclosure violation.

In addition, a new requirement for motor vehicle leases n77 provides that a notice substantially similar to the following appear in the segregated portion of the disclosures: "Excessive Wear and Use. You may be charged for excessive wear based on our standards for normal use." This notice also must specify the amount or method for determining any charge for excess mileage. That method must be reasonable. n78

In a surprising number of cases, there is confusion over the actual charge per mile, or, more likely, the number of miles before an excess mileage charge kicks in. The consumer's copy of a lease, for example, may contain no mileage limit or a high one. The copy that is forwarded to the lease's assignee (the finance company typically viewed as the lessor) may have a different number completely. Such alterations and forgeries should be actionable under common law theories, n79 and may also violate the CLA.

[i] Security Interest

The lessor must disclose any security interest in connection with the lease (other than the security deposit), clearly identifying the collateral. n80 The lessor's security interest in the leased property has to be disclosed as a security interest if it is treated as such under state law. n81

[j] Late Payment and Default Charges

Penalties or other charges for delinquency, default, or late payment must be disclosed. n82 The disclosed charges must be reasonable in amount. n83 Any default charge must also be disclosed.

The New Regulation is renumbered section 213.4(q) from section 213.4(g)(10), and contains a significant change. The New Regulation explicitly states that disclosed charges for default, delinquency and late payment must be reasonable. Thus, even a clear disclosure of unreasonable charges should be a disclosure violation.

[k] Purchase Option

The lease must state whether or not the consumer has the option to purchase the leased property. n84 If there is no such option, it is not enough to leave the lease silent on this issue; the lease must contain a specific statement indicating either that there is or is not a purchase option. n85

If there is a purchase option, the disclosure must identify whether that option exists at the end of the lease or earlier or both. Some lessors may also charge a fee when consumers exercise the purchase option. The lessor must include this fee in the purchase option disclosure. n86

[l] Interest on Security Deposit

In what apparently is a widespread industry practice, auto lessors require consumers to provide a security deposit at the beginning of the lease, but retain the interest on that deposit for themselves. Two 1996 federal court decisions have held that unless the lease specifies otherwise, Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC") Article 9 requires that lessors must repay that interest to the consumer. n87 These two courts have also held that the undisclosed failure to repay this interest to the consumer violates the CLA, and adequately states a UDAP claim. These two rulings triggered a number of class action filings against many of the major national lessors. Judicial response has been quite negative, consistently rejecting consumer claims in this area. n88

Because the security deposit creates an Article 9 security interest, Article 9 rules apply to the deposit. Consequently, lessors must comply with UCC section 9-207(c), which requires that any profit derived from the collateral while the secured party retains the collateral be remitted to the consumer unless the parties otherwise agreed.

Even though virtually no lessor returns interest on security deposits to consumers, not every consumer will have a CLA claim against a lessor. If the lease contains a provision that the lessor will retain the interest on the security deposit, then the lessor is entitled to retain this interest, unless state law says otherwise. Several states have enacted a specific statute dealing with the treatment of security deposits in personal property leases. n89

Nevertheless, as part of judicial hostility to consumer actions in this area, courts have interpreted these statutes quite narrowly or found other ways to avoid the applicability of these laws. n90 For example, the New York statute, since amended, required the deposit to be segregated and deposited with a bank, with any accrued interest to go to the lessee. n91 But a court has interpreted this as not requiring the lessor to deposit the security deposit in an interest bearing account. Consequently, Ford could deposit the money in a non-interest bearing account, even though the bank reciprocated for this deposit by providing certain monetary benefits to Ford. The court found these monetary benefits not to be interest. n92 That statute has now been amended to require that deposits of $750 or more must be held in interest bearing accounts; even this statute will offer little protection to the lessee since most automobile lease security deposits are less than $750. The CLA requires that this "charge" be properly disclosed. No court has yet reached the issue of how this charge must be disclosed.

Secondly, consumers will have CLA claims if they terminated the lease within one year of filing the CLA claim. Otherwise, they are prevented from bringing an affirmative CLA action by the CLA's statute of limitations, though the consumer can bring the action by way of recoupment against the lessor's collection action even after the one-year limitation period has expired.

[m] Liability for Difference Between Estimated and Realized Value

The lessor must state, if it is the case, that the consumer will be liable, at early termination or at the end of the lease, for the difference between the property's estimated value and its realized value. n93 Under the new law, this provision is renumbered section 213.4(k) from section 213.4(g)(13), but contains only minor stylistic changes.

[n] Right to an Appraisal

Whenever the consumer's liability at either early termination or at the end of the lease term is based on the estimated value of the leased property, the lessor must disclose the consumer's right to obtain a mutually binding appraisal of the car's resale value. n94 Under the new law, this section, renumbered section 213.4(l) from section 213.4(g)(14), contains stylistic changes and one significant clarification. The New Regulation applies if the early termination or scheduled termination liability is based on a "realized" value, while the Old Regulation triggered the disclosure if liability is based on an "estimated" value.

[o] Initial Capitalized Cost, Sticker Price and Residual Value

Under the Old Regulation, the CLA does not explicitly require for closed-end leases the disclosure of a car's initial capitalized cost, sticker price, or expected residual value. Nevertheless, the method of computing early termination charges and purchase option prices must be disclosed. To the extent to which these methods require the consumer to compute the initial capitalized cost, sticker price, or expected residual value, then the lease will have to disclose these numbers (or at least a method for computing these numbers). In addition, there is a growing trend for state laws to require disclosure of some or all of these terms.

The most significant change in the New Regulation is a completely new section 213.4(f). This provision only applies to motor vehicle leases. The lessor must include in the segregated box, in a form similar to that found in the Model Forms, a series of eleven disclosures that show the derivation of the monthly payment amount: the gross capitalized cost, capitalized cost reductions, the adjusted capitalized cost, the residual value, depreciation and other amortized costs, rent charges, the total of base periodic payments, the lease term, the base periodic payment, the itemization of the periodic payment, and the total periodic payment. n95

One issue that has been raised with respect to the gross capitalized cost is the propriety of dealers adding as much as $450 to the gross capitalized cost for an "acquisition charge." This is a charge the assignee assesses to the dealer, who passes it on in turn to the consumer. Under TIL, this would be considered a finance charge, but Regulation M does not explicitly state whether this should be treated as part of the gross capitalized cost or part of a rent charge. In one case, the lessor included it in the gross capitalized cost and the court found this permissible. n96

Because there is so little guidance as to whether items should go into the rent charge or the capitalized cost, the consumer should focus instead on the implication of the lessor including this in the capitalized cost. It means that the full acquisition charge (e.g., $450) must be paid even at early termination, and there is no rebate for unearned acquisition charges. The issue is whether this is a reasonable early termination charge or whether the assignee lessor should rebate some of this charge to the consumer if the lease is terminated early.

[p] Total of Payments

This is a new disclosure requirement that is different from, and in addition to, the total of periodic payments. The lessor must disclose, in the segregated section of the disclosure, the total of payments, with a description such as "the amount you will have paid by the end of the lease." n97 This is computed as the amount due at lease signing or delivery (minus the security deposit or other refundable amount), the total of periodic payments (not including any periodic payment included in the amount due at lease signing), and the total of other charges (as disclosed pursuant to section 213.4(d)).

[q] Special Open-End Lease Requirements

At the time the CLA was enacted, most auto leases were open-ended, and it was largely open-end lease abuses to which the CLA was targeted. Today few leases are open end, and, thus, the CLA's special open-end disclosures usually are not directly relevant.

For open-end leases, the lessor must disclose the value of the property at lease consummation, the total lease obligation, and the difference between them. n98 The total lease obligation includes down payments, trade-ins and similar non-refundable amounts paid at consummation, the scheduled periodic lease payments, plus the estimated value of the leased property at the end of the lease term. n99

For open-end leases only, the lessor must also disclose that there is a rebuttable presumption that the estimated value of the property at the end of the lease term is unreasonable and not in good faith to the extent to which it exceeds the realized value by more than three times the average monthly payment. n100 The lessor must also disclose that it cannot collect such excess liability of more than three times the average monthly payment (except for unreasonable wear or use) unless the lessor brings a successful court action where the lessor pays the lessee's attorney fees. n101 The lessor must finally disclose that the lessee can still make any mutually agreeable final adjustment for excess liability. n102

In addition, the lessor must disclose the rent and other charges paid by the lessee and required by the lessor as an incident to the lease transaction. These should be described with terms similar to "the total amount of rent and other charges imposed in connection with your lease." n103 This disclosure must be placed among the segregated disclosures, in a form that is substantially similar to the FRB model forms. n104

The New Regulation is renumbered section 213.4(m) from section 213.4(g)(15) and stylistic changes are made.

[r] Early Termination and Default Charges

One of the key issues in most lease cases is the early termination or default clause. The lessor must disclose the method of determining the amount of any penalty or charge for early termination n105 and for default. n106 A later section of this volume discusses the CLA requirement that the disclosed method must be reasonable. n107 This subsection only analyzes the requirement that the method be clearly disclosed. It is important to note that while issues have arisen as to whether a consumer has standing to challenge an early termination formula's substantive reasonableness where the formula is not enforced against that consumer, there is no question that any lessee can challenge an improper disclosure of an early termination or default formula. n108

Lessors cannot avoid this requirement by claiming that the consumer's obligation to pay all of the remaining payments in the lease is not an early termination charge, and thus need not be disclosed, because it is just what is owed under the lease. n109

The disclosure must indicate the conditions under which the consumer can terminate early, and the method of calculating any penalty. When default triggers early termination, then default charges for such early termination must be disclosed here as well. n110

There are some significant changes under the New Regulation. The New Regulation specifies that the disclosed amount must be reasonable. Disclosure of an unreasonable formula, even one that is clear and conspicuous, should be a disclosure violation. This has important practical consequences. While unreasonable early termination charges also violate a substantive CLA requirement, n111 some courts find that consumers do not have standing to challenge an unreasonable early termination charge (as a CLA substantive violation) if they have not suffered actual damage as a result of that charge. On the other hand, there can be no question but that actual damage is not a precondition to a challenge based on misdisclosure.

For motor vehicle leases, the lessor must now make two early termination disclosures. In the non-segregated disclosures, the lessor must describe the method of computing the early termination charge. In the segregated disclosures, information similar to the following must be provided: "Early Termination. You may have to pay a substantial charge if you end this lease early. The charge may be up to several thousand dollars. The actual charge will depend on when the lease is terminated. The earlier you end the lease, the greater this charge is likely to be."

Below is a brief list of potential disclosure problems concerning early termination and default charges. n112

a) Key numbers not defined, missing, or not clearly defined; n113

b) Formula requires consumer to perform numerous unnecessary computations; n114

c) Formula difficult to understand; n115

d) Does lease disclose penalty for both default and voluntary early termination? n116

The lease must specify exactly how the lease can be terminated early and what payments the lessee owes at that termination. n117 Nor can the lessor prohibit voluntary early termination in the lease, but then routinely allow lessees to terminate early. n118

e) Failure to apply in practice formula disclosed in lease.

The Seventh Circuit has ruled that an early termination formula is not properly disclosed where the lessor in practice uses a different formula. n119 This is the case even though the lessor's actual practice is more generous to consumers than the disclosed formula. For example, Nissan Motor Credit, realizing that its early termination formula sometimes charged consumers more than the total of all remaining payments, had a practice instead of charging the consumer all remaining payments on the lease or the number produced by its early termination formula, whichever is less. A federal court has found this methodology to violate the CLA because it is not the same methodology disclosed in the lease. n120

[3] Common Closed-End Automobile Lease Disclosure Violations

Consumer attorneys should particularly look for the following nine common lease disclosure violations.

[a] Trade-Ins and Down Payments

Make sure that the value of any trade-in or down payment is disclosed, n121 even where a dealer accepts the trade-in, but a financial institution is the actual lessor. Also, explore the existence of any manufacturer's rebates and how those were treated in the lease.

[b] Official Fees and Taxes

Lessors often trip up on the disclosure of total fees and taxes because the lessor's employee must compute a number and fill in a blank line. The disclosure is the total amount that will be payable during the entire lease term for fees, registration, taxes, and similar charges. n122

[c] Express Warranties

The lessor must identify any manufacturer and lessor warranties that go with the lease. n123 It is not enough for the lessor to disclaim its own warranties. Nor is it enough for the lessor to disclose that the lessor is assigning "the manufacturer's warranties, if any," or that there "may" be manufacturer's warranties. A federal court has recently ruled that a disclosure is defective where it states "to the extent the vehicle is still subject to the manufacturer's new vehicle warranty, Lessor assigns to you all the rights and remedies under that warranty, to the extent they are assignable." n124

[d] Excess Mileage

The charge for excess mileage must be reasonable. n125

[e] Purchase Option

Look for violations of the purchase option disclosure requirements. n126 The lessor must disclose the actual purchase option amount, not just a method of computing an amount.

[f] Failure to Define Key Terms Used to Compute Early Termination or Default Charges

The lessor must disclose the amount or method for computing early termination and default charges. Consequently, a formula for computing the early termination charge that includes terms not disclosed in the lease involves a CLA violation n127 because the lessee or an expert cannot determine the amount of the early termination charge by an examination of the lease.

The Third Circuit has carefully considered when a term used in the early termination formula must be defined. n128 The CLA requires the disclosure to be "clear" and the term "clear" means more than just legible, but must also include the ability to understand the formula specified in the disclosure. n129 While the early termination formula must be in "reasonably understandable form," it need not be within the understanding of the average consumer. n130 The inherent complexity of the formula must be considered, and requiring a disclosure to be understandable should not place substantive restrictions on the nature of the formula itself.

Consequently, the Third Circuit did not require that the term "constant yield method" or "rate implicit in the lease" be defined in the lease. These terms are capable of understanding and have a common meaning in the field.

On the other hand, the failure to specify the dollar value of the residual value is a CLA violation where knowledge of that value is required to compute the early termination charge. "An early termination clause that fails to reveal an otherwise unknowable variable used in determining an early termination penalty cannot be regarded as 'reasonably understandable' in any meaningful sense of the term." n131

[g] Early Termination Formulas Not Clearly Disclosed

A common lease disclosure violation is the failure to clearly disclose early termination formulas.

[h] Failure to Disclose Penalty at Both Voluntary and Involuntary Early Termination

The lessor must disclose the lessee's liability both when the lessee defaults and when the lessee terminates the lease voluntarily. n132

[i] Failure to Follow Disclosed Termination Methodology

In a significant number of cases, lessors utilize a different methodology in computing default and early termination penalties than that disclosed in the lease. This should be a disclosure violation, particularly where the deviation is part of the lessor's standard practice and is not a mere computational error. n133 It is not a defense to the disclosure violation that the lessor's actual computation practice is more lenient to the consumer than the penalty disclosed in the lease.

[4] Regulation M's Treatment of Electronic Disclosures

The FRB's interim rule on electronic lease disclosures n134 has been withdrawn and replaced with final changes to Regulation M, with compliance mandatory October 1, 2008. n135 For lease disclosures, the amended rule simply states that they may be provided the lessee in electronic form, subject to compliance with the consumer consent and other applicable provisions of the E-Sign Act. n136

[5] Remedies: Disclosure Violations

The CLA specifies that anyone failing to comply with the consumer lease disclosure requirement n137 is liable to the consumer as specified by the TIL remedy section. n138 Unlike TIL, any CLA disclosure violation leads to statutory damages. n139 In other words, even one minor disclosure violation, where there is no proof of actual damages, leads to a full statutory damage award. n140 In one case, Ford initiated a state court action for an excessive early termination charge. When the consumer raised a CLA counterclaim, Ford amended its complaint to seek only a fraction of the original amount sought, and then claimed that the consumer no longer had CLA standing, because the consumer was no longer being damaged. The Eleventh Circuit found the consumer in fact did have standing even if there were now no actual damages, in part because the consumer could seek statutory damages even in the absence of actual damages. n141

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingDisclosure

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(b)-2.

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1667a. While disclosure must always be clear and conspicuous, the words "lessor" and "lessee" need not be used when identifying these parties. See Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(a)(2)-2.

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Anderson v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 323 Md. 327, 593 A.2d 678 (Md. 1991) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(a)(2)(i).

(n6)Footnote 6. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(a)(2)-4.

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(a)(2). See also Nix v. Advance Leasing & Rent-a-Car, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,946 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 30, 1993).

(n8)Footnote 8. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(a)(1)-1.

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. pt. 213 app. C.

(n11)Footnote 11. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(a)(1)-1.

(n12)Footnote 12. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(a)(4).

(n13)Footnote 13. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(a)(4)-1.

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(d).

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(h). For exceptions to this requirement, see Regulation M, 12 C.F.R. section 213.4(h). Kennedy v. BMW Financial Services, 363 F. Supp. 2d 110 (D. Conn. 2005) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See 12 C.F.R. § 213.3, reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,259 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 12 C.F.R. § 213.3(a)(4), reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,259 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,322 (Mar. 30, 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 19. 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439, 41,440 (Aug. 8, 2001) .

(n20)Footnote 20. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,322 (Mar. 30, 2001) , adding § 213.6(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,322 (Mar. 30, 2001) , adding § 213.6(c) and adding Official Staff Commentary 213.6(b)-2ii.

(n22)Footnote 22. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,322 (Mar. 30, 2001) , adding § 213.6(d).

(n23)Footnote 23. 12 C.F.R. § 213.3(a), reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,259 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See Official Staff Commentary § 213.3(b)-1, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,060 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Jafri v. Lynch Ford, Clearinghouse No. 53,536 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 25, 2000).

(n26)Footnote 26. Dauti v. Hartford Auto Plaza, Ltd., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1953 (Feb. 16, 2001) , judgment entered, 213 F. Supp. 2d 116 (D. Conn. 2002) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Cal. Civ. Code § 2985.8 (amended by 1998 Cal. Laws ch. 800, compliance mandatory as of Mar. 1, 1998) (unique and detailed requirements).

(n28)Footnote 28. Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 5-2-311/-/313 (similar requirements as Old Regulation M).

(n29)Footnote 29. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 42-390 (effective July 1, 2003).

(n30)Footnote 30. D.C. Code Ann. § 28-3810 (minimal disclosure requirements).

(n31)Footnote 31. Fla. Stat. § 521 (as amended by 1998 Senate Bill 1366, effective July 1, 1998) (similar disclosures to New Regulation M).

(n32)Footnote 32. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 481L (14 point bold type disclosure of specified language, requirements as to non-English disclosures, and trade-ins).

(n33)Footnote 33. 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. § 636 (effective Jan. 1, 1997) (similar disclosures to New Regulation M).

(n34)Footnote 34. Ind. Code §§ 9-23-2.5-1 (as amended by 1998 Indiana Laws 467, effective July 1, 1998), 24-4.5-2-101 (same as New Regulation M).

(n35)Footnote 35. Iowa Code § 537.1101 (similar to Old Regulation M).

(n36)Footnote 36. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 16a-1-101 (administrator adopts regulations specifying disclosures; presently regulations consistent with Old Regulation M).

(n37)Footnote 37. La. Rev. Code § 9:3301 (places substantive limits on lease charges).

(n38)Footnote 38. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 9A, § 5-101 (similar to Old Regulation except requirement for capitalized cost disclosure); Maine Consumer Credit Code Regulation Z-2, Rule 240 (adopts Regulation M).

(n39)Footnote 39. Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 14-2001 (CLA disclosure requirements, and disclosure of capitalized cost).

(n40)Footnote 40. Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.991 (requiring notice of early termination balance only).

(n41)Footnote 41. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. ch. 361-D (disclosures similar to the new Regulation).

(n42)Footnote 42. N.J. Rev. Stat. § 56:12-60 (names and addresses of parties, date of execution, certain additional disclosures for purchase options, mileage limitations, availability of GAP insurance, and similar disclosures to those found under the New Regulation).

(n43)Footnote 43. N.Y. Pers. Prop. Law § 331 (CLA disclosures plus extensive additional disclosures concerning early termination, capitalized cost, and other terms).

(n44)Footnote 44. Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 14A, § 1-101 (similar to Old Regulation M).

(n45)Footnote 45. S.C. Code Ann. § 37-1-101 (same as CLA requirements).

(n46)Footnote 46. Wash. Rev. Code § 63.10.010 (as amended by 1998 H.B. 2680, effective June 11, 1998) (similar to New Regulation M).

(n47)Footnote 47. W. Va. Code § 46A-1-104 (similar to Old Regulation M).

(n48)Footnote 48. Wis. Stat. §§ 429.101 (as amended by 1997 Wis. Laws 48, effective Jan. 12, 1998) (similar to the New Regulation), 429.101.

(n49)Footnote 49. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 2985.7(a) (no dollar limit); Fla. Stat. § 521 (no dollar limit); Haw. Rev. Stat. § 481L (no dollar limit); Ind. Code § 9-23-2.5-1 (no dollar limit); Ind. Code § 24-4.5-2-101 ($50,000, adjusted up for inflation); Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 14-2001 (applies to vehicle leases that have purchase option at least as high as 20% of vehicle's initial purchase option); Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.991 (requiring notice of early termination balance only) (no dollar limit); N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. ch. 361-D (no dollar limit); N.J. Rev. Stat. § 56:12-60 (no dollar limit); N.Y. Pers. Prop. Law § 331 (no dollar limit); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 14A, § 1-101 ($45,000 limit); S.C. Code Ann. § 37-1-101 ($62,500 limit); W. Va. Code § 46A-1-101 ($45,000 limit).

(n50)Footnote 50. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 481L (4 years).

(n51)Footnote 51. Id.

(n52)Footnote 52. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(1). Under the New Regulation, this provision is unchanged, except that it has been renumbered § 213.4(a), instead of § 213.4(g)(1).

(n53)Footnote 53. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(1).

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213 apps. C-1, C-2.

(n55)Footnote 55. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213 app. C-3.

(n56)Footnote 56. Cf. National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 3.2.7.1 (6th ed. 2005) (collateral not sufficiently described for purposes of Uniform Commercial Code [hereinafter U.C.C.] Article 9 where identification number incorrect).

(n57)Footnote 57. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(2).

(n58)Footnote 58. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(2); Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(2)-1.

(n59)Footnote 59. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(b)-2.

(n60)Footnote 60. See Taylor v. United Mgmt., Inc., 51 F. Supp. 2d 1212 (D.N.M 1999) ; Cummings v. Warren Henry Motors, Inc., 648 So. 2d 1230 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n61)Footnote 61. See Dauti v. Hartford Auto Plaza, Ltd., 213 F. Supp. 2d 116 (D. Conn. 2002) (no violation where dealer agreed to accept $3000 instead of the disclosed $3045.15); Hildabrand v. Difeo P'ship, Inc., 89 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Conn. 2000) (where consumer seeks waiver of some of the amount due at lease inception, lessor's agreement to do so does not make the prior disclosed amount inaccurate or lead to a CLA violation).

(n62)Footnote 62. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(3). Under the new law, this provision is unchanged except that the Regulation has been renumbered § 213.4(c) from § 213.4(g)(3). The new model forms provide sample language.

(n63)Footnote 63. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.3(a)(2).

(n64)Footnote 64. See Reg. M, app. A.

(n65)Footnote 65. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(4). Under the new law, this provision is unchanged, except that the New Regulation has been renumbered § 213.4(n) from § 213.4(g)(4), and except for certain stylistic changes.

(n66)Footnote 66. The estimate must not be used to evade or circumvent the Act's disclosure requirements. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(d).

(n67)Footnote 67. Thomka v. A.Z. Chevrolet, Inc., 619 F.2d 246 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n68)Footnote 68. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(n)-1.

(n69)Footnote 69. See Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(n)-1(ii). This provision previously was unclear, and one interpretation indicated that such taxes were not included in the total of taxes and fees. This was not clarified as incorrect until late 1998, effective October 1, 1999. See 63 Fed. Reg. 67,434 (Dec. 7, 1998) . At least one court has indicated that reliance on the old interpretation is appropriate for leases made prior to October 1, 1999. See McPhillips v. Gold Key Lease, Inc., 38 F. Supp. 2d 975 (M.D. Ala. 1999) .

(n70)Footnote 70. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(5).

(n71)Footnote 71. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(5)-3. This provision is unchanged except that the New Regulation has been renumbered § 213.4(d) from § 213.4(g)(5), and except for minor technical wording clarifications.

(n72)Footnote 72. Abt v. Mazda Am. Credit, 25 F. Supp. 2d 860 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n73)Footnote 73. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(6). Under the new law, the provision is unchanged except that the Regulation has been renumbered § 213.4(o) from § 213.4(g)(6), and except for certain stylistic changes.

(n74)Footnote 74. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(7). Under the new law, this provision is unchanged except that the Regulation has been renumbered § 213.4(p) from § 213.4(g)(7), and except for stylistic changes.

(n75)Footnote 75. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(7)-2.

(n76)Footnote 76. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(8).

(n77)Footnote 77. 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(h)(3), reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,260 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n78)Footnote 78. 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(h)(2), reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,260 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n79)Footnote 79. See, e.g., Howell v. Midway Holdings, Inc., 362 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (D. Ariz. 2005) .

(n80)Footnote 80. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(9). Under the new law, this provision is unchanged except that the New Regulation is renumbered § 213.4(r) from § 213.4(g)(9), and except for stylistic changes.

(n81)Footnote 81. Official Staff Commentary § 213.2(o)-2. See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions Ch. 14 (6th ed. 2005) for a discussion of the distinction between a lease and a sale under the U.C.C.).

(n82)Footnote 82. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(10).

(n83)Footnote 83. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(10)-5.

(n84)Footnote 84. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(11); see also Rentacolor, Inc., 103 F.T.C. 400 (1984) . Under the new law, this provision is renumbered § 213.4(i), from § 213.4(g)(11). The provision remains unchanged except for stylistic improvements.

(n85)Footnote 85. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(11)-1.

(n86)Footnote 86. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(i)-3, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,062 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n87)Footnote 87. Demitropoulos v. Bank One Milwaukee, N.A., 924 F. Supp. 894 (N.D. Ill. 1996) ; Werbosky v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1816 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 22, 1996) .

(n88)Footnote 88. See Turner v. GMAC, 180 F.3d 451 (2d Cir. 1999) ; Personal Fin. Servs., Inc. v. GMAC, 169 F. Supp. 2d 49 (D. Conn. 2001) ; Martin v. Gold Key Lease, Inc., 988 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ill. 1998) ; Steinmetz v. Toyota Motor Credit Co., 963 F. Supp. 1294 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) ; Doe v. GMAC, 635 N.W.2d 7, 45 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 1162 (Wis. Ct. App. 2001) ; Rosen v. PRIMUS Auto. Fin. Servs., 618 N.W.2d 606, 42 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 1163 (Minn. Ct.

App. 2000) , rev. denied, 2001 Minn. LEXIS 52 (Minn. Jan. 26, 2001) ; Dolan v. GMAC, 739 N.E.2d 848 (Ohio Ct. App. 2000) .

(n89)Footnote 89. See 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 165/1-5 (lessor must post a bond or place deposits in a separate account with any interest going to the lessee); N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-101 (security deposit must be placed in separate account with any interest belonging to the lessee; provision waiving this right is void); W. Va. Code § 45-1-7 (applies only to non-resident lessors).

(n90)Footnote 90. See Brooks v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3102 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 16, 1998) (after dismissing CLA claims, federal court agreed to consider and reject state UDAP claim, but decided not to consider claim under state statute dealing with lease security deposits). See also Turner v. General Motors Acceptance Co., 980 F. Supp. 737 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) , aff'd on other grounds, 180 F.3d 451 (2d Cir. 1999) (after dismissing federal claim, declining to rule on state claims).

(n91)Footnote 91. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-101.

(n92)Footnote 92. Werbosky v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4174 (S.D.N.Y. April 1, 1998) (also finding that Ford complied with the "spirit" of the statute by calculating total deposits received and putting that amount, not consumers' actual deposits, in an account).

(n93)Footnote 93. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(k).

(n94)Footnote 94. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(14). Some state laws require disclosure of the right to an appraisal where the consumer is only liable for excess wear and tear on the vehicle. See N.J. Rev. Stat. § 56-12-67.

(n95)Footnote 95. For a more extensive discussion of this section, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 10.3.6.7 (5th ed. 2003 and supp.).

(n96)Footnote 96. Hildebrand v. Difeo P'ship, Inc., 89 F. Supp. 2d 202 (D. Conn. 2000) .

(n97)Footnote 97. 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(e), reprinted in 61 Fed. Reg. 52,259 (Oct. 7, 1996) .

(n98)Footnote 98. 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(15)(i).

(n99)Footnote 99. 12 C.F.R. § 213.2(a)(17). See also Official Staff Commentary §§ 213.4(g)(15)-2, 213.4(g)(15)-3.

(n100)Footnote 100. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(15)(ii).

(n101)Footnote 101. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(15)(ii).

(n102)Footnote 102. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(15)(iii).

(n103)Footnote 103. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(m)(i).

(n104)Footnote 104. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.3(a)(2).

(n105)Footnote 105. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(12).

(n106)Footnote 106. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(10). In addition to the CLA's disclosure requirement for early termination charges, a number of states have their own requirements. Perhaps the most important is the Arkansas statute that requires disclosure of actual dollar charges at 12 month intervals. 1999 Ark. Acts 1059.

(n107)Footnote 107. See § 3.05 infra; see also Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(12)-3. One case has indicated that an unreasonable, but clearly disclosed, early termination formula would not involve a disclosure violation, but only a violation of the substantive requirement that the formula be reasonable. See Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 150 B.R. 997 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n108)Footnote 108. See Jordan v. Schaumburg Toyota, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2553 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 24, 1999) ; Nix v. Advance Leasing & Rent-a-Car, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,946 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 30, 1993).

(n109)Footnote 109. Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) , appeal dismissed, remanded, without op., 275 F.3d 36 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n110)Footnote 110. Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)(12)-1.

(n111)Footnote 111. 15 U.S.C. § 1667b(b).

(n112)Footnote 112. For a more extensive analysis, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 10.3.6.8 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n113)Footnote 113. See, e.g., Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000) ; Nix v. Advance Leasing & Rent-a-Car, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,946 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 30, 1993); McCarthy v. PNC Credit Corp., Clearinghouse No., 47,959 (D. Conn. 1992). But see Wiskup v. Liberty Buick Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 390 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 17, 1996) (Regulation M does not require disclosure of residual value; court appears not to understand that disclosure of residual value is necessary in the lease at issue so that the consumer can compute the early termination charge). Note that the 1996 amendments to Reg. M have now imposed a requirement that the residual value be disclosed in motor vehicle leases.

(n114)Footnote 114. Johnson v. Steven Sims Subaru, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,951 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 1993). See also Thomka v. A.Z. Chevrolet, Inc., 619 F.2d 246 (3d Cir. 1980) (CLA violation to require a consumer to interpolate information from various paragraphs).

(n115)Footnote 115. A federal court recently has found a disclosure to violate the CLA because it contained too many concepts piled into a single paragraph and because the whole disclosure was obscure and convoluted. Clement v. American Honda Fin. Corp., 145 F. Supp. 2d 206 (D. Conn. 2001) . But see Jordan v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 236 F.3d 866 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 533 U.S. 902 (2001) . The Commentary provides guidance on this issue:

> Section 213.4(g)(1) requires a full description of the method of determining an early termination charge. The lessor should attempt to provide consumers with clear and understandable descriptions of its early termination charges. Descriptions that are full, accurate, and not intended to be misleading will comply with § 213.4(g)(1), even if the descriptions are complex.

Official Staff Commentary § 213.4(g)-2.

(n116)Footnote 116. See Candelaria v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 740 F. Supp. 806 (D.N.M. 1990) .

(n117)Footnote 117. See Candelaria v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 740 F. Supp. 806 (D.N.M. 1990) .

(n118)Footnote 118. Lundquist v. Sec. Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs. Corp., Clearinghouse No. 47,956 (D. Conn. June, 9 1992) (opinion concerning motion to dismiss).

(n119)Footnote 119. Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994) . The Seventh Circuit has recently reaffirmed this decision, holding that it is a CLA violation to disclose one early termination charge and use a different one, even if the actual charge is smaller than the disclosed charge. Channell v. Citicorp Services, Inc. 89 F.3d 379 (7th Cir.) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 20256 (7th Cir. Aug. 9, 1996) , on remand, complaint dismissed sub nom., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 1996). See also Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) , appeal dismissed, remanded, without op., 275 F.3d 36 (3d Cir. 2001) ; McCarthy v. PNC Credit Corp., Clearinghouse No. 47,959 (D. Conn. 1992).

(n120)Footnote 120. Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) , appeal dismissed, remanded, without op., 275 F.3d 36 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n121)Footnote 121. See § 3.03[2] supra.

(n122)Footnote 122. See § 3.03[2][d] supra.

(n123)Footnote 123. See § 3.03[2][g] supra.

(n124)Footnote 124. Clement v. American Honda Fin. Corp., 145 F. Supp. 2d 206 (D. Conn. 2001) .

(n125)Footnote 125. See § 3.03[2][e], [h] supra.

(n126)Footnote 126. See § 3.03[2][k] supra.

(n127)Footnote 127. See § 3.03[2][r] supra.

(n128)Footnote 128. Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n129)Footnote 129. Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n130)Footnote 130. Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214, 220 (3d Cir. 2000) .

(n131)Footnote 131. Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 , cert. denied, 533 U.S. 929 (2001) .

(n132)Footnote 132. See § 3.03[2][r] supra.

(n133)Footnote 133. See Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n134)Footnote 134. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,322 (Mar. 30, 2001) .

(n135)Footnote 135. 72 Fed. Reg. 63,456 (Nov. 9, 2007) .

(n136)Footnote 136. 72 Fed. Reg. 63,461 (Nov. 9, 2007) , amending Reg. M. § 213.3(a).

(n137)Footnote 137. See § 3.03[2] supra.

(n138)Footnote 138. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(a).

(n139)Footnote 139. See 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n140)Footnote 140. See Nix v. Advance Leasing & Rent-a-Car, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,946 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 30, 1993) (disclosure violation need not actually mislead the lessee); Kedziora v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., Inc., 780 F. Supp. 516 (N.D. Ill. 1991) (although action for unreasonable termination formula may require actual damages, claim based on disclosure violations does not). See also Simon v. World Omni Leasing, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 47,958 (S.D. Ala. July 13, 1992) (rulings on motion to dismiss). For more discussion of remedy issues, see §§ 3.05[4], 3.06 infra .

(n141)Footnote 141. Higginbotham v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 270 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2008) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.04

§ 3.04 Required Advertising Disclosures

Unlike TIL, the CLA provides private remedies for advertising disclosure violations, but only where the consumer "suffers actual damages from the violation." n1

Under the New Regulation, the CLA advertising requirements apply to any "advertisement for a consumer lease." n2 Regulation M and its Commentary broadly define advertising to include: any commercial message in any newspaper, magazine, leaflet, flyer, catalog, on radio, television or public address system, in direct mail literature or other printed material on any interior or exterior sign or display, in any window display, in any point-of-transaction literature or price tag which is delivered or made available to a lessee or prospective lessee in any manner whatsoever. n3

The CLA advertising requirements specify the disclosure of certain items discussed below whenever the advertisement indicates the amount of any payment or down payment (or the lack of a down payment) n4 or a statement of any capitalized cost reduction or other payment required prior to or at consummation or delivery. n5

The items that must be disclosed pursuant to the statute are listed below. These terms may be disclosed by way of an example of one or more typical leases. Note that the following is a list of requirements under the New Regulation which made significant changes to the previous advertising requirements: n6

1. That the transaction is a lease;

2. The amount of any payment required at the lease inception, including amounts due at delivery if delivery occurs after consummation; n7

3. The number, amounts, due dates or periods of scheduled payments under the lease; n8

4. For an open-end lease, a short statement that an additional charge may be imposed at the end of the lease term;

5. Whether or not a security deposit is required.

Advertising disclosures must be clear and conspicuous. n9 The new regulation provides two specific requirements as to clear and conspicuous advertising. First, no component of the total due at lease signing or delivery shall be more prominent than the total amount due at lease signing or delivery. For example, a statement that no capitalized cost reduction is required cannot be more conspicuous than the amount due at lease signing.

Second, a lease rate disclosure in advertising cannot be more conspicuous than any other required disclosure term. In addition, the lessor cannot use "annual percentage rate," "annual lease rate," or equivalent term. n10

In addition, there are special rules for radio advertising. n11

A lessor's failure to comply with the CLA's advertising requirements triggers a private remedy only where the consumer "suffers actual damage from the violation." n12 But if there is actual damage, the lessor is liable for any advertising violation. n13

Recently, the Federal Trade Commission has been bringing actions against dealerships for their lease advertising, alleging that advertising disclosures were in too fine a print, that they were otherwise inadequately conspicuous, and that required disclosures were not made. n14

The Federal Trade Commission has issued final consent orders covering five major automobile manufacturers' lease advertising practices. The consent orders apply to Honda, Isuzu, General Motors, Mazda, and Mitsubishi. n15 (State attorneys general in twenty-three states have entered similar agreements with four of the manufacturers. n16 Regulation M was amended in 2007 to adopt final rules concerning electronic advertising, with compliance mandatory October 1, 2008. n17 Electronic advertising (such as an advertisement appearing on a website) that provides a table or schedule of the required disclosures shall be considered a single advertisement if, for lease terms that appear without all the required disclosures, the advertisement refers to the page on which the table or schedule appears. n18 Some additional detail is provided by an amended Commentary on this point. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingDisclosure

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(b). See also 1976 U.S.C.C.A.N. 447 ("[A]llowing persons affected by the false advertising to bring suit would add a vital watch dog enforcement provision.").

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1667c(a), amended by The Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996 § 2605(c), Pub. L. No. 104-208 (Sept. 30, 1996).

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.2(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996 § 2605(c), Pub. L. No. 104-208 (Sept. 30, 1996). Note that the New Regulation amended the old CLA advertising provision, which was also triggered by a statement of the number of required payments.

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.7(d)(1)(ii).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996 § 2605(c), Pub. L. No. 104-208 (Sept. 30, 1996).

(n7)Footnote 7. See also Rentacolor, Inc., 103 F.T.C. 400 (1984) (failure to disclose installation charge).

(n8)Footnote 8. See also Rentacolor, Inc., 103 F.T.C. 400 (1984) (failure to disclose monthly payment). Disclosure of the periodic payment may exclude third party fees such as taxes, licenses and registration fees, as long as the fact of the exclusion is disclosed. Alternatively, the lessor can provide a periodic payment amount that includes these fees based on the amount a particular state or locality will charge, as long as that fact and the fact that fees may vary are disclosed. Official Staff Commentary § 213.7(d)(2)-1, amended by 64 Fed. Reg. 16,614 (Apr. 6, 1999) (effective Mar. 31, 1999; compliance optional until Mar. 31, 2000).

(n9)Footnote 9. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.5(c). But see Official Staff Commentary § 213.5(c)-1 (no specific type size or location requirements). A new § 213.7(b) requires that advertising be clear and conspicuous, and provides two specific requirements as to clear and conspicuous advertising. See 12 C.F.R. § 213.7(b), as amended by 62 Fed. Reg. 15,368 (Apr. 1, 1997) ; Official Staff Commentary § 213.7(b)(1)-2, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,063 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Further restrictions on lease rate disclosures concerning the location of the statement accompanying the rate are found at Official Staff Commentary § 213.7(b)(2)-1, reprinted at 62 Fed. Reg. 16,063 (Apr. 4, 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1667c(b)(1). Section 213.7(f) is a new section on radio and television advertising.

(n12)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Dumphy Nissan, Inc., FTC File C 3924 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); Norristown Automobile Co., FTC File C-3925 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); NORTHEAST Auto Outlet, Inc., FTC File C-3922 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); Pacifico Ardmore, Inc., FTC File C-3920 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); Marty Sussman Organization, Inc., FTC File C-3923 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); Pacifico Ford Inc., FTC File C-3921 (Feb. 11, 2000) (consent order); Simmons Rockwell Ford Mercury, Inc., FTC File 992, 3247 (April 27, 2000) (proposed consent order); R.N. Motors, Inc., FTC File 992, 3246 (April 27, 2000) (proposed consent order). All these FTC actions and the accompanying complaints are available at www.ftc.gov, and by going to Commissions on the relevant date.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 62 Fed. Reg. 17,829, 17,930 (Apr. 11, 1997) . See also 61 Fed. Reg. 64,524 (Dec. 5, 1996) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) Report 749 p.5 (1996).

(n17)Footnote 17. 72 Fed. Reg. 63,456 (Nov. 9, 2007) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 72 Fed. Reg. 63,461 (Nov. 9, 2007) , amending Reg. M. § 213.7(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. 72 Fed. Reg. 63,462 (Nov. 9, 2007) , amending Official Staff Commentary § 213.7(c)-2.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.05

§ 3.05 Early Termination and Default Penalties

The most common consumer problem with automobile leases is the threat or actual assessment of large early termination and default penalties.

[1] Applicable Laws

[a] Consumer Leasing Act

The consumer's major challenge to unreasonable early termination and default provisions will usually be under the CLA. n1

Where the CLA is violated, the consumer recovers $1,000 statutory damages plus actual damages plus attorney fees. n2 Since actual damages may equal all or much of the sought deficiency, and since a CLA violation automatically leads to $1,000 statutory damages in addition to the actual damages, a consumer defending a collection action to recover an early termination penalty may even be able to obtain a net positive recovery plus attorney fees.

Another important aspect of the CLA is that it requires clear and conspicuous disclosure of early termination charges. n3 To the extent that a formula is not clearly disclosed, even if it is reasonable, the consumer may have suffered actual damages because the consumer would not have entered into the lease knowing the extent of the early termination liability. The CLA would then provide an action for actual and statutory damages and attorney fees.

[b] UCC Article 2A and Common Law Contract Principles

Although the CLA's early termination provision is derived from UCC Article 2 on sales, lease early termination provisions today are governed by UCC Article 2A on leases, which has now been adopted by most states. UCC section 2A-504 allows liquidated damages clauses only in an amount "reasonable in light of the then anticipated harm caused by the default or other act or omission." UCC Article 2A (the applicable state law on leasing in most states) limits a lessor's early termination remedies, where the lease's liquidated damages clause is not reasonable, to the default damages as provided in UCC section 2A-528. n4 UCC section 2A-528 states that the lessor's damages are the present value (as of the date of default) of the difference between the remaining lease payments and the market rent for those payments if the lessor re-rented the property. In addition, the lessor can recover incidental damages less expenses saved in consequence of the default. n5

In states not enacting UCC Article 2A, courts are likely to adopt the UCC Article 2 and common law approach to unreasonable liquidated damages clauses: they are void as a penalty, n6 forcing the lessor to prove in court its actual damages. In one case, the consumer argued that the court should use as statutory damages for an unreasonable early termination charge the statutory damages specified in UCC § 2A-504(3). The federal court had little trouble pointing out that this Article 2A provision only applied where the lessor withholds or stops delivery of the goods to the lessee. n7

[c] State Leasing Statutes

Several states have enacted specific leasing statutes that set out early termination and default standards, that provide disclosure requirements not found in the CLA, or that are otherwise useful supplements to the CLA. n8 Connecticut has recently enacted the Uniform Consumer Leasing Act, n9 that provides minimal protections for consumers. No early termination charges can be assessed in certain cases where the vehicle is a total loss and an insurance claim is paid; the early termination charge cannot exceed the remaining lease payments.

[d] State Deceptive Practices Legislation

UDAP statutes provide an effective remedy to challenge not only unfair lease terms, but other aspects of the lease transaction, including the lessor's oral misrepresentations. n10

[e] Other Theories in the Nature of Fraud

Particularly where a dealer or lessor's actions involve intent and scienter, other theories in the nature of fraud are also available to challenge deceptive practices. This includes state and federal RICO claims, n11 common law fraud, n12 civil theft, n13 and conversion claims. n14

[f] Unconscionability

UCC Article 2A's unconscionability provision may be helpful in dealing with unreasonable early termination formulas. In an unconscionability challenge, consumer attorneys should demonstrate the substantive unconscionability of the default provisions. They should also point out procedural unconscionability--obtuse, technical language, small print, standard form, take it or leave it nature of the contract, lack of bargaining, unequal resources, important terms are undefined or found in other provisions of the lease, and the like. n15

[2] Early Termination Charges Based on an Adjusted Lease Balance

As described in the prior subsection, the CLA, UCC Article 2A, state leasing legislation, deceptive practices statutes, unconscionability concepts, and other theories provide ample grounds to challenge unreasonable early termination and default charges. The important analysis is when an early termination or default charge is unreasonable. There are different methods to determine whether a charge is substantively unreasonable, including the adjusted lease balance method, formulas based on repayment of remaining lease payments, inadequate rebate of unearned lease charges, and inadequate credit for car's increased value at early termination. n16

In general, the adjusted lease balance method for determining early termination charges assesses the consumer for the difference between an adjusted lease balance and the car's value at early termination. An adjusted lease balance is the amount the lessor has invested in a vehicle at any point in the lease. It is the initial cost of the car, less those portions of lease payments that have been made and that are allocated to the car's depreciation.

In challenging the reasonableness of an adjusted lease balance formula, the first step is to determine whether the lease utilizes a reasonable method to compute the adjusted lease balance. If an adjusted lease balance is in fact greater than the lessor's investment in the transaction at that point in time, then a charge based on the difference between the adjusted lease balance and the car's value will produce an unreasonable windfall for the lessor. The two major issues in determining the reasonableness of an adjusted lease balance are the size of the initial lease balance and the size of the residual value. n17 A residual value is a car's estimated value at scheduled termination, and the Consumer Leasing Act requires that this term be disclosed in leases. n18 The easiest way to determine the reasonableness of a residual value is to refer to one of the standard industry automotive guides that provide the residual value, such as the Black Book Official Residual Value Guide, which provides residual values for each make and model after two, three, four, and five years.

The other point in challenging the reasonableness is the method and result used to determine the vehicle's value at early termination. If the vehicle's value is based on a commercially unreasonable sale, this makes the early termination charge unreasonable.

A lessee's early termination liability formula is clearly unreasonable where the formula charges the consumer for the vehicle's residual value or the adjusted lease balance, but fails to provide a credit for the vehicle's realized value. n19 This is the case even where the lessor has a practice of crediting the consumer for that value--if the formula does not contain such a provision, the formula is unreasonable. n20

[3] Early Termination Charges Based on the Remaining Payments

Most early termination formulas not based on an adjusted lease balance method are based in some fashion on charging the consumer for the remaining monthly payments plus the residual value (the car's expected value at the end of the lease), less unearned lease charges and less the car's value at early termination. It is widely accepted now that an early termination formula is unreasonable if the consumer must pay all remaining lease payments with no rebate for unearned lease charges. n21 The issue in most cases then is whether the lessor has provided an adequate rebate. As with the prior section, another key issue is whether the vehicle's value at early termination is reasonably calculated.

[4] Remedies: Unreasonable Early Termination Penalties

The CLA specifies that anyone failing to comply with the provisions dealing with lessee's liability on expiration or termination of the lease is liable to the consumer as specified by the TIL remedy section (15 U.S.C. section 1640). n22 Unlike TIL, any CLA violation leads to statutory damages. n23

Consequently, there should be no question that a lessor's attempt to enforce an unreasonable penalty against a lessor automatically leads to private remedies. Nevertheless, there is much confusion concerning a consumer's ability to challenge an unreasonable early termination penalty where the consumer has not in fact defaulted or terminated early or where a particular part of the early termination formula would not apply to the consumer.

One approach looks at the literal language of the statute as indicating that the mere inclusion of an unreasonable penalty in a lease is a violation, and that any violation triggers remedies. Under this approach, remedies are triggered even if the client has not terminated early and there is no deficiency being assessed, as long as the default formula is unreasonable. n24 In effect, the statute provides consumers with standing to challenge an unreasonable early termination formula, even if the formula would have no adverse impact on the plaintiff. n25

Nevertheless, several federal courts have reached the opposite conclusion, requiring a consumer to independently establish standing to raise the unreasonableness of an early termination formula. n26 Courts that require potential consumer injury to establish an Article III case or controversy standing will generally require that the early termination formula be unreasonable as applied to the situation of the particular plaintiff. n27

A recent Third Circuit decision is an example of a case where standing is not found. The lessor did not use the formula stated in the lease to compute early termination charges, but instead used another formula that the court found reasonable in the circumstances. The Third Circuit found the consumer had no standing to challenge the formula stated in the lease because it was not applied to the consumer. n28

The same provision that requires early termination charges to be reasonable also requires that charges for delinquency be reasonable. Despite lessor arguments to the contrary, this applies to late payment charges as well. There is no basis to distinguish the reasonableness of late payment charges from delinquency charges. n29 There is no meaningful distinction between the two terms, and Congress intended none. n30

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingLiability

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. When an early termination or default charge is unreasonable is discussed below in § 3.05[4].

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 3.06 infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 3.03[2][r] supra.

(n4)Footnote 4. U.C.C. § 2A-504(2). Cf. Abrams v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 2001 Phila. Ct. Com. Pl. LEXIS 83 (Dec. 5, 2001) (Article 2A does not authorize recovery of unreasonable charges already voluntarily paid by the consumer). See also In re Northwest Airlines Corp., 393 B.R. 352 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2008) (early termination computation is unreasonable under Article 2A standards).

(n5)Footnote 5. U.C.C. § 2A-528(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. U.C.C. § 2-718(1); 5 Corbin on Contracts § 1054.

(n7)Footnote 7. Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) , appeal dismissed, remanded, without op., 275 F.3d 36 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Civ. Code § 2985.8; Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 5-2-311 to 5-2-313; Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 36a-675 to 36a-685; 1995 Conn. Pub. Acts 337 (uncodified) (regulating excess wear and tear charges only); Fla. Stat. § 521; 1997 Hawaii Laws 82, as amended by 1998 Hawaii Senate Bill 2833; 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. §§ 636/35 to 636/60; Ind. Code §§ 9-23-2.5-1, 24-4.5-2-101; Iowa Code § 537.1101; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 16a-1-101; La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 9:3316 to 9:3330; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 9-A; Maine Consumer Credit Code Reg. Z-2, Rule 240; Md. Code Ann. Com. Law § 14-2001; Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.991; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. ch. 361-D; N.J. Rev. Stat. § 56:12-60; N.Y. Pers. Prop. Law §§ 340 to 343; Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 14A, § 1-101; S.C. Code Ann. § 37-1-101; Wash. Rev. Code § 63.10.010; W. Va. Code § 46A-1-101; Wis. Stat. § 429.101. But cf. Hart v. Autowest Dodge, 147 Cal. App. 4th 1258 (2007) (California leasing statute provides attorney fees to lessor where consumer's action under the statute was unsuccessful).

(n9)Footnote 9. 2002 Conn. Legis. Serv. P.A. 02-81 (S.H.B. 5248) (effective July 1, 2003).

(n10)Footnote 10. For a more extensive discussion of UDAP statutes, see Ch. 4 infra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ch. 4 infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. Cummings v. Warren Henry Motors, Inc., 648 So. 2d 1230 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Cummings v. Warren Henry Motors, Inc., 648 So. 2d 1230 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Cummings v. Warren Henry Motors, Inc., 648 So. 2d 1230 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See John Deere Leasing Co. v. Blubaugh, 636 F. Supp. 1569 (D. Kan. 1986) .

(n16)Footnote 16. These are discussed in detail in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 10.5.3.2 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n17)Footnote 17. For a detailed discussion of how to find problems with the calculation of the adjusted lease balance, see National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 10.5.3.2.3 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n18)Footnote 18. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(f)(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Atel Fin. Corp. v. Quaker Coal Co., 132 F. Supp. 2d 1233 (N.D. Cal. 2001) , aff'd, 321 F.3d 924 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Atel Fin. Corp. v. Quaker Coal Co., 132 F. Supp. 2d 1233 (N.D. Cal. 2001) , aff'd, 321 F.3d 924 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., McCarthy v. PNC Credit Corp., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21719 (D. Conn. May 27, 1992) ; Kedziora v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., Inc., 780 F. Supp. 516 (N.D. Ill. 1991) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n22)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. See 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Lundquist v. Security Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs. Corp., Clearinghouse No. 47,956 (D. Conn. June 9, 1992), aff'd on other grounds, 993 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 959, 114 S. Ct. 419, 126 L. Ed. 2d 365 (1993) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Lundquist v. Security Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs. Corp., Clearinghouse No. 47,956 (D. Conn. June 9, 1992), aff'd on other grounds, 993 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 959, 114 S. Ct. 419, 126 L. Ed. 2d 365 (1993) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Simon v. World Omni Leasing Inc., Clearinghouse No. 47,958 (S.D. Ala. July 13, 1992); Kedziora v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., Inc., 780 F. Supp. 516 (N.D. Ill. 1991) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See Kedziora v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs. Inc., 780 F. Supp. 516 (N.D. Ill. 1991) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Channell v. Citicorp Nat'l Servs., 89 F.3d 379 (7th Cir. 1996) . Note that the Seventh Circuit chose a different approach, avoiding standing issues by finding it premature to rule, prior to early termination, whether a penalty formula is unreasonable. Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994) . Even under the Seventh Circuit analysis, a consumer could seek a determination of a provision's reasonableness simultaneously with the consumer terminating the lease, and need not wait for the lessor to enforce the provision.

(n28)Footnote 28. Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 362 F.3d 209 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Corum v. Fifth Third Bancorp, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12247 (W.D. Ky. July 10, 2003) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Id.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.06

§ 3.06 Remedies for CLA Violations

As discussed above, any CLA violation (with the exception of advertising violations where the consumer is not damaged) should lead to remedies under 15 U.S.C. section 1640. The lessor's liability is:

a) The actual damage sustained as a result of the lessor's failure; n1 plus

b) Twenty-five percent of the total periodic lease payments, except that this statutory liability shall be no less than $100 or greater than $1,000; n2 plus

c) The costs of the action and reasonable attorney fees. n3

The lessor's liability for the consumer's attorney fees is the same as under TIL. n4

The lessor's liability in a class action is also the same as for TIL: n5

a) The class members' actual damage sustained by the CLA violation; n6 plus

b) Such amount as the court may allow, being no more than the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth; n7 plus

c) The costs of the action and reasonable attorney fees. n8

Where more than one consumer is obligated on a lease, each consumer cannot recover the maximum amount of statutory damages. n9 This limitation does not apply to actual damages. Nor does the limitation affect the lessor's liability in a class action for a large statutory damage award based on multiple leases.

Where a lessor has engaged in multiple disclosure violations in the same lease, the statute specifies that the consumer is entitled to only one statutory damage award. n10 In addition, a Virginia court has ruled that, as a matter of law, a CLA disclosure violation is a complete defense to a lessor's claim for breach of contract. n11

The CLA does not limit the consumer's ability to recover statutory damages against multiple lessors. Nevertheless, few courts have addressed this issue. One court has found that only one statutory damage award is recoverable per lease, even if multiple lessors are liable. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingContracts LawDebtor & Creditor RelationsContracts LawRemedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(A)(ii). Where 25% of the lease payments exceeds $1,000, statutory damages should be $1,000. See Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 55 Va. Cir. 499 (2000) (statutory damages awarded even where no actual damages). But see Lasman v. Primus Auto. Fin. Servs., Inc., 1998 Mass. App. Div. 279, 1998 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 118 (Dec. 31, 1998) (court has discretion to reduce statutory damages from $1,000 to $300).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3). See also Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 55 Va. Cir. 499 (2000) (attorney fees can be awarded to the consumer in a CLA claim based on recoupment).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 1.10[5] supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 1.10[4] supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(B).

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3).

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(g).

(n11)Footnote 11. Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 55 Va. Cir. 499 (2000) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Kittrell v. RRR, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 2d 517 (E.D. Va. 2003) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.07

§ 3.07 Procedural Issues and Defenses

[1] Statute of Limitations

The CLA has a more generous statute of limitations than TIL. The action must be brought within one year of the termination of the lease agreement, n1 while TIL only allows actions within one year of the occurrence of the violation. n2 In other words, the one-year CLA statute of limitation period begins to run at the expiration of the lease or its early termination, not with the signing of the lease. (Upon early termination, the limitation period will run from when the lease actually terminates, not when it is scheduled to terminate.) n3 The date of termination is counted from when the lessor repossesses the vehicle, not a later date when the lessor assesses the early termination charge. n4 Where a consumer's complaint was filed within the one-year period alleging disclosure violations, that complaint can be amended after the one-year period had elapsed to add other CLA claims, such as a claim that the early termination charge was unreasonable. The added claims related back to the same transaction. n5

It seems clear that CLA claims may be raised by way of recoupment after the one year limitation period has expired. The CLA specifies that lessors are liable as provided in 15 U.S.C. § 1640. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e) specifies that:

> This subsection does not bar a person from asserting a violation of this subchapter in an action to collect the debt which was brought more than one year from the date of the occurrence of the violation as a matter of defense by recoupment or set-off in such action, except as otherwise provided by State law.

[2] Jurisdiction

CLA violations may be brought in any United States district court or in any other court of competent jurisdiction. n6

[3] Leasing Act Statutory Defenses

With the exception of the requirement that advertising violations be brought only by those who suffer actual damage from the violation, the CLA does not contain within its own sections any statutory defenses. But the CLA does state that the lessor's liability is as provided in 15 U.S.C. section 1640, n7 and 15 U.S.C. section 1640 specifies a number of "creditor" defenses. n8 Since the term "creditor" in section 1640 includes "lessors," n9 these defenses also apply to CLA cases.

[a] Assignee Liability

With regard to any failure to "make disclosures" required under the CLA, liability shall be imposed only upon the lessor required to make disclosure, except that the assignee is liable for violations apparent on the face of the disclosure statement or where the assignment is involuntary. n10

[b] Correction Defense

The correction defense provides that a lessor has no liability for failure to comply with a CLA violation if within sixty days of discovering the error, but before the consumer notifies the lessor of the error, the lessor notifies the consumer of the error. n11 Courts will allow this defense only for clerical or mathematical errors, not for informational errors. n12

[c] Bona Fide Error Defense

A lessor is not liable for a CLA violation if the lessor shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adopted to avoid any such error. n13 A court has found the bona fide error defense to apply when a number was misaligned on the page so that it did not clearly state a purchase option of $11,000 but could be interpreted as $1000. n14

[d] Good Faith Conformity With FRB Rulings and Official Interpretations

Lessors are not liable under the CLA for acts done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any FRB rule, regulation, or interpretation. n15

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingLiabilityCommercial Law (UCC)Leases (Article 2A)General Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cf. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Pettola v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 44 F. Supp. 2d 442 (D. Conn. 1999) . Cf. Patterson v. Bob Wade Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 48 Va. Cir. 471, 1999 Va. Cir. LEXIS 121 (Va. Cir. Ct. 1999) (rejecting an ingenious argument that lease termination does not occur at default, but only when the literal contractual preconditions of early termination have been fully met).

(n4)Footnote 4. Carmichael v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 291 F.3d 1278 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) , appeal dismissed, remanded, without op., 275 F.3d 36 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 1.09 supra.

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1667d(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1640(a)(3), 1641(a). See also Jarvis v. South Oak Dodge, Inc., 201 Ill. 2d 81, 773 N.E.2d 641 (Ill. June 20, 2002) (where a state leasing statute was ambiguous as to whether claims not apparent on the face of lease could be brought against assignee, court interpreted statute as consistent with CLA and required claim to be apparent on face of the lease).

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(b). See also Johnson v. Steven Sims Subaru, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,951 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 1993) (no defense where consumer first notified lessor of the violation).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Thomka v. A.Z. Chevrolet, Inc., 619 F.2d 246 (3d Cir. 1980) ; Johnson v. Steven Sims Subaru, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 49,951 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 1993) (inaccurate disclosure that no official fees or taxes owed).

(n13)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. Watson v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Assoc., Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7875 (S.D. Ala. Feb. 10, 2006) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(f). See McPhillips v. Gold Key Lease, Inc., 38 F. Supp. 2d 975 (M.D. Ala. 1999) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 3 The Consumer Leasing Act and Automobile Leases

1-3 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 3.08

§ 3.08 Repossession Issues

The first step in analyzing the repossession rights and responsibilities of automobile lessors and lessees is to determine if UCC Article 9 applies.

Whether Article 9 governs an automobile lease will usually depend on whether the lease is closed-end or open-end. In part because of Consumer Leasing Act restrictions on open-end leases, few automobile leases today are open-end.

Courts almost unanimously find that closed-end leases are not covered by Article 9. n1 The major contrary decision, by a U.S. bankruptcy court, n2 was overturned by a federal district court that found the standard Ford Motor Credit Company closed-end vehicle lease was not intended for security and, thus, not covered by UCC Article 9. n3 Of course, a lessor can structure a closed-end lease so that it is covered by UCC Article 9. There are reports of used car dealers offering leases with a purchase option that can be exercised at the end of the lease for nominal consideration. In that case, the lease is probably a secured transaction.

If Article 9 does not apply to a car lease, the lessor's right to seize the car will be governed by UCC Article 2A. Article 2A allows the lease agreement to determine what consumer conduct is defined as a default of the lease agreement. n4 When the consumer's conduct leads to a default, the lessor need not notify the consumer that he or she is in default on the lease or that the lessor will enforce default remedies, n5 unless required to do so by other law or by the lease agreement.

Nevertheless, under Article 2A, not all defaults authorize the lessor to seize the leased vehicle. The lessor can seize the leased vehicle only in certain circumstances. n6

For other types of default, the lessor's sole remedy is an action for damages, not seizure of the vehicle. n7 However, even a minor default can lead to seizure if the lease agreement specifies that this specific default leads to the lessor's right to seize the vehicle. Since ambiguities in standard form contracts are construed against their drafters, the agreement that particular defaults will lead to seizure of the leased property must be clear and unambiguous. n8

UCC Article 2A provides no right for a consumer to cure a default or reinstate the lease. In fact, the lessor need not even notify the consumer that the consumer is in default on the lease or notify the consumer that the lessor will enforce default remedies. n9 However, a number of state statutes do provide consumers a right to cure or reinstate the vehicle lease. n10 UCC Article 2A allows lessors to seize the vehicle only if this can be done without breach of the peace. n11

The sale of the repossessed vehicle has a different purpose in a lease transaction than in a secured transaction. In a lease, the car belongs to the lessor and will eventually be returned to the lessor. If the consumer does not make lease payments, the lessor can recover its property early, and also sue for any damages caused by the early termination of the lease. There is no requirement that the lessor sell the car because it has always been the lessor's car, and the lessor has always been expecting to recover it. n12 The lessor can retain the vehicle, re-lease it, or sell it. The lessor's decision on what it does with its property when it is returned to the lessor early does not have a necessary connection to the consumer's liability for the default.

Article 2A provides several measures of the lessor's damages on the consumer's default, but these damages are based on the difference between the size of the consumer's lease payments and the amount for which the lessor can re-lease the vehicle after repossession. Article 2A remedies do not provide for the sale of the leased property. n13

The CLA does restrict the use of a sale price in the default formula in one respect. Whenever the consumer's liability at either early termination or at the end of the lease term is based on the estimated value of the leased property, the lessor must disclose the consumer's right to obtain a mutually binding appraisal of the car's resale value. n14 The appraisal is at the consumer's expense, by an independent, professional, third-party appraiser agreed to by the consumer and lessor. n15

The CLA has no other requirements as to the sale of the vehicle, although, again, the liquidated damages formula must be reasonable overall. n16 On the other hand, several state leasing statutes do provide limits on how collateral is to be sold, if the consumer's liability is based on the sale price.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionConsumer LeasingGeneral OverviewCommercial Law (UCC)Leases (Article 2A)DefaultRemediesCommercial Law (UCC)Secured Transactions (Article 9)DefaultForeclosure & RepossessionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Sine Enters., Inc. v. Jaguar Credit Corp., 139 F.3d 912 (10th Cir. 1998) (unpublished); Lamar v. Mitsubishi Motors Credit of Am., Inc. (In re Lamar), 249 B.R. 822 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2000) ; In re Murray, 201 B.R. 381 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996) ; In re Winston, 181 B.R. 589 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1995) ; In re Zaleha, 159 B.R. 581 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1993) ; Woodson v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Cole), 114 B.R. 278 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1990) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 14.2.2.2 (6th ed. 2005).

(n2)Footnote 2. Woodson v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Thompson), 101 B.R. 658 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1989) , rev'd, 114 B.R. 278 (N.D. Okla. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Woodson v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Cole), 114 B.R. 278 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. U.C.C. § 2A-501(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. U.C.C. § 2A-502.

(n6)Footnote 6. U.C.C. § 2A-525(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. U.C.C. § 2A-523(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Another possible lessor technique to avoid Article 2A's major default/minor default dichotomy is to state in the lease that the lessor can accelerate the remaining lease payments at will or when it deems itself insecure. It could then seize on a minor default or even no default to accelerate the lease payment schedule. The consumer's failure to pay the accelerated amount gives the lessor the right to seize the vehicle, even if the consumer has kept current with all of the original scheduled payments. Article 2A limits this technique by stating that the terms accelerate "at will" and accelerate "when the lessor deems itself insecure" shall be construed to allow acceleration of payments only if the lessor in good faith believes the prospect of payment or performance is impaired. The lessor has the burden of proving good faith. U.C.C. § 2A-109(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. U.C.C. § 2A-502.

(n10)Footnote 10. See National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 14.2.4 (6th ed. 2005 and Supp.).

(n11)Footnote 11. U.C.C. § 2A-525(3). Wis. Stat. Ann. § 425.206 prohibits self-help repossession outright, and limits the lessor's ability to recover the leased vehicle to court action or voluntary surrender by the consumer.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Siemens Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Phymed Diagnostic Imaging Ctr. of Dallas, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7978 (N.D. Tex. June 6, 2000) .

(n13)Footnote 13. U.C.C. § 2A-527(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(14). New Jersey's new motor vehicle leasing statute also requires disclosure of the right to an appraisal where the consumer is liable for excess wear and tear on the vehicle. See N.J. Rev. Stat. § 56-12-67.

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. M, 12 C.F.R. § 213.4(g)(14).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994) . See also Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15645 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 27, 2000) . For further discussion of early termination and default charges, as well as consumer challenges to these charges, see National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions, § 14.2.7 (6th ed. and supp.).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual 4.syn

§ 4.syn Synopsis to Chapter 4: Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

§ 4.01 Introduction

§ 4.02 Applicability of UDAP Statutes to Credit Practices

§ 4.03 General Definition of Deception and Unfairness

[1] Deception

[2] Unfairness

§ 4.04 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

[1] Creditor Remedies and the FTC Credit Practices Rule

[a] General

[b] Confession of Judgment Provision

[c] Wage Assignment Provision

[d] Provisions Dealing With Household Goods Security

[e] Pyramiding Late Charges Provision

[f] Cosigner Provision

[g] Private UDAP Actions Utilizing the FTC Rule

[h] Attempts to Circumvent FTC Credit Practices Rule

[i] Using the FTC Unfairness Theory, as Applied in the Credit Practices Rule

[j] Case Law Finding Creditor Remedies Unfair or Deceptive

[2] Credit Balances

[3] Misrepresentations, Nondisclosure of Credit Terms

[4] Oppressive Credit Practices

[a] Attempts to Evade Credit Legislation

[b] Excessive Credit Charges

[c] Discrimination

[d] Coercive Tactics

[5] Home Mortgage Loans

[6] Loan Brokers

[7] Debt Consolidators

[8] Mortgage Assistance Scams

[9] Fringe Lenders: Pawnbrokers, Trading Posts, and Others

[10] Banking, Check Cashing Practices, "Telechecks" or Preauthorized Drafts

[11] Credit Reporting Agency Practices

[12] Credit Card Finders

[13] Lost Credit Card Reporting Services

§ 4.05 Debt Collection

[1] General

[2] Creditor's Abusive Use of Arbitration to Collect on a Debt

§ 4.06 Private UDAP Remedies

[1] Introduction

[2] Calculating Actual Damages

[a] Introduction

[b] Direct Actual Damages

[c] Consequential Damages

[d] Prejudgment Interest

[3] Contractual Limitation on Damages

[4] Mitigation of Damages

[5] Statutory Minimum Damages

[6] Multiple Damages

[a] General

[b] Limits on Treble Damages Award

[c] Interrelation of Treble Damages With Other Awards

[d] How to Calculate Multiple Damages

[e] Parties Liable for Treble Damages

[7] Punitive Damages

[a] General

[b] Calculating the Size of Punitive Damage Awards

[c] Who Is Liable for Punitive Damages?

[d] Interrelation of Punitive Damages With Other Remedies

[8] Class Actions

[a] General

[b] UDAP Class Action Procedures

[c] UDAP Class Actions Where Individual Damage Is Minimal

[d] Proving a UDAP Violation Is Common to the Class

[e] Statutory Damages for Each Class Member

[f] Settlements

[9] Injunctions

[a] Advantages of the Injunctive Remedy

[b] Does a UDAP Statute Authorize Private Injunctive Relief?

[10] Voiding and Rescinding Contracts

[11] Attorney Fees

[a] Introduction

[b] The Catalyst Theory and How To Preserve a Fee Claim When Settling a Case

[c] Types of Representation Entitled to Fees

[d] How Attorney Fees Are Calculated

§ 4.07 Federal Racketeering Statute

[1] RICO Described; Scope

[2] The Structure of RICO

[3] Elements of the Civil RICO Action

[a] Overview

[b] Liability of Outside Professionals Under Section 1962(c)

[c] "Pattern" of Racketeering Activity

[d] Conspiracy

[e] Collection of an Unlawful Debt

[f] The "Injury" Element

[g] Rejected Limitations on Liability

[4] Predicate Offenses: Mail Fraud and Wire Fraud

[a] Mail Fraud

[b] Wire Fraud

[5] RICO Pleading and Procedure

[a] Pleading the Claim

[b] Pleading the Relief Sought

[c] Local Requirements for Case Statements

[d] Service of Process and Venue

[e] RICO Standard of Proof

[f] RICO Concurrent Jurisdiction

[g] RICO Statute of Limitations

[h] Offensive and Defensive Collateral Estoppel

[6] RICO Consumer Cases in the Courts

[7] State RICO Statutes

§ 4.08 State Civil Theft Laws

§ 4.09 Unjust Enrichment, Restitution, and Similar Equitable Theories

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.01

§ 4.01 Introduction

All fifty states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands have enacted at least one statute with broad applicability to most consumer transactions, aimed at preventing consumer deception and abuse in the marketplace. Many of these statutes are patterned after the language found in section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") Act, n1 which prohibits "unfair or deceptive acts or practices"; the term "UDAP" is an acronym for this prohibition.

This chapter focuses on the use of state UDAP statutes to challenge abusive credit practices. n2 The chapter also examines a related challenge to those practices under the federal RICO or racketeering statute. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionDeceptive Acts & PracticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 45(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. The Internet is an increasingly important resource for unfair and deceptive acts and practices [hereinafter UDAP] precedent. For example, the Federal Trade Commission [hereinafter FTC] has its own website at www.ftc.gov. An extremely useful site is found at www.consumerworld.org. Other useful sites include www.advertisinglaw.com and National Consumer Law Center's own site, www.consumerlaw.org.

(n3)Footnote 3. RICO is shorthand for the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization provisions of the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970 and various similar state statutes. The text of the RICO Act is reprinted in Vol. 1B infra. For more detail on UDAP statutes, federal and state RICO statutes, and the applicability of those statutes to credit practices, see National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (6th ed. 2004 and Supp.).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.02

§ 4.02 Applicability of UDAP Statutes to Credit Practices

In general, UDAP statutes are broadly applicable to all types of consumer transactions. Nevertheless, several state statutes do not apply to credit practices for several reasons. But even if a UDAP statute exempts creditors, this should only insulate creditors from UDAP liability for their own misconduct. The FTC's Holder Rule subjects assignees and related creditors to claims and defenses including UDAP claims arising from the seller's misconduct. n1

Courts have little problem finding that credit practices are included in the term "trade or commerce." Consequently, banking and credit activities are covered by UDAP statutes that apply broadly to "trade or commerce." n2 Where a UDAP statute limits coverage to transactions involving "goods or services," most courts hold that this language encompasses credit transactions. n3 The Texas courts have developed some fine distinctions about whether credit and banking activities are the purchase of a "good" or "service" n4 and a few courts do find that credit transactions are outside the scope of "goods and services." n5 No matter which way a court rules on whether a credit extension is a "service," there should be little doubt that services in connection with the loan are covered. n6

A final problem with UDAP coverage of credit practices is possible preemption by other credit statutes or regulatory schemes. The FTC regulates some of the credit market but does not regulate unfair banking practices; regulation of unfair banking practices is reserved for the federal regulatory agencies, such as the Federal Reserve Board ("FRB") and the Comptroller of the Currency, that regulate these financial institutions. But even though the FTC Act does not apply to banks, and even though state courts are guided by the FTC Act in interpreting state UDAP statutes, the FTC's scope does not prevent UDAP statutes from applying to banks. n7

Whether a state regulatory scheme displaces applicability of the UDAP statute is a complicated issue. While most UDAP statutes will not be so displaced, the answer may depend on the specific language of the UDAP statute, the exact nature of state regulation, the adequacy of state remedies, and whether the state permits or regulates the very practice being challenged. n8 Louisiana has an exemption for actions or transactions subject to the jurisdiction of the state commissioner of financial institutions, regulators of financial institutions in other states, and federal banking regulators who have authority to regulate unfair or deceptive trade practices. n9 This exemption formerly was worded as a blanket exemption for chartered banks, and some courts still interpret it to exempt particular entities rather than practices. n10 However, the better view is that it exempts only actions or transactions that are specifically regulated by one of the named banking regulators. n11 Under this view, the state UDAP statute does apply to a bank's wrongful foreclosure, because this aspect of a bank's activities is not specifically regulated. n12

Whether a UDAP statute applies to debt collection practices raises additional issues. Where a UDAP statute applies to conduct "in trade or commerce," the statute can be used to challenge debt collection activities. n13 Most courts also find that debt collection involves the sale of goods or services. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionDeceptive Acts & PracticesGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.04[1][a] infra. See Ch. 14 infra. See also Williams v. ITT Fin. Servs., 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 2721 (June 25, 1997) , aff'd on other grounds, 83 Ohio St. 3d 464, 700 N.E.2d 859 (1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1999) ; Nations Credit v. Pheanis, 102 Ohio App. 3d 71, 656 N.E.2d 998 (1995) (mobile home financer held liable under FTC rule for UDAP violations of mobile home dealer). But see Vannoy v. Capital Lincoln-Mercury Sales, Inc., 88 Ohio App. 3d 138, 623 N.E.2d 177 (1993) (bank not liable for seller's post-sale UDAP violations, no discussion of FTC rule).

(n2)Footnote 2. Morse v. Mutual Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 536 F. Supp. 1271 (D. Mass. 1982) ; Petersen v. State Employees Credit Union (In re Kittrell), 115 B.R. 873 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1990) ; Stogsdill v. Cragin Fed. Bank, 645 N.E.2d 564 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995) (UDAP statute covers banking practices). See also Beattie v. Nations Credit Fin. Servs. Corp., 69 Fed. Appx. 585 (4th Cir. May 27, 2003) (unpublished, citation limited) (S.C. UDAP statute applies to bank's collection and foreclosure activities).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Smith v. Commercial Banking Corp., 866 F.2d 576 (3d Cir. 1989) (Pennsylvania law); Hogan v. Valley Nat'l Fin. Servs. Co., Clearinghouse No. 40,428 (D. Colo. Feb. 1, 1995) (denying motion to dismiss and holding that a loan is a "service" covered by Colorado's UDAP law); Jackson v. Culinary Sch. of Washington, 788 F. Supp. 1233 (D.D.C. 1992) ; McTeer v. Provident Life & Acc. Ins., 712 F. Supp. 512 (D.S.C. 1989) ; Flores v. Shapiro & Kreisman, 246 F. Supp. 2d 427 (E.D. Pa. 2002) (UDAP covers loans that finance goods or services for personal use); Apgar v. Homeside Lending, Inc. (In re Apgar), 291 B.R. 665, 684 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2003) (mortgage loan is service); State ex rel. Miller v. Cutty's Des Moines Camping Club, Inc., 694 N.W.2d 518 (Iowa 2005) ; Johnson v. Long Beach Mortg. Loan Trust 2001-4, 451 F. Supp. 2d 16 (D.D.C. Aug. 4, 2006) (following DeBerry; mortgage finance transaction is "sale" covered by D.C. UDAP law); Losure v. Capital One Services, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3977 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006) ; Knox v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40709 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 10, 2005) (Consumer Legal Remedies Act covers mortgage loans).

(n4)Footnote 4. Compare Flenniken v. Longview Bank & Trust Co., 661 S.W.2d 705 (Tex. 1984) ; Riverside Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 603 S.W.2d 169 (Tex. 1980) , with Clardy Mfg. Co. v. Marine Midland Bus. Loans, Inc., 88 F.3d 347 (5th Cir. 1996) . See also Baker v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53704 (N.D. Tex. June 24, 2009) (Texas UDAP statute does not apply to purchase money mortgage loan).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Barber v. Nat'l Bank of Alaska, 815 P.2d 857 (Alaska 1991) ; Haeger v. Johnson, 25 Or. App. 131, 548 P.2d 532 (1976) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Phillips v. Dukes (Matter of Dukes), 24 B.R. 404 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1982) ; Allan v. M & S Mortgage Co., 359 N.W.2d 238 (Mich. Ct. App. 1984) ; Riverside Nat'l Bank v. Lewis, 603 S.W.2d 169 (Tex. 1980) ; see also Stogsdill v. Cragin Fed. Bank, 645 N.E.2d 564 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995) (banking services, including cashing of checks, are covered by UDAP statute); Fortner v. Fannin Bank in Windom, 634 S.W.2d 74 (Tex. Civ. App. 1982) ; Lubbock Mortgage & Inv. Co. v. Thomas, 626 S.W.2d 611 (Tex. Civ. App. 1981) . The issue applies to real estate and securities transactions and those cases are also supportive of the inclusion of credit services. See also Ford v. City State Bank of Palacios, 44 S.W.3d 121 (Tex. App. 2001) (Although a personal loan is not subject to UDAP claims, the creditor may be so inextricably intertwined with the purchase for which the loan was sought that it is liable under UDAP.); In re Wiggins, 273 B.R. 839 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2001) (company that purchases individuals' structured settlements in exchange for cash, and that promises financial planning and other services, is engaged in the sale of services).

(n7)Footnote 7. Normand Josef Enters. v. Connecticut Bank, 230 Conn. 486, 646 A.2d 1289 (1994) ; Raymer v. Bay State Nat'l Bank, 384 Mass. 310, 424 N.E.2d 515 (1981) ; Farmers & Merchants State Bank v. Ferguson, 605 S.W.2d 320 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) , modified on other grounds, 617 S.W.2d 918 (Tex. 1981) . But see Chavers v. Fleet Bank (RI), N.A., 844 A.2d 666, 2004 R.I. LEXIS 38 (R.I. 2004) (Rhode Island Supreme Court interpreted its UDAP statute's exclusion of "actions or transactions permitted under laws administered by" a state or federal regulatory body to exclude a national bank's deceptive credit card solicitations because of the authority of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency to enforce Truth in Lending standards and the FTC Act's prohibition against unfair and deceptive acts).

(n8)Footnote 8. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.3.3 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n9)Footnote 9. La. Rev. Stat. § 51:1406(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. Suffern v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51563 (E.D. La. July 14, 2006) (mortgage lender is exempt; consumers claimed that lender failed to disburse insurance proceeds in manner required by loan agreement).

(n11)Footnote 11. Levine v. First Nat'l Bank, 917 So. 2d 1235 (La. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Id.

(n13)Footnote 13. In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) ; State v. O'Neill Investigations, Inc., 609 P.2d 520 (Alaska 1980) ; People ex rel. Daley v. Datacom Sys., Inc., 176 Ill. App. 3d 697, 531 N.E.2d 839 (1988) . See Holley v. Gurnee Volkswagen & Oldsmobile, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7274 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 4, 2001) (repossession is in trade or commerce). But see Walker v. Gallegos, 167 F. Supp. 2d 1105 (D. Ariz. 2001) (false allegations that creditor made in repossession complaint against person who was not original buyer are too attenuated from sale or advertisement of merchandise to be covered). See Losure v. Capital One Services, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3977 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 23, 2006) (court held that a debt collector's activities in collecting for a credit card issuer were covered as they fell within definition of trade and commerce. But see City of Cars, Inc. v. Simms, 526 So. 2d 119 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1988) (post-sale repossession practices not covered); Pursell v. First Am. Nat'l Bank, 937 S.W.2d 838 (Tenn. 1996) (post-sale repossession practices do not relate to the original sale and are thus not covered).

(n14)Footnote 14. In re Western Acceptance Corp., 788 P.2d 214 (Idaho 1990) ; Baird v. Norwest Bank, 843 P.2d 327 (Mont. 1992) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.03

§ 4.03 General Definition of Deception and Unfairness

[1] Deception

The UDAP deception standard is a broad and expansive one. A detailed examination of state case law defining UDAP deception is beyond the scope of this volume. n1 But, briefly, UDAP deception is much broader than common law fraud. n2 Intent is generally not required, n3 and knowledge of a statement's falsity, "scienter," is not a necessary element of deception. n4 A seller's good faith is not a defense; n5 neither is the fact that the seller has ceased the deceptive practice at the time of the suit. n6 A standard approved by the Supreme Court and the U.S. Circuit Courts is that actual deception is unnecessary; all that need be shown is that the practice has the "capacity" or "tendency" to deceive. n7

Puffing is a common defense to FTC actions, although usually not a successful one. n8 To prove that a claim is mere puffing, the seller will have to show that the exaggerated claim is harmless, purely fanciful, or a spoof, calculated to amuse and with no capacity to deceive. n9

In determining whether a practice has a capacity or tendency to deceive, federal courts historically have considered whether the ignorant, the unthinking, the credulous, and the least sophisticated consumer would be deceived. n10 While it may not be enough if only an insignificant and unrepresentative segment of the public is misled, a practice can be deceptive even if most consumers are not misled and only especially vulnerable consumers are deceived.

Literally true statements can be deceptive. n11 A literally true statement may have implications that are deceptive. Deception can be accomplished through innuendo and not just outright false statements. n12 A statement or omission may convey more than one reasonable meaning, and if one of those meanings is deceptive, it violates the UDAP statute. n13

One of the most important uses of a UDAP statute is to attack the failure to disclose material facts. Where sellers do not make affirmative misrepresentations or it is difficult to prove oral misrepresentations, the key to a UDAP case often is the claim that the seller did not disclose important information.

In a surprising number of situations where the consumer is having difficulty explaining what was deceptive about the seller's conduct, the solution is found in detailing what was not said--what important information was not disclosed to the consumer. For example, a finance company offers to refinance a loan at far worse terms than are available elsewhere, but the complexity of the transaction is such that the consumer does not understand this. The best approach may be to claim it is deceptive for the creditor to fail to disclose that preferable terms are available elsewhere. n14

Representations are deceptive if necessary qualifications are not made, if material facts are not disclosed, or if these disclosures or qualifications are too inconspicuous. n15 Several UDAP statutes, however, explicitly require that non-disclosure be knowing or intentional. n16 Some other courts imply the same requirements into the statute; sellers need not disclose information they do not know and should not have known. n17 "To tell less than the whole truth is a well known method of deception." n18 Even if proper disclosures are made in writing, if a sales presentation effectively obscures the meaning of those disclosures, the total representation is deceptive. n19

Deception can be found where there is no breach of contract or warranty. n20 Waiver, ratification, and other common law defenses do not apply to a UDAP claim because the claim is not based on the contract, but on oral and other misrepresentations. n21 For the same reason, the following do not apply to UDAP claims:

- The parol evidence rule; n22
- Contractual limitations on liability; n23
- Contractual limitations on remedies; n24
- Privity of contract; n25
- A practice is deceptive even if subsequently clarified; n26
- Point of sale disclosure is not sufficient to clarify deceptive media advertising; n27
- Estoppel. n28

The doctrine of voluntary payment, whereby money paid with full knowledge of the facts generally cannot be recovered, even if the demand is unlawful, n29 also should not apply to UDAP claims. Payments made as a result of fraud, n30 under mistake of law, n31 or duress or compulsion n32 are not "voluntary."

[2] Unfairness

Many state UDAP statutes, patterning themselves after the FTC Act, prohibit not only deceptive but also "unfair" acts or practices. This unfairness standard reaches various abusive business practices that are not deceptive. While deception is a broad standard, particularly when the failure to disclose is aggressively challenged as a deceptive practice, certain practices do not mislead, but only take advantage of consumers. In states providing a private right of action for unfair practices, consumers are given a highly flexible remedy that can be used innovatively. n33

The FTC's 1994 Reauthorization Act defines those unfair practices that the FTC can declare unlawful:

> "The Commission shall have no authority [through FTC adjudications or rulemaking] to declare unlawful an act or practice on the grounds that such act or practice is unfair unless the act or practice causes or is likely to cause substantial injury to consumers which is not reasonably avoidable by consumers themselves and not outweighed by countervailing benefits to consumers or to competition. In determining whether an act or practice is unfair, the Commission may consider established public policies as evidence to be considered with all other evidence. Such public policy considerations may not serve as a primary basis for such determination." n34

At the time of the early development of state UDAP case law in the 1960s and 1970s, the FTC utilized the " S&H" definition of unfairness: whether the practice is within the penumbra of common law, statutory, or other established concepts of fairness; whether it is immoral, unethical, oppressive, or unscrupulous; and whether it causes substantial injury. n35 As described above, a different definition is codified now in the FTC Act. Nevertheless, most courts in interpreting state UDAP statutes do not apply this current FTC unfairness definition. Instead, they continue to use the " S&H" standard. n36 The Comptroller of the Currency, which enforces the FTC Act against national banks, has adopted the FTC's standard. n37

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 4.2 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fisher v. Quality Hyundai, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 407 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2002) (UDAP statute provides broader protections than common law); Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Philip Morris, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 2d 198 (2001) , costs/fees proceeding, 190 F. Supp. 2d 407 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) ; Meyer v. Dygert, 156 F. Supp. 2d 1081 (D. Minn. 2001) ; Parker-Smith v. Sto Corp., 262 Va. 432, 551 S.E.2d 615 (2001) (construing false advertising statute); State ex rel. Brady v. Publishers Clearing House, 787 A.2d 111 (Del. Ch. 2001) ; State ex rel. Brady v. Gardiner, 2000 Del. Super. LEXIS 208 (June 5, 2000) ; Chandler v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 329 Ill. App. 3d 729, 768 N.E.2d 60 (2002) (one goal of UDAP statute was to give protection broader than that afforded by common law fraud); Campbell v. Beak, 568 S.E.2d 801 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) (scienter and intent unnecessary); Billingham v. Dornemann, 771 N.E.2d 166 (Mass. App. Ct. 2002) (application of common law fraud restrictions to UDAP claim was error); Miller v. Keyser, 90 S.W.3d 712 (Tex. 2002) .

(n3)Footnote 3. FTC v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U.S. 67, 54 S. Ct. 315, 78 L. Ed. 655 (1934) ; FTC v. Amy Travel Serv., Inc., 875 F.2d 564 (7th Cir. 1989) (intent unnecessary even for action for monetary redress). But see State ex rel. Brady v. 3-D Auto World, 2000 Del. Super. LEXIS 17 (Jan. 19, 2000) (plaintiff must show that defendant intended that others rely on omission).

(n4)Footnote 4. Equitable Life Assurance Soc. v. Porter-Englehart, 867 F.2d 79 (1st Cir. 1989) (Massachusetts law); Clarkson v. Orkin Exterminating Co., 761 F.2d 189 (4th Cir. 1985) (South Carolina law); In re Russell, 181 B.R. 616 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 1995) (liability shown where dealer should have been aware of damage to vehicle). But see Ji v. Palmer, 333 N.J. Super. 451, 755 A.2d 1221 (App. Div. 2000) (only knowing omissions are UDAP violations).

(n5)Footnote 5. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. FTC, 849 F.2d 1354 (11th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1041, 109 S. Ct. 865, 102 L. Ed. 2d 989 (1989) ; Chrysler Corp. v. FTC, 561 F.2d 357 (D.C. Cir. 1977) ; Gray v. North Carolina Ins. Underwriting Ass'n, 352 N.C. 61, 529 S.E.2d 676 (2000) . Smith v. Baldwin, 611 S.W.2d 611 (Tex. 1980) (substantial performance not a defense). But cf. Sprenger v. Trout, 375 N.J. Super. 120, 866 A.2d 1035, 1047-48 (App. Div. 2005) (substantial compliance may be a defense, but not shown here where repair shop had many opportunities to provide paperwork required by UDAP regulation).

(n6)Footnote 6. Beneficial Corp. v. FTC, 542 F.2d 611 (3d Cir. 1976) ; Fedders Corp. v. FTC, 529 F.2d 1398 (2d Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 818, 97 S. Ct. 63, 50 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1976) .

(n7)Footnote 7. FTC v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 380 U.S. 374, 85 S. Ct. 1035, 13 L. Ed. 2d 904 (1965) ; FTC v. Raladam Co., 316 U.S. 149, 62 S. Ct. 966, 86 L. Ed. 1336 (1942) ; FTC v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U.S. 67, 54 S. Ct. 315, 78 L. Ed. 655 (1934) ; FTC v. Royal Milling Co., 288 U.S. 212, 53 S. Ct. 335, 77 L. Ed. 706 (1933) ; Clarkson v. Orkin Exterminating Co., 761 F.2d 189 (4th Cir. 1985) (South Carolina law); American Home Prods. Corp. v. FTC, 695 F.2d 681 (3d Cir. 1983) ; Aurigemma v. Arco Petroleum Products Co., 734 F. Supp. 1025 (D. Conn. 1990) ; Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp., 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 (1983) (actual deception unnecessary under Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17, 200to obtain private injunction or where restitution necessary to prevent unfair practice). FTC v. Freecom Communications, Inc., 401 F.3d 1192, 1203 (10th Cir. 2005) (reciting likely to deceive standard). See also FDIC Financial Institution Letter, Unfair or Deceptive Acts or Practices by State-Chartered Banks (Mar. 11, 2004), available at www.fdic.gov/news/financial/2004/fil2604a.html (adopting FTC standard). FTC v. Cyberspace.com, 453 F.3d 1196 (9th Cir. 2006) (proof of deception not necessary, but evidence that large number of consumers were deceived is highly probative).

(n8)Footnote 8. FTC v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 380 U.S. 374, 85 S. Ct. 1035, 13 L. Ed. 2d 904 (1965) ; J.B. Williams Co. v. FTC, 381 F.2d 884 (6th Cir. 1967) . But see Bernstein v. Extendicare Health Servs., Inc., 653 F. Supp. 2d 939 (D. Minn. 2009) (statement insufficiently specific); Stearns v. Select Comfort Retail Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48367 (N.D. Cal. June 5, 2009) ("perfect night's sleep" is puffing).

(n9)Footnote 9. FTC v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 380 U.S. 374, 85 S. Ct. 1035, 13 L. Ed. 2d 904 (1965) .

(n10)Footnote 10. The FTC's current deception standard is somewhat different than that adopted by federal courts or by courts interpreting state UDAP statutes--that the practice is "likely" to deceive consumers acting reasonably (i.e., reasonably for consumers possessing the degree of sophistication that those consumers actually possess). See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.9 (7th ed. 2008). See also Cobb v. Monarch Fin. Co., 913 F. Supp. 1164 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (in order to constitute a deceptive practice under Illinois UDAP statute, it is enough that statement be misleading); Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Ct., 97 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 190, 195 (2002) . The FTC's policy statement setting forth its current standard is included as an appendix to its decision in In re Cliffdale Assocs., Inc., 103 F.T.C. 110 (1984) . The Comptroller of the Currency, which enforces the FTC Act against national banks, has adopted the FTC's standard. See OCC Advisory Letter 2002-3, Guidance on Unfair or Deceptive Acts or Practices (Mar. 22, 2002). See also OCC Advisory Letter 2003-2, Guidelines for National Banks to Guard Against Predatory and Abusive Lending Practices (Feb. 21, 2003) (applying analysis to predatory lending practices). See Top Rank, Inc. v. Gutierrez, 236 F. Supp. 2d 637 (W.D. Tex. 2001) (Under Texas UDAP, an act is "false, misleading, or deceptive" if it has the capacity to deceive an "ignorant, unthinking, or credulous person.").

(n11)Footnote 11. Ambrose v. New Eng. Ass'n of Schs. and Colls., Inc., 252 F.3d 488 (1st Cir. 2001) ; American Home Prods. Corp. v. FTC, 695 F.2d 681 (3d Cir. 1983) ; Parker-Smith v. Sto Corp., 262 Va. 432, 551 S.E.2d 615 (2001) (construing false advertising statute). Aspinall v. Philip Morris Cos., 813 N.E.2d 476 (Mass. 2004) . FTC v. Peoples Credit First, LLC, 2006-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75192, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38545 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 18, 2005) (solicitation for "platinum card" gave false impression that major credit card was being offered, even though definitions section disclosed that product was buying club membership); FTC v. Cyberspace.com, 453 F.3d 1196 (9th Cir. 2006) (small print on back of fake invoice disclosed that cashing "refund" check committed consumer to purchase of Internet service, billed to monthly phone bill; solicitation was deceptive).

(n12)Footnote 12. Regina Corp. v. FTC, 322 F.2d 765 (3d Cir. 1963) ; Minnesota ex rel. Hatch v. Fleet Mortgage Corp., 158 F. Supp. 2d 962 (D. Minn. 2001) (promoting "free trial period" while obscuring fact that monthly charges will be assessed unless consumer cancels is deceptive); Chandler v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 329 Ill. App. 3d 729, 768 N.E.2d 60 (2002) (ads that created impression that new loan was offered, when lender actually intended only to offer refinancing, could be deceptive).

(n13)Footnote 13. Carter v. Gugliuzzi, 168 Vt. 48, 716 A.2d 17 (1998) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See In re Milbourne, 108 B.R. 522 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) . But see Nevarez v. O'Connor Chevrolet, Inc., 426 F. Supp. 2d 806, 815 (N.D. Ill. 2006) (statement that consumers were getting "best rate available" is mere opinion so not actionable as UDAP violation); Cooper v. GGGR Investments, L.L.C., 334 B.R. 179 (E.D. Va. 2005) (statement of opinion not a UDAP violation); Park Rise Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., v. Resource Construction Co., 2006 Colo. App. LEXIS 926 (Colo. Ct. App. June 15, 2006) ("quality construction" is puffing).

(n15)Footnote 15. FTC v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 778 F.2d 35 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (small print disclosure cannot save deceptive general claim); Sterling Drug, Inc. v. FTC, 741 F.2d 1146 (9th Cir. 1984) ; American Home Prods. Corp. v. FTC, 695 F.2d 681 (3d Cir. 1983) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Varacallo v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 332 N.J. Super. 31, 752 A.2d 807 (App. Div. 2000) ; Ji v. Palmer, 333 N.J. Super. 451, 755 A.2d 1221 (App. Div. 2000) (only knowing omissions are UDAP violations); Colonial County Mut. Ins. Co. v. Valdez, 30 S.W.3d 514 (Tex. App. 2000) ; Nwaigwe v. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 27 S.W.3d 558 (Tex. App. 2000) . See De La Cruz v. Cohen (In re Cohen), 191 B.R. 599 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1996) (New Jersey UDAP statute requires that omissions be knowing, with intent that others rely on them, resulting in ascertainable damages, but knowledge and intent are not required in the case of affirmative acts), aff'd on other grounds, 106 F.3d 52 (3d Cir. 1997) , aff'd, 523 U.S. 213 (1988) . See, e.g., Crandall v. Grbic, 138 P.3d 365, 378 (Kan. Ct. App. 2006) (statute requires willfulness for omissions); Vagias v. Woodmont Props., L.L.C., 384 N.J. Super. 129, 894 A.2d 68 (App. Div. 2006) (intent is necessary for omissions but statement that house was "in Montville" is affirmative misrepresentation).

(n17)Footnote 17. Griffin v. Security Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs., 33 F. Supp. 2d 926 (D. Kan. 1998) (omission must be willful); Hayes v. Hambruch, 841 F. Supp. 706 (D. Md. 1994) , aff'd, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 22272 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Siudyla v. ChemExec Relocation Sys., Inc., 23 Conn. App. 180, 579 A.2d 578 (1990) (no UDAP violation where real estate seller was not in position to make representations about the property and so advised buyer). The seller may have a duty under a law or regulation to investigate and discover certain facts, in which case knowledge will be imputed. Benik v. Hatcher, 358 Md. 507, 750 A.2d 10 (2000) .

(n18)Footnote 18. P. Lorillard Co. v. FTC, 186 F.2d 42, 58 (4th Cir. 1950) . See Ramirez v. C.L.A.S., Inc., 2000 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 6 (Mass. App. Ct. Jan. 13, 2002) (failure to disclose that vehicle lacked visible VIN and could not be legally driven until state provided replacement VIN). But see Key v. Lewis Aquatech Pool Supply, Inc., 58 Va. Cir. 344 (2002) (nondisclosure not a UDAP violation where it was not deliberately deceptive).

(n19)Footnote 19. Horizon Corp., 97 F.T.C. 464 (1981) . More on failure to disclose as a UDAP violation is found at National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 4.2.14 (6th ed. and Supp.).

(n20)Footnote 20. Prestwick Golf Club, Inc. v. Prestwick Ltd. P'ship, 331 S.C. 385, 503 S.E.2d 184 (Ct. App. 1998) , reh'g denied, (Aug. 20, 1998); Heller v. Silverbranch Constr. Corp., 376 Mass. 621, 382 N.E.2d 1065 (1978) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Sergeant Oil & Gas Co. v. National Maint. & Repair, 861 F. Supp. 1351 (S.D. Tex. 1994) . But see Vera v. North Star Dodge Sales, Inc., 989 S.W.2d 13 (Tex. App. 1998) (waiver of claims in post-transaction settlement is permitted).

(n22)Footnote 22. Torrance v. AS & L Motors, 459 S.E.2d 67 (N.C. Ct. App. 1995) ; Love v. Keith, 383 S.E.2d 674 (N.C. Ct. App. 1989) . Devan Motors of Fairfield, Inc. v. Infiniti Div. of Nissan N. Am., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25161 (D. Conn. Dec. 14, 2004) ; Wall v. Planet Ford, Inc., 825 N.E.2d 686, 692 (Ohio App. 2005) . See also Eicher v. Mid Am. Fin. Inv. Corp., 270 Neb. 370, 702 N.W.2d 792, 2005 Neb. LEXIS 157 (2005) . But see Yocca v. Pittsburgh Steelers Sports, Inc., 854 A.2d 425 (Pa. 2004) (applying parol evidence rule to rebut claim of justifiable reliance on brochure).

(n23)Footnote 23. Cummings v. HPG Int'l, Inc., 244 F.3d 16 (1st Cir. 2001) (Mass. law) (party cannot induce a contract by fraudulent representation and then use contractual devices to escape liability); International Nickel Co. v.

Trammel Crow Distrib., 803 F.2d 150 (5th Cir. 1986) (Texas law); Bakhico Co. v. Shasta Beverages, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14266 (N.D. Tex. 1998) ; McCullough v. Lewensohn, 221 Wis. 2d 595, 586 N.W.2d 698 (1998) (contractual disclaimer does not affect UDAP liability). But see Lefebvre Intergraphics, Inc. v. Snaden Mach., Ltd., 946 F. Supp. 1358 (N.D. Ill. 1996) .

(n24)Footnote 24. High Plains Nat'l Gas Co. v. Warren Petroleum Co., 875 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1989) (Texas law); Bakhico Co. v. Shasta Beverages, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14266 (N.D. Tex. 1998) (waiver of right to seek indemnity from third party not itself subject to suit). But see Kruger v. Subaru of Am., Inc., 996 F. Supp. 451 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (where UDAP claim based solely on breach of warranty and where limitation on remedy clause found valid for purposes of warranty claim).

(n25)Footnote 25. Wellborn v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 970 F.2d 1420 (5th Cir. 1992) (Texas law); In re Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether Prods. Liab. Litig., 175 F. Supp. 2d 593 , recons. denied, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13886 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 6, 2001) (plaintiffs could assert UDAP claim against gasoline manufacturers who sold gasoline to the public with additives that leaked into plaintiffs' water supply); Reisman v. KPMG Peat Marwick LLP, 965 F. Supp. 165 (D. Mass. 1997) ; Boos v. Abbott Labs., 925 F. Supp. 49 (D. Mass. 1996) ; Ciardi v. F. Hoffmann-La Roche, Ltd., 436 Mass. 53, 762 N.E.2d 303 (2002) ; Gennari v. Weichert Co. Realtors, 148 N.J. 582, 691 A.2d 350 (1997) ; Vitolo v. Dow Corning Corp., 166 Misc. 2d 717, 634 N.Y.S.2d 362 (Sup. Ct. 1995) , aff'd, modified, 234 A.D.2d 361, 651 N.Y.S.2d 104 (2d Dept. 1996) ; Bohls v. Oakes, 75 S.W.3d 473 (Tex. App. 2002) , pet. for rev. denied, (Sept. 12, 2002), mot. for reh'g on pet. for discretionary rev. denied, (Oct. 31, 2002); Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc. v. Cabler, 73 S.W.3d 363 (Tex. App. 2002) , pet. for rev. filed, (May 13, 2002), pet. for rev. denied, (Aug. 29, 2002), reh'g denied, (Oct. 17, 2002); Long Distance Int'l, Inc. v. Telefonos de Mex., S.A., 2002 Tex. App. LEXIS 1839 (Mar. 13, 2002), 2002 Tex. App. LEXIS 6330 (Tex. App. Aug. 30, 2002) . Speakman v. Allmerica Fin. Life Ins., 367 F. Supp. 2d 122 (D. Mass. 2005) (privity unnecessary for UDAP claims except those involving breach of warranty, but defendant must have taken active role in the wrongful conduct); Bildstein v. MasterCard Int'l, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10763 (S.D.N.Y. June 6, 2005) ; Pelican Ventures LLC v. Azimut S.p.A., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26764, 18 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. D 242 (S.D. Fla. July 28, 2004) ; State ex rel. Miller v. Cutty's Des Moines Camping Club, Inc., 694 N.W.2d 518 (Iowa 2005) ; State v. Weinschenk, 868 A.2d 200 (Me. 2005) . But cf. Marshall v. Kusch, 84 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. App. 2002) (original seller can be liable for making misrepresentation that reaches ultimate buyer; also liable if original seller benefits from intermediate buyer's resale; neither shown here).

(n26)Footnote 26. Resort Car Rental Sys., Inc. v. FTC, 518 F.2d 962 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied sub nom. Mackenzie v. United States, 423 U.S. 827 (1975) .

(n27)Footnote 27. State v. Amoco Oil Co., 97 Wis. 2d 226, 293 N.W.2d 487 (1980) .

(n28)Footnote 28. ARA Auto. Group v. Central Garage, Inc., 124 F.3d 720 (5th Cir. 1997) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Randazzo v. Harris Bank Palatine, 262 F.3d 663 (7th Cir. 2001) ; Progressive Mich. Ins. Co. v. United Wis. Life Ins. Co., 84 F. Supp. 2d 848, 854 (E.D. Mich. 2000) ; Cotton v. Med-Cor Health Info. Solutions, Inc., 221 Ga. App. 609, 472 S.E.2d 92 (1996) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Buechlin v. Ogden Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 159 Ill. App. 3d 237, 250, 251, 511 N.E.2d 1330 (1987) (where seller committed fraud in misrepresenting used car as "new," buyer did not waive claims by paying for car after learning of fraud); Williams v. Consolvo, 237 Va. 608, 615, 379 S.E.2d 333 (1989) ; Kemp v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 393 F.3d 1354 (11th Cir. 2004) (Georgia's codification of voluntary payment doctrine does not apply to payment that is product of fraud).

(n31)Footnote 31. Durant v. Servicemaster, 159 F. Supp. 2d 977, 981 (E.D. Mich. 2001) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Randazzo v. Harris Bank Palatine, 262 F.3d 663, 668 n.1 (7th Cir. 2001) (lengthy discussion of circumstances that may constitute duress). But cf. King v. First Capital Fin. Servs. Corp., 828 N.E.2d

1125 (Ill. 2005) (no coercion where consumers did not sufficiently allege that they were required either to pay illegal fee or to forego loans).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Curtis Mfg. Co. v. Plastic-Clip Corp., 888 F. Supp. 1212 (D.N.H. 1994) (New Hampshire UDAP statute's list of unfair and deceptive acts is non-exhaustive, and the facts can establish that other conduct is unfair). See also In re Pharmaceutical Indus. Avg. Wholesale Price Litig., 252 F.R.D. 83, 95-96 (D. Mass. 2008) (listing states that broadly prohibit unfair practices); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Protection in the States: A 50-State Report on Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices Statutes (Feb. 2009), available at www.consumerlaw.org (state-by-state survey of substantive prohibitions of UDAP statutes).

(n34)Footnote 34. The Federal Trade Commission Act Amendments of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-312, § 9, adding a new 15 U.S.C. § 45(n) (Aug. 26, 1994).

(n35)Footnote 35. See § 4.04[1][i] infra.

(n36)Footnote 36. Pepsi-Cola Metro. Bottling Co. v. Checkers, Inc., 754 F.2d 10 (1st Cir. 1985) (Massachusetts law); Basnight v. Diamond Developers, Inc., 146 F. Supp. 2d 754 (North Carolina law) , costs/fees proceeding, mot. denied, 178 F. Supp. 2d 589 (M.D.N.C. 2001) ; Informix Software, Inc. v. Oracle Corp., 927 F. Supp. 1283 (N.D. Cal. 1996) ; Brandewiede v. Emery Worldwide, 890 F. Supp. 79 (D. Conn. 1994) ; Curtis Mfg. Co. v. Plastic-Clip Corp., 888 F. Supp. 1212 (D.N.H. 1994) ; Retail Serv. Assocs. v. Conagra Pet Prods. Co., 759 F. Supp. 976 (D. Conn. 1991) ; Lake Mary Ltd. P'ship v. Johnston, 551 S.E.2d 546 (N.C. App.) , rev. denied, 557 S.E.2d 538 , rev. denied, mot. granted, 557 S.E.2d 539 (N.C. 2001) . See also Dalton v. Camp, 353 N.C. 647, 656, 548 S.E.2d 704, 711 (2001) (defining unfair as "unethical or unscrupulous"); DeBondt v. Carlton Motorcars, Inc., 342 S.C. 254, 536 S.E.2d 399 (Ct. App. 2000) (South Carolina). State v. Moran, 861 A.2d 763 (N.H. 2004) (S&H definition provides guidance).

For a detailed analysis of both standards, how they differ, and how they have been applied to credit practices and other consumer transactions, see National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.3.3.3.2 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n37)Footnote 37. OCC Advisory Letter 2002-3, Guidance on Unfair or Deceptive Acts or Practices (Mar. 22, 2002). See OCC Advisory Letter 2003-2, Guidelines for National Banks to Guard Against Predatory and Abusive Lending Practices (Feb. 21, 2003) (applying unfairness analysis to predatory lending practices).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.04

§ 4.04 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

[1] Creditor Remedies and the FTC Credit Practices Rule

[a] General

The FTC Trade Regulation Rule Concerning Credit Practices ("FTC Rule" or "the Rule") n1 sets an important standard as to what type of creditor remedies are unfair or deceptive. The Rule applies to credit transactions generally. Transactions covered by the FTC Rule include lease-purchase contracts where the consumer is obligated to pay a specified amount and is permitted to become the owner of the property for little or no additional consideration. The Rule also covers creditors, such as physicians and contractors, who use deferred payment plans. The Rule does not, however, cover nonprofit organizations or a city that administers a housing rehabilitation grant program.

The FTC Rule prohibits the following six practices:

- Confessions of judgment, cognovits, and other waivers of the right to notice and opportunity to be heard in the event of suit (this provision does not apply to executory process in Louisiana);

- The debtor's waiver of protections concerning property exempt from attachment or execution, such as waiver of a homestead exemption, or the waiver of an exemption for property that is the subject of a security interest granted in that credit transaction (this provision does not prohibit security interests in exempt property);

- Most irrevocable wage assignments;

- Non-purchase money security interests in certain household goods, but creditors can still take security interests in works of art, items acquired as antiques, jewelry (except wedding rings), and electronic entertainment equipment (except one television and one radio);

- Pyramiding late charges by assessing more than one delinquency charge for one late payment (pyramiding late charges for a missed payment is not prohibited); and

- The failure to provide cosigners with a specified warning indicating the potential obligations of a cosigner. n2

The best sources for understanding the FTC's Credit Practices Rule are the FTC's Statement of Basis and Purpose for the Rule and, to a lesser extent, the informal FTC staff opinion letters on the Rule. n3 The FTC is empowered to enforce the rule.

The FTC Rule applies to finance companies, retailers, and other creditors within the FTC's jurisdiction. The FTC Rule does not apply to most banks. Nevertheless, the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS") and the FRB have enacted analogous rules for savings and loan institutions n4 and for all other banks, n5 respectively. Credit unions are covered by a comparable rule enacted by the National Credit Union Administration ("NCUA"). n6

While all of these rules are similar, the FRB, OTS and NCUA Rules only prohibit banks and credit unions from entering into credit agreements containing or enforcing the prohibited creditor remedies. The FRB, OTS and NCUA Rules do not prohibit a bank or credit union from purchasing consumer credit agreements containing the prohibited terms as long as the financial entity does not enforce the prohibited creditor remedy.

Important materials for interpreting the FRB Rule are FRB staff guidelines. n7

[b] Confession of Judgment Provision

The FTC Rule's confession of judgment prohibition bars the use of a clause waiving the right to a hearing before the creditor gets a repossession order from a magistrate. On the other hand, the Rule provision does not prohibit a "power of sale" clause that allows a creditor, upon default, to exercise a self-help right to take possession of property and sell it, nor does it prohibit waiver of notice of default. Furthermore, at least one court has ruled that a confession of judgment provision did not violate the Pennsylvania UDAP statute. n8 The protections of the confessed judgment prohibition cannot be waived by the consumer.

[c] Wage Assignment Provision

The Rule's prohibition of wage assignments contains an exception for wage assignments that are revocable at the will of the debtor. n9 According to informal FTC staff opinion letters, a creditor may require that revocation of a wage assignment be in writing, but not that it be done a specified number of days before it is given effect. Mandatory irrevocable wage assignments are allowed in the context of payroll deduction plans of the sort used in credit union loans, as long as only part of the debtor's paycheck is taken. Another exception allows assignment of wages that the consumer has already earned; n10 the FTC staff has construed this exception to allow assignment of the portion of his or her monthly salary that the consumer has earned at the time credit is extended.

[d] Provisions Dealing With Household Goods Security

Construing the prohibition against non-purchase money, non-possessory security interests in household goods, the FTC staff has indicated that the following items fall within the Rule's definition of "household goods": sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, telephones and answering machines, air conditioners, household pets, freezers, floor polishers, patio furniture, ovens, including microwave ovens, dishwashers, fans, clocks, lamps, toasters, and electric can openers. Duplicate items are protected by the Rule, except that only one television and one radio is protected.

The FTC staff has indicated that the following items would not fall within the definition of "household goods":

> "bicycles, typewriters, power tools, a butane tank, livestock, barbecue grills, luggage, carpets and > rugs, a hot tub, fireplace equipment, a child's car seat, firearms, camping and sports equipment, hunting and fishing equipment, cameras, musical instruments, home computers and computer equipment, lawn equipment, mechanic and carpenter tools, boats, snowmobiles, stamp and coin collections, stereo equipment, bank deposits, credit insurance proceeds, tape players, and VCRs."

The FTC staff considers "personal effects" to be limited to items that an individual would ordinarily carry about on his or her person and possessions of a uniquely personal nature, such as family photographs, personal papers, or a Bible. Where the FTC Rule is unclear, state law will determine whether an item is considered furniture or an appliance. A security interest in "fixtures" is permissible even if it includes items that might be considered household goods if they were not attached to the real property.

These staff opinions are not binding on the courts, but are often used by creditors to justify their practices.

A creditor who lists a security interest in household goods violates the Rule even if a clause in the contract says that the security interest does not apply to non-purchase money consumer loans.

[e] Pyramiding Late Charges Provision

The prohibition against pyramiding late charges does not, according to the FTC staff, affect a creditor's choice of accounting methods, as long as the method chosen does not result in the assessment of late charges where the only delinquency is attributable to late charges assessed on earlier installments. Pyramiding late charges for a missed payment is not prohibited.

[f] Cosigner Provision

The rule requires notice to cosigners in the form prescribed by the FTC. The type size and style of the notice should be clear and conspicuous.

A person who signs to be liable on someone else's consumer credit contract, but does not receive compensation, is a cosigner under the Rule even if he or she is described as a "buyer" in the contract documents. If the person is to be the co-owner of the property purchased or is to share in its use, however, he or she is not a cosigner. The same is true where two people apply for a loan together and are both entitled to receive the proceeds. A person who merely provides collateral for an extension of credit without becoming obligated on the underlying debt is not considered a cosigner. A creditor does not violate the Rule by providing the notice to persons involved in the transaction who may not technically be "cosigners," as long as there is no deception.

[g] Private UDAP Actions Utilizing the FTC Rule

There is generally no private right of action under the FTC Act for a violation of an FTC Rule. It seems clear, however, that a consumer can challenge an FTC Credit Practices Rule violation under the almost forty state UDAP statutes that prohibit "unfair" and/or "unconscionable" practices. The Rule is an official FTC ruling that use of certain creditor remedies is an "unfair" trade practice. This FTC ruling guides courts in interpreting what is unfair under a state UDAP statute. Moreover, under many state UDAP laws, it is a per se state UDAP violation to violate an FTC Rule. The Truth in Lending Act ("TILA") may also provide a remedy here.

[h] Attempts to Circumvent FTC Credit Practices Rule

Some creditors seek to circumvent the FTC Credit Practices Rule's provisions. Finance companies now wishing to take consumer goods as collateral can no longer identify the property as "all household goods," but must identify each specific item. Many creditors use a preprinted form listing the types of collateral falling outside the FTC Rule's definition of "household goods," and then just check appropriate items.

The FTC staff has also stated that it is unfair and deceptive to try to evade the Rule by taking a prohibited security interest in household goods and then later disclaiming that interest in the contract.

[i] Using the FTC Unfairness Theory, as Applied in the Credit Practices Rule

The FTC Credit Practices Rule Statement of Basis and Purpose is significant because it provides an "unfairness" approach which can apply to many kinds of adhesive consumer credit provisions, and not just the six creditor remedies prohibited by the Rule. The FTC defines an unfair practice as one that (1) causes substantial injury (including emotional distress); (2) is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition; and (3) consumers themselves could not reasonably have avoided.

This analysis is further bolstered by the D.C. Circuit opinion upholding the Credit Practices Rule. n11 The D.C. Circuit specifically approved of the FTC's three-part unfairness test, describing this standard as "the most precise definition of unfairness articulated by either the Commission or Congress," and finding that the FTC had properly applied this standard in its Credit Practices Rule.

Taking the third element first, the FTC concludes that consumers cannot reasonably avoid creditor remedies found in standard form credit agreements.

[j] Case Law Finding Creditor Remedies Unfair or Deceptive

Cases have established that:

- It is unfair to use terms that result in an overly harsh penalty
- It is deceptive to calculate late charges at variance with the language of the credit agreement
- Charging excessive late payment penalties has been found to be a UDAP violation.

Finally, a number of creditor remedies have been found unconscionable under the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC"), section 2-302. These unconscionable creditor remedies include cross-collateral n12 or waiver-of-defense n13 clauses, attorney fee provisions, consent to breach of the peace on self-help repossession, and waiver of the consumer's interest in personal property seized with the collateral unless the creditor is notified. Practices found unconscionable under the UCC can be argued to be unfair or unconscionable pursuant to a UDAP statute.

On the other hand, courts have upheld several established creditor remedies. A Washington court refused to strike down a due-on-sale clause where there was no showing of oppression or substantial injury. Nor does a bank have a duty to inform depositors that a hold has been placed on their account because of their default on a loan. n14 It is not a UDAP violation for a bank to extend the due date of a loan, even if the extension is concealed from a co-obligor. n15

The fact that a creditor does not, or claims not to, enforce a particular clause does not mean that its inclusion in the contract is not unfair or deceptive. Such a position would mean that creditors could reap the benefits of the clause's in terroram effect on consumers without any consequences. n16

[2] Credit Balances

The FTC has found it unfair or deceptive for a retailer:

- To fail to disclose to customers all material facts relating to its revolving credit balance practices (where an amount is owed to the customer in connection with the charge account);

- To fail to provide those having credit balances with periodic billing statements detailing the amounts of such balances, and with notices that they have a continuing right to request a refund of their credit balance; or

- To transfer out credit balances from charge customers' accounts without notice.

A lender may also commit a UDAP violation by misrepresenting the payoff amount on a loan. n17

[3] Misrepresentations, Nondisclosure of Credit Terms

The violation of a federal or state credit statute meant to protect the public may be a per se state UDAP violation. n18 The FTC has specifically held that violations of FRB Regulation Z n19 and the TILA n20 are unfair and deceptive practices under the FTC Act. n21 Oregon and Massachusetts UDAP regulations specify that a violation of the Federal Truth in Lending or Consumer Leasing Acts are per se UDAP violations.

Misrepresentations of easy credit terms are deceptive. n22 Promising a loan at 9 1/2% but including a variable rate has been held per se fraudulent. n23

Offering low-cost financing when the seller knows that there are conditions and restrictions on the availability of the low-cost financing is deceptive. n24 A credit-seller may engage in a deceptive practice where it promises to find the consumer the best available financing, but where it instead looks for financing that will provide a large discount on the assignment, in effect providing a kickback to the credit-seller. n25 Characterizing a fee as a "loan discount fee" when the fee does not actually reduce the interest rate may be deceptive. n26

It is a UDAP violation to misrepresent that a mortgage is not required as a condition of a loan. n27 Disclosing a security interest greater than that allowed by state law is deceptive. An advertisement offering $99 a month, no money down is deceptive where the creditor offers only one or the other term, but not both. n28

A credit card statement's disclosure of a service charge was deceptive where balances less than $25 were not being so charged. n29 Creditors cannot misrepresent a consumer loan as a cash advance on a refund of federal income taxes, and that as such they are superior to a normal consumer loan. n30 It is also deceptive to misrepresent a sale and lease-back scheme as a refinancing.

It is a UDAP violation to fail to disclose adequately all credit charges, such as not disclosing the annual percentage rate, the dollar credit charge, and the cash price, or to misrepresent the interest to be paid, or hiding the true cost of a loan. n31 Failing to disclose to the consumer that a new loan would be less expensive than refinancing an old loan is a UDAP violation. n32 Quoting a " per annum" rate based on a 360-day year is deceptive even though it is customary practice and even though the actual annual percentage rate ("APR") is subsequently disclosed. n33

Inducing the consumer to sign a contract by understating the amount of the monthly payment is a UDAP violation. n34 It is also deceptive to misrepresent the legality of the transaction. n35

Oral misrepresentations about the terms of a contract are UDAP violations, and the parol evidence rule is inapplicable to such a claim. n36 Baiting consumers with an offer of a new loan, and then switching them to a more expensive refinancing, is a UDAP violation. n37

[4] Oppressive Credit Practices

[a] Attempts to Evade Credit Legislation

It is deceptive to incorporate a consumer to avoid state usury limits on consumer loans. n38 Other schemes to avoid state usury laws may also be actionable. n39 Finding loopholes in the Federal TILA to hide the true cost of a loan is unfair and deceptive. n40

Hiding a broker's commission in the loan documents so that the consumer must pay extra at the closing is deceptive. n41 A creditor engages in unfair or deceptive conduct by entering into a car "lease" that is really a contract for sale, violating state and federal disclosure loans, disguising the finance charge, creating a large balloon payment at the end, and having a total of payments far exceeding the purchase price of the vehicle. n42 A car pawn scheme has been held to violate a UDAP statute where the pawn was really a loan scheme. n43 A creditor may commit a UDAP violation by listing a cosigner as a co-buyer, contrary to a state law designed to ensure that those who do not actually receive the property are treated only as guarantors. n44

[b] Excessive Credit Charges

Charging interest in excess of that allowed by state law is a UDAP violation. n45 Double-charging for the same interest charge is also a UDAP violation. n46 A federal court has found a 240% APR implicit in a pawn transaction to be oppressive and thus unfair. n47 Failing to disclose to the consumer that a new loan would be less expensive than refinancing an old loan is a UDAP violation.

Charging 200% interest on a $99,000 secured loan has been found unconscionable. n48 It is a UDAP violation to charge a disproportionate late fee that is void as a penalty under common law. n49

Another court has ruled that a "debt pooler" violates UDAP by charging an extremely high interest rate, adding substantial loan broker charges, placement fees, acceptance fees, and attorney fees, and falsely disclosing or failing to disclose important loan terms. n50

Selling credit insurance at inflated premiums, receiving a 25% commission, and failing to disclose these facts is a UDAP violation, where the finance company is in a fiduciary relationship. It is a UDAP violation to charge a higher post-default interest rate than that allowed by the credit agreement. n51 Imposing a prepayment charge contrary to the contract is also a UDAP violation where it reveals a pattern of misrepresentation that no fee would be charged. n52 It is also a UDAP violation to fail to credit debtors' payments promptly, while charging interest on the unpaid balance. n53

[c] Discrimination

It is a violation of federal and state law to discriminate on a prohibited basis in the granting of credit. n54 A UDAP claim may be an alternative or additional claim to these anti-discrimination statutes. Targeting a particular group for unfair practices should clearly be unfair.

[d] Coercive Tactics

In one case, a debtor was awarded approximately $3 million in UDAP multiple damages and $100,000 in attorney fees for a lender's misconduct in luring the debtor into a loan the debtor could not afford. n55 It can be an unfair practice for a seller to request the consumer to sign a blank credit card slip for certain purposes, and then add charges to that blank slip for other purposes. n56 Charging a consumer's credit card account without authorization is a UDAP violation. n57 It is unconscionable for a creditor to miscalculate the pay-off figure on a loan and then refuse to return the overpayment. n58 Coercing the consumer's payment of spurious charges in order to get a payoff statement so a home can be sold is a UDAP violation. n59

[5] Home Mortgage Loans

The Comptroller of the Currency has issued a detailed analysis of why certain lending practices are predatory and abusive. n60 The OCC states a fundamental characteristic of predatory lending is the aggressive marketing of credit to prospective borrowers who cannot afford to repay it. Typically, such credit is underwritten predominantly on the basis of the foreclosure value of the home. The OCC identifies a variety of other practices that accompany the marketing of abusive loans:

- Loan flipping, i.e., frequent refinancings that result in little or no economic benefit to the borrower and are undertaken with the primary objective of generating fees or prepayment penalties;
- Refinancings of special subsidized mortgages issued by government or non-profit agencies;
- Packing of excessive and hidden fees into the amount financed;
- Using loan terms such as negative amortization to make it harder for borrowers to repay the debt;
- Using balloon payments to conceal the true burden of the refinancing and to force borrowers into costly refinancing transactions or foreclosures;
- Targeting older, financially unsophisticated, or otherwise vulnerable borrowers for inappropriate or excessively expensive credit products;
- Targeting borrowers who could qualify for mainstream credit products and terms;
- Inadequately disclosing the true costs and risks of a loan, and its appropriateness or inappropriateness for the particular borrower;
- Offering single premium credit life insurance;
- Using mandatory arbitration clauses.

A second Comptroller Advisory Letter advises national banks to set clear standards to avoid acquiring predatory loans originated by brokers. n61

A creditor committed an unfair practice by conspiring with a home seller to avoid a purchase and sale agreement by stalling, and then refusing to offer the home buyer a mortgage until it was too late for the buyer to find alternative financing. n62 It is deceptive for a creditor to represent that it will provide a mortgage loan, but then back out of the deal. n63 It is deceptive to claim falsely that a home purchaser would be eligible for low-cost financing through a government benefit program. n64 Failing to make specific disclosure of a recording fee for assigning the mortgage to another company, and then springing it upon the borrowers at closing, is an unfair practice. n65 Predatory mortgage lending which seeks to strip away a home's equity by luring the homeowner into an unaffordable loan that will result in foreclosure may give rise to a UDAP violation. n66 A lender's failure to disclose the disadvantageous cost or nature of a loan can lead to UDAP liability. n67 Submitting an inflated appraisal and misrepresenting to consumers that the payments on a loan will be set at an amount they can afford is deceptive. n68 A Connecticut appellate court held that it was an unfair practice under the state UDAP statute to lend at an arbitrarily high annual percentage rate while knowing that the borrower could not repay the loan unless it was refinanced by a second loan, and refusing to allow the borrower an opportunity to discuss or evaluate the terms of the second loan. n69 An intermediate appellate court has upheld a preliminary injunction obtained by the Massachusetts Attorney General that restricted foreclosures by a subprime lender on loans that combined four predatory features. n70 The court held that, even though each of the four loan features was legal in and of itself, it could be an unfair practice under the UDAP statute to make loans that combined all four features.

[6] Loan Brokers

Loan broker abuses are becoming so widespread that states are beginning to enact special statutes covering such abuses, which may provide their own remedial scheme or that violations may be treated as state UDAP violations. n71

A widespread form of loan broker abuse involves advance fees. The broker takes cash up front from the consumer, promising to find the consumer a loan, but never follows through and never refunds to the consumer the fee. The FTC's Telemarketing Rule prohibits brokers from requesting or receiving payment of any fee in advance of obtaining a loan when the broker has guaranteed or represented a high likelihood of success in obtaining the loan. n72

Similarly, loan brokers cannot take an advance fee to obtain a loan and then fail to refund that fee as promised when the broker does not obtain a loan. It is also deceptive to misrepresent that advance payments will be applied to the consumer's loan repayments and to fail to disclose to consumers various non-refundable charges imposed by the loan broker. n73

A widespread practice in both the home mortgage and auto finance industries is charging interest rates that include "yield spread premiums." Lenders provide brokers, car dealers, or other arrangers of credit a range of acceptable interest rates. If the broker arranges the loan at a rate higher than the minimum of that range, then the broker gets to keep all or some of the amount exceeding the minimum rate. Most litigation in this area concerning home mortgage loans is based on claims under the Federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. n74 In addition, it can also be a UDAP violation to fail to disclose to the consumer that the lender is willing to write the loan at a lower interest rate, and that all or some of the amount exceeding that lower rate is being paid to the arranger. n75

The Comptroller of the Currency has issued an advisory letter to the national banks it regulates, cautioning them of the heightened risk that loans originated by brokers and other intermediaries will be abusive. n76 The letter points out that, since these intermediaries do not take on the ultimate credit risk of the loan and are less intensely supervised than banks, they are more likely to be tempted to originate loans that the borrower does not have a reasonable prospect of repaying. The letter advises national banks to establish specific policies and procedures to avoid these loans. In litigating against a bank that acquired an abusive loan through a broker, it may be useful to inquire through discovery whether the bank had such policies and procedures in place.

[7] Debt Consolidators

Many state statutes prohibit the business of debt pooling or debt adjusting except by nonprofit agencies and lawyers. Check local laws.

[8] Mortgage Assistance Scams

Various scams involving foreclosure prevention, promised refinancing, assistance with filing bankruptcy, etc., to save consumer's homes have been found to be UDAP violations when the services, such as a referral to a bankruptcy attorney, were available for free and the promised activities never took place. n77

In another variant, entrepreneurs buy delinquent debts before foreclosure begins. Then they contact the homeowner, threaten foreclosure, and by one means or another, acquire control of the property. Firms even offer seminars on these tactics. n78 A Massachusetts court held that a home-saver who followed this pattern may have committed UDAP violations by representing to the homeowner that signing the agreements was a mere formality after the homeowner made it clear that he could not afford the payments. n79

A District of Columbia trial court found that a home-saver committed numerous deceptive and unconscionable acts. These included failure to disclose the appraised value of the home and that he was the other contracting party and would profit personally from the transaction; presenting himself as helping the homeowner save her home, when his real intention was to acquire the home for a pittance; and acquiring a home at a grossly disproportionate price from an aged and infirm homeowner. n80 The equitable mortgage doctrine may provide additional claims for homeowners who have been victims of homesaver fraud. In addition, a few jurisdictions have special laws applying to homesaver or foreclosure rescue frauds.

[9] Fringe Lenders: Pawnbrokers, Trading Posts, and Others

There is a growing trend toward fringe lending--non-traditional techniques to make small consumer loans at extremely high interest rates. UDAP claims may be helpful in dealing with auto pawns, refund anticipation loans, and pay day loans.

The FTC has accepted a number of consent agreements dealing with practices of trading posts serving Native Americans. These cases also have applicability to other pawnbroker situations. Pawnbrokers often fail to provide written notice of the sale of pawned goods, entitling the consumer to statutory damages under UCC section 9-507. n81

[10] Banking, Check Cashing Practices, "Telechecks" or Preauthorized Drafts

A series of cases have found excessive bank fees to be unconscionable. Another fast growing area of consumer abuse involves "telechecks," "preauthorized drafts," or "demand drafts." The technique can be perfectly legitimate--a party obtains the consumer's advance permission to have money taken from a checking account to pay an obligation. Instead of a signed check, the party presents to the bank an unsigned draft.

The abuse occurs where a scam operator obtains the consumer's account number and bank's routing number (the "MICR" numbers on the bottom of the check) and presents a draft to the bank without the consumer's authorization. n82 The same is the case with credit repair organizations, n83 and companies that promise, for a fee, to find the consumer unused scholarships and grants. n84 Other scam operators ask for the checking account number which is to be used only when specified services have been provided, but then take money out of the account before providing the services and without authorization. n85

The consumer's challenge on the withdrawal instead should be based on the fact that the consumer did not provide authorization for the merchant to debit the consumer's account. Because it is very likely that the consumer's own bank will bear the eventual loss if the consumer does not, n86 be prepared for the consumer's own bank to resist the consumer's claim. n87 A proposed revision of UCC Articles 3 and 4 would change the rule to put the loss in the first instance on the transferor of the check rather than the drawee-payor bank where a check is drawn on a consumer account and does not contain a handwritten signature purporting to be the consumer drawer's signature. n88 This might make the consumer's bank less resistant when the consumer claims he did not authorize the draft. Some states have already enacted non-uniform amendments to the UCC which accomplish this. n89

The FTC Telemarketing Rule prohibits any seller or telemarketer from obtaining or submitting for payment a check, draft, or other form of negotiable paper drawn on a person's checking, savings or other account without that person's express verifiable authorization. n90 Verifiable authorization means the consumer's express written authorization, tape recorded express oral authorization which must be made available to the consumer's bank on request, or written confirmation of the transaction sent to the consumer prior to submission of payment to the customer's bank. Effective March 31, 2003, the FTC applies these requirements to all methods of payment other than debit cards that are subject to the protection of the Electronic Fund Transfers Act and credit cards that are subject to the protections of the Truth in Lending Act. n91

Telemarketing rule violations may result not only in a UDAP claim against the seller, but the standards for verification may be useful to consumers in dealing with their own banks.

[11] Credit Reporting Agency Practices

Consumer litigants may argue that violations of the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act n92 ("FCRA") or state credit reporting statutes are per se state UDAP violations. n93 The FCRA itself states that, for purposes of FTC enforcement, violations are treated as unfair or deceptive practices. n94

In addition, a UDAP challenge should be considered for practices by both reporting agencies and suppliers of information to those agencies where those practices are not prohibited by the FCRA.

Amendments to the FCRA effective in 1997 preempt state laws imposing any requirement or prohibition with respect to a short laundry list of subject matter areas, including FCRA consumer dispute resolution processes, obligations of users of consumer reports, and some content of consumer reports. One of the subject matter areas preempted regards the obligations of furnishers (suppliers) of information to reporting bureaus.

While the specific scope of each area of preemption merits close analysis, n95 the effect of the new FCRA preemption on potential UDAP actions is unclear. Clearly, the FCRA provision overrides, in the subject matter areas that are preempted, any state law provision applying different requirements specifically to credit reporting activities. Whether more general standards with potential but no specific application to credit reporting, such as discrimination laws and UDAP, are also preempted is an open question and must be approached with care. Caution suggests raising UDAP claims only in strong factual cases and when one is prepared to argue the potential preemption issues. n96

In addition to the specific preemptions of state law generally, the FCRA also gives, to reporting agencies, users of consumer reports, and furnishers of information to reporting agencies, a limited immunity from certain tort claims. The FCRA, though, does not provide this qualified immunity for UDAP claims. Consequently, a UDAP claim may be important in a credit reporting case where tort claims are unavailable. n97

[12] Credit Card Finders

Firms may not misrepresent their ability to obtain credit cards for consumers, or claim that a full refund will be made if a card is not obtained, but then withhold a ten dollar processing fee. n98 Similarly, credit card finders may not misrepresent their relationship to creditors. n99

If the credit card finder markets its services over the telephone and promises a high likelihood of success in obtaining credit, the FTC's Telemarketing Rule prohibits requesting or receiving a fee or other consideration before the credit is obtained for the consumer. n100 The same Rule's general prohibitions against deception and abusive tactics also apply to credit card finder services that are marketed by telephone, even if the seller does not promise easy credit. n101 A telemarketer violated this prohibition by offering "pre-approved Resource Cards," when it only provided booklets and application forms for credit cards from other institutions. n102 Many states have a credit services organization act that applies to entities such as credit card finders who, for a fee, offer to obtain extensions of credit for consumers. The state may also have an applicable loan broker law, or its credit repair statute may cover entities that promise to arrange credit for consumers. n103

[13] Lost Credit Card Reporting Services

A number of companies offer, for a fee, to report to credit card issuers that a consumer has lost his or her credit cards. The FTC has ruled that it is deceptive for these companies not to disclose the limitations of the cardholder's maximum liability under the Consumer Credit Protection Act. n104

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawU.S. Federal Trade Commission ActionsGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Credit ReportingGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionUnfair & Deceptive Credit PracticesBanking LawFederal ActsFederal Trade Commission ActGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 16 C.F.R. pt. 444 (effective Mar. 1, 1985), reprinted in Vol. 1B infra. See also the accompanying Statement of Basis and Purpose, at 49 Fed. Reg. 7,740 (Mar. 1, 1984). After reviewing the regulation as required by the Regulatory Flexibility Act the FTC concluded, in 1995, that revisions to the rule were not warranted. 60 Fed. Reg. 24,805 (May 10, 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. The FTC has exempted New York contracts from the cosigner disclosure because state law offers similar or greater protections; see 51 Fed. Reg. 28,328 (Aug. 7, 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Informal FTC staff opinion letters should be available from Public Records, Federal Trade Commission, Room 130, Washington, D.C. 20580. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.1.3.1 (5th ed. 2001 and Supp.), for a detailed discussion of these letters and the Rule.

(n4)Footnote 4. 12 C.F.R. pt. 535.

(n5)Footnote 5. 12 C.F.R. §§ 227.11-227.16.

(n6)Footnote 6. See 12 C.F.R. § 706.

(n7)Footnote 7. 50 Fed. Reg. 47,036 (Nov. 14, 1985) , as updated at 51 Fed. Reg. 39,646 (Oct. 30, 1986) , and at 53 Fed. Reg. 29,225 (Aug. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Zhang v. Southeastern Fin. Group, Inc., 980 F. Supp. 787 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 16 C.F.R. § 444.2(a)(3)(i).

(n10)Footnote 10. 16 C.F.R. § 444.2(a)(3)(iii).

(n11)Footnote 11. American Fin. Servs. Ass'n v. FTC, 767 F.2d 957 (D.C. Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1011, 106 S. Ct. 1185, 89 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Williams v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., 350 F.2d 445 (D.C. Cir. 1965) ; In re Jackson, 9 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 1152 (W.D. Mo. 1971) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Quality Fin. Co. v. Hurley, 337 Mass. 150, 148 N.E.2d 385 (1958) ; Unico v. Owen, 50 N.J. 101, 232 A.2d 405 (1967) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Southington Sav. Bank v. Rodgers, 40 Conn. App. 23, 668 A.2d 733 (1995) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Norwich Sav. Soc'y v. Caldrello, 38 Conn. App. 859, 663 A.2d 415 (1995) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Baierl v. McTaggart, 245 Wis. 2d 632, 629 N.W.2d 277 (2001) (refusing to allow illegal clause to be severed so that remainder of lease could be enforced). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.2.3.3 (6th ed. 2004 and Supp.). Goodwin v. Hole No. 4, L.L.C., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86157 (D. Utah Nov. 15, 2006) (contract that is skillfully drawn to place virtually no obligation on seller may violate UDAP unconscionability prohibition).

(n17)Footnote 17. Osbourne v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 667 A.2d 1321 (D.C. App. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Brazier v. Sec. Pac. Mortg., Inc., 245 F. Supp. 2d 1136 (W.D. Wash. 2003) (RESPA requirements are incorporated into state UDAP statute).

(n19)Footnote 19. 12 C.F.R. pt. 226, reprinted in Vol. 1B infra.

(n20)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq., reprinted in Vol. 1B infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. Burnett v. Ala Moana Pawn Shop, Clearinghouse No. 46,771 (D. Hawaii 1991), aff'd, 3 F.3d 1261 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Tashof v. FTC, 437 F.2d 707 (D.C. Cir. 1970) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Peoples Trust & Sav. Bank v. Humphrey, 451 N.E.2d 1104 (Ind. Ct. App. 1983) (foreclosure dismissed, contract reformed, $1000 actual and $40,000 punitive damages awarded). See also Washington v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50804 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2006) (denying lender's motion for summary judgment; borrower's statement that she was promised lower interest rate creates fact issue even though she signed documents reflecting true interest rate).

(n24)Footnote 24. Illinois Attorney General Consumer Protection Rules, 14 Ill. Admin. Code §§ 475.620, 475.630; Stephenson v. Capano Dev., Inc., 462 A.2d 1069 (Del. 1983) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Fairman v. Schaumburg Toyota, Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9669 (N.D. Ill. July 10, 1996) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Hauschildt v. Ben. Wis., Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24668 (W.D. Wis. Dec. 17, 2003) (denial of motion to dismiss).

(n27)Footnote 27. Capitol Builders, Inc., 92 F.T.C. 274 (1978) (consent order); United Builders, Inc., 92 F.T.C. 291 (1978) (consent order).

(n28)Footnote 28. State v. Terry Buick, Inc., 520 N.Y.S.2d 497 (Sup. Ct. 1987) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Garland v. Mobil Oil Corp., 340 F. Supp. 1095 (N.D. Ill. 1972) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Beneficial Corp. v. FTC, 542 F.2d 611 (3d Cir. 1976) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Tashof v. FTC, 437 F.2d 707 (D.C. Cir. 1970) ; Taylor v. Bob O'Connor Ford, Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5095 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 10, 1998) ; Foster v. New Dimensions Funding, Clearinghouse No. 47,070 (D.N.H. Nov. 24, 1992). See DBC Fin., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) 24,700 (FTC Dkt. No. C-3931 2000) (consent order against company that falsely advertised ATM card as having free overdraft protection and no fees). Paying a yield spread premium to a mortgage broker solely for arranging a higher interest rate on a consumer's loan may be a UDAP violation in and of itself. Michalowski v. Flagstar Bank, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1245 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 24, 2002) . See also Conseco Fin. Serv. Corp. v. Hill, 556 S.E.2d 468 (Ga. Ct. App. 2001) (inducing the consumer to sign a contract by understating the amount of the monthly payment is a UDAP violation; misrepresenting the legality of the transaction, as well as failing to inform buyers of "step interest rate" and removing that page from their copy of contract, are UDAP violations). See also FTC v. Chase Fin. Funding, Inc., No. SACV04-549 (C.D. Cal. May 28, 2004), available at www.ftc.gov/opa/2004/chasefinancial.htm (stipulated permanent injunction) (misrepresenting that lender was offering fixed, low interest rate); FTC v. Stewart Fin. Co., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,477 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 4, 2003) (Civil Action No. 103CV-2648) (complaint alleging that subprime lender deceptively induced consumers to purchase expensive add-on products such as insurance and auto club memberships, and to participate in a direct deposit program that imposed additional fees), 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,499 (Oct. 28, 2003) (preliminary injunction). State of North Carolina v. NCCS Loans, Inc., 624 S.E.2d 371 (N.C. Ct. App. 2006) (payday lender's attempt to couch its loans as a rebate for entering into an internet service contract is violation of usury laws and UDAP violation).

(n32)Footnote 32. In re Milbourne, 108 B.R. 522 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Chern v. Bank of Am., 15 Cal. 3d 866, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310 (1976) .

(n34)Footnote 34. Conseco Fin. Servicing Corp. v. Hill, 556 S.E.2d 468 (Ga. App. 2001) , recons. denied, (Dec. 5, 2001).

(n35)Footnote 35. Id. (misrepresentation of legality of "straw man" or "buy for" arrangement).

(n36)Footnote 36. Wang v. Massey Chevrolet, 97 Cal. App. 4th 856, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (2002) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Chandler v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 329 Ill. App. 3d 729, 768 N.E.2d 60 (2002) .

(n38)Footnote 38. Rutter v. Troy Mortgage Servicing Co., 145 Mich. App. 116, 377 N.W.2d 846 (1985) . See also State ex rel. Bryant v. R & A Inv. Co., 336 Ark. 289, 985 S.W.2d 299 (1999) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Vaughan v. Kalyvas, 342 S.E.2d 617 (S.C. Ct. App. 1986) .

(n40)Footnote 40. Therrien v. Resource Fin. Group, 704 F. Supp. 322 (D.N.H. 1989) . See also Bernhauser v. Glen Ellyn Dodge, Inc., 288 Ill. App. 3d 984, 683 N.E.2d 1194 (1997) (use of model Truth in Lending [hereinafter TIL] disclosure form would not excuse UDAP violation that involved substance rather than form of disclosures).

(n41)Footnote 41. Russell v. Fidelity Consumer Disc. Co., 72 B.R. 855 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) .

(n42)Footnote 42. Barco Auto Leasing Corp. v. House, Clearinghouse No. 40,641 (Conn. Super. Ct. Oct. 26, 1983).

(n43)Footnote 43. Commonwealth v. Car Pawn of Va., 37 Va. Cir. 412 (1995) .

(n44)Footnote 44. Lee v. Nationwide Cassel, L.P., 660 N.E.2d 94 (Ill. App. Ct. 1995) .

(n45)Footnote 45. United Cos. Lending Corp. v. Sargeant, 20 F. Supp. 2d 192 (D. Mass. 1998) ; In re Arsenault, 184 B.R. 864 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1995) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Hill v. Allright Mortgage Co., 213 B.R. 934 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996) , aff'd in relevant part, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21406 (D. Md. July 10, 1997) . See McMaster v. CIT Group/Consumer Finance, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4760 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 8, 2006) (denying closing attorney's motion for summary judgment on claim that charging twice for title exam was UDAP violation).

(n47)Footnote 47. Burnett v. Ala Moana Pawn Shop, Clearinghouse No. 46,771 (D. Haw. 1991), aff'd, 3 F.2d 1261 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n48)Footnote 48. Carboni v. Arrospide, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 (Ct. App. 1991) .

(n49)Footnote 49. District Cablevision Ltd. P'ship v. Bassin, 828 A.2d 714 (D.C. 2003) .

(n50)Footnote 50. In re Fricker, 115 B.R. 809 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) . See also Williams v. Resolution GGF 04, 417 Mass. 377, 630 N.E.2d 581 (1994) (concurring opinion; dictum).

(n51)Footnote 51. Fielder v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 19 F. Supp. 2d 966 (W.D. Mo. 1998) , vacated on other grounds, 188 F.3d 1031 (8th Cir. 1999) (appellate decision holds that District Court did not have authority to issue injunction requiring creditor to move to have state court judgments amended to delete interest overcharges; remands that portion of case to state court).

(n52)Footnote 52. Stutman v. Chemical Bank, 95 N.Y.2d 24, 731 N.E.2d 608 (2000) .

(n53)Footnote 53. Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16747 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2003) .

(n54)Footnote 54. See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1691 (Equal Credit Opportunity Act); 42 U.S.C. § 3601 (Fair Housing Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1988 (Civil Rights Acts). See also Ch. 5 infra; Galbraith v. TAPCO Credit Union, 88 Wash. App. 939, 946 P.2d 1242 (1997) , rev. denied, 135 Wash. 2d 1006, 959 P.2d 125 (1998) .

(n55)Footnote 55. Sweeney v. Comfed Sav. Bank, Clearinghouse No. 45,751 (Mass. Super. Ct. 1991). But see Wachovia Bank & Trust v. Carrington Dev. Assocs., 459 S.E.2d 17 (N.C. Ct. App. 1995) (no UDAP violation for refusal to disburse additional funds on a construction loan because the borrower has defaulted in paying subcontractors).

(n56)Footnote 56. Sprayfoam, Inc. v. Durant's Rental Ctrs., Inc., 39 Conn. Supp. 78, 468 A.2d 951 (Super. Ct. 1983) .

(n57)Footnote 57. FTC v. Vacation Travel Club, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 22,822 (M.D. Fla. 1990) (consent order); FTC v. Creative Adver. Specialty House, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 22,740 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 10, 1989) (consent order); FTC v. Amy Travel Servs., Inc., 3 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 22,546 (N.D. Ill. 1988).

(n58)Footnote 58. Griffith v. Porter, 817 S.W.2d 131 (Tex. Ct. App. 1991) .

(n59)Footnote 59. Negrin v. Norwest Mortgage, Inc., 263 A.D.2d 39, 700 N.Y.S. 2d 184 (1999) (reversing grant of motion to dismiss).

(n60)Footnote 60. OCC Advisory Letter 2003-2, Guidelines for National Banks to Guard Against Predatory and Abusive Lending Practices (Feb. 21, 2003).

(n61)Footnote 61. OCC Advisory Letter 2003-3, Avoiding Predatory and Abusive Lending Practices in Brokered and Purchased Loans (Feb. 21, 2003).

(n62)Footnote 62. Pedwell v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 51 N.C. App. 236, 275 S.E.2d 565 (1981) .

(n63)Footnote 63. Investors, Inc. v. Hadley, 738 S.W.2d 737 (Tex. Ct. App. 1987) .

(n64)Footnote 64. Danny Darby Real Estate, Inc. v. Jacobs, 760 S.W.2d 711 (Tex. Ct. App. 1988) .

(n65)Footnote 65. Weatherman v. Gary-Wheaton Bank, 286 Ill. App. 3d 48, 676 N.E.2d 206 (1st Dist. 1996) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 186 Ill. 2d 472, 713 N.E.2d 543 (1999) .

(n66)Footnote 66. Associates Home Equity Servs. v. Troup, 343 N.J. Super. 254, 778 A.2d 529 (App. Div. 2001) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 6.7.4 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.). Many states have predatory lending laws that prohibit at least some abusive mortgage lending practices. See National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 12.2.4 (4th ed. 2009).

(n67)Footnote 67. Barker v. Altegra Credit Co. (In re Barker), 251 B.R. 250 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000) ; In re Milbourne, 108 B.R. 522 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) . See also Besta v. Beneficial Loan Co., 855 F.2d 532 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n68)Footnote 68. Vaughn v. Consumer Home Mortg., Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8233 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2003) . Charging an above-market price for an appraisal by concealing the lender's share of the fee may also be a UDAP violation. Szczubelek v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 215 F.R.D. 107 (D.N.J. 2002) .

(n69)Footnote 69. Monetary Funding Group, Inc. v. Pluchino, 867 A.2d 841 (Conn. App. 2005) .

(n70)Footnote 70. Com. v. Fremont Inv. & Loan, 2008 WL 2312648 (Mass. App. Ct. May 2, 2008).

(n71)Footnote 71. State of Washington v. WWJ Corp., 138 Wash. 2d 595, 980 P.2d 1257 (1999) (assessing $500,000 in UDAP civil penalties for violation of state mortgage broker statute).

(n72)Footnote 72. 16 C.F.R. § 310.4(a)(4). See also FTC v. Ideal Credit Referral Servs., Ltd., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,253 (W.D. Wash. 1997) (proposed consent decree); FTC v. Amstar Fin. Corp., Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,221 (C.D. Cal. 1997) (proposed consent decree).

(n73)Footnote 73. See State v. Gartenberg, 488 N.W.2d 496 (Minn. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n74)Footnote 74. See National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 12.2.1 (4th ed. 2009). See also Nosek v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co. (In re Nosek), 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 1279 (Bankr. D. Mass. June 30, 2006) (unspecified RESPA violation is UDAP violation).

(n75)Footnote 75. Michalowski v. Flagstar Bank, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1245 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 24, 2002) (paying yield spread premium to mortgage broker solely for arranging higher interest rate may be UDAP violation); Moses v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 982 F. Supp. 897 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss claim in home mortgage case). But see Ex parte Ford Motor Credit Co., 717 So. 2d 781 (Ala. 1997) (in transaction with unusually knowledgeable buyer, seller had no duty to disclose kickback it received from financing entity), on remand sub nom. Bramlett v. Adamson Ford, 717 So. 2d 790 (Ala. Civ. 1998) .

(n76)Footnote 76. OCC Advisory Letter 2003-3, Avoiding Predatory and Abusive Lending Practices in Brokered and Purchased Loans (Feb. 21, 2003).

(n77)Footnote 77. See State v. Midland Equities, 117 Misc. 2d 203, 458 N.Y.S.2d 126 (Sup. Ct. 1982) . The National Consumer Law Center has published a report detailing the fraudulent tactics homesavers use and the harm they cause. National Consumer Law Center, Dreams Foreclosed: The Rampant Theft of Americans' Homes Through Equity-Stripping Foreclosure "Rescue" Scams (June 2005), available at www.nclc.org. Representing homeowners victimized by foreclosure assistance scams is discussed in greater detail in National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures,Ch. 15 (2d ed. 2007).

(n78)Footnote 78. See Billingham v. Dornemann, 771 N.E.2d 166 (Mass. App. Ct. 2002) . But see In re Drew, 2006 BNH 29, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 1779 (Bankr. D.N.H. Aug. 17, 2006) (foreclosure rescue transaction not unfair when homeowner understood and agreed to essential elements of the transaction).

(n79)Footnote 79. See Billingham v. Dornemann, 771 N.E.2d 166 (Mass. App. Ct. 2002) .

(n80)Footnote 80. Jackson v. Byrd 2004 D.C. Super. LEXIS 19 (D.C. Super. May 11, 2004) , later op., 902 A.2d 778 (2004) (awarding damages). See also Eicher v. Mid Am. Fin. Investment Corp., 270 Neb. 370 (Neb. 2005) (upholding fraud and civil conspiracy judgment and award of attorney fees under UDAP statute against homesaver who told homeowners they were signing papers for a loan when actually they were transferring the home to the homesaver).

(n81)Footnote 81. Keith v. Howerton, 2001 Tenn. App. LEXIS 646 (Aug. 28, 2001) , appeal after remand, remanded, costs/fees proceeding, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 895 (Tenn. Ct. App. Dec. 19, 2002) ; Babbitt Bros. Trading Co., 84 F.T.C. 623 (1974) (consent order); Bruce Barnard Co. of Shiprock, Inc., 84 F.T.C. 680 (1974) (consent order); Lower Sunrise Trading Post, 84 F.T.C. 661 (1974) (consent order); McGee Traders, Inc., 84 F.T.C. 689 (1974) (consent order).

(n82)Footnote 82. In re National Credit Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 21 F. Supp. 2d 424 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n83)Footnote 83. FTC v. Ellis, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,179 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (proposed consent decree).

(n84)Footnote 84. FTC v. Student Aid Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,312 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (proposed consent decree).

(n85)Footnote 85. FTC v. Regency Servs., Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,219 (M.D. Fla. 1997) (proposed consent decree).

(n86)Footnote 86. See U.C.C. §§ 3-418, 4-208(a)(3).

(n87)Footnote 87. See U.C.C. § 3-308; U.C.C. § 3-406. The consumer must report the problem within a reasonable period of time after receiving the monthly statement. Problems arise where the consumer's returned checks are "truncated," meaning that the bank does not send the cancelled checks to the consumer as part of the monthly statement. (For example, all credit union share drafts are truncated.) Then the consumer may not notice the unauthorized check for some time. For a detailed description of consumer liability for unauthorized signatures, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law (3d ed. 2005).

(n88)Footnote 88. Uniform Commercial Code, Proposed Revisions to Articles 3 and 4, Council Draft No.1 (Nov. 8, 2001) (amending §§ 3-416, 3-417, 4-201, and 4-208). The Reporter's Note explains that the proposed change is prompted by the "difficulties with telephonically originated checks.").

(n89)Footnote 89. E.g., California, Ch. 316 of 1996 statutes, amending various sections of the U.C.C. to shift the risk of loss for fraudulent demand drafts from the drawee to the depositary bank. See also Gino A. Chilleri, An Exception to Price v. Neay*: California's Presentment and Transfer Warranties With Respect to Fraudulent Telemarketing Drafts, 30 UCC L.J. 44 (1997).*

(n90)Footnote 90. 16 C.F.R. § 310.3(a)(3). The FTC has proposed significant amendments to the Telemarketing Rule. See 67 Fed. Reg. 4,492 (Jan. 30, 2002) .

(n91)Footnote 91. 16 C.F.R. § 310.3(a)(3), as amended by 68 Fed. Reg. 2580 (Jan. 29, 2003) .

(n92)Footnote 92. 15 U.S.C. § 1681, reprinted in Vol. 1B infra.

(n93)Footnote 93. Cisneros v. U.D. Registry, 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 (1995) (violation of state and federal fair credit reporting statutes is a violation of California's UDAP statute).

(n94)Footnote 94. 15 U.S.C. § 1681(s).

(n95)Footnote 95. National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 10.7 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n96)Footnote 96. For a more detailed discussion of Fair Credit Reporting Act [hereinafter FCRA] preemption, and the limited immunity that the FCRA provides from certain tort claims, see National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n97)Footnote 97. See Commonwealth v. Source One Assocs., 1999 Mass. Super. LEXIS 402, 10 Mass. L. Rep. 579 (Super. Ct. 1999) ; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 10.4 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n98)Footnote 98. FTC v. S&L Prof'l Credit Clinic, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 23,301 (N.D. Tex. 1992). See also FTC v. SurecheK Sys., Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,431 (N.D. Ga. 1998) (stipulated final judgment); FTC v. Hart, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,431 (N.D. Ga. 1998) (stipulated final judgment); FTC v. M.J.S. Fin. Servs., Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,461 (N.D. Ga. 1998) (stipulated final judgment). See also FTC v. Westcal Equipment, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) (15388 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 26, 2003) (proposed consent decree against defendants who promised major credit card but delivered card that could only be used for merchandise in their catalog). See also FTC v. Capital Choice Consumer Credit, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,447 (S.D. Fla. May 21, 2003) (Civil Action No. 02-21050-CIV) (settlement of advance fee credit card scam; sellers promised unsecured major credit card but delivered card that could only be used to purchase items from defendants' catalogs; also debited consumers' bank accounts for other items sold through upselling, without providing disclosures required by telemarketing rule); 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,563 (Mar. 11, 2004) (final judgment against remaining defendants, barring them from selling credit cards or telemarketing and prohibiting them from obtaining money from any consumer's account without written authorization); FTC v. Tyme Lock 2000, Inc., Civil Action No. CV-S-02-1078, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,473 (D. Nev. July 11, 2003) (stipulated final judgment against advance fee credit card marketers; defendants promised credit cards but delivered set of applications, many of which required additional fees or long-term commitments); FTC v. 1st Beneficial Credit Servs., Civil Action No. 1:02CV1591, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 15,484 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 19, 2003) (final consent order against advance fee credit card scam; promoters promised major credit card but delivered worthless information or catalog card); FTC v. Bay Area Business Council, (7th Cir. 2005) (affirming judgment against individual and corporate defendants who led consumers to believe they would receive a major credit card but delivered a card that could only be used as a stored value card).

(n99)Footnote 99. FTC v. S&L Prof'l Credit Clinic, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 23,301 (N.D. Tex. 1992). See, e.g., FTC v. Consumer Alliance, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17423 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2003) .

(n100)Footnote 100. 16 C.F.R. § 310.4(a)(4). See In re National Credit Mgmt. Group, 21 F. Supp. 2d 424 (D.N.J. 1998) (issuing preliminary injunction).

(n101)Footnote 101. 16 C.F.R. §§ 310.3, 310.4. See FTC v. Bay Area Business Council, Inc., 423 F.3d 627 (7th Cir. 2005) (telephone solicitation, targeted to consumers who had recently been denied credit, would lead reasonable person to believe credit card was being offered; consumers paid $200 for opportunity to order stored value card); FTC v. Peoples Credit First, L.L.C., 2006-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75192, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38545 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 18, 2005) (promised "platinum card" could be used only for buying club catalog purchases).

(n102)Footnote 102. New York v. Financial Servs. Network, U.S.A., 930 F. Supp. 865 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) . Accord In re National Credit Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 21 F. Supp. 2d 424 (D.N.J. 1998) . See also FTC v. OPCO Int'l Agency, Inc., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) 24,879 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 21, 2001) (TRO against telemarketer that offered low-interest consolidation loan for a fee but delivered list of banks).

(n103)Footnote 103. See People v. Telehublink, 301 A.D.2d 1006, 756 N.Y.S.2d 285 (App. Div. 2003) (affirming permanent injunction against advance-fee credit card telemarketer). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 6.15.1 (7th ed. 2008).

(n104)Footnote 104. Credit Card Serv. Corp. v. FTC, 495 F.2d 1004 (D.C. Cir. 1974) . See also FTC v. Tracker Corp. of Am., 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) P 24,477 (N.D. Ga. 1998) (proposed consent decree).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.05

§ 4.05 Debt Collection

[1] General

The federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA"), n1 state debt collection acts, and common law tort theories provide a number of remedies for debt collection abuses. Another chapter in this book n2 analyzes these remedies in detail. A private UDAP action provides yet another approach in those states where debt collection practices are within the UDAP statute's scope. n3

UDAP actions can reach practices outside the scope of the FDCPA. In particular, a UDAP claim can challenge creditors' collection practices, and not just collection agency practices. A UDAP statute may also cover collection of types of debts that are excluded from FDCPA coverage. n4 A creditor may be subject to UDAP liability not only for its own collection practices, but also for failing to oversee the practices of independent collection agencies it hires. n5 The UDAP remedy may also provide better relief, such as attorney fees and minimum or multiple damages, than is available under state debt collection practices statutes or common law theories.

In addition, UDAP debt collection principles can apply to many different forms of collection, such as foreclosures, repossessions, evictions, landlord lockouts, utility company or landlord-induced utility shutoffs. n6 When a practice is unfair or deceptive if engaged in by a debt collector, an analogous practice by a landlord, mobile home park, mortgage holder, utility company, secured party, or other party should equally be unfair or deceptive.

However, in a few states collection practices may be outside the UDAP statute's scope. In the case of particularly abusive debt collection practices, a tort theory may be the primary approach because of the availability of punitive damages and a jury trial right.

If debt collection practices are within the scope of a state's UDAP statute, there are several important sources of precedent as to whether a particular practice is unfair or deceptive. A few states have UDAP regulations that define certain practices as unfair or deceptive. Activities prohibited by a state's own debt collection practices statute have been found to be per se UDAP violations. n7 Courts may also recognize collection agency violations of the FDCPA as per se deceptive under state UDAP statutes. n8

Even creditors, whose collection activities are not covered by the FDCPA, may violate the state UDAP statute if they commit acts that would be FDCPA violations if committed by a collection agency. The FTC uses the FDCPA as its standard for determining whether a creditor has violated the FTC Act's general prohibition of unfair and deceptive practices. n9

Other important sources of precedent for unfair or deceptive debt collection practices are the extensive series of FTC consent orders and some litigated cases in this area, and a number of state regulations and cases. Some collection practices that may give rise to UDAP claims include:

- Disguising the purpose for which information is sought while attempting to locate the address of the debtor ("skip tracing"); n10
- Misrepresenting the identity and nature of the collector;
- Misrepresenting the imminency of threatened actions or damage to consumer's credit rating; n11
- Misrepresenting the legal consequences of debt nonpayment;
- Threats of violence, the use of obscene language, telephone calls not disclosing the creditor's and telephone caller's identity, and causing the debtor to pay for long distance telephone calls or other charges;
- Collecting debts not legally owed;
- Taking illegal actions against the consumer or the consumer's property. n12
- Misrepresenting the amount of a debt. n13

[2] Creditor's Abusive Use of Arbitration to Collect on a Debt

A growing number of creditors are initiating collection actions not in court, but through arbitration. Collection via arbitration is grounded on a clause in credit agreements (or notices stuffed in with monthly statements) providing for this method of resolving disputes between creditor and debtor.

Creditors can have several motivations for collection via arbitration. A default arbitration plus a judicial confirmation of the arbitration award may be less costly in legal and court fees or faster than a default judgment. Creditors may decide it is easier to handle contested actions via arbitration than through the courts, or that the nature of the arbitration proceeding, the high fees the consumer must pay, and the lack of attorney fees for a prevailing consumer will discourage contested actions. It certainly makes class counterclaims almost impossible to raise.

Contesting an arbitration proceeding may be economically prohibitive for a consumer. The consumer may even have to pay $100 or more just to file an answer, and even more to conduct discovery or file a motion.

The arbitration process may give rise to a variety of UDAP claims. Before the creditor can use judicial powers to enforce its arbitration award, the creditor must first obtain court confirmation of the award. The debtor can seek to vacate the award where there was evident partiality of the arbitrator, the arbitrator refused to hear evidence or postpone a hearing, or the arbitrator engaged in other arbitrator misconduct or exceeded his authority. n14 A creditor seeking to collect a debt via arbitration may be open to UDAP challenges if the creditor misrepresents to the consumer the effect of the arbitration award. Until the award is confirmed by a court, the creditor has no right to garnish wages or place liens on the consumer's property, and cannot represent a present right to do so.

If the arbitration agreement is unenforceable, then it may be a UDAP violation to represent to the consumer that the creditor has the right to arbitrate the dispute. Assessing large fees to defend an arbitration collection action may be an unfair practice because it costs the consumer far more to defend a collection action than the amount being sought. The D.C. Circuit has found that it is unfair for creditors to place in standard form credit agreements creditor remedies that are injurious to consumers and that do not have countervailing benefits for competition or the consumer. n15

A creditor's systematic use of a biased arbitrator may also be an unfair practice. n16 Just as it is a UDAP violation to require a consumer to contest a collection action in an inconvenient venue, it should be a UDAP violation if the arbitration mechanism requires the consumer to contest some distance from the consumer's residence either the arbitration proceeding or the judicial action to confirm the award. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Debt CollectionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1692.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Ch. 8 infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection (6th ed. 2008).

(n3)Footnote 3. Yet another option is an action under the federal or state RICO statute for collection of an unlawful debt. See § 4.07 infra. See also Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4053 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 1996) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss).

(n4)Footnote 4. People ex rel. Daley v. Datacom Sys. Corp., 146 Ill. 2d 1, 585 N.E.2d 51 (1991) (collection of parking ticket debts covered by UDAP statute).

(n5)Footnote 5. See American Family Publishers, 58 Fed. Reg. 8,762 , Clearinghouse No. 47,965 (FTC Dkt. 9240, Feb. 17, 1993) (consent order).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., In re Clarkson, 105 B.R. 266 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989) (deceptive for landlord to sell tenant's property without legal right); In re Aponte, 82 B.R. 738 , later proceeding at 91 B.R. 9 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) (landlord's termination of heat and hot water).

(n7)Footnote 7. Wagner v. American Nat'l Educ. Corp., Clearinghouse No. 36,132 (D. Conn. 1984); In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) ; Connelly v. Puget Sound Collections, Inc., 16 Wash. App. 62, 553 P.2d 1354 (1976) . But compare Conboy v. AT&T Universal Card Servs. Corp., 241 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2001) (New York's UDAP statute may incorporate state debt collection statute's prohibitions of deceptive conduct, but does not incorporate prohibitions of abusive conduct).

(n8)Footnote 8. But see In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (New York law); Lamb v. M&M Assocs., Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13773 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 1998) (failure to include validation notice was not UDAP violation; some but not all FDCPA violations are UDAP violations).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 60 Fed. Reg. 40,263 (Aug. 8, 1995) . Cf. In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (declining to find creditor's violation of the Fair Debt Collections Practices Act [hereinafter FDCPA] to be per se violation of New York UDAP statute, but finding acts deceptive on their own; case was decided before FTC's announcement of its use of FDCPA standards for creditors).

(n10)Footnote 10. Commonwealth v. Source One Assocs., 436 Mass. 118, 763 N.E.2d 42 (2002) (obtaining confidential information from banks and credit reporting agencies by impersonating the debtor or bank officers or through other pretexts is a UDAP violation).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Servs., 261 F. Supp. 2d 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) ; Campion v. Credit Bureau Servs., Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20233 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 19, 2000) (deceptive to imply, by the use of the word "judgment," that certain costs have been added to a debt).

(n12)Footnote 12. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 5.1.1 (6th ed. 2004). The companion CD to the NCLC manual has two sample debt collection complaints, including UDAP counts, discovery requests, a motion to compel discovery, a summary judgment motion, and an appellate brief.

(n13)Footnote 13. Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16747 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Federal Arbitration Act [hereinafter FAA], 9 U.S.C. § 10, 12.

(n15)Footnote 15. Amerian Fin. Servs. Ass'n v. FTC, 767 F.2d 957 (D.C. Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1011, 106 S. Ct. 1185, 89 L.Ed. 2d 301 (1986) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Baron v. Best Buy Co., 75 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (S.D. Fla. 1999) (refusing to enforce arbitration agreement specifying the NAF (National Arbitration Forum) because the creditor failed to demonstrate that the NAF "is a neutral, inexpensive, and efficient forum to determine these claims as required by law"); see also Patterson v. ITT Consumer Fin. Corp., 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 (1993) (refusing to enforce arbitration clause specifying NAF, when NAF's rules at that time required consumers in California to arbitrate their claims in Minnesota). But see Lloyd v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8279 (D. Del. Feb. 22, 2001) ("Plaintiff offers no persuasive evidence that the National Arbitration Forum is anything but neutral and efficient."), aff'd, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 239 (3d Cir. Jan. 7, 2002) ; Bank One v. Harris, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9615 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 2, 2001) ("[T]he rules governing the conduct of NAF arbitrations belie defendants' speculation that suspected bias by the NAF has any realistic potential for affecting decisions of arbitrators in NAF arbitrations"), aff'd, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 77 (5th Cir. 2002) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Patterson v. ITT Consumer Fin. Corp., 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 , review denied 1993 Cal. LEXIS 4322 (1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1176, 114 S. Ct. 1217, 127 L. Ed. 2d 563 (1994) ; see also Brower v. Gateway 2000, 246 A.D.2d 246, 676 N.Y.S.2d 569 (App. Div. 1998) (arbitration of a consumer product dispute under the rules of the International Chamber of Commerce, which required consumer to arbitrate in Chicago and send all correspondence to France); Brown v. Karemor Int'l, Inc., 1999 Tenn. App. LEXIS 249 (Tenn. Ct. App. Apr. 19, 1999) (where Tennessee franchisee required to arbitrate claims against franchisor in Nevada). But cf. Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Stuart, 85 F.3d 975 (2d Cir. 1996) (arbitration clause not unconscionable where franchisees were required to travel to either Connecticut or Florida to arbitrate claims against franchisor).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.06

§ 4.06 Private UDAP Remedies

[1] Introduction

UDAP statutes provide an important weapon to attack deceptive credit practices. The remedy sections of these statutes are the most important part and are entitled to the same liberal construction as the rest of the statute. UDAP statutes should be construed to authorize the broadest remedy possible. n1 Most such statutes provide for some combination of actual damages, statutory damages, restitution, multiple damages, minimum damages, and punitive damages, as well as attorney fees and costs.

Because there is no implied private right of action under the FTC Act, the availability of private (that is, non-governmental agency) remedies under UDAP statutes is crucial. As of 2009, when Iowa added a private cause of action to its UDAP statute, a private UDAP damages remedy clearly exists in every state. While states all have at least one UDAP statute with a private damage remedy, a number of states have a second UDAP statute patterned after the Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("UDTPA"). A violation of the UDTPA statute's enumerated prohibitions should be a per se deceptive practice under the state's other UDAP statute that does provide a private damage remedy.

[2] Calculating Actual Damages

[a] Introduction

Although courts often distinguish between incidental and consequential damages, there is not always a clear dividing line. Incidental or direct damages are those directly and immediately resulting from the unfair or deceptive act or practice and pertain directly to the goods or services involved in the transaction.

UDAP litigants may obtain relief based not just on these direct damages, but also from proximate or consequential damages--damages flowing from an unfair or deceptive act or practice. Such consequential damages are often far greater than the direct, incidental damages from the UDAP violation. For example, in the case of a defective used car, consequential damages may include the costs of substitute transportation, repairs to the car, towing expenses, lost earnings due to the inability to drive to work, and the like.

In some states, UDAP damages case law is not fully developed, or is limited by confused or aberrational decisions. n2

In these states, attorneys should explore other claims, such as breach of warranty, fraud, and rescission at the pleading stage, in hopes of avoiding problems in establishing damages.

[b] Direct Actual Damages

Normally, loss-of-bargain damages are more than out-of-pocket damages. Unless the language in the statutory damage provision specifically limits damages to "restitution," courts will normally grant loss-of-bargain damages. Thus, courts have awarded the difference between the value of the product as represented and as sold, an amount equalling the difference between the final sale price and the lower price originally agreed upon. n3

Loss-of-bargain damages are especially helpful in cases dealing with credit terms. For example, a creditor disclosed a stated interest rate that was lower than the actual rate because the amount financed was disbursed in two installments. The court calculated the consumer class' damages based on the class' loss-of-the-bargain damages, assuming the class bargained for the interest rate stated in the loan documents. Damages were the difference between the actual total of payments and the total correctly adjusted for the two disbursements of the amount financed, assuming the interest rate remained constant. n4

Where a buyer could not obtain financing at the rates promised by the seller, the buyer's damages were the difference between the interest payments as promised and the rates then available. n5 Where a lessor promised a purchase option of $1, but then demanded the market value of the property, the measure of damages was calculated as the difference between the market value and the $1 price. n6

In some cases, restitution or out-of-pocket damages may be more preferable to the consumer than other forms of damage calculations. Courts are normally generous in allowing restitution. n7 Not every state provides for restitution n8 through its UDAP statute, however. Ten jurisdictions expressly name restitution as a remedy available to a private litigant (as opposed to a state attorney general). n9 Other states do not specifically authorize restitution as a remedy, but do authorize equitable relief in general terms or give judges broad discretion in fashioning an appropriate UDAP remedy. n10 Consumers who have suffered an illicit overcharge should argue that the judge should use that discretion to order restitution against an overreaching seller. Such provisions have been construed to permit restitution in appropriate circumstances. n11 Case law construing UDAP statutes as remedial and subject to liberal construction may also support an argument that restitution is within the statute's scope.

An UDAP provision requiring sellers to "restore money acquired in violation" of the act has been interpreted as allowing full restitution of all money paid for a franchise. In granting restitution, courts may award both return of the purchase price plus the consumer's other out-of-pocket expenditures as damages. n12

[c] Consequential Damages

UDAP litigants may obtain relief based not just on direct damages, but also from proximate or consequential damages--all damages foreseeably flowing from an unfair or deceptive act or practice. n13 Such consequential damages are often far greater than the direct, incidental damages from the UDAP violation.

Courts differ as to proof requirements for recovery of consequential damages. Some courts require more than a causal connection between the deceptive practice and the consumer's damage; the damage may have to be a foreseeable consequence of the deception, n14 or the UDAP violation may have to be willful. At least some Florida courts, on the other hand, hold that consequential damages cannot be recovered on a UDAP claim. n15 A consumer may also have to mitigate damages.

An important example of consequential damages is the various financing costs that relate to the unfair or deceptive practice. Where the purchase price of a defective car is found to be actual damages, interest payments attributed to the car loan are also recoverable.

Similarly, courts award as additional UDAP damages any interest or finance charges the consumer was forced to pay by reason of a deceptive sale. n16 Even where prejudgment interest is not allowed, a consumer can still recover the interest lost when the consumer had to take money out of a savings account to perform repairs the seller failed to perform. n17 And consumers may recover increased construction and financing costs caused when the building of a home was delayed by their refusal to pay a deceptively inflated real estate commission. n18

Often a consumer's consequential damage is not evidenced by payment of extra expenses, but by additional efforts required of the consumer, and this lost time is a possible source of damages. n19 Lost future earnings caused by the UDAP violation should be awarded as consequential damages. The Hawaii Supreme Court has ruled that out-of-pocket costs such as gasoline and parking incurred to respond to a deceptive ad are compensable even if the consumer declined to make the purchase. n20

Consumers may also be able to recover damages for injury to their credit rating resulting from the deceptive practice. In some states, the consumer must plead specifically each type of consequential damages, including damage to credit rating. n21 To recover more than nominal damages in Texas, a consumer must show that the injury to credit rating resulted in either (1) a denial of credit and resulting damages, or (2) a requirement of a higher interest rate. n22

In general, it will be difficult to receive attorney fees as consequential damages, instead of being based on a statutory authorization. But there are situations where a court will award attorney fees as UDAP consequential damages. n23

In general, pain and suffering should be available in a UDAP case at least to the same extent that they are recoverable at common law. Some jurisdictions allow mental anguish damages where fraud is proven, where there is an intentional invasion of the consumer's peace of mind, or where the deception was grossly negligent, made knowingly, or willful. n24 In a number of states, courts are awarding pain and suffering damages even where there is no physical injury or intent to deceive. Authority to award "actual damages" is sufficiently broad to encompass emotional distress damages. n25

In at least some jurisdictions, while damages for mental anguish are recoverable in proper circumstances, there can be no recovery for mere aggravation; aggravation should just be offered as evidence of mental anguish. However, the Kentucky Supreme Court has held that damages for inconvenience were properly awarded on a UDAP claim arising from a yo-yo car sale. n26 Likewise, an Illinois appellate courtaffirmed a UDAP damage award for aggravation and inconvenience resulting from misrepresentations in a car sale. n27 Decisions under the New York, n28 Ohio, n29 Oklahoma, n30 and West Virginia UDAP statutes n31 hold that losses such as annoyance, loss of time, inconvenience, travel, and telephone expenses are compensable. n32 There should be no requirement that a consumer prove other actual damages in order to recover damages for pain and suffering.

[d] Prejudgment Interest

Whether a court will provide prejudgment interest on a UDAP claim will normally depend on a state's general treatment of prejudgment interest.

[3] Contractual Limitation on Damages

The consumer's UDAP damage award may not be limited by a provision in the original sales contract limiting the consumer's remedies against the seller. Such a provision is not only against public policy, but also usually will not by its own terms specifically apply to a UDAP remedy. n33

[4] Mitigation of Damages

Some courts may find that the consumer has a duty to mitigate damages, n34 but, even then, the defendant has the burden of proving that the consumer has not used reasonable diligence to do so. n35

[5] Statutory Minimum Damages

About half the state UDAP statutes authorize private litigants who have proved a UDAP violation to obtain minimum damage awards ranging from $25 to $5,000, even if actual damages have not been proved. n36 Statutory minimum damages for a consumer litigant must be distinguished from civil penalty provisions that allow the state attorney general to seek civil penalties ranging from $500 to $25,000 for initial UDAP violations. Statutory minimum damages not only allow consumers more sizeable recoveries when actual damage is small, but also avoid proof of damage problems. Minimum damages can be awarded even if the consumer cannot prove the amount of his or her loss. n37 In some states, statutory damages are mandatory upon proof of a violation. n38

While a consumer may not be able to recover UDAP actual damages and UDAP statutory damages for the same UDAP violation, multiple recoveries are possible for multiple violations. n39 Statutory damages are not considered punitive, but compensatory, so that courts may award both statutory and punitive damages. UDAP statutory damages can be awarded to each member of a prevailing class.

[6] Multiple Damages

[a] General

About half of all UDAP statutes authorize treble or other multiple damage awards. The actual damage award, under specified conditions, is multiplied to calculate these damages. Unlike minimum damages, multiple damages are awarded only if actual damages are proved. n40 Where an individual consumer's actual damages are nominal, three times this amount will still be nominal. The possibility of multiple damages may, however, significantly affect settlement negotiations and a consumer litigant's willingness to press the action. n41 In some states, multiple damages are mandatory; in others they are discretionary. n42 Treble damages may be awarded in a default judgment or in an arbitrator's decision. n43 Courts have upheld the constitutionality of multiple damages provisions. n44

[b] Limits on Treble Damages Award

Most UDAP statutes limit a treble damages recovery to situations where intent, willfulness, or bad faith is shown. n45 It is not necessary to show the seller knew it was violating the UDAP statute or knew that its practice was illegal in some more general sense. n46 Good faith, the fact that the consumer has already been adequately compensated, and equitable considerations are not grounds for denying treble damages. n47 In addition, the accumulation of a large number of minor UDAP violations over a period of time can show willfulness. The knowing misrepresentation of an agent is imputed to the principal. n48

Other UDAP statutes trigger multiple damages not upon the seller's intent to deceive, but upon the seller's bad faith refusal to grant the injured consumer relief after the consumer notifies the merchant of the deception. In these states, a seller can avoid liability for treble damages by making a reasonable settlement offer. n49

A few UDAP statutes mandate treble damages if the seller violates a UDAP rule or other clear standard. n50 In states that do not specify the standards for an award of treble damages, courts have looked to such factors as the deterrent effect of an award and whether the defendant's acts were deliberate, unconscionable, obdurate, repeated, knowing, or otherwise aggravated. In Connecticut the Supreme Court has held that multiple damages are appropriate where the actions of the defendant show a reckless indifference to the rights of others. n51 As multiple damages are within the trial court's discretion, their use will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of manifest abuse of that discretion. n52

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that private parties can agree to arbitrate claims for multiple damages even though such claims also serve a public function. The Court found no inherent problem in plaintiffs being forced to arbitrate RICO treble damages claims as long as the arbitrator could award treble damages. n53 Similarly, an arbitration agreement can require a UDAP multiple damages claim to be pursued through arbitration, as long as the arbitrator has authority to award such damages. n54

[c] Interrelation of Treble Damages With Other Awards

A consumer generally may not recover twice for the same injury, by receiving treble damages under a UDAP count and compensatory damages under another statute or a common law fraud count. n55 Nor can the consumer recover treble damages on a UDAP count, plus treble damages on another statutory claim for the same conduct. n56 A consumer can, however, recover compensatory damages on non-UDAP counts, plus the punitive or exemplary component of UDAP damages. n57 Two recoveries can also be had if separate wrongs causing separate damage are alleged. n58 Some courts and statutes restrict treble damages and fraud damages, finding that one form of exemplary damages is enough, or require an election if both are awarded. A California statute allows the trier of fact to treble any civil penalty (or any other remedy if its purpose or effect is to punish or deter) when the person affected is an older or disabled person and certain other factors apply. n59

[d] How to Calculate Multiple Damages

If a consumer is awarded multiple damages, it is clearly most advantageous to the consumer to first treble and then offset any seller's recovery in the same action, but not all courts allow this procedure. n60

Some courts hold that only the amount awarded on the UDAP claim can be trebled. n61 A federal court in New Jersey holds that statutory damages awarded on a TIL count should not be included in the amount trebled on a UDAP count because the burdens of proof are different. n62 However, the Wisconsin Supreme Court held that the multiple damage award should be based on the entire amount of the consumer's pecuniary loss, even though conduct by the defendant separate from the UDAP violations contributed to some loss and even though the jury apportioned some of the loss to non-UDAP claims. n63

Courts are split as to whether prejudgment interest should be trebled. n64 However, there should be no question that financing costs necessitated by the consumer's purchase of substitute goods and which are awarded as actual damages should be trebled like any other actual damages. Likewise, where an element of actual damages is the amount of interest the plaintiff lost on money paid to the defendant, it can be trebled. n65 Moreover, post-judgment interest should be computed on the whole award, including treble damages. n66

[e] Parties Liable for Treble Damages

A company is liable in treble damages for acts its agents engaged in within the scope of employment whenever the employer would be vicariously liable for the tortious conduct of its employees. Where treble damages are predicated on the seller's knowledge that a practice is deceptive, the corporation is assumed to possess whatever knowledge that its employees possess; n67 conversely, employees are assumed to have whatever knowledge that the corporation possesses.

[7] Punitive Damages

[a] General

Ten UDAP statutes explicitly authorize punitive damages. n68 A separate Minnesota statute authorizes punitive damages for UDAP and other claims. n69 The Arkansas UDAP statute expands the private cause of action to include punitive damages if the consumer is older or disabled. n70 The Illinois UDAP statute authorizes the court to award any other relief it deems proper, and then restricts the circumstances under which punitive damages can be awarded against car dealers, necessarily implying that they are allowed as "other relief." (The Illinois Supreme Court has held the special protection for car dealers unconstitutional. n71 Courts in other states may find such a remedy within their inherent authority, particularly where courts award punitive damages for common law fraud. n72

If a UDAP statute does not authorize punitive damages, in appropriate cases, consumer attorneys should add a common law fraud count to their UDAP action and seek punitive damages under the common law fraud claim. The availability of UDAP remedies does not preempt common law tort claims or remedies.

Unless a UDAP statute specifies other standards, courts are likely to use a state's common law fraud standards (such as the presence of malice, willful or wanton conduct, practices showing seller's ill will, or a reckless indifference to the interests of others) in determining whether UDAP punitive damages are appropriate in a particular case. n73 In some jurisdictions, punitive damages can be awarded in fraud cases even if actual damages are not proved. n74

If the contract arbitration provision prohibits punitive damages, that provision will generally be given effect; if the provision allows punitive damages, such a provision will also be given effect. If ambiguous or silent, the Supreme Court appears strongly in favor of allowing punitive damages. n75

[b] Calculating the Size of Punitive Damage Awards

While computation of punitive damages awards under state UDAP or other state law theories is fundamentally a state law issue, federal constitutional due process standards can limit the size of this award. In light of recent U.S. Supreme Court cases, n76 some lower courts will likely use ratios of punitive to actual damages to determine if the punitives are excessive. If such a standard is used, it is essential to consider not just the one plaintiff's actual damages, but all potential damages by all victims or potential victims of the defendant's practice. n77 Some state statutes limit the size of punitive damage awards. These caps may apply to UDAP or fraud claims in some states, but not in others. n78 A number of courts have concluded that in cases involving multiple punitive damages awards against the same defendant, repetitive awards were acceptable because they were reasonable in their amount and rational in light of their purpose to punish what had occurred and to deter future misconduct and did not violate due process. n79

In 2003, the Supreme Court issued a second opinion, State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell, n80 striking down a punitive damage award on due process grounds. The Utah Supreme Court had reinstated a $145 million punitive damage award against an insurance company that courted financial disaster for its insureds by refusing to settle a serious third-party claim, then refusing to appeal it, and then suggesting that they start trying to sell their home to pay the judgment. A jury had awarded the insureds $2.6 million (reduced by the trial court to $1 million) in compensatory damages, primarily emotional distress. The Supreme Court held that the punitive damage award clearly exceeded constitutional limits. A key point of the opinion is an insistence that evidence of other misconduct must bear a high degree of similarity to the acts toward the plaintiff. The Court also stated that punitive damage awards that exceed a single-digit ratio to compensatory damages will rarely pass constitutional muster.

In State Farm, the Supreme Court reiterated several factors to determine the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct. Courts should consider whether:

- The harm caused was physical as opposed to economic;
- The tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others;
- The target of the conduct had financial vulnerability;
- The conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and

- The harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. n81

[c] Who Is Liable for Punitive Damages?

Principals are liable for punitive damages for the acts of their agents only where:

- The principal authorized the doing and the manner of the act;
- The agent was unfit and the principal was reckless in employing the agent;
- The agent was employed in a managerial capacity and was acting in the scope of employment; or
- The principal or a manager of the principal ratified or approved the act. n82

Generally, a corporation can be liable for punitive damages for the actions of a nonmanagerial employee even without any of the above four criteria being met. In one case against ITT Credit Corporation, a trial court awarded punitive damages against ITT even though it was the home improvement contractor's conduct that was fraudulent, and even though the contractor was not ITT's agent. The punitive damages award was instead based on the fact that ITT and the contractor had engaged in a civil conspiracy to further the contractor's fraudulent practices. The Ohio Supreme Court upheld the $1.5 million punitive damages award because, based on the nature of the conspiracy, either party was fully liable for the acts of the other, including liability for punitive damages. n83

[d] Interrelation of Punitive Damages With Other Remedies

Some courts allow both treble and punitive damages recoveries, n84 but other courts have held to the contrary n85 and forced a successful consumer litigant to timely elect which award to accept. n86

[8] Class Actions n87

[a] General

This section briefly addresses the use of class actions as a means of challenging UDAP violations. Theoretically, class actions are well suited for securing wide-scale redress for marketplace deception. Class actions adjudicate numerous claims that individually damaged consumers would not pursue because they are uninformed of their rights, deterred from filing individual suits because of an ongoing relationship with the prospective defendant, or have claims too small to merit individual adjudication. n88

A UDAP class action seeking damages allows the aggregation of many small consumer claims, thereby deterring merchant misconduct far more effectively than one individual damage action. Such an action makes it feasible for an attorney to handle the case, even though individual consumer injury is minimal. Some courts have allowed multi-state class action UDAP suits which are essentially national class actions. These factors lead some courts to look with particular favor on class actions in the consumer context. n89

UDAP class actions may also prove to be useful vehicles to obtain injunctive relief. Class injunctive actions face fewer procedural hurdles than do class damage actions. Courts may be willing to issue a broad injunction for a class when it finds that an individual litigant does not have the requisite interest in such a broad injunction.

Despite the advantages of a class action, an attorney should not initiate a UDAP class action lightly. Class actions demand a significant commitment of legal resources, and notice, discovery and other procedural requirements may prove costly to consumer litigants. While the two parties to an individual action can often reach a quick compromise, class actions may be less prone to easy settlement. Nevertheless, once class certification has been granted, and the seller's inevitable summary judgment motion defeated, class actions almost invariably settle without a full trial, usually on terms quite favorable for the class.

If a contract is involved which includes an arbitration agreement, the agreement may purport to restrict the right to bring claims in a class action. n90 Briefly, the first question is what the arbitration agreement and the rules of any referenced arbitration mechanism provide. Most arbitration mechanism rules and clauses do explicitly prohibit class treatment. Unless this agreement is found to be unconscionable or against public policy, it will be enforced. The more common issue is whether the consumer has the right to bring an arbitration proceeding as a class where the agreement and the relevant rules are silent on this subject. The predominant view among federal courts is stated in the Seventh Circuit's decision in Champ v. Siegel Trading Co., Inc. that "absent a provision in the parties' arbitration agreement providing for class treatment of disputes, a district court has no authority to certify class arbitration." n91

[b] UDAP Class Action Procedures

Some state UDAP statutes contain class action provisions that supplement or supersede the general class action statute, n92 while others specifically foreclose class actions. n93 Ohio's UDAP statute allows a class action only if the defendant has violated a UDAP rule or a prior judicial determination, on file with the attorney general, that the practice is a violation. n94 Limitations on a UDAP class action found in the UDAP statute itself may apply even to UDAP actions litigated in federal court. State and federal rules regarding class actions will apply to areas not specifically covered by the UDAP statute.

[c] UDAP Class Actions Where Individual Damage Is Minimal

One of the most important uses of a consumer class action is where individual damage is so minimal that there is no economic incentive for an individual UDAP action. n95 If there is a concern that the value of recovery for each consumer will be too small to justify notification, etc., or that consumers may not be locatable, courts can use "fluid recovery" under which the unclaimed portion of the damages incurred by the class as a whole is applied to the benefit of the class. n96

[d] Proving a UDAP Violation Is Common to the Class

UDAP statutes that prohibit deceptive, and not just fraudulent, practices radically alter the difficult proof situation arising under common law fraud statutes. In most states, deception can be proved even if: the seller's intent or knowledge is not shown; no actual deception is shown, only a tendency or likelihood to deceive; n97 or the consumer's reliance or the materiality of the deception is not indicated. n98 And even where reliance need be proven, where multiple plaintiffs, standing in the same shoes, are subject to a uniform deceptive practice, reliance can be implied from the circumstances. n99 As a result, much individual proof can be avoided, particularly when liability and damages can be established by documentary evidence, e.g., advertising copy and form contracts.

The critical element to establish liability in a UDAP class action is the existence of a common deceptive practice involving each class member. The deception practiced against each different class member must not only be sufficiently alike so that there is a community of interest, but also questions common to the class must predominate.

Proving damages for individual class members is not as critical. If the issues of liability are sufficiently common, courts will allow the liability issues to go forward as a class action, postponing the decision as to how the damage issues are to be treated to a later date. Individual litigation as to the amount of damage can subsequently be handled through a variety of methods, such as special masters and affidavits. n100

Proving the existence of a common deceptive scheme is not as difficult as it first appears. In many cases, media advertising or standard sales presentations or similar methods have been used to disseminate the same deceptive message to all class members.

A common pattern of deception can also be established if all class members purchased a similar product or service and if the UDAP violation involves the product itself, such as price unconscionability or a product's inability to perform its normal function. Where a seller overcharges all consumers for a particular item, this can provide a basis for class certification. For example, where official fees or taxes are set at a specified amount, a seller accepting more than that amount from consumers to pay for those charges engages in a common UDAP violation, even if the sales presentations are different and even if the amount of the overcharge varies with each consumer. n101 Unfair or deceptive standard form contract provisions and standard disclosures, standard debt-collection procedures, or a seller's consistent failure to disclose a material fact n102 are ideal for class treatment. n103

[e] Statutory Damages for Each Class Member

Some courts allow minimum statutory damages for each class member in cases of minimal individual injury in states whose UDAP statutes authorize minimum statutory damages.

[f] Settlements

Class action settlements will be subject to appellate court review to determine whether the settlement is fair, adequate, and reasonable to the class. Where it is not, the settlement will be rejected. n104

[9] Injunctions

[a] Advantages of the Injunctive Remedy

In every state, the state attorney general or similar state official can seek to enjoin UDAP violations. However, these state officials have limited resources and their own priorities. Attorney general offices must also make priority decisions regarding when to follow up to determine if a seller is complying with an injunctive order. Private litigants not wishing to be bound by state attorney general priority decisions find it useful to act as a "private attorney general," bringing their own injunctive actions and monitoring seller's compliance with the court order themselves. There is little case law in the UDAP area determining whether a private litigant can act as a private attorney general or otherwise seek injunctive relief. This section will explore this issue as completely as present case law allows.

[b] Does a UDAP Statute Authorize Private Injunctive Relief?

Most UDAP statutes explicitly authorize private injunctive actions. (A number of states have two different UDAP statutes authorizing injunctive relief.) Eleven UDAP statutes n105 modeled after the UDTPA provide that a "person likely to be damaged by deceptive practices of another" may seek injunctive relief. A primary function of the UDTPA is to provide businesses with a means of enjoining deceptive and thus unfairly competitive practices of other businesses. The UDTPA has also been found to provide injured consumers with an injunctive remedy. Therefore, for violations of the specific prohibitions found in state UDAP statutes patterned after the UDTPA, a private injunctive remedy is available.

In Delaware, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, and Oklahoma, consumer litigants should not confuse the UDAP statute patterned after the UDTPA n106 with the state's other UDAP statute that provides a private damages remedy, with which they may be more familiar. n107 Aggressive consumer litigants will select the more advantageous statute for a particular case, or will even bring claims under both statutes.

In addition, in twenty-two states, UDAP statutes not patterned after the UDTPA explicitly authorize a private injunctive remedy. n108 The Missouri UDAP statute explicitly authorizes private injunctions, n109 but an intermediate appellate court has held that the court has authority to issue injunctive relief in an individual action only to protect the individual consumer, not to protect the general public. n110 Since procedural requirements for class injunctive actions are less burdensome than for damage class actions, this may not significantly impair a litigant's ability to seek an injunction. Private injunctions may also be available in most other states, particularly where the UDAP statute generally authorizes the court to grant other forms of relief. n111 Some UDAP statutes specifically limit those who can seek injunctive relief to those who have suffered actual monetary loss, have been aggrieved, or have been adversely affected by a violation. n112

[10] Voiding and Rescinding Contracts

UDAP statutes may be used to void or rescind an agreement where the sales transaction involved deception. This remedy may be more preferable to a consumer than damages or an injunction, since it can result in the dismissal of a collection action by the seller or its assignees, without proof of the consumer's actual damages. However, relatively few state UDAP statutes explicitly provide rescission or voiding the transaction as a remedy. n113 If a state UDAP statute does not explicitly state whether a court can void or rescind a transaction based on UDAP violations, this remedy may be implied from statutory remedy language or from the court's inherent authority. n114

When a consumer seeks to rescind a contract, he or she should follow the special procedures for rescission actions in the UDAP statute or be careful to follow common law requirements concerning notice, tender, etc., if they are applied by the courts. n115 UDAP statutes vary greatly as to whether a consumer may rescind and also recover UDAP damages. The seller may be entitled to a setoff for the rental value and any damages to the item purchased. n116

[11] Attorney Fees

[a] Introduction

Virtually all UDAP statutes that authorize a private remedy offer attorney fees to successful consumer litigants, although there is considerable variety among the various statutes as to who can recover, what defenses apply, etc. By requiring sellers that violate UDAP statutes to pay the consumer's legal expenses, UDAP statutes make it possible for attorneys to devote significant resources to a case, even if the consumer's dollar losses are relatively minor compared to commercial disputes. This not only encourages consumers to remedy marketplace abuses, but also increases sellers' maximum liability if they refuse to settle consumers' just claims. The purpose of UDAP fee-shifting provisions is to ensure that plaintiffs with bona fide claims are able to find lawyers to represent them. n117

Courts should construe UDAP statutory attorney fee provisions in favor of consumers since attorney fee provisions promote the UDAP statute's underlying legislative purpose. Consumers with legitimate UDAP claims would be deterred from enforcing their rights if they were required to absorb all costs of litigation. Unless reasonable attorney fees are awarded in consumer protection cases, the doors to the courthouse will be closed to all but those with either potentially substantial damages or sufficient economic resources to afford the litigation expenses. n118 Even where there is no explicit statutory authority for fees, several courts have awarded attorney fees. n119 Many UDAP statutes indicate that attorney fees shall be awarded if damages are awarded to the consumer. Here, such fees are mandatory. If attorney fees are discretionary, any fee award made must be reasonable. n120

In general, courts are liberal in allowing UDAP attorney fees as long as the consumer has prevailed in some way on at least some of the claims against at least one defendant. Consumers do not have to recover on all counts of their complaint to receive attorney fees for all their efforts. n121 The consumer must prevail on the UDAP claim in order to recover fees. n122 Where only one of two defendants is found to have violated the UDAP statute, only that defendant can be found liable for UDAP attorney fees.

Attorney fees should be recoverable for successful work performed to obtain a default judgment, time spent opposing a motion to set aside a default, or work done to protect or collect a judgment. Courts are divided about the award of fees after settlement or in arbitration. Fees can be awarded for appellate work, n123 as long as the consumer's judgment is preserved in at least some respect on appeal. The procedure to obtain such fees and which court awards them is subject to local court rules.

[b] The Catalyst Theory and How To Preserve a Fee Claim When Settling a Case

Until 2001, federal courts accepted the "catalyst" rule, which held that a plaintiff prevails and is therefore entitled to recover under a federal fee-shifting statute when the lawsuit causes a change of conduct by the defendant, even if a favorable order on the merits is never entered. In Buckhannon Board & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources, n124 the Court rejected this rule and held that a plaintiff can achieve prevailing party status only by obtaining a "material alteration of the legal relationship of the parties." n125 While this standard can be met by "enforceable judgments on the merits and court-ordered consent decrees," n126 the plaintiff's case lacked "the necessary judicial imprimatur." n127 The Supreme Court made it clear that it was announcing a general rule that applied to most, if not all, federal fee-shifting statutes. n128

Of course, Buckhannon only controls as to federal law. Courts interpreting state fee-shifting statutes may find Buckhannon persuasive, n129 but are free to adopt their own views about the catalyst theory and the formal requirements of settlements. Nonetheless, it is prudent to assume that state courts will impose the same requirements and to draft settlement documents accordingly.

For courts that follow Buckhannon, the following ways of settling a case are likely to preserve entitlement to fees:

- Negotiation of payment of fees in an acceptable amount as part of the settlement on the merits.

- An agreed judgment for money, as long as it is clear that fees have not been waived. The ability to enforce a money judgment by judicial process should be considered the functional equivalent of the judicial oversight that was the hallmark of a court-ordered consent decree for the Buckhannon court. However, the Supreme Court's decision is silent on this point.

- An agreed order that specifies the steps the defendant will take (e.g., repair of a vehicle, cancellation of a contract), as long as the court retains jurisdiction to enforce it. It is clearer that the plaintiff is the prevailing party if the order the court signs actually recites the steps the defendant will take, rather than referring to a separately filed document, although the latter format is probably also sufficient. When there are two or more related cases, it is unclear whether a favorable order entered in one is sufficient to qualify the plaintiff as a prevailing party in the other case, n130 so it is best to get a favorable order in both cases.

- An agreed order of any sort that includes a finding or stipulation that the plaintiff is the prevailing party. Even a stipulation not signed by the court that the plaintiff is the prevailing party is probably sufficient. While Buckhannon does not explicitly endorse this method of preserving the right to attorney fees, the court never indicated that winning an enforceable judgment or a court-ordered consent decree is a jurisdictional requirement that cannot be satisfied by a stipulation. At least one court has held, however, that merely reserving the issue of attorney fees for the court, without stipulating that the plaintiff is the prevailing party, is insufficient. n131

Settlement methods that are less likely to preserve the right to fees are:

- A stipulation that is filed with the court but is signed only by the parties and does not state that the plaintiff is the prevailing party.

- A dismissal entry, even if the case is dismissed pursuant to an agreement signed by the parties under which the defendant agrees to the relief the plaintiff sought. n132

[c] Types of Representation Entitled to Fees

Legal services attorneys receiving funds from the Legal Services Corporation ("LSC") may have restrictions on their ability to seek attorney fees because of LSC restrictions. In the absence of such regulations, courts invariably hold that attorney fees can be awarded to legal services attorneys who bring successful UDAP actions.

No state UDAP statute now mandates attorney fees for a prevailing seller, but a number of UDAP statutes indicate that attorney fees may be awarded, in the court's discretion, to the prevailing party. In these states, a much tougher standard should be used to award fees to prevailing consumers than to award fees to prevailing merchants.

Where a UDAP statute does not explicitly provide for a seller's attorney fees, the court should not find that such a recovery is implied. However, other state law or the state equivalent of Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 may provide a defendant with fees.

[d] How Attorney Fees Are Calculated

The size of a damage award should not limit the size of an attorney fee award, since this would frustrate the legislative intent in providing consumers with UDAP attorney fees. n133 There is great variety in how states calculate attorney fee awards. Some are spelled out explicitly in the statute; others rely o n the "lodestar" approach widely used in civil rights cases. n134

A court can award attorney fees in excess of a contingency fee arrangement. The existence of a contingency fee agreement also does not force the attorney to take fees out of the client's recovery instead of seeking an award from the opposing party.

Where cases involve UDAP and non-UDAP claims, some courts have ruled that the consumer can obtain attorney fees for work on all claims, successful and unsuccessful. n135 Other courts find that it is not unreasonable for a trial court to award fees to the consumer's attorney only for work on counts that were successfully prosecuted. n136

Careful contemporaneous records, detailing all work and time devoted to a UDAP case, are important to a later award of attorney fees.

In some jurisdictions (such as Illinois), certain claims must go to mandatory arbitration, although the consumer can reject the award and proceed to trial. It may be a mistake not to seek fees before the arbitration panel, accept the award, and then seek fees in the court. The Illinois Supreme Court has held that the consumer's failure to seek fees in the arbitration proceeding forecloses any fee award. n137

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Debt CollectionGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionState LawRemediesBanking LawConsumer ProtectionUnfair & Deceptive Credit Practices

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., In re Bryant, 111 B.R. 474 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) ; Roane-Barker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Fort Lauderdale Lincoln Mercury v. Corgnati, 715 So. 2d 311 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) (declining to award consequential damages in a UDAP case).

(n3)Footnote 3. Scott v. Bill Swad Datsun, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 46,639 (6th Cir. 1984); Aurigemma v. Arco Petroleum Prods. Co., 734 F. Supp. 1025 (D. Conn. 1990) ; Fort Lauderdale Lincoln Mercury v. Corgnati, 715 So. 2d 311 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) (measure of damages is difference between value of goods in condition promised and value in condition delivered). See Cardwell v. Henry, 145 N.C. App. 194, 549 S.E.2d 587 (2001) (measure of UDAP damages for substandard housing conditions is the difference between the fair rental value of the property in a warranted condition and its actual fair rental value, but damages cannot exceed total amount of rent paid by tenant). But cf. Tucker v. Boulevard at Piper Glen, 150 N.C. App. 150, 564 S.E.2d 248 (2002) (no damages where townhome's actual value exceeded purchase price); Zanakis-Pico v. Cutter Dodge, Inc., 47 P.3d 1222 (Haw. 2002) (difference between advertised "bait" price and actual price not recoverable where consumer declined to buy). See also In re Lutheran Brotherhood Variable Ins. Prods. Co. Sales Practices Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7789 (D. Minn. Apr. 28, 2004) (court applied the state's rules for fraud damages--a cross between the out-of-pocket and benefit of the bargain rules--to a UDAP claim in a vanishing insurance premium case); Lesoon v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 898 A.2d 620 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2006) (difference in price between value of insurance policy promised vs. delivered). See also Agliori v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 879 A.2d 315 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2005) (damages may be based on proceeds that would have been paid on insurance policies consumer was deceptively induced to surrender as part of purchase transaction). But cf. Solarchick v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 430 F. Supp. 2d 511 (W.D. Pa. 2006) (taking narrow view of benefit of bargain damages).

(n4)Footnote 4. Leibert v. Financial Factors Ltd., 788 P.2d 833 (Haw. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Stephenson v. Capano Dev., Inc., 462 A.2d 1069 (Del. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. A.V.I., Inc. v. Heathington, 842 S.W.2d 712 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See State v. Cottman Transmissions Sys., Inc., 86 Md. App. 714, 587 A.2d 1190 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Restitution, or disgorgement, is seen as a substantively different remedy from ordinary damages. For example, the California Supreme Court held that a bank's insurance policy, which insured against "damages," did not cover sums the bank was forced to pay out pursuant to the state UDAP statute's restitution provision. Bank of the W. v. Superior Ct., 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538, 545, 546 (1992) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Alaska Stat. § 45.50.531; Cal. Civ. Code § 1780; Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203; D.C. Code Ann. § 28-3905; Idaho Code § 48-608; Ind. Code § 24.5-0.5-4(a)(d); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 5, § 213; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 87-303.07; Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 17.50; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2461; Va. Code Ann. § 59.1-205.

(n10)Footnote 10. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 42-110g; 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/10a; Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 367.220; Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 9; Minn. Stat. § 8.31; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.025; Mont. Code Ann. § 30-14-133; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-A:10; N.J. Stat. Ann. § 56:8-19; Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.638; 73 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 201-9.2; R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-5.2; S.C. Code Ann. § 39-5-140; Tenn. Code Ann. § 47-18-109; W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106. See also Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0977 (authorizing suit by elderly or disabled person for actual damages, but also referring to this relief as "restitution"); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1345.09(D) (authorizing "declaratory judgment, injunction, or other appropriate relief"); Utah Code § 13-11-10(3) (authorizing class action for "declaratory judgment, an injunction, and appropriate ancillary relief").

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Catucci v. Ouellette, 592 A.2d 962, 963 (Conn. Ct. App. 1991) ; Cohon v. Oscar, 149 N.E.2d 472 ; see also Aurigemma v. Arco Petroleum Prods. Co., 734 F. Supp. 1025, 1033 (D. Conn. 1990) (actual damages language in statute would permit order of restitution, but it was not appropriate under circumstances of case); Gour v. Daray Motor Co., 373 So. 2d 571, 578 (La. Ct. App. 1979) (actual damages language of statute permits order of restitution); Gross-Haentjens v. Leckenby, 589 P.2d 1209, 1210 (Or. Ct. App. 1979) (purpose of private enforcement provision is to provide consumers restitution).

(n12)Footnote 12. Catucci v. Ouellette, 25 Conn. App. 56, 592 A.2d 962 (1991) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Jersild v. Aker, 775 F. Supp. 1198 (E.D. Wis. 1991) ; Haddad v. Gonzalez, 410 Mass. 855, 576 N.E.2d 658 (1991) ; Hale v. Basin Motor Co., 110 N.M. 314, 795 P.2d 1006 (1990) ; Sing v. John L. Scott, Inc., 920 P.2d 589 (Wash. Ct. App. 1996) . But see Schauer v. Morse Operations, Inc., 5 So. 3d 2 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) (Florida UDAP statute limits damages those attributable to diminished value of the goods or services received and excludes recovery of consequential damages).

(n14)Footnote 14. International Totalizing Sys., Inc. v. Pepsico, Inc., 29 Mass. App. Ct. 424, 560 N.E.2d 749 (1990) (loss of business opportunity was a foreseeable consequence of defendant's deception).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Fort Lauderdale Lincoln Mercury v. Corgnati, 715 So. 2d 311 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Jersild v. Aker, 775 F. Supp. 1198 (E.D. Wis. 1991) ; Antle v. Reynolds, 15 S.W.3d 762 (Mo. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Jersild v. Aker, 775 F. Supp. 1198 (E.D. Wis. 1991) .

(n18)Footnote 18. York v. InTrust Bank, N.A., 265 Kan. 271, 962 P.2d 405 (1998) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Hale v. Basin Motor Co., 110 N.M. 314, 795 P.2d 1006 (1990) . See Zanakis-Pico v. Cutter Dodge, Inc., 47 P.3d 1222 (Haw. 2002) (out-of-pocket costs such as gasoline and parking incurred to respond to a deceptive ad are compensable even if the consumer declined to make the purchase).

(n20)Footnote 20. Zanakis-Pico v. Cutter Dodge, Inc., 47 P.3d 1222 (Haw. 2002) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Boat Superstore, Inc. v. Haner, 877 S.W.2d 376 (Tex. App. 1994) . See also Levine v. First Nat'l Bank, 917 So. 2d 1235 (La. Ct. App. 2005) (citing damage to credit rating as factor in upholding $300,000 UDAP award for humiliation, embarrassment, and mental anguish due to wrongful foreclosure); rev'd on other grounds, 948 So. 2d 1051 (La. 2006) (bank's actions were proper, so no substantive basis for UDAP claim); Connell Chevrolet Co. v. Leak, 967 S.W.2d 888, 892 (Tex. App. 1998) (affirming award of UDAP damages for injury to credit rating).

(n22)Footnote 22. Provident Am. Ins. Co. v. Castaneda, 988 S.W.2d 189 (Tex. 1999) , reh'g of cause overruled, (Apr. 29, 1999) (disallowing UDAP claim where property damage arose from automobile accident that caused personal injury).

(n23)Footnote 23. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holmes, 842 S.W.2d 335 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) . Accord Columbia Chiropractic Group v. Trust Ins. Co., 430 Mass. 60, 712 N.E.2d 93 (1999) (UDAP damages can include fees for defense of lawsuit that was filed to collect unreasonable and unnecessary charges).

(n24)Footnote 24. Blowers v. Eli Lilly & Co., 100 F. Supp. 2d 1265 (D. Haw. 2000) ; Hart v. GMAC Mortgage Corp. (In re Hart), 246 B.R. 709 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (requiring proof of elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress in order to recover UDAP damages for emotional distress); State Farm Life Ins. Co. v. Beaston, 907 S.W.2d 430 (Tex. 1995) (case involving deception violating Insurance Code); Woodlands Land Dev. Co., L.P. v. Jenkins, 48 S.W.3d 415 (Tex. App. 2001) (testimony that a consumer had "shut down," cried "a lot," and endured "extreme hardship" was insufficient to show mental anguish); Latham v. Castillo, 972 S.W.2d 66 (Tex. 1998) , reh'g overruled, (Aug. 25, 1998); American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Paul, 927 S.W.2d 239 (Tex. App. 1996) ; Laurents v. Lousiana Mobile Homes, Inc., 689 So. 2d 536 (La. App. 1997) (upholding award of mental anguish damages where seller delivered defective mobile home); American Bankers' Ins. Co. v. Wells, 819 So. 2d 1196 (Miss. 2001) (emotional distress damages are recoverable for ordinary negligence only if there is physical manifestation of injury or demonstrable physical harm). But see Wenrich v. Robert E. Cole, P.C., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18687 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2000) (emotional distress damages probably not available for Pennsylvania UDAP violation). See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 10.5.3.3 (3d ed. 2006) (mental anguish damages on warranty claims).

(n25)Footnote 25. Barnette v. Brook Road, Inc., 429 F. Supp. 2d 741, 751 (E.D. Va. 2006) . Hill v. Sisters of St. Francis Health Servs., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92874 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 20, 2006) (emotional distress qualifies as "actual damage" as required by the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act). In 2006, in Whitaker v. M.T. Automotive, Inc., 855 N.E.2d 825 (Ohio 2006) , the Ohio Supreme Court held that emotional distress damages are "actual damages" that are fully recoverable under the state UDAP statute. However, after this decision, the state legislature amended the UDAP statute to cap non-economic damages at $5000. Ohio Rev. Code § 1345.09(B). See also Morris v. Harvey Cycle & Camper, Inc., 911 N.E.2d 1049 (Ill. App. Ct. 2009) (once consumer shows economic loss, can recover damages for emotional distress, inconvenience, and aggravation).

(n26)Footnote 26. Craig & Bishop, Inc. v. Piles, 247 S.W.3d 897 (Ky. 2008) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Roche v. Fireside Chrysler-Plymouth, 600 N.E.2d 1218 (Ill. App. Ct. 1992) (affirming award of $750 for aggravation and inconvenience). Cf. Fogle v. William Chevrolet/GEO, Inc., 2000 WL 1129983, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 9, 2000) (consumer may recover for aggravation and inconvenience, but not shown here).

(n28)Footnote 28. Griffin-Amiel v. Frank Terris Orchestras, 178 Misc. 2d 71, 677 N.Y.S.2d 908 (City Ct. 1998) (awarding $500 for disappointment, humiliation, and annoyance suffered when defendant sent a different singer to the plaintiff's wedding than the one for whom she had contracted).

(n29)Footnote 29. Becker v. Montgomery, Lynch, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24992 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 26, 2003) (frustration, aggravation, humiliation, embarrassment, inconvenience, humiliation, and upset).

(n30)Footnote 30. Brashears v. Sight N Sound Appliance Centers, Inc., 981 P.2d 1270 (Okla. Ct. App. 1999) ; Fuller v. Sight N Sound Appliance Centers, Inc., 982 P.2d 528 (Okla. Ct. App. 1999) . But see Hedrick v. Spear, 138 Or. App. 53, 907 P.2d 1123 (1995) (damages cannot include work time lost to attend trial).

(n31)Footnote 31. Mirandy v. Allstate Ins. Co., 151 F.3d 1029 (4th Cir. 1998) (table, text available at 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 10915). See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 10.5.3.3 (3d ed. 2006 and Supp.) (mental anguish damages in warranty actions).

(n32)Footnote 32. See also Zanakis-Pico v. Cutter Dodge, Inc., 47 P.3d 1222 (Haw. 2002) (travel expenses compensable).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Standard Register Co. v. Bolton-Emerson, Inc., 38 Mass. App. Ct. 545, 649 N.E.2d 791 (1995) (contractual limitation on damages has no effect on tort-type UDAP claim, but may apply where UDAP claim is merely an alternative theory of recovery under a contract).

(n34)Footnote 34. Cambridge Plating Co. v. NAPCO, Inc., 85 F.3d 752 (1st Cir. 1996) ; Gunn Infiniti v. O'Byrne, 996 S.W.2d 854 (Tex. 1999) (common law mitigation duties apply to UDAP claim).

(n35)Footnote 35. York v. InTrust Bank, N.A., 265 Kan. 271, 962 P.2d 405 (1998) (defendant's proof insufficient); Pierce v. Drees, 607 N.E.2d 726 (Ind. Ct. App. 1993) .

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Maberry v. Said, 927 F. Supp. 1456 (D. Kan. 1996) . See also Carter v. Lachance, 766 A.2d 717 (N.H. 2001) (statutory damages are required even without proof of actual damages); Dantzig v. Sloe, 115 Ohio App. 3d 64, 684 N.E.2d 715 (1996) (statutory damages required even if consumer proves no damages).

(n37)Footnote 37. Dantzig v. Sloe, 115 Ohio App. 3d 64, 684 N.E.2d 715 (1996) ; Page & Wirtz Constr. Co. v. Solomon, 110 N.M. 206, 794 P.2d 349 (1990) . But see Shurtliff v. N.W. Pools, Inc., 120 Idaho 263, 815 P.2d 461 (Ct. App. 1991) (no statutory damages where no actual damages). See also Aspinall v. Philip Morris Cos., 813 N.E.2d 476, 491 /-/92 (Mass. 2004) (statutory minimum damages can be awarded as long as consumer has suffered injury; purchasing product that was deceptively advertised is sufficient injury). See also White v. Mock, 104 P.3d 356 (Idaho 2004) (awarding statutory minimum damages even though consumers failed to prove actual damages). Mulford v. Altria Group, Inc., 242 F.R.D. 615, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29149 (D.N.M. Mar. 22, 2007) (statutory damages available in individual actions without proof of actual damages); Chambers v. General Trailer Mfg., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45199 (E.D. Mich. July 5, 2006) (where product did not fulfill plaintiff's expectations, statutory damages are available even if actual damages are not proven); Gadula v. Gen. Motors Corp., 2001 Mich. App. LEXIS 692 (Jan. 5, 2001) (disappointed expectations sufficient to allow jury to award statutory damages, even if actual damages are not proven) (unpublished). But cf. Hershenow v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car Co., 840 N.E.2d 526, 533 n.18 (Mass. 2006) (must show that UDAP violation caused cognizable loss, but need not quantify that loss).

(n38)Footnote 38. Fenn v. Noah, 133 P.3d 1240, 1244 (Idaho 2006) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Upadhyay v. Anderson, Clearinghouse No. 49,148 (Va. Dist. Ct. Apr. 2, 1993). See also Griffin v. Bank of Am., 971 F. Supp. 492 (D. Kan. 1997) (jury could award multiple statutory damage awards for the nine violations alleged even though Kansas UDAP statute allows court to award statutory damages up to $5000 for each claim); Baker v. Tri-County Harley Davidson, Inc., 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 5353 (Ohio Ct. App. Nov. 15, 1999) ($200 statutory damages awarded for each of three violations); Smith v. Stacy, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3202 (Ohio Ct. App. June 19, 2001) (statutory damages of $200 available for each of four UDAP violations, but actual damages are greater so are awarded instead); In re Wiggins, 273 B.R. 839 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2001) ($1000 statutory damages for each of 6 violations in single transaction). But see Ferrari v. Howard, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 3632 (Ohio Ct. App. July 11, 2002) (unpublished, citation limited) (only one statutory damage award possible for multiple violations in same transaction).

(n40)Footnote 40. Sign-O-Life Signs, Inc. v. Delaurenti Florists, Inc., 825 P.2d 714 (Wash. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n41)Footnote 41. See, e.g., Veranda Beach Club v. W. Sur. Co., 936 F.2d 1364 (1st Cir. 1991) (Massachusetts law) (court doubles UDAP award of $2 million).

(n42)Footnote 42. Davis v. Sellers, 443 S.E.2d 879 (N.C. Ct. App. 1994) ; Armour v. Klecker, 169 Wis. 2d 692, 486 N.W.2d 563 (Ct. App. 1992) . See Williams v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 225 F.3d 738 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (District of Columbia UDAP statute interpreted to allow treble damages without any additional findings by the court); Stultz v. Artistic Pools, Inc., 2001 Ohio 1420 (Ohio Ct. App. 2001) (good faith, the fact that the consumer has already been adequately compensated, and equitable considerations are not grounds for denying treble damages).

(n43)Footnote 43. Peoples Sec. Life Ins. Co. v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 991 F.2d 141 (4th Cir. 1993) (N.C. law).

(n44)Footnote 44. See, e.g., Vista Resorts, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 117 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2004) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Rini v. United Van Lines, Inc., 903 F. Supp. 224 (D. Mass. 1995) (willfulness shown); Oswego Laborers' Local 214 Pension Fund v. Marine Midland Bank, 85 N.Y.2d 20, 647 N.E.2d 741 (1995) (proof of scienter necessary); Top Value Homes, Inc. v. Harden, 460 S.E.2d 427 (S.C. Ct. App. 1995) (treble damages properly denied where consumers did not prove willful or knowing violation). See also Cambridge Plating Co. v. NAPCO, Inc., 85 F.3d 752 (1st Cir. 1996) (Massachusetts law) (defendant's acts did not rise to the level of callousness or meretriciousness that would justify multiple damages). A defendant's UDAP violation may be found willful or knowing, thereby justifying multiple damages, even though the jury found in the defendant's favor on a companion fraud count. Shah v. Racetrac Petroleum Co., 2005 WL 2417059 (E.D. Tenn., September 30, 2005).

(n46)Footnote 46. Whelihan v. Markowski, 37 Mass. App. 209, 638 N.E.2d 927 (1994) .

(n47)Footnote 47. Stultz v. Artistic Pools, Inc., 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 4561 (Ohio Ct. App. Oct. 10, 2001) .

(n48)Footnote 48. Maryland Ins. Co. v. Head Indus. Coatings & Servs., Inc., 906 S.W.2d 218 (Tex. App. 1995) .

(n49)Footnote 49. Whelihan v. Markowski, 37 Mass. App. 209, 638 N.E.2d 927 (1994) .

(n50)Footnote 50. Lewis v. ACB Bus. Servs., 911 F. Supp. 290 (S.D. Ohio 1996) (to justify treble damages, defendant's actions must be similar to specific conduct determined to be UDAP violation by prior court); Dotson v. Brondes Motor Sales, 90 Ohio App. 3d 206, 628 N.E.2d 137 (1993) (no treble damages where no showing that seller violated UDAP rule or prior court decision); Gross v. Bildex, Inc., 647 N.E.2d 573 (Ohio Mun. Ct. 1994) (damages trebled where contractor's acts violated decisions made available for public inspection). Heindel v. Pfizer Inc., 381 F. Supp. 2d 364 (D.N.J. 2004) (New Jersey makes treble damages mandatory but in Pennsylvania they are discretionary).

(n51)Footnote 51. Votto v. American Car Rental, Inc., 273 Conn. 478, 871 A. 2d 981 (2005) ; Gargano v. Heyman, 203 Conn. 616, 525 A.2d 1343 (1987) .

(n52)Footnote 52. Votto v. American Car Rental, Inc., 273 Conn. 478, 871 A.2d 981 (Conn. 2005) .

(n53)Footnote 53. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. McMahon, 482 U.S. 220, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 4 (2d ed. 2002). Byrd v. Jackson, 902 A.2d 778 (D.C. 2006) (affirming award of both treble damages and punitive damages under UDAP law).

(n54)Footnote 54. Stehli v. Action Custom Homes, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 4464 (Ohio Ct. App. Sept. 24, 1999) . See also Broughton v. CIGNA Healthplans, 21 Cal. 4th 1066, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334, 988 P.2d 67 (1999) (striking down a limitation on a state statutory remedy as against public policy); Derrickson v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21100, 81 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1533, 1538 (D. Md. Mar. 19, 1999) , aff'd sub nom. Johnson v. Circuit City Stores, Inc., 203 F.3d 821 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1276, 120 S. Ct. 2744, 147 L.Ed. 2d 1008 (2000) . Cf. In re Managed Care Litig., 132 F. Supp. 2d 989 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 11, 2000) (refusing to enforce arbitration clauses that did not permit a plaintiff to obtain exemplary or punitive damages), aff'd sub nom. Price Plaintiffs v. Humana Ins. Co. (In re Humana Inc. Managed Care Litig.), 285 F.3d 971 (11th Cir. 2002) ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (2000) (arbitration agreement may not limit statutorily imposed remedies such as punitive damages).

(n55)Footnote 55. LaBarre v. Shepard, 84 F.3d 496 (1st Cir. 1996) ; Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, 1972 v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992) ; Han v. Yang, 84 Haw. 162, 931 P.2d 604 (Ct. App. 1997) ; Waite Hill Servs. v. World Class Metal Works, 959 S.W.2d 182 (Tex. 1998) . See Cremeans v. Robbins, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 2753 (Ohio Ct. App. June 12, 2000) (where remedy plaintiff sought was basically cancellation of the transaction and return of money paid, this was a prayer for rescission so she could not get treble damages).

(n56)Footnote 56. Blankenship v. Town & Country Ford, Inc., 622 S.E.2d 638 (N.C. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n57)Footnote 57. Cambridge Plating Co. v. NAPCO, Inc., 890 F. Supp. 55 (D. Mass. 1995) (plaintiff allowed to recover compensatory damages on non-UDAP count, plus the portion of UDAP damages that resulted from doubling); Conseco Fin. Servicing Corp. v. Hill, 556 S.E.2d 468 (Ga. App. 2001) (consumers may be able to recover both treble damages and exemplary damages for the same UDAP violation under the Georgia statute), recons. denied, (Dec. 5, 2001). See Jackson v. Byrd, 902 A.2d 778 (D.C. Super. 2004) (trial court awarded both treble damages and punitive damages for the same UDAP violations by a fraudulent homesaver).

(n58)Footnote 58. Heller v. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, Ltd., 809 P.2d 1016 (Colo. Ct. App. 1990) ; Winkle Chevy-Olds-Pontiac v. Condon, 830 S.W.2d 740 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) . Compare Cherick Distribs., Inc. v. Polar Corp., 41 Mass. App. Ct. 125, 669 N.E.2d 218 , rev. denied, 423 Mass. 1109, 672 N.E.2d 538 (1996) (where UDAP claim derived from same wrongful acts as non-UDAP claim, only single award of damages should have been trebled).

(n59)Footnote 59. Cal. Civ. Code § 3345. See Novick v. UNUM Life Ins. Co., 570 F. Supp. 2d 1207 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (punitive damages under Consumers Legal Remedies Act may be trebled).

(n60)Footnote 60. Davis v. Wholesale Motors, 86 Haw. 405, 949 P.2d 1026 (Ct. App. 1997) ; Tosi v. Adams, 424 Mass. 1001, 673 N.E.2d 1224 (1997) ; Brown v. LeClair, 20 Mass. App. 976, 482 N.E.2d 870 (1985) ; Pierce v. Norwick, 550 N.W.2d 451 (Wis. Ct. App. 1996) .

(n61)Footnote 61. Edmondson v. American Motorcycle Ass'n, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 1506 (4th Cir. Feb. 2, 2001) (unpublished, citation limited) (N.C. law); Cremeans v. Robbins, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 2753 (Ohio Ct. App. June 12, 2000) .

(n62)Footnote 62. Cannon v. Cherry Hill Toyota, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 362 (D.N.J. 2001) . But see Stuart v. Weisflog's Showroom Gallery, Inc., 293 Wis. 2d 668 (2006) (where the consumer entered into a transaction because of the defendant's deception, the multiple damage award should be based on all the damage resulting from the transaction, even if the defendant's negligence in performing the contract was the primary cause of some of the damages.).

(n63)Footnote 63. Stuart v. Weisflog's Showroom Gallery, Inc., 746 N.W.2d 762, 770 /-/771 (Wis. 2008).

(n64)Footnote 64. See City Coal Co. v. Noonan, 434 Mass. 709 (2001) (prejudgment interest runs only on the untrebled compensatory portion of the award). Compare Roberts v. Grande, 868 S.W.2d 956 (Tex. Ct. App. 1994) (interest not trebled), with Vairo v. Clayden, 153 Ariz. 13, 734 P.2d 110 (Ct. App. 1987) (interest trebled in state RICO action). See also Murphy v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 438 Mass. 529, 781 N.E.2d 1232, 1236 (2003) (treble damages may be awarded based on delay in payment of arbitration award).

(n65)Footnote 65. Schwartz v. Rose, 418 Mass. 41, 634 N.E.2d 105 (1994) .

(n66)Footnote 66. Custom Molders, Inc. v. American Yard Prods., Inc., 463 S.E.2d 199 (N.C. 1995) .

(n67)Footnote 67. Green Tree Acceptance, Inc. v. Holmes, 803 S.W.2d 458 (Tex. Ct. App. 1991) .

(n68)Footnote 68. Cal. Civ. Code § 1780; Conn. Gen. Stat. § 42-110(g); D.C. Code Ann. § 28-3901; Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-399; Idaho Code § 48-608; Ky. Rev. Stat. § 367.220; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.025; Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.638; R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-5.2; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2461 (exemplary damages capped at treble the consideration that consumer provides the merchant). See Parrott v. Carr Chevrolet, Inc., 331 Or. 537, 17 P.3d 473 (2001) (reinstating $1 million punitive damage award on UDAP claim), reconsideration denied, 2001 Ore. LEXIS 223 (Mar. 27, 2001) . See, e.g., Nielsen v. Wisniewski, 32 Conn. App. 133, 628 A.2d 25 (1993) (punitive damages against landlord of substandard housing); Billy Cain Ford Lincoln Mercury v. Kaminski, 230 Ga. App. 598, 496 S.E.2d 521 (1998) , cert. denied, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 589 (Ga. May 29, 1998) . See also Cohen v. Express Financial Servs., Inc., 145 S.W.3d 857 (Mo. App. 2004) (affirming award of $25,000 punitive damages against dealership and $1000 against salesperson for failure to disclose vehicle's prior wreck damage). But cf. Thomas v. Brooks, 2007 WL 1378510 (Ky. Ct. App. May 11, 2007) (unpublished) (UDAP statute does not expand availability of punitive damages; not available where UDAP claim is based on breach of construction contract); Ford Motor Co. v. Mayes, 575 S.W.2d 480, 482 (Ky. Ct. App. 1978) (UDAP statute merely preserves any preexisting right to claim punitive damages, but does not make punitive damages more widely available; not available where UDAP claim was based on breach of contract).

(n69)Footnote 69. Minn. Stat. § 549.20 ("upon clear and convincing evidence that the acts of the defendant show deliberate disregard for the rights or safety of others"). See also Wexler v. Brothers Entertainment Group, Inc., 457 N.W.2d 218 (Minn. Ct. App. 1990) ; Yost v. Millhouse, 373 N.W.2d 826 (Minn. Ct. App. 1985) . But see In re Lutheran Brotherhood Variable Ins. Prods. Co. Sales Practices Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7789 (D. Minn. Apr. 28, 2004) (stating that Minn. Consumer Fraud Act and Private Attorney General statute do not authorize punitive damages; court does not mention Minn. Stat. § 549.20).

(n70)Footnote 70. Ark. Stat. Ann. § 4-88-204.

(n71)Footnote 71. Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. § 505/10a.See Kirkpatrick v. Strosberg, 2008 Ill. App. LEXIS 358 (Ill. App. Ct. Apr. 16, 2008) ; Kleczek v. Jorgensen, 328 Ill. App. 3d 1012, 767 N.E.2d 913 (2002) (upholding trial court's discretion in denying punitive damages).

(n72)Footnote 72. Societa Bario E Derivati v. Kaystone Chem., Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23066 (D. Conn. Apr. 15, 1998) (Connecticut UDAP statute adopts common law standards for punitive damages but expands their nature to serve both compensatory and deterrent purposes); Aronson v. Creditrust Corp., 7 F. Supp. 2d 589, 594 (W.D. Pa. 1998) (construing language authorizing "such additional relief as [the court] deems necessary or proper" to allow punitive damages); Martin v. Heinold Commodities, Inc., 163 Ill. 2d 33, 643 N.E.2d 734 (1994) (punitive damages awarded in suit alleging UDAP violations and breach of fiduciary duty). But see Wyman v. Terry Schulte Chevrolet, 584 N.W.2d 103, 1998 S.D. 96 (1998) (punitive damages not available on UDAP claim).

(n73)Footnote 73. Nielsen v. Wisniewski, 32 Conn. App. 133, 628 A.2d 25 (1993) (reckless indifference to rights of others or an intentional and wanton violation of those rights); Leonard & Harral Packing Co. v. Ward, 971 S.W.2d 671 (Tex. App. 1998) . See also Cohen v. Express Financial Servs., Inc., 145 S.W.3d 857 (Mo. App. 2004) (punitive damages allowable where defendant's conduct is outrageous because of evil motive or reckless indifference to rights of others); Votto v. Am. Car Rental, Inc., 871 A.2d 981 (Conn. 2005) (upholding punitive damage award where defendant's overcharge was reprehensible, not an isolated incident, and exacerbated by directing consumer to address complaint to a phony legal department).

(n74)Footnote 74. See Bristol Tech. v. Microsoft Corp., 114 F. Supp. 2d 59 (D. Conn. 2000) (awarding $1 million in punitive damages against Microsoft even though jury awarded $1 in actual damages), vacated, 250 F.3d 152 (2d Cir. 2001) (vacating judgment pursuant to settlement agreement; expressing doubt about whether district court had jurisdiction to consider punitive damages issues); Conway v. American Excavating, Inc., 41 Conn. App. 437, 676 A.2d 881 (1996) . But see Twin City Fire Ins. Co. v. Davis, 904 S.W.2d 663 (Tex. 1995) .

(n75)Footnote 75. Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, 514 U.S. 52, 115 S. Ct. 1212, 131 L. Ed. 2d 76 (1995) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (2d ed. 2002).

(n76)Footnote 76. TXO Prod. Corp. v. Alliance Res. Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 113 S. Ct. 2711, 125 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1993) . See also BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1996) .

(n77)Footnote 77. See Grabinski v. Blue Springs Ford Sales, Inc., 203 F.3d 1024 (8th Cir. 2000) (upholding punitive damage awards ranging from five to ninety-nine times actual damages; also discusses how to calculate punitive-to-actual damage ratios), reh'g, en banc, denied, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 4660 (8th Cir. Mar. 21, 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 825, 121 S. Ct. 70, 148 L.Ed. 2d 35 (2000) ; Sheffield v. Andrews, 679 So. 2d 1052 (Ala. 1996) (upholding $1 million in punitive damages where actual damages $10) (the Alabama Supreme Court denied a motion for rehearing on this case even after Gore was issued); Waltson v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 923 P.2d 456 (Idaho 1996) (ratio greater than 25 to 1); Schaffer v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 552 N.W.2d 801 (S.D. 1996) ; Romanski v. Detroit Entertainment, L.L.C., 428 F.3d 629 (6th Cir. 2005) (upholding $600,000 of jury's $875,000 punitive damage award on compensatory damages of $279.05, a 2750-to-1 ratio); Action Marine, Inc. v. Continental Carbon, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4907 (M.D. Ala. Jan. 23, 2006) (taking risk of physical harm from defendant's environmental pollution into account even though plaintiffs did not claim personal injury); CGB Occupational Therapy, Inc. v. RHA Pa. Nursing Homes, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13516 (E.D. Pa. July 5, 2005) (upholding $2 million of jury's $30 million punitive damages on compensatory damages of $109,000, a 19-to-1 ratio; court notes that plaintiff probably suffered damages that are not reflected in the compensatory award).

(n78)Footnote 78. Tingley Sys., Inc. v. Norse Sys., Inc., 49 F.3d 93 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n79)Footnote 79. See Neibel v. Trans World Assurance Co., 108 F.3d 1123 (9th Cir. 1997) ; Life Ins. Co. of Georgia v. Johnson, 701 So. 2d 524 (Ala. 1997) (intentional sale of unnecessary supplemental Medicare insurance policy to Medicaid recipient was particularly reprehensible given that victim was elderly and poor, and supported a ratio of punitive to compensatory damages of 12 to 1); Williams v. ITT Fin. Servs., 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 2721 (Ohio Ct. App. June 25, 1997) (home repair loan scam perpetrated on elderly victim supported punitive to compensatory damages ratio of 100 to 1), aff'd sub nom. Williams v. Aetna Fin. Co., 83 Ohio St. 3d 464, 700 N.E.2d 859 (1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1999) . Cf. Dean v. Olibas, 129 F.3d 1001 (8th Cir. 1997) (punitive damages 14 times actuals not excessive for malicious prosecution action against bail bondsman); Parsons v. First Invs. Corp., 122 F.3d 525 (8th Cir. 1997) (punitive damages award over 11 times the actual damages not excessive in investors' action for fraudulently inducing them to invest in junk bond mutual funds); Hampton v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc., 18 F. Supp. 2d 1256 (D. Kan. 1998) ($1,100,000 punitive damage award, at a 20-to-1 ratio to the $56,000 compensatory award, was justified due to the reprehensible pattern of discriminatory behavior against minorities); United States v. Oak Manor Apartments, 11 F. Supp. 2d 1047 (W.D. Ark. 1998) (punitive damages 100 times the compensatory award not excessive for housing discrimination claim); McDermott v. Party City Corp., 11 F. Supp. 2d 612 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (upholding 9 to 1 ration where breach of fiduciary duties); Scribner v. Waffle House, Inc., 976 F. Supp. 439 (N.D. Tex. 1997) , vacated, 62 F. Supp. 2d 1186 (N.D. Tex. 1999) (punitive damages 13 times the actual damages awarded to employee in a sexual harassment case warranted due to egregious harassment over an extended period of time); Rush v. Scott Specialty Gases, Inc., 930 F. Supp. 194 (E.D. Pa. 1996) ($2,700,000 punitive damages in employment discrimination case), costs/fees proceeding, 934 F. Supp. 152 (E.D. Pa. 1996) , clarified, 940 F. Supp. 814 (E.D. Pa. 1996) , rev'd, in part, remanded, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 11102 (3d Cir. 1997) , reh'g denied, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 18415 (3d Cir. Juy 16, 1997) . But cf. FDIC v. Hamilton, 122 F.3d 854 (10th Cir. 1997) (punitive damages award 27 times the compensatory damages award excessive for action against landlord for falsely promising to make substantial repairs, and reduced to 6 times compensatory damages). See Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (Ct. App. 1996) (upholding $2 million punitive damage award); Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. v. Rivera, 683 So. 2d 154 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996) (upholding $1.5 million punitive damage award); Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. v. Wasiak, 917 S.W.2d 883 (Tex. Ct. App. 1996) (applying Alabama law and upholding $3.7 million punitive damage award).

(n80)Footnote 80. 538 U.S. 408, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 (2003) .

(n81)Footnote 81. 538 U.S. 408, 419, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 1521, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585, 602 (2003) .

(n82)Footnote 82. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 909; Restatement (Second) of Agency, 217C; Preston v. Income Producing Mgmt. Co., 871 F. Supp. 411 (D. Kan. 1994) ; Dahl v. Sittner, 474 N.W.2d 897 (S.D. 1991) .

(n83)Footnote 83. Williams v. Aetna Fin. Co., 83 Ohio St. 3d 464, 700 N.E.2d 859 (1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1999) (Aetna is ITT's new corporate name).

(n84)Footnote 84. Crawford v. Bill Swad Chevrolet, Inc., 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 4221 (Sept. 19, 2000) (allowing both punitive damages for fraud plus treble damages for UDAP violations); United Labs. v. Kuykendall, 335 N.C. 183, 437 S.E.2d 374 (1993) ; Winkle Chevy-Olds-Pontiac v. Condon, 830 S.W.2d 740 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) ; Conseco Fin. Serv. Corp. v. Hill, 556 S.E.2d 468 (Ga. App. 2001) (treble and punitive damages may be allowed for same UDAP violation if intentional); Scott v. Blue Springs Ford Sales, Inc., 176 S.W.3d 140 (Mo. 2005) (punitive damages under UDAP statute are not inconsistent with punitive damages for fraud, so consumer may seek both; after verdict judge should determine the extent to which the awards merge). See also Hess v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 2006 Mo. App. LEXIS 350 (Mo. Ct. App. Mar. 28, 2006) (fraud and UDAP theories of recovery are not inconsistent, so consumer need not choose between them prior to submitting case to jury; after verdict, court must ensure that there is no double recovery).

(n85)Footnote 85. See Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, 1972 v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992) ; Cieri v. Leticia Query Realty, Inc., 905 P.2d 29 (Hawaii 1995) (consumer must elect between treble damages and attorney fees on a UDAP claim or punitive damages on a fraud claim).

(n86)Footnote 86. Cieri v. Leticia Query Realty, Inc., 905 P.2d 29 (Hawaii 1995) (consumer must choose larger award; in determining which is larger, attorney fees are included in UDAP award); Hale v. Basin Motor Co., 110 N.M. 314, 795 P.2d 1006 (1990) . See also Inman v. Imperial Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 397 S.E.2d 774 (S.C. App. 1990) . But see Concrete Spaces, Inc. v. Sender, 1998 Tenn. App. LEXIS 525 (Tenn. Ct. App. July 31, 1998) (plaintiff must make election before amount of punitive damages is awarded), vacated, remanded, 2 S.W.3d 901 (Tenn. 1999) .

(n87)Footnote 87. Consumer class action practice issues are treated in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide (6th ed. 2006).

(n88)Footnote 88. Piccicuto v. Dwyer, 32 Mass. App. 137, 586 N.E.2d 38 (1992) .

(n89)Footnote 89. Carroll v. Cellco P'ship, 313 N.J. Super. 488, 713 A.2d 509 (App. Div. 1998) ("This preference for class certification applies especially for adjudication of multiple consumer-fraud claims.").

(n90)Footnote 90. Whether an arbitration proceeding can go forward as a class is dealt with in detail in National National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements, Ch. 10 (5th ed. 2007 and Supp.).

(n91)Footnote 91. 55 F.3d 269 (7th Cir. 1995) . See also Thompson v. Illinois Title Loans, Inc., 2000 Dist. LEXIS 232 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 2000) ; Furgason v. McKenzie Check Advance of Ind., Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2725 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 6, 2001) ; Gammaro v. Thorp Consumer Disc. Co., 828 F. Supp. 673, 674 (D. Minn. 1993) , overruled in part, Green Tree Fin. Corp.-Ala. v. Randolph, 531 U.S. 79, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2000) ; Stein v. Geonerco, Inc., 105 Wash. App. 41, 17 P.3d 1266, 1271 (2001) .

(n92)Footnote 92. See, e.g., Idaho Code § 48-608; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 50-634. See also Delahunt v. Cytodyne Techs., 241 F. Supp. 2d 827 (S.D. Ohio 2003) (finding that proposed class action meets Ohio's requirement that practice have been determined by a rule or court decision to be a violation). See also Aspinall v. Philip Morris Cos., 813 N.E.2d 476, 485 (Mass. 2004) (traditional technicalities are not to be read into UDAP statute's class action procedure); Park v. Ford Motor Co., 2004 R.I. Super. LEXIS 181 (R.I. Super. Oct. 7, 2004) (UDAP statute's class action procedures override those of court rules); Iowa Code § 714H.7 (private UDAP class action complaint must be approved by attorney general before it can be filed; attorney general must approve it unless it is frivolous).

(n93)Footnote 93. See Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-390; Miss. Code Ann. § 75-24-15; Tenn. Code Ann. § 47-18-109 (section that creates private cause of action allows consumer to bring suit individually). See also Landreneau v. Fleet Fin. Group, 197 F. Supp. 2d 551 (M.D. La. 2002) ; Durant v. ServiceMaster Co., 208 F.R.D. 228 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (Tennessee UDAP statute only allows individual actions).

(n94)Footnote 94. Faralli v. Hair Today, Gone Tomorrow, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1977 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 10, 2007) (UDAP class cannot be certified based on FTC decision that was not in public inspection file); Pettrey v. Enterprise Title Agency, Inc., 241 F.R.D. 268 (N.D. Ohio 2006) (class certification of Ohio UDAP claim cannot be based on HUD regulations); Delahunt v. Cytodyne Technologies, 241 F. Supp. 2d 827 (S.D. Ohio 2003) (finding that proposed class action meets Ohio's requirement that practice have been determined by a rule or court decision to be a violation); Marrone v. Philip Morris USA, Inc., 850 N.E.2d 31 (Ohio 2006) (UDAP class can be certified only if prior determination orattorney general rule relates to acts that are substantially similar to defendant's; general rule prohibiting representations without reasonable basis in fact, and prior determinations about different industries, are insufficient); Dunkelman v. Cincinnati Bengals, 866 N.E.2d 576 (Ohio Ct. App. 2006) (class certification of Ohio UDAP claim improper when plaintiffs did not allege that defendant violated a rule or a prior decision).

(n95)Footnote 95. Arenson v. Whitehall Convalescent & Nursing Home, 164 F.R.D. 659 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (small amount at stake for each individual militates in favor of class action); Carroll v. Cellco P'ship, 313 N.J. Super. 488, 713 A.2d 509 (App. Div. 1998) .

(n96)Footnote 96. Piccicuto v. Dwyer, 32 Mass. App. 137, 586 N.E.2d 38 (1992) .

(n97)Footnote 97. See Martin v. Dahlberg, Inc., 156 F.R.D. 207 (N.D. Cal. 1994) .

(n98)Footnote 98. See Arenson v. Whitehall Convalescent & Nursing Home, 164 F.R.D. 659 (N.D. Ill. 1996) (no need to show reliance in Illinois UDAP class action); Latman v. Costa Cruise Lines, N.V., 758 So. 2d 699 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) ; Pickett v. Holland Am. Line-Westours, Inc., 101 Wash. App. 901, 6 P.3d 63 (2000) (same), rev'd on other grounds, 35 P.3d 351 (Wash. 2001) . See also Chisolm v. TranSouth Fin. Corp., 194 F.R.D. 538 (E.D. Va. 2000) (reliance can be proven in RICO claim by consumers' payment of bill). But see In re Woodward & Lothrop Holdings, Inc., 205 B.R. 365 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n99)Footnote 99. Duffy v. Jerry's Chevrolet, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 54555 (Md. Cir. Ct. Aug. 27, 2001).

(n100)Footnote 100. Arenson v. Whitehall Convalescent & Nursing Home, 164 F.R.D. 659 (N.D. Ill. 1996) .

(n101)Footnote 101. See Fielder v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 175 F.R.D. 313 (W.D. Mo. 1997) , vacated, remanded, mot. denied, 188 F.3d 1031 (8th Cir. 1999) . Latham v. Residential Loan Centers of Am., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7993 (N.D. Ill. May 6, 2004) (refusing to dismiss class action UDAP claim based on presentation of deceptive documents at loan closings).

(n102)Footnote 102. Strawn v. Canuso, 140 N.J. 43, 657 A.2d 420 (1995) (failure to disclose existence of landfill near homes that were being sold).

(n103)Footnote 103. Shields v. Lefta, Inc., 888 F. Supp. 891 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (class certified on claim that standard contract falsely represented that cost disclosed for extended warranty was actually paid to warranty company).

(n104)Footnote 104. Bloyed v. GMC, 881 S.W.2d 442 (Tex. App. 1994) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n105)Footnote 105. Delaware; Georgia; Hawaii; Illinois; Maine; Minnesota; Nebraska; New Mexico; Ohio; Oklahoma; and Oregon.

(n106)Footnote 106. Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2531; Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-370; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 481A; 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 510/1 et seq. ; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 10, § 1211; Minn. Stat. Ann. § 325D.43; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 87-301; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4165 (Baldwin); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 78, § 51 (West).

(n107)Footnote 107. Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2511; Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-390; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 481; 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/1 et seq. ; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 5, § 206; Minn. Stat. Ann. § 8.31; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 59-1601; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1345.01 (Baldwin); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 15, § 751 (West). See Greenberg v. United Airlines, 206 Ill. App. 3d 40, 563 N.E.2d 1031 (1990) (comparison of the two statutes).

(n108)Footnote 108. Ala. Code § 8-19-10; Cal. Civ. Code § 1780; Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204; Conn. Gen. Stat. § 42-110(g); D.C. Code Ann. § 28-3905(k); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 501.211(1); Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-399; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-13; Idaho Code § 48-608; 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/10a; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 50-634; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 5, § 213; Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 93A, § 9; Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.911; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 59-1609; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-A:10; N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1345.09; R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-5.2; Tenn. Code Ann. § 47-18-109; Tex. Bus. &Com. Code Ann. tit. 2, § 17.50(b); Utah Code Ann. § 13-11-19; Wash. Rev. Code § 19.86.090.

(n109)Footnote 109. Mo. Ann. Stat. §§ 407.025.

(n110)Footnote 110. Scott v. Blue Springs Ford Sales, Inc., 215 S.W.3d 145 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) .

(n111)Footnote 111. See Weinberg v. Sprint Corp., 173 N.J. 233, 801 A.2d 281, 293 (2002) (consumer can obtain injunction where statute authorizes "any other appropriate legal or equitable relief"; must establish ascertainable loss of money or property sufficient to withstand summary judgment); Medical Soc. of N.J. v. Amerihealth HMO, Inc., 376 N.J. Super. 48, 868 A.2d 1162, 1168 (App. Div. 2005) .

(n112)Footnote 112. Cf. Dialogo, L.L.C. v. Santiago-Bauza, 425 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2005) (private plaintiff must show irreparable injury to obtain injunction under Mass. UDAP statute).

(n113)Footnote 113. See Frey v. Vin Devers, Inc., 80 Ohio App. 3d 1, 608 N.E.2d 796 (1992) . See also Wenneman v. Sperano, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 1970 (May 3, 2001) (must elect between rescission and damages).

(n114)Footnote 114. Smith v. Scott Lewis Chevrolet, Inc., 843 S.W.2d 9 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n115)Footnote 115. See, e.g., David McDavid Pontiac, Inc. v. Nix, 681 S.W.2d 831 (Tex. Ct. App. 1984) . See also Ponzo v. Affordable Homes of Rochester, L.L.C., 2005 Minn. App. Unpub. LEXIS 122 (Minn. Ct. App. Aug. 2, 2005) (consumer must act promptly after discovering the basis for rescission).

(n116)Footnote 116. Davis v. Wholesale Motors, Inc., 86 Haw. 405, 949 P.2d 1026 (Ct. App. 1997) .

(n117)Footnote 117. Chattin v. Cape May Greene, Inc., 243 N.J. Super. 590, 581 A.2d 91 (1990) . See also Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001) (purposes are to provide remedy and promote enforcement), modified and reh'g denied, en banc, 2002 Colo. LEXIS 57 (Colo. Jan. 14, 2002) . Presidential Leasing, Inc. v. Krout, 896 So. 2d 938 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) ; Furst v. Einstein Moomjy, Inc., 860 A.2d 435, 446, 448 (N.J. 2004) ; Miller v. United Automax, 166 S.W.3d 692 (Tenn. 2005) (purpose is to make prosecution of UDAP claims economically feasible). Killingsworth v. Ted Russell Ford, Inc., 205 S.W.3d 406, 410 (Tenn. 2006) (potential award of fees is intended to make UDAP claims economically viable). Accord: Krautsack v. Anderson, 861 N.E.2d 633, 645 (Ill. 2006) (because individual consumer fraud claims are frequently small, attorney fee provision ensures that defrauded consumers will be able to exercise their rights).

(n118)Footnote 118. Jordan v. Transnational Motors, Inc., 537 N.W.2d 471 (Mich. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n119)Footnote 119. In re Bryant, 111 B.R. 474 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990) ; In re Wernly, 91 B.R. 702 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) ; In re Stewart, 93 B.R. 878 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) ; Andrews v. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp., 78 B.R. 78 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) ; Jungkurth v. E. Fin. Servs., Inc., 74 B.R. 323 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) , aff'd on other grounds, 87 B.R. 333 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) (while the reviewing district court acknowledged the argument for UDAP attorney fees as "additional relief," it did not expressly affirm this part of the bankruptcy court's ruling). See also Hines v. Chrysler Corp., 971 F. Supp. 212 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n120)Footnote 120. Steiger v. J.S. Builders, Inc., 39 Conn. App. 32, 663 A.2d 432 (1995) (even if trial court has discretion whether to award fees, it must apply the correct legal standard in setting the amount of fees). See Dobosz v. Barrington Dodge, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18970 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2002) (fee award is discretionary; listing relevant factors in determining award).

(n121)Footnote 121. Knight v. Snap-On Tools Corp., 3 F.3d 1398 (10th Cir. 1993) (New Mexico law); Stocker v. Keith, 178 Or. App. 544, 38 P.3d 283 (2002) (Oregon plaintiffs who obtained a judgment on one UDAP claim were held to have prevailed even though they lost on other UDAP claims). See also Brown v. King, 601 S.E.2d 296 (N.C. App. 2004) ; Miller v. United Automax, 166 S.W.3d 692 (Tenn. June 24, 2005) (consumer who elects to receive punitive damages awarded on fraud count rather than treble damages awarded on UDAP count can still recover UDAP attorney fees).

(n122)Footnote 122. Thomas v. Olson, 220 S.W.3d 627 (2005) ; Singh v. I.D.J. Construction & Elec., Inc., 2006 WL 1492475 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. June 1, 2006) (unpublished).

(n123)Footnote 123. Midstate Siding & Window Co. v. Rogers, 309 Ill. App. 3d 610, 722 N.E.2d 1156 (1999)

(construing both state UDAP statute and state credit repair organizations statute to allow award of fees for appellate work), review granted, 731 N.E.2d 765 (Ill. 2000) ; Sing v. John L. Scott, Inc., 920 P.2d 589 (Wash. Ct. App. 1996) . But see Parker v. I&F Insulation Co., 89 Ohio St. 3d 261, 730 N.E.2d 972 (2000) (consumer not entitled to fees for seller's appeal in which seller won 63% reduction of trial court's UDAP award).

(n124)Footnote 124. 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001) .

(n125)Footnote 125. Id. at 604 .

(n126)Footnote 126. Id.

(n127)Footnote 127. Id. at 605

(n128)Footnote 128. Id., 121 S. Ct. at 1838, 1839 n. 4 ("Numerous federal statutes allow courts to award attorney's fees and costs to the 'prevailing party.' The question presented here is whether this term includes a party that has failed to secure a judgment on the merits or a court-ordered consent decree ... .") (citing various fee-shifting statutes, referring to list of additional statutes in Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) , and saying that all are interpreted consistently).

(n129)Footnote 129. See, e.g., Wallerstein v. Stew Leonard's Dairy, 258 Conn. 299, 780 A.2d 916 (2001) (judgment entered under Connecticut equivalent of Rule 68 made plaintiff the prevailing party). But see Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 101 P.3d 140 (Cal. 2004) (rejecting Buckhannon and adhering to catalyst theory).

(n130)Footnote 130. Brandon K. v. New Lenox Sch. Dist., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19138 (Nov. 21, 2001) , reprinted as amended, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19138 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2001) ; Jose Luis R. v. Joliet Township H.S. Dist. 204, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13951 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 27, 2001) , costs/fees proceedins, summ. judgment granted, summ. judgment denied, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13951 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 14, 2001) . But see Thayer v. Principi, 15 Vet. App. 204 (2001) (plaintiff not prevailing party where government sought remand to administrative agency, which then issued favorable appeal, and then court dismissed appeal as moot).

(n131)Footnote 131. Dorfsman v. Law Sch. Admission Council, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24044 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 28, 2001) .

(n132)Footnote 132. A federal court does not have jurisdiction to enforce a settlement agreement once a case is dismissed, unless the dismissal entry embodies the settlement agreement or retains jurisdiction to enforce it. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 511 U.S. 375, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) (stating that district court can enforce settlement agreement if it is embodied in dismissal order or if order states that court retains jurisdiction to enforce it). For further discussion of this topic, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law, § 2.7.6.6 (3d ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n133)Footnote 133. Jacques All Trades Corp. v. Brown, 42 Conn. App. 124, 679 A.2d 27 (1996) ; Totz v. Continental DuPage Acura, 602 N.E.2d 1374 (Ill. App. Ct. 1992) (attorney fee award that was 40 times greater than actual damage award is not excessive); Jordan v. Transnational Motors, Inc., 537 N.W.2d 471 (Mich. Ct. App. 1995) ; Jones v. General Motors Corp., 124 N.M. 606, 953 P.2d 1104 (Ct. App. 1998) (attorney fees awarded even though plaintiff recovered only statutory damages); Bittner v. Tri-County Toyota, Inc., 58 Ohio St. 3d 143, 569 N.E.2d 464 (1991) . See, e.g., Paschal v. Bristol Window & Door, Inc., 2001 Mich. App. LEXIS 1131 (Mich. Ct. App. Mar. 16, 2001) (unpublished, limited precedent) (affirming fee award of $11,000 where damages were $5000). See also Peterson v. Boat Sales, Inc., 2004 Mich. App. LEXIS 3502 (Mich. App. Dec. 21, 2004) (unpublished, citation limited) (reversing award of fees as too low; trial court should have considered remedial nature of UDAP statute and the reasons negotiations were unsuccessful). See also Barbara Parmenter Living Trust v. Lemon, 194 P.3d 796 (Or. 2008) (requiring proportionality would frustrate purpose of landlord-tenant fee-shifting statute of removing barriers to litigation of small but legitimate claims).

(n134)Footnote 134. See Fabri v. United Techs. Int'l, Inc., 193 F. Supp. 2d 480 (D. Conn. 2002) ; Societa Bario E Derivati v. Kaystone Chem., Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23066 (D. Conn. Apr. 15, 1998) (applying lodestar to Connecticut UDAP case). See also Florida Patient's Comp. Fund v. Rowe, 472 So. 2d 1145 (Fla. 1985) (adopting lodestar approach in non-UDAP case and listing 8 factors to determine reasonableness of fees); General Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Laesser, 791 So. 2d 517 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001) (using lodestar calculation for fees awarded to prevailing seller under prior version of statute). Cf. Stuart v. Weisflog's Showroom Gallery, Inc., 293 Wis. 2d 668 (2006) (court should start with reasonable number of hours multiplied by reasonable hourly rate, and then make adjustments based on bar disciplinary rule).

(n135)Footnote 135. Williams v. First Gov't Mortgage & Investors Corp., 225 F.3d 738 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (fees should cover time spent on unsuccessful claims unless they are distinctly different in all respects from the UDAP claims); Ciampi v. Ogden Chrysler Plymouth, Inc., 634 N.E.2d 448 (Ill. App. Ct. 1994) (court affirms awards of fees for all work on case where evidence was same for UDAP and non-UDAP counts); Fit'N' Fun Pools, Inc. v. Shelly, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3 (Jan. 3, 2001) .

(n136)Footnote 136. Sing v. John L. Scott, Inc., 920 P.2d 589 (Wash. Ct. App. 1996) . FMC Corp. v. Helton, 360 Ark. 465 (2005) (attorney fees are available to parties prevailing on a UDAP claim, however, the fees may be awarded only for work on the UDAP claim even if the party prevails on other claims if those claims do not provide for attorney fees). But see Advanced Construction Corp. v. Pilecki, 901 A.2d 189 (Me. 2006) (when UDAP and non-UDAP claims are intertwined and arise from same facts, and consumer prevails on UDAP claim, trial court need not apportion the fee award); Mayer v. Sto Indus., Inc., 132 P.3d 115 (Wash. 2006) (fees appropriate for all work on case where UDAP claims are so closely related to other claims that time cannot reasonably be segregated); Stuart v. Weisflog's Showroom Gallery, Inc., 293 Wis. 2d 668 (2006) (fact that defendant's negligence was one of causes of plaintiff's losses is no basis for reducing UDAP fees).

(n137)Footnote 137. Cruz v. Northwestern Chrysler Plymouth Sales, 179 Ill. 2d 271, 688 N.E.2d 653 (1997) .

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.07

§ 4.07 Federal Racketeering Statute

[1] RICO Described; Scope

Federal and state n1 RICO statutes provide important alternatives to state UDAP remedies in cases of abusive consumer credit practices. The private remedies authorized by RICO n2--have assumed great importance in diverse fields of civil litigation. Although RICO was primarily devised as a weapon against organized crime, its broad provisions for criminal and civil liability were deliberately drawn to encompass types of business-related misconduct which are not peculiar to gangsters. n3

Civil RICO creates a federal civil action for damages (and, arguably, for private injunctive relief) n4 based on the existence of a pattern of enumerated federal and state crimes, n5 and, most importantly, RICO provides prevailing plaintiffs with treble damages plus attorney fees n6 and costs, where other state and federal law might have provided only compensatory damages or no damages at all.

By its own terms, RICO "shall be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purposes," and the Supreme Court has rebuffed several lower court efforts to limit its scope, supporting an expansive construction of the statute. n7 It has done this despite acknowledging the fact that civil RICO has been used far more often against "legitimate" businesses than against "the archetypal, intimidating gangster." n8 It should be noted, however, that the expansive use of civil RICO against "legitimate" businesses has aroused widespread criticism and occasioned various proposals for amendments to restrict its scope. n9 However, the United States Supreme Court in Humana Inc. v. Forsyth n10 has ruled that the McCarran-Ferguson Act n11 does not prevent the federal RICO statute from applying to the business of insurance. Prior to this decision, insurance fraud litigation generally had to be brought in state court on a UDAP, breach of contract, or bad faith tort claim.

Specific statutes may be found to bar or preempt RICO claims. Some defendants, such as school boards, n12 the Internal Revenue Service, tribal councils, n13 legislators, n14 municipalities, n15 and the FDIC, n16 have been found to be immune from RICO.

The RICO statute is complex and important ambiguities remain to be resolved by the courts. The law is in flux, the volume of civil RICO litigation is high, and it is especially important to keep abreast of recent developments. n17

[2] The Structure of RICO

To recover on a RICO count, the plaintiff must show the defendant engaged in at least one of the four prohibited activities spelled out in section 1962, subsections (a) through (d):

> "(a) It shall be unlawful for any person who has received any income derived, directly or indirectly, from a pattern of racketeering activity or through collection of an unlawful debt ... to use or invest, directly or indirectly, any part of such income, or the proceeds of such income, in acquisition of any interest in, or the establishment or operation of, any enterprise which is engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce...
>
> "(b) It shall be unlawful for any person through a pattern of racketeering activity or through collection of an unlawful debt to acquire or maintain, directly or indirectly, any interest in or control of any enterprise which is engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce.
>
> "(c) It shall be unlawful for any person employed by or associated with any enterprise engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce, to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debt.
>
> "(d) It shall be unlawful for any person to conspire to violate any of the provisions of subsections (a), (b), or (c) of this section." n18

These four prohibited practices are triggered by either a pattern of racketeering activity or the "collection of an unlawful debt."

"Racketeering activity" is defined in the statute as including eight generic state crimes and a longer list of specified federal offenses, such as bribery, extortion, narcotics, and obstruction of justice. n19 The crimes are called predicate offenses, and only the enumerated crimes can be used to show racketeering activity. Mail fraud n20 and wire fraud n21 are the most significant predicate offenses, especially for consumer plaintiffs. n22

To prevail on a RICO claim, one must show not only racketeering activity, but a "pattern" of racketeering activity, which requires at least two acts of "racketeering activity" within ten years of each other, at least one of which took place after the statute took effect in 1970. n23

"Collection of an unlawful debt" is defined as either gambling debts or usury, under state or federal law, at a rate at least twice the enforceable rate. n24 For a violation based on collection of an unlawful debt, there need be no racketeering activity and no pattern of abuse, just one instance of collection of a debt at twice the enforceable rate. n25

RICO is somewhat confusing to deal with, partly because RICO does not prohibit racketeering activity directly. Rather, its provisions deal more with the peripheral aspects of racketeering--use of money made through racketeering, control of businesses affecting interstate commerce by racketeers, and conspiracy to do either.

Violators of RICO are subject to criminal penalties, n26 to forfeiture of their interest in the enterprise, n27 and to other sanctions. n28 RICO also provides private litigants with federal court jurisdiction for actions seeking treble damages plus attorney fees. n29

[3] Elements of the Civil RICO Action

[a] Overview

The essential elements of a civil RICO action depend upon which of the four subsections of section 1962 is alleged to have been violated. The elements common to any civil RICO cause of action are:

- The existence of an enterprise;
- The enterprise is engaged in or affects interstate or foreign commerce (utilizing the interstate mails or wires or where supplies are shipped through interstate commerce);
- That the defendant has engaged in one or more of the four prohibited activities enumerated in section 1962; and
- That the prohibited conduct causes injury to the plaintiff's business or property.

Subsection 1962(c) is so far the most commonly used basis for alleging activities prohibited by RICO. Its particular elements, in addition to the elements of all RICO claims, are:

- The defendant is either employed by, or associated with, the enterprise;
- The defendant conducted or participated in, directly or indirectly, the conduct of the enterprise's affairs; and
- The participation was through a pattern of racketeering activity (or collection of an unlawful debt).

The prohibited activities on which civil RICO liability is based involve conduct with reference to an "enterprise": n30 "any individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other legal entity, and any union or group of individuals associated in fact although not a legal entity." n31 Most circuit courts have held that for a RICO count based on section 1962(c), the "person" conducting or participating in an enterprise's affairs cannot also be the "enterprise" itself. n32 However, such persons can themselves be an association-in-fact enterprise, that is, the enterprise can consist of no one other than multiple defendants each of whom is involved in the scheme. n33 Sections 1962(a), (b), and (d) generally do not require a distinct enterprise.

[b] Liability of Outside Professionals Under Section 1962(c)

The Supreme Court in the Reves case n34 held that in order for outside accountants to be held liable under RICO for their fraudulent audits, they had to have participated in the operation or management of the enterprise, thus severely limiting the liability of outside professionals for RICO violations of enterprises with which they do business. Since Reves, plaintiffs have not had great success with claims against outside professionals. n35 Another possible approach is to argue that the defendant is liable under RICO for aiding and abetting the RICO violation. Since the Supreme Court's decision in Central Bank v. First Interstate Bank, n36 courts have split over whether aider and abetter liability is available under RICO. n37

[c] "Pattern" of Racketeering Activity

A pattern of racketeering activity "requires at least two acts of racketeering activity" n38--one is not enough. The Supreme Court in H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. n39 specifically stated that, while a pattern of racketeering need not involve organized crime, it can not be shown merely by proving two predicate acts. The acts alleged, however, need not be part of separate illegal schemes. The Court specifically found that RICO is applicable only to long-term criminal activity.

Following these decisions, the lower courts adopt a flexible test of whether the acts alleged are sufficiently related and continuous enough to evidence a pattern. n40 The factors to be looked at include the number of victims, the number of participants, the purpose of the activity, the result of the activity, the method of commission, the number of transactions, whether the scheme is ongoing and open-ended, and the duration of activity. Consumer cases that involve a scheme that, by its nature, projects into the future, a "recidivist" scheme, may well meet the requirements of an "open-ended" type pattern. For example, homeowners who pled that they had been victimized by a scheme through a which a finance company illegally diverted loan proceeds successfully argued that the scheme, which took place over just nine months, satisfied the pattern requirement by virtue of being "open-ended." n41 Some courts hold that multiple acts arising from one criminal episode can form a pattern.

[d] Conspiracy

Section 1962(d) declares it unlawful for any person to conspire to violate any of the provisions of subsections (a), (b), or (c) of section 1962. Salinas v. United States n42 resolved a split in the circuits as to the requirements of section 1962(d) by choosing the broader reading. Relying on traditional conspiracy law which provides that, so long as they share a common purpose, conspirators are liable for the acts of their co-conspirators, the Court ruled that RICO does not require that the defendant must commit or agree to commit two or more predicate acts in order to violate section 1962(d). n43 Rather, the conspirator need only "intend to further an endeavor which, if completed, would satisfy all of the elements of a substantive criminal offense... [I]t suffices that he adopt the goal of furthering or facilitating the criminal endeavor." n44 While the commission of two predicate acts may prove this intent, it is not the only means of proving it. n45 Based on this holding, the Court affirmed the conviction of a sheriff's deputy who knew about and agreed to facilitate a bribery scheme but who had not accepted or agreed to accept two bribes.

Lower court decisions since Salinas have held that the plaintiff or prosecutor need only show that the defendant agreed that predicate acts would be committed on behalf of the conspiracy. n46 The Eleventh Circuit has taken the expansive view that such an agreement can be shown by proving an agreement on an overall objective, which in turn can be proven by circumstantial evidence that each defendant must reasonably have known that others were also conspiring to participate in the same enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity. n47

[e] Collection of an Unlawful Debt

There is an alternative in RICO to proof of a pattern of racketeering. The statute provides that it is illegal to do various things either from a pattern of racketeering activity or through collection of an unlawful debt. n48 An unlawful debt is defined to include a usurious debt which is unenforceable in whole or in part as to interest or principal, and where the interest rate is at least twice the enforceable rate.

Virtually all usury laws specify that usurious loans are unenforceable, at least as to the portion of interest exceeding the enforceable rate. Consequently, the key to proving a RICO violation based on collection of an unlawful debt is showing that a creditor collected a debt where the interest rate exceeded twice the enforceable rate.

It is not enough if a creditor violates laws relating to loans or the collection of loans--the laws must set a maximum amount of interest that can be charged for the type of loan in question and the interest actually charged must be more than twice that rate. No pattern need be proven here, n49 however, some courts have expressly or implicitly held that the scope of RICO does not extend to occasional usurious transactions by one not in the business of loan sharking. n50 However, other courts have given a less strict reading to the unlawful debt element, finding that it can apply to an occasional instance of loansharking. n51

[f] The "Injury" Element

"Any person injured in his business or property" may sue for treble damages under RICO. n52 In Holmes v. Securities

Investor Protection Corp., n53 the United States Supreme Court held that a RICO plaintiff may not recover unless the plaintiff can demonstrate that the injuries were directly and proximately caused by a defendant's racketeering activity. n54 The Supreme Court resoundingly reaffirmed the proximate cause rule of Holmes in Anza v. Ideal Steel Supply Corp., n55 in which business owners sued a competitor that had failed to charge its customers sales tax and had submitted fraudulent tax returns to the state. The Court rejected the plaintiffs' argument that the practice allowed the defendant to charge lower prices, and that those lower prices cost the plaintiffs sales. n56 The injury alleged, the Court reasoned, was too attenuated from the violating act, the tax fraud. n57 The fact that a competitor commits tax fraud does not mean that it will charge lower prices, nor are a business's lost sales necessarily the product of a competitor's lower prices. n58 The decision signals the Court's commitment to close conformity to RICO's proximate cause requirement, and attorneys should be cautious in relying on plaintiff-favorable rulings on the issue that pre-date Anza.

[g] Rejected Limitations on Liability

The Supreme Court has rejected many attempted limitations on liability and has endorsed the position that RICO is to be given a broad construction in order to further its remedial purposes. n59

[4] Predicate Offenses: Mail Fraud and Wire Fraud

To recover on a RICO count, the plaintiff must either show collection of an unlawful debt or a pattern of "racketeering activity." Racketeering activity is defined as violation of one of a list of enumerated state and federal statutes--what are referred to as predicate offenses. n60 Two of the most often used RICO predicate offenses are also two of the broadest federal criminal statutes, the mail fraud and wire fraud statutes.

[a] Mail Fraud

The mail fraud statute does not, of itself, create a civil cause of action, but, as the basis of racketeering claims, it accounts for a major share of the vast scope of civil RICO liability. For the consumer plaintiff, especially, mail fraud predicate offenses are the usual foundation of a RICO civil action; it is almost impossible for a business to carry out a fraudulent scheme without making some use of the mails. n61

The elements of mail fraud are two: (1) a scheme to defraud, and (2) a mailing made for the purpose of executing the scheme. The mail and wire fraud statutes address a broader scope of fraud than common law fraud does. n62 It is not necessary that anyone actually be defrauded. Nevertheless, as always under RICO, the plaintiff must have suffered injury to business or property "by reason of" the RICO violation. n63

A scheme to defraud is very broad and encompasses almost anything designed to defraud through misrepresentations of the truth. It can include the assertion of "half-truths," the concealment of material facts, n64 or misappropriation of confidential information. n65

Mail fraud requires the specific intent to defraud. n66 Intent is not shown, though, where the claims are based on negligent or unintentional conduct. The defendant's good faith belief in even an impractical or "somewhat visionary" scheme is a defense; however, this is not determined by a purely subjective standard of sincerity. Honest belief does not justify baseless, false, or reckless representations or promises. Thus, mail fraud includes more than common law fraud, but probably somewhat less than the UDAP "deception" standard.

The mailing need not be made by the defendant so long as he or she causes it to be made. Nor need the mailing contain the fraudulent representation itself; it is enough if the mailing somehow aids in the execution of the fraudulent scheme, although it must be more than just confirmatory in nature. n67

Under the mail fraud statute, each mailing in furtherance of a scheme to defraud is a separate offense, separately punishable. And multiple mailings in furtherance of a single scheme to defraud provide multiple RICO predicate offenses.

In 2008 the Supreme Court resolved a circuit split to hold in Bridge v. Phoenix Bond & Indemnity Co., that a RICO plaintiff asserting mail or wire fraud need not claim first party reliance. n68 Accordingly, the plaintiffs, who were participants in a county's auction of tax liens that the county had acquired on the property of delinquent taxpayers, could base a RICO claim on misrepresentations made to the county, rather than to the participants themselves. n69

[b] Wire Fraud

Insofar as RICO is concerned, wire fraud n70 and mail fraud are treated in virtually identical fashion. The only difference is that wire fraud requires an interstate communication, typically by telephone.

[5] RICO Pleading and Procedure

[a] Pleading the Claim

A RICO claim should not be omitted if there is a good faith basis for it at the time the complaint is filed, but attorneys should reevaluate the RICO claim as the case progresses. n71 Courts have imposed Rule 11 sanctions for failure to dismiss a RICO claim when it was clear after discovery that the claim was not valid. n72

Most courts have held that, for purposes of RICO, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply, requiring that fraud be pleaded with particularity. n73 Some courts now require that all predicate acts--not just those based on fraud--be pled with equal particularity. n74 Courts require a RICO plaintiff to plead the time, place, and particular context of the false representations, as well as the identity of the party making the representations and the consequences of making them. n75 For consumer purposes, mail fraud, wire fraud, and collection of an unlawful debt are the most likely predicate acts.

In alleging mail fraud, the plaintiff should outline the fraud by delineating the sender and recipient, the location of mailing and receipt, the contents of the mailings, and the consequences of the mailings.

In the case of wire fraud, the plaintiff must give similarly detailed information, and also must allege an interstate telephone call or other interstate wire communication in furtherance of the fraudulent scheme. n76 Where the predicate offense is collection of an unlawful debt, the plaintiff must, in addition to specifying the details of the transaction, specify the prescribed interest rate which the defendant has violated.

It is clear that fraud cannot be pleaded simply on information and belief without some elaboration of the facts supporting that belief, or if the "information and belief" pertains to information from a pending criminal complaint. n77 The safest approach is to draft a civil RICO complaint so as to resemble, as closely as possible, a criminal indictment. n78

[b] Pleading the Relief Sought

The Supreme Court has declined to establish the measure of damages available in RICO claims. n79 But it is clear that personal injury--whether manifested by physical injury or emotional distress--is neither directly nor indirectly compensable, n80 nor are pecuniary losses connected with physical injury or emotional distress.

The attorney fees awarded need not be in proportion to the amount of damages. n81 The fees will often be calculated by the court after it asks for an affidavit of counsel as to the fees incurred. Costs may also be awarded.

A successful RICO claimant will be awarded treble damages. The jury will not normally be told about either the triple damages provision or the attorney fee provision. n82 The courts are divided as to availability of punitive damages. n83

The district courts have jurisdiction to prevent and restrain RICO violations by means including, but not limited to, the compelled divestiture of interests in an enterprise, reasonable restrictions on a person's future activities or investments, and even the dissolution or reorganization of an enterprise. n84 The United States Attorney General is expressly authorized to seek such relief, n85 but whether private civil litigants may obtain it is a question which has divided the courts. Some inclination to avoid the issue is discernible.

To prevent the dissipation of assets by the defendant during litigation, lawyers can ask the court to freeze assets of the defendant for the pendency of the litigation; however, the courts are split on this question. n86 The Supreme Court recently declined to resolve the circuits' split on the issue. n87

[c] Local Requirements for Case Statements

Because of the popularity and complexity of RICO claims, some courts have instituted special procedures, primarily a case statement in some form. n88

[d] Service of Process and Venue

Most courts have construed RICO as having a nationwide service of process provision, so that suit can be brought in a convenient forum without concern for whether the defendant has minimum contacts with the state. n89 However, circuit courts of appeals cases are split as to whether the nationwide service of process provision itself provides a sufficient basis for personal jurisdiction, n90 or whether a plaintiff must first establish personal jurisdiction over one of the defendants before relying on RICO's nationwide service of process provision to obtain personal jurisdiction over other defendants. n91

Circuits also split on whether, in assessing personal jurisdiction, a defendant need only have minimum contacts with the United States, n92 or whether the Fifth Amendment requires a court to consider issues of fairness and reasonableness after the defendant has shown that litigating in the plaintiff's chosen forum will implicate the liberty interests of the defendant. n93 RICO does not authorize international service. n94

As for venue, the section 1965(a) provision, that RICO venue is proper in any district in which the defendant resides, is found, has an agent, or transacts his affairs, does not nullify general venue provisions, so the court will weigh all relevant factors.

[e] RICO Standard of Proof

Federal courts have generally ruled that civil RICO claims need only be established by a preponderance of the evidence.

[f] RICO Concurrent Jurisdiction

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that state courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts over civil RICO claims. n95

Since there is no express statutory prohibition on removal of RICO claims, defendants may remove them to federal court. n96

[g] RICO Statute of Limitations

The Supreme Court has ruled that the statute of limitations in RICO cases is four years. n97 When the statute of limitations begins to run remains a question answered differently in different jurisdictions using one of the following tests:

- Under the "discovery" rule, the claim arises when the plaintiff knew or should have known of the injury caused by the defendant's pattern of behavior. n98

- Under the "separate accrual" rule, discovery of each separate RICO violation triggers a new limitations period. n99

- Under the "conspiracy" rule, the limitation period runs from the date of the last predicate act. n100

- The Sixth Circuit "compromise rule": an action accrues no later than when the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should have discovered both the existence and source of his injury and that the injury is part of a pattern. n101

To raise equitable tolling as a statute of limitations defense, the plaintiff must be prepared to plead and prove the elements of fraudulent concealment: (1) the use of fraudulent means by the party raising the statute of limitations; (2) successful concealment from the injured party; and (3) that the party claiming fraudulent concealment did not know or by the exercise of due diligence could not have known that he might have a cause of action. n102

[h] Offensive and Defensive Collateral Estoppel

The RICO statute does not specifically allow private parties to use offensive collateral estoppel in civil suits following criminal convictions, but some courts have allowed its use. If offensive collateral estoppel is available, the private plaintiff (1) must allege that issues in the subsequent civil case were actually litigated and necessary to the outcome of the first criminal case; and (2) must show that, under the doctrine of Parklane Hosiery, use of offensive collateral estoppel would not involve any of four unfair situations for the defendant. n103

Conversely, plaintiffs may also find that collateral estoppel may be used defensively against them if fraud or related causes of action were not raised as defenses in earlier actions brought against them.

[6] RICO Consumer Cases in the Courts

There are quite a few reported consumer cases involving RICO claims. Decisions that are more or less favorable to consumer civil RICO plaintiffs or potentially of value to them include the following:

- The Seventh Circuit reversed the dismissal of RICO claims by loan applicants against a lender. The loan applicant alleged that the lender fraudulently induced her to refinance her existing personal loan at exorbitant rates. There was no allegation that Truth-in-Lending requirements or other statutory requirements were violated, but the lender did not make clear that it would be less expensive to take out a new loan than to refinance the old one. The Seventh Circuit noted that a careful reading of the Truth-in-Lending statement would have shown that the refinancing was not a good deal, but noted that not everyone is capable of being a careful reader. It summarized the allegation as being that the complainant belonged to a class of borrowers who are not competent interpreters of Truth-in-Lending forms and that the lender took advantage of that fact. n104

- The Fourth Circuit twice reversed the district court's dismissal of RICO claims by a class of used car buyers against a car wholesaler and a related finance company. The consumer alleged that the defendants had engaged in a fraudulent "churning" scheme to sell cars at inflated rates, repossess them, conduct sham repossession sales, and bill consumers for alleged deficiencies. n105

- A RICO class action against a lender that charged interest rates between 179% and 557% and used threats in the collection process withstood a motion to dismiss. n106

- A criminal conviction was upheld under a state RICO statute against parties engaged in an automobile brokerage scam in which a company "took over" car loans or leases, reselling the cars to other parties, without first paying off the lessor or creditor. n107

- A plaintiff brought a class action against a finance company which financed her automobile, claiming that there should have been a provision in the loan documents that would allow her to raise seller-related defenses to any attempt to collect the loan. The court refused to dismiss the case, finding that the plaintiff had alleged a sufficient pattern. n108

- A First Circuit panel upheld a lower court's decision that refused to dismiss a class action RICO conspiracy claim by plaintiff home buyers against several realty-related corporations. The plaintiffs alleged that the corporations had conspired with another defendant, a developer, to induce the plaintiffs to purchase homes they could not afford, by using fraudulent financial incentives. On appeal, the court held that the plaintiffs need not show that the defendant corporations committed a substantive violation of RICO, but only that the defendant knowingly agreed to assist a scheme that included the operation or management of a RICO enterprise. n109

- A Tennessee district court ruled that plaintiffs, victims of a predatory lending scheme, successfully alleged a RICO enterprise consisting of a title company, a mortgage lender, and other participants in the scheme. n110

- A California district court ruled that a plaintiff, who had been induced to buy an annuity, successfully alleged a RICO enterprise consisting of insurance companies that allegedly schemed to convince annuity purchasers to buy annuities inappropriate for them. n111

[7] State RICO Statutes

Approximately half the states have enacted legislation similar to RICO. n112 These statutes have been upheld against a variety of constitutional challenges. All but a few of these statutes create a private civil cause of action.

State RICO statutes differ from federal RICO, and each other in various respects. State RICO statutes do not require a nexus between racketeering activity and interstate commerce. State RICO statutes typically require the plaintiff to have suffered an injury as a condition of a private cause of action. n113

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawPrivate ActionsRacketeer Influenced & Corrupt OrganizationsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesRacketeeringRacketeer Influenced & Corrupt OrganizationsGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRICO ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. For discussion of state RICO statutes, see National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 14.3 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n2)Footnote 2. 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-1968, reprinted in Vol. 1B infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. For the legislative history of RICO, see 115 Cong. Rec. 6994-6995, 9567 (1969); 1970

U.S.C.C.A.N. 4007, 4032-4036; Blakey, The RICO Civil Fraud Action in Context: Reflections on Bennett v. Berg, 58 Notre Dame L. Rev. 237 (1982) (Prof. G. Robert Blakey, the author of this article, was principal draftsman of RICO); and sources cited in Strafer, Massumi & Skolnick, Civil RICO in the Public Interest: "Everybody's Darling," Civil RICO 19 Am. Crim. L. Rev. 655, 680 n.193 (1982). Reflections on Bennett v. Berg, 58 Notre Dame L. Rev. 237 (1982) Civil RICO

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 4.07[3] infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 497-99, 105 S. Ct. 3275, 87 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1985) ; United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 586-87, 101 S. Ct. 2524, 69 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 499, 105 S. Ct. 3275, 87 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1985) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Bradley, Long Arm of the Rackets Law Draws Fire From White-Collar Targets, Christian Science Monitor, Feb. 7, 1986, at 21, col. 1; Zimroth, Legislative Proposals to Amend the Civil RICO Statute, Practicing Law Institute, 1985 Civil RICO at 427-44.

(n10)Footnote 10. 525 U.S. 299, 119 S. Ct. 710, 142 L. Ed. 2d 753 (1999) ("When federal law does not directly conflict with state regulation, and when application of the federal law would not frustrate any declared state policy or interfere with a State's administrative regime, the McCarran-Ferguson Act does not preclude its application."). State insurance statutes rarely provide for a private right of action and, in some states, the state insurance regulation may even be seen as preventing a private UDAP or bad faith tort claim. A federal RICO claim now provides an alternative, allowing federal court jurisdiction, mandatory treble damages, and attorney fees, that is not preempted by state insurance regulation unless it impairs that regulation.

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1012(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. Dammon v. W.L. Folse, 846 F. Supp. 36 (E.D. La. 1994) . See also Doe v. Board of Trustees of Univ. of Ill., 429 F. Supp. 2d 930, 941 (N.D. Ill. 2006) (suit barred by state sovereign immunity statute).

(n13)Footnote 13. Smith v. Babbitt, 875 F. Supp. 1353 (D. Minn. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Chappell v. Robbins, 73 F.3d 918 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Frooks v. Town of Cortlandt, 997 F. Supp. 438 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) , aff'd, 182 F.3d 899 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n16)Footnote 16. McNeily v. United States, 6 F.3d 343 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Three reporting services, RICO L. Rep., Civil RICO Rep. (BNA), and RICO Business Disputes Guide (CCH), are devoted exclusively to RICO. RICO cases are regularly featured in bar journals and the legal press.

(n18)Footnote 18. 18 U.S.C. § 1962.

(n19)Footnote 19. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. 18 U.S.C. § 1341.

(n21)Footnote 21. 18 U.S.C. § 1343.

(n22)Footnote 22. Prior to 1995, securities' fraud was often cited as a RICO predicate act, but under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 [hereinafter PSLRA], civil RICO was amended to exclude as an underlying predicate "any conduct that would have been actionable as fraud in the purchase or sale of securities." The Third and Ninth Circuits have held that the PSLRA did not retroactively bar previously existing RICO claims. Mathews v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 161 F.3d 156 (3d Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1067, 119 S. Ct. 1460, 143 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1999) ; Scott v. Boos, 215 F.3d 940 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n23)Footnote 23. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5).

(n24)Footnote 24. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(6).

(n25)Footnote 25. 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(6), 1962(c) (pattern of racketeering or collection of unlawful debt); cf. Durante Bros. & Sons, Inc. v. Flushing Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 239 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 473 U.S. 906, 105 S. Ct. 3530, 87 L. Ed. 2d 654 (1985) . One state case, Bandas v. Citizens State Bank of Silver Lake, 412 N.W.2d 818 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987) , remanded on other grounds sub nom. VanderWeyst v. First State Bank, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn.) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S. Ct. 369, 102 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1988) , reached the opposite conclusion, that a pattern of unlawful debts must be shown. This holding is clearly wrong, and the Minnesota Supreme Court in dicta on appeal made a special effort to point out the error of the holding in Bandas. However, in doing so, VanderWeyst dicta may have suggested another route to a similar requirement by noting that the bank was not alleged to be "in the business" of lending money at usurious rates. 425 N.W.2d 803, 812 (Minn. 1988) . (Cf. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(6) (definition of unlawful debt)).

(n26)Footnote 26. 18 U.S.C. § 1963.

(n27)Footnote 27. 18 U.S.C. §§ 1963, 1964(a). See U.S. Dept. of Justice, Criminal Division, Criminal Forfeitures Under the RICO and Continuing Enterprise Statutes (1980).

(n28)Footnote 28. E.g., 18 U.S.C. § 1964(a) (court-ordered restrictions on future business activities, dissolution or reorganization of any enterprise, etc.).

(n29)Footnote 29. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c); Odishelidze v. Aetna Life, 853 F.2d 21 (1st Cir. 1988) ; United States v. Feldman, 853 F.2d 648 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n30)Footnote 30. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), (b), (c).

(n31)Footnote 31. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(4). See Manhattan Telecomms. Corp. v. DialAmerica Mktg., 156 F. Supp. 2d 376, 381-82 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (RICO enterprise must have structural continuity that incorporates a mechanism for directing the group's affairs on a continuing basis); Eva v. Midwest Nat'l Mortgage Banc, Inc., 143 F. Supp. 2d 862, 875 (N.D. Ohio 2001) (plaintiff sufficiently alleged ongoing, coordinated behavior by members of the association-in-fact). See also Handeen v. Lemaire, 112 F.3d 1339, 1351 (8th Cir. 1997) ; Progressive Northern Ins. Co. v. Alivio Chiropractic Clinic, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39912 (D. Minn. Dec. 22, 2005) (holding that plaintiff adequately alleged an association in fact enterprise in case alleging that the defendant participated in insurance fraud).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Guidry v. Bank of LaPlace, 954 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1992) (unincorporated sole proprietorship through which operator ran fraudulent scheme was not RICO "enterprise" distinct from RICO "person"). See also Cedric Kushner Promotions Ltd. v. King, 533 U.S. 158, 121 S. Ct. 2087, 150 L. Ed. 2d 198 (2001) (distinctness requirement is satisfied where the person and the corporation are distinctly different legal entities, even though they may be connected); Riverwoods Chappaqua Corp. v. Marine Midland Bank, N.A., 30 F.3d 339, 344 (2d Cir. 1994) ("a section 1962(c) claim may be sustained where there is only a partial overlap between the RICO person and the RICO enterprise, ... and that a defendant may be a RICO 'person' and one of a number of members of the RICO 'enterprise' "); In re Mastercard Int'l Inc., 132 F. Supp. 2d 468 (E.D. La. 2001) (finding distinctness satisfied where defendant bank and charge card company were alleged to be both the RICO defendants and part of an association-in-fact enterprise along with casinos that contracted for the charge card services); Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. Dupont de Nemours and Co., 431 F.3d 353, 361-62 (9th Cir. 2005) (defendant was distinct from enterprise consisting of defendant and its legal defense team); Jones v. Deutsche Bank AG, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21468 (N.D. Cal. July 19, 2005) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss where defendants alleged to be part of the enterprise each had its own legal existence, separate from the racketeering activity).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Boyle v. United States, 129 S. Ct. 2237 (2009) (Supreme Court loosened the definition of an association-in-fact enterprise, holding that it must have a structure, and then looking to common dictionary definitions of "structure": "In the sense relevant here, the term 'structure' means '[t]he way in which parts are arranged or put together to form a whole' and '[t]he interrelation or arrangement of parts in a complex entity.'" To satisfy this definition of structure, an association-in-fact enterprise must have three structural features: (1) a purpose; (2) relationships among those associated with the enterprise; and (3) longevity sufficient to permit these associates to pursue the enterprise's purposes. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Williamson, 224 F.3d 425, 447 (5th Cir. 2000) (reversing summary judgment in favor of three individual defendants who were also alleged to be the RICO enterprise; holding that plaintiff properly alleged an enterprise comprising banks and individual defendants by alleging activity showing ongoing, coordinated behavior among the members in a scheme to charge excessive fees and interest rates on loans); Stewart v. Associates Consumer Disc. Co., 1 F. Supp. 2d 469 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (in class action by borrowers against a debt consolidation company and its affiliated insurance and financial services companies, the plaintiff successfully pled that each of the three defendant corporations had a different role in an enterprise that consisted of an association-in-fact of the three). See also United States v. Cianci, 210 F. Supp. 2d 71, 73-75 (D.R.I. 2002) (a legitimate organization, such as a city agency, may be a non-culpable member of a RICO association-in-fact enterprise operated by a defendant for criminal purposes). But see, e.g., VanDenBroeck v. CommonPoint Mortgage Co., 210 F.3d 696, 700 (6th Cir. 2000) (that mortgage lender had business relationship with secondary lenders to whom it sold loans did not establish an association-in-fact enterprise); In re Mastercard Int'l Inc., 132 F. Supp. 2d 468 (E.D. La. 2001) (contractual arrangements among credit card companies, their issuing banks, and on-line casinos demonstrated nothing more than ordinary business relationships); 800537 Ont., Inc. v. Auto Enters., 113 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (E.D. Mich. 2000) ; Jubelirer v. Mastercard Int'l, 68 F. Supp. 2d 1049, 1053 (W.D. Wis. 1999) ; Williams v. Ford Motor Co., 11 F. Supp. 2d 983, 986 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (in suit alleging dealer and Ford misrepresented extended service warranty, mere allegation of association in fact of Ford and its affiliated dealers and servicers did not sufficiently fulfil requirements of structure, continuity, and common course of conduct to be an enterprise).

(n34)Footnote 34. Reves v. Ernst & Young, 507 U.S. 170, 113 S. Ct. 1163, 122 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1993) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See, e.g., Azrielli v. Cohen Law Offices, 21 F.3d 512 (2d Cir. 1994) (attorneys); McNew v. People's Bank of Ewing, 999 F.2d 540 (6th Cir. 1993) (bank); United States v. Quintanilla, 25 F.3d 694 (7th Cir. 1993) (attorneys); Nolte v. Pearson, 994 F.2d 1311 (8th Cir. 1993) (preparer of opinion letters); Baumer v. Pachl, 8 F.3d 1341 (9th Cir. 1993) (attorney). But see Thomas v. Ross & Hardies, 9 F. Supp. 2d 547 (D. Md. 1998) (Reves did not limit liability of attorney who allegedly persuaded homeowners to obtain mortgages and then diverted proceeds to enterprise instead of paying prior mortgages, as agreed); Mruz v. Caring, Inc., 991 F. Supp. 701 (D.N.J. 1998) (plaintiffs, whistleblower employees, overcame Reves by alleging that attorneys seized power and control of enterprise for purposes of dissuading plaintiffs from revealing fraud and to defame and intimidate them; alleged behavior was more than the mere provision of legal services).

(n36)Footnote 36. 511 U.S. 164, 114 S. Ct. 1439, 128 L. Ed. 2d 119 (1994) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Compare Crowe v. Henry, 43 F.3d 198 (5th Cir. 1995) , with In re Lake States Commodities, Inc., 936 F. Supp. 1461 (N.D. Ill 1996) (no aiding and abetting liability under § 1962(c)), and Rosenheck v. Rieber, 932 F. Supp. 626 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n38)Footnote 38. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5); Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 105 S. Ct. 3275, 87 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1985) . See, e.g., Pizzo v. Bekin Van Lines Co., 258 F.3d 629, 633 (7th Cir. 2001) (consumer who received substandard furniture could not demonstrate pattern of fraud by store with evidence of only one other dissatisfied customer); GE Inv. Private Placement Partners II v. Parker, 247 F.3d 543, 550 (4th Cir. 2001) (two years insufficient, in light of other circumstances); First Capital Asset Mgmt. v. Brickelbush, Inc., 150 F. Supp. 2d 624, 635 (less than a year insufficient), recons. granted, in part, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13396 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 23, 2001) ; Dempsey v. Sanders, 132 F. Supp. 2d 222, 228 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) . But see Wilson v. De Angelis, 156 F. Supp. 2d 1335, 1339 (S.D. Fla. 2001) (refusing to dismiss RICO claim based on ten acts over ten months).

(n39)Footnote 39. 492 U.S. 229, 109 S. Ct. 2893, 106 L. Ed. 2d 195 (1989) .

(n40)Footnote 40. Allwaste, Inc. v. Hecht, 65 F.3d 1523 (9th Cir. 1995) (flexible test; Ninth Circuit refused to adopt specific time period). See, e.g., Mathon v. Marine Midland Bank, N.A., 875 F. Supp. 986 (E.D.N.Y. 1985) (no continuity). See also Hobson v. Lincoln Ins. Agency, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13314 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 7, 2000) (plaintiff's allegations of ten payments made over a ten month period as part of a single, allegedly fraudulent, insurance transaction do not constitute a "pattern"); Midwest Heritage Bank, F.S.B. v. Northway, 576 N.W.2d 588 (Iowa 1998) (in suit by borrower alleging scheme by bank to defraud in connection with a FmHA loan, the three alleged predicate acts were insufficiently related where they did not have a common purpose, only common participants and a common victim; claim also lacked showing of continuity since borrower did not offer evidence that the predicate acts were part of the bank's regular way of doing business).

(n41)Footnote 41. Thomas v. Ross & Hardies, 9 F. Supp. 2d 547 (D. Md. 1998) (the principals targeted minority homeowners, convinced them to mortgage their homes for the maximum amount possible in return for paying off prior mortgages and extending a line of credit, then failed to pay off the prior loans). See also GE Inv. Private Placement Partners II v. Parker, 247 F.3d 543, 549 (4th Cir. 2001) ; Jordan (Berm.) Inv. Co. v. Hunter Green Invs. Ltd., 154 F. Supp. 2d 682, 694 (2001) , complaint dismissed, 205 F. Supp. 2d 243 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) ; First Capital Asset Mgmt. v. Brickelbush, Inc., 150 F. Supp. 2d 624, 633-34 , recons. granted, in part, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13396 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 23, 2001) . See also AT&T Corp. v. Schroeder, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45832 (W.D. Wash. June 28, 2006) (granting summary judgment to plaintiff after holding that it had shown open-ended continuity).

(n42)Footnote 42. 522 U.S. 52, 118 S. Ct. 469, 139 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1997) .

(n43)Footnote 43. 118 S. Ct. at 478 ("The interplay between subsections (c) and (d) does not permit us to excuse from the reach of the conspiracy provision an actor who does not himself commit or agree to commit the two or more predicate acts requisite to the underlying offense.").

(n44)Footnote 44. 118 S. Ct. at 477 . See also Beck v. Prupis, 529 U.S. 494, 120 S. Ct. 1608, 146 L. Ed. 2d 561 (2000) ; Smith v. Berg, 247 F.3d 532 (3d Cir. 2001) (defendant alleged to have conspired to violate § 1962(c) did not have to commit or agree to commit predicate acts to be liable for conspiracy under § 1962(d), so long as he knowingly agreed to facilitate a scheme which included operation or management of a RICO enterprise).

(n45)Footnote 45. 118 S. Ct. at 478 .

(n46)Footnote 46. Goren v. New Vision Int'l, Inc., 156 F.3d 721 (7th Cir. 1998) (defendant must agree that someone would commit two predicate acts on behalf of the enterprise); United States v. Conghau Huu To, 144 F.3d 737 (11th Cir. 1998) ; American Auto. Accessories, Inc. v. Fishman, 991 F. Supp. 995 (N.D. Ill. 1998) .

(n47)Footnote 47. United States v. Conghau Huu To, 144 F.3d 737 (11th Cir. 1998) . Alternatively, a violation of § 1962(d) can be shown by proving the defendant agreed to commit two predicate acts. Id.

(n48)Footnote 48. 18 U.S.C. § 1962.

(n49)Footnote 49. See United States v. Oreto, 37 F.3d 739 (1st Cir. 1994) (unlawful debt section does not require pattern--that does not render the statute unconstitutional); Ballen v. Prudential Bache Secs., 23 F.3d 335 (10th Cir.

1994) ; United States v. Weiner, 3 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 1993) ; Davis v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 6 F.3d 367 (6th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1193, 114 S. Ct. 1298, 127 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1994) ; United States v. Giovanelli, 945 F.2d 479 (2d Cir. 1991) (only single collection of unlawful debt need be proved).

(n50)Footnote 50. Wright v. Sheppard, 919 F.2d 665 (11th Cir. 1990) ; Weisel v. Pischel, 197 F.R.D. 231 (E.D.N.Y. 2000) . The Weisel court granted summary judgment to defendants on this basis, reasoning that RICO's legislative history justified limiting the statute to loansharkers, not ordinary businessmen who might make a usurious loan: "[t]he requirement that the loan have been incurred in connection with 'the business of' making usurious loans is aimed at ... 'the exclusion from the scope of the statute of occasional usurious transactions by one not in the business of loan sharking.' " Weisel v. Pischel, 197 F.R.D. 231, 241 (E.D.N.Y. 2000) (quoting S. Rep. No. 91-617, at 158 (1969)).

(n51)Footnote 51. See Robidoux v. Conti, 741 F. Supp. 1019 (D.R.I. 1990) ; Vander Weyst v. First State Bank, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn.) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S.Ct. 369, 102 L.Ed. 2d 359 (1988) . But see Cashback Catalog Sales, Inc. v. Price, 102 F. Supp. 2d 1375 (S.D. Ga. 2000) (denying summary judgment on RICO claim).

(n52)Footnote 52. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). The injury need not be direct, but it must satisfy the traditional "but for" analysis. Ocean Energy II, Inc. v. Alexander & Alexander, Inc., 868 F.2d 740 (5th Cir. 1989) . The injury must also be concrete. For example, the loss of potential business does not satisfy RICO's injury requirement. Imagineering, Inc. v. Kiewit Pac. Co., 976 F.2d 1303 (9th Cir. 1992) . Likewise, the possibility of a future injury is not a present injury compensable under RICO. Calobrace v. American Nat'l Can Co., No. 93 C 0999 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 25, 1995). Lost opportunity does not qualify as a RICO injury. In re Taxable Mun. Bond Secs. Litig., 51 F.3d 518 (5th Cir. 1995) . See also Kaplan v. Prolife Action League, 475 S.E.2d 247 (N.C. Ct. App. 1996) (loss of use of property is not an injury to property under North Carolina RICO). Payment of lawyers' fees incurred by a judgment creditor as a result of allegedly fraudulent claims made by the debtor was considered an injury to business or property by one court. Handeen v. Lemaire, 112 F.3d 1339 (8th Cir. 1997) . See also In re Managed Care Litig., 185 F. Supp. 2d 1310 (plaintiffs who alleged that they were injured by paying more for insurance coverage than they would have absent the defendants' alleged omissions and misrepresentations established RICO standing), recons. denied, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11809 (S.D. Fla. June 10, 2002) ; Corley v. Rosewood Care Ctr., Inc., 152 F. Supp. 2d 1099, 1112 (C.D. Ill. 2001) (though defendant nursing home company's representations regarding continuing care might have formed a pattern of racketeering activity, plaintiff failed to show requisite injury because the guaranty neither factored in decision to place mother in home nor was tested by need for such aid). But see Ove v. Gwinn, 264 F.3d 817, 825 (9th Cir. 2001) (deprivation of "honest services" that does not constitute concrete financial loss was not a RICO injury). See Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. Dupont de Nemours and Co., 431 F.3d 353, 361-362 (9th Cir. 2005) (looking to state law to determine whether a particular harm is a loss of property, and holding that the plaintiffs' claim that the defendant's fraudulent inducement led to them settling their claims for less damages than they would have otherwise received satisfied RICO's standing requirement).

(n53)Footnote 53. 503 U.S. 258, 112 S. Ct. 1311, 117 L. Ed. 2d 532 (1992) .

(n54)Footnote 54. See Bonilla v. Volvo Car Corp., 150 F.3d 62 (1st Cir. 1998) (defendant's excise fraud, which presumably lowered the cost of cars purchased by plaintiffs, could not support a RICO claim because plaintiffs were not injured by reason of the fraud); Price v. Pinnacle Brands, Inc., 138 F.3d 602 (5th Cir. 1998) , reh'g denied, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 13676 (5th Cir. Tex. May 27, 1998) (no RICO injury where plaintiffs, purchasers of trading cards packages manufactured by defendant, alleged that defendant's practice of randomly inserting limited edition cards in packages was illegal gambling; plaintiffs had mere expectancy interests, not tangible property interests, declining to follow Schwartz v. Upper Deck Co., 967 F. Supp. 405 (S.D. Cal. 1997)) ; Line v. Astro Mfg. Co., 993 F. Supp. 1033 (E.D. Ky. 1998) (plaintiff who had paid no more than fair market value for manufactured home did not suffer an injury from the manufacturer's alleged concealment of the fire hazards of such homes); Medgar Evers Houses Tenants Ass'n v. Medgar Evers Houses Assocs., LP, 25 F. Supp. 2d 116 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) (plaintiffs who alleged that housing management company made fraudulent statements to HUD had not suffered an injury proximately caused by the fraud; plaintiffs must show that their injuries are the "preconceived purpose," "specifically intended consequence," "necessary result," or "foreseeable consequences" of the racketeering); Skeete v. IVF Am., Inc., 972 F. Supp. 206 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (no standing where injury did not arise from claimed predicate acts); Moore v. Painewebber, Inc., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13884 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (investor who sued brokerage firm alleging misrepresentation could not proceed without alleging either "transaction causation" (would not have purchased but for the misrepresentations) or "loss causation" (misrepresentations were the reason the transaction turned out to be a losing one)); First Nationwide Bank v. Gelt Funding Corp., 27 F.3d 763 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Red Ball Interior Demolition Corp. v. Palmadessa, 874 F. Supp. 576 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (plaintiff must show direct relationship between plaintiff's injury and defendant's conduct). See also Corley v. Rosewood Care Ctr., Inc., 152 F. Supp. 2d 1099, 1112 (C.D. Ill. 2001) (though defendant nursing home company's representations regarding continuing care might have formed a pattern of racketeering activity, plaintiff failed to show requisite injury because the guaranty neither factored in decision to place mother in home nor was tested by need for such aid).

(n55)Footnote 55. 126 S. Ct. 1991, 1993 (2006) .

(n56)Footnote 56. Id. at 1997 .

(n57)Footnote 57. Id.

(n58)Footnote 58. Id.

(n59)Footnote 59. Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 496-99, 105 S. Ct. 3275, 87 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1985) ; United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 586-87, 101 S. Ct. 2524, 69 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1981) .

(n60)Footnote 60. 18 U.S.C. § 1961(1).

(n61)Footnote 61. Note, however, that the mailings must show intent to defraud; innocuous business communications cannot be RICO predicates. O'Malley v. New York Transit Auth., 896 F.2d 704 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n62)Footnote 62. Regency Communications v. Cleartel Communications, Inc., 160 F. Supp. 2d 36, 44 (2001) (breach of contract accompanied by use of mail to deceive plaintiffs could fulfill mail fraud statute's requirements) (citing McEvoy Travel Bureau, Inc. v. Heritage Travel, Inc., 904 F.2d 786 (1st Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 992 (1990)) , recons. denied, 212 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2002) . See also Royal Indem. Co. v. Pepper Hamilton LLP, 479 F. Supp. 2d 419, 428-429 (D. Del. 2007) (denying the defendants' motion to dismiss); United States v. Philip Morris USA, Inc., 449 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2006) (holding that the plaintiff had sufficiently established mail fraud, stating that "[t]he individual components must be viewed not independently but in context of the entire scheme to defraud ... [i]t is sufficient to prove by the totality of the circumstances that the defendant devised a scheme intended to defraud which included one or more of the individual component schemes alleged").

(n63)Footnote 63. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c).

(n64)Footnote 64. Emery v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 71 F.3d 1343 (7th Cir. 1995) (omission or concealment of loan information can constitute mail fraud).

(n65)Footnote 65. United States v. Cherif, 943 F.2d 692 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n66)Footnote 66. Blu-J, Inc. v. Kemper C.P.A. Group, 916 F.2d 637 (11th Cir. 1990) .

(n67)Footnote 67. Schmuck v. United States, 489 U.S. 705, 109 S. Ct. 1443, 103 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1989) (mailing incidental to fraudulent scheme sufficient); Bennett Silvershein Assocs. v. Fruman, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12909 (S.D.N.Y. filed Aug. 28, 1997) (mailings may constitute mail fraud even if they occur after the fraud is completed). The mail fraud must also have a pecuniary goal. First Pac. Bancorp, Inc. v. Bro, 847 F.2d 542 (9th Cir. 1988) ; Garrick-Aug Assocs. Store Leasing, Inc. v. Hirshfeld, 652 F. Supp. 905 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) .

(n68)Footnote 68. 128 S. Ct. 2131, 2145 (2008) , abrogating VanDenBroeck v. CommonPoint Mortgage Co., 210 F.3d 696 (6th Cir. 2000) and Sikes v. Teleline, Inc., 281 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n69)Footnote 69. Id. at 2138 , 2145.

(n70)Footnote 70. 18 U.S.C. § 1343.

(n71)Footnote 71. See Byrne v. Nezhat, 261 F.3d 1075, 1116 (11th Cir. 2001) ("any doubt" as to meritlessness of state RICO claim dissolved when state court dismissed similar action brought on behalf of a different client against same defendants; affirming sanctions against attorney who nonetheless continued to pursue claim); Smith v. Our Lady of the Lake Hosp., Inc., 960 F.2d 439 (5th Cir. 1992) (while attorney's Rule 11 duty is particularly strong in RICO cases, sanctions for withdrawn RICO claim were inappropriate because law was not clear when complaint was filed in good faith); Lodal, Inc. v. Great Am. Ins. Cos., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22123, at *28 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 19, 2001) (awarding sanctions against attorney for RICO claims that "lacked any reasonable factual or legal basis and were asserted for an improper purpose" in case arising from dispute between manufacturer and two insurers over coverage of policies).

(n72)Footnote 72. See Andersen v. Smithfield Foods, Inc., 209 F. Supp. 2d 1278, 1281 (S.D. Fla. 2002) (imposing sanctions for failing to make a "reasonable inquiry" before filing second amended complaint after previous two complaints had been dismissed); Miller v. Norfolk S. Rwy. Co., 208 F. Supp. 2d 851, 852 (N.D. Ohio 2002) (ordering reprimand against attorney who filed motion to reconsider that contained no new facts or legal theories); Martinez v. Martinez, 207 F. Supp. 2d 1303, 1309 (D.N.M. 2002) (imposing sanctions where attorney failed to follow court's explicit warnings upon dismissing initial complaint, but rather filed amended complaint that still failed to properly allege RICO claim); Divot Golf Corp. v. Citizens Bank of Mass., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 187 (D. Mass. Jan. 8, 2003) (imposing sanctions, noting that plaintiffs repeated factual misstatements and failed to properly allege pattern even after put on notice of complaint's deficiencies by defendants). See also Byrne v. Nezhat, 261 F.3d 1075, 1116 (11th Cir. 2001) ("any doubt" as to merit of state RICO claim dissolved when state court dismissed similar action brought on behalf of a different client against same defendants; affirming sanctions against attorney who nonetheless continued to pursue claim).

(n73)Footnote 73. Murr Plumbing Inc. v. Scherer Bros. Fin. Servs. Co., 48 F.3d 1066 (8th Cir. 1995) (while mail and wire fraud statutes do not require proof of a misrepresentation of fact, still must have specificity regarding the elements of the statutory fraud); Mills v. Polar Molecular Corp., 12 F.3d 1170 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Farlow v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 956 F.2d 982 (10th Cir. 1992) ; Brown v. Coleman Invs., Inc., 993 F. Supp. 416 (M.D. La. 1998) (in case against assignee of retail installment sales contract, plaintiff's complaint failed to adequately plead fraud where it alleged only that defendant knew assignor had inflated fees but did not allege that defendant had specific intent).

(n74)Footnote 74. See Brooks v. Bank of Boulder, 891 F. Supp. 1469 (D. Colo. 1995) ("a charge of racketeering should not be easier to make than an allegation of fraud").

(n75)Footnote 75. E.g., Emery v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 134 F.3d 1321 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 818, 119 S. Ct. 57, 142 L. Ed. 2d 44 (1998) ; Murr Plumbing Inc. v. Scherer Bros. Fin. Servs. Co., 48 F.3d 1066 (8th Cir. 1995) .

(n76)Footnote 76. DeLorean v. Cork Gully, 118 B.R. 932 (E.D. Mich. 1990) .

(n77)Footnote 77. Epstein v. Haas Secs. Corp., 731 F. Supp. 1166 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n78)Footnote 78. Blakey, How to Tell If You Have a RICO Case, 5 Law. Alert, Oct. 28, 1985, at 28; Harris, A Framework for Pleading Civil RICO Civil RICO, Practicing Law Institute, 1985 Civil RICO, at 165. Five examples of RICO civilcomplaints and criminal indictments are reproduced in Harris, A Framework for Pleading Civil RICO Civil RICO, Practicing Law Institute, 1985 Civil RICO, at 189-318.

(n79)Footnote 79. Fleischhauer v. Feltner, 879 F.2d 1290 (6th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1027, 110 S. Ct. 1473, 108 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1990) .

(n80)Footnote 80. Maio v. Aetna Inc., 221 F.3d 472, 482 (3d Cir. 2000) ; Genty v. Resolution Trust Corp., 937 F.2d 899 (3d Cir. 1991) ; Berg v. First State Ins. Co., 915 F.2d 40 (9th Cir. 1990) ; Fleischhauer v. Feltner, 879 F.2d 1290 (6th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1027, 110 S. Ct. 1473, 108 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1990) ; Grogan v. Platt, 835 F.2d 844 (11th Cir.) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 982, 109 S. Ct. 531, 102 L. Ed. 2d 562 (1988) .

(n81)Footnote 81. Rosario v. Livaditis, 963 F.2d 1013 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n82)Footnote 82. HBE Leasing Corp. v. Frank, 22 F.3d 41 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n83)Footnote 83. Compare Com-Tech Assocs. v. Computer Assocs. Int'l, Inc., 753 F. Supp. 1078 (2d Cir. 1991) (declining to strike a claim for punitive damages "at the pleading stage"), with Mylan Labs., Inc. v. Akzo, N.V., 770 F. Supp. 1053 (D. Md. 1991) (striking RICO punitive damages claim).

(n84)Footnote 84. 18 U.S.C. § 1964(a).

(n85)Footnote 85. 18 U.S.C. § 1964(b).

(n86)Footnote 86. Rosen v. Cascade Int'l, Inc., 21 F.3d 1520 (11th Cir. 1994) . The Eleventh Circuit stated that prejudgment attachment could accomplish the same result, and if a forum state does not allow prejudgment attachment, the federal court should not circumvent that rule by issuing an injunction.

(n87)Footnote 87. Scheidler v. NOW, 537 U.S. 393, 123 S. Ct. 1057, 154 L. Ed. 2d 991 (2003) (finding that ruling on Hobbs Act that reversed judgment against petitioners rendered decision on the injunction issue unnecessary).

(n88)Footnote 88. Marriott Bros. v. Gage, 911 F.2d 1105 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Figueroa-Ruiz v. Alegria, 905 F.2d 545 (1st Cir. 1990) . See Commercial Cleaning Servs., L.L.C. v. Colin Serv. Sys., Inc., 271 F.3d 374 (2d Cir. 2001) (complaint's failure to allege an essential element of the RICO predicate offense was not fatal, allowing plaintiff to cure by repleading). See, e.g., Greer v. Stulp, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1482 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 1, 2002) (listing elements of required case statement). See, e.g., McDonald v. Heaton, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40396 (W.D. Okla. June 16, 2006) (directing plaintiff to file a RICO case statement). See, e.g., Barsekian v. First Am. Loanstar Trustee. Servs., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2884 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 6, 2009) (requiring plaintiff to supply RICO case statement and designating the form to be supplied). See also Cruz v. Cinram Int'l, Inc., 574 F. Supp. 2d 1227, 1235 (N.D. Ala. 2008) (while plaintiff need not file a separate RICO case statement, plaintiff must file a more definite statement in that form).

(n89)Footnote 89. ESAB Group, Inc. v. Centricut, Inc., 126 F.3d 617 (4th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1048, 118 S. Ct. 1364 (1998) ; Monarch Normandy Square Partners v. Normandy Square Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 817 F. Supp. 896 (D. Kan. 1993) . But see 800537 Ontario, Inc. v. Auto Enters., 113 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1128 (E.D. Mich. 2000) (Section 1965 authorizes nationwide service of process only when plaintiff shows court has personal jurisdiction over at least one of the defendants).

(n90)Footnote 90. Republic of Panama v. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg)S.A., 119 F.3d 935, 942 ((11th Cir. 1997) ; ESAB Group, Inc. v. Centricut, Inc., 126 F.3d 617, 626 /-/627 (4th Cir. 1997).

(n91)Footnote 91. FC Inv. Group LC v. IFX Markets, Ltd., 529 F.3d 1087, 1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) ; PT United Can Co. Ltd. v. Crown Cork & Seal Co., 138 F.3d 65, 70 (2d Cir. 1998) ; Butcher's Union Local No. 498 v. SDC Inv. Inc., 788 F.2d 535, 538 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n92)Footnote 92. See, e.g., Cory v. Aztec Steel Bldg., Inc., 468 F.3d 1226, 1229 (10th Cir. 2006) ; Busch v.

Buchman, Buchman & O'Brien, Law Firm, 11 F.3d 1255, 1258 (4th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. Tillem, 906 F.2d 814 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Go-Video, Inc. v. Akai Elec. Co., 885 F.2d 1406, 1416 (9th Cir. 1989) ; Lisak v. Mercantile Bancorp, Inc., 834 F.2d 668, 671 (7th Cir. 1987) (RICO); BankAtlantic v. Coast to Coast Contractors, Inc., 947 F. Supp. 480 (S.D. Fla. 1996) ; Headwear, U.S.A., Inc. v. Stange, 166 F.R.D. 36 (D. Kan. 1996) . See also FC Inv. Group LC v. IFX Markets, Ltd., 529 F.3d 1087, 1099 /-/1100 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (affirming dismissal of RICO action against foreign currency broker on the grounds that the court could not obtain personal jurisdiction over the defendant, and rejecting argument that the nationwide service of process provision conferred jurisdiction without minimum contacts).However, notwithstanding the nationwide service provisions, a court will most likely not exercise jurisdiction over a potential RICO claim involving an Indian intra-tribal dispute.

(n93)Footnote 93. See, e.g., Republic of Panama v. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A., 119 F.3d 935, 945, 946 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n94)Footnote 94. Forbes v. Eagleson, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10582 (E.D. Pa. July 23, 1996) .

(n95)Footnote 95. Tafflin v. Levitt, 493 U.S. 455, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887 (1990) .

(n96)Footnote 96. Lichtenberger v. Prudential-Bache Secs., Inc., 737 F. Supp. 43 (S.D. Tex. 1990) .

(n97)Footnote 97. Agency Holding v. Malley-Duff, 483 U.S. 143, 107 S. Ct. 2759, 2764, 97 L. Ed. 2d 121 (1987) . See Mathews v. Kidder, Peabody & Co., 260 F.3d 239, 247 (3d Cir. 2001) (RICO injury from overpriced securities occurs at time of purchase).

(n98)Footnote 98. Forbes v. Eagleson, 228 F.3d 471, 482 (3d Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 533 U.S. 929, 121 S. Ct. 2551, 150 L.Ed. 2d 718 (2001) ; Graves v. Combined Ins. Co., 95 F.3d 1154 (7th Cir. 1996) (accrual when plaintiff discovers or should have discovered, his injury); Granite Falls Bank v. Henrikson, 924 F.2d 150 (8th Cir. 1991) ; Bath v. Bushkin, Gaims, Gaines, & Jonas, 913 F.2d 817 (10th Cir. 1990) ; Rodriguez v. Banco Cent., 917 F.2d 664 (1st Cir. 1990) . See also Allstate Ins. Co. v. Valley Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation, P.C., 475 F. Supp. 2d 213, 228 /-/231 (E.D.N.Y. 2007). (applying injury discovery rule to bar recovery for some of the plaintiff's claims).

(n99)Footnote 99. Bingham v. Zolt, 66 F.3d 553 (2d Cir. 1995) ; McCool v. Strata Oil Co., 972 F.2d 1452 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n100)Footnote 100. Charter Oak Fire Ins. Co. v. Domberg, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7153 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 1987) ; Citicorp Sav. of Ill. v. Streit, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2860 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 1987) ; Carlstead v. Holiday Inns, In c., 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2546 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 1987) . The Sixth Circuit rejected the last predicate act rule in Agristor Fin'l Corp. v. Van Sickle, 967 F.2d 233 (6th Cir. 1992) , and the Seventh Circuit rejected it in McCool v. Strata Oil Co., 972 F.2d 1452 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n101)Footnote 101. Strassman v. Almahurst, Inc., 25 F.3d 1050 (6th Cir. 1994) .

(n102)Footnote 102. Klehr v. A.O. Smith Corp., 65 U.S.L.W. 4514 (June 17, 1997) (requiring exercise of due diligence); see also Ballen v. Prudential Bache Secs., 23 F.3d 335 (10th Cir. 1994) . See, e.g., Love v. National Med. Enters., 230 F.3d 765, 780 (5th Cir. 2000) (finding material fact as to issue of fraudulent concealment). See also Shapo v. O'Shaugnessy, 246 F. Supp. 2d 935 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (recognizing tolling doctrine); G-I Holdings, Inc. v. Baron & Budd, 238 F. Supp. 2d 521 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (standard tolling exceptions apply to civil RICO claims).

(n103)Footnote 103. Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 330, 99 S. Ct. 645, 58 L. Ed. 2d 552 (1979) .

(n104)Footnote 104. Emery v. American Gen. Fin., 71 F.3d 1343 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n105)Footnote 105. Chisolm v. TranSouth Fin. Corp., 95 F.3d 331 (4th Cir. 1996) , appeal after remand, 164

F.3d 623 (4th Cir. 1998) (table, full text at 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 24632), on remand, 184 F.R.D. 556 (E.D. Va. 1999) (certifying class), later op. at 194 F.R.D. 538 (E.D. Va. 2000) (defining subclasses and ruling on trial plans).

(n106)Footnote 106. Brown v. C.I.L., Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4053 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 1996) .

(n107)Footnote 107. Thompson v. State, 211 Ga. App. 887, 440 S.E.2d 670 (1994) , cert. denied, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 514 (Mar. 25, 1994) .

(n108)Footnote 108. Brown v. LaSalle N.W. Nat'l Bank, 820 F. Supp. 1078 (N.D. Ill. 1993) .

(n109)Footnote 109. Smith v. Berg, 247 F.3d 532, 538 (3d Cir. 2001) . The trial court later declined to certify the class of homebuyers, but on other grounds. Smith v. Berg, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15814 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 1, 2001) .

(n110)Footnote 110. Carr v. Home Tech Co., Inc., 476 F. Supp. 2d 859, 863-865 (W.D. Tenn. 2007) (referring to prior order of the court).

(n111)Footnote 111. In re Nat'l Western Life Ins. Deferred Annuities Litig., 467 F. Supp. 2d 1071, 1085-1086 (S.D. Cal. 2006) .

(n112)Footnote 112. See e.g. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 13-2301 to 13-2318; Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 18-17-101 to 18-17-109; Iowa Code Ann. §§ 706A.1 to 706A.5; N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 2C:41-1 to 2C:41-6.2. See also National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 14.3 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.), and App. C.2 for summaries of state statutes.

(n113)Footnote 113. See, e.g., Ford Motor Co. v. Edgewood Props., Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4172 (D.N.J. Jan. 20, 2009) , on reconsideration in part, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 70953 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2009) (allowing RICO claim to go forward); Weaver v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93658 (D. Nev. Nov. 4, 2008) (dismissing suit because of insufficient showing of injury; taking an extremely cramped reading of this requirement).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.08

§ 4.08 State Civil Theft Laws

A few states have civil theft laws that offer a cause of action that is similar to but less complex than a state RICO claim. These statutes also usually cover a greater range of fraud and theft offenses.

In Indiana, a person who has suffered a pecuniary loss as a result of a theft or fraud crime, or certain other types of crimes, may sue for treble damages, costs, attorney fees, certain travel expenses and court costs, and collection costs. n1 Ohio offers a private cause of action for damages, attorney fees, costs, and, in certain cases, punitive damages to anyone injured in person or property by a criminal act. n2 The statute also provides for treble damages and statutory damages in some circumstances n3 if the defendant does not respond properly to a thirty-day demand letter. n4 Rhode Island provides a private cause of action for damages to any person who suffers injury to the person, reputation, or estate by reason of the commission of any crime or offense, and specifies that it is not a defense that no criminal complaint has been filed. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsRobberyGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesFraudGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Ind. Code § 34-24-3-1.

(n2)Footnote 2. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2307.60.

(n3)Footnote 3. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2307.61.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Buckeye Check Cashing, Inc. v. Proctor, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 2678 (Ohio Ct. App. June 15, 1999) (interpreting ambiguous statutory language).

(n5)Footnote 5. R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-1-2.

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 4 Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices

1-4 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 4.09

§ 4.09 Unjust Enrichment, Restitution, and Similar Equitable Theories

Another alternative remedy to state UDAP remedies in cases of consumer fraud is unjust enrichment. Unjust enrichment is an equitable doctrine that provides a remedy--restitution--when a party receives benefits that would be unjust for that party to retain under the circumstances. Unjust enrichment is the source of the liability, and restitution is the consequence of--or remedy for--the liability. n1

A claim for restitution may be a useful approach when a seller or lender collects funds that it is not entitled to. For example:

- A car dealer may assess a license fee but fail to disclose that the dealer will remit only a portion of the fee to the state, retaining the excess as profit;

- A mortgage lender may assess a fee labeled as a recording tax when in fact the actual tax due to the state is only a fraction of the item;

- A seller may line item a fee for a federal excise tax that is not due;

- A mobile home park lessor may demand a fee for the sale of a home in the park, notwithstanding that state law prohibits such a fee;

- A merchant may disclose and collect a fee that the merchant does not have the authority to collect, for example, an unlicensed real estate broker is not entitled to command and keep a commission;

- A seller may overcharge a consumer for a product, by assessing a higher price than agreed to or allowed by law.

In some jurisdictions, "unjust enrichment" is a cause of action in and of itself, sounding in equity, that has distinct elements to prove and results in an award of restitution. n2 In other jurisdictions, unjust enrichment serves as the basis for imposing liability through another cause of action, and it must be proven as an element of the overriding claim. Typically such a claim is labeled restitution, n3 "money had and received," n4 assumpsit, n5 or recoupment. n6

In general, the elements of a claim of unjust enrichment include the following:

- The defendant received a benefit;
- The defendant's failure to pay was to the plaintiff's detriment; and
- The circumstances are such that it would be unjust for the defendant to fail to return the benefit to the plaintiff. n7

Jurisdictions that have a more conservative approach to the doctrine may also require a plaintiff to show not just that the defendant obtained a benefit, but that the defendant obtained the benefit by fraud, duress, or the taking of an undue advantage. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawRemediesEquitable ReliefGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Restatement (Third) of Restitution & Unjust Enrichment § 1 provides: "A person who is unjustly enriched at the expense of another is liable in restitution to the other."

(n2)Footnote 2. Restatement (Third) of Restitution & Unjust Enrichment § 1 cmt. a. The Restatement carefully circumscribes the situations of unjust enrichment that will yield restitution, providing as follows:

(1) Liability in restitution is based on and measured by the receipt of a benefit, but the receipt of a benefit does not of itself make the recipient liable in restitution.

(2) The transactions that give rise to a liability in restitution are primarily nonconsensual. They take place outside the framework of an enforceable contract, or otherwise without the effective consent of one or both parties.

(3) The fact that a person has received or obtained a benefit without paying for it does not of itself establish that the recipient has been unjustly enriched.

(4) There is no liability in restitution in respect of a benefit intentionally conferred by the claimant on the recipient, unless the circumstances of the transaction are such as to excuse the claimant from the necessity of basing a claim to payment on a contract with the recipient.

(n3)Footnote 3. Kowalski v. Cedars of Portsmouth Condo. Ass'n, 769 A.2d 344, 346 (N.H. 2001) ; Oxford Fin. Cos. v. Velez, 807 S.W.2d 460, 465 (Tex. Ct. App. 1991) (while unjust enrichment is not an independent cause of action, an action for restitution based on unjust enrichment will lie to recover money that it would be unconscionable for the defendant to retain); see also Century Bank v. Hymans, 905 P.2d 722, 726, 727 (N.M. Ct. App. 1995) (allowing restitution claim based on mortgagee's overpayment to mortgagor).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Lonergan v. A.J.'s Wrecker Serv. of Dallas, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10494 (N.D. Tex. July 6, 1999) (describing claim for money had and received as an equitable doctrine used to prevent unjust enrichment).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Cohon v. Oscar L. Paris Co., 149 N.E.2d 472, 475 (Ill. App. Ct. 1958) (the action of assumpsit, under the common counts for money had and received, is an appropriate remedy to enforce the equitable obligation arising from the receipt of money by one person which belongs to another and which in equity and justice should be returned).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Pension Benefit Guar. Corp. v. White Consol. Indus. Inc., 72 F. Supp. 2d 547, 550 (W.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., White v. Smith & Wesson Corp., 97 F. Supp. 2d 816 (N.D. Ohio 2000) ; Steinmetz v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 963 F. Supp. 1294, 1307 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (interest earned on lessee's security deposits could be basis of claim for unjust enrichment against lessor); Gary v. D. Agustini & Asociados, S.A., 865 F. Supp. 818 (S.D. Fla. 1994) ; Fitzpatrick v. Scalzi, 806 A.2d 593 (Conn. App. Ct. 2002) ; Dominiack Mech., Inc. v. Dunbar, 757 N.E.2d 186, 190 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Lonergan v. A.J.'s Wrecker Serv. of Dallas, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10494 (N.D. Tex. July 6, 1999) (fees paid to defendant's towing companies, for the nonconsensual towing and storage of vehicles, sufficed as payment of money under duress); Friar v. Vanguard Holding Corp., 434 N.Y.S.2d 698, 702 (App. Div. 1980) (action for money had and received arises when money was paid by mistake, upon consideration that failed, or under duress). See Restatement (Third) of Restitution & Unjust Enrichment § 2 cmt. a ("the concern of restitution is with nonconsensual transactions and not (for example) with the fairness of a valid contractual exchange"). For further discussion of unjust enrichment, see National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 9.7.2 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

48 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual 5.syn

§ 5.syn Synopsis to Chapter 5: Credit Discrimination *

§ 5.01 Introduction

[1] Overview

[2] Terminology and Acronyms

[3] The ECOA

[4] The Fair Housing Act

[5] Other Civil Rights Acts

[6] The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA)

[7] State Credit Laws

[8] State UDAP (Unfair or Deceptive Acts and Practices) Statutes

§ 5.02 Scope of the Laws Protecting Consumers From Discrimination

[1] Scope of the ECOA

[a] General

[b] The ECOA Applies to "Credit" Transactions

[c] Examples of ECOA Coverage

[d] ECOA Prohibits Discrimination Against "Applicants."

[e] Creditors and Related Parties Subject to the ECOA

[f] Exclusions From Definition of Creditor

[g] The Government as Creditor

[h] Transactions Partially Exempted by the FRB

[2] Scope of the Fair Housing Act

[3] Summary of Key ECOA and FHA Provisions

[4] Scope of the Federal Civil Rights Acts

[5] Scope of State Credit Discrimination Statutes

[6] Scope of State UDAP Statutes

§ 5.03 Prohibited Bases for Discrimination

[1] When Is Discrimination on a Prohibited Basis?

[2] The Effects Test

[3] The Prohibited Bases

[a] Race and Color

[b] Religion, Creed, Political Affiliation

[c] National Origin

[d] Immigration Status

[e] Sex

[f] Familial Status

[g] Marital Status

[h] Sexual Orientation

[i] Age

[j] Handicapped Status

[k] Public Assistance Status

[l] Good Faith Exercise of Consumer Credit Protection Act, Other Legal Rights

[m] Other Prohibited Bases

[n] Discrimination and the Digital Divide

[4] ECOA Prohibited Bases Do Not Apply to Special Purpose Credit Programs

[5] Protected Characteristics May Apply to Those Associated With Applicant

§ 5.04 Types of Discrimination

[1] General Standards

[a] Must Discrimination Be by a "Creditor"?

[b] What Is Discrimination?

[2] Discrimination in Different Stages of the Credit Transaction

[3] Application to Utilities

§ 5.05 Application Procedures and Signature Requirements

[1] Introduction

[2] Discouraging Applications

[3] Prohibited Requests for Information

[a] General

[b] Sex; Optional Use of Courtesy Titles

[c] Marital Status

[d] Information About Spouse or Former Spouse

[e] Public Assistance Status

[f] Exceptions to Restrictions on Requested Information

[i] The Home Mortgage Monitoring Requirements

[ii] Information Required By Any Other Federal or State Statute or By Court Order For Monitoring Purposes

[iii] Special Purpose Credit Programs

[4] Oral Applications for Credit

[5] Cosignature of Spouse or Other Person

[6] Creditors May Not Refuse to Open Accounts in a Married Woman's Own Name

[7] Collateral, Security Deposits, Sureties, Other Forms of Creditor Protection

[a] Discriminatory Practices

[b] Injury Caused By Such Discrimination

§ 5.06 Special ECOA Rules Concerning Credit Evaluation

[1] Understanding Credit Evaluation Systems

[a] Types of Systems Used

[i] Credit Scoring Systems

[A] Special Issues Concerning Credit Scoring Systems

[1] Dramatic Increase in the Use of Credit Scores

[2] Lack of Information and Regulation of Credit Scores

[3] How a Credit Score Is Calculated: The Black Box

[ii] Judgmental Systems

[iii] Combination Systems

[b] Discovery of How Creditor Utilizes Scoring System

[2] Types of Prohibited Discrimination (Beyond the Prohibited Bases)

[a] Protected Income Sources

[i] General

[ii] Individual Evaluation of Protected Income

[iii] Income From Multiple Sources

[iv] Income Sources Associated With Older Applicants

[v] Income Sources Associated With Women Applicants

[b] Credit History

[i] Supplementing a Minimal Credit History

[ii] Avoiding a Spouse's Bad Credit History

[iii] Inadvertent Error Defense

[c] Telephone Listing

[d] Likelihood of Bearing or Rearing Children

[e] Availability of Credit Insurance

[3] Allowable Discrimination on a Prohibited Basis

[a] Age

[b] Public Assistance Status

[c] Marital Status

[d] Immigration Status

§ 5.07 Notification of Action Taken on an Application or on an Existing Account

[1] Introduction

[2] Notification Requirement for Approved Applications

[3] Notification Requirement Where Creditor Makes a Counteroffer

[4] ECOA Notice Requirements and Automobile Fraud

[5] Notification Requirement for Adverse Actions; Applications vs. Inquiries

[a] General

[b] What Is an Adverse Action?

[i] Adverse Actions Involving New Credit Accounts

[ii] Adverse Actions Involving Existing Accounts

[c] Complying With Another Required Notice Does Not Satisfy ECOA Requirement

[d] Timing of Notice of Adverse Action

[e] Form of the Notification

[f] Electronic Disclosures

[i] The Interim Final Rule

[g] Content of Notice

[6] Incomplete Applications for Credit

[7] Withdrawn Applications for Credit

[8] Multiple Applicants and Creditors

[9] Creditor's Inadvertent Error

[10] Right to Copy of Appraisal

[11] Exceptions to Notice Requirements: Incidental Consumer Credit

§ 5.08 ECOA Procedures Subsequent to the Granting of Credit

[1] Creditor Actions Triggered by Borrower's Increased Age or Change in Name or Marital Status

[2] Refusal to Improve Account Terms

[3] Are Authorized Users Entitled to Notification?

[4] Credit Reporting; Scope of Requirement

[5] Record Retention

[a] Retention of Prohibited Information

§ 5.09 Proving Credit Discrimination

[1] HMDA and Other Monitoring Data

[a] HMDA Data

[i] Changes to HMDA Effective January 2004

[b] Monitoring Data Required by the ECOA

[c] Data Not Related to Mortgages

[2] Sources of Evidence

[3] Proving Disparate Treatment

[a] Introduction

[b] Direct Evidence of Disparate Treatment

[c] Circumstantial Evidence

[i] General

[ii] Where Denial Is Based on Credit Scoring System

[iii] Denial Based on a Judgmental System

[iv] Disparate Efforts to Encourage Applicants

[v] Use of Statistics

[4] Proving Disparate Impact

[a] Introduction

[b] The ECOA Commentary Standards

[c] The Fair Housing Act Standard

[d] Burdens of Proof

[e] Redlining

§ 5.10 Litigating a Credit Discrimination Case

[1] The Plaintiff

[a] The Plaintiff Must Be Aggrieved

[b] Other Preconditions for Plaintiffs

[c] Class Actions

[2] The Defendant

[3] Selecting the Forum

[a] General

[b] Deciding Whether to Select an Administrative Determination

[c] How the Administrative Procedure Works

[d] Mandatory Arbitration

[i] Problems of Pre-Dispute Arbitration Clauses

[ii] Applicability to Credit Discrimination Claims

[4] Statute of Limitations

[a] Affirmative Actions--ECOA Claims

[b] Fair Housing Act Claims

[c] Federal Civil Rights Act Claims

[d] Limitations Period for Credit Discrimination Claims When Responding to a Creditor's Lawsuit

[5] Creditor Defenses

[a] Business Justification Defense

[i] General

[ii] Disparate Treatment Cases

[iii] Disparate Impact

[b] Special ECOA Defenses

[i] Good Faith Compliance

[ii] The Inadvertent Error Defense

[iii] Creditor's Reasonable Notice of Violation

[c] Defenses to Fair Housing Act and Civil Rights Act Claims

§ 5.11 Private Remedies

[1] Actual Damages

[a] Tangible Injury

[b] Intangible Damages

[2] Multiple and Minimum Statutory Damages

[3] Punitive Damages

[a] General

[b] Limits on the Size of Punitive Damage Awards

[c] ECOA Standards for Determining the Size of a Punitive Damages Award

[4] Equitable and Declaratory Relief

[a] Prospective Relief

[b] Voiding an Individual's Obligation Under a Note or Security Agreement

[c] Restitution and Disgorgement

[5] Attorney's Fees and Costs

[a] General Standards

[b] When Is an Action Successful?

[c] Fees for Legal Services, Pro Bono, Pro Se Attorneys

[d] Costs and Witness Fees

[6] Election of Remedies

§ 5.12 Government Enforcement

[1] ECOA Enforcement

[a] The U.S. Attorney General

[b] Federal Trade Commission

[c] Other Federal Agencies

[d] Agency Enforcement Policy

[e] Interagency Policy Statement on Fair Lending

[2] Civil Enforcement by the United States Attorney General

[3] Agency Referrals to Department of Justice or HUD

[4] Enforcement Activities at the State and Local Levels

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.01

§ 5.01 Introduction

[1] Overview

Credit discrimination is a pervasive and pernicious problem in American society. n1 Minorities and other protected groups face difficulties obtaining market-rate first and second mortgages and other forms of credit; many banks do not even open branches in minority neighborhoods. Creditors discriminate as to which customers they solicit for credit, to whom they grant credit, or how their credit customers are treated in subsequent stages of the credit transaction, such as in loan servicing and debt collection. Consumers cannot be sure if they are even eligible for credit or do not understand why they are turned down for credit.

This chapter considers a number of different credit discrimination statutes. n2 The Equal Credit Opportunity Act ("ECOA"), 15 U.S.C. sections 1691-1691f, n3 is the primary statute treated, in part because it has the broadest application and most detailed standards. The Fair Housing Act ("FHA") n4 is covered because it more directly prohibits discrimination in residential leases and sale of residences, as well as applying to first and second mortgages and unsecured loans used to improve or maintain a dwelling.

42 U.S.C sections 1981 and 1982 of the Civil Rights Acts are also considered, but in less detail. These statutes, like the FHA, are broader in some respects than the ECOA. In these statutes, any aggrieved party (and not just an applicant) may bring an action; they clearly apply to all types of leases and even to sales not involving credit; and they are not limited in the amount of punitive damages. This makes them important particularly when the FHA does not apply--that is, where the transaction is not related to a dwelling. The Civil Rights Acts may also be useful where the two-year ECOA and FHA limitations period has run.

This chapter also briefly covers state credit discrimination laws. A final category of laws mentioned in this chapter are state UDAP statutes; that is, state consumer protection statutes of general applicability prohibiting unfair and deceptive practices. n5

Federal and state credit discrimination laws do not prohibit discrimination generally. They do not prevent creditors from making reasonable distinctions between applicants, denying credit or offering less advantageous terms to higher risks. These credit discrimination laws generally do not even require that creditors act reasonably.

Instead, credit discrimination laws prohibit creditors from utilizing certain factors (race, sex, etc.) as the basis for the credit discrimination. Whether or not a credit determination is reasonable, it is prohibited if the determination is based upon a prohibited distinction, except for special credit programs restricted to those discriminated against.

A practice can involve illegal discrimination even when the creditor does not intend to discriminate on a prohibited basis. A practice can be illegal if it has the effect of discriminating on a prohibited basis. This "effects test" provides an alternative approach when it is impossible to prove that the creditor intended to treat applicants differently.

The credit discrimination statutes prohibit discrimination at all stages of a credit transaction and reach more than just transactions with stated interest charges, but apply to leases, utility service, certain medical treatments, and other transactions where the consumer's obligation to pay is deferred until after receipt of the goods or services. Credit discrimination laws may even apply to differential treatment as to the cash price of the goods or services related to the credit.

[2] Terminology and Acronyms

This chapter commonly uses the following abbreviations and shorthand:

- ECOA for Equal Credit Opportunity Act;
- FRB for Federal Reserve Board;
- HUD for the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development;
- Civil Rights Acts for 42 U.S.C. sections 1981 and 1982;
- UDAP for general state consumer protection statutes that prohibit unfair and deceptive acts and practices.
- Clearinghouse is the National Clearinghouse for Legal Services. n6

[3] The ECOA

The ECOA has two important aspects. First, it sets out a general rule that creditors cannot discriminate in any way against any applicant in any stage of a credit transaction on any of the following bases:

- Race,
- Color,
- Religion,
- National origin,
- Sex,
- Marital status,
- Age,

- Public assistance income,
- Exercise of rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act. n7

Second, the ECOA sets out various specific actions that creditors must or must not take, factors that may not be considered in determining creditworthiness (such as certain types of income an applicant may receive), when an existing account may be closed, and ways in which information is reported to credit reporting agencies concerning spouses.

Both the general rule against discrimination and the more specific requirements have a broad scope (with certain itemized exceptions). Any individual applying for credit or obligated to pay on a loan may bring actions against any creditor, which includes those arranging and participating in loans. The ECOA also applies not only to transactions with multiple installments or a finance charge, but to any deferral of payment, such as payment for services a week after the services were provided. The ECOA also applies not just to consumer, but also to business and other forms of credit. Special purpose credit programs are largely exempt, and certain narrow exceptions apply to incidental consumer credit, utility credit, business credit, and securities credit.

ECOA provides private remedies for actual and punitive damages (up to a maximum of $10,000 in an individual action), equitable relief, and attorney fees. Actions may be brought in federal or state court, and may be brought as individual or class actions. Creditor defenses are limited. Various federal agencies also have enforcement authority over ECOA violations.

In 1996, the ECOA was amended as part of the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996. n8 Incentives for self-testing and self-correcting were added, providing that reports or results of self-tests are privileged information under specified conditions. The FRB (in consultation with HUD) developed regulations dealing with these issues.

The amendment did not take effect until the regulations were final, and the regulations did not take effect until thirty days after they became final. n9 In 1999, the FRB issued an extensive set of proposed revisions to Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. The FRB issued its final rule and revisions to the Official Staff Commentary almost four years later, in March 2003. n10 The changes made by the final rule were significantly more limited in scope than the proposed rule.

[4] The Fair Housing Act

The Fair Housing Act, 42 U.S.C. sections 3601-3631, contains several different provisions dealing with credit discrimination: one prohibits discrimination in residential real estate-related transactions, which primarily means any loan where a dwelling is taken as collateral or where the proceeds will go to purchase, improve, or maintain residential property. Another deals more with housing discrimination, in that it prohibits discrimination in the rental or sale of real estate. A third prevents threats, coercion, or interference with the enjoyment of rights protected by the Fair Housing Act.

The provisions prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, familial status, and handicap. Thus, there is considerable overlap with the ECOA, but only the Fair Housing Act prohibits familial status and handicap discrimination, while only the ECOA prohibits discrimination on age, marital status, public assistance status, and exercise of rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act. The Fair Housing Act also does not contain any specific credit limitations such as those found throughout the ECOA.

Private actions may seek actual damages, punitive damages, equitable relief, and attorney fees. The Fair Housing Act provides for both administrative and judicial proceedings for violations. Plaintiffs may pursue either approach or both simultaneously (up until the time one of the proceedings goes to actual trial).

On September 30, 1996, the FHA was amended as part of the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1996. n11 Incentives for self-testing and self-correcting were added, providing that reports or results of self-tests are privileged information under specified conditions. The Department of Housing and Urban Development (in cooperation with the FRB) developed regulations dealing with these issues.

The amendment did not take effect until the regulations were final, and the regulations did not take effect until thirty days after they became final. n12

There is an extensive body of caselaw under the Fair Housing Act in the rental and zoning contexts, much of which is used by courts as a source of precedent in credit discrimination cases brought under both the FHA and ECOA. n13 Some of these cases are discussed in this chapter when relevant to the applicable section. However, for a more extensive discussion of fair housing caselaw, advocates are advised to consult available fair housing treatises and other resources. n14

[5] Other Civil Rights Acts

This chapter also briefly treats two other federal statutes with some importance to credit discrimination, 42 U.S.C sections 1981 and 1982, part of the Civil Rights Acts.

These statutes clearly apply to many aspects of credit transactions, n15 and also apply to many transactions beyond the scope of the ECOA and the FHA. They are particularly useful in challenging discrimination in leasing and selling of personal property.

The Civil Rights Acts generally apply only to racial discrimination, but the Supreme Court has expanded on this to include certain types of ethnic discrimination. In addition, section 1981 may be able to reach discrimination against noncitizens. On the other hand, section 1982 does not provide rights to noncitizens.

The Civil Rights Acts provide for private actions for actual and punitive damages, equitable relief and attorney fees. Like the FHA, but unlike the ECOA, there is no statutory cap on the amount of punitive damages. Unlike the FHA and the ECOA, the Civil Rights Acts only apply to cases of intentional discrimination, and do not apply to cases of disparate impact--that is, the "effects test" is not available for violations of the Civil Rights Acts. n16 The limitations period for the Civil Rights Acts are determined by state law, so that they may be longer than or shorter than the FHA and ECOA's two year period.

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 amended section 1981 by re-designating the prior text as subsection (a) and adding subsections (b) and (c). n17 Subsection (b) added a definition for the phrase "make and enforce contracts," stating that it extends to both the "making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts" as well as the "enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship." n18 Subsection (c) added a provision making clear that the protections of section 1981 extend to both "non-governmental discrimination and impairment under color of State law." n19 The limitations period for the federal Civil Rights Acts is somewhat complicated. The limitations period for a cause of action that could be brought under provisions of the Act that existed prior to the 1991 Amendments is determined by state law, so the period may be longer or shorter than the Fair Housing Act's and the ECOA's two-year limitations periods. To the extent, however, that a cause of action is made possible by the provisions added by the 1991 Amendments, they are subject to the four-year "catch-all" federal statute of limitations at 28 U.S.C. § 1658(a). n20

In addition to credit discrimination and housing discrimination cases, many courts have relied on the extensive body of law in the employment discrimination area as a source of precedent. For example, courts often turn to employment discrimination law when analyzing a disparate impact claim in a credit discrimination case. n21 In addition, some (but not all) federal courts have used the three-part, burden-shifting analysis developed by the Supreme Court for employment law cases in the McDonnell-Douglas case. n22 Also, advocates can use employment discrimination law theories to develop novel legal theories in credit discrimination cases. For example, one commentator has suggested tackling the problem of discrimination by creditors when issuing pre-screened credit offers by using the analysis developed in cases challenging discrimination in employment recruitment. n23

However, there are some differences between the two areas of law. For example, ECOA prohibits creditors from offering joint accounts to married couples, but not unmarried couples. n24 In contrast, several courts have held that state employment laws which forbid marital status discrimination do not prohibit employers from discriminating against unmarried couples. n25

[6] The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA)

The Community Reinvestment Act ("CRA") requires federal bank supervisors to monitor and evaluate how banks serve the credit needs of entire communities, including low and moderate-income neighborhoods. n26 It is distinct from the FHA and the ECOA in that it addresses inequalities in the distribution of credit among geographic areas, rather than discrimination against particular protected groups. However, commentators have noted that, for a number of reasons, CRA issues often become inescapably intertwined with addressing racial disparities in lending. n27 It applies to all institutions whose deposits are covered by federal deposit insurance.

The basic premise of the CRA is that banks and savings institutions, although privately capitalized, have an underlying obligation to serve their local communities. This obligation is generally considered to be in exchange for government backing, such as federal deposit insurance, that banks need to survive. Although it does not provide a civil cause of action, the CRA does require regulatory agencies to publicly disclose certain findings and conclusions regarding lending institutions, including whether an institution is meeting community needs. n28 Most importantly for advocates, banks have a strong incentive to maintain a positive CRA rating as federal bank regulatory agencies may deny merger or expansion applications from institutions with low ratings. The CRA in a sense grants implicit standing to neighborhood groups and other advocates to intervene in lender expansion application proceedings. n29 In addition, regulators are permitted to impose sanctions on lenders with weak records. n30

In general, the CRA is not aggressively enforced by regulatory agencies, n31 although some advocates have been able to use it effectively to address unfair and discriminatory lending practices. n32 Without a civil right of action, it may not be directly relevant for individual litigation. However, as part of an overall advocacy plan, it can be an effective tool for change.

[7] State Credit Laws

State equal credit laws are generally patterned after the ECOA. State fair housing laws are generally patterned after the Federal Fair Housing Act. In the wake of the 1988 Amendments to the federal statute, many states have been amending their fair housing statutes to include familial status and disability to the list of protected classes, to increase the statute of limitations from one to two years, and to eliminate the ceilings for punitive damage awards.

Sometimes recent amendments to the state fair housing acts offer broader protections than are found in the federal statute, and then such statutes are particularly relevant to a credit discrimination case. For example, several states explicitly mention individuals with AIDS as a protected class or prohibit discrimination based upon sexual orientation, political affiliation, or creed.

[8] State UDAP (Unfair or Deceptive Acts and Practices) Statutes

Every state has a general statute prohibiting deceptive and often unfair marketplace conduct. Thus, violations of a credit discrimination statute can also be a state UDAP violation, providing treble damages and/or minimum statutory damages and relatively long limitations periods in some states. More importantly, credit discrimination on a basis not prohibited by a credit discrimination statute could still be an unfair practice under a state UDAP statute. n33

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityGeneral OverviewBanking LawFederal ActsFair Housing & National Housing ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsPublic Health & Welfare LawHousing & Public BuildingsFair HousingReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. For example, in 2000, mortgage lenders rejected nearly half of all African-American applicants and more than one-third of Hispanic applicants for conventional mortgages, as compared to less than one-quarter of white applicants. Ass'n of Community Organizations for Reform Now [hereinafter ACORN], The Great Divide: An Analysis of Racial and Economic Disparities in Home Purchase Mortgage Lending Nationally and in Sixty Metropolitan Areas 1 (2001), available at www.acorn.org.

(n2)Footnote 2. For an overview of all aspects of credit discrimination cases, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, Ch. 1 (5th ed. 2009).

(n3)Footnote 3. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act [hereinafter ECOA] is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. The Fair Housing Act [hereinafter FHA] is reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ch. 4 supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Certain unreported cases and other documents are referred to herein with a "Clearinghouse" number. These documents may be ordered from the Sargent Shriver National Center on Poverty law (formerly known as the National Clearinghouse for Legal Services) by writing to: 111 N. Wabash St. Suite 500, Chicago, IL 60602, by calling (800) 621-3256 or (312) 263 3830, by sending a fax to (312) 263-3846 or by sending an e-mail to admin@povertylaw.org. Many documents are available on the organization's website, www.pvertylaw.org. There is a $60.00 annual access charge, plus $10,00 per copy plus shipping for hard copies. Non-subscribers can order individual documents for $10.00 plus shipping. As of early 2006, anyone whether a subscriber or not will be able to read abstracts and download case documents from their website.

For a more thorough presentation of the ideas in this chapter, plus a comprehensive appendix of relevant federal and state laws and court decisions, refer to National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination (3rd ed. 2002 and Supp.).

(n7)Footnote 7. Regulation B, found at 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.1 et seq. , is the official FRB implementing and interpreting regulation for the ECOA. It includes sample forms. Further explanation of the FRB rules and position is found in the Official Staff Commentary on Regulation B, found as a supplement to 12 C.F.R. pt. 202. The FRB issued a set of proposed revisions to Regulation B in August 1999, and issued final rules in March 2003. The text of the final rules can be found at 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The new rules became effective on April 15, 2003, and mandatory compliance began on April 15, 2004.

(n8)Footnote 8. Pub. L. No. 104-208 (Sept. 30, 1996).

(n9)Footnote 9. Final regulations were promulgated as of mid-December 1997. See 62 Fed. Reg. 66,412 (Dec. 18, 1997) . The regulations are effective as of Jan. 30, 1998.

(n10)Footnote 10. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Pub. L. No. 104-208 (Sept. 30, 1996).

(n12)Footnote 12. Final regulations were promulgated as of mid-December 1997. See 62 Fed. Reg. 66,424 (Dec. 18, 1997) . The regulations are effective as of Jan. 30, 1998.

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315, 325, n. 21 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (applying FHA caselaw in a non-housing finance ECOA case).

(n14)Footnote 14. See., e.g., J. Kushner, Fair Housing: Discrimination in Real Estate, Community Development and Revitalization (2d ed. 1995); R. Schwemm, Housing Discrimination: Law and Litigation(1990).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (2000) (predatory lending/reverse redlining case brought under both §§ 1981 and 1982), recons. granted in part, denied in part, 147 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2001) (§ 1981 claim dismissed for lack of standing, but not § 1982 claim), inj. denied sub nom. FTC v. Chevy Chase Bank, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2199 (D.D.C. Feb. 7, 2002) ; Johnson v. Equicredit Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4817 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 21, 2002) (predatory lending/reserve redlining case brought pursuant to § 1981); Doane v. National Westminster Bank, 938 F. Supp. 149 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) (mortgage redlining case brought under §§ 1981 and 1982).

(n16)Footnote 16. Davis v. Strata Corp., 242 F. Supp. 2d 643 (D.N.D. 2003) (credit discrimination case brought under § 1981; no liability without proof of intentional or purposeful discrimination).

(n17)Footnote 17. Pub. L. No. 102-166, 105 Stat. 1071 (1991).

(n18)Footnote 18. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b).

(n19)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c).

(n20)Footnote 20. Jones v. Donnelley, 124 S. Ct. 1836 (2004) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Bhandari v. First Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 808 F.2d 1082, 1101 (5th Cir. 1987) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 829 F.2d 1343 (5th Cir. 1987) (en banc), vacated and remanded, 492 U.S. 901 , reinstated, 887 F.2d 609 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1061 (1990) ; Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315, 325-326 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) ; Buycks-Roberson v. Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank, 162 F.R.D. 322 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n22)Footnote 22. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1973) . The McDonnell-Douglas test is used by the First Circuit and Fifth Circuit, but has been rejected by the Seventh Circuit. See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 9.4.3.1, for a description of the McDonnell-Douglas test and the split amongst federal courts as to whether it should be applied in credit discrimination cases.

(n23)Footnote 23. Timothy J. Lambert, Fair Marketing: Challenging Pre-Application Lending Practices, 87 Geo. L.J. 2181 (1999). The Equal Opportunity Commission's website is a good resource on federal employment anti-discrimination law, and includes relevant statutes, regulations and the EEOC's enforcement guidance, which is its interpretations of current issues in the law. See www.eeoc.gov. Other employment anti-discrimination law resources include B. Lindemann and P. Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed. 1996).

(n24)Footnote 24. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(1)-1; Markham v. Colonial Mortgage Serv. Co., 605 F.2d 566 (D.C. Cir. 1979) ; Diaz v. Virginia Hous. Dev. Auth., 101 F.Supp. 2d 415, 419-20 (E.D.Va. 2000) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Parker-Bigback v. St. Labre Sch., 7 P.3d 361 (Mont. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1076, 121 S. Ct. 772, 148 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2001) ; Waggoner v. Ace Hardware Corp., 953 P.2d 88 (Wash. 1998) . Note that Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act, which is the federal anti-discrimination employment law, does not prohibit marital status discrimination. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1). Several states have enacted fair employment and fair housing laws prohibiting marital status discrimination. These states are split as to whether such provisions also protect unmarried couples. See John C. Beattie, Prohibiting Marital Status Discrimination: A Proposal for the Protection of Unmarried Couples, 42 Hastings L.J. 1415 (1991).

(n26)Footnote 26. 12 U.S.C. § 2903.

(n27)Footnote 27. Patricia A. McCoy, Banking Law Manual §§ 8.03 [1][a], 8.04[3] (2d ed. 2001); Keith N. Hylton & Vincent D. Rougeau, Lending Discrimination: Economic Theory, Econometric Evidence, and the Community Reinvestment Act, 85 Geo. L.J. 237 (1996). In addition, the CRA regulations state that federal regulators will consider evidence of lending discrimination in assigning a CRA rating. 12 C.F.R. § 228.28.

(n28)Footnote 28. 12 U.S.C. § 2906(b)(2).

(n29)Footnote 29. See generally Allen Fishbein, The Community Reinvestment Act After Fifteen Years: It Works, but Strengthened Federal Enforcement Is Needed, 20 Fordham Urb. L.J. 293 (1993).

(n30)Footnote 30. 12 U.S.C. § 2903.

(n31)Footnote 31. These agencies have a tendency to engage in "grade inflations." For example, in 1996, 98 percent of all banks and thrifts examined received either outstanding or satisfactory CRA ratings. Activists: Examiners are Too Soft on Banks, Banking Rep. (BNA), (Sept. 8, 1997), at 358.

(n32)Footnote 32. See generally Allen Fishbein, The Community Reinvestment Act After Fifteen Years: It Works, but Strengthened Federal Enforcement Is Needed, 20 Fordham Urb. L.J. 293 (1993).

(n33)Footnote 33. UDAP statutes are treated in Ch. 4 supra , and in National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (7th ed. 2008 and supp.)

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.02

§ 5.02 Scope of the Laws Protecting Consumers From Discrimination

[1] Scope of the ECOA

[a] General

To determine if the ECOA applies, one must consider three preliminary questions:

- Has there been an extension of "credit" covered by the ECOA? If so, is the transaction fully subject to the requirements of the ECOA, or has the FRB exempted the transaction from certain Regulation B requirements?

- Is the debtor an "applicant" who can invoke the statute's protection and recover under its remedy provisions?

- Is the party being sued a "creditor" under the ECOA definition, and, therefore, subject to the statute's requirements and liable for damages?

If the answer to all three of these initial issues is yes, the ECOA may apply.

[b] The ECOA Applies to "Credit" Transactions

The ECOA generally only applies to credit transactions. For ECOA purposes, credit is the right granted by a creditor to:

- Defer payment of a debt;

- Incur debt and defer its payment; or

- Purchase property or services and defer payment. n1

ECOA's definition is intentionally broader than that found under the federal Truth in Lending Act ("TILA") and covers transactions excluded from TILA. n2 The ECOA definition of credit is the same as that found in the Uniform Consumer Credit Code, section 1-301.

Because credit under the ECOA involves any simple deferral of payment, even if there are no finance charges or installments, the ECOA applies to many transactions where the consumer pays after receiving the goods or services, such as doctor and hospital bills, bills from repair persons and other workers, and even a local store where a customer runs up a tab.

The ECOA's coverage (unlike the TILA) includes not only consumer, but also commercial credit, n3 such as credit for business, agricultural or investment purposes. Whenever the creditor grants a deferral of this obligation to pay, there is credit. This obligation can arise by contract, by oral agreement, or by conduct.

[c] Examples of ECOA Coverage

First, if a lease is really a disguised credit sale, it should certainly fall within the ECOA's definition of credit. n4 In cases of discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, religion, or sex in residential leases, the FHA will clearly apply.

Rent-to-own transactions (such as those involving televisions, stereos, and appliances) may be covered. If the transaction is viewed as a disguised credit sale, or if there is a deferral of payment, the ECOA applies. n5 Utility service involves credit for purposes of the ECOA, although the FRB has exempted most forms of utility service from a few particular ECOA provisions.

Denial of an automated teller ("ATM") card which merely accessed a savings account, without any accompanying overdraft privileges, has been found not to involve the right to defer payment of debt, and so not to involve "credit." n6 Accepting payment by check, rather than cash, may not involve credit. n7 "Pay as You Go" arrangements are not covered. Allegations of discriminatory valuations of property in a government lease/buyback program were also held not to involve a "credit transaction." n8

A transaction also might be subject to the ECOA when it is so designated by the creditor, even if it would not otherwise be within the statutory definition. A creditor may contract to subject itself to ECOA. n9

[d] ECOA Prohibits Discrimination Against "Applicants."

Only "applicants" are protected under most ECOA provisions. n10 The statute defines an "applicant" as "any person who applies to a creditor directly for an extension, renewal, or continuation of credit or applies to a creditor indirectly by use of an existing credit plan for an amount exceeding a previously established credit limit." n11 Regulation B defines an applicant as including "any person who requests or who has received an extension of credit" and "any person who is or may become contractually liable regarding an extension of credit." Thus, a cosigner is an applicant. n12

To be an applicant, one need not submit a full application to a creditor. n13 Applicants are not restricted to persons attempting to open a new account, but could be a person who requests credit, a person who submits an actual application, a person whose application is approved and who opens an account, a person whose application is approved but who decides not to accept the credit offered, a person who requests an increase of an existing credit limit, or a person who just has existing credit with a creditor. n14

In its Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, the FRB solicited comment on whether it should further clarify the distinction between an inquiry about credit and an application for credit. n15 The Board was motivated by the growth of new delivery channels for loan products information, such as the Internet, and growth in credit counseling and prequalification programs, resulting in consumers asking for information about credit products and their creditworthiness before ever submitting an application. n16 Many industry commentators reported that they were unclear about when inquiries about credit rose to the level of an "application" requiring a formal denial if credit was rejected.

Based on the various responses to the FRB, including the industry comments noted above, the FRB proposed adding has proposed adding that the definition of "application" includes a request for preapproval under procedures in which a creditor will issue to a creditworthy person a written commitment, even if conditional, for credit up to a specified amount that is valid for a period of time. n17 The Official Commentary would be amended to reflect this change and to further explain when an inquiry or prequalification request becomes an application. n18 However, the Board declined to extend the ECOA to cover prescreened credit solicitations. n19

The Board, in 2003, decided to adopt the proposed language on pre- approvals. n20 However, the changes were not added to the regulation as proposed but only to the Official Staff Commentary. n21 The amendments to the Commentary distinguish between inquiries and pre-qualification requests, on the one hand, and certain pre-approval requests, on the other, for purposes of determining whether an application exists. The Commentary now clarifies that pre-qualification requests are subject to the same test applicable to inquiries. n22

In general, a request or inquiry will become an application for purposes of the ECOA if the creditor responds not only by providing information but also by evaluating information about the consumer. The Board changed the term "applicant" to "consumers" in the Commentary to emphasize that an application may exist for purposes of the ECOA even if the consumer has not actually submitted an application. n23 The Board explained that using the term "applicant" presumes that an application exists, while the point of the comment is that, in the case of an inquiry or pre-qualification request, an application may or may not exist depending upon the circumstances. n24

[e] Creditors and Related Parties Subject to the ECOA

The ECOA applies to any person who:

1) "regularly" extends, renews, or continues credit. n25 If a transaction represents more than an "isolated," "incidental" occurrence, n26 then the creditor regularly extends credit.

2) regularly arranges for credit or refers applicants or prospective applicants to creditors, or selects or offers to select creditors to whom requests for credit may be made. This includes certain real estate brokers, loan brokers, or car dealers, who may not provide credit, but whose discrimination may prevent applicants from receiving credit.

3) in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in the decision whether to extend credit, such as a creditor's assignee (with knowledge of the violation), transferee, or subrogee. n27

Regulation B defines "creditor" as a person who, in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in a credit decision, including setting the terms of the credit. Previously, Regulation B defined creditors as those persons who regularly participate in the decision of whether or not to extend credit. The Board stated that the new language was intended to clarify that the definition includes entities that make the credit decisions as well as those that negotiate and set the terms of the credit. n28

[f] Exclusions From Definition of Creditor

There are two exclusions from the definition of creditor. A person whose only participation in a credit transaction involves honoring a credit card is not a creditor. In addition, where a transaction involves more than one creditor, and one creditor violated the ECOA, the other creditors in a transaction are not liable for the violation to the extent that they lacked "reasonable notice" of the violation before becoming involved in the transaction. n29 It has also been held that co-guarantors are not "creditors" vis-a-vis one another, and that one co-guarantor cannot assert an ECOA violation against a second co-guarantor as a defense to a contribution action. n30

[g] The Government as Creditor

Transactions in which credit is extended by a government or a governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality are subject to the provisions of the ECOA and Regulation B, except that no action can be brought against governmental creditors for the recovery of punitive damages. n31 Some government agencies extend credit directly to consumer or business applicants, and the ECOA applies to those transactions. n32

In 1999, a consent decree was approved and entered against the U.S. Department of Agriculture in a class action case alleging systemic discrimination against African-American farmers. n33 The class included approximately 20,000 members. Among other charges, the class alleged that the Farm Service Agency, an agency within the USDA, routinely discouraged applications from some farmers, delayed processing their applications, or denied applications for credit and benefits on a discriminatory basis. n34

[h] Transactions Partially Exempted by the FRB

The FRB has created partial exemptions from ECOA coverage for five classes of credit: public utility credit, incidental consumer credit, business credit, securities credit and credit extended to the government. It is important to realize that these are partial exemptions dealing with specific, itemized ECOA requirements, and that these partially exempt forms of credit must still comply with all other ECOA requirements. In every case, the general rule prohibiting discrimination against applicants on a prohibited basis applies to these five special forms of credit. n35 The general rule prohibiting discrimination against applicants on a prohibited basis still applies to these five special forms of credit.

Previously, regulated public utilities granting credit for utility service may ask the marital status of applicants, but are not required to report credit information in both spouses' names or to retain records of credit applications; all other provisions of Regulation B apply. In 1999, the Board proposed to eliminate two of the three public utility exemptions, the exemption from collection of marital status information and from reporting credit information in the names of both spouses. n36 Only the record retention exemption would have remained under this proposal. In the final rules announced in 2003, the Board modified its proposal and decided to eliminate the exemption only for reporting of credit information in the names of both spouses. n37 In response to commentator concerns, the Board reiterated that the reporting requirement applies only to creditors that furnish information to reporting agencies. In these circumstances, utilities will now be required to furnish information that reflects the participation of both spouses. n38

The FRB provides a limited exemption for "incidental consumer credit," defined as: n39

- Primarily for personal, family, or household purposes;
- Not involving public utilities or securities credit;
- Not made pursuant to the terms of a credit card account;
- Not subject to any finance charge or interest; and
- Not payable by agreement in more than four installments. n40

The FRB proposed extending the definition of incidental credit to include incidental business credit as well, but in the final rules announced in 2003, the Board decided not to adopt this proposal. n41 Currently, business credit is subject to different procedures in a few areas, and the requirement that the reporting of credit information be in the name of both spouses applies only to consumer, and not business, credit. In deciding whether something is business or consumer credit, the primary purpose of the application controls.

Business credit is subject to different procedures in a few areas, and the requirement that the reporting of credit information be in the name of both spouses applies only to consumer, and not business, credit. In deciding whether something is business or consumer credit, the primary purpose of the application controls.

A partial exemption from Regulation B is provided for extensions of credit subject to regulation through the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or offered by a broker or dealer under that Act. The FRB has largely exempted from ECOA coverage transactions in which credit is extended to (not by) governments or governmental subdivisions, agencies, or instrumentalities.

[2] Scope of the Fair Housing Act

One section of the FHA prohibits discrimination in "residential real estate-related transactions," n42 and it is this section that has the most relevance to credit discrimination. The Federal FHA applies to any loan used to purchase, build, improve, repair, or maintain a dwelling. A dwelling includes a home, a mobile home, a condominium, a cooperative, a time share, a mobile home park, trailer courts, a multi-family building, a house boat, or any other structure used as a residence.

The FHA also applies to any loan secured by residential real estate. The loan proceeds do not have to be used in any way related to a dwelling, so long as the residential real estate is taken as collateral for the loan, such as home equity loans. The FHA applies to loan brokers, financial consultants, or anyone else providing financial assistance related to a loan covered by the FHA and to those who buy mortgages and other loan paper from the originating lender, as long as the loans themselves are covered by the FHA. n43 The FHA applies to the activities of real estate agents and appraisers.

The FHA prohibits discrimination in the sale, rental, or advertising of "dwellings" n44 with the following two exemptions. The Fair Housing Act (except for the discriminatory advertising section) does not apply to the sale or rental of a single family house by an owner as long as the owner has an interest only in three or fewer homes, and as long as the owner does not use an agent or broker or other person in the business of selling or renting dwellings. n45 With the noted exception of the discriminatory advertising section, the Act also does not apply to rentals of units in an owner-occupied four-family or smaller home. n46 The FHA also makes it illegal to coerce, intimidate, threaten or interfere in any way with any person exercising rights protected under the FHA. n47 HUD regulations set out the types of conduct considered to be unlawful under this section. n48 With respect to housing for seniors, the FHA has been held to cover (1) all types of "independent living" units, including condominiums, cooperatives, mobile home parks and various other age-restrictive residences; n49 (2) all types of "assisted living" units, including those in age-restricted communities; and (3) all types of residential units in age-restricted retirement communities, including cottages, townhouses, and apartments. n50 The issue is less clear with respect to nursing homes, although a number of courts have applied the FHA to these facilities. n51

[3] Summary of Key ECOA and FHA Provisions

An advocate will often have to choose whether to bring claims under the ECOA or FHA. Claims under both laws are not viable in some cases because of a provision in the ECOA that no person aggrieved by an ECOA violation and, in the same transaction, by a violation of the FHA's prohibitions concerning residential real estate-related discrimination can recover under both the ECOA and the FHA. n52

Key advantages and disadvantages of each law are discussed below.

- Scope. ECOA coverage extends to all types of credit transactions. The FHA applies only to housing. Advocates challenging discrimination in car financing, for example, do not have the option of proceeding under the FHA.

- Protected Classes. Race and color, religion, national origin, and sex or gender are prohibited bases of discrimination under both laws. The ECOA prohibits discrimination based on marital status, while the FHA prohibits discrimination based on familial status. The ECOA has three additional protected classes that are not covered by the FHA. These are age, public assistance status, and good faith exercise of legal rights under the consumer credit protection act. The FHA, but not the ECOA, includes disability or handicap as a prohibited basis for discrimination.

- Standing. FHA has broader standing provisions, including standing for testers and organizational plaintiffs. The ECOA limits causes of action to "applicants."

- Extended Liability. Provisions for extended liability vary somewhat. The FHA explicitly applies to loan purchasers. This means that lenders who participate in the original loan decision are covered, as are lenders who do not participate before the fact but whose decision as to which loans to purchase involves discrimination on a prohibited basis. The ECOA, in contrast, requires in some cases that loan purchasers have knowledge or reasonable notice of the discriminatory actions of the primary lenders. This possible limitation to extended liability in the ECOA is critical only if the loan purchaser is not considered to be a direct creditor in the transaction. Loan purchasers that create financing policies and set credit terms should be held directly liable as creditors for any ECOA violations committed by the primary lenders or others.

- Relief. Relief under both laws is similar with one major difference. Only the ECOA places a cap on punitive damages. Class actions are available under both statutes, but again, the ECOA places a cap on punitive damages in both class and individual cases. Punitive damages are not awarded for FHA administrative claims.

- FHA gives plaintiffs a choice of an administrative or judicial forum.

- Disparate impact should be available as a theory under either law.

- Both laws have two-year statutes of limitations for affirmative claims and both allow defensive actions (recoupment) in certain circumstances. Extending the statute of limitations through the "continuing violation theory" is more established in FHA case law, but this theory should arguably apply to the ECOA as well.

- The ECOA explicitly lists certain creditor defenses.

- Only the ECOA requires creditors to meet certain procedural requirements, such as providing notices of adverse actions and retaining certain records. Violations of these provisions can be raised even in cases where discrimination is not alleged.

[4] Scope of the Federal Civil Rights Acts

The Federal Civil Rights Acts apply to all types of contracts, all types of borrowers or related individuals, and any type of creditor or other type of merchant. n53 42 U.S.C. section 1982 applies to a loan in any way used to purchase or rent property. The statute applies to discrimination engaged in by both state and private action. n54 Section 1982, like the ECOA, does not require that a credit application be denied and may apply if the application was approved but on discriminatory terms or was withdrawn due to discrimination. n55 However, § 1981 only protects persons who have (or sought) rights under a contractual relationship that has been impaired, including parties to the contract and, potentially, third-party beneficiaries of the contract. n56 Unless the person has or would have had some rights under that contract, § 1981 does not provide a remedy, even if the person is the target of discrimination and loses benefits as a result of the contract impairment. Section 1982 plaintiffs must identify injuries flowing from a racially motivated breach of their own--and not of someone else's--contractual relationship. n57

Courts have found that proof of discrimination by disparate impact is not available in federal civil rights cases. Thus, proof of intentional discrimination, whether by direct or circumstantial evidence, is required in these cases. n58

[5] Scope of State Credit Discrimination Statutes

By and large the scope of state credit discrimination statutes follows the scope of the federal statute they are modeled after. Nevertheless, sometimes the scope of a state statute will be broader than the scope of the analogous federal statute and it may prove particularly valuable in those situations.

Because of significant state variations, readers are referred to their applicable state statute to determine the scope of the state credit discrimination statute. Particularly because states continue to make changes to bring their state statutes more in line with the current version of the federal Fair Housing Act and other federal statutes, it is important to examine the most recent version of the state statute. n59

[6] Scope of State UDAP Statutes

Occasionally, a state statute generally prohibiting unfair or deceptive acts or practices (a UDAP statute) may be used to challenge credit discrimination not prohibited by any other statute or a UDAP claim may be useful if a discrimination statute does not provide a sufficient remedy. Nevertheless, various scope issues may limit the applicability of a state UDAP statute to credit discrimination.

State UDAP statutes vary significantly, and this variation is most pronounced concerning scope issues. n60

Some UDAP statutes apply only to the sale of goods and services and there will be an issue as to whether credit (related or unrelated to a sale) involves the sale of goods and services. n61 In other states, the statute applies to trade or commerce, and credit should clearly fall within the statute's coverage. n62

Certain state UDAP statutes do not apply to banks or other creditors regulated by state agencies. n63 There may also be an issue as to whether a UDAP statute applies to debt collection practices (which may be the subject of a credit discrimination action), n64 or offers protections to loan guarantors n65 or businesses. n66

It is important to note that each of these issues applies only to certain UDAP statutes and not to most state UDAP laws. Nevertheless, it is always important before bringing any UDAP claim to review carefully the particular state statute's scope.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityDiscriminatory ActsBanking LawFederal ActsFair Housing & National Housing ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsPublic Health & Welfare LawHousing & Public BuildingsFair HousingReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(d); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(j).

(n2)Footnote 2. Official Staff Commentary § 202.1(a)-1.

(n3)Footnote 3. Official Staff Commentary § 202.1(a)-1. See Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(j)-1. See also Hargraves v. City Mortgage Corp., 147 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2001) (claims of individual plaintiffs who did not receive or apply for credit as individuals, but rather were involved in obtaining the loan for their church, dismissed; the ECOA provides a cause of action for the church, but individuals cannot assert the church's legal interest; § 1981 claims also dismissed because the church, not the individual plaintiffs, was party to the loan contract); Church of Zion Christian Ctr., Inc. v. Southtrust Bank, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12425 (S.D. Ala. July 30, 1997) (individual plaintiffs held not to have standing to bring an ECOA action when loan application was made on behalf of a corporation and plaintiffs never entered into any oral or written agreement with defendants).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Brothers v. First Leasing, 724 F.2d 789 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 832, 105 S. Ct. 121, 83 L. Ed. 2d 63 (1984) (ECOA applies to personal property leases covered by the Consumer Leasing Act [hereinafter CLA]). But see Liberty Leasing Co. v. Machamer, 6 F. Supp. 2d 714 (S.D. Ohio 1998) (equipment lease under which contemporaneous payments were made in exchange for possession of leased equipment was not credit transaction within the scope of ECOA).

(n5)Footnote 5. See generally Fogie v. Thorn Ams., Inc., 95 F.3d 645 (8th Cir. 1996) ; Miller v. Colortyme, Inc., 518 N.W.2d 544 (Minn. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Dunn v. American Express Co., 529 F. Supp. 633 (D. Colo. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Roberts v. Walmart Stores, Inc., 736 F. Supp. 1527 (E.D. Mo. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Robinson v. Veneman, 124 Fed. Appx. 893 (5th Cir. 2005) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Mack Fin. Corp. v. Crossley, 209 Conn. 163, 550 A.2d 303 (1988) ; First N.W. Nat'l Bank v. Crouch, 287 N.W.2d 151 (Iowa 1980) ; Farmers State Bank v. Haflich, 699 P.2d 553, 557 (Kan. 1985) ; U.C.C. §§ 1-102(3), 1-105(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a), (d), (e); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.4, 202.5 (also applies to prospective applicants), 202.6, 202.7, 202.9.

(n11)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(c). See also Official Staff Commentary §§ 202.7(c)(1)-1; 202.7(c)(2)-1. Cf. Miller v. American Express Co., 688 F.2d 1235 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Cragin v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 498 F. Supp. 379 (D. Nev. 1980) .

(n14)Footnote 14. 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(b); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(e).

(n15)Footnote 15. 63 Fed. Reg. 12,326 (Mar. 12, 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,589 (Aug. 16, 1999) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)).

(n18)Footnote 18. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,619 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(f)).

(n19)Footnote 19. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,584-44,585 (Aug. 16, 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 20. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n21)Footnote 21. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) , amending Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)-5.

(n22)Footnote 22. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) . Comment 2(f)-3.

(n23)Footnote 23. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n24)Footnote 24. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(e). The FRB has proposed amending the definition of creditor to make it clear that it also includes one who regularly participates in setting terms of credit, not just in the decision of whether to extend or deny credit.

The final rule adopted this proposal with a few modifications. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The former definition of a creditor was a "person, who, in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in the decision of whether or not to extend credit." The new definition defines a creditor as a person who "regularly participates in a credit decision, including setting the terms of the credit." The new definition was effective April 15, 2003, although the mandatory compliance date was April 15, 2004. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See, e.g., Logsdon v. Dennison Corp., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41501 (C.D. Ill. June 7, 2007) (granting summary judgment for dealer on ECOA claim; court found that "record is devoid of evidence" indicating that the dealer participated in the credit decision although borrower alleged that dealer regularly referred applicants to lenders and because it reviewed credit reports and decided which assignees should receive retail installment contracts"); Barnette v. Brook Road Inc., 457 F. Supp. 2d 647 (E.D. Va. 2006) . See also Stegvilas v. Evergreen Motors, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35303 (N.D. Ill. May 11, 2007) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Eby v. Reb Realty, Inc., 495 F.2d 646 (9th Cir. 1974) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l). See also Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(l)-1. The FRB has proposed amending the Official Staff Commentary to Reg. B to expressly provide that arrangers can include automobile dealers, home builders, and home improvement contractors, and those who solely accept applications. See 64 Fed. Reg. 44,620 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

The Board adopted these changes. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,188 (Mar. 18, 2003) . In the final rules effective April 15, 2003 (mandatory compliance beginning April 15, 2004), the Board changed the description of credit arrangers in the Commentary, from those "who do not participate in credit decisions but who regularly refer applicants to creditors or who select or offer to select creditors to whom credit requests can be made" to those "who do not participate in credit decisions but who only accept applications and refer applicants to creditors, or select or offer to select creditors to whom credit requests can be made." The key changes are emphasized. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) , amending Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2.

The Board illustrated the distinction between credit arrangers and "full" creditors subject to all ECOA provisions. The Board explained that an automobile dealer may accept and refer applications for credit or it may accept applications, perform underwriting, and make decisions regarding the extension of credit. When the dealer only accepts applications for credit and refers those applications to another creditor who makes the credit decisions, the dealer is subject only to the limited provisions of the ECOA listed above. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,155 . A dealer that participates in setting the terms of credit and makes credit decisions is subject to all ECOA provisions.

The Board also expanded the illustrative list of actors that might be considered credit arrangers under this section. Previously, the Commentary mentioned only real estate brokers in this category. Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2. The Commentary now lists real estate brokers, automobile dealers, home builders, and home improvement contractors. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,188 (Mar. 18, 2003) , amending Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2

In a case brought not under the ECOA but under § 1981 of the Civil Rights Act, the Truth In Lending Act, and various other federal and state statutes, a car dealer misrepresented that it would find customers the best available credit. The dealer then referred customers to a lender who, unbeknownst to the customers, paid some of the interest it collected back to the dealer. Fairman v. Schaumberg Toyota, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9669 (N.D. Ill. July 10, 1996) . The defendants unsuccessfully argued that the ECOA should shield them from liability because the statute did not require them to disclose the pay-back scheme. Id.; see also Johnson v. Equicredit Corp. of Am., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4817 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 21, 2002) (plaintiff presented sufficient evidence to state a claim against a mortgage origination company; company could be considered an arranger of credit). See also Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (Jan. 18, 2002) (in denying defendant's motion to dismiss, court held that defendant was a creditor under the ECOA because defendant participated in the credit decision-making process by arriving at an objective credit score for customers and then authorizing the dealers to subjectively mark it up), claim dismissed, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 190902 (June 14, 2002) , later proceeding, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10903 (S.D.N.Y. June 18, 2002) . See also Cochran v. Northeast Mortg., LLC, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61125 (D. Conn. Aug. 21, 2007) (holding that mortgage broker that did not submit plaintiff's loan application to any lenders participated in a credit decision and was a creditor under the ECOA).

(n28)Footnote 28. See 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,594 (Aug. 16, 1999) ; 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See Kivel v. Wealthspring Mortgage Corp., 398 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (D. Minn. 2005) (mortgage broker who participated in setting the terms of the credit arrangements and determined the loan type, loan terms, and interest rate and actively solicited consumers to refinance their property was held to be a "regular" creditor under the ECOA.)

(n29)Footnote 29. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l). Note that the FRB recently considered, but rejected, changes to this rule. See 64 Fed. Reg. 44,590 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n30)Footnote 30. Spottiswoode v. Levine, 1999 Me. 79, 730 A.2d 166 (1999) .

(n31)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g., Robinson v. Schafer, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36900 (M.D. Ga. May 6, 2008) (the ECOA applies to the federal government through the definition of creditor); Chiang v. Schafer, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64654 (D. V.I. Aug. 20, 2008) (United States Dep't of Agric. is a creditor under the ECOA).

(n33)Footnote 33. Pigford v. Glickman, 185 F.R.D. 82 (D.D.C. 1999) (consent decree), aff'd, 206 F.3d 1212, 340 U.S. App. D.C. 420 (2000) . It is estimated that the United States is likely to provide $2 billion in debt relief and monetary payments in consideration for the dismissal of the class complaint. This settlement was challenged by non-African-American farmers in Green v. Veneman, 159 F. Supp. 2d 360 (S.D. Miss. 2001) , aff'd, in part, 46 Fed. Appx. 731 (5th Cir. 2002) . The court in Green upheld the Pigford settlement on the basis that the non-African-American farmers were not similarly situated to the Pigford class members. The consent decree in Pigford allowed class members to choose between two claims procedures. Track A awarded $50,000 to farmers able to meet only minimal burdens of proof of discriminatory treatment or damages. Track B imposed no cap on damages but, after limited discovery, required farmers to prove claims by a preponderance of evidence in one-day mini-trials before an arbitrator. See Pigford v. Veneman, 292 F.3d 918 (D.C. Cir. 2002) . Similar cases alleging discrimination in the USDA farm lending program have also been filed on behalf of Latino farmers, Garcia v. Veneman, No. 00-2445 (D.D.C. filed October 13, 2000), Garcia v. Veneman, 211 F.R.D. 15 (D.D.C. 2002) ; female and other farmers, Love v. Veneman, No. 00-2502 (D.D.C. filed October 19, 2000); Native American farmers, Keepseagle v. Veneman, No. 99-3119 (D.D.C. 2001), In re Veneman, 309 F.3d 789 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (petition for review of District Court's decision to grant class certification for equitable relief only denied); and older farmers, Jones v. Glickman, 42 Fed. Appx. 292 (10th Cir. Kan. 2002) (an individual claim against the USDA based on alleged age discrimination was found to be untimely).

(n34)Footnote 34. See generally Stephen Carpenter, Discrimination in Agricultural Lending, 33 Clearinghouse Rev. 166 (July/Aug. 1999) (includes information on who is eligible for class relief).

(n35)Footnote 35. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3-1. For a more complete discussion of these exemptions, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 2.2.6 (5th ed. 2009).

(n36)Footnote 36. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,595 (Aug. 16, 1999) .

(n37)Footnote 37. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n38)Footnote 38. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3(c). See also Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(b); Official Staff Commentary § 202.3(c).

See, e.g., Mays v. Buckeye Rural Elec. Coop., Inc., 277 F.3d 873 (6th Cir. 2002) (finding no public utilities credit when rural electric cooperative was not required to file rates with any government entity; however, transaction was considered incidental credit and therefore exempt from certain ECOA provisions).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Williams v. AT&T Wireless Servs., Inc., 5 F. Supp. 2d 1142 (W.D. Wash. 1998) (application for cellular telephone service is a credit transaction, but qualifies for the incidental credit exemption to the ECOA notice requirement because it does not involve a credit card account, a finance charge, or installment payments).

(n41)Footnote 41. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,595 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The Board decided not to adopt this proposal in the final rules announced in 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) . In explaining this decision, the Board cited concerns about possible discrimination against minority-owned businesses.

(n42)Footnote 42. 42 U.S.C. § 3605; 24 C.F.R. § 100.115(a). See, e.g., Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cisneros, 52 F.3d 1351, 1357 (1995) (§ 3604 applies to property insurance), reh'g, en banc, denied, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 21068 (6th Cir. Aug. 4, 1995) , mot. granted, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1140 (1996) ; United States v. Yonkers Bd. of Educ., 837 F.2d 1181 (2d Cir. 1987) (applying § 3604 to exclusionary zoning), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1055 (1988) ; Hanson v. Veterans Admin., 800 F.2d 1381 (5th Cir. 1986) (applying § 3604 to discriminatory appraisals); Laufman v. Oakley Bldg. & Loan Co., 408 F. Supp. 489 (S.D. Ohio 1976) (court agreed with plaintiffs that § 3604(a) not only prohibits conduct constituting a refusal to sell or rent, but also conduct that otherwise makes dwellings unavailable; applied in this case to mortgage redlining), later proceeding, 72 F.R.D. 116 (S.D. Ohio 1976) . But see Matthews v. New Century Mortgage Corp., 185 F. Supp. 2d 874 (S.D. Ohio 2002) (transactions involving financial assistance for improving, repairing, or maintaining a dwelling that the owner had previously acquired fall outside the scope of § 3604); Eva v. Midwest Nat'l Mortgage Banc Inc., 143 F. Supp. 2d 862 (N.D. Ohio 2001) (courts have generally stretched § 3604 to address insurance issues; although § 3604 applies beyond the literal sale or rental of housing, not applicable in case involving discrimination based on gender in refinancing loans; court granted creditors' motion to dismiss § 3604 claims, but denied motion to dismiss § 3605 claims); Thomas v. First Fed. Sav. Bank of Ind., 653 F. Supp. 1330 (N.D. Ind. 1987) (redlining practices which affect the availability of housing are actionable under § 3604, redlining practices which affect the availability of financing are more properly brought under § 3605).

(n43)Footnote 43. 24 C.F.R. § l00.125(a). A 2003 U.S. Supreme Court decision addressed the issue of vicarious liability under the FHA. See Meyer v. Holley, 537 U.S. 280, 123 S. Ct. 824, 154 L. Ed. 2d 753 (2003) . Implications of this decision for holding individuals and corporations liable in credit discrimination cases are discussed in National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.3 (4th ed. 2005 and Supp.).

(n44)Footnote 44. 42 U.S.C. § 3604. This includes steering prospective buyers away from particular properties on a prohibited basis. See, e.g., Gladstone Realtors v. Vill. of Bellwood, 441 U.S. 91, 99 S. Ct. 1601 (1979) ; Tillery v. The Darby-Rogers Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 839 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 5, 2006) . See also Lakeside Resort Enters., L.P. v. Board of Supervisors of Palmyra Twp., 455 F.3d 154, 158 (3d Cir. 2006) (describing factors that determine whether a facility is a dwelling for purposes of the Fair Housing Act). But see JAT, Inc. v. National City Bank of Midwest, 460 F. Supp. 2d 812, 819 (E.D. Mich. 2006) (dismissing Fair Housing Act claim when loan transaction did not involve a dwelling).

(n45)Footnote 45. 24 C.F.R. § 100.10(c)(1).

(n46)Footnote 46. 24 C.F.R. § 100.10(c)(2).

(n47)Footnote 47. 42 U.S.C. § 3617.

(n48)Footnote 48. 24 C.F.R. § 100.400.

(n49)Footnote 49. See, e.g., Lapid-Laurel, L.L.C. v. Zoning Bd. Of Adjustment, 284 F.3d 442 (3d Cir. 2002) (parties agreed that ninety-five-bed care facility for the elderly is a "dwelling" under the FHA); Smith & Lee Assocs, Inc. v. Taylor, Mich., 102 F.3d 781 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Town & Country Adult Living, Inc. v. Mt. Kisco, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8519 (S.D.N.Y. May 21, 2003) (assuming the FHA applies to assisted-living residence for disabled senior citizens); U.S. v. Lorantffy Care Ctr., 999 F. Supp. 1037 (N.D. Ohio 1998) .

(n50)Footnote 50. See, e.g., Fair Hous. in Huntington v. Huntington, 316 F.3d 357 (2d Cir. 2003) ; E. Paralyzed Veterans v. Lazarus-Burman Assocs., 133 F. Supp. 2d 203 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) ; U.S. v. Hillhaven Corp., 960 F. Supp. 259 (D. Utah 1997) ; U.S. v. Forest Dale, Inc., 818 F. Supp. 954 (N.D. Tex. 1993) . See generally Robert G. Schwemm & Michael Allen, For the Rest of Their Lives: Seniors and the Fair Housing Act, 90 Iowa L. Rev. 121 (Oct. 2004) (noting that, even though it would seem to be clear that all assisted-living and retirement communities are covered by the FHA, there is a good deal of evidence that providers of such housing often behave as if they are exempt).

(n51)Footnote 51. See, e.g., Lapid-Laurel L.L.C. v. Zoning Bd. Of Adjustment, 284 F.3d 442 (3d Cir. 2002) (parties agreed that a nursing home for the elderly was a "dwelling"); Hovsons, Inc. v. Brick, N.J., 89 F.3d 1096 (3d Cir. 1996) ; Caron v. Pawtucket, 307 F. Supp. 2d 364 (D.R.I. 2004) ; U.S. v. Puerto Rico, 764 F. Supp. 220 (D. P.R. 1991) . See generally Robert G. Schwemm & Michael Allen, For the Rest of Their Lives: Seniors and the Fair Housing Act, 90 Iowa L. Rev. 121 (Oct. 2004).

(n52)Footnote 52. 15 U.S.C § 1691e(i). See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.5.2 (5th ed. 2009). For further discussion of differences between the ECOA and the FHA, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 2.7 (5th ed. 2009).

(n53)Footnote 53. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c). See Graham v. Richardson, 403 U.S. 365, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534 (1971) .

(n54)Footnote 54. Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co., 392 U.S. 409, 88 S. Ct. 2186, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1189, 47 Ohio Op. 2d 43 (1968) .

(n55)Footnote 55. See JAT, Inc. v. National City Bank of the Midwest, 460 F. Supp. 2d 812 (E.D. Mich. 2006) .

(n56)Footnote 56. See Domino's Pizza, Inc. v. McDonald, 126 S. Ct. 1246 (2006) ; id. at 1249 n.3 (declining to affirm or exclude the possibility that third-party intended beneficiaries of a contract have rights under § 1981).

(n57)Footnote 57. See id.

(n58)Footnote 58. See, e.g., Gen. Bldg. Contractors Ass'n v. Penn., 458 U.S. 375 (1982) ; Duran v. Cmty. First Bankshares, Inc., 92 Fed. Appx. 756, (10th Cir. 2004) ; Guides, Ltd. V. Yarmouth Group Prop. Mgmt., Inc., 295 F.3d 1065 (10th Cir. 2002) ; Jiang v. Allstate Ins. Co., 199 F.R.D. 267 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (a case for disparate impact discrimination under § 1981 and § 1982 will not lie).

(n59)Footnote 59. See also National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, App. F (5th ed. 2009) for summary of state credit discrimination statutes.

(n60)Footnote 60. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (7th ed. 2008 and supp.). A general analysis of UDAP scope issues is found in Ch. 4 supra . This section briefly lists only some of the possible scope problems found in some state UDAP statutes.

(n61)Footnote 61. See Ch. 4.04 supra ; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.1.2 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n62)Footnote 62. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.1.4 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n63)Footnote 63. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.1.3 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n64)Footnote 64. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.2.2 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n65)Footnote 65. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.4.3 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n66)Footnote 66. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.4.5 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.03

§ 5.03 Prohibited Bases for Discrimination

[1] When Is Discrimination on a Prohibited Basis?

Discrimination is prohibited if there is a linkage between the discrimination and the prohibited basis, so that the creditor's decision-making process results in individuals being treated differently because of a prohibited basis. This is called "disparate treatment."

Of course, in practice, it is often difficult to prove that a decision was made on a prohibited basis and not based on some other permissible factor. The creditor will almost always present a legitimate business justification for its actions. The disparate treatment case will then center on whether the stated reason for the creditor's adverse action was the real basis, or was it a mere pretext for discrimination on a prohibited basis.

The issue in a disparate treatment case is not whether the stated reason for the creditor's conduct is a compelling one or even one that makes any sense at all. The issue is whether it is the real reason. If it is the real reason, there is no disparate treatment. If the creditor's actions in practice were not based on the stated reason, but on a prohibited basis, there is disparate treatment, no matter how essential the stated reason is to the creditor's business.

The plaintiff need not prove the creditor used a prohibited basis knowingly, only that the prohibited basis in fact was a factor in the creditor's conduct--that the stated business justification was not the real or sole reason.

Sometimes the plaintiff will have direct evidence that the real reason is on a prohibited basis. Other times, the plaintiff will have to present circumstantial evidence. The plaintiff could show, for example, that the creditor did not apply the same standards to other similarly situated applicants--that the supposed business justification was applied differently to other applicants.

If a creditor does not engage in disparate treatment, the creditor's conduct can still be challenged under the ECOA and FHA for its disparate impact. If the stated business justification for a practice is, in fact, the real basis for the creditor's conduct, this may still be illegal if the business justification has a disparate impact on protected groups.

[2] The Effects Test

The effects test is a judicial doctrine that was developed in a series of employment cases decided by the Supreme Court under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. n1 The test is not available to litigants using federal civil rights claims under 42 U.S.C sections 1981 or 1982 (which require a showing of intentional discrimination), but it is for actions under the Federal FHA.

Moreover, the FRB has explicitly held that Congress intended to apply the "effects test" used in Title VII employment discrimination cases to the ECOA. n2 Most federal courts have reached a similar conclusion. n3 The Seventh Circuit, without referring to the FRB's authoritative position, has rejected the effects test in favor of traditional methods of proof. n4 Courts should use the "effects test" in any action under a state statute patterned after the FHA or the ECOA.

The effects test prohibits even unintentional discrimination if the practice has the effect of discriminating on a prohibited basis. In disparate impact cases, the business justification is taken as a given, and the issue is whether this is a sufficient reason for an adverse action where the application of the business justification has the side-effect of treating protected classes adversely.

The first element of the effects test is that the business justification have a disproportionately negative disparate impact on a protected class. If this can be shown, then the case will be decided by the legitimate business necessity for the practice and whether alternatives with less disparate impact are available to achieve the legitimate business purpose.

[3] The Prohibited Bases

[a] Race and Color

Race and color are prohibited bases under the ECOA, the FHA, the Federal Civil Rights Acts, and most state credit discrimination legislation. n5 Native Americans (Indians) are a protected race. n6 Discrimination against whites violates the ECOA as well. n7 Racial discrimination may be against Caucasian groups, such as Arabs, Jews, and Hispanics. n8 Members of other ethnic groups, such as Italian-Americans, have also successfully asserted claims. n9

[b] Religion, Creed, Political Affiliation

Religion is a prohibited basis for discrimination under the ECOA, the Federal FHA, and most state credit discrimination statutes. The only exception under the ECOA is that creditors may favor applicants of a particular religion only when offering a special purpose credit program meeting the standards set out in Regulation B. n10 While the Federal Civil Right Acts do not prohibit discrimination on the basis of religion, they have been interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court as prohibiting discrimination on the basis of such ethnic groups as Arabs and Jews. n11

Creed might be a broader standard than religion because a creed could be a set of fundamental beliefs, not necessarily religious beliefs. While federal discrimination laws do not list creed as a prohibited basis, a number of state credit discrimination statutes do, n12 and at least one state (Iowa) lists political affiliation as a prohibited basis.

[c] National Origin

National origin is a prohibited basis under the ECOA, n13 the Federal FHA, n14 and most state credit discrimination statutes. While the Federal Civil Right Acts do not explicitly prohibit discrimination on the basis of national origin, they have been interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court as prohibiting discrimination on the basis of such ethnic groups as Arabs and Jews. Nevertheless, only citizens are given rights to utilize 42 U.S.C. section 1982. On the other hand, noncitizens are protected by 42 U.S.C. section 1981, n15 so that noncitizens could bring actions under that statute for discrimination based on their ethnic origin.

The prohibition prevents discrimination because an individual comes from a particular country, n16 because an individual was born outside of the United States, or because an individual does not speak English. n17 In 1999, the Justice Department ("DOJ") sued Associates National Bank ("ANB") for alleged discrimination against Hispanics in its credit card operations. n18 The DOJ alleged that ANB coded Spanish-language applications as "Hispanic" and maintained those accounts in a separate sub-file. The complaint alleged further that ANB lowered the credit score cutoff level and increased the credit lines for English-language applicants, but did not adopt those changes for Spanish-language applicants. As a result, some Spanish language applicants were denied credit and others were given low credit limits.

Granting credit on less preferable terms on the basis of language ability may also constitute discrimination or "reverse redlining" on the basis of national origin. n19 For example, the DOJ sued one bank for allegedly using stricter underwriting standards, resulting in less favorable credit terms to applicants who submitted credit card applications in Spanish. n20 Creditors who exploit the vulnerability of limited-English speakers, targeting them for abusive credit terms, may be liable for claims of discrimination as well as claims for unfair or deceptive trade practices. n21

[d] Immigration Status

For purposes of the ECOA, a denial of credit to a non-United States citizen is not per se discrimination. A creditor may consider the applicant's residency status in the United States, the applicant's immigration status, and other information necessary to determine the creditor's rights and remedies in case of default. n22

Section 1981 of the Federal Civil Rights Acts should apply to discrimination against aliens. The Supreme Court has ruled that section 1981 applies not only to discrimination based on race, but also to discrimination based on an individual not being a United States citizen. n23

Credit discrimination against immigrants occurs frequently and often overtly, especially in mortgage lending. n24 Non-citizens who are not lawful permanent residents generally may be subject to heightened requirements to obtain mortgage loans, such as higher down payments and additional documentation requirements. n25 They may be unable to obtain loans that conform to secondary market requirements and required to pay higher interest rates. n26

Addressing credit discrimination against immigrants under the ECOA and FHA is complicated. A more promising alternative may be an action under the Federal Civil Rights Act.

[e] Sex

An applicant's sex is a prohibited basis for credit discrimination under the ECOA, the Federal FHA, and many state credit discrimination statutes, but not the Federal Civil Rights Acts. n27

The FHA prohibits discrimination on the basis of familial status, and this includes discrimination against someone who is pregnant. Similarly, the ECOA provides certain specific protections for women against creditor inquiries or credit decisions based on an individual's child bearing or rearing intentions, including intentions as to maternity leave. The ECOA also prohibits creditors from considering whether a telephone is listed in the applicant's name.

Prohibited sex discrimination may also be based on differential treatment of income sources traditionally associated with women. Sex discrimination may also take the form of discrimination based on sexually-defined occupations.

Sex discrimination may also take the form of discrimination against applicants who do not conform to gender-specific stereotypes or behave in gender-specific ways. For example, a sex discrimination claim under the ECOA was allowed to proceed against a bank that refused to allow a man who dressed in "feminine" clothing to apply for credit. n28 Thus, the prohibition against sex discrimination may also cover discrimination based on sexual orientation or transgender identity if the animus is based upon the applicant's failing to appear or act "like a man/woman." n29 Rhode Island prohibits discrimination based upon an applicant's gender identity or expression. n30

[f] Familial Status

The FHA lists familial status as a prohibited basis for credit discrimination. n31 This basis is not found in the ECOA or Federal Civil Rights Acts or most state credit discrimination legislation, although a number of state statutes do list familial status (or being pregnant) as a prohibited basis. Some forms of familial status discrimination may be challenged under the ECOA as discrimination based on sex or marital status.

Generally, the FHA prohibition on discrimination based on familial status prohibits creditors from discriminating against those with or without children or who are pregnant or who become legal custodians of children. The FHA regulations define familial status as a parent, legal custodian, or designee of such person having one or more children under the age of 18 domiciled with them. n32

Familial status also includes being pregnant or in the process of gaining legal custody of a child under 18 years of age. n33 Thus, discrimination against a family that takes in foster children should be discrimination under the FHA. n34 This prohibition does not apply to certain housing for the elderly. n35

[g] Marital Status

Marital status is a prohibited basis under the ECOA n36 and many state credit discrimination statutes, n37 but not under the FHA (which includes "familial status" as a prohibited basis) or the Federal Civil Rights Acts. Creditors are required to treat married and unmarried applicants using the same standards unless otherwise permitted or required by law. n38 Generally, marital status as a prohibited basis includes any discrimination against an individual because that individual is single, divorced, separated, married, or widowed. The prohibition against marital status discrimination prevents creditors from favoring married couples over unmarried couples in evaluating applicants for joint credit. n39 However, a government-authorized special purpose credit program is permitted to favor married couples over unmarried couples. n40 In addition, a creditor is permitted to consider whether alimony or another protected source of income has been consistently paid. n41

Creditors are required to treat married and unmarried applicants using the same standards unless otherwise permitted or required by law. n42 Some of the exceptions permitted by law are discussed at the end of this chapter.

The prohibition against marital status discrimination prevents creditors from favoring married couples over unmarried couples in evaluating applicants for joint credit. n43 However, a government-authorized special purpose credit program is permitted to favor married couples over unmarried couples. n44

In recent years, the FTC has had two large settlements involving marital status discrimination and violations of the notice provisions of the ECOA. In United States v. Franklin Acceptance Corp., the DOJ simultaneously filed a complaint and consent decree pursuant to the FTC's negotiation of an $800,000 settlement, the largest civil penalty settlement obtained up to that time for alleged violations of the ECOA. n45

The FTC alleged that Franklin violated the ECOA by discriminating against applicants: 1) on the basis of sex and marital status by failing to consider child support payments as part of the applicant's income; 2) on the basis of marital status by failing to combine the income of unmarried co-applicants while combining the incomes of married co-applicants; 3) on the basis of marital status by requiring a married applicant to have his/her spouse and not any other person co-sign a loan when required; and 4) when the applicant's income was derived from public assistance, by failing to consider the public assistance as income. The complaint also alleged that Franklin did not provide the adverse action notice required by the ECOA and the Fair Credit Reporting Act ("FCRA"). In addition to paying $800,000 in civil penalties, Franklin was enjoined from violating provisions of the ECOA and FCRA in the future.

In the second case, the FTC settled with Ford Motor Credit Co., the auto financing subsidiary of Ford Motor Company, for $650,000 in December 1999. n46 The FTC alleged that from May 1994 to August 1995, Ford violated the ECOA by combining incomes for married applicants but not for unmarried joint applicants, resulting in unmarried applicants obtaining credit on less favorable terms compared to their married counterparts.

[h] Sexual Orientation

None of the federal credit discrimination statutes mention sexual orientation as a prohibited basis. In some cases, discrimination based on sexual orientation may be challenged as discrimination based on marital or familial status. More importantly, several state credit discrimination statutes specifically list sexual orientation as a prohibited basis, n47 and there seems to be a trend toward state credit discrimination statutes being amended to list such a prohibited basis. On May 15, 2001, Maryland enacted a new law adding sexual orientation as prohibited basis in its fair housing and public accommodations laws (but not its credit discrimination statute). n48 The law takes effect October 1, 2001. There are also a number of municipalities that have included sexual orientation in their credit discrimination ordinances. The Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund has a list of these municipalities on its website at www.lambdalegal.org.

Regulation B prohibits creditors from favoring married couples over unmarried couples in evaluating applicants for joint credit, which should protect same-sex joint applications. In states that permit same-sex marriage, there could be a potential argument that discrimination against same-sex couples is gender discrimination. If a creditor will grant a loan to a married couple consisting of a man and a woman but not a couple consisting of a man and a man, then the creditor is denying the loan because one of the applicants is not a woman.

[i] Age

The ECOA n49 and a number of state credit discrimination laws n50 list age as a prohibited basis; the FHA and Civil Rights Acts do not. While the ECOA lists age as a prohibited basis, in practice, the ECOA mainly prohibits discrimination against the elderly.

There are several important exceptions to the general rule against discrimination on the basis of age. First, the creditor may consider the applicant's age to determine if the applicant is too young under state law to enter into a binding contract. n51 Second, a creditor may consider the age of an applicant 62 years old or older in order to give favorable treatment or more favorable credit terms to that applicant. n52

[j] Handicapped Status

The ECOA does not list handicapped status as a prohibited basis for discrimination, although, in some cases, the protections for an applicant's age and public assistance status may prove helpful. The Federal Civil Rights Acts also do not list handicapped status as a prohibited basis. The FHA, on the other hand, and many state credit discrimination statutes n53 directly prohibit credit discrimination based on an applicant's handicapped status, some using the phrase "disability" rather than handicapped.

Handicap is defined in HUD's Fair Housing regulations as a physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more major life activities, having a record of such impairment, or being considered as having such an impairment. n54

It is not enough to have an impairment. The handicap also must substantially limit one or more major life activities, such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, or working. n55

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) provides another avenue to combat credit discrimination involving applicants with disabilities or handicaps, especially for non-housing financing cases. n56 Title III of the ADA prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability by places of public accommodation, n57 which are defined to include banks, retailers, and other service establishments. n58

Furthermore, credit transactions should be covered under the scope of Title III of the ADA. Title III prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability in the full enjoyment of "goods, services, facilities, or privileges." n59 Most of the courts that have considered whether the ADA applies to credit transactions have held that it does. n60

The ADA prohibits the imposition or application of eligibility criteria that screen out or tend to screen out individuals with disabilities and prevent them from fully and equally enjoying any goods, services, facilities, or privileges, unless such criteria can be shown to be necessary for the provision of the goods, services, facilities, or privileges being offered. n61 Another provision requires places of public accommodation to provide auxiliary devices to ensure effective communication with the public. n62 The ADA also prohibits unnecessary inquiries about disabilities. n63

The remedies for private plaintiffs under the ADA are limited to injunctive relief and attorney fees. Congress did not provide for compensatory relief in private rights of actions for violations of Title III of the ADA. n64 However, private plaintiffs might be able to seek monetary relief under certain state UDAP statutes, that is, statutes prohibiting unfair or deceptive marketplace conduct. n65

In addition to directly prohibiting discrimination on the basis of disability, the FHA also provides that a refusal to make a reasonable accommodation for a disabled person is a form of discrimination. n66 Reasonable accommodation can involve either physical access modifications or accommodations in rules, policies, practices or services. n67 Thus, a lender could be required to make an exception to its rules or policies in order to reasonably accommodate a disabled applicant. n68

Several state Fair Housing Acts and the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA") consider persons with AIDS or with HIV to be disabled or handicapped. n69 Another possible avenue to deal with credit discrimination involving handicapped applicants involves the ADA. n70

[k] Public Assistance Status

The ECOA lists as a prohibited basis that "all or part of the applicant's income derives from any public assistance program." n71 This is not found in the Federal FHA or in Civil Rights Acts, and is only infrequently found as a basis in state credit legislation. n72 The DOJ recently sued a credit card lender for, among other things, discouraging applicants who received public assistance income and offering them less favorable terms than similarly qualified applicants who do not receive public assistance income. n73

[l] Good Faith Exercise of Consumer Credit Protection Act, Other Legal Rights

A prohibited basis under the ECOA is the applicant's good faith exercise of Consumer Credit Protection Act ("CCPA") rights. n74 One court has held that to make out a prima facie case of retaliation, a consumer must allege facts sufficient to show that he or she engaged in a statutorily protected activity and suffered an adverse credit action, and that there is a causal connection between the two (a retaliatory motive). n75 Another Court of Appeals characterized the prima facie test as requiring plaintiffs to show that they (1) exercised in good faith (2) a right under the Consumer Credit Protection Act and (3) as a result, the creditor discriminated against them with respect to the credit transaction. n76 This basis is not available under either the Fair Housing or Civil Rights Acts or under state credit discrimination legislation. A few state statutes list exercise of rights under state credit legislation as a prohibited basis, n77 and the FHA prohibits retaliating against any person because that person has made a complaint, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in a proceeding under the FHA. n78 Exercise of rights could also potentially include an applicant's refusal to agree to an arbitration clause that would deprive the applicant of certain rights and remedies provisions by various

CCPA statutes, such as the right to file a case in District Court or to seek class relief under ECOA or TILA. n79

Several of the statutes that comprise the CCPA create good faith or bona fide error defenses for creditors. n80 Cases interpreting these provisions are not likely to provide useful guidance in interpreting the ECOA's standard of good faith exercise of CCPA rights, however. First, the context is very different. In addition, these statutory defenses include specific elements that the creditor must establish, such as the maintenance of reasonable procedures to prevent errors, that are irrelevant to the question whether a consumer asserted CCPA rights in good faith.

[m] Other Prohibited Bases

If discrimination does not involve one of these listed prohibited bases, the consumer has three other strategies to show the discrimination to be actionable. First, does the basis for credit discrimination have a disparate impact on a protected class? For example, if credit is based on the income level of the applicant's zip code, does this have a disparate impact on minorities, even though the income level of the zip code is not itself a prohibited basis?

Second, look to other, usually specialized state or federal legislation that may prohibit discrimination on the basis utilized. n81 Finally, even if no state or federal statute prohibits a form of credit discrimination, the discrimination may still be actionable under a state UDAP statute, particularly a statute that prohibits unfair or unconscionable, and not just deceptive, practices.

[n] Discrimination and the Digital Divide

A growing practice that is sure to have a disparate impact on protected classes is the offering of preferential or exclusive credit terms to consumers who apply on-line. n82 A recent report by the Department of Commerce indicates that the so-called "digital divide," i.e., the gap between individuals who have Internet access and those without access, is even greater for most racial and ethnic minorities, the elderly, the disabled, and low income individuals. n83 Therefore, a creditor who offers "Internet-only" deals is disproportionately excluding racial and ethnic minorities, the elderly, the disabled, and probably public assistance recipients. n84

Such practices could be challenged under Regulation B's prohibition against advertising that discourages prospective applicants on a prohibited basis. n85 For housing finance, such practices could also be challenged under the FHA. n86 In particular, the FHA could be used to challenge housing finance programs on the Internet that exclude the disabled, given the FHA's requirement of reasonable accommodation. n87 For example, an "Internet-only" mortgage program might effectively exclude all visually impaired prospective applicants. n88

[4] ECOA Prohibited Bases Do Not Apply to Special Purpose Credit Programs

ECOA Regulation B sets out an exception to the general rule prohibiting discrimination on these prohibited bases for "special purpose credit programs," which may require that program participants share a common characteristic, such as race, national origin, or sex. n89 This exception does not apply to a FHA claim or a Federal Civil Rights Act claim.

A creditor does not violate the ECOA by denying credit solely because the applicant fails to qualify under the requirements of a "special purpose" credit program, provided that the program was not established for the purpose of evading the ECOA and that it fits into one of the following categories: n90

- A credit assistance program offered to benefit an economically disadvantaged class.

- A credit assistance program administered by a not-for-profit organization (as defined by I.R.S. Code section 501(c)) for its members or for an economically disadvantaged class; or

- A special purpose credit program offered by a for-profit organization to meet "special social needs." n91

A special purpose credit program is exempt only to the extent necessary to carry out the program. n92 For non-governmental special credit programs, a creditor may only require applicants to share those factors inextricably tied to the need being addressed. n93 For non-governmental special credit purpose programs, the most important limitation is that once the program is set up, it must not discriminate on a prohibited basis within that group. n94

[5] Protected Characteristics May Apply to Those Associated With Applicant

Prohibited credit discrimination under the ECOA may be based not only on the characteristics of the applicant, but also may extend to discrimination based on the characteristics of the applicant's partners, its officers, in the case of a corporate applicant, and the individuals with whom the applicant affiliates or with whom an applicant associates. n95 Thus, the ECOA prevents discrimination in the offering of credit based on race, religion, sex, or other characteristics of those with whom the applicant deals or those who will benefit if the applicant obtains the credit.

The same rule applies in FHA and Civil Rights Act cases. The plaintiff need not be a member of a protected class as long as consideration of a prohibited basis injured the plaintiff. In fact, the FHA scope is broader than the ECOA, and anyone in any way aggrieved by discriminatory credit practices can bring an action. n96 The plaintiff need not even be a credit applicant.

Under the ECOA, on the other hand, the extension for discrimination based on characteristics of those affiliated or related to the applicant is not unlimited. The ECOA does not provide a basis for a plaintiff associated with the applicant to challenge the discrimination suffered by the applicant, but not by the plaintiff. The ECOA generally only provides remedies to those who apply for credit, not those affiliated with those who apply. For example, the ECOA would only provide a remedy for the landlord and not black tenants, where the landlord was denied a loan to fix up the apartment because of the tenants' race.

The general ECOA rule that a creditor may not discriminate against an applicant because of individuals the applicant is related to is at least true where the discrimination is based on the race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, or age of those with whom the applicant deals. It is unclear whether this "associational" protection extends to the remaining two categories--receipt of public assistance and good faith exercise of rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)Protected PartiesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(a) n.2. Specific cases which served as models for the effects test were Griggs v. Duke Power Co., 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (1971) , and Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody, 422 U.S. 405, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1975) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Mercado-Garcia v. Ponce Fed. Bank, 979 F.2d 890 (1st Cir. 1992) ; Bhandari v. First Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 808 F.2d 1082 (5th Cir. 1987) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 829 F.2d 1343 (5th Cir. 1987) (en banc), vacated and remanded, 492 U.S. 901, 109 S. Ct. 3207, 106 L. Ed. 2d 558 , reinstated, 887 F.2d 609 (5th Cir.

1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1539, 108 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1990) ; Buycks-Roberson v. Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank, 162 F.R.D. 322 (N.D. Ill. 1995) ; Moore v. United States Dep't of Agric., 857 F. Supp. 507 (W.D. La. 1994) ; Gross v. United States Small Bus. Admin., 669 F. Supp. 50 (N.D.N.Y. 1987) , aff'd per curiam, 867 F.2d 1423 (2d Cir. 1988) ; Williams v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 554 F. Supp. 447 (N.D.N.Y. 1981) , aff'd per curiam, 697 F.2d 302 (2d Cir. 1982) ; Cherry v. Amoco Oil Co., 490 F. Supp. 1026 (N.D. Ga. 1980) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Latimore v. Citibank F.S.B., 151 F.3d 712 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(z); 24 C.F.R. § 100.110(b); 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982. In its 2003 revisions, the FRB decided not to lift the ban on inquiring about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex, as it had proposed. Instead, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The Board did adopt new § 202.6(b)(9) emphasizing that, except as otherwise permitted or required by law, a creditor may not consider race, color, religion, national origin, or sex (or an applicant's decision not to provide such information) in any aspect of a credit transaction. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,150 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Stuart v. First Sec. Bank, 15 P.3d 1198 (Mont. 2000) ; Davis v. Strata Corp., 242 F. Supp. 2d 643 (D.N.D. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Moore v. United States Dep't of Agric., ex rel. Farmer's Home Admin., 993 F.2d 1222 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Rodriguez v. Beechmont Bus Serv., 173 F. Supp. 2d 139 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (Hispanic employee allowed to bring racial discrimination claim, but not national origin discrimination claim, under § 1981); Cantu v. Nocona Hills Owners Ass'n, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11010 (N.D. Tex. July 30, 2001) (Mexican-American plaintiff permitted to bring § 1981 claim as a racial minority), summ. judg. granted, dismissed, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 580 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 10, 2002) . The FRB proposed adding § 202.6(b)(9) to emphasize that a creditor may not consider race, color, religion, national origin, or sex to determine an applicant's creditworthiness, except as permitted by law, nor may a creditor consider an applicant's decision not to provide the information. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,597 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The FRB also proposed adding § 202.5(a)(4), which would prohibit a creditor from requiring an applicant to supply information about race, color, religion, national origin, or sex unless otherwise permitted or allowed by law, and would require a creditor who seeks such information to disclose to the applicant that providing the information is voluntary, and that neither the information nor the decision not to provide the information will be taken into account in any aspect of the credit transaction. Id. The provision would conform to the FRB's proposal to lift the ban on inquiring about such characteristics. See Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(z); 24 C.F.R. § 100.110(b); 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982. In addition, the FRB proposed a new § 202.4(d) that would require this disclosure, and some others required by Reg. B, to be in writing, in a clear and conspicuous manner, and in a form the applicant can retain. Id. In its 2003 revisions, the FRB decided not to lift the ban on inquiring about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex, as it had proposed. Instead, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The Board did adopt new § 202.6(b)(9) emphasizing that, except as otherwise permitted or required by law, a creditor may not consider race, color, religion, national origin, or sex (or an applicant's decision not to provide such information) in any aspect of a credit transaction. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Bisciglia v. Kenosha Unified Sch. Dist. No. 1, 45 F.3d 223 (7th Cir. 1995) (Italian-Americans may state § 1981 claim as they may be considered members of a race protected against discrimination); Donaire v. NME Hosp., 27 F.3d 507 (11th Cir. 1994) (Filipino-Americans considered a protected class under § 1981). But see King v. Township of E. Lampeter, 17 F. Supp. 2d 394 (E.D. Pa. 1998) , aff'd per curiam, 182 F.3d 903 (3d Cir.) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 951, 120 S. Ct. 373, 145 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1999) (Amish are not a protected group under § 1981 as they are a religious, and not an ethnic, group).

(n10)Footnote 10. In its 2003 revisions, the Board decided not to lift the ban on inquiring about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex. Instead, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See note 5 supra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 5.5.4 (3d ed. and Supp.), for a summary of the changes as adopted by the Board.

(n11)Footnote 11. Shaare Tefila Congregation v. Cobb, 481 U.S. 615, 107 S. Ct. 2019, 95 L. Ed. 2d 594 (1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 24-34-502 (housing financing); Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 4604 (fair housing act); Iowa Code Ann. § 216.8A (housing financing); La. Rev. Stat. § 51:2254 (real estate financing); Md. Com. Law Code Ann. § 12-113; Md. Com. Law. Code Ann. § 12-305; Md. Ann. Code Art. 49B, § 22 (housing financing). For a more complete list of these state statutes, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 3.5.2 National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 3.3.2 (3d ed).

(n13)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a)(1); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(z).

(n14)Footnote 14. 24 C.F.R. § 100.110(b).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Graham v. Richardson, 403 U.S. 365, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534 (1971) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(z)-2.

(n17)Footnote 17. 12 C.F.R. § 571.24(c)(2). Note that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's [hereinafter EEOC] guidelines also state that a blanket English-only workplace rule may constitute national origin discrimination. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7. However, the EEOC has received mixed reactions amongst the federal courts to this guideline. Compare EEOC v. Premier Operator Servs., 113 F. Supp. 2d 1066 (N.D. Tex. 2000) (upholding EEOC guideline) with Garcia v. Spun Steak Co., 998 F.2d 1480 (9th Cir. 1993) (rejecting EEOC guidelines and holding that an English-only rule does not create adverse impact prohibited by Title VII), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1228, 114 S. Ct. 2726, 129 L. Ed. 2d 849 (1994) .

(n18)Footnote 18. United States v. Associates Nat'l Bank, Civ. No. 99-196 (D. Del. Mar. 29, 1999) (available at http://www.usdoj.gov [complaint]). Associates National Bank [hereinafter ANB] settled this lawsuit in January 2001 by agreeing to establish a $1.5 million fund to compensate Hispanic applicants and cardholders affected by the allegedly discriminatory practices. The settlement did not contain any injunctive relief. United States. v. Associates Nat'l Bank, No. 99-196 (D.Del. 2001) (settlement agreement), available at www.usdoj.gov (March 2001). The DOJ also sued a credit card lender for, among other things, having a policy of denying credit to applicants based on inability to read and understand English. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n19)Footnote 19. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, Chapter 8 (5th ed. 2009) for a discussion of reverse redlining.

(n20)Footnote 20. U.S. v. Assocs. Nat'l Bank, Clearinghouse No. 53,524, Civ. No. 99-196 (D. Del. Jan. 8, 2001), available at www.usdoj.gov. This lawsuit was settled with Associates National Bank agreeing to establish a $1.5 million fund to compensate Hispanic applicants and cardholders affected by the allegedly discriminatory practices. Id.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Gallegos v. Rizza Chevrolet, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18060 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 9, 2003) (Hispanic consumer alleged ECOA violation by auto dealer who took advantage of consumer's limited English abilities by intentionally deceiving him into signing a lease agreement instead of a retail installment contract; motion to dismiss denied); Complaint, Hua Bai v. Bob Wondries Assoc., Case No. BC286661 (Cal. Super. Ct. complaint filed Dec. 10, 2002) (monolingual Chinese speakers targeted for predatory auto loans; complaint alleges violation of California consumer protection and discrimination laws). See generally, National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 5.2.1 (5th ed. 2001 and Supp.).

(n22)Footnote 22. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(7). See also Bhandari v. First Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 808 F.2d 1082 (5th Cir. 1987) (denial of credit to all aliens not an ECOA violation), rev'd in part on other grounds, 829 F.2d 1343 (5th Cir. 1987) (en banc), vacated and remanded, 492 U.S. 901, 109 S. Ct. 3207, 106 L. Ed. 2d 558 , reinstated, 887 F.2d 609 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1539, 108 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1990) ; Hanna v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, 281 Cal. Rptr. 857 (Ct. App. 1991) (credit refusal based on lack of citizenship is not national origin discrimination).

(n23)Footnote 23. Takahashi v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 334 U.S. 410, 68 S. Ct. 1138, 92 L. Ed. 1478 (1948) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See generally Charu A. Chandrasekhar, Can New Americans Achieve the American Dream? Promoting Homeownership in Immigrant Communities, 39 Harvard C.R.-C.L. L. Rev. 169 (2004).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Jennifer S. Cowley, More Paperwork, Higher Interest: Nonpermanent Residents Face Stricter Mortgage Requirements, Tierra Grande, Oct. 2000, available at http://recenter.tamu.edu/pdf/1430.pdf (describing examples of mortgage requirements for non-permanent resident immigrants).

(n26)Footnote 26. Id.

(n27)Footnote 27. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a)(1); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.4, 202.2(z).

The FRB has proposed adding § 202.6(b)(9) to emphasize that a creditor may not consider race, color, religion, national origin or sex to determine an applicant's creditworthiness, except as permitted by law, nor may a creditor consider an applicant's decision not to provide the information. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,597 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The FRB also proposed adding § 202.5(a)(4), which would prohibit a creditor from requiring an applicant to supply information about race, color, religion, national origin, or sex unless otherwise permitted or allowed by law, and would require a creditor who seeks such information to disclose to the applicant that providing the information is voluntary, and that neither the information nor the decision not to provide the information will be taken into account in any aspect of the credit transaction. Id. The provision would conform with the FRB's proposal to lift the ban on inquiring about such characteristics. In addition, the FRB has proposed a new § 202.4(d) that would require that disclosure, and some others required by Reg. B, to be in writing, in a clear and conspicuous manner, and in a form the applicant can retain. Id. In its 2003 revisions, the Board decided not to lift the ban on inquiring about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex. Instead the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See note 5 supra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 5.5.4 (3d ed. and Supp.), for a summary of the changes as adopted by the Board.

(n28)Footnote 28. Rosa v. Park W. Bank & Trust, 214 F.3d 213, 216 (1st Cir. 2000) (noting that stereotyped remarks about dressing in a more feminine or masculine manner can be evidence of gender bias).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Centola v. Potter, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1504 (D. Mass. Jan. 29, 2002) ; Enriquez v. West Jersey Health Sys., 777 A.2d 365 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2001) , certification denied, 170 N.J. 211 (2001) .

(n30)Footnote 30. R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 34-37-4(b) (housing financing), § 34-37-4.3.

(n31)Footnote 31. 24 C.F.R. § 100.110(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. 24 C.F.R. § 100.20; see Glover v. Crestwood Lake Section 1 Holding Corp., 746 F. Supp. 301 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) . Note that the FHA contains an exemption which states that occupancy limits per se do not violate the FHA. 42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(1). However, this exemption is to be narrowly construed, and occupancy limits cannot be based upon the familial relationships (or lack thereof) of the occupants. City of Edmonds v. Oxford House, 514 U.S.

725, 115 S. Ct. 1776, 131 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1995) . For example, an occupancy limit which applies only to unrelated persons is not permitted under the FHA. Id. Occupancy limits based upon the number of children also are prohibited. State Civ. Rights Comm'n v. County Line Park, Inc., 738 N.E.2d 1044 (Ind. 2000) ; see also Kelly v. Secretary, U.S. HUD, 3 F.3d 951, 952 (6th Cir. 1993) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 24 C.F.R. § 100.20.

(n34)Footnote 34. See Gorski v. Troy, 929 F.2d 1183 (7th Cir. 1991) . However, familial status does not include a group home consisting solely of children unless the caretakers of the children actually live with them in the home. Keys Youth Servs. v. City of Olathe, 248 F.3d 1267 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See 24 C.F.R. § 100.300. See, e.g., Massaro v. Mainlands Section 1 & 2 Civic Ass'n, 3 F.3d 1472 (11th Cir 1993) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 808, 115 S. Ct. 56, 130 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1994) .

(n36)Footnote 36. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(z).

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 18.80.240; Alaska Stat. § 18.80.250; Ark. Stat. Ann. §§ 4-87-101 et seq.; Cal. Civil Code § 1812.30; Cal. §§ 35800 et seq.(Health & Safety Code); Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-1-109 (Colorado Consumer Credit Code).

(n38)Footnote 38. 12 C.F.R. § 202.(b)(6)(8), added by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.(b)(6)(8), added by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,165 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See also Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(a)-2. Note that states which prohibit marital status discrimination are split as to whether these provisions prohibit discrimination against unmarried couples. Levin v. Yeshiva Univ., 754 N.E.2d 1099 (N.Y. 2001) ; Hoy v. Mercado, 266 A.D.2d 803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1999) . See generally Jason C Long, Housing Discrimination and the Status of Unmarried Cohabitants--Living with McCready v. Hoffus, 76 U. Det. Mercy L. Rev. 99 (1998). New Mexico's credit discrimination law has substituted "spousal affiliation" for "marital status" as a prohibited basis. N.M. Stat. Ann. § 28-1-1.

(n40)Footnote 40. Diaz v. Virginia Hous. Dev. Auth., 101 F. Supp. 2d 415 , subs. proc. at 117 F.Supp. 2d 500 (E.D. Va. 2000) ; see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 3.9 (5th ed. 2009) (discussion of special purpose credit programs).

(n41)Footnote 41. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(5)-2; Sallion v. Suntrust Bank, 87 F. Supp. 2d 1323 (N.D. Ga 2000) .

(n42)Footnote 42. 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(8), added by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Regulation B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(8), added by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,165 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See also Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(a)-2. Note that states which prohibit marital status discrimination are split as to whether these provisions prohibit discrimination against unmarried couples. Levin v. Yeshiva Univ., 754 N.E.2d 1099 (N.Y. 2001) ; Hoy v. Mercado, 266 A.D.2d 803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1999) .

(n44)Footnote 44. Diaz v. Virginia Hous. Dev. Auth., 101 F. Supp. 2d 415 , subs. proc. at 117 F. Supp. 2d 500 (E.D. Va. 2000) .

(n45)Footnote 45. United States v. Franklin Acceptance Corp., Civ. No. 99-CV-2435 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (consent decree). The decree is also available at http://www.ftc.gov.

(n46)Footnote 46. United States v. Ford Motor Credit Co., No. 99-75887 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 14, 1999) (consent decree) (available at http://www.ftc.gov).

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Cal. Gov't Code § 12955; Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 46a-66; 46a-82; 46a-98; D.C. Code § 1-2515 (human rights); Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 151B, §§ 4(3B), 4(14)(4); 1993 Minn. Laws ch. 22; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 354-A:10; N.J. Stat. Ann. § 10:5-12(i); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 28-1-7 (human rights) (also includes gender identity as a prohibited basis); N.Y. Exec. Law § 296-a (McKinney) (credit transactions); N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)-(c) (McKinney) (housing transactions); R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 34-37-4(b), 34-37-4.3, 34-37-5.4; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 8, §§ 1211, 1302; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, §§ 2362, 2410, 4503(a)(6); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 101.22 (housing financing) (sexual orientation, as defined); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 440.77 (certain housing financing) (sexual orientation, as defined); Haw. Rev. Stat § 515-1 to 515-20 (housing); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 5 §§ 4595-4598 (credit transactions); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 5 §§ 4451-4632 and 4581-4583 (housing transactions).

(n48)Footnote 48. Antidiscrimination Act of 2001, 2001 Md. Laws 340.

(n49)Footnote 49. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a)(1); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.4, 202.2(z).

(n50)Footnote 50. See, e.g., D.C. Code Ann. § 1-2515; 775 Ill. Comp. Stat. §§ 5/1-102, 5/4-102; Ill. Comp. Stat. § 140/1a (bars age discrimination regarding credit cards); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 4112.021 et seq. (Baldwin's); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 25, § 1452(A)(7)-(9) (housing financing); 43 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 955(h) (housing financing); R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 34-37-4.1, 34-37-4.2; Tex. Fin. Code Ann. § 341.401; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 8, § 1211; Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2410; Va. Code §§ 59.1-21.19 et seq. ; Wis. Stat. Ann. §§ 106.04, 224.77(1)(o) (certain housing financing).

(n51)Footnote 51. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2).

(n52)Footnote 52. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(b)(4); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2)(iv); 202.2(o).

(n53)Footnote 53. See, e.g., Iowa Code Ann. § 601A.10 (civil rights act); Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 344.370 (state housing financing); La. Rev. Stat § 46:2254(G) and (I) (housing financing for handicapped); Me. Rev. Ann. tit. 5, § 4582 (housing financing); Md. Com. Law Code Ann. § 12-113; Md. Ann. Code Art. 49B, § 22 (housing financing); Mich. Stat. Ann. § 3.550(504) (housing financing); N.M. Stat. § 28-1-7(H); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 138.20; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 440.77 (certain housing financing).

(n54)Footnote 54. 24 C.F.R. § 100.201.

(n55)Footnote 55. See Toyota Motor Mfg. v. Williams, 534 U.S. 184, 198, 122 S. Ct. 681, 691, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615, 631 (2002) (in this employment discrimination case a unanimous Supreme Court ruled that "to be substantially limited in performing manual tasks, an individual must have an impairment that prevents or severely restricts the individual from doing activities that are of central importance to most people's daily lives, and the impairment must be permanent or long-term").

(n56)Footnote 56. 42 U.S.C. § 12101, et seq.

(n57)Footnote 57. 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a) ("No individual shall be discriminated against on the basis of disability in the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of any place of public accommodation by any person who owns, leases (or leases to), or operates a place of public accommodation.").

(n58)Footnote 58. 42 U.S.C. § 12181(7)(F).

(n59)Footnote 59. 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a).

(n60)Footnote 60. 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a). Credit is considered a "service" under this provision. Webster Bank v. Oakley, 830 A.2d 139 (Conn. 2003) .

(n61)Footnote 61. Gaona v. Town & Country Cr., 324 F.3d 1050 (8th Cir. 2003) ; Webster Bank v. Oakley, 830

A.2d 139 (Conn. 2003) . The one case to date which has held that the ADA does not apply to credit transactions is Kloth v. Citibank, 33 F. Supp. 2d 115 (D. Conn. 1998) . In this case, which was brought by a pro se plaintiff, the court dismissed the public accommodations claim by rather oddly citing only the ADA section concerning discrimination in employment while ignoring Title III.

(n62)Footnote 62. See U.S. Dep't of Justice, ADA Title III Technical Assistance Manual, available at www.usdoj.gov/crt/ada/taman3.html.

(n63)Footnote 63. Id.

(n64)Footnote 64. 42 U.S.C. § 12188(a); AR v. Kogan, 964 F. Supp. 269, 271 (N.D. Ill. 1997) . In contrast, U.S. Attorneys can seek monetary relief for the victims of discrimination, as well as injunctive relief and civil penalties. 42 U.S.C. § 12188(b)(2).

(n65)Footnote 65. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 3.2.7 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n66)Footnote 66. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3).

(n67)Footnote 67. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)(A) and 41 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)(B).

(n68)Footnote 68. Note that the FHA's requirement of reasonable accommodation for disabled persons is a more stringent burden than the "reasonable accommodation" standards for religious practices under Title VII (but appears to be the same standard as set forth in the Americans with Disabilities Act). Shapiro v. Cadman Towers, Inc., 51 F.3d 328, 334 (2nd Cir. 1995) . But see Scherer v. Mission Bank, 34 Fed. Appx. 656, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 8098 (10th Cir. May 1, 2002) (lender not required to make exception to its underwriting inquiry for disabled applicant as a reasonable accommodation).

(n69)Footnote 69. See Fla. Stat. § 760.25; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 515-5; N.J. Stat. Ann. § 10:5-12(i). See also Bragdon v. Abbott, 524 U.S. 624, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 (1998) .

(n70)Footnote 70. 42 U.S.C. § 12101. For more information on the American with Disabilities Act [hereinafter ADA], the DOJ's website includes an ADA home page with a detailed description of the statute, answers to frequently asked questions, and a wealth of guidance and other information. Go to www.usdoj.gov/crt/ada/adahom1.html (July 2001).

(n71)Footnote 71. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a)(2); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(z). See also United States v. Franklin Acceptance Corp., Civ. No. 99-CV-2435 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (consent decree) (FTC alleged that Franklin violated the ECOA by failing to consider applicants' income derived from public assistance as income). The decree is available at http://www.ftc.gov.

(n72)Footnote 72. See, e.g., Conn. Gen Stat. § 46a-64c (housing finance) (source of income); 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. § 120/3 (Fairness in Lending Act); Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 151B, § 4(10); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 10:5-4 (source of income); Or. Rev. Stat. § 659A.421 (source of income); Tex. Fin. Code § 341.401 (social security and SSI income only); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 106.04 (housing finance) (source of income); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 224.77 (certain housing finance) (source of income). Note that the FRB's proposed revisions to Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(z)-3 would reflect the change in name of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program to Temporary Aid to Needy Families [hereinafter TANF].

(n73)Footnote 73. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n74)Footnote 74. Exercise of rights under any of the following statutes triggers the protection of the ECOA for credit applicants: Truth in Lending Act; Fair Credit Billing Act; Consumer Leasing Act; Federal Garnishment Act; Fair Credit Reporting Act; Fair Debt Collection Practices Act; Electronic Funds Transfer Act; and Equal Credit Opportunity Act itself.

(n75)Footnote 75. Lewis v. ACB Bus. Servs., Inc., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 7698 (6th Cir. Mar. 17, 1998) .

(n76)Footnote 76. Bowen v. First Family Fin. Servs., Inc., 233 F.3d 1331 (11th Cir. 2000) . See also Kivel v. Wealthspring Mortgage Corp., 398 F. Supp. 2d 1049 (D. Minn. 2005) (rejecting plaintiff's claim of discrimination based on exercising of right to receive ECOA adverse action notice because plaintiffs failed to establish that they were entitled to the notice).

(n77)Footnote 77. See, e.g., Iowa Code § 537-3311; Mo. Ann. Stat. § 408.550 (Vernon).

(n78)Footnote 78. 24 C.F.R. § 100.400(c)(5).

(n79)Footnote 79. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.5.3 (5th ed. 2009), regarding ECOA and mandatory arbitration.

(n80)Footnote 80. See, e.g., Truth in Lending Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c) (bona fide error), (f) (good faith compliance with rule, regulation, or interpretation); Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c) (bona fide error defense). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 7.4.2, 7.4.4 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.); National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection § 7.2 (6th ed. 2008).

(n81)Footnote 81. For example, a New York statute prohibits discrimination on the basis of military status. N.Y. Exec. Law § 296-a (McKinney) (credit transactions); N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)-(c) (McKinney) (housing transactions).

(n82)Footnote 82. C. Lee, Cyberbanking: A New Frontier for Discrimination?, 26 Rutgers Computer & Tech. L.J. 277 (2000).

(n83)Footnote 83. U.S. Department of Commerce, Economic and Statistics Administration & National Telecommunications and Information Administration, Falling Through the Net: Toward Digital Inclusion, October, 2000, available at www.digitaldivide.gov (July 2001). See also U.S. Department of Commerce, Economic & Statistics Administration and National Telecommunications & Information Administration, A Nation Online: How Americans are Expanding Their Use of the Internet, Feb. 2002, available at www.ntia.doc.gov. The Department of Commerce's report states that only about 40% of African-Americans and 32% of Hispanics use the Internet (whether from home or another location, such as work or school), as compared to nearly 60% of whites. As for older Americans, about 37% of persons over the age of 50 use the Internet, in comparison to 53.9% of the overall U.S. population. Persons with a disability are about half as likely as the non-disabled to use the Internet. Although this study did not focus on public assistance recipients, it did report that only 25% of households with incomes of less than $15,000 use the Internet.

(n84)Footnote 84. A related issue in electronic transactions is whether a creditor has met the consumer consent requirements of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act. 15 U.S.C. §§ 7001 et seq. See § 6.09[1][a][i][G] and § 10.03[9][c] infra , and National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 9.2.10 (3d ed. 2005 and Supp.), for a more detailed discussion of these requirements.

(n85)Footnote 85. Reg. B., 12 C.F.R. § 202.5.

(n86)Footnote 86. In one Internet-related advertising case, a lender was sued for operating a web page that steered potential homebuyers to areas in which the buyer's race predominated. The District Court initially permitted the plaintiffs to bring a claim under the FHA. Isaac v. Norwest Mortgage, 153 F. Supp. 2d 900 (N.D. Tex. 2001) . However, the court ultimately held that the plaintiffs lacked standing, because they failed to show that their communities had actually been injured by the lender's practices. Isaac v. Norwest Mortgage, 2002 U.S.Dist. LEXIS 9354 (N.D. Tex. May 23, 2002) , aff'd without opinion, 58 Fed. Appx. 595, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 2558 (5th Cir. Jan. 15, 2003) . Thus, the ability to establish standing may be an issue in "cyber-discrimination" cases. In addition to steering, Norwest's web site contained a number of offensive and stereotyped descriptions of minority and low-income neighborhoods. Id.

(n87)Footnote 87. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3). Recall that ECOA does not include a prohibition against discrimination on the basis of disability.

(n88)Footnote 88. In the case of non-mortgage lending, such discrimination might violate the public accommodations section of the ADA, 42 U.S.C. § 12182 (a).

(n89)Footnote 89. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8.

(n90)Footnote 90. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(c); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(b)(2). See also Official Staff Commentary § 202.8, which gives numerous examples of allowable programs and credit-granting procedures.

(n91)Footnote 91. The FRB has proposed deleting the phrase "to meet special social needs" from the requirements of qualifying special purpose credit programs listed in § 202.8. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,598 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

The Board did not adopt this proposal out of concern that, by removing the phrase, a creditor might not understand that a program must meet special social needs and because the ECOA itself uses the phrase. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,151 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

(n92)Footnote 92. The FRB has proposed revising Official Staff Commentary § 202.8(a)-5 to clarify how creditors can determine the need for a special purpose credit program by providing additional examples of analyses that can be used to determine such need. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,625 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The Board adopted this revision as proposed in the final rules issued in 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n93)Footnote 93. United States v. American Future Sys., Inc., 743 F.2d 169 (3rd Cir. 1984) . On the other hand, a governmental special credit purpose program, i.e. a program expressly established pursuant to federal or state law, has more flexibility to establish eligibility requirements. Diaz v. Virginia Hous. Dev. Auth., 101 F. Supp. 2d 415 (E.D.Va. 2000) .

(n94)Footnote 94. See Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(b)(2).

(n95)Footnote 95. Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(z)-1.

(n96)Footnote 96. See Simms v. First Gibraltar Bank, 83 F.3d 1546 (5th Cir. 1996) .

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.04

§ 5.04 Types of Discrimination

[1] General Standards

The ECOA prohibits any discrimination in any aspect of a credit transaction on a prohibited basis. Likewise for the FHA, at every stage of a transaction involving the sale, rental, or financing related to a dwelling and the Civil Rights Acts as to intentional discrimination based on race, color, ethnic origin, and perhaps citizenship.

[a] Must Discrimination Be by a "Creditor"?

To be actionable under the ECOA, the discrimination must be by a "creditor." n1 Under the FHA, the discrimination must be by entities whose business includes engaging in residential real estate-related transactions, meaning the making of loans, offering other financial assistance, or the selling, brokering or appraising of residential real property. n2 Discrimination is not limited to a creditor under the Federal Civil Rights Acts.

[b] What Is Discrimination?

To "discriminate" is defined under the ECOA as treating an applicant less favorably than other applicants. n3 Consequently, the ECOA prohibits any treatment of an applicant on a prohibited basis less favorably than other applicants at any stage of the credit transaction, from application procedures to terms of the transaction to subsequent handling of defaults.

The Fair Housing Act also uses the term "to discriminate," but, unlike the ECOA, does not define the term. Most likely, it will be considered as having the same meaning as found under the ECOA. Similarly, the Federal Civil Rights Acts require that individuals be treated the "same" as white citizens, indicating a similar standard to that found under the ECOA.

[2] Discrimination in Different Stages of the Credit Transaction

The ECOA prohibits creditors from, on a prohibited basis, utilizing different approaches to encouraging credit applications. n4 Creditor actions which discourage applications include creditor practices at its place of business, such as sending minorities to different locations to apply, encouraging potential applicants to apply at other banks, and indicating it would take a long time to have an application processed. The prohibition against acts to discourage applicants in no way prevents creditors from encouraging applications from disadvantaged groups. The Commentary specifically states: "A creditor may affirmatively solicit or encourage members of traditionally disadvantaged groups to apply for credit, especially groups that might not normally seek credit from that creditor." n5

For example, the Federal Reserve Board gave approval to a California statute that requires creditors to provide Spanish-speaking applicants with the opportunity to obtain an unexecuted Spanish language contract. n6 The Board reasoned that the statute made contract terms more understandable to applicants of one national origin without interfering with the interests of any other group and therefore did not frustrate the intent of the ECOA. n7 Furthermore, not only whether credit should be extended, but the amount of credit to be extended, is also subject to the general rule against discrimination. Although creditors may decide whether to allow authorized users on an account, they may not decide on a prohibited basis which individuals can be authorized users. n8 Unreasonably delaying the applications of members of protected groups may also be discriminatory. n9

A creditor may not discriminate on a prohibited basis as to what type of collateral or other protection it demands on a loan. Creditors may not discriminate under the ECOA on a prohibited basis concerning credit terms, n10 such as the rate of interest it charges, the length of loans it offers, n11 the timing of payments, the number of points, or other fees or charges it assesses. Similarly, the creditor should not be able to discriminate under the ECOA based on down payment amounts n12 or security deposits. A creditor also cannot discriminate as to how many payments it must receive before it will deliver the goods sold. n13 At least one court has agreed that the ECOA may be used to challenge predatory lending. n14 The court in Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage noted that the plain language of the ECOA prohibits discrimination in any aspect of a credit transaction and is therefore not limited to the denial of credit. n15 The Court also found support for ECOA's application to reverse redlining on the basis of regulations that include investigations procedures, terms of credit, collections procedures, and other matters in the definition of credit. n16

The FHA prohibits discrimination concerning the type of loan, the amount of the loan, the interest rate, duration, or other terms of the loan. n17 The FHA should thus apply to any aspect of a loan's credit terms.

The Commentary explicitly states that it is not a violation of Regulation B for a creditor to discriminate as to the availability, rates, and other terms on which credit-related casualty insurance or credit life, health, accident, or disability insurance are provided an applicant. n18 The probable reason for this exception is the FRB's deference to state insurance laws dealing with discrimination.

The FHA and the regulations explicitly prohibit discrimination concerning the sale of property or hazard insurance. n19 The FHA applies not only when redlining involves higher insurance premiums, but also applies when decisions are made involving renewal of property insurance policies. n20 The Federal Civil Rights Acts should apply to discrimination in the sale of any form of insurance since insurance is a contract. n21

Differences in credit terms on a prohibited basis is illegal. A creditor should not discriminate on a prohibited basis concerning ease of payment, willingness to restructure or postpone payments, or provision of information about account balances. Under the FHA, such discrimination is likely to violate the prohibition on discrimination concerning the "terms and conditions" of a loan. n22

To the extent that a credit discrimination statute reaches discrimination concerning the sale price of property or a service, it should also reach discrimination concerning compliance with warranties and other post-sale performance.

The general rule against discrimination applies not only to the granting of credit initially, but to any changes in an account, such as raising credit limits, changing credit terms, renewing accounts, or terminating credit. n23 Changes in the "terms or conditions" of a residential real estate-related transaction also fall under the scope of the FHA. n24 Thus, that federal statute should apply as well to changes in credit limits or terms or termination of accounts.

Under the ECOA, creditors may not treat debtors differently post-default based on a prohibited basis. n25 The FHA also prohibits discrimination concerning treatment of defaults. The statute has been interpreted to bar discrimination in mortgage foreclosures, on the basis that this constitutes one of the "terms or conditions" of a loan. n26 Reporting a default or other credit information to a credit bureau is another part of the credit transaction, and creditors may not discriminate on a prohibited basis here as well.

[3] Application to Utilities

Utilities are an important area of ECOA coverage. Utility service is not available on a cash or pay as you go basis. Utility service by its very nature usually involves delayed billing for service already provided, and if a utility refuses to accept a credit risk, this is equivalent to the denial of service. Thus, every aspect of a utility transaction, from the initial security deposit and connection to collection procedures and disconnect practices, must comply with the general rule against discrimination on a prohibited basis. n27

Utilities may not ask for a larger security deposit on a prohibited basis. n28 Late charges, collection fees, collection practices for slow payers, and repayment arrangements may not differentiate on a prohibited basis.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsPublic Health & Welfare LawHousing & Public BuildingsFair HousingReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1691a(e); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l). The FRB has proposed revisions to Reg. B that would amend § 202.2(l) to clarify that creditors include those who regularly participate in setting terms of credit decisions, not just in the decision to extend or deny credit. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

The final rule adopted this proposal with a few modifications. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The former definition of a creditor was a "person, who, in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in the decision of whether or not to extend credit." The new definition defines a creditor as a person who "regularly participates in a credit decision, including setting the terms of the credit." The new definition was effective April 15, 2003, although the mandatory compliance date was April 15, 2004. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 3605; 24 C.F.R. §§ 100.110, 100.115.

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(n).

(n4)Footnote 4. Reg B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a). Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a) has been redesignated as § 202.4(b) without substantive change as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

The FRB has implicitly recognized that targeting minority applicants for subprime loans while marketing prime products to white applicants may be discrimination in violation of the ECOA. As part of its revision of Regulation B in March 2003, the Board added one aspect of this practice as an additional example of disparate treatment in the Official Staff Commentary. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.4(A)-2(i)(A), stating that disparate treatment includes "provid[ing] information only on 'subprime' and similar products to minority applicants who request information about the creditor's credit mortgage products, but provid[ing] information on a wider variety of mortgage products to similarly situated nonminority applicants."

(n5)Footnote 5. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a)-2.

(n6)Footnote 6. Cal. Civ. Code § 1632. The FRB has also recently issued an amendment to Regulation B that specifically permits creditors to provide ECOA notices in a language other than English as long as it is available in English upon request. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.4(b). This provision was added as part of the Board's interim final rule issued March 30, 2001, concerning electronic disclosures. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,779-17,786 (Apr. 4, 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 7. FRB, Official Board Interpretation § 202.1102, 42 Fed. Reg. 22,861 (May 5, 1977). This interpretation was not included in the 1985 Official Commentary to Regulation B. However, the FRB chose not to include in the Official Commentary any interpretation which did not preempt state law and so, presumably, the California statute remains acceptable. Moreover, § 202.1102 is an official board interpretation, not a staff interpretation, and should therefore not be superseded by staff commentary.

(n8)Footnote 8. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(a)-1.

(n9)Footnote 9. Thompson v. Marine Midland Bank, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 22960 (2d Cir. Sept. 16, 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(m) defines credit terms as part of a credit transaction, and Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.4 prohibits discrimination concerning any aspect of a credit transaction.

(n11)Footnote 11. See United States v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., Clearinghouse No. 38,902 (D.N.M. 1984) (consent decree based on allegations that the creditor sometimes required Native American applicants to agree to shorter than customary contract terms).

(n12)Footnote 12. See United States v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., Clearinghouse No. 38,902 (D.N.M. 1984) (consent decree based on allegations that the creditor sometimes required Native American applicants to agree to larger than customary down payments).

(n13)Footnote 13. United States v. American Future Sys., Inc., 743 F.2d 169 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) (some individual ECOA and § 1981 claims dismissed for lack of standing).

(n15)Footnote 15. 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) , citing 15 U.S.C. § 1691(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) , citing 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(m).

(n17)Footnote 17. 42 U.S.C. § 3605(a); 24 C.F.R. § 100.130(b)(2).

(n18)Footnote 18. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(e)-1.

(n19)Footnote 19. 24 C.F.R. § 100.70(d)(4).

(n20)Footnote 20. Lindsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 34 F. Supp. 2d 636 (W.D. Tenn. 1999) . For a discussion of redlining in the insurance industry, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 7.3 (5th ed. 2009); for a discussion of redlining in the mortgage industry, see Id. § 7.2 (5th ed. 2009).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981.

(n22)Footnote 22. 24 C.F.R. §§ 100.110(b), 100.130(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(m) defines this as part of a credit transaction, and Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.4 prohibits discrimination concerning any aspect of a credit transaction.

(n24)Footnote 24. 24 C.F.R. § 100.110(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(m); Official Staff Commentary § 202.4-1. The FRB has proposed redesignating Official Staff Commentary § 202.4-1 as 202.4(a)-1 and -2 to clarify the Commentary and to provide additional examples of disparate treatment. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,621 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n26)Footnote 26. Harper v. Union Sav. Ass'n, 429 F. Supp. 1254 (N.D. Ohio 1977) ; Lindsey v. Modern Am. Mortgage Corp., 383 F. Supp. 293 (N.D. Tex. 1974) ; cf. Little Earth of United Tribes v. United States Dept. of Housing & Urban Dev., 675 F. Supp. 497 (D. Minn. 1987) , aff'd, 878 F.2d 236 (8th Cir. 1989) (foreclosure decisions by HUD fully justified and no violation of FHA).

(n27)Footnote 27. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Access to Utility Service (2d ed. and Supp.). See McGee v. Eastern Ohio Gas Co., 111 F. Supp. 2d 979 (S.D. Ohio 2000) (ECOA prohibits utility from refusing credit to one spouse on the basis of a delinquency owed by the other spouse to the same utility), class certification granted, 200 F.R.D. 382 (S.D. Ohio 2001) ; In re Brazil, 21 B.R. 333 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982) (a public utility company discriminated against a bankruptcy petitioner on the basis of marital status by refusing to accept her application for service while her husband was still residing in their home and there was an outstanding bill in his name). But see Haynes v. Bank of Wedowee, 634 F.2d 266 (5th Cir. 1981) (no discrimination on basis of marital status shown when bank accelerated wife's loan due to husband's bankruptcy filing and bank had relied on existence of a joint account in original credit extension); Haynsworth v. South Carolina Elec. & Gas Co., 488 F. Supp. 565 (D.S.C. 1979) (no unlawful discrimination when a utility company refused to open an account in a woman's name because of an outstanding bill at the same residence in the name of her separated husband); Vander Missen v. Kellogg-Citizens Nat'l Bank, 481 F. Supp. 742 (E.D. Wis. 1979) ; Cherry v. Hughes Supply Co., 539 S.E.2d 536 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (holding that a creditor does not violate the ECOA by requiring applicant to pay spouse's delinquency to that same creditor before granting new credit when the creditor justifiably believes that the applicant is liable for the spouse's delinquency).

(n28)Footnote 28. Official Staff Commentary § 202.3(a)-2 (utility security deposit is subject to ECOA).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.05

§ 5.05 Application Procedures and Signature Requirements

[1] Introduction

The ECOA has special requirements that creditors must follow in the various stages of a credit transaction. For ECOA purposes, there are four major stages in a credit transaction: the application for credit and other initial procedures; the creditor's evaluation of that application and decision to grant or to deny credit; notification to the applicant of the creditor's decision; and the various activities which follow the decision to grant credit.

[2] Discouraging Applications

Creditors may not make any statement, oral or written, in advertising or otherwise, which would, on a prohibited basis, discourage a reasonable person from making or pursuing an application. n1 The prohibition against acts to discourage applicants in no way prevents creditors from encouraging applications from disadvantaged groups. n2 Unreasonably delaying the processing of applications from members of protected groups may also be discriminatory. n3

The Fair Housing Act explicitly prohibits discrimination in advertising with respect to the sale or rental of a dwelling. n4 This prohibition applies to any written and oral notices or statements n5 and thus should apply to marketing discrimination. The FHA regulations give examples of discriminatory advertising, including selecting media or locations for advertising that deny housing information to prospective buyers on a prohibited basis. n6 There are also non-binding HUD guidelines on non-discriminatory advertising, which are referenced in the FHA regulations. n7

Furthermore, the FHA regulations contain a separate set of prohibitions against discrimination in the marketing of loans in connection with residential real-estate-related transactions. The regulations prohibit creditors from failing to provide information regarding the availability of loans because of a prohibited basis. n8 A Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC) guidance document suggests that steering (which occurs when a loan officer refers potential applicants away from one type of product or market) on a prohibited basis violates Regulation B and that indicators of discriminatory steering include the following scenarios: n9

- If a lender has a subprime mortgage subsidiary, any significant differences, by loan product, in the percentage of applicants from a protected group for the lender versus the subprime subsidiary

- Lack of clear objective standards for i) referring applicants to subsidiaries or affiliates, ii) classifying applicants as "prime" or "subprime" borrowers, or iii) deciding what kinds of alternative loan products should be offered or recommended to applicants

- For a lender that makes both prime and subprime loans for the same purpose, difference in the percentage of applicants from a protected group in each of the alternative loan product categories

- A lender with a subprime subsidiary integrates its loan application processing for both entities, such that steering between the prime and subprime products can occur almost seamlessly (that is, a single loan processor could simultaneously attempt to qualify any applicant to the bank or the mortgage company under either the bank's prime criteria or the mortgage company's subprime criteria)

Steering sometimes occurs when lenders offer government-backed mortgages as well as conventional mortgage. The FFIEC guidance addresses steering of minorities to government-backed mortgages, as indicated by the following scenarios: n10

- For a lender that makes both conventional and FHA mortgages, any significant differences in the percentages of prohibited-basis-group applicants in each of these two loan products, particularly with respect to loan amounts of $100,000 or more

- Loan officers having broad discretion regarding whether to promote conventional or FHA loans or both to applicants, and the lender has not issued guidelines regarding the exercise of this discretion. FHA regulations also prohibit providing information that is different from that provided to others because of a prohibited basis. n11 These regulations are not limited to applicants but apply to a creditor's provision of information to any "persons." n12 Thus, they could be used to challenge certain types of advertising and marketing discrimination in the provision of housing-related credit.

[3] Prohibited Requests for Information

[a] General

Except under a court order, other federal law, or in connection with specially targeted credit programs, a creditor may not request the race, color, religion, or national origin of the applicant or any other person in connection with a credit transaction. However, a creditor may inquire about an applicant's permanent residence and immigration status. n13

The limitations on a creditor's requests for information do not apply when federal law requires the creditor to seek this information for monitoring purposes. n14 Thus, otherwise prohibited information may be sought in the following situations:

- Certain applications for credit primarily for the purchase or refinancing of a principal residence. n15

- Applications where Regulation C interpreting the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act ("HMDA") requires (or allows) creditors to collect information. This includes certain home improvement loans and home purchase loans not covered immediately above. n16

- Information collected by loan brokers or others to provide information to creditors that are required to collect that data under HMDA or another statute or regulation requiring such data collection. n17

In these situations, the creditor must ask the applicant to provide information voluntarily on race, national origin, sex, marital status, and age, so that the creditor compliance with the ECOA and other statutes can be monitored. n18 This information may be used only for monitoring; it may not be used to discriminate against the applicant. n19

It is important to note, however, that in one of the most significant changes in the 1999 proposed revisions, the FRB proposed to remove the prohibition on seeking information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, and sex for non-mortgage credit products. n20 This proposed change was made in response to comments from the Department of Justice and other federal financial enforcement agencies that the enhanced ability to obtain data on race and ethnicity would aid fair lending enforcement, particularly with respect to small business lending. n21 The Board recognized the obvious concern, that removing the prohibition would give loan officers access to information on applicant characteristics that would aid discrimination, but found in favor of allowing the collection of that information. n22

In March 2003, the FRB issued final rules in which the Board decided not to remove the prohibition against seeking information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, and sex. n23 Instead of lifting the ban, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under section 202.15. n24

The Board's stated rationale was that it believed retaining the prohibition was the best way to reduce and/or avoid discrimination. n25 The Board believed that the existing prohibition restricted creditors' access to information about applicants' personal characteristics, thus reducing or avoiding discrimination. n26

An additional rationale expressed by the Board was its concern that lifting the prohibition would create some risk that the data gathering itself would be discriminatory, that is, creditors would selectively inquire or note information about prohibited characteristics for certain applicants. n27 In general, the Board felt that the reliability of voluntarily collected data was questionable. n28

One interesting issue is whether a creditor's request for documents to establish an applicant's identity, which would also reveal prohibited information such as race and gender, violates the ECOA. For example, the Department of Justice sued a credit card company for retaining photographic identification of applicants that showed the applicant's race and gender. n29 This issue is complicated by the Treasury Department's recent promulgation of customer identification regulations, as required by the U.S. PATRIOT ACT. n30 These regulations require financial institutions to verify the identity of all customers, n31 including loan applicants. n32 The creditor may verify the applicant's identity using documentary or non-documentary methods. n33 If a creditor uses documentary methods, the regulations suggest use of government-issued identification with photograph or a similar safeguard. n34 Thus, a creditor that requires applicants to provide photographic identification is complying with these customer identification regulations, yet this request also indirectly seeks the applicants' race and gender. n35

[b] Sex; Optional Use of Courtesy Titles

A creditor generally may not request the sex of the applicant as required information. n36 There are five exceptions. A creditor may inquire into the applicant's gender where (1) securities credit is involved; (2) where incidental consumer credit is involved, but only to the extent necessary for medical records or similar purposes; (3) to determine eligibility and premium rates for insurance; (4) where information is required for monitoring purposes; and (5) when a special purpose credit program is involved.

The applicant may be asked, but not required, to designate a courtesy title for the account (Ms., Miss, Mrs., or Mr.), n37 and the application form must "appropriately" indicate that selection of such a designation is optional. All other terms used on the application must be sex-neutral.

A creditor may not request any information about the applicant's birth control practices, intention or capacity to bear children, or intention to rear children. n38 A creditor, however, may request information about the applicant's present dependents (such as the number of dependents and their age) and related financial obligations for these present dependents, as long as this information is not just requested from a group protected by the statute.

The FRB recently proposed removing the prohibition against inquiring about sex (as well as color, race, religion, and national origin). n39 While this allows creditors to ask applicants about their gender, they would still be prohibited from discriminating against applicants on prohibited bases. Furthermore, the Regulation, as proposed, would require creditors who request information on sex to disclose at the time of the request that providing the information is optional, and that the creditor will not take the information, or the applicant's decision not to provide the information, into account in any aspect of the credit transaction. n40 The disclosure must be in writing, in a clear and conspicuous manner, and in a form the applicant can retain. n41 Finally, the FRB proposed adding a new section to Reg. B to emphasize that a creditor may not consider race, color, religion, national origin or sex to determine an applicant's creditworthiness, except as permitted by law, nor may a creditor consider an applicant's decision not to provide the information. n42 The FRB included a proposed model notice in its revisions to Appendix C. n43 In March 2003, the Federal Reserve Board issued final rules in which the Board decided not to remove the prohibition against seeking information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, and sex. Instead, the Board created a new exception for the collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. n44

[c] Marital Status

Whether a creditor may seek an applicant's marital status will depend on the type of credit account being sought. If an account is joint between husband and wife, or if the credit account is secured by property, the creditor may seek information about the applicant's marital status. n45

But a creditor must allow a married applicant to apply for an individual account if the applicant so desires. n46 If the applicant seeks an individual, unsecured account, a creditor is severely restricted as to when it can seek marital status information. The creditor in that situation may not ask the applicant's marital status unless:

- The applicant resides in a community property state or is relying on any property located in such a state to establish creditworthiness;
- The credit involves a regulated utility company, incidental consumer credit, or securities credit;
- The creditor seeks the information solely to determine eligibility and premium rates for insurance;
- The information is required for monitoring purposes; or
- The creditor seeks the information solely to determine eligibility for a special purpose credit program.

Unless the transaction involves only incidental consumer credit, the creditor also must make "appropriate" disclosure to the applicant that income from alimony, child support, or separate maintenance payments need not be revealed unless the applicant wants it to be considered in evaluating the application. n47

If the applicant does not want alimony, child support or separate maintenance income to be considered, then the creditor is prohibited from making any inquiries about this source of income. The creditor instead evaluates the application based on the applicant's other income sources.

In situations where creditors may request an applicant's marital status, creditors may categorize the applicant only as "unmarried" (which includes single, divorced, and widowed persons), "married," or "separated." n48 These terms are to be defined by applicable state law.

One court has held that a creditor who asked a female applicant if she anticipated getting married did not violate the ECOA, as the questions were posed in the context of a discussion of the applicant's financial troubles and her need for a guarantor. n49

[d] Information About Spouse or Former Spouse

A creditor may request information about the applicant's spouse or former spouse only if:

- The spouse will be permitted to use the account;
- The spouse will be contractually liable on the account;
- The applicant is relying on the spouse's income for repayment of the credit;
- The applicant resides in a community property state, or is relying on property for repayment which is located in such a state;
- The applicant is relying on alimony, child support, or separate maintenance payments from a spouse or former spouse for repayment of the credit; or
- The transaction involves incidental consumer or securities credit. n50

[e] Public Assistance Status

Except to comply with other federal laws or a court order or in connection with a specially focused credit program, a creditor is limited in the information it may seek about an applicant's public assistance status.

If a creditor is using a "judgmental system," they may ask whether an applicant's income derives from public assistance payments to determine the amount and probable continuance of the payments, the applicant's credit history, and other "pertinent elements of creditworthiness." n51

[f] Exceptions to Restrictions on Requested Information

[i] The Home Mortgage Monitoring Requirements

The major exception to the ECOA's prohibitions on prohibited inquiries is in the area of home mortgages. Both Regulation B and the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act ("HMDA") n52 require lenders to collect certain information regarding the residential real estate-related loans that they make. The HMDA requires lenders to collect information including the race, sex, and income of each applicant for a home mortgage, as well information about the location of the property securing the loan. n53 Regulation B requires lenders to collect information including race, national origin, sex, marital status, and age so that creditor compliance with the ECOA and other statutes can be monitored. n54

Although the creditor is required to seek this information, the applicant is not required to provide it. Under Regulation B, if the applicant does not provide the required information or any part of it, the creditor must note that fact on its form(s) and, to the extent possible, also note the applicant's race or national origin and sex on the basis of visual observation or surname. This information may be used only for monitoring; it may not be used to discriminate against the applicant. n55

Creditors are required to seek out information on race, national origin, and gender (and marital status and age if the Regulation B monitoring requirements apply) in the following situations:

- Under both Regulation B and the HDMA/Regulation C: Applications for credit n56 primarily for the purchase or refinancing of a dwelling; n57 Regulation B's requirements only apply to dwellings occupied by the applicant as a principal residence when the dwelling will be collateral for the loan; n58 dwelling means residential structure, whether or not the structure is attached to real property, including condominiums, cooperatives, and mobile homes; n59

- Under the HDMA/Regulation C: Applications for certain home improvement loans and open-ended home equity loans; n60

- Regulation B also provides that loan brokers do not violate the ECOA when they collect information otherwise prohibited for purposes of providing it to creditors that are required to collect that data under the HMDA or another statute or regulation requiring such data collection. n61

[ii] Information Required By Any Other Federal or State Statute or By Court Order For Monitoring Purposes

In addition to the home mortgage exception, creditors may make requests for information otherwise prohibited by Regulation B if any other federal or state statute or regulation requires collection of the information. n62

Perhaps the biggest exception, then, to the prohibition on requesting information on prohibited bases is the Treasury Department's customer identification regulation pursuant to the U.S. PATRIOT ACT. n63 The Patriot Act regulation requires financial institutions to verify the identity of all customers n64 and, in particular, suggests the use of government-issued identification containing a photograph or similar safeguard. n65 Yet a creditor that requests applicants to provide photographic identification also indirectly seeks the applicants' race and gender. For example, the Department of Justice sued a credit card company for retaining photographic identification of applicants that showed the applicants' race and gender. n66

While the request for photographic identification pursuant to the Patriot Act regulation qualifies for the exception allowing information requests required by "other" federal and state laws, retention of the identification will not qualify. The Patriot Act regulation does not require creditors to retain a copy of identification documents--a description of the document will suffice. n67 Ironically, the Treasury Department had originally proposed a retention requirement; however, this requirement was modified in part due to concerns by creditors that "requiring banks to keep copies of documents that have pictures, such as driver's licenses, could expose the bank to allegations of unlawful discrimination, even if the retention of this information were not prohibited under ECOA." n68

Apart from the photo identification issue, the Treasury Department specifically noted that the collection and retention of a customer's date of birth, which is required by the regulation, does not relieve the creditor of its obligations to comply with laws prohibiting age discrimination such as the ECOA. n69 Creditors may also make otherwise forbidden inquiries if required to by an order or agreement issued by, or entered into with, a court or an enforcement agency. n70 The most common example of such an order would be one issued in an ECOA or Fair Housing lawsuit in which a creditor's future performance is to be monitored by a government enforcement agency.

[iii] Special Purpose Credit Programs

Regulation B creates special rules for special purpose credit programs, which are programs that address the credit needs of economically disadvantaged groups. n71 If participants in such a program are required to possess one or more common characteristics (such as race, national origin or sex), a creditor may request information regarding those common characteristics. n72 For example, if an energy conservation program is created to assist the elderly, the creditor may ask the applicant's age. A creditor may also inquire about the applicant's minority status when offering credit under a Minority Enterprise Small Business Investment Corporation program. n73

If financial need is one of the criteria for the special purpose credit program, the creditor may also request information about marital status, alimony, child support, separate maintenance income, and the spouse's or parents' financial resources. n74 Examples of such programs are subsidized housing programs for low to moderate income households and student loan programs based on the family's financial need. n75

[4] Oral Applications for Credit

Regulation B permits creditors to take either oral or written applications for credit, except that applications must be in writing where credit is used to purchase or refinance the applicant's principal residence, and where the residence is taken as security on the loan. n76 When a creditor does conduct the application process orally, it still must maintain written records of the process and of its reasons for action taken on the application. n77

[5] Cosignature of Spouse or Other Person

The general rule against discrimination prevents a creditor from seeking a spouse or other person to cosign or guaranty a loan on a prohibited basis. n78 Regulation B specifies that state laws prohibiting the individual extension of consumer credit to both parties to a marriage if each spouse individually and voluntarily applies for such credit are inconsistent with the ECOA, and, therefore, are preempted by it. n79

A creditor may not require the signature on a credit instrument of a spouse or any other additional person if the applicant has requested an individual account, no jointly held or community property is involved, and the applicant individually meets the creditor's standards for creditworthiness for the amount and terms of credit requested. n80 If jointly owned property or community property is used as security or as evidence of creditworthiness, then requiring such a signature on the security agreement would be allowed. n81 However, the FRB's 2003 revisions to Regulation B amend 12 C.F.R. section 202.7(d)(1) to expressly prohibit a creditor from deeming the submission of a joint financial statement or other evidence of jointly held assets as an application for joint credit. n82 Likewise when a joint, rather than an individual, application for credit is made voluntarily, the creditor obviously has the right to ask for the signature of both persons involved. n83 However, in order for an account to be truly joint and thus avoid ECOA cosigne limitations, the cosigner must have voluntarily entered into the loan. The Commentary states that a joint applicant "refers to someone who applies contemporaneously with the applicant for shared or joint credit. It does not refer to someone whose signature is required by the creditor as a condition for granting the credit requested." n84

Determining whether applicants voluntarily entered into a joint account, or were required or convinced to do so by the creditor, can be complicated. The distinction hinges on the intent of the applicants at the time of the application n85 and is generally a question of fact. n86

The creditor may condition the designation of an authorized user by the account holder on the authorized user's becoming contractually liable for the account, as long as the creditor does not differentiate on any prohibited basis in imposing this requirement. n87 The rules limiting a creditor's ability to require the signature of an applicant's spouse apply as well to a creditor's attempt to obtain the signature not only of a guarantor, but also a guarantor's spouse. n88

[6] Creditors May Not Refuse to Open Accounts in a Married Woman's Own Name

The creditor may not prohibit the applicant from opening (or maintaining) an account under any of the following names:

- Birth-given first name (e.g., Jane Applicant, rather than Mrs. John Applicant);

- Birth-given surname (e.g., Jane Birthname);
- Spouse's surname (e.g., Jane Marriedname); or
- A combined surname (e.g., Jane Birthname-Marriedname). n89

A creditor may require, however, that joint applicants on an account designate a single name for purposes of administering the account and that a single name be embossed on any credit cards issued on the account. But the creditor may not require that the name be the husband's name.

[7] Collateral, Security Deposits, Sureties, Other Forms of Creditor Protection

[a] Discriminatory Practices

In addition to the ECOA's co-signature rules, a creditor may not discriminate on a prohibited basis as to the type of protection it demands on a loan, including collateral or security.

Lenders often offer both secured and unsecured loans and may offer lower interest rates for the secured loans. Nevertheless, if a creditor offers only secured loans to applicants of certain races, even if the interest is lower, this practice is discriminatory if other applicants are given the choice between higher-rate unsecured loans and lower-rate secured loans.

The general rule against discrimination applies not only to collateral but also to cosigners, security deposits and other forms of protection. For example, under the ECOA, a security deposit or cosigner may not be sought from public assistance recipients if it is not sought from others. n90

If all a merchant requires as security is a credit card in the consumer's name or a telephone number listed under the consumer's own name, even this requirement may be discriminatory if the creditor does not accept a credit card or telephone number that is in the name of the consumer's spouse. n91 This practice may be viewed as having the effect of discriminating against married, separated, or divorced women who, for historical reasons, never obtained a separate listing under their own name.

[b] Injury Caused By Such Discrimination

Merely requiring extra security may not seem injurious to a consumer, but such discrimination can often cause the consumer financial damage even if the loan never goes into default, and these damages should be recoverable under the ECOA. If a consumer must put up personal property as collateral, the creditor may require the consumer to purchase property insurance on that collateral. Using a home as security may require various closing costs. There may be additional damages if the loan goes into default.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityDiscriminatory ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a). Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a) has been redesignated as § 202.4(b) without substantive change as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) . See, e.g., Ragin v. Harry Macklowe Real Estate Co., 6 F.3d 898 (2d Cir. 1993) . See also Gregory v.

Dillard's, Inc., 494 F.3d 694 (8th Cir. 2007) (fact that store patrons left in frustration after allegedly being denied service or being harassed did not preclude finding of "protected activity" element of patrons' § 1981 action against store owner, i.e., did not preclude contractual interest), rehearing en banc granted, judgment vacated (8th Cir. Sept. 20, 2007); JAT, Inc. v. National City Bank of the Midwest, 460 F. Supp. 2d 812 (E.D. Mich. 2006) (plaintiffs who withdrew loan application due to delay, and who were granted loans on allegedly more restrictive terms, could state claim under § 1981).

(n2)Footnote 2. Official Staff Commentary § 202.5(a)-2. Comment 202.5(a)-2 has been redesignated as comment 4(b)-2 without substantive change as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Thompson v. Marine Midland Bank, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 22960 (2d Cir. Sept. 16, 1999) (although plaintiffs' allegations of delay in processing of applications may have constituted disparate treatment, the court found that defendant provided a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for the delay; therefore, a prima facie case of discrimination was not established).

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. 100 C.F.R. § 100.75(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. 100 C.F.R. § 100.75(c)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. These guidelines were formerly codified at 24 C.F.R. Part 109, and the FHA regulations still cite them as such. 24 C.F.R. § 100.75(d). However, the guidelines were removed from the Code of Federal Regulations as part of a regulatory streamlining in 1996. 61 Fed. Reg. 14,378 (Apr. 1, 1996) . The guidelines are available at 54 Fed. Reg. 3,308-3,310 (Jan. 23, 1989) . The guidelines provided further guidance and examples of potentially discriminatory advertising.

(n8)Footnote 8. 100 C.F.R. § 100.120(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. Fin. Insts. Examination Council, Interagency Fair Lending Examination Procedures Guide 21, Clearinghouse No. 53,526 (1999), available at www.ffiec.gov/PDF/fairlend/pdf.

(n10)Footnote 10. Id.

(n11)Footnote 11. Id.

(n12)Footnote 12. Id.

(n13)Footnote 13. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(d)(5).

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(B)(2).

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary § 202.5(b)(2)-2.

(n17)Footnote 17. Official Staff Commentary § 202.5(b)(2)-3.

(n18)Footnote 18. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13.

(n19)Footnote 19. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.13(c), 202.6(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,596 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (amending 12 C.F.R. § 202.5).

(n21)Footnote 21. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,586 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n22)Footnote 22. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,586 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n23)Footnote 23. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n24)Footnote 24. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The new exception is codified at § 202.5(b)(l).

(n25)Footnote 25. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,148 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n26)Footnote 26. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,148 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n27)Footnote 27. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,148 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n28)Footnote 28. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,148 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n29)Footnote 29. United States v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n30)Footnote 30. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121.

(n31)Footnote 31. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121(b)(2).

(n32)Footnote 32. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121(a)(1)(i).

(n33)Footnote 33. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121(b)(2)(ii).

(n34)Footnote 34. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121(b)(2)(ii)(A)(1).

(n35)Footnote 35. Note, however, that the customer identification regulations do not require creditors to retain a copy of identification documents--a description of the document will suffice. 31 C.F.R. § 101.121 (b)(3)(i)(B).

(n36)Footnote 36. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(d)(3). The FRB recently proposed amending Reg. B to allow creditors to seek information about an applicant's sex (as well as race, color, religion, and national origin). In March 2003, the Federal Reserve Board issued final rules in which the Board decided not to remove the prohibition against seeking information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, and sex. Instead, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

See § 5.05[3][b] supra.

(n37)Footnote 37. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(d)(3).

(n38)Footnote 38. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(d)(4).

(n39)Footnote 39. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,585, 44,596 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n40)Footnote 40. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,596 (proposing 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(a)(4)).

(n41)Footnote 41. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,596 (proposing 12 C.F.R. § 202.4(d)).

(n42)Footnote 42. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,597 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(9)).

(n43)Footnote 43. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,631 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n44)Footnote 44. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Reg. B § 202.5(d)(1).

(n46)Footnote 46. 15 U.S.C. § 1691d(c); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(a). The statute explicitly overrides any state laws prohibiting the separate extension of consumer credit to spouses.

(n47)Footnote 47. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(d)(2).

(n48)Footnote 48. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.5(d)(1), 202.2(u).

(n49)Footnote 49. Para v. United Carolina Bank, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16843 (E.D.N.C. Aug. 25, 1998) .

(n50)Footnote 50. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(c)(1), (2). A creditor was sued by the DOJ for, inter alia, obtaining credit reports on non-applicant spouses. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed on July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n51)Footnote 51. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(y); Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(2)-5.

(n52)Footnote 52. 12 U.S.C. §§ 2801-2810. For more on the HDMA and its implementing regulation, Regulation C, see § 5.09 infra; see also National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 4.4.5 (3d ed.).

(n53)Footnote 53. 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a). Beginning in January 2004, lenders will also be required to disclose whether the loan is a high cost loan subject to the Home Ownership Equity Protection Act, and information about loan pricing for certain loans. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7230 (Feb. 15, 2002) (adding 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a)(12), (13)). Creditors will also be required to distinguish which loans are secured by first liens, subordinate liens, or unsecured, for applications and originations but not for loans that they purchase. 67 Fed. Reg. 43,218, 43,219 (June 27, 2002) . See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 4.4.5.3.2.

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13. The Federal Reserve Board has made technical revisions to § 202.13(a). The Board reorganized the numbering structure of the subsection and revised the racial and ethnic categories in what is now § 202.13(a)(l)(i) to conform to directives from the Office of Management and Budget. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,153 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n55)Footnote 55. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.13(c), 202.6(a). 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(c) provides that the creditor must inform the applicant that the information is being requested for the purpose of monitoring compliance with federal anti-discrimination statutes and that, if the applicant chooses not to provide the information, the creditor is required to note the race or national origin and sex on the basis of visual observation or surname. The Federal Reserve Board has proposed requiring that this information be clear and conspicuous and in a form the applicant can retain. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,596 (Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to add 12 C.F.R. § 204(d)).

The Board adopted the proposed changes requiring clear and conspicuous written disclosures but modified the proposal by clarifying that this standard applies only when the ECOA otherwise requires written disclosures or the creditor chooses to make disclosures in writing. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) . Thus, the disclosures under § 202.13(c) need not be made in writing, but if the creditor chooses to make them in writing, they must be clear and conspicuous. The Board also exempted § 202.13(c) disclosures from the new retainability requirement of new § 202.4(d). 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n56)Footnote 56. Regulation B's requirements only apply to applications by natural persons. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a)-1.

(n57)Footnote 57. Reg. C, 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a).

(n58)Footnote 58. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a). A dwelling is a principal residence if the applicant intends to make the dwelling his or her principal residence within one year of completion of construction. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a)-2. Principal residence does not include a vacation home or a rental unit. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a)-2. An application for temporary financing to construct a dwelling is not covered, and neither are loans not obtained to purchase the residence but rather obtained for home improvements, debt consolidations, or home equity lines of credit. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.13(a)-3, 202.13(a)-5.

(n59)Footnote 59. Reg. C, 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(d); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a). Regulation B's definition of dwelling includes multi-family structures of two to four units, if the applicant intends to occupy one of the units as a principal residence. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a)-2.

(n60)Footnote 60. Reg. C, 12 C.F.R. 203.4(a); see also Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2)-2. The FRB's proposed revisions to the Official Staff Commentary would delete § 202.5(b)(2)-2 in accordance with proposed changes to 12 C.F.R. § 202.5 that would allow creditors to request information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,622 (Aug. 16, 1999) . The Board did not delete comment 5(b)(2)-2 in the final rules issued in March 2003, since it did not lift the prohibition against inquiring about prohibited bases. Instead, comment 5(b)(2)-2 has been redesignated as comment 5(a)(2)-2 without substantive change. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n61)Footnote 61. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2)-3. The FRB's proposed revisions to the Official Staff Commentary delete § 202.5(b)(2)-3 in accordance with proposed changes to 12 C.F.R. § 202.5 that would allow creditors to request information about an applicant's race, color, religion, national origin, or sex. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,622 (Aug. 16, 1999) . The Board did not delete comment 5(b)(2) final rules issued in Mar. 2003, since it did not lift the prohibition against inquiring about prohibited bases. Instead, comment 5(b)(2)-2 has been redesignated as comment 5(a)(2)-2 without substantive change. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n62)Footnote 62. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2). Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2) has been redesignated as § 202.5(a)(2) as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n63)Footnote 63. 31 C.F.R. § 103.121.

(n64)Footnote 64. 31 C.F.R. § 103.121 (b)(2).

(n65)Footnote 65. 31 C.F.R. § 103.121(b)(2)(ii)(A)(1).

(n66)Footnote 66. U.S. v. Fid. Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov [reproduced on the CD-ROM accompanying this volume].

(n67)Footnote 67. 31 C.F.R. § 103.121 (b)(3)(i)(B). The creditor must retain the identification information required under the customer identification regulation for five years after the account is closed or, for credit cards, when the account becomes dormant or is closed. Id. § 103.121 (b)(3)(ii).

(n68)Footnote 68. 68 Fed. Reg. 25,090, 25,102 (May 9, 2003) .

(n69)Footnote 69. Id. at 25,097 .

(n70)Footnote 70. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2). Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(2) has been redesignated as § 202.5(a)(2) as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,149 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n71)Footnote 71. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8; see § 5.03[4] supra (a description of the requirements for a special purpose credit program).

(n72)Footnote 72. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(c).

(n73)Footnote 73. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(c)-2.

(n74)Footnote 74. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(d).

(n75)Footnote 75. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.8(d)-2.

(n76)Footnote 76. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(e).

(n77)Footnote 77. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(b). The FRB has proposed extending the record retention requirement for applications pertaining to businesses with $1 million or less in gross revenues from 12 months to 25. Larger businesses would remain subject to the shorter 60-day period allowed by 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(b)(5). 64 Fed. Reg. 44,600-44,601 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The Board did not adopt this change. The final rule retains the current record retention period of twelve months for business credit. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,152 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n78)Footnote 78. As part of its revisions to Regulation B issued in March 2003, the Federal Reserve Board added a new Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(d)(l)-1 to emphasize that a creditor may not require an applicant who is individually creditworthy to provide a cosigner even if the creditor applies the requirement without regard to sex, marital status, or any other prohibited basis. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) . But see Boyd v. United States Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72455 (D. Kan. Sept. 26, 2007) (creditor required spouse of borrower for small business loan; court found genuine issue of material fact regarding whether creditor actually determined that borrower was not creditworthy before requiring his wife's guaranty and whether the wife's guaranty violated the rules under 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(d)).

(n79)Footnote 79. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.11(b)(1)(ii).

(n80)Footnote 80. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(d)(1). See also Marine Am. State Bank v. Lincoln, 433 N.W.2d 709 (Iowa 1988) (bank violated ECOA by requiring spouse's signature when applicant was qualified individually). But see First Fid. Bank v. Best Petroleum, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 293 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (bank could ask owner to cosign for corporation even if corporation was creditworthy; owner did not claim to be member of protected class). However, one court has held that a blanket policy of requiring spousal signatures regardless of creditworthiness of the applicant does not violate the ECOA if the applicant and spouse presented themselves as joint applicants. Southwestern Pa. Reg'l Council v. Gentile, 776 A.2d 276 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2001) . Note that this provision of Reg. B prohibits the creditor from requiring the signature not only of the applicant's spouse, but of any other person if the applicant seeks individual credit and is creditworthy. Reg. B., 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(d)(1). The DOJ has sued one credit card lender for having a policy of requiring all members of a household to sign an application. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n81)Footnote 81. In the context of loans for small businesses, the spouse is often listed as a partner or principal in the business, and the creditor may in those instances require the spouse's signature. Taylor v. Albina Cmty. Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21519 (Nov. 23, 2001) , mot. granted, in part, mot. denied, in part, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367 (May 23, 2002) , costs/fees proceeding, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25580 (D. Or. Oct. 2, 2002) ; Cherry v. Hughes Supply Co., 539 S.E.2d 536 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n82)Footnote 82. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

See also Bolduc v. Beal Bank, 994 F. Supp. 82 (D.N.H. 1998) (ECOA violation where wife was required to cosign credit instrument despite husband being independently creditworthy), remanded, 167 F.3d 667 (1st Cir. 1999) .

(n83)Footnote 83. Cf. United States v. Meadors, 753 F.2d 590 (7th Cir. 1985) (signature voluntary where creditor did not provide signature block for applicant's spouse and creditor was not present when applicant's spouse added signature).

(n84)Footnote 84. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(d)(l)-2, redesignated by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,191 (Mar. 18, 2003) . Cf. United States v. Meadors, 753 F.2d 590 (7th Cir. 1985) (signature voluntary where creditor did not provide signature block for applicant's spouse and creditor was not present when applicant's spouse added signature); Baybank v. Bornhofft, 694 N.E.2d 854 (Mass. 1998) (combination of contemporaneous application for credit and shared ownership interest in the collateral makes the defendant a joint applicant). But see Southwestern Pa. Reg'l Council v. Gentile, 776 A.2d 276 (Pa. Super Ct. 2001) (not a violation of ECOA for lender to require spouse's signature under a blanket policy of requiring spousal guarantees regardless of creditworthiness, if the applicant and spouse presented themselves as joint applicants).

(n85)Footnote 85. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(d)(l)-3, added by 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) ("A person's intent to be a joint applicant must be evidenced at the time of application.")

(n86)Footnote 86. Thus, the issue of whether the cosigner signature is voluntary should enable the debtor to withstand a morion for summary judgment. See, e.g., Cadle Co. v. Newhouse, 300 A.D.2d 526 (N.Y. App. Div. 2002) .

(n87)Footnote 87. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(a)-1.

(n88)Footnote 88. Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(d)(6)-1. See Riggs Nat'l Bank v. Linch, 36 F.3d 370 (4th Cir. 1994) (no ECOA violation under special circumstances where wife required to sign as co-guarantor).

(n89)Footnote 89. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(b).

(n90)Footnote 90. See, e.g., Reed v. Northwestern Bell Tel., Clearinghouse No. 27,524 (D. Minn. 1981).

(n91)Footnote 91. See Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(4) (can only require telephone listing at applicant's residence, not in applicant's name); FTC, Informal Staff Opinion, Clearinghouse No. 37,084 (May 26, 1983) (ECOA violation when car rental agency required that a customer without a major credit card have a telephone listing in their own name).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.06

§ 5.06 Special ECOA Rules Concerning Credit Evaluation

Creditors cannot discriminate on a prohibited basis in the evaluation of credit applications. Examples of credit evaluation practices that violate the general rule include: applying different credit standards to applicants on a prohibited basis; using different investigation procedures on a prohibited basis; using different appraisal practices because of a prohibited basis; failing to combine joint applicant income on the basis of marital status; requiring immediate payment when the creditor does not normally do so; discrimination in setting credit limits; or denying credit for exercise of rights under the consumer credit protection act. Such discrimination would run afoul of not only the ECOA, but also the Federal Fair Housing Act and Civil Rights Acts, and state credit discrimination statutes.

[1] Understanding Credit Evaluation Systems

[a] Types of Systems Used

Creditors base their method of evaluating credit applications on the assumption that past history of bill payment is the best predictor of how obligations will be handled in the future. Some creditors look only at the credit history and present financial situation of an individual applicant when deciding whether or not to extend credit to that person. Others look both at the applicant's history of making payments, and at how the applicant compares to an "ideal" credit applicant on such factors as length of employment and whether residence is owned or rented. Applicants seeking credit from the latter type of creditor may be rejected despite their good credit histories, merely because they vary too much from the characteristics of the ideal applicant. n1

Creditors use one of three different credit evaluation systems--a credit scoring system, a judgmental system, or a combined system, sharing aspects of both of the other systems.

[i] Credit Scoring Systems

A credit scoring system assigns a particular number of points to various applicant characteristics, such as length of employment, types of credit already held, and income level. n2 If the total exceeds a certain number, the applicant is granted credit. The number of points the applicant receives also may determine the amount of credit granted.

These systems are constructed by compiling and comparing characteristics of past applicants who have proven to be creditworthy with those who have not, and then measuring each new applicant against an ideal applicant. The underlying assumption is that the applicants most likely to repay their obligations are those most like the ideal applicant.

Credit scoring systems thus use only selected information from an application. The characteristics which would seem to be the most important predictors of creditworthiness--income level and payment of past obligations--are not necessarily weighted most heavily.

The leading creator of credit scoring models is Fair, Isaac & Co. ("Fair Isaac"), also known as FICO; hence, a credit score is sometimes referred to as a "FICO score." Fair Isaac has developed credit scoring models for each of the three major credit bureaus (Trans Union, Experian, and Equifax). These models take data from a consumer's file and generate a number. Depending on the model used, a generic credit score will fall within a range, from a low of 300 to 400 to a high of 800 to 900. The higher the score, the better. A borrower with a score of 660 or greater is generally considered to be less of a risk for the lender, n3 although some lenders are now using a cut-off of 720 for their best rates. n4 A score of 620 or lower is considered a poor risk. n5

Fair Isaac has also developed a newer scoring model called "NextGen," the scores for which range from 150 to 950. n6

FICO products return a score along with reason codes explaining why the consumer's score deviated from the optimal score. Fair Isaac has a list of over one hundred reason codes, n7 which may be used by lenders when preparing adverse action notices pursuant to the ECOA or the Fair Credit Reporting Act. n8

[A] Special Issues Concerning Credit Scoring Systems

Credit scoring systems that appear scientific or validly derived may still discriminate on a prohibited basis. Many systems predating the ECOA arbitrarily denied credit to what are now protected classes of applicants, such as public assistance recipients and divorced women. As a result, the pool of past credit recipients on which the credit evaluation system is based often contains a disproportionately low number of persons protected by the ECOA. A system borrowed from another source is even more likely to contain this flaw, since the creditor does not know the details of the borrowed system's workings or the assumptions on which the system is based, and may not examine it for discriminatory impact before using it.

Auto loan borrowers have alleged that companies may manipulate a supposedly "color blind" credit scoring system by setting systems up differently for different dealerships. In one case, plaintiffs alleged that dealerships in predominantly minority neighborhoods may even be required to submit to creditors all credit applications for manual review. In this case, plaintiffs suggested that this type of individualized assessment demonstrates both the potential for and sanctioning of "redlining" loan applications that come from dealerships located in these areas. n9

Regulation B provides that a credit scoring system must be "developed and validated using accepted statistical principles and methodology" in terms of its ability to separate creditworthy and noncreditworthy applicants. n10 Further, the system must be reviewed and revalidated based on the creditor's own data periodically and adjusted accordingly. n11 Moreover, there are minimal sanctions to a creditor if a system does not meet the Regulation B standards for a credit scoring system.

[1] Dramatic Increase in the Use of Credit Scores

The use of credit scores to determine whether to extend consumer credit, and on what terms to extend credit, has grown dramatically, particularly in the home mortgage business. One reason for the growth in the use of credit scores is that Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae--which, together, dominate the secondary market for home mortgages--have recommended that mortgage lenders use credit scores in deciding whether to grant mortgage requests and whether to charge higher interest rates and fees. While Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae state that they caution their lenders not to exclude borrowers solely on the basis of their credit scores, both have urged lenders to use their automated underwriting systems, which factor in credit history scores in determining creditworthiness. n12

Credit scores are also increasingly being used for purposes that extend well beyond the initial question of whether to grant loans. For example, scoring systems are used to prescreen and preselect consumers for the purposes of direct marketing, to determine interest rates and credit limits, to collect on mortgage loans, and in the sale of loans to Wall Street and secondary market purchasers. Some credit card issuers have begun periodically reviewing card holders' credit scores to reset rates for lower-scoring holders.

[2] Lack of Information and Regulation of Credit Scores

The Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions (FACT) Act of 2003 n13 amended the FCRA, however, to require disclosure of credit scores, which were previously exempt from disclosure. The FACT Act requires that, upon the request of a consumer, credit bureaus must disclose the following, inter alia:

- The current credit score of the consumer or most recent credit score that was previously calculated by the credit reporting agency related to the extension of credit. n14

- A statement indicating that the information and credit scoring model may be different than the credit score used by a lender n15

- The range of credit scores of the model used to generate the disclosed credit score n16

- The key factors that adversely affected the credit score of the consumer, listed in order of impact. n17

The credit reporting agency may charge a fee for the credit score, to be determined by the Federal Trade Commission. n18

In addition, the FACT Act requires mortgage lenders who use credit scores in connection with an application for residential real-estate secured credit to provide, free of charge, the credit score and accompanying information that is either obtained from a credit bureau or was developed and used by the lender. n19 Mortgage lenders must also give a prescribed notice to the consumers. n20

Finally, state laws regarding disclosure of credit scores are preempted except for several existing state laws that are grandfathered in. n21

For many years, Fair Isaac and the three major credit reporting agencies refused to provide consumers with their own credit scores. Recently, the industry began to provide access to credit scores for a fee. If consumers wish to obtain their credit scores, they have the following options:

- Fair Isaac offers a number of different FICO score products to consumers. Consumers can purchase a copy of their FICO score based on their Equifax, Experian or TransUnion files from www.myfico.com. For a range of prices, consumers can also get a variety of other credit scoring products from the FICO website. As part of each product, consumers receive charts, details, and a list of the main reasons that determined their score.

- TransUnion has its own version of a credit score, which is included with any credit report ordered from the company for the regular credit report price. TransUnion credit reports and scores can be ordered from www.transunion.com, by calling 800-888-4213, or by writing Trans Union, Consumer Disclosure Center, P.O. Box 1000, Chester, PA 19022.

- Experian currently offers a product called Experian Scorecard for a fee, which entitles the purchaser to both their credit report and credit score from Experian. The Experian Scorecard is available at www.experian.com.

There may be significant variations in the credit scores provided by the three credit reporting agencies.

[3] How a Credit Score Is Calculated: The Black Box

Another reason for the controversy over credit scores is that, even with their availability to consumers, the method by which they are calculated is not known to consumers, advocates, or even regulators. The process by which a credit score is calculated has been likened to a "black box."

Freddie Mac and Fair Isaac have disclosed a list of general factors they use to generate credit scores and the general level of importance they attach to each factor. n22 However, critical information is still lacking from the industry's new disclosures. For example, Fair Isaac failed to identify all the factors that go into scoring an applicant and has not identified which of these factors help and which hinder the borrower. Furthermore, they have not revealed the algorithms or mathematical models used to calculate the credit scores.

Fair Isaac has stated that the following factors are used to derive FICO scores (a weighting of each factor is given in parentheses):

- Payment History (35%);
- Amounts Owed (30%);
- Length of Credit History (15%);
- New Credit (10%); and
- Types of Credit in Use (10%). n23

On its website, Freddie Mac lists the factors used in its automated underwriting system, Loan Prospector. Freddie Mac has not revealed the relative weight or importance given to each factor:

- Collateral;
- Credit history and credit bureau score;
- Capacity (debt ratios, salaried versus self-employed borrower, and cash reserves); and
- Loan type and purpose. n24

[ii] Judgmental Systems

A judgmental system is defined by Regulation B as any credit evaluation system other than a "demonstrably and statistically sound, empirically derived credit system"; that is, a system other than a credit scoring system. n25 A judgmental system generally involves a subjective examination of the overall application--often a general search of the application for "acceptable" characteristics based on past experience. In contrast, a credit scoring system measures specific characteristics of the applicant against those of an ideal applicant, usually through point values.

At times, a judgmental system may operate much like a credit scoring system because the judgmental creditor may favorably consider certain characteristics, such as home ownership, which also are high-point items in a credit scoring system. But unlike the credit scoring system, the judgmental system may grant or deny credit based on a general overview of the application rather than on a list of specific factors. The decision to grant or deny credit can be based on a single factor which overshadows the rest of the application. Thus, the outcome often is less predictable under a judgmental system. Judgmental systems have great potential for producing discriminatory results, since Regulation B does not provide adequate standards for their use.

[iii] Combination Systems

The FRB allows combination systems of credit evaluation--systems that require applicants to pass both a credit scoring and judgmental evaluation. This combination has the potential to allow any credit scoring system to be transformed into a combination system whenever an applicant has a passing score, but still is an undesirable applicant in the creditor's eyes. A combination system could subject applicants to additional judgmental tests which increase the risk of rejection.

[b] Discovery of How Creditor Utilizes Scoring System

People asking about details of these scoring systems probably will be told initially by the creditor that the decision was "made by a computer" or is a "trade secret." This "trade secret" obstacle to obtaining information on credit scoring systems can be overcome via discovery pursuant to Rule 26(c), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("FRCP"). The ECOA itself indicates that nothing in the statute shall be construed to prohibit discovery of a creditor's credit granting standards under appropriate discovery procedures. n26

[2] Types of Prohibited Discrimination (Beyond the Prohibited Bases)

[a] Protected Income Sources

[i] General

The ECOA protects applicants from a creditor's inappropriate consideration of certain sources of the applicant's income called "protected income." Protected income includes income derived from part-time employment, alimony, child support, separate maintenance, retirement benefits, or public assistance. n27 These sources of income are related to age, sex, marital status, and public assistance status, and the FRB thus believes it important to prevent discrimination concerning these sources of income that could have a disparate impact on prohibited bases.

The ECOA does not guarantee that every applicant with such income will be granted credit. A creditor need not consider income at all in evaluating creditworthiness. If the creditor does consider income, there are several acceptable methods of evaluating income. n28

A creditor may consider the total amount of income stated by the applicant without taking any steps to evaluate the different sources or components of that income. Alternatively, the creditor may review every component of income separately, placing every component in one of two categories--reliable income and unreliable income. The creditor can then disregard all the unreliable income or evaluate the applicant based on these two total numbers--reliable and unreliable income. If the creditor does not evaluate each component for reliability (e.g., it evaluates some components for reliability, but not others), then it must automatically treat all "protected income" as reliable.

[ii] Individual Evaluation of Protected Income

If the creditor is using the second approach and evaluating every component of the applicant's income for reliability, the creditor may not discount or exclude from consideration the income of an applicant or the spouse of an applicant because of a prohibited basis. n29 In addition, the creditor may not automatically discount or exclude from consideration any protected income. The discount or exclusion must be based on the applicant's actual circumstances. n30

Creditors may not use blanket rules which automatically deem a certain type of protected income to be unreliable. The decision must be made on an individual basis, and not be based on aggregate statistical relationships such as those underlying credit scoring models.

Creditors may not treat negatively that an applicant's only earned income is derived from a part-time job, or that income is an annuity, pension, or other retirement benefit. The creditor instead may only consider for this individual case the amount and probable continuity of the income. Similarly, alimony, child support, or separate maintenance payments must be considered as income to the extent to which they will be consistently made in the individual applicant's case. n31

[iii] Income From Multiple Sources

Creditors may not take into account the number of sources for protected income (such as alimony, child support, and Social Security). Further, they may not treat negatively the fact that the sole source of earned income is from a part-time job.

However, creditors may take into account the fact that the applicant has more than one source of earned income, even if one such source is the otherwise protected source category of part-time employment. n32 In other words, Regulation B allows consideration of the fact that income is derived from two part-time jobs or from one full-time and one part-time job. n33 The creditor may also treat income earned from an applicant's primary job differently than income from an applicant's second job. n34 These standards apply to both credit scoring and judgmental evaluation systems. n35

[iv] Income Sources Associated With Older Applicants

A creditor may not automatically exclude from consideration, or consider only a portion of, income of an applicant or applicant's spouse derived from part-time employment, annuities, pensions, or other retirement benefits. Evaluation of protected income from sources such as Social Security or retirement income must be made on an individual basis, and not be based on aggregate statistical relationships such as those underlying credit scoring models. Creditors may not use blanket rules which automatically deem a certain type of protected income to be unreliable, and, therefore, to predict adverse credit performance.

[v] Income Sources Associated With Women Applicants

Regulation B prohibits creditors from discounting income from certain sources historically associated with women, such as part-time employment. Other sources of income traditionally available primarily to women, when an applicant is relying on such income to support the application, such as alimony, child support, and separate maintenance payments, also may not be discounted automatically, although they may be evaluated on an individual basis for reliability and probable continuity.

[b] Credit History

[i] Supplementing a Minimal Credit History

Regulation B requires creditors who consider the credit history of applicants to consider the credit history, when available, of accounts designated as accounts that both the applicant and spouse are permitted to use, or for which both are contractually liable. Such a creditor also must consider, on the applicant's request, the credit history, when available, of any account reported in the name of the applicant's spouse or former spouse which the applicant can demonstrate accurately reflects the applicant's own creditworthiness. n36

The burden is placed on the applicant to present information on these other accounts, without any affirmative duty on the creditor to request the information. The applicant carries the further burden of demonstrating that these other accounts "accurately reflect" the applicant's own creditworthiness.

A creditor may restrict the types of credit history and credit references that it will consider, provided that the restrictions are applied to all credit applicants without regard to sex, marital status, or any other prohibited basis. n37 The provisions concerning credit history apply only to the extent that the creditor considers credit history in evaluating the creditworthiness of "similarly qualified applicants for a similar type and amount of credit." n38 However, on the applicant's request, a creditor must consider credit information not reported through a credit reporting agency when the information relates to the same types of credit references and history that the creditor would consider if reported through a credit reporting agency. n39

Note that an inadvertent error by the creditor is not a violation of the above requirements. n40 Inadvertent errors include clerical mistakes, calculation errors, computer malfunctions, and printing errors. An error of legal judgment is not an inadvertent error. n41

[ii] Avoiding a Spouse's Bad Credit History

On the applicant's request, the creditor must consider any information that the applicant presents "tending to indicate" that the credit history being considered by the creditor does not accurately reflect the applicant's creditworthiness. n42

[iii] Inadvertent Error Defense

An inadvertent error by the creditor is not a violation of these credit history requirements. n43 Inadvertent errors include clerical mistakes, calculation errors, computer malfunctions, and printing errors. An error of legal judgment is not an inadvertent error. n44

[c] Telephone Listing

A creditor may not consider whether there is a telephone listing in the applicant's name as a factor relevant to creditworthiness, but it may consider the existence of a telephone at the applicant's residence as such a factor. n45 This provision is primarily designed to protect married women, who often do not have telephone listings in their own names.

[d] Likelihood of Bearing or Rearing Children

In evaluating an applicant's creditworthiness, a creditor may not make assumptions or use aggregate statistics concerning the likelihood that the income of any group of persons will be interrupted or diminished at a future time because those persons will bear or rear children. n46

[e] Availability of Credit Insurance

A creditor may not refuse to extend credit or terminate an account merely because the applicant's age makes him or her ineligible for credit life, health, accident, or disability insurance. n47

[3] Allowable Discrimination on a Prohibited Basis

[a] Age

The general rule applying to any type of system is that age may not be taken into consideration at all unless as provided by the regulation. n48 So to use age at all in either a credit scoring or judgmental system, the creditor must show the application of one of the specific exceptions to the general rule.

The creditor can consider the applicant's age to determine if the applicant has the legal capacity to enter into a binding contract. n49 Legal capacity refers primarily to the legal age of majority.

The second exception--which also applies whether the creditor is using a credit scoring system or a judgmental system--is that a creditor may consider the age of an applicant 62 years old or older in order to give favorable treatment to that applicant. n50

When a creditor uses a credit scoring system, it may use the age of applicants as a predictor of creditworthiness. n51 However, creditors may not attach a negative factor or value when the applicant is 62 years of age or older.

When a creditor uses a judgmental system, it may consider age only to determine a "pertinent element of creditworthiness." n52

State laws addressing credit discrimination are preempted to the extent that they are inconsistent with the ECOA and Regulation B. n53 As described above, Regulation B allows credit discrimination in favor of elderly applicants and Regulation B specifically preempts state laws that prohibit creditors from asking or considering an applicant's age in order to favor an elderly applicant. n54

Somewhat more confusing is a related Regulation B preemption of state laws dealing with age discrimination. Regulation B allows creditors using a credit scoring system to utilize age as a predictive factor, but only allows other systems to use age as a "pertinent element of creditworthiness." Regulation B preempts state laws that prohibit credit scoring systems from using age as a pertinent element of creditworthiness. n55 In other words, a state statute can prohibit creditors using a judgmental system from considering age at all, except to favor those over the age of sixty-two. The state statute could only limit a credit scoring system's use of age as a pertinent element of creditworthiness.

The ECOA does not preempt state laws which establish an age of majority for various purposes, such as an age below which a person may not enter into an enforceable contract. n56 Nor does it preempt state laws which set a different age of majority for married and unmarried persons. n57

[b] Public Assistance Status

A creditor may not consider whether an applicant's income is derived from any public assistance program, except as expressly permitted by Regulation B. n58 Credit scoring systems cannot use the fact that income derives from a public assistance program.

When the creditor uses a judgmental system, it may consider whether the applicant's income is derived from a public assistance program, but only to determine a "pertinent element of creditworthiness." n59

According to Regulation B, a pertinent element of creditworthiness is "any information about applicants that a creditor obtains and considers and that has a demonstrable relationship to a determination of creditworthiness." n60

Several examples of information displaying this "demonstrable relationship" are listed in the Commentary: n61

- The length of time an applicant will likely remain eligible to receive such income;

- Whether the applicant will continue to qualify for benefits based on the status of the applicant's dependents (for instance, the age of the applicant's children may affect future Temporary Assistance to Needy Families payments or Social Security payments to a minor);

- Whether the creditor can attach or garnish the income to assure payment of the debt in the event of default (this exception, if followed, would nullify the general rule--most public benefits are exempt from execution; the Commentary example would in effect nullify the statutory protections granted to recipients of public assistance, placing the validity of this Commentary provision in doubt).

The prohibition against discriminatory treatment of public assistance income also requires creditors who consider gross income in credit evaluation to upwardly adjust the amount of public assistance income which is nontaxable to make it comparable to taxable income. n62

[c] Marital Status

A creditor may not consider an applicant's marital status to determine the applicant's creditworthiness, except as otherwise permitted or required by law. n63 In evaluating joint applications, a creditor can not treat applicants differently based on the existence, absence, or likelihood of a marital relationship between the parties. n64

The exception "as permitted or required by law" allows a creditor to consider marital status for purposes of ascertaining the rights and remedies applicable to the particular extension of credit. n65 For example, in a secured transaction involving real estate, a creditor may take into account whether state law gives the applicant's spouse an interest in the property being offered as collateral. n66

[d] Immigration Status

Under the ECOA, a creditor may consider the applicant's residency status in the United States, the applicant's immigration status, and other information necessary to determine its rights and remedies in case of default. A denial of credit to a non-United States citizen is not per se discrimination. n67

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityDiscriminatory ActsBanking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Credit ReportingConsumer ReportsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Cherry v. Amoco Oil Co., 490 F. Supp. 1026 (N.D. Ga. 1980) (applicant denied credit because creditor had experienced poor payments on accounts of customers in applicant's zip code area).

(n2)Footnote 2. Additional information on credit scoring is available in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 14 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n3)Footnote 3. Freddie Mac, Automated Underwriting: Making Mortgage Lending Simpler and Fairer for America's Families 25 (Sept. 1996), available at www.freddiemac.com/corporate/reports/moseley/mosehome.htm.

(n4)Footnote 4. For example, the Fair Isaac website (www.myfico.com) lists sample mortgage rates, with the best rates requiring a credit score of 720 or higher.

(n5)Footnote 5. Freddie Mac, Automated Underwriting: Making Mortgage Lending Simpler and Fairer for America's Families 25 (Sep. 1996), available at www.freddiemac.com/corporate/reports/moseley/mosehome.htm.

(n6)Footnote 6. Nathalie Mainland & Julia Wooding, NextGen FICO Risk Score Conversion FAQ 2 (Apr. 2002), available at www.fairisaac.com/fairisaac/images/images_viewpoints/july2002/nextgenfaq.pdf.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fair Isaac, Fair Isaac US Credit Bureau Risk Score Reason Codes(May 2000). For further description of FICO scores, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 6.3.2 (5th ed. 2009).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fair Isaac, Understanding Your Credit Score 15 (Nov. 2003).

(n9)Footnote 9. Coburn v. DaimlerChrysler Servs. N. America, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6276 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2005) (granting summary judgment in part and denying in part).

(n10)Footnote 10. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(p)(1). See also Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(p).

(n11)Footnote 11. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(p)(1)(iv). See also Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(p)-2, which gives some guidance on revalidation procedures.

(n12)Footnote 12. Loretta J. Mester, What's the Point of Credit Scoring?, Bus. Rev.-Fed. Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, Sept./Oct. 1997, at 6. Fannie Mae's automated underwriting system is known as "Desktop Underwriter" while Freddie Mac's is known as "Loan Prospector." In September 2002, a lawsuit was filed against Fannie Mae alleging that Fannie Mae had violated ECOA in that its use of credit scores in its Desktop Underwriter system had a disparate impact on African Americans. Rahmaan v. Federal Nat'l Mortgage Assoc., Clearinghouse No. 54,573, No. 1:02CV01822 (D.D.C. Sept. 13, 2002).

(n13)Footnote 13. Pub. L. No. 108-159 (2003).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fair Credit Reporting Act § 609(f)(1)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n15)Footnote 15. See id. § 609(f)(1), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n16)Footnote 16. See id. § 609(f)(1)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n17)Footnote 17. See id. § 609(f)(1)(C), 609(f)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003). For credit scores using Fair Isaac scoring models, the key factors are probably the "reason codes" provided by FICO.

(n18)Footnote 18. See id. § 609(f)(8), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n19)Footnote 19. See id. § 609(g)(1)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003) (requiring disclosure of the same information identified in Fair Credit Reporting Act § 609(f), that is, the information described in the bullet list in this section).

(n20)Footnote 20. See id. § 609(g)(1)(D), added by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n21)Footnote 21. See id. § 625(b)(3), as amended by Pub. L. No. 108-159, § 212 (2003).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Press Release, Freddie Mac, Freddie Mac Releases Automated Underwriting Factors Used by Loan Prospector (June 7, 2000), available at www.freddiemac.com; Press Release, Fair, Isaac & Co., Fair Isaac 'Demystifies' FICO Scores with List of Score Factors, Web-based Explanation Service (June 8, 2000), available at www.fairisaac.com.

(n23)Footnote 23. Press Release, Fair, Isaac & Co., Fair, Isaac 'Demystifies' FICO Scores with List of Score Factors, Web-based Explanation Service (June 8, 2000), available at www.fairisaac.com.

(n24)Footnote 24. Press Release, Freddie Mac, Freddie Mac Releases Automated Underwriting Factors Used by Loan Prospector (June 7, 2000), available at www.freddiemac.com.

(n25)Footnote 25. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(t).

(n26)Footnote 26. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(j).

(n27)Footnote 27. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(5)-1.

(n28)Footnote 28. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(5)-3. The FRB has made minor clarifying revisions to §§ 202.6(b)(5)-1, -3, and -4 of the Official Staff Commentary and removed the phrase "protected income." 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(5).

(n30)Footnote 30. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(5)-3. The FRB has made minor clarifying revisions to §§ 202.6(b)(5)-1, -3, and -4 of the Official Staff Commentary and removed the phrase "protected income." 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(5).

(n32)Footnote 32. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(5)-4.

(n33)Footnote 33. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(5)-4.

(n34)Footnote 34. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(5)-4.

(n35)Footnote 35. United States v. Aristar, Inc., Clearinghouse No. 37,083 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 7, 1983).

(n36)Footnote 36. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(6).

(n37)Footnote 37. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(6)-1.

(n38)Footnote 38. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(6).

(n39)Footnote 39. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(6)-1.

(n40)Footnote 40. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(c); see also Sayers v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 522 F. Supp. 835 (W.D. Mo. 1981) (no ECOA violation when credit denial was based on an inadvertent misinterpretation of the credit history; however, creditor's subsequent willful refusal to comply with notification requirements after being informed of its error did constitute an ECOA violation).

(n41)Footnote 41. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(c)-1.

(n42)Footnote 42. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(6)(ii). For instance, an applicant could show that she was unemployed at a time when a joint account went into default and had no way to ensure that her then-spouse, who was employed, would make payments.

(n43)Footnote 43. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(c). See also Sayers v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 522 F. Supp. 835 (W.D. Mo. 1981) (no ECOA violation where credit denial was based on an inadvertent misinterpretation of the credit history; however, creditor's subsequent willful refusal to comply with notification requirements after being informed of its error did constitute an ECOA violation).

(n44)Footnote 44. Official Staff Commentary § 202.14(c)-1.

(n45)Footnote 45. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(4).

(n46)Footnote 46. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(3).

(n47)Footnote 47. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.7(e).

(n48)Footnote 48. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(1).

(n49)Footnote 49. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2).

(n50)Footnote 50. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(b)(4); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.6(b)(2)(iv), 202.2(o).

(n51)Footnote 51. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2)(ii).

(n52)Footnote 52. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.6(b)(2)(iii), 202.2(y).

(n53)Footnote 53. 15 U.S.C. § 1691d(f); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.11(a).

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.11(b)(1)(iv).

(n55)Footnote 55. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.11(b)(iv).

(n56)Footnote 56. FRB, Official Board Interpretation § 202.1103, 42 Fed. Reg. 36,810 (July 18, 1977), as modified by 42 Fed. Reg. 39,368 (Aug. 4, 1977) . Interpretation § 202.1103 was not included in the Official Staff Commentary because the FRB did not include any interpretations which did not preempt state laws. The reasoning of this interpretation thus apparently is still valid. Moreover, § 202.1103 is an Official Board Interpretation, not a staff interpretation, and thus should not be superseded by a staff commentary.

(n57)Footnote 57. FRB, Official Board Interpretation § 202.1103, 42 Fed. Reg. 36,810 (July 18, 1977), as modified by 42 Fed. Reg. 39,368 (Aug. 4, 1977) . Interpretation § 202.1103 was not included in the Official Staff Commentary because the FRB did not include any interpretations which did not preempt state laws. The reasoning of this interpretation thus apparently is still valid. Moreover, § 202.1103 is an Official Board Interpretation, not a staff interpretation, and thus should not be superseded by a staff commentary.

(n58)Footnote 58. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2)-5.

(n59)Footnote 59. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(y).

(n60)Footnote 60. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(y).

(n61)Footnote 61. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2)-6. The FRB has proposed revisions to Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(2)-6 that would reflect the change in name of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. The Board adopted these changes as proposed in final rules issued in 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n62)Footnote 62. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed on July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n63)Footnote 63. 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(8).

(n64)Footnote 64. Id

(n65)Footnote 65. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(b)(8)-1. The Board has specifically noted that this exception allows creditors to consider state property laws. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n66)Footnote 66. Id. Segaline v. Bank of Am., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8349 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 18, 2003) (no ECOA violation when creditor denied loan to husband and wife upon learning the couple had divorced; loan was to be secured by the couple's home, and the fact of the divorce affected homestead rights under Texas law).

(n67)Footnote 67. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(b)(7)-2.

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

55 of 180 DOCUMENTS

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.07

§ 5.07 Notification of Action Taken on an Application or on an Existing Account

[1] Introduction

The ECOA requires creditors to notify applicants of action taken on their application within a specified time frame. Creditors also have to provide applicants with the specific reasons for any unfavorable action taken.

The ECOA notice provisions as to the action taken on an application do not apply to incidental consumer credit n1 or to business credit. However, incidental creditors are required to comply with the general prohibition against discrimination, among other ECOA provisions. n2 Other federal and state statutes may have notice provisions similar to those found in the ECOA. For example, the Fair Credit Reporting Act requires notice when a credit report forms the basis of a credit denial. n3 The Fair Credit Reporting (FCRA) defines "adverse action" to have the same meaning as in the ECOA. n4 Despite this shared definition, there are some important distinctions between the ECOA and FCRA notice requirements. One important difference is that the ECOA notice must be given within thirty days of a credit application n5 The FCRA notice should be sent at the same time as the denial, but there is no requirement that the denial meet any time deadlines. The FCRA notice may be required even when an ECOA notice is not. For example, the ECOA states that there is no "adverse action" when the creditor presents a counteroffer and the consumer accepts it. n6 The FCRA notice requirement is not limited in this way. n7 The ECOA notice must state the reasons for denial. The FCRA notice, in contrast, will only indicate that a consumer report was involved in the denial. In addition, the ECOA notice need only be given to the primary applicant. n8 The FCRA notice, on the other hand, requires that notice be given to "any consumer" whenever an adverse action is taken that is based in whole or in part on information contained in a credit report. n9 Another distinction, according to one court, is that the ECOA covers actions by all potential creditors in a case whereas the FCRA is more circumscribed to ensure that consumer reporting agencies, not all creditors, exercise care and adopt reasonable procedures for meeting the needs of commerce for consumer credit. n10 The FRB has provided creditors with model forms that combine both the FCRA notice and the ECOA notice separately on the same disclosure. n11 Proper use of the model forms will satisfy the ECOA notice requirement. n12 Compliance with just the FCRA notice requirements will ordinarily not comply with the ECOA requirement. n13

[2] Notification Requirement for Approved Applications

A creditor must notify an applicant of its decision to approve an application within 30 days after receiving the completed application. n14 This notification may be either express or implicit. Implicit notification is given when the applicant receives, for example, a credit card, money, property, or services in accordance with the application.

Notification need not be given each time a consumer uses a line of credit, a credit card or other open-end account.

[3] Notification Requirement Where Creditor Makes a Counteroffer

Sometimes the creditor's response to a completed application will be an offer to extend credit, but in substantially different terms or amounts than those requested by the applicant. Regulation B requires that a creditor notify an applicant of any counteroffer to the credit requested within 30 days after receiving an application. n15 The practice of a creditor responding to a consumer's application with a counteroffer, but failing to give the required counteroffer notice, is especially common, and the procedural provisions of the ECOA can provide powerful remedies. n16

The counteroffer provision, in particular, is critical in alerting a borrower to differences between the loan presented to her at closing and the loan she had applied for. For example, borrowers often come to a lender with a specific loan amount in mind to pay for home improvements or other uses. The lender will often inflate that amount, bringing a loan to the table that is significantly different in amount and/or terms than what the borrower initially requested. The ECOA notice of counteroffer can raise a red flag and possibly help convince the borrower to reconsider signing for a bad loan.

If the applicant does not expressly accept or use the counteroffered credit, the creditor then must make a determination whether to accept or reject the applicant's original credit request. In that case, the creditor, within 90 days of its counteroffer, must notify the applicant of the action it has then taken on the original application.

The creditor may also combine a counteroffer with a notice of adverse action (notice of adverse actions are described in the next section). Then the creditor need not send a second notice of the action it has taken if the applicant does not accept the counteroffer.

The FRB proposed amending the Official Staff Commentary to clarify that when a consumer receives a solicitation request for a specific amount and the creditor subsequently offers a different amount, the creditor's action constitutes a counteroffer. n17 The Board decided not to adopt this change, stating instead that this interpretation will be reviewed and reissued for additional public comment. n18

[4] ECOA Notice Requirements and Automobile Fraud

Car dealers, particularly used car dealers, routinely engage in deceptive tactics aimed at confusing prospective buyers and hiding the true cost of the credit being offered. A wide range of state and federal laws can be used to challenge these practices, including state UDAP statutes, odometer statutes, and federal Truth in Lending ("TIL"). n19 The ECOA's procedural and substantive requirements are an often overlooked, yet powerful, addition to this array of consumer protections.

ECOA notice requirements are triggered whenever a creditor denies an application and/or makes a counteroffer. Many dealers violate these notice requirements because they do not want to call attention to changes in credit terms or changes from sales to leases.

For example, dealers who engage in the deceptive practice of spot delivery (also known as "yo-yo," "take-back" or "gimme-back" sales) frequently do not comply with the ECOA. Spot delivery occurs when a dealer supposedly finalizes an installment sale of a car, gives the consumer possession of the car "on the spot," even transfers title to the consumer, and then later tells the consumer to return the car because the financing has fallen through. n20 This practice leads to either the consumer agreeing to rewrite the loan at higher payments or repossession or both.

Dealers will often fail to provide the ECOA notice of credit denial in these situations. The mere failure to provide these written notices should be a violation of the ECOA even in the absence of actual damages and may be enough to meet the standard for punitive damages. n21

Dealers may argue that a denial notice was not required because they did not actually deny credit but, rather, made a counteroffer. If the dealer truly made a counteroffer, they must have provided the required written ECOA notice of a counteroffer within thirty days after receiving the application. n22 A counteroffer occurs if the dealer/creditor offers credit on substantially different terms or in substantially different amounts than those requested by the applicant. n23 At that point, the consumer may accept the counteroffered credit. Even if the consumer accepted the "new deal," she should still have received notice of the counteroffer. The failure to provide this notice may arguably be an ECOA violation. Advocates should also confirm in these cases that the consumer truly accepted the counteroffer.

If instead the consumer rejected the counteroffer, the creditor must then have made a determination whether to accept or reject the applicant's original credit request. In that situation, within ninety days of the counteroffer, the creditor must notify the applicant of the action it has taken on the original application. n24 An ECOA violation may also occur when the creditor denies a credit application in a consumer's name but approves the application in a co-signer's name. n25

It is also a common practice for dealers to deny an application to buy a car and then offer to lease the car to the consumer. An immediate offer of lease terms may also be considered a counteroffer, triggering ECOA notice requirements. Even if the same credit application is used, there are two separate transactions in these circumstances. The first action by the dealer in denying credit for a sale should trigger ECOA notice requirements. Dealers may also attempt to avoid ECOA requirements by arguing that they do not fit within the ECOA definition of creditor. Dealers should fit the definition either as persons that regularly extend, renew or continue credit, or as persons who regularly arrange for credit. n26 It is preferable to argue that dealers regularly extend credit rather than arrange for credit because the ECOA limits the liability of arrangers. n27

The dealer may also argue that because they assigned the financing immediately after purchase, it is the assignee and not the dealer who is responsible for sending the ECOA notices. The borrower's response should be that the dealer is the original creditor and therefore is required to give ECOA notices. In the spot delivery context, the dealer may have agreed to finance the purchase, thereby creating an account. An assignee's subsequent denial of the credit terms should be considered an adverse action on an existing account, also requiring notice. n28 On the other hand, the ECOA only requires one party to provide notice of adverse action. If the assignee has already provided that notice to the consumer, there is no requirement that the dealer do so as well. n29

If only one credit agency is used and the credit agency, not the dealer, notifies the applicant in writing and states the reasons for the denial, the ECOA reporting requirement is met. n30 Alternatively, the applicant or a third party acting on the applicant's behalf may submit applications to several creditors. If the applicant expressly accepts or uses the credit offered by any one creditor, no notice of adverse action need be provided by any other creditor that may have rejected the application. n31 If, on the other hand, no credit is offered by any creditor, or the applicant does not expressly accept or use any credit offered, each creditor that took adverse action must comply with Regulation B's adverse action notification requirements, either directly or through a third party. n32

A third party or one of the creditors may provide the notice on behalf of all of the creditors, identifying each creditor that took adverse action. n33

[5] Notification Requirement for Adverse Actions; Applications vs. Inquiries

[a] General

The creditor must notify applicants when an adverse action is taken after the creditor receives an "application." n34 The FRB proposed amending Regulation B to broaden the definition of "application" to include a request for preapproval under procedures in which a creditor will issue to creditworthy persons a written commitment, even if conditional, for credit up to a specified amount that is valid for a period of time. n35 The Official Commentary would be amended to reflect this change, and to further explain when an inquiry or prequalification request becomes an application. n36 However, the Board declined to extend the ECOA to cover prescreened credit solicitation. n37

The Board, in 2003, decided to adopt the proposed language on preapprovals. n38 However, the changes were not added to the regulation as proposed but only to the Official Staff Commentary. n39 The amendments to the Commentary distinguish between inquiries and prequalification requests, on the one hand, and certain preapproval requests, on the other, for purposes of determining whether an application exists. The Commentary now clarifies that prequalification requests are subject to the same test applicable to inquiries. n40

In general, a request or inquiry will become an application for purposes of the ECOA if the creditor responds not only by providing information but also by evaluating information about the consumer. The Board changed the term "applicant" to "consumers" in the Commentary to emphasize that an application may exist for purposes of the ECOA even if the consumer has not actually submitted an application. n41 The Board explained that using the term "applicant" presumes that an application exists, while the point of the comment is that, in the case of an inquiry or prequalification request, an application may or may not exist depending upon the circumstances. n42

Applications are different from inquiries. If the creditor evaluates information about the applicant and decides to decline the request, and communicates this to the applicant, the inquiry must be treated as an application, and the creditor must notify the potential applicant of the adverse decision. n43

If a creditor discourages a particular applicant or indicates that that particular applicant may not obtain credit, then an application has been made, and the creditor must notify the consumer of the adverse action. n44

In its Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, the FRB solicited comment on whether it should further clarify the distinction between an inquiry about credit and an application for credit. n45 The Board was motivated by the growth of new delivery channels for loan products information, such as the Internet, and growth in credit counseling and prequalification programs, resulting in consumers asking for information about credit products and their creditworthiness before ever submitting an application. n46

Application is defined in Regulation B as "an oral or written request for an extension of credit that is made in accordance with procedures established by a creditor for the type of credit requested." n47 This gives creditors flexibility to establish the type of process it decides to use. The commentary, however, encourages creditors to provide consumers with information needed to shop for credit. Many industry commentators reported that they were unclear about when inquiries about credit rose to the level of an "application" requiring a formal denial if credit was rejected.

Based on the various responses to the FRB, including the industry comments noted above, the FRB has proposed adding that the definition of "application" includes a request for preapproval under procedures in which a creditor will issue to creditworthy persons a written commitment, even if conditional, for credit up to a specified amount that is valid for a period of time. n48 The Official Commentary would be amended to reflect this change and to further explain when an inquiry or prequalification requests becomes an application. n49 However, the Board declined to extend the ECOA to cover prescreened credit solicitation. n50 The Board, in 2003, decided to adopt the proposed language on pre-approvals. n51 However, the changes were not added to the regulation as proposed but only to the Official Staff Commentary. n52 The amendments to the Commentary distinguish between inquiries and pre-qualification requests, on the one hand, and certain pre- approval requests, on the other, for purposes of determining whether an application exists. The Commentary now clarifies that pre-qualification requests are subject to the same test applicable to inquiries. n53

In general, a request or inquiry will become an application for purposes of the ECOA if the creditor responds not only by providing information but also by evaluating information about the consumer. The Board changed the term

"applicant" to "consumers" in the Commentary to emphasize that an application may exist for purposes of the ECOA even if the consumer has not actually submitted an application. n54 The Board explained that using the term "applicant" presumes that an application exists, while the point of the comment is that, in the case of an inquiry or pre-qualification request, an application may or may not exist depending upon the circumstances. n55

[b] What Is an Adverse Action?

[i] Adverse Actions Involving New Credit Accounts

The creditor must notify an applicant of an "adverse action." n56 The FRB has proposed amending 12 C.F.R. section 202.9(a)(3)(ii) to require that creditors disclose, to businesses with gross revenues in excess of $1 million in the preceding fiscal year, the right to a written statement of reasons for adverse actions if requested within 60 days of being notified of an adverse action. n57 Conversely, if Regulation B does not treat an action as adverse, Regulation B does not require the creditor to notify the applicant of the action (although the failure to disclose the action taken may be a deceptive trade practice).

When an applicant is applying for new credit, an adverse action is defined as any refusal to grant credit "in substantially the amount or on substantially the terms requested in an application, unless the creditor makes a counteroffer (to grant credit in a different amount or on other terms) and the applicant uses or expressly accepts the credit offered." n58 A creditor's request for a larger down payment and a co-signer when none was previously requested constituted an adverse action. n58.1 Regulation B contains a list in § 202.2(c)(1) of actions that are considered adverse actions and, in § (c)(2), a list of actions that are not adverse. An action that falls within the definitions of both (c)(1) and (c)(2) is governed by (c)(2) and is not an adverse action. n58.2

Nevertheless, an adverse action is not involved where applicable law prohibits the creditor from extending the credit requested or where the creditor does not offer the type of credit or credit plan requested.

[ii] Adverse Actions Involving Existing Accounts

Termination of an account or an unfavorable change in the terms of an account that does not affect all or a substantial portion of a class of the creditor's accounts is an adverse action. n59 In its proposed revisions to Regulation B, the FRB has suggested replacing the phrase "substantial portion" with "substantially all" to emphasize that "a creditor's action must affect the overwhelming majority of accounts in a class to be excluded from the definition of adverse action." n60

Similarly, a telephone company's requirement that only certain existing customers pay a $100 deposit would constitute adverse action and entitle the consumers to a statement of specific reasons. n61 In contrast, an increase in the interest rate on all credit cards issued by the creditor would not be an adverse action. Refusal to increase the amount of credit available to an applicant who has made an application for an increase is an adverse action.

On the other hand, the following would not be adverse actions concerning existing accounts:

- A change in the terms of an account expressly agreed to by the borrower; n62

- Any action or forbearance relating to an account taken in connection with inactivity, default, or delinquency on that account. n63 It is not an adverse action, for example, to repossess collateral, accelerate a defaulted loan, or to request the return of a credit card when the consumer has overrun the credit line. n64

- A refusal or failure to authorize an account transaction at a point of sale or loan. Similarly, there is no adverse action where credit is refused where it appears fraud is involved, the card authorization process is not working, or billing statements have been returned for lack of a forwarding address. n65

- A mortgagor's sale of property where the mortgagee accelerates the mortgage loan; notice need not be sent to the mortgagor or to the property purchaser. n66

[c] Complying With Another Required Notice Does Not Satisfy ECOA Requirement

Other statutes require certain notifications to credit applicants. For example, the FCRA requires notice when a credit report forms the basis of a credit denial. n67 Similarly, HUD or other government programs may require notice of action taken on an application. But these requirements are in addition to, and do not absolve the creditor from complying with, the ECOA notice requirement. n68

[d] Timing of Notice of Adverse Action

A creditor must notify an applicant of any adverse action taken on an application or an existing account within prescribed time periods, as follows:

- The creditor must send notification of adverse action taken on a completed application for credit within 30 days after receiving the application. The application is considered complete once a creditor has obtained all the information it normally considers in making a credit decision; n69

- The creditor must send notification of adverse action taken regarding an incomplete application or on an existing account within 30 days after taking the adverse action; and

- The creditor must send notification of adverse action taken within 90 days after notifying the applicant of a counteroffer, if the applicant has not expressly accepted or used the proffered credit. n70

A written notification of adverse action satisfies the regulation when it is delivered or mailed to the applicant's last known address. An oral notification is considered complete when the creditor "communicates" with the applicant. n71

The ECOA obligates the creditor to provide timely notice but does not expressly require actual notice. n72

[e] Form of the Notification

Most creditors must give the applicant written notification. n73 The FRB has adopted "rules" requiring clear and conspicuous written disclosures in a form that the applicant can retain, but modified the proposal by clarifying that this standard applies only when the ECOA otherwise requires it or the creditor chooses to make disclosures in writing. The Board also exempted certain disclosures, even if provided in writing, from the retainability requirement. n74 In December 2003, the FRB published a proposed rule to define more precisely the standard for providing "clear and conspicuous" disclosures and to provide a more uniform standard among the Board's regulations. n75 The proposed rule relies mainly on the Board's Regulation P (Privacy of Consumer Financial Information), which defines the "clear and conspicuous" standard to mean that disclosure is "reasonably understandable and designed to call attention to the nature and significance of the information" in the disclosure. n76 The Board proposed to adopt this same definition for Regulation B. The ECOA notification may appear on the front or back or on both sides of a form or letter. Creditors that have acted on one hundred and fifty or fewer applications during the preceding calendar year may notify the applicant orally. n77 The notification can be made in a language other than English, so long as it is available in English upon request. n78

[f] Electronic Disclosures

In September 1999, the FRB published a proposed rule permitting creditors to use electronic disclosures in some circumstances to fulfill the requirements of ECOA. n79 Subsequently, the FRB placed the rule on hold in order to re-examine it in light of the passage of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act ("E-Sign Act"). n80 The E-Sign Act, effective October 1, 2000, allows creditors, among others, to replace written disclosures with electronic documents if:

(a) certain disclosures are made to the consumer n81

(b) the consumer consents electronically, or confirms his or her consent electronically, in a manner that reasonably indicates that he or she can access information electronically in the format used by the provider of the information, n82 and

(c) the electronic document is in a form that is capable of being retained and accurately reproduced for later reference by all parties or persons who are entitled to retain it. n83

These requirements apply when a lender wants to use an electronic document to replace a document that ECOA requires to be in writing. n84 This includes the notice of adverse action and the notice of right to the statement of reasons (or the statement itself). n85 However, these requirements do not apply to the notice of the right to a copy of the appraisal n86 and the request for monitoring information. n87

[i] The Interim Final Rule

On April 4, 2001, the FRB published an interim final rule amending Regulation B to provide for electronic disclosures. n88 The interim final rules make some significant interpretations of the requirements of the E-Sign Act for purposes of ECOA, as well as addressing issues not covered by the E-Sign Act, such as the format of electronic disclosures. The FRB also issued a Supplement to the Official Staff Commentary, which discusses the interim final rule. n89

The interim final rule permits ECOA disclosures to be made using "electronic communication" so long as the creditor complies with the consumer consent provisions of the E-Sign Act. n90 The rule defines "electronic communication" as a message transmitted electronically that can be displayed as visual text on equipment. n91

The interim final rule imposes a new clear and conspicuous standard for electronic disclosures. n92 This standard only applies for electronic disclosures. There is no similar standard for paper ECOA notifications. The FRB has stated that it is permissible to place other text, including advertisements, on the same screen as the ECOA disclosures, so long as the clear and conspicuous standard is met.

The interim final rule permits creditors to provide ECOA disclosures electronically by either sending them via e-mail, n93 or posting them on the creditor's website. n94 If a creditor provides disclosures by posting them on its website, the creditor must also send a notice to consumers informing them of the availability of the disclosures ("alert notice"). The creditor has the option of sending this alert notice by e-mail or by postal mail. n95 The interim rule requires notices posted on the creditor's website be retained on the website for ninety days. n96 This ninety-day retention requirement may contradict the E-Sign Act's requirement that an electronic document be "capable of being retained and accurately reproduced for later reference by all parties." n97

The interim final rule does not impose any requirements, such as an electronic return receipt, verifying that a consumer has actually received a disclosure.

The consumer consent requirements of the E-Sign Act are intended to protect consumers by ensuring that they affirmatively consent to receiving important documents in electronic format, and that they have the ability to access and retain those electronic documents. n98 The potential pitfalls lie in attempts by overbearing creditors to entice or coerce consumers into consenting to electronic disclosures when the consumers do not actually have real Internet access.

[g] Content of Notice

The notification should include a statement of the action taken, the creditor's name and address; the name and address of the federal agency with enforcement authority concerning the transaction; and a statement of specific reasons for the action taken; or a disclosure of the applicant's right to request a statement of such reasons within 60 days, with the name, address, and telephone number of the person or office from which the statement of reasons can be obtained. n99 Courts generally agree that long, detailed statements are not required, but some go to the other extreme, requiring mere "transparency." n100 Courts have, for example, approved notices that were ambiguous and required some interpretation by the consumer. n101 The notification must also include a specific notice of the applicant's rights. n102

When providing the reason for the adverse action, the creditor must list the specific reasons for the adverse action and the reasons listed must be the real ones used to make the credit decision. n103 Listing only one of several reasons is not sufficient. If credit is denied, the adverse action reasons must come from both the credit scoring component and the judgmental component of the system, if both are used. n104

If an application is incomplete, the creditor may either deny the application or notify the applicant that information is missing. In the case of a denial, the incompleteness may not be the reason for the adverse action; the creditor must provide a different reason. n105

The reasons given must be the ones utilized by the creditor and the reasons cannot violate the ECOA, but the reasons do not have to be good ones.

[6] Incomplete Applications for Credit

Whenever an application does not contain all of the information that the creditor "regularly obtains and considers" in evaluating applications (including credit reports and other reports or approvals necessary to guarantee the credit), it is considered an incomplete application for credit subject to special notification procedures. n106 The creditor, nevertheless, must act with reasonable diligence to collect information needed to complete the application.

The creditor must take one of two actions within thirty days after receiving an incomplete application: (1) notify the applicant of action taken on the application; or (2) notify the applicant that further information is needed. n107 There is often confusion with respect to whether an application is complete. According to one court, loan documents generally use qualifying language in the earlier stages of the process that is often susceptible to misinterpretation. Examples include noting that a loan application is "conditionally pre-approved" or that the borrower is "conditionally pre-qualified." n107.1

If the applicant does not respond within the designated reasonable period of time to a written notice, the creditor does not need to take further action. n108 Creditors that have acted on one hundred fifty or fewer applications during the preceding calendar year may notify the applicant orally of these facts. n109

[7] Withdrawn Applications for Credit

Where an applicant expressly withdraws an application for credit, the creditor need not comply with the notification requirements. n110 The creditor must still comply with the record retention requirements.

[8] Multiple Applicants and Creditors

When there is more than one applicant for credit, the required notification need be given to only one applicant--the primary applicant, if one is apparent. n111

If an applicant accepts or uses the credit offered by any one creditor in connection with an application to multiple creditors submitted through a third party, no notice of adverse action need be provided by any other creditor that may have rejected the application. n112

[9] Creditor's Inadvertent Error

An inadvertent error by the creditor is not a violation of the notification requirements, provided that the creditor corrects the error as soon as possible after discovering it. n113 Inadvertent errors include clerical mistakes, calculation errors, computer malfunctions, and printing errors. An error of legal judgment is not an inadvertent error.

[10] Right to Copy of Appraisal

A 1991 Amendment to the ECOA n114 requires that creditors provide applicants with notice of their right to receive a copy of any appraisal report of a residence securing the loan obligation being sought. n115 The statute also specifies that the creditor may require reimbursement from the applicant for the cost of the appraisal. The applicant must request the appraisal within 90 days and it must be provided within 30 days. Violations of this requirement should entitle a consumer to relief. n116

[11] Exceptions to Notice Requirements: Incidental Consumer Credit

The ECOA notice requirements do not apply to incidental consumer credit. n117 Incidental consumer credit is defined as:

- Primarily for personal, family, or household purposes;
- Not made pursuant to the terms of a credit card account;
- Not subject to any finance charge or interest; and
- Not payable by agreement in more than four installments. n118

Examples of incidental consumer credit may include (as long as there is no finance charge and no more than four installments) deferment of payment by doctors, home oil companies, hospitals, and some small retailers.

Even though courts have found these types of transactions to be "credit" transactions under the ECOA, the incidental credit exception allows the creditors to avoid complying with important ECOA requirements, including the notice requirements. n119 However, incidental creditors are required to comply with the general prohibition against discrimination, among other ECOA provisions. n120

There are two main legal theories why a consumer is entitled to some notification of the denial of incidental consumer credit. One possible, but not very practical, approach is to challenge the FRB's authority to make this exception.

However, even if a challenge to the regulatory exclusion were successful, the consumer would obtain only prospective relief and perhaps attorney fees, because the creditor will assert the ECOA defense of good faith compliance with FRB regulations. n121

A state UDAP claim is a more direct way to challenge the failure to notify the consumer of denial of incidental consumer credit. n122 The creditor's failure to disclose the action taken is an unfair and deceptive act because it is deceptive to fail to disclose an important part of a sales transaction, in this case that the creditor will not defer payment. n123 Nevertheless, it is more difficult to prove a UDAP violation when the creditor has notified the consumer of the denial of credit, but has not disclosed the reason for the denial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Credit ReportingConsumer ReportsBanking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingDisclosureCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCredit & Mortgage LawsReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3(c)(2)(vi). Incidental consumer credit is defined as: primarily for personal, family, or household purposes; not made pursuant to the terms of a credit card account; not subject to any finance charge or interest; and not payable by agreement in more than four installments.

(n2)Footnote 2. Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.3-1.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a). See also National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 8.2.6 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(k). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 8.2.6.4.2 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n5)Footnote 5. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(i).

(n6)Footnote 6. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(iv).

(n7)Footnote 7. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, § 8.2.6.4 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n8)Footnote 8. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(f).

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a). See also Stinneford, FTC Informal Staff Opinion Letter, July 14, 2000 (FCRA notice must be given to a co-applicant, but not to a guarantor), reprinted in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, Appendix D (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n10)Footnote 10. Davis v. Reg'l Acceptance Corp., 2003 WL 22946190 (E.D. Va. 2003). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, Ch. 8 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n11)Footnote 11. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202 App. C.

(n12)Footnote 12. Id.

(n13)Footnote 13. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 615 item 1, reprinted in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting, Appendix D (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n14)Footnote 14. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(i).

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(i). See Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (lender violated ECOA when, without giving notice that it was making a counteroffer, it extended credit in significantly higher amounts than the borrower had applied for).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) . But see Diaz v. Va. Hous. Dev. Auth., 117 F. Supp. 2d 500 (E.D. Va. 2000) (written notice of counteroffer not required). See also Madrigal v. Kline Oldsmobile, Inc., 423 F.3d 819 (8th Cir. 2005) (no adverse action when creditor kept applicant orally informed of status of application, because oral notification is sufficient when the action being taken is not adverse); Diaz v. Paragon Motors of Woodside, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 519 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) (requiring written notice of an accepted counteroffer would be contrary to well-established rules of statutory interpretation). See also In re Ameriquest Mortg. Co. Mortg. Lending Practices Litig., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81498 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 7, 2006) (consumer's acceptance of a loan where the terms changed between application and closing is not clearly acceptance of a counteroffer because of the surreptitious nature of the bait and switch).

(n17)Footnote 17. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,588-89 (Aug. 16, 1999) ; see also Newton v. United Cos. Fin. Corp., 24 F. Supp. 2d 444 (E.D. Pa. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,154 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud (3d ed. 2007).

(n20)Footnote 20. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Williams v. Thomas Pontiac-GMC-Nissan-Hyundai, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15045 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 22, 1999) (denial of motion to dismiss); Pinkett v. Payday Today Loans, LLC, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12098 (N.D. Ill. July 22, 1999) (denial of motion to dismiss); Davis v. Regional Acceptance Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16775 (E.D. Va. 2002) (titling the car in plaintiff's name, refusing to accept payments, attempting to undo the contract, obtaining a subsequent credit report and then repossessing the car could all be construed as facts sufficiently alleging denial or termination of credit and constituting an adverse action under the ECOA).

(n22)Footnote 22. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(i).

(n23)Footnote 23. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(1)(i).

(n24)Footnote 24. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(1)(iv).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Mungia v. Tony Rizza Oldsmobile Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6624 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (summary judgment granted to plaintiff when creditor relied on co-signer to inform plaintiff that her credit application had been denied).

(n26)Footnote 26. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l); see Burns v. Elmhurst Auto Mall, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6385 (N.D. Ill. May 16, 2001) (dealer who regularly refers applicants to creditors and selects creditors to whom applications can be made is a creditor within meaning of the ECOA); Hudson v. Richfield Mitsubishi, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23674 (D. Minn. July 11, 1997) (denial of defendant's argument in summary judgment motion that it was not covered by the ECOA).

(n27)Footnote 27. The FRB has proposed amending the ECOA definition of creditor to clarify that it also includes one who regularly participates in setting terms of credit, not just in the decision of whether to extend or deny credit. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,594 (Aug. 16, 1999) . The FRB has also proposed amending the Official Staff Commentary to expressly provide that arrangers can include automobile dealers, home builders and home improvement contractors, and those who solely accept applications. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2-1, 64 Fed. Reg. at 44,620 .

The Board adopted the proposed change to the regulatory definition of "creditor," with a few modifications. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The former definition of a creditor was a "person, who, in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in the decision of whether or not to extend credit." The new definition defines a creditor as a person who "regularly participates in a credit decision, including setting the terms of the credit." The new definition was effective April 15, 2003, although the mandatory compliance date was April 15, 2004. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The Board also changed the description of creditors in the Commentary from those "who do not participate in credit decisions but who regularly refer applicants to creditors or who select or offer to select creditors to whom credit requests can be made" to those "who do not participate in credit decisions but who only accept applications and refer applicants to creditors, or select or offer to select creditors to whom credit requests can be made." The key changes are emphasized. See 68 Fed. Reg. 13,145 , amending Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2. Persons that only accept applications and refer applicants to creditors still meet the definition of "creditor," but only for purposes of the prohibition against discrimination and discouragement. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,155 (Mar. 13, 2003) . The prohibitions against discrimination and discouragement are codified at 12 C.F.R. § 202.4(a) and (b). The Board also expanded the illustrative list of actors that might be considered creditors under this section. Previously, the Commentary mentioned only real estate brokers in this category. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2. The Commentary now lists real estate brokers, automobile dealers, home builders, and home improvement contractors. See 68 Fed. Reg. 13,188 , amending Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l)-2 (n28)Footnote 28. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(1)(ii).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Burns v. Elmhurst Auto Mall, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6385 (N.D. Ill. May 16, 2001) (Regulation B foresees that multiple entities may be involved, but only requires one notice to applicant); Leguillou v. Lynch Ford, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1668 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 10, 2000) (granting motion to dismiss). Even though the assignee is not the original creditor, it may still be directly liable for ECOA violations. See Najieb v. Chrysler-Plymouth, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24927 (N.D. Ill. December 31, 2002) (ECOA requires that, when a third party asks a creditor to extend credit to an individual, the notice may be made directly by such creditor or indirectly through the third party), motion to reconsider denied, Najieb v. Chrysler-Plymouth, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7933 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2003) . At least one court held that, for a consumer to state a cause of action in these circumstances, she must show that she did not receive a notice from either the dealer or the proposed assignee, since either source may give notice. See Brand v. Rohr-Ville Motors, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8026 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2003) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Burns v. Elmhurst Auto Mall, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6385 (N.D. Ill. 2001) ; see also Najieb v. Chrysler-Plymouth, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24927 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 30, 2002) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(g); see also Thompson v. Galles Chevrolet Co., 807 F.2d 163 (10th Cir. 1986) (when truck purchasers submitted two credit applications to the same finance company through two different dealers, and credit was approved on the second application, there was no need for written notification that the creditor had stopped considering the first application).

(n32)Footnote 32. Reg B., 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(g).

(n33)Footnote 33. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(g); Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(g)-1.

(n34)Footnote 34. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a). "Application" is defined in Regulation B as "an oral or written request for an extension of credit that is made in accordance with procedures established by a creditor for the type of credit requested." Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f). This term is not defined in the statute. See also Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(f).

(n35)Footnote 35. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)).

(n36)Footnote 36. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,619 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(f)).

(n37)Footnote 37. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,584-44,585 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n38)Footnote 38. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n39)Footnote 39. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) , amending Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)-5.

(n40)Footnote 40. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) ; Official Staff Commentary 2(f)-3.

(n41)Footnote 41. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n42)Footnote 42. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Official Staff Commentary § 202.9(a)(1)-7.

(n44)Footnote 44. Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(f)-3.

(n45)Footnote 45. 63 Fed. Reg. 12,326 (Mar. 12, 1998) .

(n46)Footnote 46. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,589 (Aug. 16, 1999) .

(n47)Footnote 47. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f). Application is not defined in the statute. See also Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f).

(n48)Footnote 48. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)).

(n49)Footnote 49. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,619 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(f)).

(n50)Footnote 50. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,584-44,585 (Aug. 16, 1999) .

(n51)Footnote 51. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n52)Footnote 52. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) , amending Official Staff Commentary 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(f)-5.

(n53)Footnote 53. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) . Comment 2(0)-3.

(n54)Footnote 54. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n55)Footnote 55. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,154, 13,155 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n56)Footnote 56. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a).

(n57)Footnote 57. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,599 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n58)Footnote 58. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(1)(i). At least one court found that an adverse action occurred when all parties involved in a car finance transaction understood that the consumer had applied for credit at a certain rate even though the credit application did not specify a rate. Bayard v. Behlmann Auto. Servs., 292 F. Supp. 2d 1181 (E.D. Mo. 2003) . Instead, the application stated that the consumer sought credit at the "lowest rate available." See id.

(n59)Footnote 58.1. Love v. O'Connor Chevrolet, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68246 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2006) .

(n60)Footnote 58.2. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(3). See, e.g., Southern v. Golden Gate Auto Sales, 487 F. Supp. 2d 951 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 5, 2006) .

(n61)Footnote 59. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(1)(ii). See also Pierce v. Citibank (South Dakota), 843 F. Supp. 646 (D. Or. 1994) (automatic termination of wife's accounts when husband's separate account terminated improper where independently established trustworthiness for each).

(n62)Footnote 60. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,583, 44,593-44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to amend 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(1)(ii)). The FRB has also proposed adding Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(c)(1)(ii)-1 to explain the proposed revisions and to clarify that while "class of accounts" is a broad category, "it does not include a category of accounts designated according to characteristics of customers, such as by their credit scores." 64 Fed. Reg. 44,619 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999). The Board adopted this change to the definition. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n63)Footnote 61. See O'Dowd v. South Cent. Bell, 729 F.2d 347 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n64)Footnote 62. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(2)(i).

(n65)Footnote 63. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(2)(ii). Note that the FRB has proposed revising Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(c)(2)(ii) to clarify that an adverse action does not include another action or a termination on an account due to a current delinquency or default on that account. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,619 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

The Board decided not to adopt these proposed changes in final rules published in March 2003, stating instead that the interpretations will be reviewed and reissued for additional public comment. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,154 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n66)Footnote 64. See Haynes v. Bank of Wedowee, 634 F.2d 266 (5th Cir. 1981) (consumer was in default when the creditor accelerated the loan, and, hence, the acceleration did not constitute adverse action under the exception of Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(c)(ii)). See also Harara v. ConocoPhillips Co., 377 F. Supp. 2d 779 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (no ECOA notice violation when credit denial was based on plaintiff's default); Southern v. Golden Gate Auto Sales, 487 F. Supp. 2d 951 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 5, 2006) (repossession and any continued action against the vehicle were taken in connection with delinquency); Baker v. Capital One Bank, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2625 (D. Ariz. Jan. 24, 2006) (reduction in a consumer's credit limit based on account inactivity is not an "adverse action" although creditor withdrew motion for summary judgment on question whether reinstatement of credit limit to an amount lower than borrower requested is an adverse action).

(n67)Footnote 65. Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(c)(2)(iii).

(n68)Footnote 66. Official Staff Commentary § 202.2(c)(2)(ii)-1.

(n69)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a); see also § 16.03 infra.

(n70)Footnote 68. Official Staff Commentary § 202.9(b)(2)-9.

(n71)Footnote 69. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. 202.9(a)(1)(i). See Saldana v. Citibank, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8327 (N.D. Ill. June 12, 1996) (because Citibank regularly obtains and considers appraisals to complete an application, plaintiff's application was not complete until creditor received appraisal. Although not the case here, court stated that there may be an impermissible motive where creditor deliberately delays obtaining the information necessary to complete an application). See Schwab v. Kids' Fin., Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9199 (D. Colo. Feb. 7, 2008) (issue of material fact about a whether application was complete when denial was sent, since defendant had asked for plaintiff's pay stub and alleged that it had not received it when it sent the denial).

(n72)Footnote 70. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.9(a)(1)(i), (ii), (iv); Official Staff Commentary § 202.9(a)(1)-1.

(n73)Footnote 71. Official Staff Commentary § 202.9-3.

(n74)Footnote 72. See Davis v. U.S. Bancorp., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12930 (D. Minn. July 23, 2003) (plaintiff did not present evidence to rebut presumption that a properly mailed document is received).

(n75)Footnote 73. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(2); Official Staff Commentary § 202.9-4. See, e.g., Curley v. JP Morgan Chase Bank NA, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33395 (W.D. La. May 7, 2007) (oral notice sufficient when defendant orally informed agent of applicant and also said "I'm sorry" when returning the application file to applicant).

(n76)Footnote 74. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) (exempting disclosures under §§ 202.5 and 202.13 from the retainability requirement).

(n77)Footnote 75. 68 Fed. Reg. 68786 (Dec. 10, 2003) . The proposed rule would add a "clear and conspicuous" definition to Regulation B at § 202.2(bb). The staff commentary would also be revised to add comments 2(bb)-1 and -2. Other FRB regulations affected include Regulation Z (Truth in Lending), Regulation M (Consumer Leasing Act), Regulation P (Privacy of Consumer Financial Information), and Regulation DD (Truth in Savings).

(n78)Footnote 76. Id., citing 12 C.F.R. § 216.3(b)(1). Regulation P also provides examples of how to satisfy the standard. 12 C.F.R. § 216.3(b)(2).

(n79)Footnote 77. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(d).

(n80)Footnote 78. 12 C.F.R. § 202.4(b). This section was added as part of the FRB's interim final rule issued March 30, 2001 concerning electronic disclosures. 66 Fed. Register 17779-17786 (April 4, 2001) .

(n81)Footnote 79. 64 Fed. Reg. 49,688 (Sept. 14, 1999) .

(n82)Footnote 80. Pub. L. No. 106-229, 114 Stat. 464 (June 30, 2000), codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 7001 et seq. See also § 6.09[1][a][i][G] and § 10.03[9][c], supra .

(n83)Footnote 81. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(B), (C)(1). See National Consumer Law Center, the Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges, § 9.2.10 (4th ed. 2009), for a more detailed discussion of these requirements.

(n84)Footnote 82. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1)(C)(ii). See National Consumer Law Center, the Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges, § 9.2.10 (4th ed. 2009), for a further discussion of this requirement.

(n85)Footnote 83. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(e).

(n86)Footnote 84. 15 U.S.C. § 7002 allows states to supersede E-Sign's effect on state law by passing the Uniform Electronic Transactions Act or a similar statute that is consistent with E-Sign. A state's enactment of superseding legislation would not, however, affect the application of E-Sign to federal statutes such as ECOA. See National Consumer Law Center, the Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges, § 9.2.10 (2004 Supplement), for a further discussion of this issue.

(n87)Footnote 85. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(d); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a) and (b).

(n88)Footnote 86. 15 U.S.C. § 1691(e); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.5a.

(n89)Footnote 87. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a).

(n90)Footnote 88. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,779-17,786 (April 4, 2001) . In August 2001, the FRB rescinded the October 1, 2001 deadline for compliance with the interim final rule. 66 Fed. Reg. 41,439 (Aug. 8, 2001) .

As part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003, the Board redesignated the interim final rule from § 202.17 to § 202.16. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,154 (Mar. 18, 2003) . However, the Board did not set a new date for mandatory compliance with the interim final rule. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,154 (Mar. 18, 2003) . Instead the Board stated that any substantive revisions to the interim final rule would be made at a future date.

(n91)Footnote 89. 66 Fed. Reg. 17,786 (April 4, 2001) .

(n92)Footnote 90. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(b). The interim final rule also allows third parties who provide ECOA disclosures on behalf of creditors to do so electronically. 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(h). See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n93)Footnote 91. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(a). See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n94)Footnote 92. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(b). See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n95)Footnote 93. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(d)(1). The Official Staff Commentary prohibits creditors from sending electronic disclosures to an e-mail address that is limited solely to receiving communications from the creditor. Official Staff Commentary § 202.17(d)(1)-1. See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n96)Footnote 94. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(d)(2). See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n97)Footnote 95. 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(d)(2)(i). Creditors are not required to send an alert notice when making a request for monitoring information required by 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a). 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(d)(3). See note 71 supra, regarding revision of Regulation B.

(n98)Footnote 96. 15 U.S.C. § 7001(e) (emphasis added). The interim rule also has its own requirement that electronic notifications be "in a form that the applicant may retain." 12 C.F.R. § 202.17(b).

(n99)Footnote 97. 12 C.F.R. 202.12(b). The rules contained in § 202.17 have been redesignated as § 202.16 as part of the FRB's revision of Regulation B issued in March 2003. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,154 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n100)Footnote 98. See National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses § 9.2.10 (4th ed. 2009), for a further discussion of this issue. See also National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 10.6.2.2 (5th ed. 2009).

(n101)Footnote 99. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(a)(2). See Aikens v. Northwestern Dodge, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1339 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 5, 2006) (ECOA does not require creditor to utilize the exact language in the sample forms).

(n102)Footnote 100. See, e.g., Pettineo v. Harleysville Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3858 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2006) (ECOA notice that included reasons for denial that did apply to plaintiff's situation and reasons that did not apply was not in violation of ECOA; the ECOA notice provisions require general transparency only).

(n103)Footnote 101. See, e.g., Aikens v. Northwestern Dodge, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1339 (N.D. Ill. Jan 5, 2006) (it is irrelevant whether the applicant actually finds the notice educational or helpful); Higgins v. J.C. Penny, Inc., 630 F. Supp. 722 (E.D. Mo. 1986) (notice was sufficient to enable the plaintiff to focus her efforts in a particular area and to investigate the proprietary of the company's decision).

(n104)Footnote 102. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(b)(1).

(n105)Footnote 103. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(b)(2); see Official Staff Commentary § 202.9(b)(2)-2.

(n106)Footnote 104. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,156 (Mar. 18, 2003) ; 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(g)(1)(D). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 8.2.6 (6th ed. 2006 and Supp.).

(n107)Footnote 105. Official Staff Commentary § 202.9(a)(1)-3.

(n108)Footnote 106. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.9(c), 202.2(f); Official Staff Commentary §§ 202.2(f)-5, 202.9(c). Proposed and final changes to Regulation B's definition of application, found at 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(f), are discussed at § 5.07[5][a] supra.

(n109)Footnote 107. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9. See Johnson v. Grossinger Motorcorp., Inc., 753 N.E.2d 431 (Ill. App. 1st Dist. 2001) (when car dealer provided consumer with written list of documents required to obtain financing and consumer failed to fully respond, court held written list satisfied ECOA's written notice requirement); Payne v. Diepholz Ford Lincoln Mercury, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 2004) (summary judgment granted for plaintiff consumer when dealer did not provide a written denial or a written explanation of why application was incomplete).

(n110)Footnote 107.1. Jefferson v. Briner, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41423 (E.D. Va. June 21, 2006) .

(n111)Footnote 108. See Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.9(c), 202.2(f). See also Cartwright v. Am. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 880 F.2d 912 (7th Cir. 1989) (mortgage lender did not violate ECOA when it placed application on indefinite hold after requesting that applicant herself provide information on comparable housing prices in a largely minority neighborhood; nor was lender required to provide notice of adverse action, because none had occurred).

(n112)Footnote 109. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(d).

(n113)Footnote 110. Official Staff Commentary § 202.9-2. See also Thompson v. Galles Chevrolet Co., 807 F.2d 163 (10th Cir. 1986) (where truck purchasers submitted two credit applications to the same finance company through two different dealers and credit was approved on the second application, there was no need for written notification that the creditor had stopped considering the first application, which was incomplete and arguably withdrawn); Johnson v. Grossinger Motorcorp., Inc., 753 N.E. 2d 431 (Ill. App. Ct. 2001) (no ECOA notice violation when plaintiff failed to provide creditor with requested documentation prior to repossession and withdrew his application after repossession).

(n114)Footnote 111. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(f). See Mungia v. Tony Rizza Oldsmobile, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6624 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 12, 2002) (summary judgment granted for plaintiff who applied for credit in her name and was not given notice of denial; creditor relied on the co-signer to inform plaintiff that her credit application had been denied).

(n115)Footnote 112. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.9(g).

(n116)Footnote 113. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(c); Official Staff Commentary § 202.14(c)-1. See also Sayers v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 522 F. Supp. 835 (W.D. Mo. 1981) .

(n117)Footnote 114. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, Pub. L. No. 102-242, 105 Stat. 2300, 2306 (Dec. 19, 1991) (adding 15 U.S.C. § 1691(e)).

(n118)Footnote 115. The FRB proposed requiring this notice to be clear and conspicuous and in a form the applicant can retain. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,596 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to add 12 C.F.R. § 204(d)). The Board adopted these proposed changes requiring clear and conspicuous written disclosures in a form that the applicant can retain but modified the proposal by clarifying that this standard applies only when the ECOA otherwise requires it or the creditor chooses to make disclosures in writing. The Board also exempted certain disclosures from the retainability requirement. In addition, based on changes published in March 2003, the rules on providing appraisal reports will now appear as § 202.14. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,146, 13,147 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n119)Footnote 116. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e. But see Wiltshire v. Dhanraj, 421 F. Supp. 2d 544 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (the plain language of § 1691e notwithstanding, plaintiffs have cited no authority and the court's research has revealed none, which indicates that a cause of action exists under the ECOA based on a creditor's failure to furnish an appraisal report; court did not reach a conclusion on the issue, however, because of deficiencies in plaintiff's ECOA claims).

(n120)Footnote 117. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3(c)(2)(vi).

(n121)Footnote 118. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3(c); see also Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3(c).

(n122)Footnote 119. See, e.g., Mays v. Buckeye Rural Elec. Coop. Inc., 277 F.3d 873 (6th Cir. 2002) ; Williams v. AT&T Wireless Servs., Inc., 5 F. Supp. 2d 1142 (W.D. Wash. 1998) (application for cellular phone service held to be incidental credit and creditor exempted from notice requirements.).

(n123)Footnote 120. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3-1.

(n124)Footnote 121. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(e).

(n125)Footnote 122. See § 5.01[8] supra (discussion of state UDAP statutes).

(n126)Footnote 123. See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.2.14 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.08

§ 5.08 ECOA Procedures Subsequent to the Granting of Credit

[1] Creditor Actions Triggered by Borrower's Increased Age or Change in Name or Marital Status

A creditor may not require reapplication, change the terms, or terminate an open-end account such as a credit card merely because account holders reach a certain age, retire, or change their name or marital status. n1 The creditor may take such actions only if there is evidence of the account holder's inability or unwillingness to repay or the credit was granted to both spouses and one has now repudiated further responsibility.

[2] Refusal to Improve Account Terms

Refusal to increase the amount of credit available to an applicant who has made an application for an increase is an adverse action requiring the same notice as if the refusal had been to the initial credit application.

[3] Are Authorized Users Entitled to Notification?

Authorized users are clearly entitled to notification of adverse action if they are contractually obligated. Typically, language on a charge slip or elsewhere may contractually obligate an authorized user for charges for which that user signs, so these users must receive notice of an adverse action.

[4] Credit Reporting; Scope of Requirement

Regulation B establishes procedures which creditors must follow when they furnish information about certain accounts to credit reporting agencies. n2 A creditor that furnishes credit information must designate any new account to reflect the participation of both spouses, if the applicant's spouse is permitted to use or is contractually liable on the account.

These requirements apply only to creditors that furnish credit information to credit bureaus or to other creditors. There is no requirement that a creditor furnish credit information on its accounts. Currently, these procedural requirements do not apply to public utility credit, incidental consumer credit, business credit, or securities credit. n3 The FRB expanded the requirements to public utility credit in the final rules issued in 2003. n4 In response to commentator concerns, the Board reiterated that the reporting requirement applies only to creditors that furnish information to reporting agencies. In these circumstances, utilities will now be required to furnish information that reflects the participation of both spouses.

The Board has noted that creditors are considering public utility payments more frequently, and that it would be helpful to consumers if public utility companies that furnish credit payment information were subject to the same reporting requirements as the other creditors covered by the ECOA. n5

[5] Record Retention

Creditors generally must retain records of credit transactions for approximately as long as the ECOA statute of limitations. Exempt from this rule are public utilities, creditors dealing in securities credit, incidental consumer creditors, and creditors extending credit to governments or governmental subunits and agencies. n6 A creditor must retain the original or a copy of each of the following for 25 months following the date of notification to an applicant of the action taken on an application (or on an incomplete application): n7

- Any application form that the creditor receives;
- Information obtained for monitoring purposes;
- Any other written or recorded information used in evaluating the application and not returned to the applicant upon request;
- Written notification to the applicant of the action taken on the application, or notes concerning oral notification;
- Written notification to the applicant of the specific reasons for adverse action, or notes concerning oral notification; and
- Any written statement submitted by the applicant alleging a violation of the ECOA or Regulation B.

Written copies need not be retained by creditors using a computerized system providing that the information can be timely regenerated.

In its proposed revisions to Regulation B, the FRB has submitted that creditors who solicit potential customers for credit be required to retain any preapproved credit solicitation, the list of criteria the creditor used to select the recipients of the solicitation, any correspondence related to complaints about the solicitation, and any component of any marketing plan related to the solicitation. n8 The creditor would be required to keep the information for 25 months, or 12 months for certain business credit. n9 In final rules published in March 2003, the Board decided to adopt the proposal requiring creditors to retain records related to the text of the solicitation, the criteria used to select potential customers for pre-screened solicitations, and correspondence related to consumer complaints. n10 However, the Board did not adopt the proposed requirement for creditors to identify and retain the component of the marketing plan to which the solicitation relates. The Board clarified that nothing in the final rule requires creditors to establish a separate database or set of files for correspondence relating to complaints about pre-screened solicitations. n11

When adverse action has been taken on a credit transaction outside of the application process, such as when the creditor has terminated or changed terms on an existing account, the creditor also must preserve the following records for 25 months after notification to the applicant of the adverse action:

- Any written or recorded information concerning the adverse action; and

- Any written statement submitted by the applicant, claiming a violation of the ECOA or Regulation B.

Currently, creditors dealing with business credit applicants have shorter retention periods. The FRB has proposed extending the record retention period for small business applicants to 25 months, believing that technical advances have alleviated concerns that such storage would be too costly and time-consuming. n12 Creditors notified that they are under investigation for ECOA violations must retain all records until the case is closed. The Board did not adopt this change. The final rules, published in March 2003, preserve the current record retention period of twelve months for business credit. n13

[a] Retention of Prohibited Information

The ECOA and Regulation B prohibit creditors from requesting certain types of information. n14 However, creditors may retain any information in their files, even if use of it would violate the ECOA or Regulation B, provided that the information was obtained:

- From any source prior to March 23, 1977;
- At any time, from consumer reporting agencies or others without the specific request of the creditor;
- At any time, from the applicant if the creditor did not specifically request the information; or
- At any time, if required for federal or state monitoring. n15

Thus, creditors may retain in their files the type of information which was the basis of much past credit discrimination. For example, they may retain information on birth control and childbearing; information about marital status even when it is irrelevant to creditworthiness; or references to the race of the applicant or the ethnic makeup of the applicant's neighborhood, provided the information was obtained either voluntarily from the applicant or from a third party such as a neighbor or a credit reporting agency. However, creditors may not use prohibited information in evaluating credit applications unless expressly permitted to do so. n16

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityGeneral OverviewBanking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Credit ReportingGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.7(c)(1), (2); Official Staff Commentary § 202.7(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Readers unfamiliar with credit reporting procedures should refer generally to Ch. 16 infra .

(n3)Footnote 3. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. §§ 202.3(a)(2), (b)(2), (c)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145, 13,146 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,583 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n6)Footnote 6. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.3.

(n7)Footnote 7. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(b). The final rule retains the current record retention period of twelve months for business credit. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,152 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,601 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to add 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(b)(7)).

(n9)Footnote 9. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,601 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999) (proposing to add 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(b)(7)). The Board opted for this requirement, believing the information would allow review and analysis of creditors' possible use of prohibited bases in their preapproved credit solicitations, rather than extending the ECOA to prescreened credit solicitations. See 64 Fed. Reg. 44,584-44,585 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n10)Footnote 10. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,153 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,153 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,558, 44,601 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n13)Footnote 13. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,152 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 5.05[3] supra (prohibited requests for information). Note that the FRB proposed revisions to Regulation B would allow creditors to make requests for this information with certain safeguards. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582, 44,594 (Aug. 16, 1999) . In 2003, the Board decided not to remove the prohibition against requesting this information. Instead of lifting the ban, the Board created a new exception for collection of this information for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,147-13,150 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. Official Staff Commentary, 12 C.F.R. § 202.12(a)-2.

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.09

§ 5.09 Proving Credit Discrimination

[1] HMDA and Other Monitoring Data

[a] HMDA Data

The Home Mortgage Disclosure Act ("HMDA") n1 and FRB Regulation C n2 require that lenders collect certain data on loan applicants, and that the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council prepare disclosure statements and produce various reports on the practices of these individual lenders. For each metropolitan statistical area, each lender's disclosure statement shows lending patterns by location, age of housing stock, income level, sex, and racial characteristics. In addition to disclosures for each lender, the Council also produces aggregate reports for each metropolitan statistical area for all lenders, broken down by census tract. Plaintiffs can then compare a particular lender's experience with that of the aggregate lenders for the same geographic area.

The disclosure statement, aggregate data, and other reports are available after July 1 of the following year to the public at central data depositories in each metropolitan area; a listing of such depositories can be obtained from the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council, Washington, D.C. 20006. n3

Strong statistical evidence is particularly critical in proving disparate impact claims, and HMDA data is one of the most effective and accessible sources of data. Although there are limits to HMDA data, advocates bringing reverse redlining claims and credit discrimination cases will almost always want to examine HMDA data and, in many situations, base their cases on it. n4

The HMDA requirements only apply to federally insured or regulated lenders, or where the loan is insured by a federal agency or the lender intends to sell the loan to Fannie Mae or Freddie Mac, and even then does not apply to smaller institutions or those that do not do business in a metropolitan area. Institutions not falling within this definition must still keep information for monitoring purposes pursuant to the ECOA.

In addition, certain for-profit institutions (other than banks, saving institutions, or credit unions) are covered by HMDA requirements. In order to be covered, these institutions must have originated home purchase loans (including refinancings) that equaled at least 10% of the institution's loan-origination volume or home purchase loans (including refinancing) that equaled at least $25 million and have a home or branch office in an MSA and either have total assets of more than $10 million or originated at least 100 home purchase loans, including refinancings. n5

HMDA though is broader in scope than the ECOA in that lenders not only have to obtain monitoring data for loans to purchase or refinance a principal residence, but also for home improvement loans. n6 Covered lenders must keep the following data for each covered loan:

(1) an identifying number for the loan or loan application, and the date the application was received;

(2) the type of loan or application;

(3) the purpose of the loan or application;

(4) whether the application is a request for pre-approval and whether it resulted in a denial or in an origination; n7

(5) the property type to which the loan or application relates; n8

(6) the owner-occupancy status of the property to which the loan or application relates;

(7) the amount of the loan or the amount applied for;

(8) the type of action taken, and the date;

(9) the location of the property to which the loan or application relates, by MSA or by metropolitan division, by state, by county, and by census tract, if the institution has a home of branch office in that MSA or metropolitan division;

(10) the ethnicity, race, and sex of the applicant or borrower, and the gross annual income relied on in processing the application; n9

(11) the type of entity purchasing a loan that the institution originates or purchases and then sells within the same calendar year;

(12) for originated loans subject to Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226 (Truth in Lending), the difference between the loan's annual percentage rate (APR) and the yield on Treasury securities having comparable periods of maturity, if that difference is equal to or greater than three percentage points for loans secured by a first lien on a dwelling or equal to or greater than five percentage points for loans secured by a subordinate lien on a dwelling;

(13) whether the loan is subject to the Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994, and

(14) the lien status of the loan or application. n10

[i] Changes to HMDA Effective January 2004 n11

In January 2002, the FRB announced changes in Regulation C intended to provide more consistent and comprehensive information about mortgage lending activity and to aid in fair lending enforcement. These changes are summarized below.

A number of changes relate to the reporting of subprime loans. The first is a new requirement that lenders designate on their HMDA reports which of the loans they originate are high-cost loans, subject to the provisions of the Home Ownership Equity Protection Act ("HOEPA"). n12

The second predatory lending-related change requires additional reporting on loan pricing. The Board rejected a proposal to require reporting of annual percentage rates ("APRs"), instead adopting a scheme based on the difference between the APR on the loan and the yield on a comparable security issued by the U.S. Treasury. The Board set out tentative thresholds for reporting these spreads. n13 These proposed thresholds were later adopted. n14 For first lien loans, if that spread is more than three percentage points, lenders will have to report how big the spread is. For junior lien loans, lenders will have to report the spread if it is more than five percentage points. n15 This regulation is limited to originations of home purchase loans, secured home improvement loans, and refinancings. n16

The FRB also made changes intended to expand the scope of lenders that must maintain HMDA data. Currently, nondepository for-profit lenders must maintain and report HMDA data only if they have assets above $10 million, originated at least one hundred home purchase or refinance loans in the previous calendar year, and their mortgage lending activity constituted 10% or more of their total loan volume (measured in dollars). n17 The Board added a requirement that nondepository lenders whose mortgage lending activity amounted to $25 million in the previous calendar year must report HMDA data, even if this lending constituted less than 10% of the institutions' total loan volume. n18

Among other important changes the FRB made is a requirement that lenders indicate which applications are for manufactured homes. n19 The new rule also changes the definition of a refinancing loan that must be reported under the HMDA. The new definition covers loans that pay off and replace an existing loan, when both loans are secured by a lien on the dwelling. n20 Previously, lenders could choose from among four scenarios in deciding which refinancing loans to report, leading to inconsistent data. n21

A third change that relates to subprime lending is the requirement that lenders distinguish which loans are unsecured or secured by first liens or subordinate liens. The final rule requires lenders to report lien status on applications and originations but not for loans that they purchase. n22

These changes take effect for data collected under the HMDA beginning January 1, 2004.

[B] Monitoring Data Required by the ECOA

In addition to the HMDA requirements, the ECOA also requires creditors to retain certain information for monitoring purposes. This is significant for two reasons. First, certain smaller institutions, institutions that do not do business within a metropolitan area, and lenders with no federal connection need not comply with the HMDA requirements, while the ECOA requirements will apply to all "creditors," thus including every mortgage lender. n23 (Nevertheless, the ECOA requirement only applies whenever a consumer seeks a loan to purchase or refinance a principal residence, and does not apply to home improvement loans.)

Second, the ECOA requires the creditor to obtain certain information also required by HMDA (the applicant's race or national origin, and sex), but the ECOA also requires information on marital status (married, unmarried, or separated) and age. The ECOA data is not routinely compiled into reports like the HMDA data, and the data is not generally open for inspection. Nevertheless, the relevant enforcement agency may have requested the data, and may have compiled it in some fashion.

[c] Data Not Related to Mortgages

While statistical data relating to home mortgage and home improvement loan applicants are readily available, the same is not the case for other types of credit. In fact, the ECOA prohibits creditors from asking information about an applicant's race, religion, national origin, sex, or other factors except in certain very narrow situations. HMDA and ECOA mortgage data needed for monitoring is one of the few exceptions to this rule.

Thus, except for HMDA and ECOA mortgage data, a creditor legally should not have statistics as to the racial, sexual or other breakdown of those denied or approved for credit. The FRB has created a new exception for collection of this information, however, for the purpose of conducting a self-test under § 202.15. n24 The self-test exception allows creditors that wish to monitor and ensure compliance with the ECOA to inquire and note information about non-mortgage credit applicants' personal characteristics. Creditors that collect this information must disclose at the time the information is requested that the applicant will not be required to provide the information, that the creditor is requesting the information to monitor its compliance with the federal Equal Credit Opportunity Act, that federal law prohibits the creditor from discriminating on the basis of this information or on the basis of an applicant's decision not to furnish the information and if applicable, that certain information will be collected based on visual observation or surname if not provided by the applicant or other person. n25

In order to avail itself of the self-test exception, a creditor must meet the requirements for conducting a self-test under Regulation B, 12 C.F.R. 202.15.

[2] Sources of Evidence

Plaintiffs litigating credit discrimination cases have numerous sources of information and evidence. The best of these are their own records, the creditor's files, credit reporting agencies, using testers, and checking data required to be maintained by federal law or court order. n26

Investigations involving testers recently led to settlements with five mortgage lenders in the Fort Worth and Dallas areas of Texas. The Fort Worth Human Relations Commission used testers to study fair lending practices in the pre-application stage of the mortgage loan process. One hundred white and minority testers assisted in the study of twenty-eight lenders. Eight of the twenty-eight showed disparities in the way minority and white testers were treated.

As a result of these studies, five mortgage lenders entered into agreements with HUD and the Fort Worth Human Relations Commission committing themselves collectively to invest approximately $3.5 billion to assist minority and low-income mortgage borrowers. The lenders are: Temple-Inland Mortgage Corporation, Banc One Mortgage Corporation, Overton Bank and Trust, SFM Mortgage Corporation, and AccuBanc Mortgage Corporation. n27 In addition to the monetary commitments, each lender also agreed to make changes in their training and outreach efforts, to develop and implement standardized pre-application policy and procedures to be applied equally to all prospective applicants, and to apply flexible underwriting standards to the extent allowed by purchasers of their loans in the secondary market.

[3] Proving Disparate Treatment

[a] Introduction

Fair Housing Act and ECOA claims can allege either disparate treatment or disparate impact. Actions under the Federal Civil Rights Acts can only allege disparate treatment. This section describes how to prove disparate treatment, and the next discusses disparate impact.

To prove disparate treatment, plaintiff must show (1) membership in a protected class; (2) application for credit for which the plaintiff was qualified; (3) rejection despite qualification; and (4) defendant continued to approve credit for similarly qualified applicants. n28 The burden then shifts to the creditor to articulate a legitimate non-discriminatory basis for the adverse action. If defendant does so, plaintiff must show the "legitimate" reasons were merely a pretext for discrimination. n29 It may be relatively easy to show that a creditor discriminated against an individual, that is, that it treated that individual differently than other applicants. The difficult part of a disparate treatment case is to show that the creditor acted on a prohibited basis in treating applicants differently.

It is not enough to show that the applicant denied credit was black, a woman, or had some other characteristic protected by credit discrimination legislation. n30 The plaintiff must show that the credit decision was at least in part based on this characteristic. The creditor will typically claim that the credit denial was not based on such a protected characteristic, but was based on objective standards of creditworthiness. n31

Since most applicants have some kind of blemish on their credit record, their employment history, or income potential, it is relatively easy for a creditor to point to a specific legitimate reason to deny credit to an applicant. The plaintiff will have to show that this is not the real reason for the creditor action, that the real reason was because of the applicant's race, sex, or some other special characteristic. n32

If the creditor's business justification is a mere pretext for the real reason, which is a prohibited basis, then it is irrelevant how good a business justification the creditor has presented. Even if the justification is an absolute business necessity, if the real reason for its actions was a prohibited basis, then there is disparate treatment. The Civil Rights Act of 1991 recently reaffirmed this principle in the employment discrimination context, indicating unequivocally that business necessity is no defense against a claim of intentional discrimination. n33

Conversely, if the business justification is the real reason, it is irrelevant that the justification is not a good one or that there are other ways of accomplishing the same business goal with a narrower impact on a prohibited basis. n34 Instead, such a case should be brought for its disparate impact, not disparate treatment.

[b] Direct Evidence of Disparate Treatment

There are two ways to prove that the creditor really used a prohibited basis to make a credit decision--either through direct or circumstantial evidence. Clearly, direct evidence of disparate treatment on a prohibited basis will constitute a prima facie violation of a credit discrimination statute. n35 Sometimes, a creditor will actually admit that its credit decision was based on public assistance status--"We do not handle Medicare or Medicaid patients, or we do not rent to those on public assistance"--or based on familial or marital status or age. It is less likely that a creditor will admit to acting on an individual's race, religion, or national origin.

Nevertheless, direct evidence of an intent to discriminate on a prohibited basis sometimes can be obtained from former employees of the creditor, from those with whom the creditor communicated, or from notations in the creditor's records.

[c] Circumstantial Evidence

[i] General

If the plaintiff does not have direct evidence of disparate treatment, a prima facie case may be established through circumstantial evidence. To prove disparate treatment using circumstantial evidence, most courts will require that a plaintiff first establish a prima facie case of discrimination by showing: 1) membership in a protected class; 2) application for credit for which the plaintiff was qualified; 3) rejection despite qualification; and 4) that defendant continued to approve credit for similarly qualified applicants. n36 In a typical predatory lending case, a prima facie case would require showing that the plaintiff: 1) is a member of a protected class; 2) applied for and was qualified for a loan; 3) was given grossly unfavorable terms; and 4) that the lender continues to provide loans to other applicants with similar qualifications, but on significantly more favorable terms. n37 There should be an alternative to the fourth prong if plaintiffs can present direct evidence that the lender intentionally targeted them on a prohibited basis. At a minimum, in that case, the plaintiff should not have to show that the lender makes loans on more favorable terms to others. n38

This analysis is derived from a Supreme Court employment discrimination case, McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Green. n39 With certain exceptions, most courts use this test for claims brought under the ECOA, the FHA, and the federal Civil Rights Acts.

The lender may then rebut the prima facie case by showing a legitimate, nondiscriminatory business justification for the denial of credit. n40 If the lender meets its burden, the plaintiff must prove that the alleged justification is merely a pretext for discrimination. n41

[ii] Where Denial Is Based on Credit Scoring System

When a creditor uses a credit scoring or similar system, the circumstantial evidence might merely indicate that the applicant is a member of a protected class, received a passing grade under the creditor's objective system, but was still denied credit.

Disparate treatment can also be shown even if the applicant failed to obtain a passing grade on the creditor's test. The issue is whether other applicants received the same failing grade but still were offered credit.

Another possibility of disparate treatment even when an applicant failed objective tests is to determine if there is discrimination as to how the tests are applied. A good example is the real estate appraisal process. If appraisals on comparable property are lower for blacks than whites, this would cause blacks to fail the loan-to-value ratio more often.

Differences in appraisal practices are also specifically prohibited by the Fair Housing Act, and should violate the ECOA and the Civil Rights Acts as well. Look to see if a creditor uses only white appraisers, for example, even when black appraisers are available who might be more familiar with predominantly black neighborhoods.

One method of discovering discrimination in appraisal practices is to ask the creditor to appraise the same residence a second time, under a different name, where the fictitious applicant has different characteristics than the original applicant.

The Justice Department has begun to look more closely at credit scoring biases in its enforcement actions. In 1999, the DOJ filed a suit against Deposit Guaranty National Bank ("DGNB"), alleging violations of the FHA and ECOA based on intentional discrimination against African-Americans in its underwriting of applications for home improvement loans. n42 The complaint alleged that DGNB did not strictly adhere to its stated credit scoring decision-making process or to its written underwriting guidelines for credit scoring and loan approval. DGNB loan officers allegedly had broad discretion to override decisions for credit-scored loan applications and a high level of this decision-making was inconsistent with the credit scores of individual applicants. The purpose and effect, according to the complaint, was to grant credit less frequently to African-American loan applicants in violation of the FHA and ECOA.

A settlement agreement was filed simultaneously with the filing of the complaint. Under the terms of the settlement agreement, a $3 million fund was to be created to compensate African-American applicants who were denied home improvement loans under DGNB's prior underwriting system. In addition, DGNB agreed to adopt new underwriting policies which include a second level of review for all applications initially recommended for rejection, a limited number of bank officials who have the authority to override a credit score, and frequent reviews of all underwriting decisions for consistency with the ECOA and FHA. n43

In a case against ANB also filed in 1999, the DOJ alleged that ANB implemented different standards for English language applicants than for Spanish language applicants. n44 The DOJ alleged that ANB coded Spanish language applications as "Hispanic" and maintained those accounts in a separate sub-file. According to the complaint, ANB then lowered the credit score cutoff and increased the credit lines for English language applicants, but did not adopt those changes for Spanish language applicants. As a result, the denial rate of credit cards for Spanish speaking applicants was higher and others were given lower credit limits. The case was settled in January 2001. The settlement agreement provided for a $1.5 million fund to compensate Hispanic applicants and cardholders affected by the allegedly discriminatory practices. The settlement did not contain any injunctive relief. n45

[iii] Denial Based on a Judgmental System

Many creditors use a judgmental system. In this situation, it is useful to consider the stated reason for the creditor rejecting the applicant.

If the stated reason for denial of credit is a mere pretext for the real reason which is on a prohibited basis, the plaintiff should be able to prove disparate treatment. The plaintiff will also have proven a violation of the ECOA requirement that the notice of adverse action contain the real reason for credit denial.

[iv] Disparate Efforts to Encourage Applicants

In some cases, the discrimination can be even more subtle, involving discrimination not in handling applications, but in how applications are encouraged or discouraged. This might be circumstantial evidence of the creditor's intent in dealing with the applicant. That is, if a creditor takes direct steps to discourage black applicants, and then denies credit to a black who still applies, the general discouragement of black applicants is evidence of the creditor's intent in denying credit to the black who does apply.

[v] Use of Statistics

Credit discrimination can be shown by demonstrating a statistical disparity between persons whose applications were accepted and those who were rejected. n46 General statistics which do not relate to the discriminatory policy alleged do not satisfy the plaintiff's burden.

[4] Proving Disparate Impact

[a] Introduction

An alternative under the FHA and the ECOA to proving disparate treatment is proving disparate impact. That is, although the creditor may not be treating applicants differently on a prohibited basis, the effect of the creditor's practices is to adversely impact a particular protected class. Proof of disparate impact is very different than proof of disparate treatment. Where disparate treatment on a prohibited basis cannot be proved, the plaintiff can attempt to prove discrimination based on the effect of the creditor's practices. Disparate impact and disparate treatment are not mutually exclusive claims, but rather different methods of proof. n47

To prove disparate impact, the applicant must show how a specifically identified policy, practice, or procedure has a significantly greater impact on members of a protected class.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court has not directly ruled on the issue, n48 it is widely accepted that proof of discriminatory impact or effect can lead to a violation of the credit discrimination provisions of the Fair Housing Act and the ECOA. Nevertheless, most cases describing the precise standards as to whether a practice has a discriminatory impact are in the employment or housing areas, and do not involve credit discrimination. n49 This requires the plaintiff to make extra efforts in proving disparate impact until the standards are more routinized.

[b] The ECOA Commentary Standards

The most important standards for credit discrimination cases are those set out in the FRB's Official Staff Commentary to ECOA Regulation B. FRB interpretations of the ECOA are afforded great deference by the courts, n50 particularly considering the limited court precedent available. n51 Courts will not overturn the Commentary standards unless the standards are demonstrably irrational or conflict with the statute, or are beyond the FRB's authority.

The Official Staff Commentary states:

> "The act and regulation may prohibit a creditor practice that is discriminatory in effect because it has a disproportionately negative impact on a prohibited basis, even though the creditor has no intent to discriminate and the practice appears neutral on its face, unless the creditor practice meets a legitimate business need that cannot reasonably be achieved as well by means that are less disparate in their impact." n52

[c] The Fair Housing Act Standard

Effects test standards under the FHA in housing discrimination cases are similar to those found in the ECOA Commentary. n53

[d] Burdens of Proof

The plaintiff has the burden of proving the creditor's practices have a disparate impact on a protected class. n54 Generally, this requires proof that (1) plaintiff is a member of a protected class; (2) plaintiff applied for credit; (3) plaintiff was qualified for the loan; and (4) plaintiff was denied credit. The burden of proof then shifts to the creditor. n55

[e] Redlining

Probably the most frequently considered example of a credit factor with a disparate impact on minorities is geographical redlining. Redlining refers to the practice of separating out certain neighborhoods for disparate treatment as to mortgage or other types of lending. n56

Government enforcement actions have also focused on redlining. For example, in United States v. Albank, n57 the DOJ alleged that Albank refused to fund mortgage loans secured by residential properties located in certain areas in Connecticut and in Westchester County, New York, where significant populations of African-Americans and Hispanics lived. Although Albank made exceptions to its policies, the exceptions were predominately for white borrowers. Albank entered into a consent decree, which required the bank to adopt a remedial special mortgage lending program which provides homebuyer counseling and marketing tailored to the communities it previously refused to serve and to provide $55 million in loans at below market rates to those areas.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityDiscriminatory ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)Proof of DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsFair Housing ActReal Property LawFinancingRedlining

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 12 U.S.C. § 2801.

(n2)Footnote 2. 12 C.F.R. § 203.

(n3)Footnote 3. The FRB releases HMDA data on CD-Rom annually, usually in August. It is also available online. To obtain more information by phone, call 202-452-2016 (HMDA Assistance Line); online, visit www.ffiec.gov/hmda. Data obtained in this way is designed to allow users to look up one lender at a time. To do more in-depth analysis, users will need to import the data into statistical software or a database manager. See generally Jo Craven McGinty, Home Mortgage Lending: How To Detect Disparities (Investigative Reporters & Editors, Inc. 2000). A number of websites have information about analyzing and obtaining access to HMDA data, including: The Center for Community Change (www.communitychange.org); Inner City Press (www.innercitypress.org); and National Fair Housing Advocate (www.fairhousing.com).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g, Paschal v. Flagstar Bank, 295 F.3d 565 (6th Cir. 2002) (HMDA data, along with tester results and testimony, considered sufficient evidence to support jury's finding of racial discrimination).

(n5)Footnote 5. 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(e)(2). Prior to the 2002 amendments, for-profit lenders were exempt unless they had assets over $10 million and originated more than one hundred home purchase or refinance loans in the preceding year and their lending activity constituted 10% or more of their total loan volume measured in dollars. The Board changed this requirement in response to concerns that a number of large consumer finance companies that are active mortgage lenders apparently were not required to report HMDA data because they did not reach the 10% volume level. Rather than eliminating the 10% requirement, the Board added a requirement that non-depository lenders whose mortgage-lending activity amounted to $25 million in the previous calendar year must report HMDA data, even if this lending constituted less than 10% of the institutions' total loan volume. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222 (Feb. 15, 2002) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Pre-approval programs are defined as programs under which, after a comprehensive analysis of the creditworthiness of the applicant, the lender issues a written commitment to lend borrowers up to a specific amount for a specific period of time, subject only to limited conditions, such as finding a suitable property. 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. In the 2002 final rules, the Board decided to require lenders to specify when loans involve manufactured housing. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222 (Feb. 15, 2003) . The Board adopted the definition of "manufactured housing" found in HUD regulations. 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(i), citing the HUD regulation at 24 C.F.R. § 3280.2.

(n9)Footnote 9. In 2002, the Board published rules that changed the way that race and ethnicity are reported to allow borrowers to designate more than one race or ethnicity. This change is in conformance with other government standards. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222 (Feb. 15, 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. On May 2, 2002, the FRB announced a delay in the effective date of these changes from January 1, 2003 to January 1, 2004. 67 Fed. Reg. 30,771 (May 8, 2002). There are two exceptions to the January 1, 2004, effective date. First, the new requirement that lenders taking applications by phone must ask for an applicant's ethnicity, race, and sex is effective January 1, 2003. 67 Fed. Reg. 43,217 (June 27, 2002). Second, beginning in 2003, lenders must use the census tract numbers and corresponding geographic areas from the 2000 census when reporting on all applications and loans. 67 Fed. Reg. 30,771 (May 8, 2002). In March 2003, the Board published proposed rules to address the collection and reporting of certain data for applications received before January 1, 2004, for which final action is taken on or after January 1, 2004. 68 Fed. Reg. 11,010 (Mar. 7, 2003). Under the proposed transition rules, lenders would not have to indicate whether an application or loan involved a request for preapproval or is related to a manufactured home and could at their option, continue to apply the current definitions of a home improvement loan and of refinancing. Id.

(n12)Footnote 12. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7230 (Feb. 15, 2002) (amending 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a)(13)). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth In Lending Ch. 10 (4th ed. 1999 and Supp.) (HOEPA); Center for Community Change, Home Mortgage Disclosure Act: Fed Announces New Mortgage Disclosure Rules--More Info on Subprime Lending, available at www.communitychange.org (last visited April 2002). This change, effective January 1, 2004, should expand the information available on HOEPA loans. However, it will not capture the large numbers of loans that lenders fail, intentionally or not, to categorize as high-rate HOEPA loans.

(n13)Footnote 13. In the February 2002 final rules, the Board solicited additional comment on the thresholds. Final thresholds should be available in mid-2002.

(n14)Footnote 14. 67 Fed. Reg. 43,218 (June 27, 2002) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7228 (Feb. 15, 2002) (amending 12 C.F.R. § 203.4(a)(12) and (13)).

(n16)Footnote 16. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7228 (Feb. 15, 2002) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 12 C.F.R. § 203.3(a)(2), § 203.2(e).

(n18)Footnote 18. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7224 (Feb. 15, 2002) .

(n19)Footnote 19. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7226 (Feb. 15, 2002) (amending 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(i)).

(n20)Footnote 20. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7226 (Feb. 15, 2002) (amending 12 C.F.R. § 203.2(k)).

(n21)Footnote 21. 67 Fed. Reg. 7222, 7226 (Feb. 15, 2002) .

(n22)Footnote 22. 67 Fed. Reg. 43,218,43,219 (June 27, 2002) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.13(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. Id. The new exception is codified at § 202.5(b)(1).

(n25)Footnote 25. 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(1).

(n26)Footnote 26. For discussion of various sources of evidence of discrimination and of credit scoring systems used by creditors, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 4.4 (4th ed. 2005 and Supp.).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Fort Worth Human Relations Commission Study Leads to $1.375 Billion Fair Lending Settlement, National Fair Housing Advocate 1 (Apr. 1998); Michael Janofsky, Texas Lenders Pledge $1.4 Billion in Housing Case, N.Y. Times (Mar. 10, 1998); HUD Settles With Texas Mortgage Lender Charged With Fair Housing Act Violations, 70 BNA Banking Report 688 (Apr. 27, 1998). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 4.4.4 (3d ed. 2002 and Supp.), for further discussion of use of testers. See also Stella J. Adams, Testing and Investigating for Fair Housing Violations: Designing an Appropriate Test in Lending and Predatory Practices Cases (Apr. 12, 2002) (prepared for the John Marshall Law School, "Testing and Investigating for Fair Housing Violations" seminar, April 12 and 13, 2002) (available from the John Marshall Law School); Office of Policy Development and Research, United States HUD, All Other Things Being Equal: A Paired Testing Study of Mortgage Lending Institutions, Final Report(Apr. 2002).

(n28)Footnote 28. A.B. & S. Auto Serv., Inc. v South Shore Bank, 962 F. Supp. 1056 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Simms v. First Gibraltar Bank, 83 F.3d 1546 (5th Cir. 1996) , reh'g denied, 95 F.3d 56 , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1041, 117 S. Ct. 610, 136 L. Ed. 2d 535 (1996) .

(n30)Footnote 30. See O'Dowd v. South Cent. Bell, 729 F.2d 347 (5th Cir. 1984) (court rejected white couple's claim that telephone company discriminated in requiring a deposit, because of their exchange's racial composition, where couple had history of late payments and deposits were required of all such customers); Gross v. United States Small Bus. Admin., 669 F. Supp. 50 (N.D.N.Y. 1987) , aff'd per curiam, 867 F,2d 1423 (2d Cir. 1988) (no ECOA violation based on sex or marital status discrimination, since applicant was rejected due to past delinquent loan with same agency).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Cartwright v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 880 F.2d 912, 923 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Sassower v. Field, 752 F. Supp. 1182, 1188 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n32)Footnote 32. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 1550, 123 L. Ed. 2d 211 (1993) (burden of persuasion remains with plaintiff to show defendant's stated reason were pretext to discriminate); Soules v. United States Dep't of Housing & Urban Dev., 967 F.2d 817, 822 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(2).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Texas Dep't of Cmty. Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (1981) (employment case); McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1973) (employment discrimination case). See, e.g., Hu v. Cantwell, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23884 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2007) (conclusory allegations of racial discrimination sufficed for purpose of surviving a motion to dismiss a Fair Housing Act claim). But see Campbell v. Robb, 162 Fed. Appx. 460, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 622 (6th Cir. Jan. 9, 2006) (unpublished decision) (for prima facie case under § 1981, unlike Title VII, plaintiff must show that she was qualified to rent apartment even if plaintiff has direct evidence of discrimination). Cf. Hallmark Developers, Inc. v. Fulton County, 466 F.3d 1276, 1284 (11th Cir. 2006) (ruling that plaintiff had failed to make a prima facie case under the Fair Housing Act of disparate treatment by zoning authority).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Pinchback v. Armistead Homes Corp., 907 F.2d 1447, 1452-53 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 983, 111 S. Ct. 515, 112 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1990) . See, e.g., Faulkner v. Glickman, 172 F. Supp. 2d 732 (D. Md. 2001) (to constitute direct proof of discriminatory intent statements in question must be more than stray or isolated remarks) (citing O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp., 56 F.3d 542, 549 (4th Cir. 1995) , rev'd on other grounds, 517 U.S. 308 (1996)) . See, e.g., Tribett v. BNC Mortg., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3573 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 17, 2008) (although stating that vague allegations of discrimination will not suffice to state an FHA claim, permitting the plaintiffs to amend their complaint to allege that either the defendant or its brokers disproportionately targeted African-American and Hispanic communities for loans and that the defendant continued to pay yield spread premiums despite knowing of price disparities in subprime loans that were due to race).

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Simms v. First Gibralter Bank, 83 F.3d 1546 (5th Cir. 1996) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 95 F.3d 56 , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1041, 117 S. Ct. 610 (1996) ; Saldana v. Citibank, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8327 (N.D. Ill. Jun. 13, 1996) ; Farris v. Jefferson Bank, 194 B.R. 931 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996) .

(n37)Footnote 37. See Frank Lopez, Using the Fair Housing Act to Combat Predatory Lending, 6 Geo. J. on Poverty L. & Pol'y 73 (1999).

(n38)Footnote 38. See, e.g., Wiltshire v. Dhanraj, 421 F. Supp. 2d 544 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (plaintiffs have alternative to fourth prong if they present direct evidence that the lender intentionally targeted them for unfair loans on a protected basis). The court in Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) , noted that plaintiffs in reverse-redlining cases do not need to show that defendants made loans on more favorable terms to anyone other than the targeted class as long as they show that the terms of the loans are unfair and predatory. However, the Hargraves court was not explicitly examining the revised McDonnell-Douglas test.

(n39)Footnote 39. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1973) . For a contrary holding, see Latimore v. Citibank, 151 F.3d 712, 714 (7th Cir. 1998) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 4.2.3 (5th ed. 2009) for further discussion of these issues.

(n40)Footnote 40. See Cartwright v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 880 F.2d 912, 923 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Graham v. Chevron Credit Bank, N.A., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17122 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 22, 1997) ; Sassower v. Field, 752 F. Supp. 1182, 1188 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) , aff'd in part, vacated in part, remanded on other grounds, 973 F.2d 75 (2d Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1043, 113 S. Ct. 1879, 123 L. Ed. 2d 497 (1993) .

(n41)Footnote 41. Soules v. United States Dep't of Hous. & Urban Dev., 967 F.2d 817, 822 (2d Cir. 1992) ; Latimore v. Citibank, F.S.B., 151 F.3d 712 (7th Cir. 1998) (civil rights, Fair Housing Act, and ECOA case). See Matthiesen v. Banc One Mortgage Corp., 173 F.3d 1242 (10th Cir. 1999) ; Massey v. First Greensboro Home Equity,

Inc., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6575 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 1998) . See, e.g., Nicholson v. Johanns, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83909 (S.D. Ala. Nov. 13, 2007) . See also Martinez v. Freedom Mortg. Team, Inc., 527 F. Supp. 2d 827 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (refusing to dismiss FHA claim based on allegations that the defendants put more pressure on applicants of Hispanic origin to accept higher rates than on white applicants, rejecting the defendants' argument that the plaintiff must show that he was denied credit to state a claim); Dismuke v. Connor, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91912 (W.D. Ark. Dec. 14, 2007) (defendant in farm loan case showed legitimate non-discriminatory reasons for delay of loan decision where loan application was incomplete, borrower requested an increase in loan amount after initial application, and outside agency was hired to complete title work and do appraisal; plaintiff did not contend these arguments were pretextual).

(n42)Footnote 42. See United States v. Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank, Civ. Action No. 3:99CV67OLN (S.D. Miss. 1999) (available at http://www.usdoj.gov).

(n43)Footnote 43. See United States v. Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank, Civ. Action No. 3:99CV67OLN (S.D. Miss. 1999) (available at http://www.usdoj.gov).

(n44)Footnote 44. United States v. Associates Nat'l Bank, Civ. No. 99-196 (D. Del. Mar. 29, 1999) (available at http://www.usdoj.gov).

(n45)Footnote 45. United States. v. Associates Nat'l Bank, No. 99-196 (D.Del. 2001) (settlement agreement), also available at www.usdoj.gov (March 2001).

(n46)Footnote 46. See International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States, 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (1977) (prima facie case of employment discrimination found).

(n47)Footnote 47. Watson v. Forth Worth Bank & Trust, 487 U.S. 977, 987, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 2785, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827, 840 (1988) (in Title VII employment case, court stated that the factual issues that typically dominate in disparate impact cases do not imply that the ultimate issues are different than in cases where disparate treatment analysis is used).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Town of Huntington v. Huntington Branch, NAACP, 488 U.S. 15, 16, 109 S. Ct. 276, 102 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1988) (while the Supreme Court did not reach the question of which standard to utilize as to disparate impact, because the defendant had not challenged the application of one particular test, the Court did comment that it was "satisfied on this record that disparate impact was shown, and that the sole justification proffered to rebut the prima facie case was inadequate"). However, in 2005, the Supreme Court held in Smith v. City of Jackson, 125 S. Ct. 1536 (2005) , that the ADEA provides a cause of action for disparate impact. The Court noted that the ADEA, like Title VII, contains express language prohibiting conditions that "adversely affect" employment status on account of age. The ECOA does not contain such language. However, the majority also noted favorably that the EEOC had interpreted the statute to permit disparate impact claims. Justice Scalia based his concurrence on this argument. Focusing on the regulatory agency's approval of the disparate impact test bolsters the argument that disparate impact is available under the ECOA since the FRB has maintained that the ECOA allows such claims. Zamudio v. HSBC N. Am. Holdings, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13952 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 20, 2008) (it is well established that there is a disparate impact claim under the ECOA and FHA; case involves claim that racially discriminatory assumptions are embedded in statistical formulas used to analyze credit information and underwrite loans).

(n49)Footnote 49. One of the few cases under the Fair Housing Act to deal with credit discrimination is Briceno v. United Guar. Residential Ins. Co., No. 3:89, CV 7325, 5 Fair Hous.--Fair Lending Rep. (P-H) P 9.9 (N.D. Ohio dismissed Sept. 18, 1989). Compare Latimore v. Citibank, F.S.B., 151 F.3d 712 (7th Cir. 1998) (civil rights, FHA, and ECOA case in which court compares prima facie case under FHA followed generally with test used in Northern District of Ohio). With respect to the ECOA, there is support indicating that a disparate impact theory can be used. See Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315, 325 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (Granting plaintiff's motion for class certification and denying defendant's motion for summary judgment in part), vacated and remanded on unrelated grounds, 296 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2002) . (The legislative history of the ECOA indicates that the Congress intended an "effects test" concept, as outlined in the employment field in the Supreme Court in the cases of Griggs v. Duke Power Co., 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (1971) and Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody, 422 U.S. 405, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1975) and citing 12 C.F.R. § 202.6(a) n.2 and pt. 202, Supp. I., § 202.6(a)(2), Official Staff Commentary on Regulation B); Haynes v. Bank of Wedowee 634 F. 2d 266 (5th Cir. 1981) (noting use of disparate impact standard in ECOA case); A.B. & S Auto Serv. v. South Shore Bank, 962 F. Supp. 1056 (N.D. Ill. 1997) .

(n50)Footnote 50. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Milhollin, 444 U.S. 555, 100 S. Ct. 790, 63 L. Ed. 2d 22 (1980) .

(n51)Footnote 51. However, without referring to the FRB's interpretation that the effects test applies, the Seventh Circuit recently rejected the effects test in an ECOA case. Latimore v. Citibank F.S.B., 151 F.3d 712 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n52)Footnote 52. Official Staff Commentary § 202.6(a)-2.

(n53)Footnote 53. See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 4.3.2.4 (5th ed. 2009).

(n54)Footnote 54. See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 4.3.2 (5th ed. 2009).

(n55)Footnote 55. Matthiesen v. Banc One Mortgage Corp., 173 F.3d 1242 (10th Cir. 1999) ; Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (plaintiffs presented statistical evidence showing that African Americans were 203% more likely to be charged an interest rate mark-up than similarly situated whites, paying an average of $315.35 more than white customers).

(n56)Footnote 56. See National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, Ch. 7 (5th ed. 2009). See also Jonathan Brown, Racial Redlining: A Study of Racial Discrimination by Bankers and Mortgage Companies in the United States (1993) (In 2001, available on-line at http://www.essential.org).

(n57)Footnote 57. United States v. Albank, Clearinghouse No. 52,054, Civ. No. 97-1206 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 13, 1997) (complaint and consent decree).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.10

§ 5.10 Litigating a Credit Discrimination Case

[1] The Plaintiff

[a] The Plaintiff Must Be Aggrieved

Under any of the credit discrimination statutes, it is important that the plaintiff be "aggrieved" by the statutory violation. Otherwise, the plaintiff may not have standing under U.S. Constitution Article III. Moreover, both the ECOA and the Fair Housing Act provide private remedies only for "aggrieved" persons. n1 There must also be some linkage between the relief sought and why the plaintiff is aggrieved.

"Aggrieved person" is defined in Fair Housing regulations as any person who claims to be injured by a discriminatory practice or believes he or she will be injured by a discriminatory practice that is about to occur. n2

The aggrieved individual bringing an ECOA, Fair Housing or Civil Rights Act suit need not be a member of the group being discriminated against, as long as the individual is injured by the discrimination. For example, a white can bring an action under any of the credit discrimination laws if denied credit because he or she lives in a predominantly black neighborhood or associates with blacks. n3 Courts may allow an association to bring ECOA claims on behalf of its members as long as Article III standing requirements are met. n4 To make this determination, a court will determine: a) whether the association's members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; b) whether the interests the association seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and c) that neither the claims asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of the association's individual members in the lawsuit. n5

Increasingly, consumers are facing the possibility that their claims against creditors may not be resolved by either a judicial or an administrative process. A growing problem for consumers seeking to assert their statutory rights has been the insertion of mandatory arbitration clauses into consumer credit agreements. It is not an issue that has arisen much in the credit discrimination context, but should be anticipated as arbitration clauses become commonplace in consumer contracts. n6

[b] Other Preconditions for Plaintiffs

Under the ECOA, only "applicants," those who seek credit, those who have been extended credit, and others obligated on the debt can bring actions. It will be more difficult for an organization representing applicants to bring an ECOA action than a FHA case.

If an action is brought under section 1982, the plaintiff must be a United States citizen. The same requirement does not apply for section 1981, the ECOA, or the FHA.

[c] Class Actions

Class actions are available under all the credit discrimination statutes, and the same issues arise in such class actions as with any other type of consumer class action. n7 Several unique issues also arise in deciding whether to bring a discrimination suit as an individual or class action. Under the ECOA, if a creditor has a net worth less than $1 million, then maximum class action punitive damages are less than the punitive damages available in an individual action. In addition, since there are no limits to the size of punitive damages under the FHA and Civil Rights Acts, there may be no need to bring a class action if punitive damages are the major relief sought, since an individual action may produce a large punitive damages award that would deter future misconduct. Despite differences in damage amounts and other variations among individual members of a class, it is possible to certify class actions in discrimination cases. For example, in a case challenging a car financing company's allegedly discriminatory mark-up policies, courts have certified classes even though there are individual questions of fact involved and variations in consumers' interactions with specific dealers. n8

In addition, there may be significant differences in damages among class members. For example, in a redlining case, potential class members may all live in the designated geographic area or be members of a protected group but will differ as to individual qualifications for credit. In this case, courts may certify the class for injunctive relief only and require individual claims for damages to proceed separately. n9

[2] The Defendant

Most credit discrimination cases are brought against the creditor extending or refusing to extend the credit. Very few such creditors are exempt from the credit discrimination laws. Those who arranged the loan application and parties that might eventually purchase a loan as well as the credit extenders may also be sued. n10 ECOA remedies are limited where a government entity is the creditor, and the ECOA and FHA may not apply to an individual who only makes one or two isolated loans.

Corporate principals may also be individually responsible for the acts of the corporation's agent. n11 Holding the principals responsible for the acts of the corporation and its agents can be critical to collecting on a judgment at the end of the day. n12 Corporations and other entities that are wholly owned by one or a few individuals may be merely a shell to protect the individuals from liability. The individuals may, in reality, be the deep pockets. Informal investigation before the filing of a case can clarify the corporate and/or familiar relationships and agency ties that form the web of a fraudulent scheme.

[3] Selecting the Forum

[a] General

Credit discrimination cases can be brought either in federal district court, without regard to the amount of damages involved, or in state court. n13 Relevant factors include court schedules, fees, different discovery rules, class notification requirements, etc.

If federal court is the preferred forum, then at least one claim must be under the federal credit discrimination laws--the ECOA, the FHA, or the Federal Civil Rights Acts. If the plaintiff prefers a state forum, the plaintiff must anticipate that the defendant will prefer a federal forum. If the plaintiff's complaint includes a claim under a federal discrimination law, the defendant may be able to remove the case to federal court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. section 1441.

If the plaintiff wants to stay in state court, the safest course will be to plead an action solely under a state credit discrimination or other state claim.

A consumer may wish to bring a federal credit discrimination law claim by way of counterclaim to a creditor's state court collection action. This will generally not provide a basis to remove an action to federal court because the federal question must appear in the complaint.

[b] Deciding Whether to Select an Administrative Determination

There are two ways to make a claim under the FHA. The aggrieved party may file an administrative complaint with HUD n14 or commence a private civil action. n15 These two procedures are not mutually exclusive and may be pursued contemporaneously or sequentially. There is no requirement that the administrative remedies be exhausted prior to instituting a private action. n16 The only restriction is that trial of the private action may not be commenced once the actual administrative hearing has begun n17 and an administrative hearing may not go forward if a civil trial has begun. n18

The administrative complaint procedure will, in many cases, offer a satisfactory method of redress at a substantially lower cost than a private action. The greatest advantage of the administrative route is this low cost to the complainant since the government bears the burden of investigating and proving the case even after it is removed to federal court. The complainant need not have an attorney or pay any filing fees. The complainant, nevertheless, has the right to intervene in the administrative proceeding and conduct an independent investigation.

There are drawbacks to the administrative option: loss of control over the case, delay, and no punitive damages. Given all of these factors, the wisest course is probably to commence both an administrative and judicial proceeding simultaneously. This strategy prevents the respondent from using its right to remove as a delaying tactic, allows the aggrieved party to conduct discovery and early motion practice in the private proceeding, putting pressure on the respondent to settle as it is forced to spend money, and prevents delay if HUD finds no reasonable cause to prosecute the administrative complaint.

[c] How the Administrative Procedure Works

If an individual files a complaint with HUD, HUD is required to refer the complaint to the state or local agency in whose jurisdiction the alleged discrimination occurred, if that agency is "certified" as having a law comparable to the Federal FHA. n19 The list of certified states is updated annually.

The state or local agency is given 30 days to commence a proceeding. n20 If the agency fails to do so, the complaint reverts back to HUD. n21

After the complaint is filed, or reverts back due to the inaction of a state or local agency, HUD has 100 days in which to conduct an investigation. n22 If the investigation leads to a finding of reasonable cause, the government initiates an action.

Either the respondent or the complainant has the right at this stage to elect that the case be removed to federal district court. n23 The purpose of this provision is to assure that the statute does not violate the respondent's constitutional right to a jury trial. If no election to remove the case is made, the case is heard by an administrative law judge.

[d] Mandatory Arbitration

Mandatory arbitration clauses are now appearing more frequently in consumer contracts. If enforced, these clauses often place consumers at a great disadvantage to their adversaries. n24

[i] Problems of Pre-Dispute Arbitration Clauses

Discovery is limited in arbitration proceedings, which benefits creditors who have automatic access to consumer information collected in their own files. Hearing fees are often beyond consumers' means. Erroneous interpretations of the law cannot be appealed. Punitive damages may be precluded. Arbitrators may be more sympathetic to defendant companies who appear before them frequently than to unfamiliar plaintiff consumers. n25

Consumer class actions may be explicitly barred or limited in arbitration clauses. Although they may work to undermine the deterrent function of civil rights laws, the Supreme Court has ruled that mandatory arbitration clauses are enforceable as applied to statutory civil rights claims unless plaintiff can show that Congress, in enacting the particular statute at issue, intended to preclude waiver of a judicial forum. n26

[ii] Applicability to Credit Discrimination Claims

Most of the cases dealing with the application of pre-dispute arbitration clauses to civil rights litigation concern employment discrimination claims. The majority rule is that such agreements should be analyzed under standard contract law principles. n27 It is hoped that, in doing so, courts will consider the pro-civil rights concerns underlying civil rights statutes, and not permit the federal policy favoring arbitration to trump the federal policy of protecting those concerns. There should, at a minimum, be an inquiry into whether the consumer has knowingly waived her right to a jury trial in order for a pre-dispute arbitration clause to be deemed enforceable. n28

[4] Statute of Limitations

[a] Affirmative Actions--ECOA Claims

The ECOA statute of limitations is two years from the date of the occurrence of the violation. n29 The statute of limitations runs from the date the violation occurs and not the date the credit is applied for or the date the credit is granted. One court has stated that the date of the violation is the date by which the creditor was required to provide notice of its adverse action. n30 If an ECOA enforcement agency n31 or the U.S. Attorney General n32 has commenced an ECOA proceeding or civil action within two years of the occurrence, a victim of discrimination may bring a private action up to one year after the commencement of that proceeding or civil action. In some extraordinary cases, Congress may waive the statute of limitations. This occurred in 1999 when Congress passed special legislation to waive the ECOA two-year limit for a class of African-American farmers alleging discrimination by the USDA in its agricultural credit programs. n33 The extension of time applied to African-American farmers who had a discrimination complaint unrelated to employment filed between 1981 and 1997. n34

[b] Fair Housing Act Claims

The statute of limitations for a private cause of action arising under the Fair Housing Act is two years after the occurrence or termination of the discriminatory practice. n35 Thus, if a practice is ongoing, the two year period does not begin to run until the practice ceases.

The Sixth Circuit has developed a three-part test to determine whether a continuing violation exists. n36 First, the defendant's wrongful conduct must continue after the precipitating event that began the pattern. Second, injury to the plaintiff must continue to accrue after that event. Finally, further injury to the plaintiff must have been avoidable if the defendant had at any time ceased its wrongful conduct. n37

An administrative complaint may be filed within one year of the occurrence. n38 The two year period is tolled while any administrative action is proceeding. n39 The statute of limitations should also be tolled for fraudulent concealment; courts will probably rely on state law standards as to fraudulent concealment.

Courts will frequently follow the discovery rule in FHA cases. n40 The key question in cases involving a question of plaintiff's capacity is whether the plaintiff had the awareness or ability to comprehend the original action. Thus, a borrower who suffered from advanced Alzheimer's Disease when the loan was consummated was held to lack the ability to comprehend her injury. n41 Unlike under the ECOA, the continuing violation theory is well established in FHA cases. The continuing violation doctrine allows plaintiffs to recover for incidents outside of the statutory time limit if at least one instance of the alleged practice occurred within the period and the earlier acts are part of a continuing pattern of discrimination. n42

One district court confronting this issue in a credit discrimination case noted the difficulty in comparing credit discrimination cases to employment discrimination cases. n43 In this case, plaintiffs challenged automobile-finance mark-up policies that they alleged constituted an over-arching pattern of discrimination that persists today. The court found that the ruling in Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman n44 could save otherwise time-barred claims, provided they are found to be part of the over-arching illegal policy. n45 The court found that the plaintiff's claims in this case were more analogous to the hostile work environment claims than discrete discriminatory acts, noting that "[t]he ongoing discrimination plaintiffs allege could only manifest itself after a critical mass of similarly situated people experience it, so as to bring an over-arching pattern to light ... Cumulation is necessary to demonstrate an otherwise concealed policy, and plaintiffs alleged that GMAC and the dealers acted pursuant to a specific, racially discriminatory policy." n46

[c] Federal Civil Rights Act Claims

Neither 42 U.S.C. section 1981 nor section 1982 contains a specific statute of limitations. Courts entertaining such claims must look to analogous state limitations periods. n47

[d] Limitations Period for Credit Discrimination Claims When Responding to a Creditor's Lawsuit

Even though the statute of limitations may have run for an affirmative credit discrimination claim against the creditor, such claims usually can be brought by way of recoupment (i.e., as a defense) to the creditor's collection action. Although the consumer cannot recover an amount in actual and punitive damages in excess of the debt upon which the creditor is seeking collection, the limitations period will not apply to a recoupment claim.

The majority of reported ECOA cases which have addressed the issue of recoupment have permitted recoupment claims after the limitations period has run. n48 While most courts agree that the ECOA may be employed to defend against nonpayment of a promissory note, courts disagree as to whether the setoff or recoupment claim should be asserted as a counterclaim for damages or as a special defense of illegality. n49

[5] Creditor Defenses

[a] Business Justification Defense

[i] General

The business justification defense is only relevant where the plaintiff alleges a violation of the general rule against discrimination, based either on disparate treatment or disparate impact. The nature of the business justification defense is very different depending on whether a case involves disparate treatment or impact. There will be no business justification defense where the creditor violates a specific ECOA requirement, such as failing to send notice of an adverse action or seeking information not permitted.

[ii] Disparate Treatment Cases

In a disparate treatment case, the business justification for the discrimination cannot justify disparate treatment on a prohibited basis. Instead, the creditor will have to argue that it did not treat individuals differently on a prohibited basis; its sole basis for discrimination was a legitimate business basis.

In other words, there is no business justification for discrimination on the basis of race, religion, national origin, and other such bases. Congress has ruled that such discrimination is prohibited.

Instead, the creditor may only offer the business justification as the sole reason for its actions, and that the prohibited basis did not affect the creditor's actions. Then the issue at trial for the finder of fact will be what was the real basis of the creditor's actions, the prohibited basis or the business justification.

It is important to note that the issue is not whether the creditor knowingly discriminated on a prohibited basis. The issue is whether the prohibited basis was, in fact, the cause of the discrimination.

[iii] Disparate Impact

In a disparate impact case, the business justification defense is very different. The plaintiff might not even challenge the existence of a business justification or that this was, in fact, the basis for the creditor's actions. Instead, the plaintiff will allege that use of this business justification has a disparate impact on a prohibited basis, that the effect of using this legitimate business factor is to disproportionately deny credit to minorities or other protected groups.

The issue then becomes whether the disparate impact is so great as to outweigh the business justification. Under the ECOA and FHA, the rule is that a creditor practice with a disproportionately negative impact on a prohibited basis is illegal unless the practice meets a legitimate business need that cannot be reasonably achieved as well by means that are less disparate in their impact. In a disparate impact case, the issue is not whether there is a business justification or whether this was the real reason for the creditor's actions. The issue will be how great is the business justification and whether the same need may otherwise be met by some other approach.

[b] Special ECOA Defenses

[i] Good Faith Compliance

The ECOA states that a creditor is not liable for any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with Regulation B or with the Official Staff Commentary, even if the regulation or commentary is amended or determined to be invalid. n50 The conduct must not only conform to the regulation, but must have been in good faith conformity.

[ii] The Inadvertent Error Defense

Regulation B sets out an inadvertent error defense for ECOA actions. n51 This defense is limited in scope. First, the inadvertent error defense excuses the creditor only from liability for violations of five specified Regulation B provisions--those dealing with review of credit history of a spouse's account, notification of action taken on an application, furnishing of credit information to reporting agencies, record retention, and information for monitoring purposes. The defense does not apply to actions based on the general rule against discrimination, cosigner requirements, application procedures, credit evaluation systems, or many other specific ECOA provisions.

Even when dealing with the five specified provisions, the creditor must show its actions fall within the Regulation's definition of inadvertent error. An inadvertent error is defined by Regulation B as a mechanical, electronic, or clerical error that a creditor demonstrates was not intentional and occurred notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid such errors. n52

To make use of this shield from liability, the creditor thus has to overcome a number of burdens. It must show that an error was mechanical, electronic or clerical. n53

The creditor also has the burden of demonstrating that the error was not intentional and that it occurred despite the maintenance of procedures "reasonably adapted" to avoid such errors.

Moreover, on discovery of an error dealing with furnishing of credit information to reporting agencies or notification of an action taken on an application, the creditor must correct the error as soon as possible. Thus, the defense should not be available if the inadvertent error is known to the creditor before the applicant brings the ECOA claim.

[iii] Creditor's Reasonable Notice of Violation

Where a transaction involves more than one creditor, and one creditor violates the ECOA, the other creditors in a transaction are not liable for the violation to the extent that they lacked "reasonable notice" of the violation before becoming involved in the transaction. n54 Note, however, that the FRB proposed revisions to Regulation B that would amend section 202.2(l) to clarify that "creditor" includes those who regularly participate in making a credit decision by setting terms, not just the decision to extend or deny credit. n55 The final rule adopted this proposal with a few modifications. n56 The current definition of a creditor is a "person, who, in the ordinary course of business, regularly participates in the decision of whether or not to extend credit." The new definition defines a creditor as a person who "regularly participates in a credit decision, including setting the terms of the credit." The new definition was effective April 15, 2003, although the mandatory compliance date was April 15, 2004. n57

[c] Defenses to Fair Housing Act and Civil Rights Act Claims

The FHA and the Civil Rights Acts do not provide for any special defenses. The Fair Housing regulations provide a defense where an entity purchases loans. Such an entity may consider factors justified by business necessity, such as considerations employed in normal and prudent transactions. n58 Of course, business justification is an issue in any disparate treatment or impact case, as well.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityDiscriminatory ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)Proof of DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsEnforcementReal Property LawFinancingFederal ProgramsU.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development Programs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e; 42 U.S.C. § 3613.

(n2)Footnote 2. 24 C.F.R. § 100.20; NAACP v. American Family Mut. Ins. Co., 978 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 907, 113 S. Ct. 2335, 124 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1993) . See also KB2S, Inc. v. City of San Diego, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3673 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2007) ("conjectural" injury from alleged Fair Housing Act violation did not suffice to establish Article III standing); Vaughn v. Consumer Home Mortgage Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 54267 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 2006) (ruling that plaintiffs failed to establish Article III standing in a Fair Housing Act claim brought against the Department of Housing and Urban Development).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Simms v. First Gibraltar Bank, 83 F.3d 1546 (5th Cir.) , reh'g denied, 95 F.3d 56 , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1041, 117 S. Ct. 610, 136 L. Ed. 2d 535 (1996) (white owner of apartment complex in minority area).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ceiba, Inc. v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18082 (E.D. Pa. Sep. 22, 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See id. (citing Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Adver. Comm'n, 432 U.S. 333 (1977)) . The Ceiba court found that the plaintiff failed to meet the first prong of the Hunt test because it did not allege that any of its members applied to defendants for credit.

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 5.10[3][d] infra. For detailed discussion of arbitration clauses and challenges thereto, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.5.3 (5th ed. 2009), and National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (5th ed. 2007 and supp.).

(n7)Footnote 7. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions: A Practical Litigation Guide (6th ed. 2006).

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Coleman v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 220 F.R.D. 64, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1243 (M.D. Tenn. Jan. 14, 2004) ; see also Simpson v. Flagstar Bank, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17175 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 11, 2003) (in FHA case challenging compensation policy for loan officers, class certification upheld despite defendants' claims that plaintiffs' requests for emotional damages requires individual evaluation that would destroy the commonality, typicality, and predominance prongs of the class certification test); Cason v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 212 F.R.D. 518, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25792 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 16, 2002) . But see Rodriguez v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7280 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 19, 2002) (denying class certification under Rule 23(b)(2) and (b)(3) in auto financing case due to court concerns that individualized inquiry into the reasons for thousands of credit decisions would be required).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Buycks-Roberson v. Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank, 162 F.R.D. 322 (N.D. Ill. 1995) ; Fischer v. Dallas Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 106 F.R.D. 465 (N.D. Tex. 1985) , aff'd, 835 F.2d 567 (5th Cir. 1988) . See also Cason v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 212 F.R.D. 518 (M.D. Tenn. Oct. 16, 2002) (granting class certification under Rule 23(b)(2) for injunctive and declaratory relief only in an ECOA disparate impact case and denying certification under Rule 23(b)(2) for plaintiffs' claim for disgorgement of unjust enrichment as an equitable remedy. Latter claim denied on the grounds that disgorgement was a request for money that would require individual determinations in order to distribute awards to class members). A memorandum on the issue of unjust enrichment under the ECOA can be found on the CD-Rom accompanying this volume. The case against Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp. settled in June 2003. The settlement in Cason v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp. is available at www.nclc.org/initiatives/cocounseling/content/settlement_agreement.pdf.

(n10)Footnote 10. The Seventh Circuit expressed displeasure at the plaintiff's inclusion of the appraiser as a defendant in an ECOA case. Latimore v. Citibank F.S.B., 151 F.3d 712 (7th Cir. 1998) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) (Memorandum Opinion and Order); FTC v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., No. 98-237, (D.D.C. January 29, 1998), available at www.ftc.gov (March 2001). The court denied summary judgment on the issue of individual liability. FTC v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22115 (D.D.C. July 13, 1998) . For purposes of ECOA, the court held that corporate principal could be liable as a "creditor" based upon the fact that Regulation B at 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(1) qualifies the term "creditor" to include those who "regularly participates in the decision" to extend credit. The court ruled there was sufficient evidence to survive summary judgment based upon the FTC's allegations that principal directed and controlled Capital City's acts and practices.

(n12)Footnote 12. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11. 3.2 (5th ed. 2009). However, a January 2003 U.S. Supreme Court decision expressly rejected the non-delegable doctrine, at least as long as it is characterized in those terms. In Meyer v. Holley, 537 U.S. 280, 123 S. Ct. 824, 154 L. Ed. 2d 753 (2003) , the Supreme Court examined whether the FHA imposes personal liability without fault upon an officer or owner of a residential real estate corporation for the unlawful actions of the corporation's employee or agent. The Court found that the FHA imposes liability without fault in accordance with traditional agency principles, imposing vicarious liability upon the corporation but not its officers or owners. 537 U.S. 280, 123 S. Ct. 824, 154 L. Ed. 2d 753 (2003) . See also Miles v. Century 21 Real Estate L.L.C., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2334 (E.D. Ark. Jan. 11, 2007) (holding that, though plaintiff did not establish actual agency between franchisor and franchisee for purposes of Fair Housing Act liability, plaintiff could establish apparent agency). But see Wright v. Castle Point Mortgage, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32761 (D.N.J. May 22, 2006) (no liability under Fair Housing Act when defendant did not originate loan, and plaintiff's claim was based on discriminatory loan terms). Coelho v. Alliance Mortg. Banking Corp., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39633 (D.N.J. May 10, 2007) (refusing to dismiss FHA claim against a mortgage broker, rejecting the defendant's argument that "to arrange to make available" a transaction did not fall within the scope of to "make available" such a transaction); Jackson v. Novastar Mortg., Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93584 (W.D. Tenn. Dec. 20, 2007) (refusing to dismiss the plaintiff's FHA claim against lender, rejecting the defendant's argument that the mortgage broker that arranged the loan was not the lender's agent but was rather an independent contractor).

(n13)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(f); 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(A).

(n14)Footnote 14. 42 U.S.C. § 3610.

(n15)Footnote 15. 42 U.S.C. § 3613. See Kotkin, The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988: New Strategies for New Procedures, 17 NYU Rev. of L. & Soc. Change 755 (1989-90), for an excellent analysis of the relative merits of the two procedures.

(n16)Footnote 16. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(2). See Bryant Woods Inn, Inc. v. Howard County, 124 F.3d 597 (4th Cir. 1997) ; Green v. Konover Residential Corp., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18893 (D. Conn. Nov. 24, 1997) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(3).

(n18)Footnote 18. 42 U.S.C. § 3612(f).

(n19)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 3610(f).

(n20)Footnote 20. 42 U.S.C. § 3610(f)(2)(a).

(n21)Footnote 21. 24 C.F.R. § 103.110 (1989). See also United States v. Shanrie Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5646 (S.D. Ill. Jan. 26, 2006) (rejecting company's argument that the government's alleged failure to adequately conciliate should result in a remand to HUD and further conciliation; the FHA procedural requirements are not intended to function as a barrier to federal district court jurisdiction).

(n22)Footnote 22. 24 C.F.R. § 103.225.

(n23)Footnote 23. 42 U.S.C. § 3612(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (5th ed. 2007)., for a discussion of the enforceability of these agreements; see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.5.3 (5th ed. 2009)., for a discussion of arbitration of ECOA and FHA claims.

(n25)Footnote 25. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices, § 12.6.8 (7th ed. 2008). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (5th ed. 2007), for discussion of enforceability of arbitration agreements in consumer cases.

(n26)Footnote 26. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (1991) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.5.3 (5th ed. 2009).

(n28)Footnote 28. See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination, § 11.5.3.2 (5th ed. 2009). For a critique of the Supreme Court's decisions on pre-dispute arbitration clauses, see Paul D. Carrington and Paul H. Haagen, Contract and Jurisdiction, 1996 Sup. Ct. Rev. 331.

(n29)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(f). See also Ramsdell v. Bowles, 64 F.3d 5 (1st Cir. 1995) , cert. denied sub nom. Ramsdell v. Machias Sav. Bank, 516 U.S. 1113, 116 S. Ct. 913, 133 L. Ed. 2d 844 (1996) . For example, if the claim is in connection with loan servicing, treatment after default or account administration, the claim runs from the alleged discriminatory treatment.

(n30)Footnote 30. Para v. United Carolina Bank, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16843 (E.D.N.C. Aug. 25, 1998) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See 15 U.S.C. § 1691c(a); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202 app. A (complete list of federal agencies with ECOA enforcement powers and the creditors subject to each agency's jurisdiction).

(n32)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(f).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Agricultural, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1999 Pub. L. 105-277 § 741, 112 Stat. 2681 (interim rule codified at 7 U.S.C. § 2297).

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Stovall v. Veneman, 394 F. Supp. 2d 21 (D.D.C. 2005) (court rejected plaintiff African-American farmer's claim to extend ECOA statute of limitations because he did not file complaint until 2004 and his claims were based on events that occurred between 1999 and 2001).

(n35)Footnote 35. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(A).

(n36)Footnote 36. Paschal v. Flagstar Bank, 295 F.3d 565 (6th Cir. 2002) , citing Tolbert v. State of Ohio Dept. of Trans., 172 F.3d 934, 938 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., Paschal v. Flagstar Bank, 295 F.3d 565 (6th Cir. 2002) (plaintiff's continuing violation theory rejected).

(n38)Footnote 38. 42 U.S.C. § 3610.

(n39)Footnote 39. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(B).

(n40)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Jones v. Citibank, 844 F. Supp. 437, 440 /-/41 (N.D. Ill. 1994) (the statute in this case began to run on the date on which Citibank notified plaintiffs of its decision to deny their loan application because it is the date on which the plaintiffs alleged they discovered that they suffered an injury). But see Mills v. Equicredit Corp., 294 F. Supp. 2d 903 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (statute not tolled because any terms of the loan that could be deemed to be unfair or unaffordable were disclosed in the loan agreement and in documents signed by plaintiff). See also Tillery v. Darby-Rogers Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68584 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 25, 2006) (tolling limitations period for Fair Housing Act claim when plaintiffs could not have learned of violation within statutory period).

(n41)Footnote 41. Estate of Henderson v. Meritage Mortgage Corp., 293 F. Supp. 2d 830 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (analysis applied to RESPA, TIL, HOEPA, FHA, ECOA, and § 1981 claims).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman, 455 U.S. 363, 102 S. Ct. 1114, 1125, 71 L. Ed. 2d 214 (1982) (when a plaintiff, pursuant to the FHA, challenges not just one incident of conduct violative of the Act, but an unlawful practice that continues into the limitation period, the complaint is timely when it is filed within the statute of limitations for the last asserted occurrence of that practice); Spann v. Colonial Vill., Inc., 899 F.2d 24, 34, 34 /-/35 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (affirming finding of continuing violation when last of "long stream" of advertisements with white models occurred within statutory period); Hargraves v. Capital City Mortgage Corp., 140 F. Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 2000) .

(n43)Footnote 43. See Davis v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 406 F. Supp. 2d 698 (N.D. Miss. 2005) . See also Claybrooks v. Primus Auto. Fin. Servs., Inc., 363 F. Supp. 2d 969 (M.D. Tenn. 2005) (plaintiffs must show overarching policy of discrimination as well as a specific, allegedly discriminatory act against them within the relevant limitations period).

(n44)Footnote 44. 455 U.S. 363, 102 S. Ct. 1114, 1125, 71 L. Ed. 2d 214 (1982) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Id.

(n46)Footnote 46. Id.

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Slack v. Carpenter, 7 F.3d 418 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n48)Footnote 48. See, e.g., Silverman v. Eastrich Multiple Inv. Fund, L.P., 51 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 1995) (recoupment claims never barred by statute of limitations); Bolduc v. Beal Bank, SSB, 994 F. Supp. 82 (D.N.H. 1998) (the 2-year statute of limitations does not bar the assertion of an ECOA violation as an affirmative defense against a creditor); Boone Nat'l S&L Assoc. v. Crouch, 2001 Mo. App. LEXIS 325 (Mo. Ct. App. Feb. 27, 2001) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, remanded, 47 S.W.3d 371 (Mo. 2001) ; Nowicki v. Green, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7058 (E.D. Pa. May 12, 1999) ; Sharp Elecs. Corp. v. Yoggev, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5751 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 28, 1995) ; FDIC v. Medmark, Inc., 897 F. Supp. 511 (D. Kan. 1995) ; Integra Bank v. Freeman, 839 F. Supp. 326 (E.D. Pa. 1993) ; Machias Sav. Bank v. Ramsdell, 689 A.2d 595 (Me. 1997) ; Mundaca Inv. Corp. v. Emery, 674 A.2d 923 (Me. 1996) ; FDIC v. Notis, 602 A.2d 1164 (Me. 1992) ; Norwest Bank Minn. FDIC, N.A. v. Midwestern Mach. Co., 481 N.W.2d 875 (Minn. Ct. App. 1992) . See, e.g., Associates Home Equity Servs., Inc. v. Troup, 778 A.2d 529, 539 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2001) .

(n49)Footnote 49. See, e.g., CMF Va. Land, L.P. v. Brinson, 806 F. Supp. 90 (E.D. Va. 1992) (counterclaim for damages); American Sec. Bank, N.A. v. York, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14309 (D.D.C. Sept. 1, 1992) (special defense of illegality); Stewart Title Guar. Co. v. WKC Rests. Venture Co., 961 S.W.2d 874 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) , modified, reh'g denied, transfer denied, (Mar. 31, 1998) (a recoupment action can mitigate or extinguish the creditor's damages, but cannot result in an affirmative judgment for the debtor).

(n50)Footnote 50. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(e). See also Official Staff Commentary Introduction-1.

(n51)Footnote 51. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(c).

(n52)Footnote 52. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(s).

(n53)Footnote 53. See Harbaugh v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 615 F.2d 1169, 1174 (7th Cir. 1980) (apparently condoning "good faith computer programming deficiencies").

(n54)Footnote 54. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.2(l). The FRB solicited comments in its Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on whether it should modify the reasonable notice standard, but chose to retain the present standard, believing "that it is not possible to specify with particularity the circumstances under which a creditor may or may not be liable for a violation committed by another creditor." 63 Fed. Reg. 12,326 (Mar. 12, 1998), 64 Fed. Reg. 44,590 (Aug. 16, 1999) . However, the FRB stated that under some circumstances the "reasonable notice" standard may carry with it the need for a creditor to exercise some degree of diligence with respect to third parties' involvement in credit decisions. Id.

(n55)Footnote 55. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,594 (proposed Aug. 16, 1999).

(n56)Footnote 56. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,145 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n57)Footnote 57. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144 (Mar. 18, 2003) .

(n58)Footnote 58. 24 C.F.R. § 100.125(c).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.11

§ 5.11 Private Remedies

[1] Actual Damages

[a] Tangible Injury

Actual, out-of-pocket expenses and other tangible injuries are recoverable as actual damages under the ECOA, the Federal FHA, the Federal Civil Rights Acts, and state credit discrimination statutes.

It is not necessary for a credit applicant to establish actual damages under the ECOA in order to take advantage of the other possible statutory remedies, such as punitive damages, equitable and declaratory relief, and attorney's fees. There are, however, other sound reasons for establishing the existence of actual damages and aggressively pursuing such damages.

Some courts faced with claims for punitive damages may be reluctant to penalize a creditor when no "real," measurable damage has been done to the client. It is important, therefore, to demonstrate whenever possible that actual harm is the basis for the punitive damages claim.

Moreover, it would be a tactical mistake not to submit evidence of actual damages, since the ECOA explicitly provides that an award of actual damages is one factor in measuring any award of punitive damages. n1 Also, although the ECOA places a strict limit on the amount of punitive damages which may be awarded, no such limit is placed on actual damages.

[b] Intangible Damages

Courts under all the federal discrimination statutes have been generous in providing for actual damages for pain and suffering, humiliation, or damage to credit rating.

Thus, courts award as actual damages injury caused for the "private, momentary and personal affront"; n2 loss of a credit card's convenience, increased purchasing power, and protection in case of emergency; embarrassment, humiliation and mental distress; n3 inconvenience; deprivation of constitutional rights; and harm to the applicant's reputation for or actual creditworthiness. Of course, none of these damages will be awarded automatically. It is good practice to allege these specific damages in the complaint, and, of course, the plaintiff must prove that these injuries did in fact occur. n4

Actual damages for such injury are not in lieu of or a form of punitive damages, but are actual damages to be awarded in addition to punitive damages.

[2] Multiple and Minimum Statutory Damages

None of the federal discrimination statutes provide either multiple or minimum statutory damages. Instead, these statutes provide for actual and punitive damages. Nevertheless, some relevant state statutes do provide multiple and/or minimum statutory damages.

[3] Punitive Damages

[a] General

Punitive damages under the FHA and the Federal Civil Rights Acts are discretionary with the court. Generally, the standard for a punitive damages award will be reckless, wanton, or malicious disregard for the plaintiff's rights and/or an intentional violation of federal law. n5 Punitive damages under the FHA are only available if an action is brought before a judge, not an administrative law judge.

On the other hand, the ECOA contains language which appears to mandate an award of punitive damages. A non-complying creditor "shall be liable ... for punitive damages ... in addition to any actual damages" awarded. n6 The one statutory exception is that no punitive damages are available in actions brought against a creditor that is a government or a governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality.

Despite the statutory language, though, ECOA punitive damages may not be as mandatory as it first seems nor FHA punitives as discretionary as on first blush.

Plaintiff should both attempt to show the creditor's wantonness or recklessness (to establish punitive damages) and also the impact of the practice on the applicant (to establish actual damages for intangible injury).

[b] Limits on the Size of Punitive Damage Awards

There are no limits to the size of punitive damage awards under the Federal Civil Rights Acts or under the FHA.

The ECOA, on the other hand, does limit the size of a punitive damages award. For an individual action, the maximum punitive damages award is $10,000 in addition to any actual damages that are awarded. n7 For a class action, the limit on punitive damages is the lesser of $500,000 or 1% of the creditor's net worth. (Where a creditor's net worth is less than $1 million, higher total punitive damages are actually available in an individual action.)

This limit only applies to punitive damages, and there is no limit to the size of actual damages that may be recoverable in a class action. Thus, where the maximum punitive damages in a class action is relatively small, proof of actual damages becomes critical. n8

It appears that the $10,000 limit applies to each creditor, applicant, and violation involved in a case so that the total punitive damages in an ECOA case can be significantly more than $10,000.

The ECOA also provides a list of relevant factors to be considered by a court to determine the amount of punitive damages to be awarded. n9

[c] ECOA Standards for Determining the Size of a Punitive Damages Award

ECOA provides that the size of a punitive damages award should be based on a number of factors: size of the actual damages award; n10 frequency and persistence of the creditor's failure to comply (either against the same person or violations against others); the resources of the creditor, most likely meaning net worth; the number of persons adversely affected; "the extent to which the creditor's failure of compliance was intentional," triggered by wanton or reckless conduct; and any other relevant factors.

[4] Equitable and Declaratory Relief

[a] Prospective Relief

Equitable and declaratory relief is available under all the federal credit discrimination statutes. Not only is it clear that such relief is available for a violation of the Federal Civil Rights Acts, but the FHA specifically states that the court "may grant as relief, as the court deems appropriate, any permanent or temporary injunction, temporary restraining order, or other order ... " n11 Similarly, the ECOA states that an aggrieved credit applicant may obtain "such equitable and declaratory relief as is necessary to enforce the requirements" of the ECOA. n12

[b] Voiding an Individual's Obligation Under a Note or Security Agreement

Where creditors require cosigners or guarantors to sign a note or security agreement in violation of the ECOA, it is an attractive remedy to seek to void the cosigner or guarantor's liability under the note or security agreement.

The courts are divided whether an ECOA or related claim may void a note or security agreement or whether the plaintiff may only seek actual and punitive damages as a way of offsetting liability under an illegally obtained signature. n13 The best course is to seek both remedies--voiding of any illegally obtained signature and actual and punitive damages equal at least to all possible liability and other damage that may occur because of such signature.

[c] Restitution and Disgorgement

Absent a clear command by Congress that a statute providing for equitable relief excludes certain forms of such relief, a court should presume that it has the full scope of equitable powers available for the proper and complete vindication of the statutory purpose. n14

Restitution and disgorgement are part of a court's traditional equitable authority. n15 They are potentially powerful tools under the FHA and the ECOA. n16

To date, there have been no published opinions in which restitution or disgorgement have been ordered, or denied, as a remedy in an ECOA case. Such relief has been awarded, however, in FHA cases in order to prevent defendants from being allowed to retain funds that were obtained as a result of illegal and unconstitutional conduct. n17

[5] Attorney's Fees and Costs

[a] General Standards

All the federal discrimination laws provide for attorney fees for prevailing plaintiffs, but the language of the various statutes' attorney fee provisions are somewhat different. The ECOA states that the costs of the action together with a reasonable attorney's fee, as determined by the court, shall be awarded in the case of any successful action. n18 (The ECOA standard for attorney fees is virtually identical to that found in the TILA.) The FHA and the Federal Civil Rights Acts state that the court in its discretion may allow the prevailing party a reasonable attorney fee and costs. n19

Prevailing plaintiffs should recover "in all but special circumstances." n20 At the same time, prevailing defendants should not routinely recover fees, and should only do so where the plaintiff's claim was frivolous, unreasonable or without foundation. n21

[b] When Is an Action Successful?

As a general rule, prevailing on only one claim is sufficient as long as the result is a good one for the plaintiff. n22 But attorney fees sometimes will not be awarded where the plaintiff prevails in only a technical sense of receiving $1.00 in nominal damages, but having failed to obtain any of the more substantial relief sought. n23

If the consumer raises an ECOA counterclaim to a creditor's collection action, the action is successful even if the action results in a net recovery for the creditor. n24

An award of fees need not be predicated on litigating a claim to a final verdict. A default judgment is a successful action and, therefore, attorney fees should be awarded even if the creditor never responds to the complaint. n25 A consent decree, n26 injunctive relief, n27 or a settlement n28 also may be considered successful actions warranting fee awards.

However, a U.S. Supreme Court decision handed down in 2001 casts some doubt on whether a settlement that is not incorporated into a court order can be the basis for an award of attorney fees. n29 Prior to this decision, it was widely accepted that a voluntary change in practices or policies in response to a suit could qualify as a successful action, under the "catalyst theory."

In Buckhannon, the U.S. Supreme Court rejected the awarding of fees to plaintiffs as the prevailing parties under the catalyst theory. n30 Because the plaintiffs in that case had not obtained an enforceable judgment on the merits or a court-ordered consent decree, they were not entitled to an award of fees. The case construed the fee-shifting provisions of fair housing laws and the Americans with Disabilities Act, but the Supreme Court made it clear that it was announcing a general rule that applied to most, if not all, federal fee-shifting statutes. n31 Courts have since applied the ruling to the civil rights fee-shifting statute, n32 the Equal Access to Justice Act, n33 and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, n34 all of which, like the statute construed in Buckhannon, use the term "prevailing party." The most troubling aspect of Buckhannon is its apparent support for the argument that a settlement agreement may be insufficient to trigger the consumer's right to attorney fees because the consumer is not a prevailing party.

The full effects of Buckhannon are not yet clear. Courts interpreting state fee-shifting statutes may find Buckhannon persuasive n35 but are free to adopt their own views about the catalyst theory and the formal requirements of settlements. n36 Nonetheless, it is prudent to assume that state courts will impose the same requirements and to draft settlement documents accordingly. Note that because the court must approve the settlement of class actions, n37 the Buckhannon ruling should not pose any additional complications in class actions. n38

The FHA Act was one of the statutes at issue in the Buckhannon case. Thus, courts will likely continue to apply the Buckhannon reasoning to future FHA cases. The FHA specifically provides for attorney fees for prevailing parties. n39 The ECOA, in contrast, allows the awarding of attorney fees in successful actions. n40

[c] Fees for Legal Services, Pro Bono, Pro Se Attorneys

Attorney fees should be awarded to legal services attorneys or other pro bono attorneys, even though the client is not obligated to pay the attorney or even though a fee is not actually charged. n41

[d] Costs and Witness Fees

A successful plaintiff should recover costs under an ECOA, FHA, or Civil Rights Act claim. n42 This should include filing fees, transcripts, deposition costs, and other court and litigation expenses not otherwise claimed as attorney's fees.

[6] Election of Remedies

When a particular act or omission by a creditor would constitute a violation of both state law and the ECOA, an action may be brought to recover money damages under only one of them, either the ECOA or state law. n43 No such election of remedies is necessary when the court action is for relief other than money damages (e.g., injunction or declaratory relief), or for administrative actions. n44

In addition, no person aggrieved by an ECOA violation and, in the same transaction, by a violation of the FHA's prohibitions concerning discrimination involving residential real estate-related transactions shall recover under both the ECOA and the FHA. n45

The election between the ECOA and state law, on the other hand, indicates that an "action may be brought" under either the ECOA or state law, but not both. Nevertheless, a federal court has ruled that the case should not be dismissed if the plaintiff fails to elect between federal and state remedies before bringing the complaint; rather, the plaintiff should be restricted to recovery under the federal statute because it appeared that the action was primarily pursued under that theory. n46

The ECOA rules do not require an election of remedies between an ECOA action and a Federal Civil Rights Act claim or between an ECOA action and a FHA claim not based on residential real estate-related transactions, but on discrimination in the sale, rental, or advertising of a dwelling. Moreover, nothing prevents the simultaneous recovery on a FHA claim, a Federal Civil Rights Act claim, and a state credit discrimination or UDAP claim. Of course, only one actual damage recovery can be had for the same injury.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityLiabilityBanking LawConsumer ProtectionTruth in LendingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCosts & Attorney FeesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRemedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C § 1691e(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Bhandari v. First Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 808 F.2d 1082 (5th Cir. 1987) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 829 F.2d 1343 (5th Cir. 1987) (en banc), vacated and remanded, 492 U.S. 901, 109 S. Ct. 3207, 106 L. Ed. 2d 558 , reinstated, 887 F.2d 609 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1539, 108 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Fischl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 708 F.2d 143 (5th Cir. 1983) (ECOA actual damages may include mental anguish, humiliation or embarrassment); Anderson v. United Fin. Co., 666 F.2d 1274 (9th Cir. 1982) (same).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1978) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(1) (codifying malice or reckless indifference standard for employment discrimination cases). See also Williams v. Homestead Mgmt., 2005 WL 1118118 (W.D. Mich. May 11, 2005) (finding that punitive damages standard was met; illegality of the defendant's policy against renting a one-bedroom apartment to an adult and minor should have been apparent); United States v. Space Hunters, Inc., 429 F.3d 416 (2d Cir. 2005) (in case involving alleged illegal steering of prospective renters based on race and disability, district court's refusal to submit issue of FHA punitive damages to jury was error because the court overlooked ample evidence that defendants acted with malice and reckless indifference). See also Snyder v. Bazargani, 241 Fed. App'x 20, 23 (3d Cir. 2007) (affirming award of punitive damages on FHA and state human relations act claims, ruling that the plaintiff did not need to demonstrate "wanton and reckless" misconduct in addition to demonstrating that the conduct was intentional).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 1.10[2], [4] supra.

(n9)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fischl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 708 F.2d 143 (5th Cir. 1983) (punitive damages may be awarded, regardless of proof of actual damages, if the creditor's conduct is adjudged wanton, malicious, or oppressive, or if it is deemed to have acted in reckless disregard of the applicable law).

(n11)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(c).

(n12)Footnote 12. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. FDIC v. Medmark, Inc., 897 F. Supp. 511 (D. Kan. 1995) ; American Sec. Bank, N.A. v. York, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14309 (D.D.C. Sept. 1, 1992) ; GECC v. Pulsifer, Clearinghouse No. 46,778A (D. Me. 1991) (surety could prove that signature in violation of ECOA, thus invalidating the signature; if signed mortgage because signed note, then mortgage could also be invalidated); Shammas v. Merchants Nat'l Bank, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19934 (D. Mass. Nov. 9, 1990) (bank enjoined from foreclosing on Mrs. Shammas' residence since it appeared her guaranty was required in violation of ECOA); FDIC v. Allen, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17565 (W.D. Okla. Nov. 3, 1988) ; Bank of New York v. Route 312 Dev. Corp., 586 N.Y.S.2d 373 (App. Div. 1992) ; Transamerica Commercial Fin. Corp. v. Naef, 842 P.2d 539 (Wyo. 1992) ; Bolduc v. Beal Bank, 994 F. Supp. 82 (D.N.H. 1998) (bank's illegal requirement of wife's cosignature invalidates wife's obligation), remanded, 167 F.3d 667 (1st Cir. 1999) ; Spottiswoode v. Levine, 1999 Me. 79, 730 A.2d 166 (1999) , judgment vacated and remanded on other grounds, 769 A. 2d 849 (2001) (illegal requirement of spouse's signature does not render a credit instrument void); Stewart Title Guar. Co. v. WKC Rests. Venture Co., 961 S.W.2d 874 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) , modified, reh'g denied, transfer denied, (Mar. 31, 1998).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Porter v. Warner Holding Co., 328 U.S. 395, 398 (1946) ("[u]nless otherwise provided by statute, all the inherent equitable powers of the District Court are available for the proper and complete exercise of that jurisdiction").

(n15)Footnote 15. See Mertens v. Hewitt Assocs., 508 U.S. 248, 255 (1993) . Restitution and disgorgement of profits are two separate equitable remedies. Restitution allows a victim to be monetarily compensated for losses resulting from a defendant's acts while disgorgement forces a defendant to give up the amount by which he was unjustly enriched without inquiring whether, or to what extent, identifiable private parties have been damaged.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Silverman v. Eastrich, 51 F.3d 28, 33 (3d Cir. 1995) , citing Integra Bank v. Freeman, 839 F. Supp. 326 (E.D. PA 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Zuch v. Hussey, 394 F. Supp. 1028,1055 n.13 (E.D. Mich. 1975) , aff'd without opinion, 547 F.2d 1168 (6th Cir. 1977) (proof of actual profits obtained from sales which are found to be in violation of the Fair Housing Act may, as an appropriate remedy, result in a court order that the defendants forfeit the profits and disgorge them in order to implement the goals of the Act); see also United States v. J.C. Long, 537 F.2d 1151,1155 (4th Cir. 1975) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(d).

(n19)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. §§ 1988(b), 3613(c)(2).

(n20)Footnote 20. Christiansburg Garment Co. v. Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n, 434 U.S. 412, 417, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1978) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Christiansburg Garment Co. v. Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n, 434 U.S. at 421 . See Bryant Woods Inn, Inc. v. Howard County, 124 F.3d 597 (4th Cir. 1997) ; see also Deadwyler v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 748 F. Supp. 1146 (W.D.N.C. 1990) ("may" award defendant attorney fees interpreted as requiring fees only when action frivolous).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; Postow v. OBA Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 627 F.2d 1370 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Truth in Lending case). See Tenafly Eruv Ass'n, Inc. v. Borough of Tenafly, 195 Fed. Appx. 93, 98, (3d Cir. Sept. 1, 2006) (when unsuccessful Fair Housing Act claim arose from same core facts as successful Free Exercise Clause claim, fees could be awarded based on both claims).

(n23)Footnote 23. Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992) ($1 nominal recovery where $12 million sought).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Hayer v. National Bank, 619 P.2d 474 (Alaska 1980) (TILA case).

(n25)Footnote 25. See City Fin. Co. v. Boykin, 358 S.E.2d 83 (N.C. Ct. App. 1987) (state deceptive practices act claim); Rodriguez v. Holmstrom, 627 S.W.2d 198 (Tex. App. 1981) (same).

(n26)Footnote 26. Balark v. City of Chicago, 81 F.3d 658 (1996) (§ 1988 case), reh'g denied, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 10442 (May 2, 1996) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1006, 117 S. Ct. 507, 136 L. Ed. 2d 398 (1996) ; LaRouche v. Kezer, 20 F.3d 68 (2d Cir. 1994) (§ 1988 case).

(n27)Footnote 27. LeBlanc-Sternberg v. Village of Airmont, 143 F.3d 765 (2d Cir. 1998) (§ 1988 case); Riley v. City of Jackson, 99 F.3d 757 (5th Cir. 1996) (§ 1988 case), on remand, mot. denied, 2 F. Supp. 2d 864 (S.D. Miss. 1997) ; cf. Bisciglia v. Kenosha Unified Sch. Dist. No. 1, 45 F.3d 223 (7th Cir. 1995) (§ 1988 case) (temporary restraining order which merely preserves status quo and does not result in relief on the merits is insufficient).

(n28)Footnote 28. Sablan v. Department of Fin., 856 F.2d 1317 (9th Cir. 1988) (§ 1988 case); Gram v. Bank of La., 691 F.2d 728 (5th Cir. 1982) (TILA case); Folsom v. Heartland Bank, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7890 (D. Kan. May 18, 2000) (TILA case). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 8.9.2.1 (4th ed. 1999 and Supp.).

(n29)Footnote 29. Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Id. at 1838 .

(n31)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 1988; see Chambers v. Ohio Dep't of Human Services, 273 F.3d 690 (2001) , reh'g, en banc, denied, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 2509 (6th Cir. Jan. 28, 2002) ; National Coalition for Students with Disabilities v. Bush, 173 F. Supp. 2d 1272 (N.D. Fla. 2001) .

(n32)Footnote 32. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1); see Former Employees of Motorola Ceramic Prods. v. U.S., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1370 (Ct. Int'l Trade 2001) ; Sileikis v. Perryman, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12737 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2001) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 20 U.S.C. § 1451(I)(3); see Brandon K. v. New Lenox Sch. Dist., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20006 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2001) ; John T. v. Delaware County Intermediate Unit, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18254 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2001) , subs. appeal, 318 F.3d 545 (3d Cir. 2003) ; Jose Luis R. v. Joliet Township High Sch. Dist. 204, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13951 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 27, 2001) , costs/fees proceeding, summ. judg. granted, summ. judg. denied, 2002

U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20916 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 14, 2002) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Wallerstein v. Stew Leonard's Dairy, 258 Conn. 299, 780 A.2d 916 (2001) (judgment entered under Connecticut equivalent of Rule 68 made plaintiff the prevailing party).

(n35)Footnote 35. Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 212 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Va. 2002) (adopting interpretation of Virginia UDAP fee award standard similar to Buckhannon); Wallerstein v. Stew Leonard's Dairy, 258 Conn. 299, 780 A.2d 916 (2001) (citing Buckhannon as authority that judgment entered under Connecticut equivalent of Rule 68 made plaintiff the prevailing party); Melton v. Frigidaire, 346 Ill. App. 3d 331, 805 N.E.2d 322 (2004) (following Buckhannon but interpreting it not to require judgment on the merits or court-ordered consent decree; retention of jurisdiction to enforce settlement is sufficient); Chase v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 587 S.E.2d 521 (Va. 2003) (adopting interpretation of "successful" party similar to Buckhannon's under Virginia lemon law). See also Stenger v. L.L.C. Corp., 819 N.E.2d 480 (Ind. Ct. App. 2004) (under state version of Rule 68, Magnuson-Moss plaintiff waived fees by accepting offer of judgment that was silent about fees).

(n36)Footnote 36. Moedt v. Gen. Motors Corp., 60 P.3d 240 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2002) (awarding fees for settlement of state lemon law claim even though Buckhannon might have precluded fees for federal claim); Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 (Cal. 2004) (preserving catalyst theory when lawsuit has some merit and plaintiff engaged in reasonable pre-litigation attempt to settle dispute). See also Lavene v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 702 N.W.2d 652, 654 (Mich. Ct. App. 2005) (party who obtains mutually agreeable settlement is prevailing party under Michigan rule).

(n37)Footnote 37. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

(n38)Footnote 38. Buckhannon Board & Care Home v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Resources, 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.6.6.2 (3d ed. 2002 and Supp.), for a discussion of various ways of settling a case that are likely to preserve entitlement to fees, in light of Buckhannon.

(n39)Footnote 39. 42 U.S.C. § 3613(c)(2).

(n40)Footnote 40. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(d). But see Crabill v. Trans Union, 259 F.3d 662 (7th Cir. 2001) (applying Buckhannon to the Fair Credit Reporting Act, which uses the term "successful action," and concluding that attorney fees are not available unless the plaintiff wins "formal judicial relief").

(n41)Footnote 41. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989) (lawyer taking case without compensation does not bar attorney fee award); Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) (legal services attorneys entitled to market rates in U.S. civil rights cases).

(n42)Footnote 42. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(d); 42 U.S.C. § 3613(c)(2); 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b).

(n43)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. § 1691d(e).

(n44)Footnote 44. 15 U.S.C. § 1691d(e).

(n45)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(1). The literal language in the statute is confusing. It provides that there cannot be recovery under both the ECOA and 42 U.S.C. § 3612 of the FHA. Section 3612 previously authorized a private right of action for damages and injunctive relief. The private relief section has been moved to § 3613 and § 3612 now deals with administrative enforcement of the FHA. The notes to § 1691e now clarify this change, referring to 42 U.S.C. § 3613 as the relevant statute.

(n46)Footnote 46. Milton v. Bancplus Mortgage Corp., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5166 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 19, 1996)

(federal claims adequately pleaded; state claims, based on "election of remedy" statute, dismissed). See also Saldana v. Citibank, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8327 (N.D. Ill. Jun. 13, 1996) ; Fernandez v. Hull Coop. Bank, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8657 (D. Mass. Nov. 8, 1979) .

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 5 Credit Discrimination *

1-5 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 5.12

§ 5.12 Government Enforcement

[1] ECOA Enforcement

[a] The U.S. Attorney General

The United States Attorney General may bring a civil action against a creditor for violations of the ECOA in one of two situations. Either a federal agency with ECOA enforcement authority refers a case to the Attorney General for prosecution or the Attorney General must have reason to believe that a creditor is engaging in a pattern or practice of ECOA violations. n1 The Attorney General may bring the action for actual and punitive damages and injunctive relief.

[b] Federal Trade Commission

Except to the extent that another federal agency has specific enforcement authority concerning a particular type of creditor, the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") has overall enforcement authority for the ECOA. n2 The one major exception is that the FRB has been delegated the authority to issue regulations under the ECOA. n3 Thus, the FTC has overall enforcement responsibility for the FRB's Regulation B, and the FRB's enforcement authority of its own regulation is limited to violations by certain banks.

Any violation of the ECOA or Regulation B is thus a violation of the FTC Act and is remedied by the FTC's normal enforcement powers. This includes administrative proceedings that lead to a cease and desist order, and federal court actions for civil penalties, restitution, and injunctive relief. As a practical matter, most FTC actions end in consent agreements.

[c] Other Federal Agencies

The ECOA delegates specific enforcement authority to eleven different federal agencies, each having jurisdiction over a particular type of credit transaction. n4 Any transaction not covered by one of these eleven agencies is covered by the FTC. n5

In general, ECOA violations may be enforced with the same remedies and powers that these agencies possess for other matters. n6 If the agency cannot obtain compliance, the agency may refer the matter to the Department of Justice for appropriate civil action. n7

In addition, the Comptroller of the Currency, the FRB, the FDIC, the Office of Thrift Supervision, and the National Credit Union Administration are mandated to refer a matter to the Attorney General whenever the agency has reason to believe that one or more creditors has engaged in a pattern or practice of denying credit applications on a prohibited basis. They are permitted to make such reference even in the absence of a pattern or practice. n8

Where a creditor's ECOA violation may also constitute a violation of the Fair Housing Act, n9 the appropriate enforcing agency must notify the Secretary of HUD if it does not notify the U.S. Attorney General; it must also notify the applicant of the referral to HUD and that the Fair Housing Act may provide a remedy. n10 In 2007, HUD announced the creation of a new Fair Lending Division to assess possible discriminatory home lending practices. In addition to investigating complaints, the division will also look for lenders that exhibit a pattern of discriminatory lending practices, even if no individual complaints are filed against it. Another role for the division will be in the area of fair lending oversight regarding housing government-sponsored enterprises Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. n10.1

[d] Agency Enforcement Policy

The FRB plays the most important role in setting ECOA standards, in that it has the responsibility for promulgating general regulations to carry out the purposes of the ECOA, n11 which it has done through Regulation B. n12 The FRB also has issued an Official Staff Commentary which provides many examples of applications of Regulation B to specific situations.

Nevertheless, the FRB's authority to issue regulations under the ECOA does not impair the FTC or the other enforcing agencies from making rules respecting their own procedures in enforcing compliance with ECOA requirements. n13 That is, the FRB sets the regulations as to when a practice does or does not violate the ECOA, but the various enforcement agencies can set their own enforcement policies.

In 1999, the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council issued Interagency Procedures on Fair Lending Examination. These Procedures established a uniform set of procedures for use by the Federal Reserve Board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, National Credit Union Administration, Office of Comptroller of the Currency, and Office of Thrift Supervision in their examinations for compliance with ECOA and the FHA. n14

In deciding not to remove the prohibition on seeking information about an applicant's personal characteristics in non-mortgage credit applications, the Board in 2003 created a new exception for collection of this information for purposes of creditor self-testing. n15 In previous proposals, the Board had indicated that the self-test privilege would not extend to collection of applicant characteristics on application forms or in the application process. n16 Many creditors responded that, if the prohibition were removed, they would likely not collect information about applicant's personal characteristics unless collection was subject to this privilege. The Board decided to accept the suggestion of expanding the privilege but without removing the general ban on collection of this information.

[e] Interagency Policy Statement on Fair Lending

In 1994, many of the above agencies joined in an interagency policy statement on fair lending answering thirteen oft-asked questions and explaining how they planned to proceed in the future. n17

[2] Civil Enforcement by the United States Attorney General

The United States Attorney General may on her own initiative bring an action in federal court for credit discrimination. n18 The case must involve a pattern or practice of discrimination or the discrimination must raise an issue of general public importance. n19

The Secretary may also elect not to follow the administrative procedure in a case and request the Attorney General to bring an action directly in federal court. Thus, the Attorney General could bring a discrimination case in federal court either because the Attorney General determines that there is a pattern or practice or because the Secretary requests the Attorney General to take a case. In either case, the court may award equitable relief, monetary damages to aggrieved parties, and a civil penalty not to exceed $50,000 for a first violation (or $100,000 for subsequent violations). n20

[3] Agency Referrals to Department of Justice or HUD

The ECOA and Regulation B authorize any agency responsible for enforcing the ECOA to refer to the Attorney General any matter for which it is unable to obtain compliance under the Act or Regulation, or which it has reason to believe is a violation of section 701(a) of the Actby one or more creditors. n21 In addition, whenever the FRB, Comptroller of the Currency, FDIC, Office of Thrift Supervision, or National Credit Union Administration has reason to believe that one or more creditors has engaged in a pattern or practice of discouraging or denying applications in violation of the Act or Regulation, it is required to refer such matter to the Attorney General. n22 The Attorney General, on referral or whenever she has reason to believe that one or more creditors engaged in a pattern or practice in violation of the Act or Regulation, may bring a civil action for damages or injunctive relief. n23

The Act and Regulation also require that the above five agencies, whenever there is reason to believe that a violation of the ECOA also violates the FHA but has not referred the matter to the Attorney General, must notify HUD. n24 The agency must also notify the applicant of its referral to HUD and that remedies may be available under the FHA.

Since September 1992, the U.S. Department of Justice has filed complaints against approximately a dozen separate financial institutions for alleged discriminatory lending practices and insurance companies for alleged insurance redlining. These cases together allege numerous illegal practices, ranging from the level of availability of credit services to different customers or communities, to differential marketing strategies and differential pricing issues. Most of these cases were filed with simultaneous settlement agreements or consent decrees which attempt to redress the individuals and communities that were affected by the alleged misconduct. n25 Many states are now stepping up their enforcement activities in the fair lending area as well.

In recent years, the FTC has had two large settlements involving marital status discrimination and violations of the notice provisions of the ECOA. In United States v. Franklin Acceptance Corp., the DOJ simultaneously filed a complaint and consent decree pursuant to the FTC's negotiation of an $800,000 settlement, the largest civil penalty settlement obtained up to that time for alleged violations of the ECOA. n26

The FTC alleged that Franklin violated the ECOA by discriminating against applicants 1) on the basis of sex and marital status by failing to consider child support payments as part of the applicant's income; 2) on the basis of marital status by failing to combine the income of unmarried co-applicants while combining the incomes of married co-applicants; 3) on the basis of marital status by requiring a married applicant to have their spouse and not any other person co-sign a loan when required; and 4) when the applicant's income was derived from public assistance, by failing to consider the public assistance as income.

The complaint also alleged that Franklin did not provide the adverse action notice required by the ECOA and the FCRA. In addition to paying $800,000 in civil penalties, the FTC obtained injunctive relief whereby Franklin was enjoined from violating provisions of the ECOA and FCRA in the future.

In the second case, the FTC settled a case with Ford Motor Credit Co., the auto financing subsidiary of Ford Motor Company, for $650,000 in December 1999. n27 The FTC alleged that from May 1994 to August 1995, Ford violated the ECOA by combining incomes for married applicants, but not for unmarried joint applicants, resulting in unmarried applicants obtaining credit on less favorable terms compared to their married counterparts. Under the terms of the consent decree, a $650,000 settlement fund was created to compensate credit applicants who were adversely affected by Ford's practice.

In February 1997, the DOJ filed a complaint and proposed settlement agreement on behalf of the FTC against The Money Tree, Inc. and its president. n28 The complaint alleged that the Money Tree discriminated against applicants who received public assistance and against elderly applicants. Regarding the first allegation, the FTC claimed the Money Tree imposed stricter loan terms on applicants who received income from public assistance than on employed applicants and collected or attempted to collect payments from borrowers receiving public assistance before they were due. The complaint further alleged that elderly applicants were discouraged from applying for credit, were denied credit, or were offered credit on less favorable terms than younger applicants. The Money Tree agreed to pay $75,000 in civil penalties and to refrain from discriminating against applicants who receive public assistance and elderly applicants in the future.

In October 1997, in a case against Bonlar Loan Co., the FTC once again requested that the DOJ file a complaint and proposed consent decree on behalf of the FTC. n29 The FTC claimed that Bonlar violated the ECOA and Fair Credit Reporting Act in the way it accepted and processed consumer loan applications. The FTC alleged that the ECOA was violated by: Bonlar's practice of asking applicants for their marital status when such information was not necessary for evaluating the loan application; failing to provide adverse action notices; and failing to provide specific reasons for adverse action or inform the applicant of the right to request such reasons. Under the consent decree, Bonlar agreed to pay $40,000 in civil penalties and was enjoined from future violations of the ECOA.

In 2000, the DOJ filed an amicus brief in Cason v. Nissan Motors Acceptance Corp., one of two class action cases against major automobile financing creditors for discriminatory charging of subjective overages or "markups." n30 The markups occurred when auto dealers, with the approval of NMAC (or GMAC), charged a higher interest rate than the minimum "buy rate" set by the auto finance company for different credit risk categories. The markup was split between the dealer and NMAC or GMAC. In both cases, the private plaintiffs alleged that African Americans were over 200% more likely to be charged a marked-up interest rate than similarly situated whites, and thus disproportionately impacted by the practice. Furthermore, African Americans were allegedly charged more per markup--an average of about $950 per markup compared with an average markup for whites of, respectively, $500 (NMAC) and $650 (GMAC). n31

Both NMAC and GMAC filed motions for summary judgment, arguing that they were not liable under ECOA because they were merely assignees. The plaintiffs argued that NMAC and GMAC could be held directly liable under ECOA as creditors who participated in credit decisions. In addition, the plaintiffs and the DOJ amicus brief argued that ECOA, like the Fair Housing Act, imposes a non-delegable duty not to discriminate.

The District Courts in both cases denied summary judgment and held that NMAC and GMAC could be held liable as direct creditors. n32 The Court in GMAC went further, holding that the company had a non-delegable duty not to discriminate. n33

In July 2002, pursuant to a 2001 referral from the Office of Thrift Supervision, the Justice Department filed a complaint and settlement agreement against Fidelity Federal Bank. n34 Among other allegations, the government charged that Fidelity Federal failed to ensure that its marketing service providers had policies in place which would ensure compliance with fair lending laws. For example, the bank entered into an agreement with American Direct Credit to market subprime credit cards through a network of dealer-distributors conducting in-home sales of various household products. Fidelity was the issuer and owner of the credit cards. Under the terms of the settlement agreement, Fidelity agreed to provide $1.6 million to compensate the victims of the violations and to fund a Consumer Education Program. The bank also agreed to implement a Compliance and Risk Management Program and to provide fair lending training for all employees engaged in credit card program activities. n35

In December 2002, a complaint and consent order against Mid America Bank was filed in the Northern District of Illinois. n36 The complaint alleged that, in extending the scope of its business, the bank focused on meeting the lending and credit needs of predominantly white residential areas in Chicago and avoided serving the needs of majority African-American and combined African-American/Hispanic neighborhoods. n37 Although denying that it violated the FHA or ECOA, the bank agreed to make significant changes in marketing and in decisions regarding on branch locations. n38 In addition, the Bank agreed to invest an average of $2 million each year for the duration of the order to offer residents in the designated minority census tract real estate loan products at more advantageous interest rates and/or terms than would normally be provided. n39 In 2007, DOJ reached a settlement with Compass Bank in a case alleging that the bank charged higher interest rates to co-applicants for automobile loans who were not married to each other than to co-applicants who were married. The consent order prohibits the bank from discriminating on the basis of marital status in any aspect of its automobile lending. n40 Similarly, in 2007 DOJ simultaneously filed and settled two cases against Philadelphia-area car dealerships alleging that they violated the ECOA by charging African Americans higher dealer markups on car loan interest rates. n41

[4] Enforcement Activities at the State and Local Levels

State and local government agencies responsible for enforcement of their respective anti-discrimination laws have also been active in challenging credit discrimination practices. However, their ability to enforce federal or state credit discrimination laws against national banks has been put in question by a Second Circuit ruling that they are largely, perhaps completely, preempted from doing so. The ruling does not affect private enforcement, nor does it restrict state and local enforcement against entities other than national banks, though preemption may still be an issue in public enforcement efforts against other federal depositories. n42

In 2006, after the HMDA data showed disparities in high cost lending by several institutions, the New York Attorney General issued subpoenas to several banks. HSBC, JP Morgan Chase, and Wells Fargo refused to cooperate. Joined by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, they sued to enjoin the attorney general's investigative and enforcement efforts.

In Clearinghouse Ass'n, L.L.C. v. Cuomo, the Second Circuit upheld the OCC's position that any effort by the attorney general to investigate or enforce provisions of the ECOA or state credit discrimination laws against national banks or their operating subsidiaries was an unlawful exercise of visitorial powers preempted by the National Bank Act. n43 The court declined to decide whether state enforcement of the federal Fair Housing Act is similarly preempted. The attorney general contended that he had standing to enforce the FHA in a parens patriae capacity and that an FHA action falls within the NBA's exception for visitorial powers "authorized by Federal law." n44 That issue was not ripe for adjudication as New York had not yet filed suit under the FHA and the FHA does not contain a pre-enforcement mechanism similar to the broad investigative power under state law.

Prior to the ruling, Countrywide Home Loans, which did not join in the challenge to the New York subpoenas, reached a settlement with the state, the first settlement of a regulatory inquiry arising out of the disclosures made pursuant to recent HMDA regulations requiring lenders to disclose the race and ethnicity of consumers who received high-cost loans. Under the settlement, Countrywide agreed to compensate certain minority borrowers who were given improperly costly loans and to institute a $3 million consumer education program, among other commitments. n45

The Clearinghouse ruling means that states cannot enforce the ECOA or any state credit discrimination laws against national banks or their operating subsidiaries. The ruling does not exempt banks from compliance with those laws, but only the OCC has enforcement authority. The OCC's record on that point, however, does not provide much comfort. Because the laws themselves are not preempted, however, private enforcement is unaffected.

The ruling does not, however, preempt state enforcement against entities other than national banks. For example, in 2008, New York officials filed administrative charges against two tax preparation firms alleging that they targeted low-income African-American, Hispanic, and military families with high-cost refund anticipation loans, in violation of state anti-discrimination laws. n46

In a case that may force the courts to resolve the question left open by the Second Circuit, in 2008 the City of Baltimore filed suit against Wells Fargo Bank alleging that the bank violated the Fair Housing Act. The City of Baltimore claimed that the bank targeted underserved and vulnerable minority neighborhoods for subprime loans, which in turn lead to a disproportionately high foreclosure rate in African-American neighborhoods. n47

Prior to the Clearinghouse decision, state and local government agencies responsible for enforcement of their respective anti-discrimination laws had been active in challenging credit discrimination practices. Not all of the following actions would be precluded by the Second Circuit decision.

A 2006 determination by the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission is notable in that it found reverse redlining to be actionable under the state Human Relations Act and because it held brokers liable for the violations. n48

In response to an investigation by the Massachusetts Attorney General, Bank of America agreed to reopen three consumer bank accounts and to contribute $50,000 to create education materials in order to resolve allegations that the former Fleet Bank discriminated against individuals and institutions with Arabic names. Fleet had closed the accounts based on suspicion of terrorism or money laundering. The attorney general noted that the state's investigation did not show a pattern of discrimination. n49

In the wake of the landmark study by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, n50 the Massachusetts Attorney General reached a settlement with ten banks and with the Bankers' Association. Among other provisions, the settlement established an independent committee to review minority applications which were denied during 1990. The banks and Bankers' Association also established several initiatives to ensure that minority borrowers and minority neighborhoods have equal access to credit.

In Georgia, the Atlanta-based mortgage subsidiary of Fleet Financial Group, Inc. agreed to pay $100 million to settle an investigation by the state attorney general into possible loan bias. The state's investigation centered on allegations that Fleet "preyed on minority borrowers by charging high fees and interest rates" n51 in violation of the state's Fair Business Practices Act. Some had accused the company of sending agents (that is, brokers and home improvement contractors) roaming through poor, mostly African-American, neighborhoods to make these high-rate loans. n52

Fleet agreed to refund some of the high fees, prospectively reduce high interest rates on 1150 loans, give a fresh start and waiver of past-due interest to delinquent borrowers, make a small cash payment to all borrowers who had a loan on January 1, 1991, and complete, correct, or reimburse victims of shoddy contracting financed by Fleet loans. It also offered unspecified relief to those who lost their homes to foreclosure. Additionally, Fleet agreed to make $70 million dollars available for affordable loans to qualified low-income borrowers in Georgia.

In Arizona, Banc One Mortgage Corporation agreed to provide $5 million dollars in loans to low- and moderate-income home buyers to end a lending discrimination investigation by the Arizona Attorney General. The investigation stemmed from complaints by Hispanic applicants in Yuma County, Arizona, that they were denied home loans on the basis of their ethnicity. Banc One also agreed to employ a Spanish-speaking loan officer in Yuma County. n53

An example from the local level involves the Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations, which filed actions against four lending institutions for alleged violations of anti-discrimination provisions of the Philadelphia Code. n54 As a result, each institution entered into a consent decree agreeing to comply with the code's "fair practices" provisions on lending, cease giving false or misleading information regarding lending to potential borrowers based upon the potential borrower's race or color, and require that its employees receive training on fair lending laws from the Human Relations Commission. In addressing practices that were having a disparate impact, the four institutions agreed not to establish or maintain minimum loan amounts and to advertise their mortgage products on an equal opportunity basis.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawFederal Trade Commission ActU.S. Federal Trade CommissionBanking LawConsumer ProtectionEqual Credit OpportunityLiabilityBanking LawRegulatory AgenciesU.S. Office of the Comptroller of the CurrencyCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsEnforcementReal Property LawFinancingFederal ProgramsU.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development Programs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1691c(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1691b(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 15 U.S.C. § 1691c; Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(a) and app. A.

(n5)Footnote 5. These eleven agencies and their areas of responsibility are:

- Comptroller of the Currency for national banks and federal branches of foreign banks;
- The FRB for member banks of the Federal Reserve System (other than national banks) and foreign bank branches (other than foreign bank Federal and insured State branches);
- The FDIC for banks insured by the FDIC (other than member banks of the Federal Reserve System) and insured State branches of foreign banks;
- The Office of Thrift Supervision for savings associations insured by the FDI;
- The Federal Credit Union Administration for federal credit unions;
- The Secretary of Transportation for carriers regulated by the Surface Transportation Board;
- The Secretary of Transportation for regulated air carriers;
- The Secretary of Agriculture for activities related to the Packers and Stockyards Act;
- The Farm Credit Administration for federal land banks and associations, federal intermediate credit banks and production credit associations;
- The SEC for brokers and dealers; and
- The Small Business Administration for small business investment companies.

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 1691c(b). The OCC has also taken action against a payday lender and its service provider for failing to safeguard loan files in accordance with ECOA's document retention requirements. According to the OCC, ACE Cash Express, a third-party service provider for payday loans booked by Goleta National Bank, failed to protect 641 loan files. ACE employees discarded the loan files in a dumpster in violation of ECOA's requirement that such documents be retained for twenty-five months. In re ACE Cash Express, Inc., AA-EC-02-19 (Oct. 25, 2002) (consent order), available at www.occ.treas.gov/02rellst.htm; In re Goleta Nat'l Bank, AA-EC-02-18 (Oct. 25, 2002)

(consent order), available at www.occ.treas.gov/02rellst.htm.

(n7)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(g).

(n8)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(g), as amended by Pub. L. No. 102-242, § 223 (1991).

(n9)Footnote 9. 42 U.S.C. § 3605.

(n10)Footnote 10. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(k), as added by Pub. L. No. 102-242, § 223 (1991). See also Memorandum of Understanding Between Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC) Member Agencies, Clearinghouse No. 49,127 (Nov. 1991).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See U.S. Dep't of Housing & Urban Dev., News Release, HUD No. 07-103 (July 13, 2007).

(n12)Footnote 11. 15 U.S.C. § 1691b.

(n13)Footnote 12. 12 C.F.R. § 202.

(n14)Footnote 13. 15 U.S.C. § 1691c(d).

(n15)Footnote 14. The Procedures are available as Clearinghouse No. FILL IN or on the Council website at www.ffiec.gov/PDF/fairlend/pdf (March 2001).

(n16)Footnote 15. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,148 (Mar. 18, 2003) . The new exception is codified at 12 C.F.R. § 202.5(b)(l).

(n17)Footnote 16. 64 Fed. Reg. 44,582 (Aug, 16,1999) . See generally National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 4.4.8 (3d ed. 2002 and Supp.).

(n18)Footnote 17. 59 Fed. Reg. 18,266 (Apr. 15, 1994) .

(n19)Footnote 18. 42 U.S.C. § 3614(a).

(n20)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 3614(a). See also U.S. v. Incorporated Vill. of Island Park, 888 F. Supp. 419, 449 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 20. 42 U.S.C. § 3614(d).

(n22)Footnote 21. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(b)(3).

(n23)Footnote 22. The FRB may include statistics on its referrals to the Attorney General in its Annual Report to Congress. For example, in its 86th Annual Report for 1999, the FRB noted that it reviewed 19 potential referrals and referred two to the Attorney General. See the FRB's website at www.federalreserve.gov/publications.html (March 2001).

(n24)Footnote 23. Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(b)(4).

(n25)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(k); Reg. B, 12 C.F.R. § 202.14(b)(5).

(n26)Footnote 25. See National Consumer Law Center, § 12.4.1.3 (4th ed. and supp.), for discussion of significant recent settlement in U.S. v. Long Beach Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 51, 944, Case No. CV 96-6159 (C.D. Cal., settlement agreement and order filed Sept. 5, 1996). In 2001 the DOJ settled a lawsuit against ANB, which resulted in a $1.5 million fund to compensate Hispanic applicants and cardholders affected by the allegedly discriminatory practices. The settlement did not contain any injunctive relief. United States. v. Associates Nat'l Bank, No. 99-196 (D.Del. 2001)

(settlement agreement), available at www.usdoj.gov (March 2001).

(n27)Footnote 26. United States v. Franklin Acceptance Corp., Civ. No. 99-CV-2435 (E.D. Pa. 1999) (consent decree).

(n28)Footnote 27. United States v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., Clearinghouse No. 53,016, No. 99-75887 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 14, 1999) (consent decree) (available at http://www.ftc.gov).

(n29)Footnote 28. United States v. Money Tree, Inc., Civ. No. 6:97-CV-7 (M.D. Ga. Feb. 4, 1997) (available at http://www.ftc.gov).

(n30)Footnote 29. United States v. Bonlar Loan Co., Civ. No. 97-C-7274 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 17, 1997) (consent decree) (available at http://www.ftc.gov.)

(n31)Footnote 30. Cason v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., Civ. No. 3-98-0223 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (fourth amended complaint). The other case is Coleman v. GMAC, Civ. No. 3-98-0211 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (fourth amended complaint). The DOJ filed its amicus brief in July 2000, also available at www.usdoj.gov (March 2001). See also Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) . The National Consumer Law Center (NCLC) is co-counsel in both cases.

(n32)Footnote 31. Cason v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., Clearinghouse No. 53037A, Civ. No. 3-98-0223 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (fourth amended complaint); Coleman v. GMAC, Clearinghouse No. 53036B, Civ. No. 3-98-0211 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) (fourth amended complaint).

(n33)Footnote 32. Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315, 324-325 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) . The Court in the NMAC case issued an oral decision on August 24, 2000.

(n34)Footnote 33. Coleman v. GMAC, 196 F.R.D. 315, 325, n.21 (M.D. Tenn. 2000) .

(n35)Footnote 34. U.S. v. Fidelity Fed. Bank, Civ. Action No. 02-CV-03906 (E.D.N.Y. complaint and consent decree filed on July 8, 2002), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n36)Footnote 35. See id.

(n37)Footnote 36. United States v. Mid Am. Bank, Clearinghouse Nos. 55055A (complaint), 55055B (consent order), Civ. No. 02C 9458 (N.D. Ill. complaint and consent order filed Dec. 30, 2002).

(n38)Footnote 37. United States v. Mid Am. Bank, Clearinghouse Nos. 55055A (complaint), 55055B (consent order), Civ. No. 02C 9458 (N.D. Ill. complaint and consent order filed Dec. 30, 2002).

(n39)Footnote 38. United States v. Mid Am. Bank, Clearinghouse Nos. 55055A (complaint), 55055B (consent order), Civ. No. 02C 9458 (N.D. Ill. complaint and consent order filed Dec. 30, 2002).

(n40)Footnote 39. United States v. Mid Am. Bank, Clearinghouse Nos. 55055A (complaint), 55055B (consent order), Civ. No. 02C 9458 (N.D. Ill. complaint and consent order filed Dec. 30, 2002).

(n41)Footnote 40. See Press Release, U.S. Dep't of Justice, Justice Department Reaches Settlement with Compass Bank Regarding Alleged Discrimination in Lending (Jan. 12, 2007), available at www.usdoj.gov/opa/pr/2007/January/07_crt_016.html. A copy of the consent order is available at www.usdoj.gov/crt/housing.

(n42)Footnote 41. See United States v. Pacifico Ford (E.D. Pa. Aug. 21, 2007), available at www.usdoj.gov; United States v. Springfield Ford, Inc. (E.D. Pa. Aug. 21, 2007), available at www.usdoj.gov.

(n43)Footnote 42. See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption, and Industry Abuses Ch. 3 (4th ed. 2009).

(n44)Footnote 43. See Clearinghouse Ass'n, L.L.C. v. Cuomo, 510 F.3d 105 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n45)Footnote 44. 12 U.S.C. § 484(a).

(n46)Footnote 45. See Press Release, Office of the N.Y. State Att'y Gen., Countrywide Agrees to New Measures to Combat Racial & Ethnic Disparities in Mortgage Loan Pricing (Dec. 5, 2006), available at http://www.oag.state.ny.us/media_center/2006/dec/dec05a_06.html.

(n47)Footnote 46. See New York State, Division of Human Rights v. Jth Tax, Inc., No. 10122847 (NY Human Rights Division Jan. 17, 2008); New York State, Division of Human Rights v. Jackson Hewitt, Inc., No. 10122843 (NY Human Rights Division Jan. 17, 2008).

(n48)Footnote 47. Mayor & City Council of Baltimore v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. L08CV062 (D. Md. Jan. 8, 2008) (available on the website accompanying this manual).

(n49)Footnote 48. See McGlawn v. Human Relations Comm'n, 891 A.2d 757 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2006) (state Human Rights Commission found mortgage broker violated state Human Relations Act by engaging in reverse redlining). The commission accepted testimony that the brokers were significantly involved in making the loans. For more on broker liability, see §§ 11.3.2.2, supra, and 12.4.1.5, infra (federal action against brokers).

(n50)Footnote 49. See Press Release, Office of the Mass. Att'y Gen., AG Reilly Reaches Agreement with Bank of America Resolving Arab-American Community Complaints About Fleet Account Closures (Apr. 12, 2006), available at www.ago.state.ma.us/sp.cfm?pageid=986&id=1650.

(n51)Footnote 50. See Fed. Reserve Bank of Boston, Alicia Munnell et al., Working Paper Series No. 92-7, Mortgage Lending in Boston: Interpreting HMDA Data (1992).

(n52)Footnote 51. Mitchell Zuckoff & Kimberly Blanton, Fleet to Pay $100m Loan Bias Settlement, Boston Globe, Dec. 16, 1993, at 1.

(n53)Footnote 52. Mitchell Zuckoff, Georgia Probe Slams Fleet Loan Practices, Boston Globe, Dec. 17, 1993, at 85.

(n54)Footnote 53. Memorandum of Understanding (and Addendum) Between Banc One Mortgage Corp. and the Arizona Attorney General, Clearinghouse No. 53,525 (Dec. 7, 1997) (memorandum), (Jan. 10, 2000) (addendum).

(n55)Footnote 54. Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations v. Boulevard Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 49,139A, Docket No. 92110885 (Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations June 29, 1993) (consent order and decree); Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations v. St. Edmonds Sav. & Loan, Clearinghouse No. 49,140A, Docket No. 92120892 (Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations May 4, 1993) (consent order and decree); Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations v. Bank & Trust Co. of Old York Rd., Clearinghouse No. 49,141A, Docket No. 92110887 (Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations Apr. 7, 1993) (consent order and decree); Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations v. People's Mortgage Co., Clearinghouse No. 49,142A, Docket No. 92110886 (Phila. Comm'n on Human Relations Feb. 3, 1993) (consent order and decree).

* [Editor's Note: The Federal Reserve Board [hereinafter FRB] revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary. 68 Fed. Reg. 13,144, 13,161 (Mar. 18, 2003, effective April 15, 2003). The mandatory compliance date for the revised version of Regulation B was April 15, 2004.

The texts of revised Regulation B and the Official Staff Commentary are reprinted in Vol. 1A infra.]

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual 6.syn

§ 6.syn Synopsis to Chapter 6: The Cost of Credit

§ 6.01 Introduction

§ 6.02 Federal Preemption of State Laws Limiting Credit Charges

[1] Introduction

[2] Does More Than One Statutory Preemption Regime Apply?

[3] Federal Preemption: The National Bank Act

[a] Overview

[b] Interstate Banking: National Banks and Rate Exportation

[c] National Bank Act Preemption

[i] Conflict Preemption

[ii] OCC Opinion and Interpretative Letters

[iii] Co-Extensive Rights of Operating Subsidiaries

[iv] Rent-a-Charter Controversy

[4] The Home Owners' Loan Act

[a] Overview

[b] HOLA and "Conflict" Preemption

[5] Industrial Loan Companies/Industrial Loan Banks

[a] Overview

[b] Most Favored Lender Doctrine and Exportation

[6] Preemption: DIDA

[a] Overview

[b] DIDA and Federally Related Lenders

[c] DIDA and Exportation

[d] DIDA's "First Mortgage" Preemption

[e] Opting Out of DIDA by State Legislation

[7] Preemption: Loans Insured by the FHA or VA

[a] Overview

[b] State Opt-Out of the FHA/VA Loan Preemption

[8] National Credit Union Act Interest Rate Preemption

[9] Preemption of State Non-Rate Mortgage Credit Regulation: The Alternative Mortgage Transactions Parity Act (AMTPA).

[10] Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act and Interstate Loan Pricing

[11] Federal Jurisdiction, Removal Issues, and Preemptive Effect of Federal Consumer Protection Statutes

[12] Usury Deregulation by State Parity Laws

[13] The Military Lending Act

§ 6.03 The Cost of Early Termination

[1] Overview

[2] When Are Rebates Required?

[a] Precomputed Charges

[3] What Charges Are Subject to Rebate?

[4] Calculating Rebates

[a] Initial Steps in Calculating the Rebate

[b] Rebate Formulae

[i] Determining Which Formula to Use

[A] Pro Rata Rebates

[B] Rule of 78

[C] Actuarial Rebates

[5] Proving Rebate Violations Are Illegal Charges

[a] Usury Upon a Contingent Event

[b] Intent to Collect Unearned Charges: What Constitutes "Charging," "Receiving," or "Contracting For" Unearned Charges?

[c] Special Issues Regarding Remedies for Violations of the Federal Rebate Statute

[i] Truth in Lending

[ii] UDAP

[iii] Contract Law

[6] Prepayment Penalties

[7] Preemptive Effect of the New Federal Consumer Protection Statutes

§ 6.04 The Cost of Refinancing: Calculation and Legal Issues

[1] Introduction

[2] Usurious Taint in Refinanced Obligations

[3] The Cost of Refinancings: Evaluating the Calculations

§ 6.05 Hidden Interest

[1] Overview

[2] Payments for Lender Services: What Is Interest?

[a] Fees Based on the Creditor's Expenses

[b] Points, Commitment Fees, and Other Percentage Fees

[c] Non-Cash Compensation and Side Agreements

[d] Delinquency Charges

[3] Payments for Third Party Services

[4] Interest Hidden When Principal Amount Is Overstated

[5] Hidden Interest in "Non-Credit" Transactions

[6] Tax Refund Schemes as "Non-Credit" Transactions with Hidden Interest

[a] Background; Assignment of Tax Refunds as Disguised Credit

[b] Refund Anticipation Loans (RALs)

[7] Payday Loans/Check Advancement Loans

[a] The Lenders and the Loans Described

[b] Types of Abuses

[c] State Regulation of Payday Lending

[d] Legal Claims

[e] Federal and State Laws Protecting Military Personnel and Dependents from Payday Loans

[8] Income Buyers

§ 6.06 Credit Insurance

[1] Introduction

[2] Types of Credit Insurance

[a] Credit Life

[i] Decreasing or Declining Term Credit Life Insurance

[ii] Level Term Credit Life Insurance

[b] Credit Disability/Accident and Health

[c] Involuntary Unemployment Insurance

[d] Credit Property

[e] Vendor's Single Interest Insurance

[f] Dual Interest

[g] Motor Vehicle Credit Insurance

[3] Debt Cancellation and Debt Suspension Agreements

[4] Types of Regulation

[a] Sources of Regulation

[b] Substance of Credit Insurance Regulations

[i] Rates

[ii] Non-Rate Regulation

[5] Common Abuses and Possible Remedies

[a] Voluntariness

[b] Excessive Cost of Credit Insurance

[c] Insurance Packing

[d] Post-Claim Underwriting, Ineligibility

[6] Rebates

[7] Remedies

[a] Usury

[b] Breach of Fiduciary Duty and Duty to Disclose

[c] UDAP

[d] Unconscionability

[e] Fraud; Misrepresentation and Concealment

[f] Arbitration Clauses

§ 6.07 The Statute: Determining the Applicable Statute and Principles of Statutory Construction

[1] Which Usury Statute Applies?

[a] Is the Loan for Consumer or Business Purposes?

[b] Distinctions Based on the Type of Credit

[c] Distinctions Based on the Type of Creditor

[d] Distinctions Based on Loan Size; Loan-Splitting and Loan-Packing to Evade Regulation

[e] Distinctions Based on Security Taken

[f] Criminal Usury Statutes

[g] Usury in "Deregulated" States

[h] Choice of Laws in Interstate Transactions

[i] Electronic Credit Transactions

[2] Statutory Construction

[a] Applying General Rules of Interpretation

[b] Retroactive Amendment of Usury Statutes

§ 6.08 The Trial: The Right to a Jury Trial; Elements of a Prima Facie Case; Creditor Defenses and Borrowers' Remedies

[1] Right to Jury Trial

[2] Elements of a Prima Facie Case

[a] Loan or Forbearance

[b] Obligation to Repay Principal

[c] Interest Overcharge

[d] Intent

[3] Burden of Proof

[4] Contract Construction

[5] Creditor Defenses

[a] Defenses of Assignees and Holders in Due Course

[b] Standing to Assert Usury

[c] Estoppel and Waiver

[d] Res Judicata

[e] Statutes of Limitations

[f] De Minimis Violations

[g] Industry Custom and Usage

[h] Usury Saving Clauses

[i] Correction of Error as a Defense

[j] The Enforceability of Arbitration Agreements

[i] General

[ii] Usurious, Illegal and Unlicensed Loan Agreements

[iii] Cancellation: Spot Delivery and Rescission

[A] Does Agreement Apply to Lender, Co-Signer, and to Promissory Note?

[B] Unconscionability

[C] Special Rules for Insurance Transactions

[iv] Bill Stuffers and Unilateral Change in Terms

[v] Lender's Collection Action as Waiver

[vi] Non-Mutual Remedies as Unconscionable

[vii] Other Challenges to Agreement's Enforceability

[viii] Class Arbitration

[ix] Individual Arbitration Seeking Punitive Damages

[6] Special Defenses of Federal Receivers: D'Oench and Related Doctrines.

[a] D'Oench and 12 U.S.C. Section 1823.

[b] Federal Holder in Due Course Doctrine

[7] Remedies for Illegal Overcharges; Traditional Usury Remedies

[a] State Remedies

[i] Remedies at Law

[ii] Equitable Remedies

[b] Federal Remedies

[i] National Bank Act; DIDA; Excess Charges on High Cost Mortgages

[ii] RICO

[iii] Class Actions

§ 6.09 Challenging Overreaching Credit: Common Law Claims and Other Relevant Statutes

[1] Statutes Relating to Real Estate Secured Credit

[a] RESPA

[i] Prohibition Against Kickbacks and Unearned Fees

[A] Lender-Paid Broker Fees

[B] HUD Policy Statement on Lender-Paid Broker Fees

[C] Broker Kickback Practice Issues

[D] Steering by Seller to Title Insurance Company

[E] Other Kickback Issues

[1] Loan Padding

[2] Fee Splitting

[F] Potential Loopholes

[G] Electronic Provision of Information Required by RESPA

[H] Implications for Practice

[b] Other Statutes

[c] State High-Cost Mortgage Statutes

[2] Unconscionability

[3] Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[4] Fiduciary or Quasi-Fiduciary Duty

[5] Intentional Interference With a Contractual Relationship

[6] Fraud and Misrepresentation

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 6.01

§ 6.01 Introduction

Despite the recent policy trend toward deregulation of the marketplace, the sky is not the limit for consumer credit charges. There remain significant limitations on the right of creditors to exact any yield they wish from borrowers in the most typical consumer credit transactions. These remaining protections for consumers are the subject of this chapter.

The primary focus of this chapter is on the cost of credit. As such, the bulk of it is devoted to those state and federal statutes which restrict credit charges, either directly or indirectly, through substantive limitations on credit contract terms. Since most of them are usury statutes and their descendants, the "common law" n1 of usury is considered throughout.

However, there are other statutes and common law legal theories which also may come into play as a viable means to challenge deception, excess, or unfairness in the price of credit, and this chapter provides an overview of these as well. n2

The oldest of the statutes which limit the cost of credit are so-called "general" usury statutes which purport to set the maximum rate of interest that can be charged in any "loan" transaction in a jurisdiction. More recent and plentiful are the "special" usury laws, such as small loan laws, which are usually structured as exceptions to a general usury ceiling, and which govern interest charges only in connection with specified kinds of loans. Finally, there are numerous laws which regulate charges for credit, but which are not usually called "usury" laws. For example, retail installment sales acts technically limit charges assessed in connection with the sale of goods on credit rather than charges for "loans" covered by usury laws. Consumer Finance Acts or Consumer Loan Acts may or may not set a limit on the maximum allowable interest rate, but they usually have limitations on other terms which affect the cost of credit. A number of states have responded to the problems of second mortgages by adopting special usury laws which govern only second mortgages, home equity loans, or home improvement loans. n3

Similarly, banking regulations may restrict the kinds of charges which a bank may impose, such as prepayment penalties or various service charges, without specifically restricting the rate of interest that may be charged, as usury statutes traditionally have done.

Some part of the consumer credit market is "deregulated" to some extent in every state, whether by action of the state legislature or by federal preemption. n4 Even those transactions, however, are subject to some standards, and throughout the chapter, an effort is made to highlight areas where overcharges are vulnerable to challenge whether there is a usury ceiling or not.

This chapter analyzes the substance and interpretation of usury and related statutes. However, it is also important for advocates to understand the mechanics of these transactions. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawConsumer ProtectionState LawGeneral OverviewBanking LawFederal ActsGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryUsury LitigationContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The term is somewhat misleading, as usury is a statutory concept. Nonetheless, since usury laws have been around a long time and are widespread, what can be termed a common law of usury has arisen.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Ch. 4, "Unfair and Deceptive Credit Practices," supra; Ch. 1, "Truth in Lending," supra; Ch. 5, "Credit Discrimination," supra. For a thorough and in depth treatment of usury law and the cost of credit, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses (3d ed. and supp.). Apart from NCLC's manual, probably the most comprehensive treatments of usury law are contained in the C.J.S., 47 C.J.S., Interest & Usury; Consumer Credit (West) and Am. Jur. 2d, 17 Am. Jur. 2d, Consumer & Borrower Protections (Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Co.); 45 Am. Jur. 2d, Interest & Usury (Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Co.).

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Annot., 43 A.L.R.4th 675 (1986) (construction and application of second mortgage statutes), National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 2.3.3.7 (3rd ed. and Supp.). See also N.C. Gen. Stat. § 24.1-1E (1999). See discussion below, in § 6.02, however, of federal preemption of state regulation of structure of home equity and other loans.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 6.02 infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. For a basic overview of credit math and making sense of the numbers and interest rates that will be discussed in this chapter, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, Ch. 4 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 6.02

§ 6.02 Federal Preemption of State Laws Limiting Credit Charges

[1] Introduction

Determining the legal limitations on consumer credit costs is greatly complicated by the existence of numerous federal statutes and regulations that preempt state usury laws with respect to some, but not all lenders, transactions, and practices which might otherwise lead to illegal overcharges. n1

What follows is a cursory overview of the relevant federal preemption statutes, and a preemption checklist. There is no guarantee that this chapter can safely be skipped on the basis of the checklist, but it will point out when it definitely should be read.

To generalize somewhat, preemption of state usury law is authorized by eight different federal statutes. n2

First, the National Bank Act ("NBA") n3 sets the ceiling for interest rates that may be charged by federally chartered banks. Under this Act, federal banks are treated as "most favored lenders" and may charge the higher of: (1) the interest rate allowed lenders in the state where the bank is located; or (2) 1% above the discount rate on 90-day commercial paper in effect at the Federal Reserve Bank in the district where the bank is located. This "most favored lender" status may be transported across state lines under certain circumstances.

The second statute preempting state usury laws is the Home Owners' Loan Act ("HOLA") enacted in 1933. n4 This act authorizes the Office of Thrift Supervision to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, and regulation of federal savings associations. Like the NBA, HOLA sets the ceiling for interest rates that may be charged by these federal associations. Federal savings associations are likewise treated as "most favored lenders" and may charge the greater of: (1) 1% above the discount rate on 90-day commercial paper in effect at the Federal Reserve bank in the district in which such savings association is located; or (2) the rate allowed by the laws of the state in which the savings association is located. n5 Like national banks, federal associations may export this most favored lender status across state lines.

The third statute preempting state usury law is the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 (DIDA or DIDMCA). n6 This law appears to extend the "most favored lender" treatment regarding interest rates for federally chartered banks to any federally insured commercial bank (including state-chartered federally-insured banks), savings association, or credit union. In the special case of loans secured by first mortgages on residential real estate or first liens on mobile homes, DIDA has essentially eliminated interest rate ceilings and has preempted state limitations on a lender's ability to assess "points," finance charges, or "other charges." States may "opt out" of the federal DIDA preemption through appropriate legislation, and at least fifteen states exercised this option to some extent. Many of these states, however, have repealed their opt-outs. Those that retain their opt-out can, however, deregulate their state usury caps as well.

Fourth, pursuant to the National Housing Act, housing loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration ("FHA") or the Veteran's Administration ("VA") are exempted from state interest ceilings. n7 Since the authority of the FHA to set its own ceiling has been revoked, n8 new FHA-insured housing loans have no interest ceiling even, arguably, in situations where DIDA does not apply, such as junior mortgages. In contrast, the VA continues to set interest ceilings on loans which it issues. States may opt out of the FHA/VA preemption, so this form of preemption consequently will not apply in all jurisdictions.

Fifth, the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) allows federally-chartered credit unions to assess interest of up to 15% per annum or any higher temporary rate set by the National Credit Union Administration Board. n9 Using this discretion, the Board raised the federal credit union ceiling to 21% in 1980. Since May 14, 1987, the rate has been set at 18% and will revert to 15% after September 8, 2006 unless extended. n10 Beyond usury issues, the preemption rights of federal credit unions are narrower than those granted or claimed by national banks or federal savings association. n11

Sixth, pursuant to the National Housing Act, housing loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) or the Veteran's Administration (VA) are exempted from state interest ceilings. n12 As the authority of the FHA to set its own ceiling has been revoked, n13 new FHA-insured housing loans have no interest ceiling even, arguably, in situations where DIDA does not apply, such as junior mortgages. Similarly, the parties to a VA-insured loan may agree to any interest rate. However, states may opt out of the FHA/VA preemption, so this form of preemption consequently will not apply in all jurisdictions.

Seventh, the Interstate Banking and Branching Efficiency Act of 1994 ("IBBEA"), n14 which allows banks to establish branch banks in other states, continues (but does not expand), the current preemption authorized by the NBA and DIDA. Congress took special pains to emphasize that state consumer protection and fair lending laws apply to the extent not preempted by federal law, which certainly is an unmistakable message that it has no intent to "occupy the field" of consumer protection, thus leaving states free to continue to do so except where the other traditional tests for preemption dictate. n15 Indeed, the conference report admonished the national bank regulator not to find federal preemption unless "the legal basis is compelling and the Federal policy is clear." n16 Further, the Act imposes publication requirements regarding the issuance of agency opinions addressing national bank preemption of certain types of state law. n17

Eighth, most recently, Congress enacted the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act that largely focuses upon eliminating the barriers separating the banking, insurance, and securities industries. n18 One provision, though, should have an effect on the ability of a limited number of states (perhaps only Arkansas!) to regulate the interest rates of the banks chartered within their boundaries in certain circumstances. n19 In addition, the GLB Act eliminates some barriers to banks and their operating subsidiaries from engaging in credit insurance sales, solicitations, or cross-marketing activity.

Finally, some federal consumer protection legislation may preempt inconsistent or less protective state law. The Truth in Lending Act ("TILA") n20 created a very narrow preemption of the disclosure terminology which may be required by state usury laws. Generally, state consumer credit statutes may not define TILA credit terms differently than they are defined by federal regulation and may not require the use of a different term for an amount identically calculated under TILA. The preemption is limited, however, and normally will not, for example, prevent states from compelling more extensive or detailed disclosure than that required under TILA. Likewise, the 1994 Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act ("HOEPA"), n21 which amends TILA, imposes substantive restrictions on some contract terms with respect to certain transactions. Less protective state laws are preempted. Similarly, the 1992 federal rebate law, which requires rebates in consumer credit transactions and limits the use of the cost-distorting Rule of 78, preempts contrary state law. n22

Insofar as usury law is concerned, national banks, national credit unions, and federal savings and loan associations are generally regulated by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency ("OCC"), n23 the National Credit Union Administration ("NCUA"), n24 and the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS") n25 (since 1989, replacing the Federal Home Loan Bank Board ("FHLBB")), n26 respectively. The major exception to this rule of thumb for federal lenders is that all lenders, including federal banks and credit unions, which wish to take advantage of the removal of interest ceilings on first mortgage loans provided by DIDA, must follow OTS regulations, including the OTS consumer protection regulations governing mobile home sales. Preemption also may not apply where the federally chartered or related institution is merely an assignee of a note, rather than the originator. n27

[2] Does More Than One Statutory Preemption Regime Apply?

As will be evident in this chapter, there are preemption regimes that apply to a financial institution solely because of its status as a federal or state chartered depository. In addition, in the mortgage context, other federal statutes provide that state lending laws are trumped due to the type of the loan itself. For example, in the absence of state opt-out legislation, state usury laws do not apply to FHA-insured or VA-insured mortgage loans or to first lien mortgage loans for other lenders. In addition, the ability of states to regulate certain terms in "alternative" mortgage loans is restricted.

The result is that if one preemption regime does not apply, the analysis may not end there. For example, even though a mortgage loan is not insured by the FHA, the state usury or other laws, nevertheless, may not apply. If the lender is a depository institution, there may a preemption problem separate and independent from the FHA preemption privilege. The practitioner should carefully consider all of the statutes reviewed in this chapter to either rule in or rule out potential preemption landmines.

[3] Federal Preemption: The National Bank Act

[a] Overview

The National Bank Act ("NBA") n28 allows a national bank, when originating credit, n29 to charge the higher of the maximum rate allowed lenders under state law (the most favored lender doctrine) or an alternative federal rate based on the federal discount rate. A national bank lending intrastate can take advantage of this alternative federal rate whenever it exceeds the state's interest ceiling. In addition, as is discussed later, the NBA as currently interpreted allows national banks operating interstate from one state to take advantage of higher (or no) rate ceilings in that state in extending credit, such as credit cards to consumers in other states.

The alternative federal rate is 1% above the discount rate on 90-day commercial paper in effect at the federal reserve bank in the district where the national bank is located. n30 Probably the best way to find the federal discount rate in effect at the time and place of a transaction is to examine the then current Federal Reserve Bulletin, published monthly by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. n31 Note that the federal discount rate is not a true market rate but is a managed interest rate set by the Federal Reserve.

Once the discount rate formula has been used to calculate the alternative federal rate, this rate must be compared to the maximum interest rate allowed to state lenders under state law. A national bank will be able to charge the higher of the two rates. However, determining the maximum rate allowed under a state's law can be complex because state laws frequently set different rates for different classes of lenders and different classes of loans.

The current interpretation of the alternative reference to state law is that national banks have "most favored lender" status, giving national banks an edge over state banks in transactions where this doctrine applies. The balance has shifted more recently in that federally insured state banks among others have successfully convinced courts that DIDA bestowed upon them the "most favored lender" status afforded national banks.

However, most favored lender doctrine is not blanket authority for those with its status to browse through state statutes and charge the highest interest rate in them. n32 There are three major limitations on the most favored lender doctrine, each of which is discussed briefly below.

First, national banks which invoke the most favored lender doctrine cannot automatically claim the right to charge the highest interest rate that any lender is permitted to charge. Rather, the national bank may only claim the rate which competing lenders may use when issuing the same type of loan. n33

It is the legal authority, rather than the actual practice of the potentially "competing" state lenders, which will determine whether or not a state lender is a competitor for purposes of the most favored lender analysis. n34

The second limitation on the most favored lender doctrine is that national banks may only adopt the rates of competing state lenders and not those of other federal lenders with whom they compete in a state. n35

Finally, national banks must comply with any state restrictions on the relevant loan type which are "material" to determination of the interest rate on that type of loan. n36 For example, if state law permits finance companies to issue high interest loans, but restricts their associated loan fees, a national bank cannot adopt only the state interest rate without complying with the fee restrictions because these restrictions are "material" to the interest rate allowed on the loan.

[b] Interstate Banking: National Banks and Rate Exportation

A 1978 Supreme Court decision, Marquette National Bank of Minneapolis v. First of Omaha Service Corp., n37 gave national banks the right to take the most favored lender status from their home state across state lines, and preempt the law of the borrower's home state.

The full extent of the exportation right has not been fully determined although the picture is clearer. Two questions have been central to the hotly contested post-Marquette litigation: what charges and contract terms are encompassed in the term "interest rate," and thus may be exported; and whether DIDA grants entities other than national banks the right to export "it," however "it" is defined.

The position of the exporting lenders is that virtually any contract term which affects their ultimate yield is "material," can be considered as interest, and is, therefore, exportable. To date, they have been fairly successfully in convincing courts of this position. n38 Charges and contract terms which have been held to fall within the scope of "interest rate" for purposes of most favored lender status (and hence exportation rights) are: late charges, n39 credit card over the limit (OTL) fees, n40 cash advance fees, n41 methods of computing interest, n42 bonus or commissions paid to lenders, n43 and closing costs. n44

Currently, there is some questioning as to whether these decisions have gone too far. The OCC's 1996 interpretive ruling for the most part formalizes the latest position its staff took in the exportation debate. n45 The OCC's new definition of "interest" is any payment compensating a creditor or prospective creditor for extending credit or any default or breach by a borrower of a condition upon which credit was extended. It includes such fees as "numerical periodic rates, late fees, not sufficient funds fees (NSF fees), overlimit fees, annual fees, cash advance fees, and membership fees." Ordinarily excluded are "appraisal fees, premiums and commissions attributable to insurance guaranteeing repayment of any extension of credit, finders' fees, fees for document preparation or notarization or fees incurred to obtain credit reports." n46 However, if state law would not consider OCC's included fees to be interest, for example, for usury purposes, this federal definition would not disturb that.

For the moment, the Supreme Court has given deference to the OCC ruling and upheld its broad federal definition of interest. n47 Since the promulgation of the OCC ruling, the OCC's Chief Counsel has issued two interpretative letters which add specific charges into the "interest" side of the equation. First, in Interpretative Letter No. 744, the OCC opines that prepayment penalties constitute interest for purposes of Section 85 (and are exportable if the national bank's home state permits them). n48 The rationale offered is that prepayment penalties compensate the lender for risks incurred in connection with the lending of its money because the bank relinquishes its right to receive the anticipated earnings on the loan over its projected life. n49

The second letter determined that certain fees charged in connection with home equity open-end accounts were interest under the ruling. n50

There is one limitation on rate exportation that does seem clear. Courts have held that federal preemption rights granted to depositories apply only to credit initiated by the depository, not to that assigned to it. n51 In other words, a bank cannot purchase a pre-existing usurious note executed by parties in a low-rate state and then claim that the note is no longer usurious on the theory that the laws of the high rate state should control. Such an approach would render usury ceilings for lenders other than national banks completely unworkable and has no foundation in the purposes of the National Bank Act or its counterpart statutes affecting other types of depository institutions. Further, the parties to a contract have the right to expect that the contract terms and the laws governing them are fixed as of the time the contract is consummated. If a national bank can successfully argue that its preemption rights regarding the interpretation and legality of a loan contract attach even if it is only the assignee of the contract, the ability to contract with certainty is completely undermined.

The OCC has spoken to some extent on this issue. Where the bank originates or table-funds the loan, n52 the bank's preemption rights "attach" to the loan and conflicting state laws are preempted. n53 Where the loan is arranged by a broker and made by another type of entity not entitled to preemption, the state law is not preempted. n54 Where the bank is merely the trustee of a pool of loans and did not originate the loan and did not fund the loan at inception, state law applies. n55

Another interesting issue involves the ability of a state to regulate or establish conditions upon the location of ATMs within its boundaries. At least two states prohibit an out-of-state bank from locating an ATM within their boundaries unless the bank has a branch in those states and/or meets other requirements. n56 One such law is currently on federal appellate review: a threshold issue for the court is whether the Electronic Funds Transfer Act, n57 which addresses bank charges for use of ATMs and generally defers to state law, acts to trump the NBA on issues it specifically covers. n58 In an interpretive letter, the OCC recently opined that geographic restrictions on ATM placement are preempted by the National Banking Act. n59

[c] National Bank Act Preemption

[i] Conflict Preemption

It is clear that national banks, though federally created creatures, are also subject to state laws, "except where such legislation is in conflict with some Act of Congress, or where it tends to impair or destroy the utility of such banks, as agents of instrumentalities of the United States, or interferes with the purposes of their creation." n60 State law carries a presumption of validity n61 unless it conflicts with federal law. This type of "conflict" preemption involves a case-by-case determination of whether particular state laws impede, impair, or conflict with the purposes of the federal act or the powers of national banks. The OCC has not issued broad regulations preempting state law in particular banking areas. Instead, the agency has addressed particular state laws and their impact on national banks through opinion letters that, until recently, have not been formally published. n62 In 2002, the agency published a list of activities that national banks may perform with citations to authority. n63

Through the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, Congress recently expanded the authority of banks to operate in disregard of state law in an area long considered a sacred cow of state regulation, the sale of insurance. n64 This preemption, however, is subject to thirteen exceptions that preserve the states' rights to regulate a bank's insurance sales under certain conditions.

[ii] OCC Opinion and Interpretative Letters

Traditionally, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has utilized opinion and interpretive letters to rule upon whether and the extent to which states can regulate national banks. Despite what sounds on paper to be lip-service to state authority to co-regulate national banks, in fact, the OCC has issued few letters over the last twenty years in which it opines that a particular state law in question is not preempted. For example, in 1992, the OCC confirmed the validity of an Arkansas constitutional usury cap when applied to a national bank located in Arkansas which sought to use the state's "most favored lender" rate. n65

On the other hand, the OCC has released scores of letters finding that a variety of state laws are preempted. Specifically regarding consumer credit statutes, the OCC has opined that provisions requiring national banks to obtain licenses, n66 to maintain and allow inspection of certain records, n67 to pay annual or other fees, n68 or to provide certain disclosures are preempted. n69

In the Interstate Banking and Branching Efficiency Act of 1994 (IBBEA), Congress took care to emphasize that state consumer protection and fair lending laws apply to the extent not preempted by federal law. n70 At this point in time, the precise definition of the term "consumer protection" is unclear. Certainly, limitations on the cost of consumer credit protect consumers. However, given the Supreme Court's acceptance of the OCC's expansive definition of interest, n71 it is difficult to know what constitutes "consumer protection," except for protections that have nothing to do with interest rates and fees. Several courts have confirmed, however, that consumers and state agencies can enforce state unfair and deceptive acts and practices laws against banks concerning a variety of types of misleading or fraudulent behavior. n72

Despite its resounding deference to the OCC's published interpretation regarding the definition of "interest," judicial deference to unpublished letters was criticized by the Supreme Court in Smiley v. Citibank (South Dakota), N.A. n73 The Court held that letters construing ambiguous provisions of the National Banking Act will be given deference only if the interpretations are "formal," directed to national banks generally, and "reasonable." Since the decision in Smiley, two courts have refused to give deference to OCC letters in other contexts. n74

The OCC may have absorbed the fact that its letters will have more authority if they are published. During 2000 and 2001, it published several Notices of Request for Preemption Determinations for comments and issued three preemption letters. For consumers, the most important request for a preemption determination relates to the ability of national banks headquartered in one state that wish to conduct motor vehicle sales financing in another state, without regard to the foreign state's retail installment sales act. n75 Specifically, an Ohio bank sought to conduct business "through" automobile dealers located in Michigan, with the Ohio bank prescribing the terms of the loans and funding them. The Michigan Financial Institutions Bureau opined that its motor vehicle sales finance act (MVSFA) would limit the ability of the bank to make loans in this manner. In its Preemption Determination, the OCC found that the application of Michigan's MVSFA frustrates the bank's ability to exercise its lending authority by restricting it use of agents, by prohibiting the bank from charging interest rates permitted by its home state, and by seeking to apply licensing requirements to a national bank. The agency decided that the state law is preempted. n76

In late 2003, the OCC published a preemption determination regarding the Georgia Fair Lending Act, an anti-predatory mortgage lending law patterned on the federal Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act. n77 While not directly taking this course, the OCC ruled that the entire statute was preempted, even provisions typically found in state law, such as rights to cure, restrictions on brokers and home improvement contractors, assignee liability, and attorney fees. n78 This preemption determination will have far-reaching consequences for the attempts by states to curb predatory lending practices within their borders.

The OCC's positions articulated in the Georgia preemption determination foreshadowed the agency's next major step to mirror the broad preemption available to federal savings associations under the Home Owners' Loan Act.

In 2004, the OCC adopted four broad regulations that purport to preempt state laws in the areas of deposit-taking, non-mortgage lending, mortgage lending and, generally, the business of banking. n79 These rules declare that state laws are preempted if they "obstruct, impair, or condition a national bank's ability to fully exercise" its powers, either directly or through operating subsidiaries. n80

In addition, the two new lending regulations create an "ability to repay" standard that national banks must follow when originating loans. n81 The lending regulations also prohibit national banks from engaging in unfair or deceptive acts or practices within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The types of state laws that the two regulations pertaining to lending identify as automatically preempted include those that relate to:

- Licensing, registration, filings, or reports by creditors;
- The ability of a creditor to require or obtain insurance for collateral or other credit enhancement or risk mitigant;
- Loan-to-value ratios;
- The terms of credit, including the schedule for repayment of principal and interest, amortization of loans, balance, payments due, minimum payments, term to maturity of the loan, or the ability to call the loan due and payable upon the passage of time or a specified event external to the loan;
- Escrow or similar accounts;
- Security property;
- Access to and use of credit reports;
- Disclosure and advertising requirements in credit application forms, credit solicitations, billing statement, credit contracts, or other related documents;
- Disbursements and repayments; and
- Rates of interest.

For real-estate secured loans, additional state laws relating to the following subjects are preempted:

- The aggregate amount of funds that can be loaned upon the security of real estate;
- Processing, origination, servicing, sale, or purchase of, investment in, or participation in mortgages;

- Due on sale clauses, with some exceptions; and

- Covenants and restrictions that must be contained in a lease to make it qualify as acceptable security for a real estate loan. n82

Both lending rules then list the types of state laws that are not preempted as long as they only incidentally affect the exercise of national banks' lending powers. n83 They are: contract, tort, criminal, homestead, rights to collect debts, acquisition and transfer of property, taxation, and zoning laws. When applying the "incidentally effects" standard, several courts have held that the state law claim is not preempted. n83.1 The OCC reserves the right to declare state laws not contained in this list preempted if they have more than an incidental affect on the banks' business of lending. Since the effective date of these regulations, the OCC has released two interpretive letters agreeing that the Uniform Commercial Code n84 and state anti-discrimination laws are not preempted. n85

One court has held that a national bank which made student loans (retail installment loan for state retail installment sales act purposes) and cooperated with the trade school to channel business to the bank is subject to assignee liability under the state RISA. n86 The court found that the state law does no more than incidentally affect the business for at least two reasons. First, a mere burden is not enough. Second, the state law is applied generally. It encourages all lenders to take a closer look when purchasing promissory notes but does not prohibit lenders from purchasing on the secondary market.

In 2006, the OCC released a compilation of activities it has deemed permissible for a national bank over the years. n87 The document also contains a handy summary of presumably all of the OCC's preemption letters and citations to court decisions that support the OCC's preemption positions regarding a wide variety of laws. In 2004, the OCC also amended the regulation regarding its "visitorial" powers. n88 "Visitation" refers to "the act of a superior or superintending officer, who visits a corporation to examine into its manner [of] conducting business, and enforces an observance of its laws and regulation." The OCC claims to have exclusive visitorial powers over national banks and their operating subsidiaries under Section 484 of the NBA. n89

The OCC asserts that state or local governmental bodies have no right to take administrative action against or to sue national banks and their operating subsidiaries to enforce state laws that do apply to national banks.

[iii] Co-Extensive Rights of Operating Subsidiaries

Until 2001, neither Congress nor the OCC had conferred national bank preemption rights upon national bank subsidiaries. However, last year, following the example of the OTS, the OCC promulgated a very short and seemingly innocuous regulation: "Unless otherwise provided by Federal law or OCC regulation, State laws apply to national bank operating subsidiaries to the same extent that those laws apply to the parent national bank." n90 The agency justified its action by arguing that the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act n91 permits national banks to own subsidiaries that solely engage in activities that national banks are permitted to engage in directly and are conducted subject to the same terms and conditions that govern the conduct of such activities by national banks. n92

It is clear is that the authorization in Gramm-Leach-Bliley to subsidiaries was confined to "financial" subsidiaries. A financial subsidiary can engage only in activities that are financial in nature or incidental to a financial activity and activities that are permitted for national banks to engage in directly (subject to the same terms and conditions that govern the conduct of the activities by a national bank). n93 However, nowhere has Congress explicitly addressed the extension of national bank preemption to financial subsidiaries.

At this point, the Second, Fourth, Sixth, and Ninth Circuit Courts of Appeals have affirmed the validity of this regulation as it applies to national banks' operating subsidiaries. n94 At issue were state laws regarding licensing and examination. Of note, the Ninth Circuit limited its holding to the " enforcement of state visitation by state officials, subject to exceptions stated in § 484(a) itself." n94.1 This suggests that state officials arguably could enforce state law through litigation if the substance of the state law is not preempted by other provisions of the National Bank Act or OCC regulations. n94.2 The Supreme Court granted certiorari in the Watters case and recently upheld the applicability of OCC visitation to operating subsidiaries. n94.3

The Second and Ninth Circuits provided the most lengthy analyses. Both courts relied upon section 24 (Seventh) of the NBA and the incidental power clause to hold that national banks have the authority to conduct business through operating subsidiaries. The Ninth Circuit rejected the argument that silence in the NBA regarding operating subsidiaries means that national banks cannot create and perform banking functions through such entities. n95 Both courts then deferred to the OCC operating subsidiary preemption rule.

In February 2004, the OCC added a searchable list of many of the national bank subsidiaries that engage in consumer lending to its website. The list appears at www.occ.treas.gov/OpSublist.pdf. Or one can go to the OCC home page at www.occ.treas.gov and click on "Customer Assistance." This list does not indicate when a company became an operating subsidiary, or when it lost this status if it was sold or reorganized. This information is critical because loans originated before or after a company was bought up or reorganized into an operating subsidiary would not be entitled to preemption. Further, the list is not complete. The OCC hopes to augment the list over time.

[iv] Rent-a-Charter Controversy

A recent and disturbing trend in the payday loan industry has drawn the ire of state regulators and consumers. Payday lenders have courted both national and state chartered banks to act as conduits for loans in a blatant attempt to avoid the application of state usury caps through the exportation doctrine. n96 Discussed in § 6.02[2][b] supra, this doctrine permits a bank chartered in a deregulated state to ignore the usury laws in the borrower's home state, undermining that state's ability to enforce its usury laws. In the payday lending context, this means that payday lenders can partner with banks, make loans for the bank at its local storefront, buy back the loan, and claim that the borrower's home state usury laws do not apply.

Consumers are challenging these partnerships, arguing that the payday lender is renting the bank charter. For example, a case filed in Florida state court alleges that Ace and Goleta National Bank of California entered into a master agreement in which Ace Cash Express offered Goleta loans through its retail site. n97 Under the agreement, Ace purchased from Goleta all of the bank loans made on the previous day, and the loan purchases entitled Ace to substantially all of the interest and all of the risk of non-payment. Consumers accessed the loan proceeds through the use of debit cards that bear the Ace or "Advance Cash Express" name. According to the complaint, the real purpose of the agreement between Goleta and Ace is to allow Ace to evade Florida usury laws by allowing Ace to utilize Goleta's name and national banking standing. The complaint seeks damages for usury violations and under the state's unfair and deceptive trade practices act. Consumers in Maryland and Texas have filed class action suits in both federal and state courts attacking this particular brand of partnership between Goleta National Bank and Ace Cash Express. n98 The two cases filed in federal court, both of which named the national bank, have been dismissed. n99 Of the two cases, the one relevant to this discussion is Hudson v. Ace Cash Express, Inc. There, the court refused to look behind the loan documents listing the bank as the lender--at least at the motion to dismiss stage--and the complaint failed to allege that the lender was Ace, not the bank.

Three states, Colorado, Ohio, and North Carolina, have filed enforcement actions against Ace Cash Express, arguing that it, not Goleta, is the true lender. These cases are currently pending. n100

In addition, in 2000, both the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Office of Thrift Supervision issued letters warning national banks and thrifts of the potential credit, transaction, reputation, compliance, and legal risks involved with payday lending. n101 While the OCC did not prohibit or limit national banks from entering into these partnerships, it created a set of guidelines that discourage rollovers and listed certain disclosures that banks "should" make. One of the most important statements of the OCC in its letter is the following: "Multiple renewals--particularly renewals without reduction in the principal balance, and renewals in which interest and fees are added to the principal balance, are an indication that a loan has been made without a reasonable expectation of repayment at maturity." This position can be used to support and unfair or deceptive practices or unconscionability claims by arguing that the lender knew the consumer did not have the ability to repay at the time of each rollover.

The OCC recently announced a consent order signed by a pay-day lender, Eagle National Bank, n102 which it stated had "rented out its national bank charter to a payday lender in order to facilitate that nonbank entity's evasion of the requirements of state law that would otherwise be applicable to it." n103 Eagle agreed to cease its payday lending business.

The OCC continued its tough stance on banks and their partners regarding payday lending during 2002. The OCC terminated the partnership between Goleta National Bank and Ace Cash Express, Inc., the subject of the numerous lawsuits and state enforcement actions discussed above. These entities agreed to cease all payday lending by December 31, 2002, though servicing and collecting on outstanding loans can continue. Ace agreed to be 100% responsible for outstanding loans and to pay a $250,000 civil penalty. Ace cannot partner with any other national banks without the permission of the OCC. Goleta consented to a $75,000 civil penalty. n104

The OCC also shut down the smaller scale payday lending arrangements between Advance America and Cash Advance Centers and Peoples National Bank of Paris, Texas as well as the partnership between Cash America and First National Bank in Brookings, South Dakota. n105

In another significant move, the OCC filed an amicus in the Colorado case, State ex rel. Salazar v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., in support of Colorado's motion to remand, and arguing against preemption. n106

In 2003, certain state chartered depositories came under the primary jurisdiction of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"), if they are FDIC-insured banks. The FDIC issued guidelines for payday lending. n107

During 2005, however, payday loan companies became unhappy with the FDIC's guidelines and signs that these bank partnerships were doomed began to appear. In stunning developments in late 2005 and early 2006, all but a handful of small South Dakota banks decided to pull out of their bank agency arrangements. County Bank of Delaware exited the business after the FDIC issued a cease and desist order. n107.1 Next, the FDIC apparently sent letters to other state-chartered banks in the payday lending business advising them to correct certain deficiencies. n107.2 As a result, First Bank of Delaware, Republic Bank in Kentucky, BankWest, Inc. of South Dakota, and Community State Bank of South Dakota announced they would cease their payday lending operations in 2006. n107.3 By the end of 2006, all other rent-a-bank payday loan operations had ceased due to this FDIC intervention. The payday companies undoubtedly will look for other avenues to make these lucrative loans. n107.4

Following the demise of these relationships between payday lenders and state-chartered banks, the FDIC issued Affordable Small Loan Guidelines in 2007. n107.5 These guidelines encourage banks to:

- Collect fees that bear a direct relationship to origination costs and avoid charges such as annual fees, membership fees, advance fees, and prepayment penalties;

- Offer small loan credit with APRs of no greater than 36 percent;

- Encourage principal reduction by structuring closed-end loans to provide for affordable and amortizing payments; open-end loans should require minimum payments that pay off principal;

- Avoid excessive renewals or the prolonged failure to reduce the outstanding balance;

- Utilize sound underwriting that focuses on a borrower's history with the institution and ability to repay within an acceptable timeframe, though for small loans, documenting the borrower's ability to repay could be streamlined to include basic information, such as proof of recurring income.

[4] The Home Owners' Loan Act

[a] Overview

In 1933, Congress enacted the HOLA which authorizes the OTS to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, and regulation of federal savings and loan associations. n108

A product of the Great Depression of the 1930s, the Act was intended: "to provide emergency relief with respect to home mortgage indebtedness at a time when as many as half of all home loans in the country were in default" and when many local savings institutions had closed or discontinued making "long-term loans." n109

Like the National Bank Act, the HOLA grants federal savings associations "most favored lender" status by granting them the right to charge a federal interest rate or the interest rate allowed by the home state. n110 Thus, federal S&Ls may charge the greater of: (1) 1% above the discount rate on 90-day commercial paper in effect at the Federal Reserve bank in the district in which such savings association is located; or (2) the rate allowed by the laws of the state in which the savings association is located. Calculating the alternative federal interest rate and the scope of the most favored lender doctrine are discussed earlier regarding national banks. If a savings association violates these restrictions, the harmed person may bring an action seeking forfeiture of the entire amount of interest that the debt carries with it or that is agreed to be paid. n110.1 The analysis of these issues appearing in section 6.02[2][a] supra applies with equal validity to federal savings and loans.

Federal savings associations may also export interest rates across state lines, just like national banks. n111 However, the OTS has defined where an association is "located" more broadly than has the OCC for purposes of which state's usury law applies under the most favored lender doctrine. n112 In a letter issued in 2004, the OTS reiterated its position: that an association may export the most favored lender interest rate of its home office state, even when making loans to borrowers residing in a branch state and even if the loans are booked out of offices located in that branch state. n113 In this latter situation, the association need not demonstrate any special nexus between the loans and the association's home state. The association also may elect to use the most favored lender interest rate of the branch state when a loan is made in that branch state, regardless of whether the borrower resides in the branch state or a state in which the association is not located.

The same rule that applies to national banks regarding when preemption arises should apply equally to federal savings associations. n114 The National Bank Act applies only to credit initiated by a national bank, not to that assigned to it. n115

[b] HOLA and "Conflict" Preemption

Though Congress granted the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (and its successor, the Office of Thrift Supervision) broad authority to regulate the lending practices of federal savings associations, the analysis applied by the courts to determine if a state law is preempted by HOLA or an OTS regulation is the same as that used when national banks are involved, i.e., "conflict" preemption analysis. n116 Where the OTS has issued regulations governing the behavior at issue which conflicts with state law on the same issue, the state law is preempted. n117

In 1996, the OTS issued new regulations in which it claims the authority to occupy the entire field of lending regulations regarding federal savings associations. n118

These regulations list the types of state laws which are expressly preempted with respect to federal savings associations and those which are not. n119 On the other hand, both before and after the enactment of 12 C.F.R. section 560, the OTS has found that numerous other types of state laws are preempted, including loan disclosure laws, loan-related charges regulation (including pre-payment penalty prohibitions), certain state insurance laws, statutes governing the trust activities of thrifts, licensing laws, laws or ordinance restricting the ATM fees, and a host of others. n120

The OTS has determined that one type of state law not mentioned in the regulation is not preempted--state unfair and deceptive acts and practices laws that do not directly regulate credit transactions. n121 This opinion letter specifically addressed whether Indiana's unfair and deceptive acts and practices ("UDAP") statute was preempted. While Indiana's UDAP statute affects lending to the extent that it prohibits misleading statements and practices in loan transactions, the OTS found that there is no indication that the law is aimed at any state objective in conflict with the safe and sound regulation of federal savings associations. "In fact, because federal thrifts are presumed to interact with their borrowers in a truthful manner, Indiana's general prohibition on deception should have no measurable impact on their lending operations."

Both before and after the enactment of 12 C.F.R. § 560, the OTS has determined that numerous other types of state laws are preempted, including state anti-predatory mortgage lending (HOEPA-like) laws, loan disclosure laws, loan-related charges regulation (including pre-payment penalty prohibitions), certain state insurance laws, statutes governing the trust activities of thrifts, licensing laws, laws or ordinance restricting the ATM fees, and a host of others. n122 Additionally, in 2002, the OTS published a list of the powers of federal savings associations with supporting citations. n123 Practitioners should consult this list to determine the OTS's view on the nature and extent of the powers of federal thrifts before suing or defending this type of institution.

The ability to preempt certain state laws enjoyed by federal savings associations also applies, by regulation, to certain subsidiaries of these federal associations. n124

[5] Industrial Loan Companies/Industrial Loan Banks

[a] Overview

Industrial loan companies (ILCs) or industrial banks emerged from the Morris Plan banks of the early 20th century to provide small loans to low- and moderate-income workers secured by their deposits. n124.1 Most of these companies operated like finance companies: they made loans at higher interest rates to wage earners who could not otherwise obtain credit. ILCs did not receive deposits. Instead, they issued thrift certificates to customers who made the equivalent of deposits. These thrift certificates were not insured by the FDIC, although two states, California and Utah, created insurance funds to back the ILCs. n124.2 ILCs were not subject to supervision by any federal banking agency for decades.

In 1982, the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act authorized federal deposit insurance for the thrift certificates of ILCs. n124.3 If an ILC applies for and receives FDIC insurance, the FDIC becomes its primary federal supervisor. However, ILCs or industrial banks remain state chartered and state regulated financial institu tions. Seven states charter ILCs: California, Colorado, Hawaii, Indiana, Minnesota, Nevada, and Utah. n124.4

As of January 30, 2007, there were 58 federally-insured ILCs with assets totaling approximately $177 billion. n124.5 Among the ILCs are automotive lenders (GMAC and BMW), retailers (Target), several large stock brokerage firms (Merrill Lynch, Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, Lehman Brothers), and credit card lenders (Advanta). n124.6 Unsurprisingly, given its relatively permissive attitude towards ILCs, Utah is home to the vast majority of the large industrial banks.

[b] Most Favored Lender Doctrine and Exportation

Since ILCs are creatures of state law, state law generally applies to most of their activities. In addition, the state in which they are chartered will determine whether or not ILCs are different from a bank in any functional manner. For most purposes, ILCs can function as banks. There is only one meaningful limitation on what an industrial loan company can do: industrial loan companies cannot offer business checking accounts without losing the benefits of limited regulation available under the ILC charter. n124.7 ILCs can be owned by any business corporate entity, including a limited liability corporation, n124.8 and there is generally no limitation on their ability to own subsidiaries.

If an ILC becomes federally insured by the FDIC, the ILC is entitled to the "most favored lender" status granted to other state-chartered banks in the Depository Institutions Deregulatory and Monetary Control Act of 1980.As a result, the ILC may charge the greater of: (1) one percent above the discount rate on ninety-day commercial paper in effect at the Federal Reserve bank in the district in which such state bank is located or (2) the rate allowed by the laws of the state in which the state bank is located. n124.9

The FDIC has issued letters opining that federally-insured institutions can export their home state's interest when doing business with customers residing in other states. This means that Utah-chartered ILCs are able to export Utah's usury laws in consumer lending transactions anywhere in the country even without branches in other states. Since Utah has no interest rate caps, n124.10 a Utah ILC can lend money in any other state at whatever rate it chooses.

[6] Preemption: DIDA

[a] Overview

The DIDA n125 provided (1) alternate federal rate ceilings for various federally chartered or insured depository lenders, apparently extending most favored lender status to these lenders; n126 (2) completely removed interest ceilings for most first mortgages on residences and mobile homes; n127 and (3) temporarily permitted an alternate federal ceiling on most business and agricultural credit. n128

Presumably recognizing the intrusion into states rights, Congress built into the statute an opportunity for states to "opt out." This is a significant difference from the NBA where a state opt-out right would have completely defeated the original purpose of supporting the fledgling national banks.

DIDA further attempted to circumscribe the impact of "interest" rate preemption, at least as to the first mortgage preemption, by clarifying that state consumer protections, such as limitations on late charges, prepayment penalties and attorney fees, are not preempted. n129

However, the financial services industry, and, to date, the courts specifically addressing the issue have not viewed DIDA as so circumscribed. In particular, sections 521-523 are now interpreted to give additional lenders the full measure of most favored lender status formerly reserved to national banks. Therefore, as the courts have interpreted these sections to give other lenders "exportation" rights, DIDA joins with the NBA to threaten national deregulation by "sister-state preemption." A result of the exportation controversy has been to erode the will of legislatures in "consumer-friendly" states as local financial services providers have worked hard (and generally successfully) for the freedom to charge more and higher fees, claiming this freedom is necessary to compete with those lenders who have the cloak of preemption. Consumers have accordingly lost protection as fee caps have risen.

One of the other ironies that arises in the exportation context occurs when courts in far-flung states where credit card customers reside must resolve conflicts in the laws of the state where the bank was chartered. For example, an Illinois federal court found itself embroiled in a controversy over which provisions of Virginia usury law applied to regulate the allowable amount of late fees and the duration of the grace period. n130 The result was that a foreign court construed conflict in another state's law before that state's own court ever had the opportunity to do so.

[b] DIDA and Federally Related Lenders

One significant, and controversial, effect of DIDA was the extension of the alternate federal interest ceiling, which was formerly available only to national banks, to other federally-related depository institutions. The following lenders can take advantage of the federal alternative rate ceilings:

1) State-chartered commercial banks using federal deposit insurance; n131

2) Federally-insured or federally-chartered savings and loan associations, including federal savings banks; n132

3) State mutual savings banks and savings and loan associations, if they are federally insured; n133 and

4) Federally insured credit unions. n134

Because the language in DIDA extending the alternate interest ceiling to these federally related lenders matches the most favored lender provision of the National Bank Act, n135 these lenders have argued that they have similarly been granted most favored lender status. The result of such an interpretation is that federally insured state banks, savings and loans, and credit unions may charge the higher of the rate established for such institutions under state law, the federal alternate rate, or the highest rate allowed to any lender (particularly finance companies or deregulated lenders) making similar loans in the state.

Whether DIDA was actually intended to extend most favored lender status is unclear. However, most authorities, both regulatory agencies n136 and courts, n137 support the extension.

[c] DIDA and Exportation

The industry has assumed, and, since the First Circuit's decision in Greenwood Trust v. Massachusetts, n138 the courts have as well, that DIDA gives federally related lenders exportation rights coextensive with the national banks.

Two of the issues raised by DIDA exportation are the same as those raised by national bank exportation, and the reader should refer to those earlier discussions: the scope of terms encompassed by the term "interest rate" which can be exported, n139 and the constitutionality of delegating federal preemptive authority to unaccountable state legislatures. n140

There is, however, an additional issue presented by exportation under DIDA which, like the constitutional question, raises fundamental questions of comity and federalism. It is also one which the courts have yet to seriously address. That is the existence of the opt-out right in DIDA. n141

Arguably, the very existence of this opt-out right should, as a matter of statutory construction, weigh against grafting the full exportation right under the National Bank Act onto DIDA, for otherwise the opt-out right is superfluous. n142 Nonetheless, two circuit courts have held that DIDA carries with it the exportation right. n143 However, both were to states which had not opted-out of the relevant portion of DIDA. To date, only one decision appears to have involved a state which did opt out. A Colorado intermediate appellate court held that the opt-out right applied only to loans "made" in the opting-out state. It made reference to a Colorado law, n144 which considered the contract made in Colorado if the lender received the agreement there. Hence, the court found the opt-out would apply only to intrastate loans. n145

There are also conflict of law principles to be considered in the exportation context. n146 In brief, while there is a preference for adopting the law of the state that would uphold the contract, there are two limitations on that, both of which argue against adopting the law of the exporting state. The first is that invoking the preference should not undermine the public policy of the state whose laws are not followed. Public policy should be a critical component of a conflicts analysis in these cases since Congress specifically gave states the right to "just say no," and it must be assumed that they meant that others must respect that decision.

Another choice of laws principle relating to usury cases recognizes the distinction between general and special usury laws. Courts have recognized that commercial and consumer cases involve different public policy considerations, n147 another factor which should, in a conflicts analysis, tilt the balance in favor of the home state of the borrower whose only contact with the other state is to mail the application and payments there.

[d] DIDA's "First Mortgage" Preemption

DIDA section 501(a)(1) overrides state laws and state constitutional provisions which limit "the rate or amount of interest, discount points, finance charges, or other charges" on loans secured by first liens on either residential real estate or residential mobile homes. n148

Unlike the most favored lender preemption, which, through controversial agency and judicial interpretations, currently encompasses a wide variety of charges within the definition of "interest," n149 DIDA's first lien preemption covers only those limitations on costs that are included in the annual percentage rate. n150 It does not preempt state limitations designed to protect borrowers, such as prepayment charges, late charges, attorney's fees or similar limitations. n151 Nor does it preempt a state statute which prohibits negative amortization n152 or a state statute which prohibited the charging of an escrow waiver fee. n153

However, the law contains no express purchase money limitation and, therefore, the preemption extends to any loan provided that the lender obtains a first lien on the borrower's home as security. n154 This has enabled de facto second mortgage lenders to claim usury preemption by paying off cheaper senior liens with part of the proceeds of the second mortgage loan, thus obtaining first lien status.

Because the application of the DIDA first mortgage preemption to a home loan can devastate a consumer's usury claim even if the interest charged is absurdly high, counsel representing defaulting homeowners should examine each loan transaction carefully to determine whether it falls within the scope of the preemption. n155 Several questions should be considered. Did the lender really obtain a first lien on residential property at the requisite time? Does the lender itself qualify under DIDA?

With respect to determining whether the lender really obtained a first lien, the OTS (formerly the FHLBB), which is charged with interpreting DIDA, has defined "loans which are secured by a first lien on real estate" as loans secured by any instrument "of such a nature that, in the event of default, the real estate described in the instrument could be subjected to the satisfaction of the obligation with the same priority as a first mortgage of a first deed of trust in the jurisdiction where the real estate is located." n156 This definition clearly leaves some questions about the precise definition of "first lien" under DIDA, and state law determines the issue. n157 Liens created by state or federal government programs, such as deferred loans made for the purpose of rehabilitating residences, should destroy the "first lien" claim of a subsequent home equity loan and could subject that second loan to the state's second mortgage loan law. n158

A second question to be considered in determining whether state usury law has been preempted by DIDA's first mortgage provisions is whether the lender itself qualifies under DIDA. Generally, DIDA section 501(a)(1) applies to a loan or mobile home credit sale if:

a) The loan or sale is made by a federally insured depository lender; n159

b) The loan or sale is made, insured, or "assisted in any way" by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD"); n160

c) The lender is approved by the Secretary of HUD for participation in any National Housing Act mortgage insurance program; n161

d) The loan or sale is made by a "creditor" n162 who "makes or invests in" residential real estate loans or mobile home credit sales in excess of $1 million per year; n163

e) The loan is eligible for resale on the federal secondary mortgage market; n164

f) The mobile home seller is a "creditor" n165 who assigns all or part of its credit contracts to one of the above qualifying lenders; n166 or

g) The seller is the previous occupant of the property or mobile home who is taking back a mortgage. n167

Finally, an extremely important qualification to the mobile home preemption in DIDA section 501(a)(1) is that it only applies if the mobile home loan or credit sale complies with the OTS's consumer protection regulations. n168 Exactly what happens in the absence of creditor's compliance with the OTS regulations will depend on what law applies to that creditor in the absence of the section 501(a)(1) preemption. There are two possibilities: either the creditor will be saved by some other provision which preempts state usury law, or state usury law will apply.

[e] Opting Out of DIDA by State Legislation

Congress, as noted above, tempered DIDA's preemption by giving states the right to "opt-out" and reassert primary control over credit charges. n169 As a result, not all the DIDA preemptions apply in all states.

The requirements for opting out of the DIDA preemptions vary with the individual preemptions, and some states have been selective in opting out, so it is important to be precise about which of DIDA's preemptions is at issue.

To add to the confusion, there are two separate components to the first lien opt-out right, one of which expired in 1983, the other of which is continuing.

In order to opt out of the section 501 first mortgage interest rate preemption, a state must have passed legislation or held a referendum prior to April 1, 1983, which "explicitly and by its terms" rejected the preemption. n170 However, this three-year cut-off does not limit the states' abilities to reregulate the assessment of points or "such other charges" on first mortgage loans. n171 DIDA imposes no deadline for such action and, unlike the interest rate opt-out, does not require an express rejection of this preemption. Any legislation, after March 31, 1980, which amends or institutes limitations on points or charges other than the stated interest rate, arguably constitutes opt-out legislation. n172

As with the first lien interest rate preemption, explicit legislative action is required for states to reject DIDA's alternate interest ceiling (and most favored lender) provisions for federally insured depository lenders. n173 No deadline exists before which a state must exercise its right, under section 525, to opt-out of this portion of DIDA. n174

[7] Preemption: Loans Insured by the FHA or VA

[a] Overview

The FHA and the VA are authorized to insure loans for the purchase or improvement of houses and mobile homes, n175 and the state interest ceilings have been preempted for these loans. n176 Although the VA replaces these state ceilings with its own interest limitations on the loans which it insures, n177 FHA authority to do likewise was revoked by the National Housing Act Amendments of 1983, and borrowers and lenders may agree to any interest rate on FHA-insured loans issued after November 30, 1983. n178 Thus, in the absence of state opt-out legislation, n179 there is no interest ceiling on FHA-insured loans. However, regulations governing insurance, payment schedules, fees, and other charges associated with these FHA-insured loans do exist. n180

Note that the removal of state interest ceilings on mobile home loans insured by the FHA and VA has led to some conflict with the mobile home provisions of DIDA. n181

Another issue that arises with these preemptions is that the elimination of the federal ceiling on interest which could be charged on loans insured by the FHA may create indirect rate deregulation in certain state consumer credit statutes which were pegged to this ceiling. n182

[b] State Opt-Out of the FHA/VA Loan Preemption

States may opt-out of the FHA- and VA-insured loan preemptions, but, because several statutes are involved in the preemption, and because the opt-out language in these statutes is somewhat vague, the applicability of state law to any given insured loan can be a complicated question, the answer to which depends largely on the effective dates of the state opt-out statutes(s) and the transaction date. n183

Beyond the tangle of effective dates which must be examined to determine whether an FHA- or VA-insured loan is covered by state usury law, one must consider what language is required in state legislation for the legislation to constitute opt-out law. n184 Practitioners should examine any amendments or re-enactments of their state usury law which occurred after the effective date(s) of the relevant preemption statute(s) to determine whether their state may have wittingly or unwittingly opted-out of the FHA/VA preemption. Such a search of state law may instead reveal the express repeal of state usury and other state limitations on FHA- and VA-insured loans. n185

[8] National Credit Union Act Interest Rate Preemption

The Federal Credit Union Act of 1934 (FCUA) n186 regulates the operation of federally-chartered credit unions and sets the maximum interest rate that these credit unions may charge in the absence of a more specific statutory authority. n187 Since 1970, the primary regulator of federal credit unions has been the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA). n188

Like national banks and federal savings associations, the FCUA confers upon federal credit unions "most favored lender" status in particular circumstances. Section 1785 allows federal credit unions to charge a federal interest rate or the interest rate allowed by the home state for the particular type of loan if either of those rates exceeds the rate permitted by the NCUA (presently 18%). n189 This means that the federal credit union may charge the greater of: (1) one percent above the discount rate on ninety-day commercial paper in effect at the Federal Reserve bank in the district in which such credit union is located; or (2) the rate allowed by the laws of the state in which the credit union is located, if either exceeds 18%. The NCUA extended the most favored lender status to state-chartered credit unions by issuing an "interpretation." n190 Calculating the alternative federal interest rate and the scope of the most favored lender doctrine are discussed earlier regarding national banks.

The preemption regime for federal credit unions, until recently, has been fairly narrow. It is clear that the Federal Credit Union Act preempts state usury law to the extent that state law conflicts with the Act, and that state usury statutes setting low interest ceilings create such a conflict. n191 However, the Act is not so comprehensive as to preempt all state regulation of federal credit unions. States retain regulatory authority in areas the Act does not address. n192 Thus, one court held that a state law limiting the maximum attorney fees that a lender could recover from a defaulting debtor was not preempted, and applied to a federal credit union. n193

The NCUA defined the limited scope of federal credit union preemption by regulation. n194 The NCUA states that the FCUA grants it exclusive authority to regulate the "rates, terms or repayment and other condition of Federal credit union loans and lines of credit (including credit cards) to members." n195 The regulation identifies the specific types of state law that are preempted as laws purporting to limit or affect:

- Rates of interest and amounts of finance charges, including, terms related to variable rate loans and late charges;
- Closing costs, application, origination, or other fees;
- Terms of repayment, including, maturity of loans and lines of credit; the amount, uniformity, and frequency of payments; balloon payments; and prepayment limits;
- Conditions related to the amount or purpose of the loan or line of credit and the type or amount of security;
- The imposition and enforcement of liens on the shares (deposits) of borrowers and accommodating parties. n196

The NCUA intends that this list be exclusive. n197 State laws that do not affect rates, terms of repayment, and other conditions are not preempted. n198

[9] Preemption of State Non-Rate Mortgage Credit Regulation: The Alternative Mortgage Transactions Parity Act (AMTPA).

One of the most sweeping federal preemptions of state consumer credit laws became effective on October 15, 1982, in the 1982 Depository Institutions Act, also known as the "Garn/St. Germain Act." This Act revised federal lending authority extensively, granting many new powers to federal lenders, especially the savings and loan associations. It provided special aid to ailing lenders, preempted state law concerning due on sale clauses, and altered Truth in Lending as well as other matters not treated here.

The primary DIA consumer usury preemption is contained in the Alternative Mortgage Transactions Parity Act. n199 AMTPA was designed to extend federal mortgage regulations, which previously had covered only federally chartered lenders, to state lenders, and, thereby, to eliminate the "discriminatory" advantage which these liberal regulations may have given the federal institutions. n200 Practitioners should note both the substance and scope of this statute.

First, AMTPA does not affect interest ceilings on mortgage loans. Instead, it addresses the structure of mortgage loans by overriding state laws which restrict "creative finance," e.g., laws limiting variable interest rates, final "balloon" payments, or negative amortization. These state statutes are replaced, at the option of the state lender, n201 by federal regulations. However, the state lender must follow in their entirety either state laws or federal regulations, and cannot select and combine the most advantageous terms of each. n202

Second, AMTPA applies not only to state depository institutions, but to all "housing creditors" making "alternative mortgage transactions." n203 Housing creditors are broadly defined to include any depository lender, HUD-approved lender, or any lender who "regularly makes" loans or credit sales secured by residential realty or mobile homes, and any transferee of these lenders. Alternative mortgages include senior or junior residential mortgages or credit sales which have variable interest rates or maturity or other non-traditional terms such as shared equity.

Third, AMPTA only applies to "alternative mortgage transactions" as defined in the statute:

- loans in which the finance charge or interest rate may be adjusted or renegotiated n204 (for example, adjustable rate mortgages or mortgages where the rate decreases if the borrower pays on time); n205

- loans with fixed rates but which implicitly permit rate adjustments by having the debt mature at the end of an interval shorter than the term of the amortization schedule n206 (for example, loans with balloon payments); n207

- loans involving any similar type of rate, method of determining return, term, repayment, or other variation not common to traditional fixed-rate, fixed-term transactions n208 (for example, loans that negatively amortize or those involving shared equity or appreciation). n209 Once the loan meets one of these definitions, then certain state laws may be preempted.

The broad scope of AMTPA is significant because it gives non-depository lenders much greater freedom. However, states retain some licensing authority over state lenders n210 and, perhaps more importantly, six states used their now-expired ability to "opt out" of AMTPA provisions. October 15, 1985 was the deadline. n211

Congress has since imposed a limited degree of reregulation in this area. Trying to narrowly target the reregulation to the segment of the market where the abuses occurred, some of these terms were prohibited or restricted in specified high-cost, closed-end home equity loans in 1994. n212 For loans covered by HOEPA, it, not AMTPA, will be the controlling statute to the extent they conflict. n213

States who wish to regulate abusive mortgages in a fashion similar to HOEPA may run into claims that AMPTA trumps any prohibitions related to balloon payments, negative amortization, or prepayment penalties. The lending industry has begun to challenge these laws on a variety of theories, this being but one. A federal court in Illinois granted summary judgment to the state and dismissed such a challenge on the grounds that HOEPA is the statute against which preemption ought to be measured, not AMPTA. n214

[10] Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act and Interstate Loan Pricing

In 1999, Congress enacted the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act which largely focuses upon eliminating the barriers separating the banking, insurance, and securities industries. n215

One provision, though, should have a profound effect on the ability of a limited number of states (perhaps only one) to regulate the interest rates of the banks chartered within their boundaries in certain circumstances. n216 This subsection contains two important limitations. First, the provision, by its terms, applies only to states with a constitutional provision limiting the maximum lawful annual percentage rate of interest on a contract at not more than 5% above the discount rate for 90-day commercial paper in effect at the federal reserve bank for the federal reserve district in which such state is located. n217 This may limit the effect of this provision to only one state, Arkansas. n218 Second, the subsection does not affect the interest that any insured depository institution may charge or receive under the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act, n219 the National Bank Act, n220 or the Federal Deposit Insurance Act. n221

If this part of the Act applies, a bank with FDIC insurance chartered in such a state may charge and collect interest, discount points, finance charges, or other similar charges as permitted by the home state of an out-of-state bank with a branch in that state or the maximum rate or amount of interest, discount points, finance charges, or other similar charges allowed in a similar transaction allowed a state insured depository institution chartered in that state (the state with the constitutional limitation) or a national bank or federal savings association whose main office is located in such state.

Essentially, if an interstate bank can charge a particular interest rate, then a local bank in the state into which the interstate bank has branched, may charge a rate comparable to that which the home state of the interstate bank allows. n222

[11] Federal Jurisdiction, Removal Issues, and Preemptive Effect of Federal Consumer Protection Statutes

The credit export industry, which has been so aggressive in pushing the limits of "most favored lender doctrine" under both the NBA and DIDA, has tried to keep state courts from ruling on questions concerning the scope of that doctrine. Ordinarily, a federal question n223 must appear on the face of a complaint before a state court action can be removed to federal court. That there may be a defense rooted in federal law is not grounds for removal. n224 There is an exception, though, "where Congress has 'so completely preempt[ed] a particular area that any civil complaint raising this select group of claims is necessarily federal in character'." n225 The industry argues that the scope of most favored lender and exportation rights under the NBA and DIDA fall within that exception. The majority of early cases held that removal was warranted. n226 However, the federal appellate courts are now divided and the Supreme Court has granted certiorari. n227 The Eleventh Circuit's decision in Anderson provides the most articulate and careful analysis of Supreme Court standards used to determine when complete preemption exists. The touchstone of the complete preemption doctrine is congressional intent. Reviewing the National Bank Act, the court did not find evidence of this intent. n228 The only appellate court to rule directly on the removal question as it relates to the current exportation debate held there was not complete preemption, and ordered remand to state court. n229 That decision was subsequently vacated. n230

Though this chapter has concentrated on those federal preemption statutes which override state limitations of credit cost terms, there are some federal consumer protection statutes which may preempt inconsistent or less protective state laws. Two of those, the federal rebate statute and the Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act, are discussed elsewhere in this book. n231

Truth in Lending ("TIL"), a federal disclosure statute, preempts inconsistent state laws. Except to the extent it is amended by HOEPA, TIL neither regulates credit charges nor preempts state laws which do. n232 Its preemption is narrow, and relates largely to the definition of consumer credit terms. n233

[12] Usury Deregulation by State Parity Laws

In the early 1980s, many states enacted "parity" statutes as amendments to their special usury statutes. On their face, parity statutes provide in simple terms that one type of state creditor, such as a state savings and loan, may extend consumer credit under the same rate ceiling as another type of creditor, such as a federal savings and loan. However, the effects of such laws may be extremely complex, leading to legal arguments that the "parity" deregulation extends to transactions and creditors in ways that were unlikely to have been foreseen by the legislature enacting the parity laws.

Usury analysis becomes even more complicated when a state "parity" statute is invoked by a federal lender under the "most favored lender doctrine." For example, a national bank cannot directly use a federal credit union rate ceiling of 15% under the most favored lender doctrine because the doctrine only gives the bank equality with the most favored state lender, n234 and a federal credit union is not a state lender. Yet the national bank may be able to achieve the 15% rate indirectly in some states with parity statutes. For example, a state-chartered credit union in Tennessee is entitled by virtue of a state "parity" statute to charge the same rate as federal credit unions. n235 The federal most favored lender doctrine allows the national bank to do business under the state credit union rate ceiling since the state credit union may prove to be the most favored lender under state law. Because the state credit union can invoke the federal credit union rate under the parity statute, so can the national bank under the most favored lender rule.

The fundamental problem with this approach is that neither Congress nor the state legislature intended it. The combination of state parity laws and the most favored lender doctrine may provide state as well as federal lending institutions with bootstrapping opportunities to raise their rates. n236

Another example of potential bootstrapping is provided by the facts in Minnett v. Commerce Bank, N.A. n237 There, the court speculated, but did not decide, that if a state bank can do what a national bank can do in sister states and if the national bank can export that activity to New Jersey, then a national bank located in New Jersey can engage in the same activity, even though it is not permitted by New Jersey law.

[13] The Military Lending Act

Most recently, Congress enacted the Military Lending Act that imposes a 36% interest rate cap, bans mandatory arbitration, and imposes other restrictions on consumer credit, other than residential mortgages and purchase money loans. n238 This provision applies to credit extended after October 1, 2007 to active duty members of the military and their dependents. n239 The Department of Defense limited the applicability of these restrictions to fixed-term payday, auto title, and tax refund loans. This is the first time that Congress re-imposed a usury cap for certain types of credit since legislation responding to the Great Depression. n240

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawFederal ActsGeneral OverviewBanking LawFederal ActsDepository Institutions Deregulation & Monetary Control ActBanking LawFederal ActsGramm-Leach-Bliley ActBanking LawFederal ActsHome Owners' Loan ActContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. For further discussion of the various relevant statutes, as well as checklists for determining which statutory schemes apply, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, Ch. 3 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Some of these statutes are discussed in greater detail, infra. A few federal statutes have specifically been held not to preempt state usury laws. See In re Seolas, 140 B.R. 266 (E.D. Cal. 1992) (ERISA does not preempt Cal. general usury law, despite Cal. law exempting ERISA from state usury limits; court held latter statute was preempted by ERISA, and yes, court recognized this seems odd.). Federal regulations governing federally chartered depository institutions preempt state law to the extent of direct conflict but do not preempt the field. See Departmento de Asuntos del Consumidor (DACO) v. Oriental Fed. Sav. Bank, 648 F. Supp. 1194 (D. P.R. 1986) (Home Owner's Loan Act did not preclude state regulation of federal S&L's retail installment sales contracts). See generally National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 3.9 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

(n3)Footnote 3. 12 U.S.C. §§ 85-86. See also 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4001, 7.4002; 61 Fed. Reg. 4,869 (Feb. 9, 1996) . See § 6.02[2] infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. 12 U.S.C. §§ 1461 et seq. See § 6.02[3] infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g).

(n6)Footnote 6. Pub. L. No. 96-221, 94 Stat. 161 (1980) (codified throughout Title 12 of the U.S. Code, including 12 U.S.C. § 1831d(a) (state commercial banks), 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g) (savings and loans), 12 U.S.C. § 1785(g) (federally insured credit unions), and 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a (mortgages)).

(n7)Footnote 7. 12 U.S.C. § 1709-1a; 38 U.S.C. § 3728. See § 6.02[5] infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(5).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 12 U.S.C. § 1757(5)(A)(vi).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(c)(7)(ii)(C); 70 Fed. Reg. 3861 (Jan. 27, 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(b)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. 12 U.S.C. § 1709-1a; 38 U.S.C. § 3728.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(5).

(n14)Footnote 14. 12 U.S.C. § 36.

(n15)Footnote 15. H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-651, at 53-55 (1994), reprinted in 1994 U.S.C.C.A.N. 2068, 2074-76 [hereinafter H.R. Conf. Rep. 651]. There are three traditional preemption tests: is the state law in direct conflict with federal law; is federal law so comprehensive as to evidence a Congressional intent to "occupy the field," or does the state law stand as an obstacle to achieving the purpose of the federal law. Where possible, statute should be construed to avoid finding a conflict. See generally Pennsylvania v. Nelson, 350 U.S. 497 (1957) ; 16 Am. Jur. 2d Constitutional Law § 291; H.R. Conf. Rep. 651, at 53. Some courts have recently found "complete preemption" sufficient to turn state consumer protection claims into federal questions, warranting removal of state legal challenges under consumer protection laws to federal court. This legislation arguably should lead to a reexamination of that issue.

(n16)Footnote 16. H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-651, at 54-55 (1994), reprinted in 1994 U.S.C.C.A.N. 2068, 2074-2076. See generally Pennsylvania v. Nelson, 350 U.S. 497 (1956) ; 16 Am. Jur. 2d Constitutional Law § 291.

(n17)Footnote 17. 12 U.S.C. § 43.

(n18)Footnote 18. Pub. L. No. 106-102 (1999), codified as 15 U.S.C. §§ 6701 et seq. , §§ 6801 et seq. , §§ 6901 et seq. , and amending 12 U.S.C. § 1831u. See § 6.02[8] infra.

(n19)Footnote 19. Section 731, amending 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f).

(n20)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq. , implemented by 12 C.F.R. § 226 (Regulation Z). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending, § 2.6.2, 2.6.3 (5th ed. 2003 and Supp.).

(n21)Footnote 21. Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act, Subtitle B of Title I, Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 (H.R. 3474), Pub. L. No. 103-325, 108 Stat. 2160 (1994).

(n22)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 1615.

(n23)Footnote 23. See 12 C.F.R. pts. 1-34.

(n24)Footnote 24. See 12 C.F.R. pts. 700 See, e.g., Crissey v. Alaska USA Fed. Credit Union, 811 P.2d 1057 (Alaska 1991) (federally chartered credit unions subject to NCUA regulations which specifically preempt state laws on interest rates and late charges, 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(b)(1)).

(n25)Footnote 25. See 12 C.F.R. pts. 560 et seq. These regulations make clear that OTS occupies the entire field of lending regulation for federal savings associations. 12 C.F.R. § 560.2(a). The agency lists examples of state laws preempted by its regulations preempted by its regulations, including disclosures, usury-related ceilings, terms of loans, loan-related fees, licensing requirements, loan-to-value rates, escrow accounts, etc. 12 C.F.R. § 560.2(b). In addition, the regulation lists certain state laws and common law that are not preempted to the extent that they only incidentally affect the lending operations of the savings association or are not otherwise contrary to the purposes expressed in paragraph (a) of § 560.2. These enumerated state laws include contract and commercial law, tort law, and real property law. Significantly, other state laws may be exempt from preemption in certain circumstances. 12 C.F.R. § 560.2(c); see preamble language in 61 Fed. Reg. 50,951 (Sept. 30, 1996) . Therefore, state unfair and deceptive trade practices are arguably exempt (and therefore apply to savings associations) under this provision. See Albank, FSB v. Foland, 177 Misc. 2d 569, 676 N.Y.S.2d 461 (City Ct. 1998) .

In interpreting this regulation in the credit card context, a New York court held that the OTS regulation trumped a state evidentiary law that prohibits a maker of a contract involving a consumer transaction from introducing the contract into evidence when the print is not clear and legible or is smaller than a certain type size. Albank, FSB v. Foland, 177 Misc. 2d 569, 676 N.Y.S.2d 461 (City Ct. 1998) . Specifically, the court found that the type size requirement was inconsistent with 12 C.F.R. § 560.2(a) because that requirement would thwart the goal that there be a uniform set of federal lending regulations.

Cases decided prior to the promulgation of § 560.2, holding that Congress did not intend to occupy the field of lending regulation for federal savings associations, are no longer viable except to the extent that they concern state laws that fell into the preemption exception in § 560.2(c).

(n26)Footnote 26. In the wake of the S&L crisis, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was abolished and its functions transferred to the newly created OTS as of August 9, 1989. Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989, Pub. L. No. 101-73, 103 Stat. 183 (FIRREA). Many of the relevant FHLBB rules were republished by OTS with only technical changes. 54 Fed. Reg. 49,411 (Nov. 30, 1989) .

(n27)Footnote 27. "Federally related" loans is a catch-all term referring to those issued by lenders qualifying for DIDA's first lien preemption and AMTPA's "housing-creditors." See generally 12 C.F.R. § 590.2.

(n28)Footnote 28. 12 U.S.C. § 85.

(n29)Footnote 29. Note that the NBA does not apply to credit initiated by another lender, such as a finance company, which is later assigned to a national bank. See FDIC v. Lattimore Land Corp., 656 F.2d 139 (5th Cir. 1981) . In the credit card context, a recent decision by the Eighth Circuit highlights a national bank's rights after it acquires credit card accounts and becomes the originator of credit. Krispin v. May Dep't Stores Co., 218 F.3d 919 (8th Cir. 2000) (consumer opened a revolving credit card account with the store located in Missouri sometime before 1996; in 1996, the store sold all of its accounts to May National Bank, not chartered in Missouri; all new accounts were also opened directly in the bank's name; bank increased the late fees; court found that the bank, and not the store, issued credit to the customers and thus was entitled to preempt Missouri late fee limits; central question was whether the case should be remanded to state court). Cf. In re Harrington, 6 B.R. 655 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1980) (assignment did not revive void note); St. Paul Bank for Coops. v. Ohman, 402 N.W.2d 235 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987) . But see Saul v. Midlantic Nat'l Bank/South, 240 N.J. Super. 62, 572 A.2d 650 (App. Div. 1990) (court applied most favored lender doctrine of NBA to transaction in which an installment sale contract with a car dealer was assigned to a national bank; however, the decision does not discuss the distinction between a national bank's status as assignee and as originator, and the point was apparently not raised). Cf. Garrison v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of S.C., 402 S.E.2d 25 (Va. 1991) (federal savings and loan as assignee of mortgage company originated loan not entitled to preemption even though loan was one of large pool sold to the savings and loan).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 12 U.S.C. § 85.

(n31)Footnote 31. The Federal Reserve Bulletin is available in many public libraries. It is also available by subscription for $25.00 per year or $2.50 per copy from: Publications Services, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, DC 20551.

(n32)Footnote 32. When state law puts no limit on the interest rate a state bank may charge, 12 U.S.C. § 85 appears to assume a 7% discount per annum. However, the courts have essentially ignored this provision and have held that, in the absence of a state ceiling on state institutions, federal banks are similarly unlimited under the most favored lender doctrine. See, e.g., Hiatt v. San Francisco Nat'l Bank, 361 F.2d 504 (9th Cir. 1966) .

(n33)Footnote 33. See United Mo. Bank v. Danforth, 394 F. Supp. 774 (W.D. Mo. 1975) ; Attorney General v. Equitable Trust Co., 294 Md. 385, 450 A.2d 1273 (1982) . See also Saul v. Midlantic Nat'l Bank/South, 572 A.2d 650 (N.J. Super. App. Div. 1990) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., United Mo. Bank v. Danforth, 394 F. Supp. 774 (W.D. Mo. 1985) ; VanderWeyst v. First State Bank of Benson, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S. Ct. 369, 102 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1988) .

(n35)Footnote 35. OCC Letter, Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 96,744 (Jan. 19, 1983); see generally Comment, Federal Credit Unions--Competing Lenders For Purposes of the "Most Favored Lender" Doctrine, 5 Annual Review of Banking Law 349 (1986) (criticizing OCC position).

(n36)Footnote 36. 12 C.F.R. § 7.4001(b)(c), 61 Fed. Reg. 4,869 (Feb. 9, 1996) (OCC interpretive ruling). For an interesting discussion of the OCC's vacillation on how materiality plays out in practice, see Sherman v. Citibank (South Dakota), N.A., 668 A.2d 1036 (N.J. 1995) , vacated and remanded, 517 U.S. 1241, 116 S. Ct. 2493, 135 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1996) (in light of Smiley). See In re Beck, 248 B.R. 229 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 2000) (national bank cannot have its cake and eat it too, says the court in dictum; bank chartered in Arizona may not claim applicability of its home state law regarding the creation of a security interest and that of the consumer's residence, New York, by inserting a clause in the contract indicating that New York law applies regarding the security interest; no discussion of what are "material" state restrictions).

(n37)Footnote 37. 439 U.S. 299, 99 S. Ct. 540, 58 L. Ed. 2d 534 (1978) .

(n38)Footnote 38. But in a different context, one court noted that such an argument proves far too much. "The flaw in [this] argument may be demonstrated by asking whether a state's truth-in-lending statute would be preempted because it potentially reduces the return a [lending plan] may get on its loans by restricting its ability to cheat." In re Seolas, 140 B.R. 266, 273 (E.D. Cal. 1992) (discussing whether ERISA preempts state usury laws, and concluding it does not).

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Goehl v. Mellon Bank (Del.), 825 F. Supp. 1239 (E.D. Pa. 1993) ; Nelson v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 794 F. Supp. 312 (D. Minn. 1992) ; Tikkanen v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 801 F. Supp. 270 (D. Minn. 1992) ; Smiley v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 11 Cal. 4th 138, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 441, 900 P.2d 690 (1995) , aff'd, 517 U.S. 735, 116 S. Ct. 1730, 135 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1996) ; Copeland v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 907 P.2d 87 (Colo. 1995) ; see also Greenwood Trust Co. v. Massachusetts, 971 F.2d 818 (1st Cir. 1992) (late charges are interest for purposes of most favored lender status expanded to state banks under DIDA); Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) (same); Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 908 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1995) (same).

(n40)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Watson v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 837 F. Supp. 146 (D.S.C. 1993) (NBA); Tikkanen v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 801 F. Supp. 270 (D. Minn. 1992) ; Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) (DIDA).

(n41)Footnote 41. Fisher v. First Nat'l Bank, 548 F.2d 255 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n42)Footnote 42. See First Nat'l Bank in Mena v. Nowlin, 509 F.2d 872 (8th Cir. 1975) (discount interest prohibited for national banks, as it was for all state lenders). But cf. Grunbeck v. Dime Sav. Bank, 74 F.3d 331 (1st Cir. 1996) (DIDA does not preempt state simple interest statute [lender made negatively amortizing mortgage loans]).

(n43)Footnote 43. See, e.g., Cronkleton v. Hall, 66 F.2d 384 (8th Cir.1933) (NBA §§ 85, 86).

(n44)Footnote 44. See, e.g., Northway Lanes v. Hackley Union Nat'l Bank & Trust, 464 F.2d 855 (6th Cir. 1972) (NBA § 85*)*.

(n45)Footnote 45. 60 Fed. Reg. 11,924 (Mar. 3, 1995) .

(n46)Footnote 46. 12 C.F.R. § 7.4001(a), 61 Fed. Reg. 4,869 (Feb. 9, 1996). In 2001, the OCC clarified the definition of an NSF fee. 66 Fed. Reg. 34,784 (July 2, 2001) . If the bank imposes a fee when a borrower tenders payment on a debt with a check drawn on insufficient funds, that fee constitutes "interest" for purposes of this rule. Revised 12 C.F.R. § 7.4001(a). Fees that a bank charges for its deposit account services, including overdraft and returned check charges, are not "interest." 66 Fed. Reg. 34,786. See also Video Trax, Inc. v. NationsBank, N.A., 33 F. Supp. 2d 1041 , aff'd without opinion, 205 F.3d 1358 (11th Cir.) , cert. denied, 121 S. Ct. 66 (2000) (honoring checks on an overdrawn account is not an extension of credit and fees related to honoring such checks do not constitute interest).

(n47)Footnote 47. Smiley v. Citibank, 517 U.S. 735, 116 S. Ct. 1730, 135 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1996) .

(n48)Footnote 48. OCC Interpretative Letter No. 744 (Aug. 21, 1996). Summaries of OCC letters dealing with the preemption of state law and related topics can be found in National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges, App. D.1.2. Interpretive letters issued since 1996 also can be obtained from the Internet at www.occ.treas.gov. Select "regulatory information" from the menu.

(n49)Footnote 49. The products described in the Letter were home equity loans in which the customers could choose to pay a lower interest rate in a loan that included a prepayment penalty or pay a higher interest rate and avoid a prepayment penalty provision.

(n50)Footnote 50. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 803 (Oct. 7, 1997).

(n51)Footnote 51. See Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Lattimore Land Corp., 656 F.2d 139 (5th Cir. 1981) Miller v. Pacific Shore Funding, 224 F. Supp. 2d 977 (D. Md. 2002) , aff'd on other grounds, 92 Fed. Appx. 933 (4th Cir. 2004) (assignees stand in the shoes of the assignors and are subject to the same claims and defenses unless the holder-in-due-course defense applies); Fed. Nat'l Mortgage Ass'n v. Lefkowitz, 390 F. Supp. 1364 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) (where state law applies at loan origination, it continues to apply to the loan purchaser); In re Harrington, 6 B.R. 655 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1980) (assignment does not revive void note); Spitz v. Goldome Realty Credit Corp., 569 N.E.2d 43 (Ill. App. Ct. 1991) , aff'd, 600 N.E.2d 1185 (Ill. 1992) (mortgage originated by lender which is a servicing corporation second-tier subsidiary of a federal savings bank was subject to state mortgage escrow account act; the preemption applicable to its parent did not extend to it); Viereck v. Peoples Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 343 N.W.2d 30 (Minn. 1984) (due-on-sale clauses contained in mortgage were not valid under applicable state law; as the originating lenders were not entitled to preemption, the federal savings association assignee was not entitled to preemption either); St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives v. Ohman, 402 N.W.2d 235 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987) (interest preemption in 12 U.S.C. § 2205 relating to loans from institutions of the Farm Credit System did not apply to an assigned contract); Garrison v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of S.C., 402 S.E.2d 25 (Va. 1991) (federal savings and loan as assignee of mortgage company originated loan not entitled to preemption even though loan was one of large pool sold to the savings and loan). Cf. Adkison v. First Plus Bank, 143 S.W.3d 29 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) (the bank was the lender since it was listed on the documents; court implies disapproval of the claim that the table-funding "lender," technically the assignee, is the lender). See Phipps v. FDIC, 417 F.3d 1006, 1013 (8th Cir. 2005) ("Courts must look at 'the originating entity (the bank), and not the ongoing assignee ... in determining whether the NBA applies.' " (quoting Krispin)). Cf. In Re Community Bank of No. Va., 418 F.3d 277 (3d Cir. 2005) (finding that a non-depository company originated the mortgage loans at issue, not national or state banks, despite express language in the loan agreements to the effect that the loans were made by a national or state bank; court distinguished Krispin by stating that the national bank in that case originated the loans). See also Discover Bank v. Vaden, 409 F. Supp. 2d 632 (D. Md. 2006) (even though the servicing agent of the bank sued the borrower, the credit card agreement at issue was between the a national bank and the borrower; thus, preemption trumped the borrower's claims under state law). But see Dannewitz v. Equicredit Corp. of America, 839 N.E.2d 1060 (Ill. App. Ct. 2005) (loan made by a non-bank finance company and later bought by bank operating subsidiary; court held that state law claims prepayment penalty claims were preempted); Citibank (South Dakota), N.A. v. Martin, 807 N.Y.S.2d 284 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2005) .

(n52)Footnote 52. A table-funded transaction is one where a nominal lender is actually originating the loan for an entity whose money is used to fund the loan. The loan is transferred immediately to the table-funding lender.

(n53)Footnote 53. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 1000 (Apr. 2, 2004); OCC Interpretive Letter No. 1002 (May 13, 2004), reprinted on the CD-Rom accompanying this volume. But cf. Adkison v. First Plus Bank, 143 S.W.3d 29 (Mo. App. Ct. 2004) (the bank was the lender since it was listed on the documents; court implies disapproval of the claim that the table-funding "lender," technically the assignee, is the lender).

(n54)Footnote 54. Id.

(n55)Footnote 55. OCC Letter to Private Attorneys regarding Wells Fargo Bank, Minnesota, N.A. v. Alberta Harris (Jan. 14, 2005), reprinted on the CD-Rom accompanying this volume. Securitization is described in National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 6.7.4 (6th ed. 2004 and Supp.), and in Kathleen C. Engel & Patricia A. McCoy, Predatory Lending: What Does Wall Street Have to Do with It?, 15 Housing Pol. J. 715, 717/-/718 (2004). One caveat in this OCC Letter is worth noting. The result may be different if the national bank purchases a loan as permitted by 12 C.F.R. § 34.4(a)(10). In that case, the preemption ought to be limited to state laws affecting purchase of the loan, not state laws affecting the origination. Cf. Abel v. Keybank USA, N.A., 313 F. Supp. 2d 720 (N.D. Ohio 2004) (a provision embedded in a state usury law that creates assignee liability and trumps the holder-in-due-course doctrine in the U.C.C. is preempted). See also Bryant v. Rosslare Funding, Inc., No. 3:05-ap-01038 (Aug. 26, 2005) (court remands case to state court because the state usury claim is not preempted where the bank is sued as the trustee of a trust of loans). Cf. Blanco v. KeyBank USA, N.A., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31768 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 30, 2005) (court held that national bank which made student loans (retail installment loan for state retail installment sales act purposes) and cooperated with the trade school to channel business to the bank is subject to assignee liability under the state RISA); Dannewitz v. Equicredit Corp. of America, 839 N.E.2d 1060 (Ill. App. Ct. 2005) .

(n56)Footnote 56. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 36a-158; Iowa Code §§ 527.3-5.

(n57)Footnote 57. Bank One, N.A. v. Guttau, 190 F.3d 844 (8th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied sub nom. Foster v. Bank One, 529 U.S. 1087, 120 S. Ct. 1718, 146 L. Ed. 2d 641 (2000) .

(n58)Footnote 58. Bank One, Utah v. Gattau, 19989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14830 (S.D. Iowa July 24, 1998), rev'd, 190 F.3d 844 (8th Cir. 1999) , cert. denied sub nom. Foster v. Bank One, 529 U.S. 1087 (2000) . See also Bank of Am. v. City & County of San Francisco, 309 F.3d 551 (9th Cir. 2002) (federal district court permanently enjoined the implementation of two California cities' ordinances prohibiting financial institutions from charging non-accountholders an ATM fee for the use of their machines, on the grounds that the NBA and HOLA preempt the municipalities right to regulate national banks and federal savings associations on this core issue; Ninth Circuit affirmed, agreeing with the Eighth Circuit on the EFTA issue, and in addition the court held that the regulation of ATM fees is not the type of consumer protection measure contemplated by the EFTA); Wells Fargo Bank Tex., N.A. v. James, 321 F.3d 488 (5th Cir. 2003) (court upholds injunction issued against the enforcement of a state law prohibiting banks from charging fees to non-account holders for cashing checks drawn on that bank); Metrobank N.A. v. Foster, 193 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (S.D. Iowa 2001) (state's anti-discrimination law, which when applied to national banks prevented them from charging fees to non-account holders when accessing ATM machines, is preempted).

(n59)Footnote 59. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 821 (March 1998). Interestingly, a federal court reviewing this issue as it related to a Connecticut law dismissed the case on jurisdictional grounds. Fleet Bank, N.A. v. Burke, 160 F.3d 883 (2d Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1004, 119 S. Ct. 2340, 144 L. Ed. 2d 237 (1999) . See also OCC Interpretive Letter No. 906 (Jan. 19, 2001). OCC Interpretive Letters issued since May 1996 can be obtained from the Internet at www.occ.treas.gov. Select "regulatory information" at the menu. Summaries of OCC letters dealing with the preemption of state law and related topics that have not been published in the Federal Register can be found at National Consumer Law Center, Fair Debt Collection, App. D.12.

(n60)Footnote 60. Barnett Bank of Marion County v. Nelson, 517 U.S. 25, 32, 116 S. Ct. 1103, 1108, 134 L. Ed. 2d 237, 245 (1996) ; First Nat'l Bank of San Jose v. California, 262 U.S. 366, 43 S. Ct. 602, 67 L. Ed. 1030 (1923) ; Waite v. Dowley, 94 U.S. 527, 533, 24 L. Ed. 181, 182 (1877) ; Association of Banks in Ins. v. Duryee, 270 F.3d 397 (6th Cir. 2001) ; Video Trax, Inc v. NationsBank, N.A., 33 F. Supp. 2d 1041 , aff'd without op., 205 F.3d 1358 (11th Cir.) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 822, 121 S. Ct. 66, 148 L. Ed. 2d 31 (2000) ; In re Hibernia Nat'l Bank, 21 S.W.3d 908 (Tex. App. 2000) . See also Kroske v. US Bank Corp., 432 F.3d 976 (2005) , amended on other grounds, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 3376 (9th Cir. Feb. 13, 2006) (court cites to Barnett standard with approval and holds that state anti-discrimination law prohibiting age discrimination is not preempted by section 24 (Fifth) of the NBA allowing banks to terminate certain bank officers "at pleasure," at least to the extent that the state act mirrors its federal counterpart; in reaching this conclusion, the court explicitly recognized the direct conflict between section 24 (Fifth) and the state law). Charter One Mortgage v. Condra, 847 N.E.2d 207 (Ind. Ct. App.) , removal granted, 860 N.E.2d 599 (Ind. 2006) (table) (court applied the Barnett standard when holding that Indiana's unauthorized practice of law standards which permit a bank employee to fill in the blanks on mortgage documents as long as no fee is charged does not prevent or significantly interfere with the national bank's right to charge fees; Indiana only prescribes who performs the act if a fee is charged).

(n61)Footnote 61. National State Bank v. Long, 630 F.2d 981 (3d Cir. 1980) (state anti-redlining law does not frustrate federal banking system and is not preempted). A more recent decision disputes this proposition. Bank of America v. City & Council of San Francisco, 309 F.3d 551, 559 (9th Cir. 2002) . Watters v. Wachovia, 127 S. Ct. 1559, 167 L. Ed. 2d 389, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 4336 (U.S. Apr. 17, 2007) ("national banks "are subject to state laws of general application in their daily business to the extent such laws do not conflict with the letter or general purposes of the NBA."); Medtronic, Inc. v. Lohr, 518 U.S. 470, 485, 116 S. Ct. 2240, 135 L. Ed. 2d 700 (1996) (state law generally carries a presumption of validity, unless it conflicts with federal law, where Congress has legislated in a field that the state has traditionally occupied; case dealt with the preemption of state tort law by the federal Medical Device Amendments).

(n62)Footnote 62. See Richard J. Hillman and Lynn H. Gibson, Role of the Office of Thrift Supervision and Office of the Comptroller of the Currency in the Preemption of State Law, General Accounting Office, OGC-00-51R (Feb. 7, 2000). Congress has decided that those agencies must now go through the process of publishing in the Federal Register for a thirty-day comment period any proposed opinion letter or interpretation that the National Bank Act preempts any state law regarding consumer protection, community reinvestment, fair lending, or the establishment of intrastate branches. 12 U.S.C. § 43

(n63)Footnote 63. Activities Permissible for a National Bank, OCC (Feb. 2002), available at www.occ.treas.gov/corpapps/bankact.pdf.

(n64)Footnote 64. 15 U.S.C. § 6701. The nature and extent of this preemption is discussed more fully in National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 8.4.1.5.2 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

(n65)Footnote 65. OCC Unpublished Letter (June 10, 1992). Interpretive Letters issued since May 1996 can be obtained from the Internet at www.occ.treas.gov./interp/monthly.htm. Summaries of OCC letters dealing with the preemption of state law and related topics that have not been published in the Federal Register can be found in National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit, App. D.1.2 (2d ed. and Supp.). More recently, a Texas regulation which prohibited banks from using any form of advertising that implied that a branch facility is a separate bank was held to be a valid exercise of state authority over a national bank. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 674 (June 9, 1995).

(n66)Footnote 66. OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 9, 1995) (reviewing Idaho Credit Code); OCC Interpretive Letter No. 644 (Mar. 24, 1994) (same) (reviewing Georgia's Residential Mortgage Act which required licensing of banks which do not maintain an office in that state); OCC Interpretive Letter No. 614 (Jan. 15, 1993) (same) (reviewing Idaho Credit Code which requires credit card issuers to obtain a license); OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 4, 1992) (same) (reviewing Iowa Lender Credit Card Act).

(n67)Footnote 67. OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 9, 1995) (states cannot exert "visitorial" powers over a national bank; "visitation" includes any act of a state official to inspect, regulate, or control the operation of a bank to enforce its law) (reviewing Idaho Credit Code); OCC Unpublished Letter (May 6, 1993) (same) (reviewing Idaho Consumer Credit Code); OCC Interpretive Letter No. 614 (Jan. 15, 1993) (same) (reviewing Wisconsin and Wyoming Credit Codes which require that lenders file notification with the state when a finance charge exceeding a certain percent and to file annual reports thereafter); OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 4, 1992) (same) (reviewing Iowa Lending Credit Card Act).

(n68)Footnote 68. OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 9, 1995) (while states can tax national banks to the same extent that they tax state banks, annual fees and the like are generally not "taxes" as they do not constitute general revenue, but, rather, are used for the purpose of funding a licensing or regulatory scheme; only the OCC can assess fees against national banks; reviewing Idaho Credit Code); OCC Interpretive Letter No. 644 (Mar. 24, 1994) (same) (reviewing Georgia's Residential Mortgage Act); OCC Unpublished Letter (May 6, 1993) (same) (reviewing Idaho Consumer Credit Code); OCC Unpublished Letter (Feb. 4, 1992) (same) (reviewing Iowa Lender Credit Card Act).

(n69)Footnote 69. American Bankers Ass'n v. Lockyer, 239 F. Supp. 2d 1000 (E.D. Cal. 2002) (California's minimum payment disclosure law for credit cards preempted). In this case, the OCC filed an amicus brief arguing preemption (rather than issuing a letter) and the court gave it deference.

(n70)Footnote 70. 12 U.S.C. § 36(f)(1).

(n71)Footnote 71. Smiley v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 517 U.S. 735, 116 S. Ct. 1730, 135 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1996) .

(n72)Footnote 72. See Minnesota v. Fleet Mortg. Corp., 158 F. Supp. 2d 962 (D. Minn. 2001) (claims under state consumer fraud, deceptive practices, and false statement in advertising act not preempted where claims arose from practice of disclosing customer information to other companies without customer's knowledge); Black v. Financial Freedom Senior Funding Corp., 92 Cal. App. 4th 917, 112 Cal Rptr. 2d 445 (1st Dist. 2001) , review denied, 2002 Cal. LEXIS 479 (Cal. Jan. 23, 2002) (allegations of false advertising and misleading transactional material in the sale of reverse mortgages raised under state consumer protection and unfair business practices not preempted). Note also that the Office of Thrift Supervision determined that state unfair and deceptive acts and practices laws which do not directly regulate credit transactions are not preempted. OTS Chief Counsel letter of 2/24/96.

(n73)Footnote 73. 517 U.S. 735, 116 S. Ct. 1730, 135 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1996) .

(n74)Footnote 74. McQueen v. Williams, 177 F.3d 523 (6th Cir. 1999) (court gave no deference to OCC letter in which agency opined that National Bank Act does not prevent relocation and merger plan of a bank); Blackfleet Nat'l Bank v. Nelson, 171 F.3d 1237 (11th Cir.) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1004, 120 S. Ct. 497, 145 L. Ed. 2d 383 (1999) (OCC letter allowing national bank to issue retirement certificates of deposit that guaranteed continuing stream of payments constituted an unreasonable expansion of the powers of national bank).

(n75)Footnote 75. 65 Fed. Reg. 63,917 (Oct. 25, 2000) .

(n76)Footnote 76. 66 Fed. Reg. 28,593 (May 23, 2001) .

(n77)Footnote 77. Compare Ga. Code Ann. § 7-6A-1 et seq. with 15 U.S.C. §§ 1602(aa), 1639. See also Mayor of the City of New York v. The Am. Fin. Services Ass'n, 4 Misc. 3d 151 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004) .

(n78)Footnote 78. 68 Fed. Reg. 46,264 (Aug. 5, 2003) .

(n79)Footnote 79. 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4007 (deposit-taking), 7.4008 (non-mortgage lending), 7.4009 (business of banking generally), 34.3 (mortgage lending), 34.4 (mortgage lending); see 69 Fed. Reg. 1904 (Jan. 13, 2004) . These regulations became effective on February 12, 2004. In 2002, the OCC had adopted regulations governing the electronic activities of national banks. 12 C.F.R. § 7.500 et seq. These regulations contain a provision purporting to preempt state laws affecting the electronic activities of national banks. 12 C.F.R. § 7.5002(c).

(n80)Footnote 80. 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4007(b), 7.4008(d), 7.4009(b), 34.4(a).

(n81)Footnote 81. 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4008(b), 34.3(b).

(n82)Footnote 82. Compare 12 C.F.R. § 7.4008(d) with 12 C.F.R. § 34.4(a).

(n83)Footnote 83. 12 C.F.R. §§ 7.4008(e), 34.4(b).

(n84)Footnote 83.1. Hood v. Santa Barbara Bank & Trust, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 369 (Cal. Ct. App. 2006) (UDAP claim that bank's change in terms notice violated Federal Regulation DD does not constitute a state limitation concerning disclosure; state UDAP act does no more than incidentally affect the bank's powers); Smith v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 653 (Cal. Ct. App. 2005) (state UDAP claim does not obstruct, impair, or condition the bank's ability to exercise its powers and, therefore, does no more than incidentally affect the bank's business); Charter One Mortgage v. Condra, 847 N.E.2d 207 (Ind. Ct. App.) , removal granted, 860 N.E.2d 599 (Ind. 2006) (table) (Indiana's unauthorized practice of law standards which permit bank employee to fill in blanks on mortgage if no fee is charged does not more than incidentally affect bank's exercise of its right to charge fees; bank can hire an attorney or forego the $175 fee). But see Austin v. Provident Bank, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37113 (N.D. Miss. July 26, 2005) (predatory lending claims based on overpriced loans, inability to repay, excessive and fraudulent fees are preempted; these claims more than incidentally affect real estate lending powers of national banks).

(n85)Footnote 84. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 1005 (June 10, 2004).

(n86)Footnote 85. OCC Interpretive Letter No. 2004 (Mar. 9, 2004).

(n87)Footnote 86. Blanco v. KeyBank USA, N.A., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31768 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 30, 2005) .

(n88)Footnote 87. Comptroller of the Currency, Activities Permissible for a National Bank (Feb. 2006), available at www.occ.treas.gov/corpapps/BankAct.pdf.

(n89)Footnote 88. 69 Fed. Reg. 1895 (Jan. 13, 2004) .

(n90)Footnote 89. 12 C.F.R. § 7.4000.

(n91)Footnote 90. 12 C.F.R. § 7.4006; 66 Fed. Reg. 34,784, 34,788-89 (July 2, 2001) .

(n92)Footnote 91. Pub. L. No. 106-102, § 121, codified at 12 U.S.C. § 24a(g)(3). For a discussion of this Act, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 8.4.1.5.2 (3rd ed. and Supp.). The OCC, by regulation, permitted national banks to own operating subsidiaries prior to the enactment of Gramm-Leach-Bliley. See 12 C.F.R. § 5.34. There is no explicit authority in the National Bank Act. However, the OCC relied upon 12 U.S.C. § 24 (seventh), which grants to national banks "incidental" powers necessary to carry on the business of banking.

(n93)Footnote 92. 66 Fed. Reg. 34,784, 34,788 (July 2, 2001) .

(n94)Footnote 93. 12 U.S.C. § 24a(a)(2)(A).

(n95)Footnote 94. Nat'l City Bank of Indiana v. Turnbaugh, 463 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 2006) ; Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Burke, 414 F.3d 305 (2d Cir. 2005) ; Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Watters, 431 F.3d 556 (6th Cir. 2005), aff'd, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 4336 (U.S. Apr. 17, 2007) ; Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Boutris, 419 F.3d 949 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n96)Footnote 94.1. Wells Fargo, 419 F.3d at 964 .

(n97)Footnote 94.2. See First Nat'l Bank in St. Louis v. Missouri, 263 U.S. 640, 665 /-/66 (1924) (state branching statute does not conflict with the NBA and state attorney general can enforce it).

(n98)Footnote 94.3. Watters v. Wachovia Bank, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 4336 (U.S. Apr. 17, 2007) . For a more in depth discussion of this decision, see National Consumer Law Center, Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuse, § 3.4.6.4 (3d ed. and supp.).

(n99)Footnote 95. But see First Nat'l Bank in St. Louis v. Missouri, 263 U.S. 640, 665-66 (1924) (the dissent, arguing against the state enforcement at issue, stated: "And if [the laws of the United States] do not grant it, they in effect prohibit it, and no law of the state can strengthen or weaken the prohibition.").

(n100)Footnote 96. Indeed, this partnership scheme is the industry's action plan to avoid regulatory restrictions. See Stephens, Inc., Payday Advance--The Final Innings: Standardizing the Approach (2000).

(n101)Footnote 97. Long v. Ace Cash Express, Clearinghouse No. 53,504, Case No. 00-837CA (Clay County Cir. Ct., Fla.) (complaint). The case was removed to federal court which subsequently remanded it back to the state court. Clearinghouse No. 53,554 (remand order).

(n102)Footnote 98. See Johnson v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., Civil Action No. S-01-CV2299 (D. Md.) (nationwide class) (case voluntarily dismissed), Clearinghouse No. 53,545; Brown v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., Civil Action No. S01-2674 (Baltimore Cir. Ct., Md) (statewide class), Clearinghouse No. 53,547; Purdie v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., Civil Action No. 301-CV1754-X (N.D. Tex.) (nationwide class), Clearinghouse No. 53,546.

(n103)Footnote 99. Hudson v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11226 (S.D. Ind. May 30, 2002) , amended complaint dismissed in 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19210 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 27, 2002) , appeal pending; Purdie v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20910 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 29, 2002) (case was filed under the federal RICO statute; court held that the plaintiff failed to adequately plead an association in fact under strict Fifth Circuit RICO standards).

(n104)Footnote 100. State ex rel. Salazar v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., (Colo. Dist. Ct. filed July 16, 2001), Complaint--Clearing house No. 53,544, Plaintiff's Motion to Remand--Clearinghouse No. 53,544, Order of Remand--Clearinghouse No. 53,557; Goleta Nat'l Bank v. O'Donnell, Case No. C2-01-971 (S.D. Ohio) (complaint) (memorandum in support of motion for preliminary injunction) (defendant's answer to motion) (defendant's motion to dismiss), Clearinghouse No. 53,550A-D; State ex rel. Cooper v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., Complaint, Clearinghouse No. 53,559 (N.C. Super. Ct. Jan. 2002).

(n105)Footnote 101. See OCC Advisory Letter No. AL 2000-10 (Nov. 27, 2000), available at www.occ.treas.gov/advlst00.htm; OTS Letter (Nov. 27, 2000), available at www.ots.treas.gov/docs/25132.pdf. See also OTS Letter P-2000-4 (Feb. 3, 2000) (OTS will conduct examinations of the thrift's partner in payday lending to the same extent as it will of the thrift).

(n106)Footnote 102. See In re Eagle Nat'l Bank, OCC #2001-104 (Dec. 18, 2001), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2001-104.pdf.

(n107)Footnote 103. The Fact Sheet about the case is available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/release/2002-01a.txt.

(n108)Footnote 104. In re Goleta Nat'l Bank, EA #2002-93 (Oct. 25, 2002 consent order), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2002-93.pdf; In re Ace Cash Express, Inc., EA #2002-92 (Oct. 25, 2002), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2002-92.pdf.

(n109)Footnote 105. In re Advance Am., EA #2003-3 (Jan. 29, 2003 consent order), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2003-3.pdf; In re Peoples Nat'l Bank, EA #2003-2 (Jan. 29, 2003), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2003-2.pdf; In re First Nat'l Bank in Brookings, EA #2003-1 (Jan. 17, 2003), available at www.occ.treas.gov/ftp/eas/ea2003-1.pdf.

(n110)Footnote 106. State ex rel. Salazar v. Ace Cash Express, Clearinghouse No. 53,556 (D. Colo. 2002) (order).

(n111)Footnote 107. The FDIC Guidelines for Payday Lending, issued July 2, 2003, are available on the FDIC's website at www.fdic.gov/regulations/safety/payday. For further discussion of this issue, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 3.13.3 (3rd ed. and Supp.)

(n112)Footnote 107.1. John Reosti, First Delaware Getting Out of Payday Lending, Am. Banker, Feb. 23, 2006.

(n113)Footnote 107.2. Id.

(n114)Footnote 107.3. Id.; Robert Schoenberger, Republic to Get Out of Payday Loans; FDIC Urged Bank to Exit Business, The Courier-Journal, Mar. 3, 2006; Republic Bancorp Inc, SEC Form 8-K (Feb. 24, 2006), available at www.sec.gov/Archives/edgar/data/921557/000110465906011951/a06-5812_18k.htm; Advance America, Cash Advance Centers, Inc., Form 8-K (Mar. 7, 2006), available at investors.advanceamerica.net/edgar.cfm; Press Release, West Virginia Attorney General's Office, Attorney General Darrell McGraw Reaches Agreement with West Virginia Last Payday Lender, First American Cash Advance (May 9, 2007) (mentioning that Community State Bank had broken off its relationship with First American Cash Advance in 2006), available at www.wvago.gov/press.cfm?ID=337&fx=more.

(n115)Footnote 107.4. Payday lenders may reconfigure themselves under state credit repair organizations acts, rent-a-finance company, or revert to using revolving credit in order to charge whatever fees they choose.

(n116)Footnote 107.5. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., FIL 50-2007: Affordable Small-Dollar Loan Guidelines (June 19, 2007) (available on the companion website to this volume).

(n117)Footnote 108. 12 U.S.C. §§ 1461, 1463.

(n118)Footnote 109. Fidelity Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. De La Cuesta, 458 U.S. 141, 159-60, 102 S. Ct. 3014, 3025-26, 73 L. Ed. 2d 664, 679 (1982) .

(n119)Footnote 110. 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g). This provision first appeared at 12 U.S.C. § 1730(g) when it was enacted as part of the Depository and Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980. It was added later to HOLA. See Gavey Props./762 v. First Fin. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 845 F.2d 519 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n120)Footnote 110.1. 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g)(2).

(n121)Footnote 111. See Gavey Props./762 v. First Fin. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 845 F.2d 519 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n122)Footnote 112. Compare OTS Letter No. P-2004-8 (Sept. 17, 2004) with OCC Interpretive Letter No. 822 (Feb. 17, 1998).

(n123)Footnote 113. OTS Letter No. P-2004-8 (Sept. 17, 2004).

(n124)Footnote 114. Viereck v. Peoples Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 343 N.W.2d 30 (Minn. 1984) (due-on-sale clauses contained in mortgage were not valid under applicable state law; because the originating lenders were not entitled to preemption, the federal savings association assignee was not entitled to preemption); Garrison v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of S.C., 402 S.E.2d 25 (Va. 1991) (federal savings and loan, as assignee of mortgage company which originated loan, not entitled to preemption even though loan was one of large pool sold to the savings and loan).

(n125)Footnote 115. Viereck v. Peoples Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 343 N.W.2d 30 (Minn. 1984) (due-on-sale clauses contained in mortgage were not valid under applicable state law; because the originating lenders were not entitled to preemption, the federal savings association assignee was not entitled to preemption); Garrison v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of S.C., 402 S.E.2d 25 (Va. 1991) (federal savings and loan, as assignee of mortgage company which originated loan, not entitled to preemption even though loan was one of large pool sold to the savings and loan). See § 6.02[2][c][ii], supra.

(n126)Footnote 116. See Fidelity Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. De La Cuesta, 458 U.S. 141, 159 n.14, 102 S. Ct. 3014, 3025-26 n.14, 73 L. Ed. 2d 664, 679 n.14 (1982) ("Because we find an actual conflict between federal and state law, we need not decide whether the HOLA or the Board's regulations occupy the field of due-on-sale law or the entire field of federal savings and loan regulation").

(n127)Footnote 117. Fidelity Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. De La Cuesta, 458 U.S. 141, 102 S. Ct. 3014, 73 L. Ed. 2d 664 (1982) (state court decision prohibiting lenders from exercising due-on-sale clauses in mortgages is preempted by explicit Board regulation); Bank of America v. San Francisco, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12587 (N.D. Cal. June 29, 2000) , appeal pending (city ordinance prohibiting the imposition of ATM fees on non-accountholders by financial institutions preempted by regulation generally permitting federal savings associations to use electronic means to provide any product or service).

(n128)Footnote 118. 12 C.F.R. § 560.2 (effective Jan. 1, 1997). But see Konynenbelt v. Flagstar Bank, 617 N.W.2d 706, 713 (Mich. App. 2000) (holding that these regulations "support the conclusion that Congress has not occupied the entire field").

(n129)Footnote 119. Compare 12 C.F.R. § 560.2(b), with § 560.2(c). See, e.g., In re Ocwen Loan Serv., L.L.C. Mortgage Serv. Litig., 491 F.3d 638 (7th Cir. 2007) (contract and commercial law generally not preempted, for example, breach of contract and breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing).

(n130)Footnote 120. OTS Letters discussing preemption issues are generally available on the OTS website: www.ots.treas.gov. See also National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges, D.3 (3d ed. and Supp.) for summary of OTS Letters regarding preemption.

(n131)Footnote 121. OTS Chief Counsel Letter of 2/24/96 (addressing whether Indiana's UDAP act was preempted). Several courts have recognized this principle when deciding whether state UDAP acts applied to the activities of savings associations. See Lopez v. World Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 105 Cal. App. 4th 729 (2003) (state law prohibition against charging for a payoff statement is within the field of lending regulation and is preempted; UDAP claims are not preempted to the extent that the behavior complained of is outside of the list of lending related activities; in this case, concurrent UDAP claim was preempted; breach of contract and fraud claims not preempted but failed due to court's reading of the contract provision); Washington Mut. Bank v. Superior Ct. of L.A., 95 Cal. App. 4th 606 (Cal. Ct. App. 2002) (charging one day's pre-closing interest affects the "terms of credit"; state law prohibiting the imposition of this charge is preempted; court noted that state UDAP act is within state's police power and is subject to heightened presumption against preemption); Laskey v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n., 2002 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 11259 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 5, 2002) (same); Kunert v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n, 2001 WL 1715929 (Cal. Super. Ct. Aug. 3, 2001) (interest rate upcharges in car financing is akin to a "loan-related fee" and state law prohibiting the charging of a secret upcharge is preempted; fraud claim is also preempted as it is based on the same "loan-related fee" issue); Moskowitz v. Washington Mut. Bank, F.A., 768 N.E.2d 262 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) (breach of contract and UDAP claims based upon the bank's practice of charging a payoff statement fee, found to be a "loan-related fee" under the OTS regulations, preempted).

(n132)Footnote 122. The OTS decided that the anti-predatory lending laws of New York, New Mexico, New Jersey, and Georgia are preempted. OTS letters related to restrictions on ATM fees and requirements related to the disclosure of the estimated length of time necessary to pay off credit card balances have been upheld by the courts. See Bank of Am. v. City & County of San Francisco, 309 F.3d 551 (9th Cir. 2002) ; Am. Bankers Ass'n v. Lockyer, 239 F.

Supp. 2d 1000 (E.D. Cal. 2002) .

(n133)Footnote 123. Office of Thrift Supervision, Powers of Federal Savings Associations (Mar. 1, 2002).

(n134)Footnote 124. 12 C.F.R. § 559.3(h), (n). See also WFS Fin., Inc. v. Dean, 79 F. Supp. 2d 1024 (W.D. Wis. 1999) ; Chaires v. Chevy Chase Bank, F.S.B., 748 A.2d 34 (Md. App. 2000) .

(n135)Footnote 124.1. FDIC, The FDIC's Supervision of Industrial Loan Companies: A Historical Perspective (Summer 2004), available at www.fdic.gov/regulations/examinations/supervisory/insights/sisum04/industrial_loans.html.

(n136)Footnote 124.2. FDIC, The FDIC's Supervision of Industrial Loan Companies: A Historical Perspective (Summer 2004), available at www.fdic.gov/regulations/examinations/supervisory/insights/sisum04/industrial_loans.html. ILC failures depleted these funds over time.

(n137)Footnote 124.3. Pub. L. No. 97-320, 96 Stat. 1469; 12 U.S.C. §§ 1815(a) (any "depository institution" may apply for FDIC insurance), 1813(c)(1) (references the definition of "bank" at § 1813(a)(2) that includes ILCs).

(n138)Footnote 124.4. FDIC, The FDIC's Supervision of Industrial Loan Companies: A Historical Perspective (Summer 2004), available at www.fdic.gov/regulations/examinations/supervisory/insights/sisum04/industrial_loans.html.

(n139)Footnote 124.5. FDIC, Moratorium on Certain Industrial Bank Applications and Notices, 72 Fed. Reg. 5,290, 5,291 (Feb. 5, 2007) (Supplementary Information).

(n140)Footnote 124.6. All of these are chartered in Utah. A list of Utah-chartered industrial banks is available at www.dfi.utah.gov/IBSList.htm; a list by asset size as of December 2004 is in the Economic Development Corporation of Utah's report on industrial banks. Economic Development Corp. of Utah, Utah Industrial Banks Profile 4/-/6 (2007), available at www.edcutah.org/datacenter/publications/UtahIndustrialBanksIndustryProfile.pdf.pdf.

(n141)Footnote 124.7. 12 U.S.C. § 1841(c)(2)(H)(I). Technically, ILCs cannot offer any demand deposit accounts, but they may offer nonbusiness NOW (negotiable order of withdrawal) accounts--checking accounts that retain the legal right to require advance notice of the withdrawal. 12 U.S.C. § 1832.

(n142)Footnote 124.8. See, e.g., Utah Code Ann. § 7-8-3.

(n143)Footnote 124.9. 12 U.S.C. § 1831d(a).

(n144)Footnote 124.10. Utah Code Ann. § 15-1-1. Utah law also does not limit the amount of late fees that may be charged by depository institutions, including ILCs. Utah Code Ann. § 70C-2-102(1)(b).

(n145)Footnote 125. Pub. L. No. 96-221, 94 Stat. 164, tit. V (Mar. 31, 1980).

(n146)Footnote 126. See 12 U.S.C. § 1831d(a) (state commercial banks); § 1463(g) (federal savings and loans); § 1785(g) (federal credit unions). To date, the courts have interpreted most favored lender issues under DIDA and the NBA consistently. See, e.g., Gavey Props./762 v. First Fin. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 845 F.2d 519 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n147)Footnote 127. See 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a (mobile home rate preemption is conditioned on compliance with consumer protections). The DIDA exemption can apply to a mobile home sale even if the sale includes other items. Draper v. Castle Home Sales, Inc., 711 F. Supp. 1499 (E.D. Ark. 1989) (refrigerator and range included in contract but not separately priced).

(n148)Footnote 128. See 12 U.S.C. §§ 86a, 1831a (expired) (allowed 5% over discount rate for nonconsumer loans of $1000 or more).

(n149)Footnote 129. Cf. S. Rep. No. 368, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 19, reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. 236, 255 (first lien preemption of Title V, Part A does not preempt state consumer protections on residential mortgage loans such as "limitations on prepayment charges, attorney fees, late charges or similar limitations designed to protect borrowers"). Courts have differed on the relevance of that to interpreting Title V, Part C (most-favored-lender extension, §§ 521-523). Cf. Hill v. Chemical Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948, 954 (D. Minn. 1992) (not relevant), with Sherman v. Citibank (South Dakota), N.A., 668 A.2d 1036 (N.J. 1995) (finding it instructive), vacated and remanded, 517 U.S. 1241, 116 S. Ct. 2493, 135 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1996) .

(n150)Footnote 130. Amaro v. Capital One Bank, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8373 (N.D. Ill. May 19, 1998) (court opted for the position argued by the bank, i.e., that Virginia provision applying to revolving accounts which permitted banks to charge any "charges and fees" as agreed to by parties to the contract controlled). In some instances, if the case is filed in the federal courts sitting in the home state of the defendant bank, the federal court may dismiss the case on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction or certify the question of state law to the state's highest court. See, e.g., Fleet Bank, N.A. v. Burke, 160 F.3d 883 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n151)Footnote 131. 12 U.S.C. § 1831d(a).

(n152)Footnote 132. 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g) (formerly codified at 12 U.S.C. § 1730g).

(n153)Footnote 133. 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g), formerly codified at 12 U.S.C. § 1730g.

(n154)Footnote 134. 12 U.S.C. § 1785(g).

(n155)Footnote 135. Compare 12 U.S.C. §§ 1436(g), 1785(g), 1831d(a), with 12 U.S.C. § 85. The remedies also match. Compare 12 U.S.C. § 86, with 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g)(2).

(n156)Footnote 136. E.g., FHLBB General Counsel Opinion #4 (Sept. 19, 1980) (FHLBB interpretation giving most favored lender status to an FSLIC-insured "thrift"); Fed. Banking L. Rep. (CCH) P 81,635 and Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 95,511 (FDIC opinion letter applying it to an FDIC-insured state chartered bank); Letter from Douglas H. Jones, Deputy Gen. Counsel, FDIC-93-27 (July 12, 1993); 45 Fed. Reg. 78,624-78,625 (1980) as amended by IRPS 81-3, 46 Fed. Reg. 24,153 (NCUA opinion as to federally insured credit unions.).

(n157)Footnote 137. See, e.g., VanderWeyst v. First State Bank of Benson, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S. Ct. 369, 102 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1988) (federally insured state bank may invoke most favored lender doctrine; purpose of DIDA was to give state banks parity with national banks); Dahl v. Lanesboro State Bank, 399 N.W.2d 621 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987) .

(n158)Footnote 138. 971 F.2d 818 (1st Cir. 1992) . See also Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) ; Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., No. 93CA0224 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 17, 1994). Stoorman was affirmed by the Colorado Supreme Court. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 908 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1244, 116 S. Ct. 2498, 135 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1996) . See also Venture Props., Inc. v. First S. Bank, 79 F.3d 90 (8th Cir. 1996) .

(n159)Footnote 139. See § 6.02[2][b] supra.

(n160)Footnote 140. See § 6.02[2][b] supra. Smiley v. Citibank (South Dakota), N.A., 11 Cal. 4th 138, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 441, 900 P.2d 690 (1995) , aff'd, 517 U.S. 735, 116 S. Ct. 1730, 135 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1996) .

(n161)Footnote 141. See § 6.02[4][e] infra.

(n162)Footnote 142. Cf. Singer, Sutherland Statutory Construction P 46.06 (5th ed.). But see Stoorman v.

Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. Ct. App. 1994) , aff'd on other grounds, 908 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1995) , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1244, 116 S. Ct. 2498, 135 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1996) .

(n163)Footnote 143. Greenwood Trust Co. v. Massachusetts, 971 F.2d 818 (1st Cir. 1992) (Delaware-chartered bank may override Massachusetts' late charge limitation under § 521); Gavey Props./762 v. First Fin. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 845 F.2d 519 (5th Cir. 1988) . Accord Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) .

(n164)Footnote 144. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-1-201(1).

(n165)Footnote 145. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 908 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1995) (the court mentioned, in passing, that § 525 had been repealed, which is an error).

(n166)Footnote 146. For a discussion of conflict of law principles in general, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 9.2.9 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

(n167)Footnote 147. See, e.g., State ex rel. Meierhenry v. Spiegel, Inc., 277 N.W. 2d 298 (S.D. 1979) , appeal dismissed, 444 U.S. 804, 100 S. Ct. 25, 62 L. Ed. 2d 17 (1979) .

(n168)Footnote 148. DIDA § 501(a)(1), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a. For a discussion of the "residential" nature of a mortgage, see In re Lawson Square, Inc., 816 F.2d 1236 (8th Cir. 1987) ; Bank of New York v. Hoyt, 617 F. Supp. 1304 (D.R.I. 1985) .

(n169)Footnote 149. See § 6.02[2] supra. See Sweeney v. Savings First Mortgage, L.L.C., 879 A.2d 1037 (Md. 2005) (broker fee is a finance charges and is included in the APR; therefore, the broker fee is "interest"). See also Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Boutris, 419 F.3d 949 (9th Cir. 2005) (California's per diem law is not preempted; DIDA does not apply based upon the likely impact of the state law at issue, as long as there is no express limitation on interest rates or amounts; the per diem statute addresses only the time period for which interest may be assessed).

(n170)Footnote 150. S. Rep. No. 96-368, at 19, reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. 236.

(n171)Footnote 151. 12 C.F.R. § 590.3(c). See Veytia v. Seiter, 740 S.W.2d 64, 66 (Tex. App. 1987) (quoting legislative history, § 501 would not protect usurious loan charges), aff'd, 756 S.W.2d 303 (Tex. 1988) ; Gonzalez v. Old Kent Mortg. Co., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14530 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2000) (non-interest rate charges not subject to DIDMCA preemption); Konynenbelt v. Flagstar Bank, 617 N.W.2d 706, 713 (Mich. App. 2000) (mortgage release fees not a component of APR and, therefore, not subject to DIDMCA preemption).

(n172)Footnote 152. See Grunbeck v. Dime Sav. Bank, 74 F.3d 331 (1st Cir. 1996) .

(n173)Footnote 153. Stern v. Norwest Mortgage, Inc., 284 Ill. App. 3d 506, 219 Ill. Dec. 788, 672 N.E.2d 296 (1996) , aff'd, 179 Ill. 2d 160, 227 Ill. Dec. 762, 688 N.E.2d 99 (1997) .

(n174)Footnote 154. See DIDA § 501(a)(1), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a.

(n175)Footnote 155. For alternative theories to attack overreaching loans, see § 6.09 infra.

(n176)Footnote 156. See 12 C.F.R. § 590.2(c).

(n177)Footnote 157. See Brown v. Investors Mortgage Co., 121 F.3d 472 (9th Cir. 1997) (lienholder of fixture lien arising from purchase of a furnace and water heater does not have same priority as a first mortgage holder under state law); Mitchell v. Trustees of U.S. Mut. Real Estate Inv. Trust, 375 N.W.2d 424 (Mich. Ct. App. 1985) ; FHLBB General Counsel Opinion Letter #S86 (May 11, 1984). See also In re Russell, 72 B.R. 855 (Bankr.E.D. Pa. 1987) (first lien issue discussed, but case decided on other grounds).

(n178)Footnote 158. Chevy Chase Bank, F.S.B. v. Chaires, 350 Md. 716, 715 A.2d 199 (1998) (state court held that lien on residential property created by a state shore erosion control fund prior to a later construction loan rendered the construction loan a "second lien" and therefore the state's secondary mortgage loan law applied).

(n179)Footnote 159. 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-5(b), incorporated by DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C). Note that the complete removal of ceilings under DIDA § 501(a)(1) takes priority over DIDA's alternative ceiling provisions, discussed in § 6.02[4][b] supra, when federally related lenders issue first mortgage credit. See In re Lawson Sq., 816 F.2d 1236 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n180)Footnote 160. 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-5(b) incorporated by DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C).

(n181)Footnote 161. See 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a (DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C)(6)).

(n182)Footnote 162. The definition of creditor is taken from 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f), and includes persons who "regularly" extend consumer credit payable in four or more installments or involving a finance charge.

(n183)Footnote 163. 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-5(b) incorporated by DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C). See generally In re Russell, 72 B.R. 855 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (lender fails to carry burden of proof on $1,000,000 DIDA threshold).

(n184)Footnote 164. Generally, this means that the loan originator must have been approved by the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) or some other federal purchaser, and that the loan terms and structure must meet the federal purchaser's requirements.

(n185)Footnote 165. The definition of creditor is taken from 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f), and includes persons who "regularly" extend consumer credit payable in four or more installments or involving a finance charge.

(n186)Footnote 166. DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C)(v), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a.

(n187)Footnote 167. DIDA § 501(a)(1)(C)(vi), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a. This provision applies to sales on or after Oct. 8, 1980.

(n188)Footnote 168. DIDA § 501(c), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a. Cf. Livingston v. Vanguard Fed. Sav. Bank, 563 A.2d 175, 180 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1989) (court notes that mobile home lender's contract did not contain FHLBB's consumer safeguards, so regulations under DIDA were irrelevant to issue of whether Home Owner's Loan Act and regulations issued thereunder preempted state law prohibiting prepayment penalties on mobile home installment contracts).

(n189)Footnote 169. See Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980, Pub. L. No. 96-221, tit. V, §§ 501(b)(2), 501(b)(4), 525.

(n190)Footnote 170. See DIDA § 501(b)(2), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a(b)(2). See also Veytia v. Seiter, 756 S.W.2d 303 (Tex. 1988) . See also Brown v. Investors Mortgage Co., 121 F.3d 472 (9th Cir. 1997) (Washington's 1981 enactment of its general usury statute setting an annual interest rate ceiling at the higher of 12% or 4% above the yield on 26-week T-bills did not constitute an opt-out because it did not so state explicitly).

(n191)Footnote 171. See DIDA § 501(b)(4), 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a(b)(4).

(n192)Footnote 172. Compare Doyle v. Southern Guar. Corp., 795 F.2d 907 (11th Cir. 1986) (analogous language under FHA/VA preemption statutes), cert. denied sub nom. Fort Wayne Mtg. Co. v. Wood, 484 U.S. 926, 108 S. Ct. 289, 98 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1987) , with FHLBB General Counsel Opinion Letter #S50 (June 18, 1981) (citing Green v. Decatur Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 143 Ga. App. 368, 238 S.E.2d 740 (1977) (recodification)). See also FHLBB General Counsel Opinion Letter #S51 (Oct. 27, 1981) (amendment to North Carolina statute did not constitute opt-out of discount points preemption); Autrey v. United Cos. Lending Corp., 872 F. Supp. 925 (S.D. Ala. 1995) (Alabama passed a cap on points after March 31, 1980, which qualifies as an override of DIDA). But see Baughman v. Mellon Mortgage Co., 621

N.W.2d 776 (Minn. Ct. App. 2001) (re-enactment of a restriction on the charging of a fee for the administration of an escrow account and the addition of a clause prohibiting the charging of a fee for allowing the mortgagor to discontinue the escrow account in 1998 was not a "significant" change for purposes of qualifying for an opt-out of a state law DIDA-like preemption. Note: Minnesota opted out of DIDA but then enacted a state version of the DIDA rate, points, and fees preemption. See U.S. Bank, N.A. v. Clark, 837 N.E.2d 74 (Ill. 2005) (court applied state statutory interpretation rules to find that a state law restricting points and fees on mortgage loans with interest rates in excess of 8% was not repealed by a subsequent amendment. Since this provision was not reenacted after Congress passed DIDA, it is preempted).

(n193)Footnote 173. See DIDA § 525.

(n194)Footnote 174. See DIDA § 525.

(n195)Footnote 175. See 12 U.S.C. § 1703; 38 U.S.C. § 3703.

(n196)Footnote 176. See 12 U.S.C. § 1709-1a; 38 U.S.C. § 3728.

(n197)Footnote 177. See 38 U.S.C. § 3745; 38 C.F.R. §§ 36.4311-36.4312.

(n198)Footnote 178. See 12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(5).

(n199)Footnote 179. See § 6.02[4][b] infra.

(n200)Footnote 180. See generally 24 C.F.R. §§ 201, 203.

(n201)Footnote 181. As was discussed earlier, DIDA preempts interest ceilings on first mobile home loans only on the condition that the mobile home lenders comply with OTS consumer protection regulations. See 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a; 12 C.F.R. § 590.4 (1985). However, the Eleventh Circuit in Doyle v. Southern Guaranty Corporation held that lenders making FHA or VA insured first mobile home loans need not comply with the FHLBB/OTS regulations because the state interest ceilings on their loans are independently preempted. 795 F.2d 907 (11th Cir. 1986) . The Supreme Court denied certiorari in Doyle's companion case, Ft. Wayne Mtg. v. Wood, 484 U.S. 926, 108 S. Ct. 289, 98 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1987) .

(n202)Footnote 182. The Pennsylvania Motor Vehicle Installment Sales Finance Act, 69 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 619F (1994), is an example.

(n203)Footnote 183. The first FHA/VA preemption law passed by Congress took effect on June 30, 1976 (see 12 U.S.C. § 1709-1a), and the second on Dec. 21, 1979 (see 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7). State opt-out laws passed between those two dates would appear to cover only those loans issued after the effective date of the state opt-out law and prior to the second preemption in 1979. FHA and VA-insured loans issued after Dec. 21, 1979, would not be subject to state-imposed interest ceilings unless the relevant state passed its opt-out law after that date and prior to the loan transaction. That is, states which opted out of the 1976 preemption before or during most of 1979 would have to adopt a second opt-out law after Dec. 21, 1979, to reimpose the state exemption. Remember, however, that federally set interest ceilings were in effect on FHA loans until Nov. 30, 1983.

(n204)Footnote 184. See Doyle v. Southern Guar. Corp., 795 F.2d 907 (11th Cir. 1986) (state need only amend or reenact its usury law, and need not expressly reject the FHA/VA preemption to opt out of preemption). The Supreme Court denied certiorari in Doyle's companion case, Ft. Wayne Mortgage Co. v. Wood, 484 U.S. 926, 108 S. Ct. 289, 98 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1987) .

(n205)Footnote 185. Williams v. Norwest Fin. Ala., Inc., 1998 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 95 (Ala. Civ. App. Jan. 30, 1998) , op. withdrawn, substituted op., mot. denied, 723 So. 2d 97 (Ala. Civ. App. 1998) (state law expressly exempted FHAA lenders from most of the provisions regulating consumer finance transactions, including a prohibition on prepayment penalties); Burris v. First Fin. Corp., 928 F.2d 797 (8th Cir.) , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 867, 112 S. Ct. 195, 116 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1991) (court found such express statement in amendment to Arkansas state constitution limiting interest rates but explicitly excluding interest rates governed by federal law).

(n206)Footnote 186. 12 U.S.C. §§ 1751 et seq.

(n207)Footnote 187. 12 U.S.C. § 1757(5)(A)(vi).

(n208)Footnote 188. See Patricia A. McCoy, Banking Law Manual § 2.08 (Lexis Pub. 2d ed. 2003).

(n209)Footnote 189. 12 U.S.C. § 1785(g). This provision was enacted as part of the Depository and Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980. See Appx. G.1.

(n210)Footnote 190. NCUA Statement of Interpretation and Policy (IRPS 81-31), 46 Fed. Reg. 24153 (Apr. 30, 1981), amending, IRPS 80-11, 45 Fed. Reg. 78624 (Nov. 26, 1980).

(n211)Footnote 191. See, e.g., Ex parte Davis, 401 So. 2d 52 (Ala. 1981) ; Neal v. Redstone Fed. Credit Union, 447 So. 2d 805 (Ala. Civ. App. 1984) ; Christian v. Atlanta Army Depot Fed. Credit Union, 140 Ga. App. 277, 231 S.E.2d 7 (1976) ; Brooklyn Jenapo Fed. Credit Union v. Schucher, 41 Misc. 2d 368, 245 N.Y.S.2d 637 (Sup. Ct. 1963) ; McAnally v. Ideal Fed. Credit Union, 428 P.2d 322 (Okla. 1967) .

(n212)Footnote 192. See Ex parte Davis, 401 So. 2d 52 (Ala. 1981) ; see also McAnally v. Ideal Fed. Credit Union, 428 P.2d 322 (Okla. 1967) .

(n213)Footnote 193. Ex parte Davis, 401 So. 2d 52 (Ala. 1981) .

(n214)Footnote 194. 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(b).

(n215)Footnote 195. 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(b).

(n216)Footnote 196. 12 C.F.R. 21 701.21(b)(1), citing 12 U.S.C. § 1757(5).

(n217)Footnote 197. Id.

(n218)Footnote 198. 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(b)(2).

(n219)Footnote 199. 12 U.S.C. § 3800. The regulations which apply to AMTPA lenders can be found at 12 C.F.R. § 560.220, § 560.33-560.35 (OTS regulations); 12 C.F.R. § 34 (OCC regulations); 12 C.F.R. § 701.21 (NCUA regulations).

(n220)Footnote 200. See 12 U.S.C. § 3801.

(n221)Footnote 201. See 12 U.S.C. § 3803.

(n222)Footnote 202. E.g., Cooluris, Variable Rates in Closed End Credit, reprinted in P.L.I. Consumer Credit 1983, at 764 (1983). See also Rudolph, Schmeltzer & Weiner, Federal Legislation Affecting Mortgage Credit, 38 Bus. Law. 1311, 1320 (May 1983).

(n223)Footnote 203. See 12 U.S.C. § 3802.

(n224)Footnote 204. 12 U.S.C. § 3802(1)(A).

(n225)Footnote 205. See examples of what constitute "alternative mortgage transactions" in the Supplementary Information accompanying the revised OTS AMTPA rule. 67 Fed. Reg. 60,542, 60,549 (Sept. 26, 2002) .

(n226)Footnote 206. 12 U.S.C. § 3802(1)(B). See, e.g., Cabrejas v. Accredited Home Lender, Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51105 (D. Md. July 5, 2007) (fixed rate loan with balloon payment constitutes an alternative loan subject to AMTPA); Patrick v. Shaw, 739 N.W.2d 365 (Mich. Ct. App. 2007) (loan with a balloon payment is an alternative mortgage transaction).

(n227)Footnote 207. 67 Fed. Reg. 60,542, 60,549 (Sept. 26, 2002) .

(n228)Footnote 208. 12 U.S.C. § 3802(1)(C).

(n229)Footnote 209. 67 Fed. Reg. 60,542, 60,549 (Sept. 26, 2002) .

(n230)Footnote 210. See 12 U.S.C. § 3802.

(n231)Footnote 211. See 12 U.S.C. § 3804. Arizona, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, South Carolina, and Wisconsin have opted out of all or part of AMTPA; Mass. Gen. Laws ch.183, § 60 note. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 9A, § 1-110 (1993 Supp.); 1984 S.C. Acts 355 § 1 (not codified); 1983 Wis. Acts 389 § 11(1) (non-statutory). See generally Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 510.

The potential to control terms which fall within the scope of the statute, such as interest rates on variable rate home equity loans, is very limited in those states which failed to exercise their right to opt-out, however. See Opinion of the Tenn. Att'y Gen., No. 87-147, 5 Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 95,916 (Sept. 15, 1987) (since Tennessee did not opt out of AMTPA, state law attempting to regulate rates charges on mortgages subject to AMTPA would be preempted).

(n232)Footnote 212. Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act (HOEPA), 15 U.S.C. § 1639.

(n233)Footnote 213. See Ch. 2 supra. See Williams v. Gelt Fin. Corp. (In re Williams), 232 B.R. 629 (Bankr. E.D. Pa.) , aff'd, 237 B.R. 590 (E.D. Pa. 1999) .

(n234)Footnote 214. Illinois Ass'n of Mortg. Brokers v. Office of Banks & Real Estate, 174 F. Supp. 2d 815 (N.D. Ill. 2001) , vacated, remanded, 308 F.3d 762 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n235)Footnote 215. Pub. L. No. 106-102 (1999), codified as 15 U.S.C. §§ 6701 et seq. , §§ 6801 et seq. , §§ 6901 et seq. , and amending 12 U.S.C. § 1831u.

(n236)Footnote 216. Section 731, amending 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f).

(n237)Footnote 217. Section 731, amending 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f).

(n238)Footnote 218. See Johnson v. Bank of Bentonville, 122 F. Supp. 2d 994 (W.D. Ark. 2000) , aff'd, 269 F.3d 894 (8th Cir. 2001) (court indicates that Arkansas is the only state which has such a constitutional provision).

(n239)Footnote 219. 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f)(2); no affect on 12 U.S.C. § 1735(f)-7(a).

(n240)Footnote 220. 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f)(2); no affect on 12 U.S.C. § 85.

(n241)Footnote 221. 12 U.S.C. § 1831u(f)(2); no affect on 12 U.S.C. § 1831(d).

(n242)Footnote 222. H.R. Rep. No. 106-434, p.184 (1999), reprinted in 1999 U.S.C.C.A.N. 245, 277; Johnson v. Bank of Bentonville, 122 F. Supp. 2d 994, 999 (W.D. Ark. 2000) , aff'd, 269 F.3d 894 (8th Cir. 2001) (Congress has power under Commerce Clause to enact this preemption provision; bank chartered in Arkansas permitted to charge interest in excess of constitutional cap).

(n243)Footnote 223. Federal jurisdiction is proper where a claim arises under the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States. 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

(n244)Footnote 224. See, e.g., Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) .

(n245)Footnote 225. Hill v. Chem. Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948, 950 (D. Minn. 1992) .

(n246)Footnote 226. Compare Copeland v. MBNA Am., N.A., 820 F. Supp. 537 (D. Colo. 1993) (NBA: removal not warranted) and Donald v. Golden Credit Union, 839 F. Supp. 1394 (E.D. Cal. 1993) (DIDA: same) with Goehl v. Mellon Bank (DE), 825 F. Supp. 1239 (E.D. Pa. 1993) (NBA: removal granted); Watson v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 837 F. Supp. 146 (D.S.C. 1993) (same); Nelson v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 794 F. Supp. 312 (D. Minn. 1992) (NBA: removal granted); Tikkanen v. Citibank (S.D.) N.A., 801 F. Supp. 270 (D. Minn. 1992) (same); Hill v. Chemical Bank, 799 F. Supp. 948 (D. Minn. 1992) (DIDA § 521).

(n247)Footnote 227. Compare Anderson v. H&R Block, Inc., 287 F.3d 1038 (11th Cir. 2002) , cert. granted, 123 S. Ct. 990 (2003) (finding of complete preemption is not warranted) with M. Nahas & Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Hot Springs, 930 F.2d 608 (8th Cir. 1991) and Krispin v. May Dep't Stores Co., 218 F.3d 919 (8th Cir. 2000) . See also Ansley v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 194 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (C.D. Cal. 2002) (AMTPA; removal not proper because AMTPA does not preempt all state laws); West Virginia ex rel. McGraw v. Parrish Auto. Training Co., 147 F. Supp. 2d 470 (N.D. W. Va. 2001) (NBA; remand granted where the state sued car dealers and banks, as assignees, over a UDAP claim for failure to disclose the dealer interest rate hikes and the receipt of the yield spread premium from the banks); Heaton v. Monogram Credit Card Bank of Georgia, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 325 (E.D. La. Jan. 5, 2001) (FDIA; no complete preemption, relying on Jones v. BankBoston), subs. proc. at 297 F.3d 416 (5th Cir. 2002) (FDIC permitted to intervene, thus creating federal court jurisdiction; remand reversed on these grounds); Jones v. BankBoston, N.A., 115 F. Supp. 2d 1350 (S.D. Ala. 2000) (NBA; removal not warranted).

(n248)Footnote 228. But see the dissent which looks to a completely different and earlier statute regarding federal court jurisdiction, the Judiciary Act of 1789. Anderson v. H&R Block, 287 F.3d 1038, 1048-49 (11th Cir. 2002) .

(n249)Footnote 229. Spellman v. Meridian Bank, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 37149 (3d Cir. Dec. 29, 1995) (eleven consolidated cases; jurisdiction over only those few which had pled federal causes of action). But see M. Nahas & Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 930 F.2d 608 (8th Cir. 1991) (case does not involve exportation as national bank was chartered in Arkansas where transaction took place; court denied removal on grounds that § 86 provides exclusive federal remedy in usury claim against a national bank).

(n250)Footnote 230. Spellman v. Meridian Bank, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2506 (3d Cir. Feb. 16, 1996) .

(n251)Footnote 231. See § 6.03[7] infra (federal rebate), and Ch. 2 supra (HOEPA).

(n252)Footnote 232. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq. ; see generally Ch. 1 supra, for TILA. The Truth in Lending Act is reprinted in Vol. 1B infra.

(n253)Footnote 233. TIL preemption is discussed in § 1.07[3] supra.

(n254)Footnote 234. See § 6.02[2] supra. See Begala v. PNC Bank, Ohio, N.A., 214 F.3d 776 (6th Cir. 2000) , cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1145 (2001) (national bank located in Ohio is entitled to use the interest rate allowed to building and loan associations and savings banks under most favored lender doctrine; payment holiday was not a new credit transaction and, therefore, was covered by this state law which allowed unlimited interest on "loans made").

(n255)Footnote 235. Tenn. Code Ann. § 45-4-602(a)(2); see also Tenn. A.G. Op., Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 96,966 (Dec. 7, 1981).

(n256)Footnote 236. See, e.g., First Bank of Cadillac v. Miller, 131 Mich. App. 764, 347 N.W.2d 715 (1984) . See also Begala v. PNC Bank, Ohio, N.A., 214 F.3d 776 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n257)Footnote 237. 2005 WL 2447969 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. Oct. 3, 2005).

(n258)Footnote 238. 10 U.S.C. § 987.

(n259)Footnote 239. By contrast, the Service members Civil Relief Act applies to credit taken out before an individual enters the military.

(n260)Footnote 240. For example, the Home Owners Loan Act of 1933 originally contained a 6% rate cap on mortgage loans originated by savings associations. The National Housing Act of 1934 imposed a 5% rate cap on insured mortgage loans made under the auspices of the Federal Housing Administration. Patricia A. McCoy & Elizabeth Renuart, The Legal Infrastructure of Subprime and Nontraditional Home Mortgages, in Borrowing to Live 112 (Nicolas P. Retsinas & Eric S. Belsky, eds. 2008).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 6.03

§ 6.03 The Cost of Early Termination

[1] Overview

A distinct form of overcharge often appears when credit is retired early by prepayment of the debt (including by refinancing) or when a debt matures early because of default and acceleration. Since the amount of interest due is in part a function of the time the credit is outstanding, shortening the time should, as a matter of logic and fairness, reduce the amount of interest the borrower pays. But that may not always happen. The creditor may impose hidden charges, consisting of any unearned amount of insurance premiums and precomputed interest that it retains upon the early termination of credit.

The windfall that a creditor would receive if it could retain unearned charges upon prepayment or acceleration of precomputed debt has been widely recognized, and almost all state consumer credit statutes have long required the rebate of unearned interest and insurance charges. Failure to give those rebates, or to calculate them correctly, gives rise to usury or overcharge claims. n1 As is discussed in this chapter, there are numerous exceptions and limitations to this policy. Even in the absence of a specific statute or contract provision requiring a rebate, a court may impose such a requirement based on an equitable principle that unearned interest must be deducted upon acceleration and payment of a debt prior to maturity. n1.1

[2] When Are Rebates Required?

[a] Precomputed Charges

One of the two key words in determining when rebates are necessary is "unearned." Issues about the proper rebate of interest should arise only with respect to precomputed credit, because, by definition, interest is added to the debt only as it is earned in an interest-bearing contract. n2 Thus, as a general rule, there is no unearned interest involved in interest-bearing credit, though, as is discussed below, that is not an absolute. A precomputed transaction, in contrast, folds into the borrower's legal obligation at the outset all the interest to be earned over the originally scheduled life of the loan. As payments are made, they are subtracted from the "total of payments" and not allocated between interest and principal, n3 so at any point prior to the scheduled maturity, the remaining debt (the sum of the remaining payments due) will include some interest not yet earned. It is primarily this context in which rebate issues arise.

However, rebate issues can also arise in interest-bearing transactions, as contract interest may not be the only type of charge imposed. Most commonly, both precomputed and interest-bearing loans may contain other charges which are priced in relation to time, such as credit insurance premiums. These will need to be rebated upon early termination. n4

The second key word in determining when a rebate is required is "early." For example, if a borrower defaulted on the last two payments of a loan, which was scheduled to mature on April 1, 1994, but the creditor did not file a collection action until June 1, 1994, there will be no rebate issues. Since the loan went to (and past) maturity, all the precomputed interest would have been fully earned, as would any credit insurance premiums. n5

Also related to the "early termination" prerequisite is how rebates are to be handled when the transaction is involuntarily terminated prior to scheduled maturity. In the event of default, the loan may mature early through acceleration. Involuntary early termination of a consumer credit transaction may trigger state and federal rebate requirements.

Finally, the federal law and most state laws typically do not require rebates for "partial prepayments." n6 These are early payments which are too small to retire the consumer's total debt.

Advocates representing borrowers who have made partial payments in precomputed transactions should check the language of both the state usury statutes and the credit contract to see how partial payments are treated. The federal act requires rebates only in the event of complete prepayment, but that is a minimum standard. It should not preempt more protective state laws, n6.1 and certainly parties can contract for a more favorable rule. n6.2

[3] What Charges Are Subject to Rebate?

In precomputed transactions, by definition, there will be unearned interest when the loan is prepaid and so a refund is necessary. In contrast, generally there is no unearned interest to rebate in an interest-bearing transaction when it is properly amortized. However, it is nonetheless necessary to check the creditor's accounting on interest-bearing loans, too.

As is discussed elsewhere in this volume, creditors usually charge debtors numerous fees in addition to the stated contract interest. n7 Creditors typically claim that these fees are earned at the consummation of the credit contract and need not be rebated because they are unrelated to the term of the credit. The validity of this argument depends on the particular type of fee which has been assessed and the language of the controlling statute.

The argument that a fee is earned at the outset of a credit transaction makes no sense in the case of fees that are clearly related to the term of credit. Credit insurance premiums, for example, usually vary with the term of credit, and the difference between a two-year premium and a one-year premium is unearned if prepayment occurs after one year. n8

The logical relationship between a fee and the term of credit is, however, only part of the rebate story. As with other usury issues, whatever fee the controlling statute says is rebatable is rebatable, and whatever fee the statute excuses from rebates need not be rebated, common sense notwithstanding.

One potential area of dispute is whether the federal or a relevant state law governing the transaction requires the rebate of points, service charges, origination charges, or other one-time fees charged at the time the loan is consummated. n9

State statutes differ on this issue, some deeming points or similar prepaid finance charges as "nonrefundable" or clearly stating that they are to be considered earned at consummation. Other statutes are silent on this matter. Where not expressly addressed, a mandate to rebate points may nevertheless follow directly from standard statutory rebate language.

In the absence of any controlling statute or case law, the need to rebate points may depend on the underlying economic validity of the creditor's argument that they are earned at the time of loan consummation. n10 This argument depends on the existence of some separate service which the creditor provides at the beginning of a credit transaction and for which it may claim immediate compensation. Some courts considering the nature of points and similar fees have found no such separate service and have held instead that these fees merely constitute profit or compensation for overhead expense. n11 Additional authority for this proposition is found in generally accepted accounting principles, as well. n12

With respect to the rebate of points, a particularly interesting issue is whether points are "interest" for purpose of the federal rebate statute. It is by no means clear that TIL definitions do--or should--apply here, for the rebate statute is not part of TILA despite its location in the code books.

An argument can be made that, since the federal rebate statute is not part of TIL, the federal common law definition of "interest" should be the relevant one. Using this body of law as the relevant definition, then, would mean that a great many kinds of charges, such as points, would be "interest charges" subject to the federal rebate mandate. As with state laws, there remains the question of whether a given item in that broad category of charges is "unearned."

It is important to keep in mind other theories to attack abusive use of points as well. Where not explicitly sanctioned, a failure to rebate points might be argued as a prepayment penalty. n13 If the points are excessive, as some high-rolling mortgage lenders imposed in the mid-1980s (25 to 40 points), n14 borrowers might also challenge such nonrefundable fees as unconscionable, n15 particularly in the context of refinancings. n16

[4] Calculating Rebates

[a] Initial Steps in Calculating the Rebate

The first step in any rebate calculation is to determine the precise date as of which the rebate must be calculated. If a loan is prepaid, either directly by the borrower or through refinancing, the controlling date will be the date of prepayment, although as discussed subsequently, that date may be rounded to the nearest regular payment date preceding or following the actual date of prepayment. If a debt is matured through acceleration rather than voluntary prepayment, however, determining the date when a rebate must be credited is more complicated. n17

In some states, acceleration is simply treated as a form of prepayment and the controlling date for rebate calculations is the date on which the creditor accelerates the debt. n18 Some courts have held that rebates are required when a post-repossession sale is held. n19 In other states, however, acceleration is not viewed as terminating the credit, and the creditor continues to earn interest until some later date, such as the date the creditor files an action on the debt or the date of final judgment on the debt. n20 If the date of filing or the judgment date, as the case may be, is later than the date on which the debt was originally scheduled to terminate, the creditor will have earned all the interest due under the contract, and no rebate will be required.

The next complication in calculating the time that a precomputed loan has been outstanding is that contractually interest is "earned" and payments are due at specific intervals, usually monthly, during the term of the loan, but prepayments and accelerations generally do not occur exactly on a payment date. Rather than giving the borrower a partial rebate for the days remaining in the payment interval, n21 lenders have traditionally rounded up to the next payment date (rarely back to the previous payment date).

The practice of rounding payment intervals in a lender's favor has traditionally been sanctioned by state law. As consumers and regulators have become more sophisticated, however, more and more statutes have prohibited the rounding of intervals in the creditor's favor during the first fifteen days of the payment period, n22 and improper rounding has been challenged in court. n23 Specific statutory rounding rules, even if they still favor creditors, n24 provide clear standards against which a creditor's calculations may be measured. Creditors who claim excess interest through improper rounding will be charging illegal hidden interest. n25

[b] Rebate Formulae

[i] Determining Which Formula to Use

Once the particular charges that are subject to rebate are identified and the duration of the credit has been determined, the final step in computing the amount of the rebate is to apply to these figures one of the three rebate formulae which are generally used: the pro rata formula, the actuarial formula, or the Rule of 78.

For transactions consummated prior to September 30, 1993, the appropriate formula will be a question of state law. However, for consumer credit transactions with terms longer than 61 months consummated after that date, federal law now prohibits the use of the Rule of 78. It requires instead the use of a formula at least as favorable to the borrower as the actuarial method. n26 This federal law will preempt any contrary state law. After 1994, certain closed-end, high cost home equity loans are also subject to federal rebate rules. n27

But for transactions consummated prior to the effective date of these federal statutes, and for transactions not subject to it, the appropriate rebate formula remains a matter of state law. n28

[A] Pro Rata Rebates

The simplest but least used rebate formula is the pro rata method. This formula assumes that interest is earned in direct proportion to the time that a loan or credit has been outstanding. For example, if a prepayment occurs four months into the term of a precomputed loan that had been scheduled to be repaid in twelve months, the pro rata method proves that 4/12 of the interest has been earned. Consequently, the remaining 8/12 of the interest is unearned and must be rebated. If the total finance charge subject to rebate had been $1,000, then 8/12 x $1,000 = $666.67 should be rebated to the consumer.

The pro rata rebate method is simple to apply, but it is statistically very crude because it fails to consider the effect of a declining principal balance on the earning of interest.

Not because of its statistical inaccuracy, but because the pro rata method yields larger rebates for borrowers than other methods, it is rarely used. Statutes requiring pro rata rebates do, nevertheless, crop up at times, particularly for those rebates required when a creditor accelerates a debt because of default or some other contingency, n29 or in the event of a quick-flip on a loan. n30

[B] Rule of 78

The Rule of 78 is nothing more than a shorthand formula designed to approximate the results of an actual amortization with a single, simple five-step formula, which is all the more efficient because it can be applied to all transactions irrespective of term or interest rate. There is, however, a hitch in this shorthand approximation: It has an inherent bias in the creditor's favor. There will always be a smaller rebate to the consumer when the Rule of 78 is used than when the actuarial method is used, so the borrower always loses. n31

As discussed above, the use of the Rule now is prohibited in all precomputed consumer credit transactions with terms longer than 61 months consummated after September 30, 1993. n32

[C] Actuarial Rebates

The most accurate and the fairest way to balance creditor and debtor interests in a rebate calculation is to determine the actuarial interest that the creditor has earned at the time of prepayment and to refund to the borrower the difference between the total contract interest and this actuarially earned amount. n33 Generally accepted accounting principles consider this the economic reality. n34

A special rebate calculation issue arises under actuarial "split" rate usury statute, which apply one interest rate to part of the outstanding balance and another, usually a lower rate, to the rest. State law and regulations must be consulted to determine which actuarial rebate is correct. However, if the applicable statute does not specify the type of "actuarial" rebate, consumer advocates should argue that the very existence of the split rate statute constitutes a statutory specification that interest may only be earned in accordance with a split rate amortization pattern. n35

[5] Proving Rebate Violations Are Illegal Charges

[a] Usury Upon a Contingent Event

Until the 1960s, it was common for usury statutes to neglect the issue of rebates upon the early termination of precomputed debt. In essence, the courts reasoned that a contract which would not have been usurious if its anticipated payment schedule had been met could not be made usurious by some "contingency," such as the "voluntary" action of the debtor in prepaying or defaulting on the debt.

It is critical for consumer advocates to recognize that this rule against the existence of usury in contingencies is simply a rule of construction developed by courts interpreting statutes that were silent on the need for rebates. n36 If a statute specifically requires the rebate of unearned interest or premiums, as do almost all modern statutes regulating precomputed consumer credit, then the failure of the creditor to provide such rebates triggers whatever remedies that statute provides for in the event its terms regarding allowable charges are violated. The rule against usury through contingencies nevertheless continues to affect some consumer transactions.

[b] Intent to Collect Unearned Charges: What Constitutes "Charging," "Receiving," or "Contracting For" Unearned Charges?

Under some consumer credit statutes, specific remedies are authorized wherever finance charges (or simply charges) in excess of that allowed are charged, n37 or, more generally, where provisions of the act are violated. n38 Any time the statute provides for a specific remedy for imposing charges in excess of that allowed, a provision requiring rebates should be considered to be encompassed by that language. n39

In general, there are two ways in which a creditor may violate usury law rebate requirements: Either the creditor can provide a contract, which on its face fails to provide for the appropriate rebate, or it can neglect in actual practice to give a rebate which it is both contractually and statutorily required to give. Where intent is required, demonstrating a usury violation in the first situation may be considerably easier than in the second because the contract itself can show the creditor's intent. In many jurisdictions, it is usurious merely to "contract for" usurious payments.

If a credit contract properly provides for a rebate upon the early termination of a precomputed debt, the next question is whether, when the prepayment or acceleration finally occurs, the creditor actually gives the rebate properly. Statutorily, the issue is typically whether the creditor "charged" or "collected" usurious interest, and a significant number of cases have focused on this point.

[c] Special Issues Regarding Remedies for Violations of the Federal Rebate Statute

The federal rebate statute does not include any provisions for a specific remedy in the event a creditor violates it. Nonetheless, there are several viable theories which the consumer could assert in the event a creditor violated the statute.

[i] Truth in Lending

Irrespective of whether it is considered part of TIL or not, a violation of the federal rebate statute probably does not directly lead to a viable claim for private TIL remedies. n40 It may, however, lead indirectly to a TIL violation. In brief, in the event the creditor n41 refinances the loan, and calculates the prior loan's payoff in violation of the statute, either by failing to give rebates or by using the Rule of 78 when the actuarial method is required, the new loan will include an "unearned portion of the old finance charge that is not credited to the obligation." n42 Under TIL rules, that is to be considered part of the finance charge in the new loan. n43 Thus, the disclosed amount financed, finance charge, and APR on the new loan all will be inaccurately disclosed, n44 and those violations, in turn, lead to TIL statutory damages as well as actual damages. n45

[ii] UDAP

Failure to comply with the rebate law should also state a UDAP claim, where the transaction and lender are subject to the statute: The amount of the improperly calculated rebate would be actual damages. n46

[iii] Contract Law

Common law contract principles may also be invoked to seek a remedy, as applicable law is an implied term of every contract. n47

[6] Prepayment Penalties

In its simplest form, a prepayment penalty is a fee that a borrower is contractually obligated to pay if he or she chooses to pay off a debt prior to its scheduled retirement date.

In the absence of statute or contract authorization, common law may prohibit prepayment of a debt. n48 However, in the consumer credit context, most state laws require that borrowers be allowed to prepay their debts and often limit or prohibit prepayment penalties. n49 Such statutory provisions are usually closely associated with the state's rebate requirements because the failure to provide a proper rebate upon the prepayment of a precomputed debt is essentially a form of prepayment penalty. n50

However, rebate requirements and prepayment penalty prohibitions are not interchangeable. The most obvious difference is that statutes prohibiting prepayment penalties typically are invoked when debt is retired through voluntary prepayment, while rebate requirements apply to precomputed debt regardless of whether it is prepaid, accelerated, or otherwise matured. n51

The new federal legislation regarding high rate mortgages addresses this issue of prepayment penalties. For most covered loans, n52 no prepayment penalties are permitted at all, and use of any method of rebate less favorable than the actuarial rule is specifically defined to constitute a prepayment penalty. n53 There is one very narrow, complex exception. n54

Finally, the laws of most states forbid prepayment penalties in consumer transactions, but borrowers' attorneys should be aware that these prepayment penalty prohibitions have been overridden in the case of some mortgage loans. n55 Specifically, if permitted by a loan contract, state and national banks may impose prepayment penalties on adjustable-rate mortgage loans, n56 and federally chartered savings and loan institutions may impose prepayment penalties on both fixed and variable rate mortgage loans. n57 Up until July 1, 2003, the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) allowed "housing creditors," defined as non-depository lenders who regularly make loans or credit sales secured by residential realty or mobile homes, to impose prepayment penalties in loans that fell under the Alternative Mortgage Transactions Parity Act. n58 Effective July 1, 2003, however, OTS amended its rules to no longer authorize these lenders to impose fees for prepayment. n59 As a result, these creditors are subject to any state restrictions on prepayment penalties. Further, non-depository lenders who regularly make loans or credit sales secured by residential realty or mobile homes may impose prepayment penalties in loans that fall under the Alternative Mortgage Parity Act.

n60 However, federal credit unions are specifically prohibited from receiving prepayment penalties, n61 as are any lenders making FHA-insured mortgage loans. n62 Another limitation is that OTS forbids collection of prepayment penalties by federal thrifts when they accelerate mortgage notes pursuant to due-on-sale clauses. n63 A creditor may attempt to evade a prohibition on prepayment penalties by creative labeling of the charge. For example, one bank waived the borrower's obligation to pay closing costs, as long as the borrower did not prepay the obligation for three years. Maryland's highest court held that, because the closing cost charge was imposed on the borrower only in the event of prepayment, it was a prepayment penalty no matter how it was labeled. n63.1

[7] Preemptive Effect of the New Federal Consumer Protection Statutes

In some cases, the federal rebate statute n64 and the high cost mortgage statute n65 will provide greater protections to borrowers than they would otherwise have under state or other federal law. In other states, though, state law may still provide greater protection.

The high cost mortgage statute is explicit about preemption. Even in the limited circumstances where a creditor is permitted to impose a prepayment penalty in a covered loan under that statute, it can only do so if otherwise applicable law also permits it. n66 Further, the new disclosure and substantive prohibitions do not affect state law "except to the extent that those State laws are inconsistent, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency," n67 by which Congress intended "to allow states to enact more protective provisions than those in this legislation."

The federal rebate statute included no specific preemption language. However, it, too, should not preempt state laws more protective of the consumer since consumer protection statutes are to be liberally construed to effectuate their purpose. n68

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawFederal ActsGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryInterestBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryUsury LitigationContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Circle v. Jim Walter Homes, Inc., 479 F. Supp. 39 (W.D. Okla. 1979) , aff'd, 654 F.2d 688 (10th Cir. 1981) ; Clyde v. Liberty Loan Co., 249 Ga. 78, 287 S.E.2d 551 (1982) ; G.A.C. Fin. Corp. v. Hardy, 232 Ga. 632, 208 S.E.2d 453 (1974) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See, e.g., Ala. Code §§ 5-18-15 (Rule of 78 for small loan prepayment), 5-19-4 (prepayment rebates by Rule of 78 for consumer credit transactions with original term less than sixty-one months, and any generally accepted actuarial method if greater than sixty-one months, except pro rata for refinancing within ninety days), 8-8-14 (pro rata refund of interest surcharge); Alaska Stat. §§ 45.10.070 (Rule of 78 under state RISA), 06.40.120 (insurance premium finance), 06.40.150 (unearned insurance premiums); Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 44-6002 (actuarial rebate required for RISA transactions), 44-1205 (actuarial rebate on loan transactions). See also In re Coxson, 43 F.3d 189 (5th Cir. 1995) (Texas follows equitable rule requiring surrender of unearned interest to obtain a foreclosure; rule invoked to avoid usurious construction of contract silent about rebate upon acceleration); Aardwoolf Corp. v. Nelson Capital Corp., 861 F.2d 46 (2d Cir. 1988) ; Denley v. Peoples Bank of Indianola, 553 So. 2d 494 (Miss. 1989) (even though statute was silent as to prepayment rebate method, use of Rule of 78 was usurious when it caused lender's yield to exceed statutory ceiling stated as actuarial rate; that implies a requirement of an actuarial rebate on precomputed loans).

(n3)Footnote 2. At any given time, the amount due on an interest-bearing contract is the unpaid principal balance plus accrued interest. See, e.g., In re Curtis, 83 B.R. 853 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1988) ; Myles v. Resolution Trust Corp., 787 S.W.2d 616 (Tex. Ct. App. 1990) (no usury contracted for in acceleration clause of interest-bearing contract).

(n4)Footnote 3. See generally James H. Hunt, The Rule of 78: Hidden Penalty for Prepayment in Consumer Credit Transactions, 55 B.U. L. Rev. 331, 331 n.2 (1975).

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 6.03[3] infra.

(n6)Footnote 5. There may be another issue, however, as to how the creditor calculated any interest due after maturity and before the legal action. Some contracts provide for lower post-maturity rates (though rarely these days), others provide for continuing at the original rate, and yet others provide for a higher "default" rate. Some predatory home equity lenders have contracted for default rates of 36% to 42% on fully secured loans. As a consequence, Congress limited default rates on high cost mortgages. Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act, codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1639(d). Some state statutes may regulate default rates, as well. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 5-18-15(j) (small loan maximum interest reduced to 8% six months after maturity).

(n7)Footnote 6. See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1615(a); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 45-137(2)(c) (1988). But see Cal. Fin. Code §§ 22480(a)(3), 24480(a)(3) (West 1981 and Supp. 1994) (recomputation required for partial prepayment of three or more installments).

(n8)Footnote 6.1. Toy Nat'l Bank v. McCarr, 286 N.W.2d 376 (Iowa 1979) . See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 2.4.2.2 (6th ed. 2007 and Supp.) (standards for determining business purpose under Truth in Lending Act).

(n9)Footnote 6.2. 286 N.W.2d 376 (Iowa 1979) . Accord In re Stipetich, 294 B.R. 635 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2003) (Md. law) (loan that refinanced business loan not consumer loan even though borrower obtained it to prevent foreclosure).

(n10)Footnote 7. See § 6.05 infra.

(n11)Footnote 8. See Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) ; Clyde v. Liberty Loan Co., 287 S.E.2d 551 (Ga. 1982) (maintenance charges and credit insurance premiums must be rebated if unearned); Brown v. Associates Fin. Servs. Corp., 346 S.E.2d 873 (Ga. Ct. App. 1986) . But note that some types of credit may charge for credit insurance on a monthly installment basis, as is typically the case with credit cards.

(n12)Footnote 9. For a discussion of points as interest, see § 6.05[2][b] infra.

(n13)Footnote 10. Cf. In re Tucker, 74 B.R. 923 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (though persuasive authority and public policy suggest a "service charge" should be rebated, the controlling statute is clear that no such rebate is required).

(n14)Footnote 11. See § 6.05[2][b] infra.

(n15)Footnote 12. See FASB Statement No. 91, Accounting for Nonrefundable Fees and Costs Associated With Originating or Acquiring Loans and Initial Direct Costs of Leases (effective for fiscal years beginning after Dec. 15, 1987). See generally FASB Accounting Standards, § L20 (1993/94 ed.).

(n16)Footnote 13. See § 6.03[6] infra. Cf. In re Jungkurth, 74 B.R. 323 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (absent statutory authorization, Rule of 78 is a prepayment penalty). Note that non-depository lenders who regularly make loans or credit sales secured by residential realty or mobile homes may impose prepayment penalties in loans that fall under the Alternate Mortgage Parity Act. 12 U.S.C. § 3801. See § 6.02[7] supra; National Home Equity Mortg. Ass'n v. Face, 239 F.3d 633 (4th Cir. 2001) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 823, 122 S. Ct. 58, 151 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2001) ; McCarthy v. Option One Mortg. Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22711 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2001) (non-federally chartered housing creditor can charge prepayment penalty, but only if it complies with OTS regulations); Shinn v. Encore Mortg. Servs., 96 F. Supp. 2d 419 (D.N.J. 2000) (housing creditor that complied with OTS regulations could charge prepayment penalty notwithstanding state law restrictions).

(n17)Footnote 14. E.g., First American Mortgage Company and Landbank Equity, two major multi-state lenders, both of which eventually went into bankruptcy, leaving their loans in the hands of other lenders which had purchased them on the secondary mortgage market.

(n18)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Williams v. E.F. Hutton Mortg. Corp., 555 So. 2d 158 (Ala. 1989) .

(n19)Footnote 16. See § 6.04 infra.

(n20)Footnote 17. Of course, accelerating an interest-bearing debt, instead of a precomputed debt, will not require any rebates, as there is no unearned interest to rebate. See In re Curtis, 83 B.R. 853 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1988) ; Myles v. Resolution Trust Corp., 787 S.W.2d 616 (Tex. Ct. App. 1990) (no usury contracted for in acceleration clause of interest-bearing contract).

(n21)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Iowa Code Ann. § 537.2510(6) (West 1987) (if judgment is obtained, rebate is calculated as of date of acceleration); N.Y. Pers. Prop. Law § 408(6) (McKinney 1992); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 25A-32 (1986) (15 days after acceleration); Pa. Stat. Ann. tit. 69, § 622B (1994).

(n22)Footnote 19. Union Trust Co. v. Tyndall, 428 A.2d 428 (Md. 1981) ; First Va. Bank v. Settles, 588 A.2d 803 (Md. Ct. App. 1991) .

(n23)Footnote 20. For example, both the 1968 and 1974 versions of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (UCCC) provide that "if the maturity is accelerated for any reason and judgment is entered, the consumer is entitled to the same rebate as if payment had been made on the date judgment is entered." UCCC §§ 2.210(8), 3.210(8) (1968); UCCC § 2.510(7) (1974). See also Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 408-15(f) (1985); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 45-137(2)(c) (1988); W. Va. Code § 46A-3-111.

(n24)Footnote 21. Such partial rebates may be required only for prepayments in the first 30 or 60 days of a loan. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 1321.13 (Baldwin 1993) (small loans); 1321.57 (second mortgages) (if payment is made before first installment is due, lender may keep 1/30 of monthly finance charge per day loan was outstanding).

(n25)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 5-19-4 (1981 and Supp. 1993); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 45-137(2)(c) (1988); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 1321.13, 1321.57 (1998); S.C. Dep't of Consumer Affairs 3.210-7609 Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 98,318 (Oct. 21, 1976) (one day cannot be treated as one month for rebate purposes); see also Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 5069-3.15(6)(b) (1987) (pro rata earnings for odd days when prepayment is not on installment date).

(n26)Footnote 23. Compare Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) (truth in lending case), with In re Jones, 79 B.R. 233 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (state law permits use of Rule of 78 and rounding forward to allow a fraction of a month to be considered a full month). See also Webster v. International Harvester Credit Corp., 51 Ohio App. 2d 192, 5 Ohio Op. 3d 332, 367 N.E.2d 924 (1977) .

(n27)Footnote 24. For example, the Ohio RISA arbitrarily requires rounding in the borrower's favor only in the first ten days of the payment interval. See Webster v. International Harvester Credit Corp., 51 Ohio App. 2d 192, 5 Ohio Op. 3d 332, 367 N.E.2d 924 (1977) .

(n28)Footnote 25. Cf. Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) (hidden finance charge under Truth in Lending Act).

(n29)Footnote 26. 15 U.S.C. § 1615. Consumer credit transactions have the same definition that they do in Truth in Lending, except that "creditor" includes any assignee. 15 U.S.C. § 1615(d)(3).

(n30)Footnote 27. Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act, codified at 15 U.S.C. § 1639. See Ch. 2 supra.

(n31)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Zwayer v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 279 Ill. App. 3d 906, 216 Ill. Dec. 585, 665 N.E.2d

843 (1996) (where court held that rebates computed by the Rule of 78s are not allowed where contract terms are ambiguous). Certain transactions may be subject to other federal law which may also prohibit the use of the Rule of 78, such as federally related loans secured by first liens on mobile homes. See 12 C.F.R. § 590.4 (1994).

(n32)Footnote 29. See, e.g., Walter E. Heller & Co. v. Mall, Inc., 267 F. Supp. 343 (E.D. La. 1967) (pro rata refund of discount interest upon acceleration under Louisiana law); Varner v. Century Fin. Corp., Inc., 253 Ga. 27, 317 S.E.2d 178 (1984) (interpreting Off. Code Ga. Ann. § 7-4-2(b)(1) (effective Mar. 1, 1983)).

(n33)Footnote 30. E.g., Ala. Code § 5-19-4(d) (pro rata rebate if refinanced by same creditor or affiliate within 90 days).

(n34)Footnote 31. Bonker, The Rule of 78, XXXI Journal of Finance 877, 885 (No. 3, June 1976); Hunt, The Rule of 78: Hidden Penalty for Prepayment in Consumer Credit Transactions, 55 B.U. L. Rev. 331 (1975). See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n35)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 1615(d). Contrary state law will be preempted. For an explanation of how to calculate a Rule of 78 rebate, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation and Legal Challenges § 5.6.3.3.2 (2d ed. 2000).

(n36)Footnote 33. Even prior to the 1992 federal rebate statute, actuarial rebates were frequently required by state statutes and federal regulations, especially for contracts with longer terms and high principal amounts, because of the Rule of 78 inaccuracy for such transactions.

(n37)Footnote 34. James H. Hunt, The Rule of 78: Hidden Penalty for Prepayment in Consumer Credit Transactions, 55 B.U. L. Rev. 331 (1975).

(n38)Footnote 35. For a discussion of how to calculate actuarial rebates, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit, § 4.3.1 (4th ed. 2009).

(n39)Footnote 36. See B.F. Saul Co. v. West End Park N., Inc., 250 Md. 707, 246 A.2d 591 (1968) (distinguishing loans to which rebate statute applies).

(n40)Footnote 37. E.g., Ala. Code § 5-19-19 (consumer credit code); Iowa Code § 537.5201(2), (3) (consumer credit code).

(n41)Footnote 38. E.g., Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.868 (RISA).

(n42)Footnote 39. Since failure to rebate unearned interest results in excess charges, that should trigger any remedy authorized for excess charges. For such statutes, the question may be whether the excess was "charged," or whatever the operative verb in the statute is.

(n43)Footnote 40. Civil liability applies to violations of Parts B, D and E of TIL. 15 U.S.C. § 1640. The rebate statute was codified in Part A, 15 U.S.C. § 1615.

(n44)Footnote 41. The rebate statute defines creditor by reference to TIL's definition, but specifically includes assignees as creditors, as well. 15 U.S.C. § 1615(d).

(n45)Footnote 42. Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226.20(a). See, e.g., Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) . See generally Ch. 1 supra. Note that this would also be the case when a creditor used the rule in violation of any other applicable statute. See Steele, supra.

(n46)Footnote 43. Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226.20(a). See, e.g., Steele v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 783 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1986) . See generally Ch. 1 supra. Note that this would also be the case when a creditor used the rule in violation of any other applicable statute. See Steele, supra.

(n47)Footnote 44. That assumes, of course, that the creditor included the full payoff balance of the prior loan in the amount financed on the new loan. It is unlikely that a creditor would go to the trouble of separating out an illegal overcharge to properly account for it in its TIL calculations.

Even if it did so, arguably there is still a TIL violation. TIL requires that disclosures reflect the legal obligation, Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 226.17(c). At least with respect to the finance charge, the legal obligation is to pay charges in accord with applicable law. Applicable law says that the consumer should not have to pay the excess charge at all, irrespective of whether denominated finance charge or amount financed, thus, all the financial disclosures would be skewed because the total loan should be less. See In re Brown, 134 B.R. 134 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) ; see Ch. 1, § 1.05[2][c], [e][ii] supra.

(n48)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1640; see Ch. 1, § 1.10[2], [3] supra; National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending §§ 8.5, 8.6 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.).

(n49)Footnote 46. For a discussion of scope issues under UDAP statutes, see National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 2.1.1 (7th ed. 2008 and supp.). For a discussion of UDAP damages, see § 4.06 supra.

(n50)Footnote 47. 17A Am. Jur. 2d Contracts § 381.

(n51)Footnote 48. E.g., C.C. Port, Ltd. v. Davis-Penn Mortgage Co., 61 F.3d 288 (5th Cir. 1995) (Texas law); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Strnad, 876 P.2d 1362 (Kan. 1994) . E.g., Norwest Bank v. Blair Road Assocs., 252 F. Supp. 2d 86, 97 (D.N.J. 2003) ; MONY Life Ins. Co. v. Paramus Parkway Bldg., Ltd., 834 A.2d 475 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2003) (commercial loan); Westmark Commercial Mortgage Fund IV v. Teenform Assocs., 827 A.2d 1154 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2003) (commercial loan).

(n52)Footnote 49. E.g., Del. Code tit. 6, § 4322 (RISA: right to prepay and receive rebate of unearned interest); Md. Code Ann. Com. Law § 12-308 (consumer loan law); Miss. Code § 63-19-47 (MVRISA: same); Garver v. Brace, 47 Cal. App. 4th 995, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220 (1996) (prohibitions and limitations in Cal. Civ. Code § 2954.9(b) against prepayment penalty in mortgages on owner-occupied residential real property is extended to include the situation where the borrower builds a home on the property after the loan is executed, but before the prepayment fee is paid). See also Nelson v. Associates Fin. Servs. Co., 253 Mich. App. 580, 659 N.W.2d 635 (Mich. Ct. App. 2002) (construing Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 438.31 and 438.31c to place cap on prepayment penalties for certain deregulated first mortgage loans); Glukowsky v. Equity One, Inc., 360 N.J. Super. 1, 821 A.2d 485 (App. Div. 2003) (New Jersey law prohibits prepayment penalty; OTS regulation preempting state prepayment penalty laws is invalid as exceeding OTS's authority). Cf. In re Curtis, 83 B.R. 853 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1988) (Ga. Code Ann. § 57-101(6)(2) (1988 & Supp. 1993) prohibits prepayment penalties only in absence of contractual agreement for one; court validated express provision for prepayment penalty of 3 year's interest). But compare George v. Fowler, 978 P.2d 565 (Wash. App. 1999) (clause prohibiting prepayment is valid in absence of legislative ban on such clauses).

(n53)Footnote 50. Note that even if the statute does not spell out the right to prepay, that right is implicit in any statute which requires a rebate upon prepayment.

(n54)Footnote 51. The existence of a statute requiring rebates upon prepayment, in the absence of a statute compelling rebates upon default and acceleration, need not, however, be read as allowing the retention of unearned interest upon acceleration. See Glacier Lincoln-Mercury, Inc. v. Freeman, Consumer Cred. Guide (CCH) P 99,567 (Alaska Dist. Ct. 1970).

(n55)Footnote 52. See Ch. 2 supra for an explanation of the Act's scope. The background of this legislation, and the issues arising under it, are discussed more fully in National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending Chapter 9 (6th ed. 2007).

(n56)Footnote 53. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(1).

(n57)Footnote 54. A prepayment penalty, including use of the Rule of 78 to calculate rebates in loans with terms of 60 months or less (use of the Rule in all consumer credit transactions with terms 61 months is prohibited in any event), may be imposed where all elements of a five-prong exception are met as set out in 15 U.S.C. §§ 1639(c)

(n58)Footnote 55. For a general discussion of federal preemption of mortgage loan limitations, see §§ 6.02[4] et seq. supra. Note, however, that federal preemption of usury ceilings on first mortgage loans under § 501 of DIDA does not preempt state limitations on prepayment charges. 12 C.F.R. § 590.3(c). See also S. Rep. No. 368, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 19, reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. 236, 255. Further, state-chartered S&L's or other housing creditors may not invoke federal preemption under AMTPA to circumvent state restrictions on prepayment penalties. 12 C.F.R. §§ 560.34, 560.220 (1996). Non-depository lenders who regularly make loans or credit sales secured by residential realty or mobile homes may impose prepayment penalties in loans that fall under the Alternative Mortgage Parity Act. See 12 C.F.R. § 560.220 (allowing housing creditors to make alternative mortgage transactions, which under 12 C.F.R. § 560.34 may include prepayment penalties). See National Home Equity Mortg. Ass'n v. Face, 239 F.3d 633 (4th Cir. 2001) , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 823, 122 S. Ct. 58, 151 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2001) ; McCarthy v. Option One Mortg. Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22711 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2001) (non-federally chartered housing creditor can charge prepayment penalty, but only if it complies with OTS regulations); Shinn v. Encore Mortg. Servs., 96 F. Supp. 2d 419 (D.N.J. 2000) (housing creditor that complied with OTS regulations could charge prepayment penalty notwithstanding state law restrictions).

(n59)Footnote 56. See 12 C.F.R. §§ 34.23, 34.24 (1996) (Regulations of the Comptroller of the Currency).

(n60)Footnote 57. Prepayment penalties must be disclosed under 12 C.F.R. § 560.210 (1996).

(n61)Footnote 58. 12 C.F.R. § 560.220 (allowing housing creditors to make alternative mortgage transactions, which under 12 C.F.R. § 560.34 may include prepayment penalties). See Nat'l Home Equity Mortg. Assn. v. Face, 239 F.3d 633 (4th Cir. 2001) .

(n62)Footnote 59. 12 C.F.R. § 560.220 (as amended by 67 Fed. Reg. 60,542 (Sept. 26, 2002)) ; see Nat'l Home Equity Mortgage Ass'n v. Office of Thrift Supervision, 271 F. Supp. 2d 264 (D.D.C. 2003) (upholding amended regulation as within discretion of OTS).

(n63)Footnote 60. 12 C.F.R. § 560.220 (allowing housing creditors to make alternative mortgage transactions, which under 12 C.F.R. § 560.34 may include prepayment penalties). See National Home Equity Mortgage Assn. v. Face, 239 F.3d 633 (4th Cir. 2001) ; McCarthy v. Option One Mortgage Corp., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22711 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2001) (non-federally chartered housing creditor can charge prepayment penalty, but only if it complies with OTS regulations); Shinn v. Encore Mortgage Servs., 96 F. Supp. 2d 419 (D.N.J. 2000) (housing creditor that complied with OTS regulations could charge prepayment penalty notwithstanding state law restrictions).

(n64)Footnote 61. See 12 C.F.R. § 701.21(c)(6) (1993).

(n65)Footnote 62. See 24 C.F.R. §§ 201.17, 203.22(b) (1993).

(n66)Footnote 63. 12 C.F.R. § 591.5.

(n67)Footnote 63.1. Bednar v. Provident Bank, 937 A.2d 210 (Md. 2007) .

(n68)Footnote 64. 15 U.S.C. § 1615.

(n69)Footnote 65. See Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act, Ch. 2 supra .

(n70)Footnote 66. 15 U.S.C. § 1639(c)(2)(D).

(n71)Footnote 67. Home Ownership & Equity Protection Act, at § 151(e)(2)(C), amending 15 U.S.C. § 1610(b). Effective October 1, 2009, the Federal Reserve Board has narrowed this exception in two ways: (1) a prepayment penalty is allowed only during the first two rather than five years of a covered loan; (2) prepayment penalties are prohibited for covered loans if the consumer's payments can change during the first four years after consummation. 26 C.F.R. § 226.32(d)(6), (7), as amended by 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,511 /-/44,517, 44,603 (July 30, 2008).

In addition, effective October 1, 2009, the Board has extended many of these restrictions on prepayment penalties to a class of non-HOEPA "higher-priced mortgage loans" that carry rates a certain number of points above prime. 26 C.F.R. § 226.35, as adopted by 73 Fed. Reg. 44,522, 44,511 /-/44,517, 44,603/-/44,604 (July 30, 2008).

(n72)Footnote 68. Singer, Sutherland Statutory Construction P 71.01 (5th ed.) See § 6.07[2] infra; see also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 1.4.2.3 (6th ed. 2007 and supp.).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 6.04

§ 6.04 The Cost of Refinancing: Calculation and Legal Issues

[1] Introduction

Refinancing, in the right circumstances, and with the right lender, is a good deal for both parties, but it is not always mutually beneficial. It can be a trap for unwary consumers, and it is on the hidden costs which can attend refinancing from some lenders that this chapter focuses.

At the outset, it may be helpful to define some of the terms which are used to describe different kinds of credit renewals. While "refinancing" is seldom statutorily defined, it means to "finance something new," usually after a renegotiation of credit terms. n1 On paper, a "refinancing" is a new loan, generally between an existing creditor and debtor, the proceeds of which are used to pay off the pre-existing debt.

"Consolidation" converts several debts into one new debt. The greatest abuse of consolidation occurs when several short-term, low-interest loans are consolidated into one very expensive loan, secured by the equity in the borrower's home. Consolidation may also occur when a pre-existing debt with the same lender is refinanced and a new advance is made. Whether the amount of a new advance is sufficient to change its character as refinanced debt may be important, for there are instances in which there are limits on the charges which can be imposed on a refinanced loan.

The term "flipping" may be used to describe refinancing in general, though it is sometimes used more restrictively to describe situations in which new credit is extended at a higher rate than the refinanced credit. This chapter generally uses the former, broader meaning.

[2] Usurious Taint in Refinanced Obligations

Because consumer debt is frequently refinanced, it is important to consider the extent to which the presence of usury in one obligation affects the validity of a subsequent agreement n2 that renews or extends the outstanding debt.

The rule followed by almost all courts is that once a debt is tainted by usury, the usury will follow the debt through any number of renewal transactions. n3 Depending on the state, the taint may invalidate the new obligation to the same extent that it invalidated the original transaction. n4

Despite the general rule against the purging of usury through renewal or replacement contracts, the courts do recognize circumstances under which the usury in one obligation will not taint a subsequent transaction between the parties. If the debt created by the first transaction forms no part of the consideration for the second obligation, then the two notes will be viewed as distinct, and usury in one note will not affect the legality of the other, unless the two are actually parts of a single usurious scheme. n5 This exception to the general rule of taint, however, is merely a statement that a second note between two parties will not be affected by usury in the prior note if, in fact, it is not a renewal of the previous note. Since refinancing transactions by definition involve the renewal of outstanding debt, this exception should seldom be of concern to advocates considering taint in refinanced obligations.

There is a more serious limitation to the rule that the taint of usury will follow a debt through a renewal transaction. It is widely recognized that a usurious obligation may be purged of its usury by a subsequent agreement between the parties through which the usurious contract is completely abandoned with the "full knowledge and consent" of the borrower, and "new or independent" consideration is provided for the new contract. n6 In other words, courts allow usury to be purged through a "novation," which they regard as distinct from a mere "renewal." Even so, few courts have provided much guidance for distinguishing the two transactions. The most logical rule for distinguishing between renewals and novations is that a refinancing may not be seen as a novation which purges a debt of usury unless the transaction in some manner credits the borrower with the amount of the usurious charges assessed in the previous transaction. n7

[3] The Cost of Refinancings: Evaluating the Calculations

This section outlines the basic steps for advocates in evaluating the various refinancing calculations. n8

The first step for the advocate is to check the regulatory statute applicable to a refinancing transaction to determine two things: the charges which must be rebated from the prior loan; n9 and the formula to be used in computing those rebates. n10 All states require that credit insurance be cancelled and rebates given upon refinancing. n11 Precomputed interest also must be rebated. n12 If refunds are not made or if the wrong formula is used--one which would result in a higher "earned" premium or interest figure than the prescribed formula--the transaction is subject to challenge for illegal overcharge. n13 Even a lender who uses the proper rebate formula may apply it improperly.

The calculation should then be checked to see whether, in determining the pay-off on the prior loan, the lender improperly compounded interest.

The general rule about compounding is that interest may be charged on accrued unpaid interest by an agreement made after the interest becomes due. n14 However, the applicable statute should be carefully reviewed.

Another red flag for advocates is the characterization of portions of the finance charge as non-rebatable fees, such as service charges or points of loan origination fees. Many statutes specifically authorize the imposition of service charges or points either in a prescribed amount or in a "reasonable" amount. To the extent the service charge imposed falls within the statutorily prescribed limit, the failure to rebate is probably legitimate. n15 (If they exceed the statutory limit, of course, they are subject to attack.) n16

Even absent a clear statutory prohibition, issues concerning the legality of such charges may arise where there is no affirmative authorization for them. The imposition of the charge itself may violate the statute. n17 Alternatively, if the points are "financed," their inclusion in the principal of the loan may give rise to illegal compounding. n18 Even if points are allowed and the de facto compounding that they involve is disregarded, it still is arguable that their effect in limiting rebates creates an illegal overcharge.

In addition, the advocate should examine the new refinancing transaction and check the legitimacy of any new charges imposed. For example, some regulatory statutes explicitly prohibit imposing any points, service charges, or administrative fees on loans which are refinanced within a specified amount of time, commonly six months to one year.

n19 In some cases, the rate increase on a new loan can be challenged. A few states explicitly restrict the right of a lender to raise the interest rate on a refinanced loan. n20

More common than such general rate restrictions on refinancings are provisions in Retail Installment Sales Acts ("RISAs"), which provide that refinanced sales contracts retain their character as sales contracts, subject to the terms of the RISA. n21 Many of the RISA statutes which have this restriction apply to all holders of retail sales contracts, not just to the original seller. n22 Requiring that refinanced contracts continue to be treated under the terms of the RISA when refinanced by a "holder" prevents the finance company from treating it as a loan regulated by the small loan law. (The same incentive to flip applies when the RISA is rate regulated, but a consumer loan is not.)

Finally, refinancing should be carefully considered as a useful option for borrowers facing foreclosure. Refinancing may prevent the loss of the home, or it may get the borrower deeper in debt. It is important for advocates to make a realistic assessment of a client's financial capabilities, examine the existing loan to determine what claims and defenses exist and examine both the existing and new mortgage extensions. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawFederal ActsGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryInterestBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryUsury LitigationContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Springhill Lake Invs. Ltd. v. Prince George's County, 114 Md. App. 420, 690 A.2d 535 (1997) (definition of refinancing was in context of imposition of transfer taxes by county recordation offices). Bar Harbor Bank & Trust v. Superintendent of Bureau of Consumer Protection, 471 A.2d 292 (Me. 1984) ; Moore v. Canal Nat'l Bank, 409 A.2d 679, 684 (Me. 1979) . The terms renewal and refinancing are generally used interchangeably. See supra, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust, 471 A.2d at 295 .

(n2)Footnote 2. It is critical to note that this section on "taint" addresses the effect of subsequent agreements between the same parties on the continued existence of usury. There are two points here. First, some agreement is required before any purging of usury is possible. Unless expressly authorized by statute, a creditor cannot purge a debt of usury through its own unilateral action. See, e.g., Duderwicz v. Sweetwater Sav. Ass'n, 595 F.2d 1008 (5th Cir. 1979) ; Davidson v. Commercial Credit Equip. Corp., 255 Ark. 127, 499 S.W.2d 68 (1973) (subsequent disclaimer); United-Bilt Homes, Inc. v. Teague, 245 Ark. 132, 432 S.W.2d 1 (1968) (suit for legal interest only does not purge usury); Yakutsk v. Alfino, 43 A.D. 2d 552, 349 N.Y.S.2d 718 (1973) ; Danziger v. San Jacinto Sav. Ass'n, 732 S.W.2d 300 (Tex. 1987) ; Financial Commerce, Inc. v. McLean, 73 Wash. 2d 52, 435 P.2d 932 (1968) . Second, if a borrower pays off a usurious loan from one lender with the proceeds of a non-usurious loan from a second, unrelated lender, then the second note will generally not be tainted by the usury in the first.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Bowen v. Mt. Vernon Sav. Bank, 105 F.2d 796 (D.C. Cir. 1939) ; In re Feldman, 259 F. Supp. 218 (D. Conn. 1966) ; Family Fed. Sav. & Loan v. Davis (In re Davis), 172 B.R. 437 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1994) ; Lentino v. Cullen Ctr. Bank & Trust, 919 S.W.2d 743 (Tex. App. 1996) ; Sanders v. Barron, 291 Ala. 407, 282 So. 2d 237 (1973) ; American Sav. Life Ins. Co. v. Financial Affairs Mgmt. Co., 13 Ariz. App. 44, 474 P.2d 51 (1970) . See generally 47 C.J.S. Interest & Usury §§ 183-188.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., In re Feldman, 259 F. Supp. 218 (D. Conn. 1966) (both principal and interest uncollectible); Henson v. Dixie Fin. Corp. of Ga., 250 Ga. 132, 296 S.E.2d 593 (1982) (interest and charges on original usurious loan forfeited, but lender may recover legal interest on new cash advanced upon refinancing).

(n5)Footnote 5. Compare Brookshire v. Coffman, 287 Ark. 112, 696 S.W.2d 748 (1985) (single usurious scheme), and Johnson v. Ronamy Consumer Credit Corp., 515 A.2d 682 (Del. 1986) (second mortgage and collateral guarantees were parts of single unenforceable transaction), with Thomas v. Estes, 139 Ga. App. 738, 229 S.E.2d 538 (1976) (separate transactions). Similarly, a valid obligation will not be tainted by subsequent usurious agreements between the parties. See Dichter v. Viking Office Prods., Inc., 501 N.Y.S.2d 420 (App. Div. 1986) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See American Sav. Life Ins. Co. v. Financial Affairs Mgmt. Co., 13 Ariz. App. 44, 474 P.2d 51 (1970) (stating rule). For cases holding that a new agreement purged an outstanding debt of usury, see Kogan v. Bergman, 244 Cal. App. 2d 613, 53 Cal. Rptr. 371 (1966) ; Ronen v. Teer, 94 Idaho 811, 498 P.2d 1284 (1972) ; Matter of Estate of Jackson, 508 N.Y.S.2d 671 (App. Div. 1986) (borrower failed to meet his burden of proof).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bowen v. Mt. Vernon Sav. Bank, 105 F.2d 796 (D.C. Cir. 1939) ; Family Fed. Sav. & Loan v. Davis (In re Davis), 172 B.R. 437 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1994) (lender not only did not purge original loan of usury, but condoned further unscrupulous activity by third parties in the process of settling litigation over the original loan); In re Bishop, 79 B.R. 94 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1987) ; Whittemore Homes, Inc. v. Fleishman, 190 Cal. App. 2d 554, 12 Cal. Rptr. 235 (4th Dist. 1961) ; Henson v. Dixie Fin. Corp., 250 Ga. 132, 296 S.E.2d 593 (1982) .

(n8)Footnote 8. The elements of refinancings that lead to additional costs can be complex. A number of case studies are discussed in National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 6.3 (4th ed. 2009).

(n9)Footnote 9. See § 6.03[3] supra.

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 6.03[4][b] supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 6.06[5] infra. Usually, rebates of less than $1.00 need not be made.

(n12)Footnote 12. See generally § 6.03 supra.

(n13)Footnote 13. See generally § 6.03 supra. See also In re Jungkurth, 74 B.R. 323 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) ; In re Tucker, 74 B.R. 923, 927 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) ("[A]ny formula other than the 'actuarial method' of calculating rebates, unless such a formula is specifically authorized by state law, would constitute the imposition of a prepayment penalty and hence be usurious").

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Smith v. MRCC P'ship, 792 S.W.2d 301 (Ark. 1990) (not usury to add accrued, unpaid interest on antecedent debt to principal on new debt and write new contract with maximum legal rate of interest on whole amount).

(n15)Footnote 15. In re Tucker, 74 B.R. 923 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (though persuasive authority and public policy suggest a service charge should be rebated, the controlling statute makes it clear that no such rebate is required).

(n16)Footnote 16. E.g., Williams v. Seeley (In re Williams), 241 B.R. 387 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1999) , rev'd in part, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 13246 (4th Cir. June 13, 2001) (points are not considered "paid" at outset of transaction when lender merely reserves them from the proceeds of the loan, so they could not be part of penalty under statutory formula); Mayo v. Key Fin. Servs., Inc., 1994 Mass. Super. LEXIS 549 (Mass. Super. Ct. June 22, 1994) (implied private right of action for violation of statute limiting points; assertable by a suitable common law remedy; borrowers choose to assert common law restitution). If refinanced, the excess would taint the new loan, as well. See § 6.04[2] supra.

(n17)Footnote 17. Also, some statutes, such as small loan laws, for example, list the charges that a creditor is permitted to assess and prohibit the imposition of all "other charges." The imposition of an unauthorized charge violates the statute even if the effective interest rate charged is below the small loan ceiling. See, e.g., Ex Parte New Fin. Ltd., 284 Ala. 374, 225 So. 2d 782, 784 (1969) ; see also Attorney Gen. of Md. v. Equitable Trust Co., 450 A.2d 1273, 1292 (Md. Ct. App. 1982) .

(n18)Footnote 18. A counter argument to the claim of compounding is the notion that interest charges should be "spread" over the term of the loan when calculating the rate charged. See National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 4.6.6 (4th ed. 2009). However, spreading does not preclude the need for rebates of portions of the "up-front" fees merely because it assumes that fees are earned throughout the term of a loan.

(n19)Footnote 19. E.g., Cal. Fin. Code § 18212.2 (West 1989) (Industrial Loan Act). See also Colo. Rev. Stat. § 5-3-206.5(2) (Supp. 1993).

(n20)Footnote 20. For example, in Iowa, if the rate on the original loan exceeded 18%, the rate cannot be increased on the refinancing of the unpaid balance. Iowa Code Ann. § 537.2504 (West 1987 & Supp. 1994).

(n21)Footnote 21. E.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 1807.2 (Supp. 1994); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. 255D, § 17 (1988); Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 445.861(d)(2) (1989); 69 Pa. Stat. § 1702 (1994). Also, a number of RISA statutes provide protections regarding the right to refinance a balloon payment on a RISA contract. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 1807.3 (1985).

(n22)Footnote 22. E.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 1807.2 (Supp. 1994); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. 255D, § 17 (1988); Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 445.861(d)(2) (1989); 69 Pa. Stat. § 1702 (1994). Also, a number of RISA statutes provide protections regarding the right to refinance a balloon payment on a RISA contract. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 1807.3 (1985).

(n23)Footnote 23. For a general discussion of this topic and practice tips for evaluating refinancing as a way out of real estate mortgage foreclosure, see § 13.03[6] infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Foreclosures § 2.11(2d ed. 2007).

Consumer Credit Law Manual

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I Consumer Credit
CHAPTER 6 The Cost of Credit

1-6 Consumer Credit Law Manual § 6.05

§ 6.05 Hidden Interest

[1] Overview

For as long as usury restrictions have existed, creditors have attempted to circumvent their limitations. These tactics are addressed in this section under the title of "hidden interest." For the purposes of this section, "hidden interest" refers to charges or other consideration paid in conjunction with a credit contract, which are classified as interest under state law regulating the transaction but which are not described as such, or are not described at all, in the contract, and which are consequently not included in the stated interest rate.

To use a simple example, if a lender charges the maximum interest rate on the face of a loan contract and, in addition, imposes a $100 "loan fee," that fee may constitute usurious hidden interest unless it is specifically allowed as a non-interest charge under state law.

[2] Payments for Lender Services: What Is Interest?

[a] Fees Based on the Creditor's Expenses

"Interest" can be defined as compensation paid to a lender for the use of money or the forbearance of a debt. n1 Broadly applied, such a definition would include any payment to a lender, regardless of whether the lender used the payment to cover expenses or instead attributed it to profit. However, in an attempt to circumvent the interest ceilings set by statute or agreement and to disguise the actual costs of a loan to the borrower, creditors have traditionally argued that certain specific expenses associated with a loan, such as closing costs or credit insurance, especially those costs attributable to third party services, n2 are not compensation for the loan and therefore not "interest."

This approach is widely accepted under state law even when the separate services primarily benefit the lender. n3 As a general rule, recognized lender fees may be excluded from interest if they compensate the lender for reasonable expenses actually incurred in connection with a particular loan. n4 Following the same approach, any charge which cannot be attributed to a specific loan-related expense is designed merely to cover the lender's overhead expenses or to contribute to its profit, and is interest on the loan unless a statute specifically says otherwise. n5

In the automobile financing context, dealers have begun to separately impose charges for specific "services." Fees commonly added to the cost of a car include delivery and handling fees, and conveyance charges (imposed to register title to the vehicle with the state motor vehicle department). These fees may constitute interest when the dealer is the lender for a variety of reasons. The dealer may not perform the service, may inflate the actual cost, or may be reimbursed by a third party, such as the manufacturer, for the cost. Further, the state retail sales installment act may limit the types of fees which the lender may impose. Fees not specifically allowed should constitute interest and support an usury claim. Such fees may also be challenged under state UDAP acts n6 and the Truth in Lending Act. n7

Because the types and amounts of fees which may be excluded from interest vary widely from state to state and may, within any state, vary with the class of lender and loan, the first step to determine whether a lender has properly excluded specific fees from interest on a contract must be to check the relevant state code.

Loan document preparation fees present an interesting issue that other fees do not. In addition to the potential claim that these fees may not be authorized by state law and that they may be interest, advocates should explore whether the entity preparing the documents was engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. If the lender or other entity charged a fee for preparing or filling in the blanks on legal documents and this activity was incidental to the entity's business, the lender or entity may be engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. For example, in Lawson v. First Union Mortgage Co., the Indiana Court of Appeals reversed the trial court's dismissal of a equitable claim for return of a document preparation fee, holding that while a lender's lay employees did not commit the unauthorized practice of law by preparing mortgage loan documents, the lender could not charge a separate fee for such documents. n8

[b] Points, Commitment Fees, and Other Percentage Fees

One type of ostensibly non-interest charge which has been increasingly used and misused by lenders in recent years is a fee calculated as a percentage of loan principal. Depending on the type of lender and loan involved, this fee may be variously described as an "origination fee," "commitment fee," "service charge," or "loan fee," but is perhaps best known as "points" or "discount points," with one point being a sum equal to one percent of the loan principal. n9

Points are essentially a "bonus": An additional incentive or inducement supposedly offered to the lender to convince it to issue a loan. As such, it is logically very difficult to characterize points as anything but interest. n10

When statutes do not address the issue, lenders carry the burden of demonstrating that points and other fees are justified by actual recognized costs associated with a loan, and are not merely extra profit or compensation for overhead expense. n11 In the case of points, it is a burden that lenders can seldom carry, and numerous courts have found points and similar fees to constitute hidden interest. n12

More commonly, the relevant state statute specifically permits the exclusion of points, often allowing one or two points to be excluded from interest. n13 Sometimes this exclusion is granted in lieu of permitting other charges to be passed on to borrowers. n14 In any event, the existence of such statutes is helpful to consumers in at least one way: by specifying how many points and other fees may be excluded from interest, these statutes clearly imply that any additional fees are to be treated as interest. n15

When statutes do not control this issue, a few courts have recognized the exclusion of a percentage fee from interest in one other situation: the commitment fee. Commitment fees are found mainly in commercial loans and are assessed when a lender agrees to hold open a line of credit for a certain time, at a given interest rate. Some courts have viewed commitment fees as proper non-interest compensation due to the lender for granting the borrower an ongoing option to borrow money, n16 although there is authority for the position that the fee must be reasonable to be excluded from "interest." n17 Other courts have held that commitment fees merely compensate the lender for normal overhead risk involved in lending and are, therefore, interest. n18

A variation on commitment fees is the "rate lock fee," which consumers pay to obtain a certain interest rate for a mortgage. However, this fee is different in that it does not guarantee the option to borrow, but instead guarantees the price of borrowing if the loan is approved.

[c] Non-Cash Compensation and Side Agreements

Payments to a creditor under a contract may take forms other than the stated interest or the various cash fees, such as points and service charges. Non-cash bonuses may also be exacted by lenders in consideration for the extension of credit, and may constitute hidden interest in the same manner as cash payments. n19 For example, the borrower's agreement to guarantee or cosign a third party debt owed to the lender may be interest on the contract, n20 as may a sharing of rents from mortgaged property. n21

A major impediment to the claim that non-cash bonuses are hidden interest may be encountered if the benefit to the lender is contingent n22 or if the value of the bonus for some other reason cannot be quantified. This problem arises most frequently when a loan contract grants the lender a share of the profits from the borrower's business or investment in consideration for making the loan.

[d] Delinquency Charges

Late fees, like any other payments made to a lender, are a potential source of hidden interest and should be closely scrutinized. n23 A lender's ability to exclude late charges from interest on a contract varies widely from state to state, and reference to the relevant state's statutes and case law is essential to the analysis of any particular case. This section will examine the various general approaches taken by courts considering whether late fees should be classified as interest. n24

The general rule is that late fees are excluded from interest because the fees are avoidable or, more precisely, are contingent on the performance of the borrower. n25 The logic of this common law approach is questionable in many consumer credit cases because the late payment is often not so much a matter of the borrower's voluntary decision as one of economic necessity. n26

A second justification for the imposition of late fees is that such fees compensate creditors for expenses incurred when payments are made late, such as dunning costs n27 and loss of use of the principal which was due.

Statutes which govern late fees are generally more advantageous for consumers than this general common law rule. First, the limits of the permissible fees are often specified, and late fees will clearly be interest to the extent that they exceed the statutory limit. n28

Second, fees assessed prior to the expiration of statutory grace periods constitute interest. n29 Third, statutes governing late payment fees may contain other requirements in addition to capping the amount of the fee. Failure to meet those requirements may also give rise to a usury claim. A late fee may also be challengeable under contract or other theories. Finally, not all statutes which regulate lender fees permit any exclusion of late fees from interest. Courts in several states have determined that late fees fall within statutory definitions of interest in the absence of an express statutory exception. n30

This analysis may be clouded by recent developments regarding interstate banking and deregulation and rate exportation. To help the banks, the legislatures in states wanting to attract this industry have declared non-interest charges, including late fees, to be interest. n31 The cases considering late fees as interest in this context of interstate rate exportation and preemption have found them to be so, n32 as have bank regulatory agencies. n33

These cases have arisen in context of the laws of a deregulated state (the lender's home state) preempting the consumer protection laws of a regulated state (the borrower's home state), so it is the consumers who have lost by classifying late fees as interest in these cases. n34

[3] Payments for Third Party Services

Third party payments may cover a myriad of services: brokers' fees, appraisal fees, recording fees, credit insurance, inspection fees, and attorneys' fees, to name but a few. Case law and statutes generally exclude reasonable, bona fide third party payments from interest on credit contracts. n35 Despite this general rule, hidden interest issues arise in several important situations.

One example of a third party payment which has frequently been revealed to be usurious hidden interest is the commission charged by a loan broker. Fees to bona fide third party brokers are valid third party expenses in most jurisdictions n36 and are expressly regulated in some states. n37 However, numerous courts have held that brokers' fees are interest on a loan when the broker is an agent of the lender and, hence, is not a bona fide third party. n38

Attorneys whose clients have been assessed brokers' fees should closely examine the transaction. As with other third party payments, fees which are collected when no third party exists, which are never forwarded to a third party, or which are kicked back to the lender, are interest. n39 Furthermore, illegal broker's fees exacted with the knowledge of the lender have been treated as interest. n40 When broker fees have been paid to apparently independent brokers, attorneys should examine the relationship between the broker and lender for a possible agency relationship. n41

Advocates should also note that the Real Estate Settlement Procedure Act ("RESPA"), now applicable to most home equity loans, has an anti-kickback provision which may be implicated in some broker-lender arrangements. n42

Another common third party payment is for attorneys' services. If the recovery is authorized by contract, most states allow creditors to obtain a judgment for the attorneys' fees that they incurred in collecting a debt from a defaulting debtor. n43 There are limits on the recovery but there seems to be general agreement that contractual provisions for the payment of attorneys' fee in the event of default are exempt from usury restrictions unless they are somehow used as a "cloak" for usury. n44

Charges for the services of an attorney in preparing loan papers or searching real estate title are quite different from charges associated with debt collection. Some courts have ruled that a creditor's charge for legal fees incurred in loan preparation are merely overhead expense and, as such, are interest subject to usury law. n45 Other courts have been more lenient with creditors and have ruled that such attorneys' fees, if paid to a bona fide third party attorney, n46 are valid third party expenses which may be charged to the borrower without being treated as interest. n47 As with other types of closing costs, applicable statutes may dictate the appropriate treatment of attorneys' fees for this type of service. n48

[4] Interest Hidden When Principal Amount Is Overstated

Another way of hiding interest is to exaggerate the amount of principal which a borrower has received. Undoubtedly the most common technique used to inflate loan principal is the inclusion of various fees in the face amount of the note signed by the borrower.

At least two usury issues are raised by such transactions. First, as discussed above, a consumer's attorney must question whether the fees assessed by the creditor fall within the definition of interest under state law.

In addition, if a lender finances hidden interest fees, this means that the face amount of the note signed by the borrower includes interest charges. Since the lender charges interest on the full face amount of the notice including the hidden interest, it will also be assessing interest on interest or compounding.

The presence of compounding raises issues beyond the legality of the effective interest rate charged by the lender. Courts traditionally frown upon the use of compound interest, and merely the presence of compounding may be treated as a contract overcharge in some jurisdictions, even when the usury ceiling has not been breached. n49

Also, if the insurance is required as part of the credit transaction, the fee may be illegal under state law for this reason. n50

A fairly novel transaction in which interest may be hidden by the exaggeration of the loan principal is the "wraparound" mortgage. A wraparound mortgage is defined as a junior mortgage which secures a promissory note, the face amount of which is equal to the sum of: (1) the principal balance remaining on the existing senior mortgage; and (2) any additional money advanced by the wraparound lender. n51 Wraparound mortgages may be structured either as purchase money mortgages or as mortgages executed for refinancing purposes. n52 Litigation testing the validity of wraparound mortgages under state usury laws is quite sparse. n53

In general, the validity of wraparound mortgages will probably be determined by the definitions of principal and interest in individual usury statutes. n54 Wraparounds have been expressly validated in some state codes, n55 but may be prohibited by the provisions of some second mortgage statutes. The terms of the individual statutes should be carefully examined to determine whether the lender may include any sum not actually advanced to the borrower in the principal of the note.

Interest can also be hidden in the price of goods purchased on credit. At least, in theory, the concealment of interest in an inflated cash price should cause a usury violation as well, if the true interest rate exceeds the statutory limit. However, several obstacles to an assertion of usury exist, including the traditional "time price" exception to the state usury laws, which means that a state has no usury ceiling for bona fide sales of goods and a seller can charge whatever time price it can extract, short of unconscionability.

A special method by which interest costs may be hidden in the sale price of goods or real estate is the use of "seller's points," which occur most frequently in real estate transactions when the real estate seller, typically a builder, pays points to a bank or other lender in return for the lender's commitment to issue "low-interest" loans to qualified buyers. Such an arrangement might appear to be a boon to buyers and, indeed, seller's points would not be deceptive or usurious if the seller did not recover its expense by raising the selling price of the real estate. In real life, however, seller's points are frequently, if not invariably, just a sales gimmick whose cost is passed on to the buyer in the form of an inflated sale price. n56

The main problem is that under the current version of Regulation Z, discounts for payments by cash instead of credit must be disclosed as finance charges for TILA purposes, n57 while seller's points need not be, even if the points are passed on to the buyer. n58

The open conflict between the seller's points loophole and the requirement that discounts for cash payment be disclosed as a finance charge has yet to be litigated. In light of this uncertainty, the validity of seller's points under state usury laws becomes a particularly important issue. n59

[5] Hidden Interest in "Non-Credit" Transactions

Perhaps the ultimate way to hide interest in a credit contract is to conceal the very fact that credit is being extended. This section presents a non-exhaustive discussion of common "non-credit" hidden interest transactions.

One of the egregious forms of hidden interest occurs when a debtor, seeking to obtain or refinance a mortgage, ends up selling his or her home instead. The courts have recognized that such "sales" with repurchase options may, in fact, be usurious loans and that the deeds at issue should be construed to be equitable mortgages. n60 A sale/repurchase or sale/leaseback transaction involving personal property instead of real estate also may be a loan structured to evade usury laws. n61 If the sale/leaseback transaction contains a terminable at will clause, the deal may be covered by the state rent-to-own law which could raise claims and defenses if the lender did not comply with it.

Even if the transaction is a true sales/leaseback, state law may provide special protections. n62

A new phenomenon has surfaced in a growing number of states--the "car pawn." These transactions are really small loans which have been seen with effective (and, often undisclosed) APRs of as much as 900%. A good description of the scheme is contained in Pendleton v. American Title Brokers, Inc., n63 the first case to consider it. In brief, the borrower pledged his or her car in exchange for a small loan, and at the same time, executed a leaseback for the pledged car, making weekly payments on both the loan and the lease. With credit insurance, and an undisclosed processing fee, the weekly payments resulted in an APR of 977%. The court found that Alabama's consumer credit code applied and that the transaction was subject to the Truth in Lending Act. n64

In the wake of adverse judicial rulings, the industry in some states sought a legislative stamp of approval for title pawns. n65 A few states have sought to limit auto title "pawns" by explicitly requiring that the "pawnbroker" take possession of the vehicle or by excluding pawns made solely against the title of a vehicle. n66 Some municipalities have responded to the growth of the auto title lending industry by enacting their own more protective regulation or through zoning actions. n67

In 2000, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency issued a warning to national banks about safety and soundness and other risks associated with this type of lending as banks decide whether to partner with local entities to fund these loans. n68 The Letter advises banks to tread carefully given the potential for claims based on the fact that such loans may be based upon the value of the collateral and not on the consumer's ability to repay; lenders fail to rebate the net proceeds to the borrower upon the sale of the car; and some lenders fail to treat these transactions as loans, thus running afoul of the Truth in Lending Act.

A more common method of restructuring a credit transaction is to transform it into a lease. This is a common commercial practice, and a vast body of case law considers whether business transactions are secured credit sales or true leases. n69

In a consumer context, retailers have few reasons to structure credit sales as leases except to attempt to avoid the disclosures, interest ceilings, and repossession limitations imposed by the Federal Truth in Lending Act, state retail installment sales acts, and the Uniform Commercial Code, respectively. n70 Therefore, advocates who are examining purported leases under which ownership may ultimately be transferred to the consumer should be particularly suspicious of the possibility that violations of these statutes may exist.

Perhaps the most important example of the use of leases to conceal consumer credit sales is the "Rent-to-Own" (RTO) leasing industry.

In brief, RTO transactions attempt to circumvent numerous consumer protection statutes and, therefore, can be attacked on many different levels. Leases under which the lessee agrees to pay a sum equal to or exceeding the value of goods, and under which the lessee acquires an option to purchase for nominal consideration, may be credit sales requiring Truth in Lending disclosures. n71 Such leases may also constitute security interests under the UCC and may thus be subject to UCC repossession limitations. n72 Similarly, RTO transactions may be held to constitute security agreements rather than true leases under the Bankruptcy Code, thereby giving bankrupt consumers greater rights than normal lessees. n73 Last, but not least, RTO agreements may be subject to usury limitations under state installment sales acts. n74 Statutory definitions are very important in these cases, so advocates must parse the applicable language carefully in comparing it to their own statute and applying precedent from other states. n75

There is some indication that automobile dealers may structure car sales as rent-to-own deals. In this instance, the state RTO act and the motor vehicle installment sales act ("MVRISA") should be carefully reviewed. States may not have specifically exempted RTO deals from their MVRISAs which often cover leases. In those instances, it is likely that the MVRISA applies and was violated.

Somewhat surprisingly, consumers have met with only mixed success in challenging RTO contracts under most of these theories. The reason is that most consumer and commercial statutes were written to regulate sales transactions while recognizing the legitimacy of short term, true chattel leases as an independent class of transactions. However, this is not to say that RTO agreements are invariably beyond the reach of installment sales acts. n76

[6] Tax Refund Schemes as "Non-Credit" Transactions with Hidden Interest

[a] Background; Assignment of Tax Refunds as Disguised Credit

Another form of "non-credit" transaction that may be a disguised loan containing hidden interest is the assignment of a taxpayer's expected tax refund in return for an immediate cash payment; though this scheme has evolved into the now more prevalent Refund Anticipation Loans ("RALs"). n77 These RALs do not disguise their character as credit, though they frequently involve hidden interest. The assignments typically take the form of a power of attorney and, as with other disguised credit transactions, frequently conceal extremely high rates of interest. For example, the assignment of a $100 tax refund for a $60 cash payment produces a $40 profit in a relatively short period of time. Depending upon the precise length of time between the $60 payment and the lender's receipt of the refund, the effective annual interest rate may reach 1,700 percent.

Whether such a transaction is subject to usury law depends on whether it is viewed as the sale of a chose in action owned by the taxpayer or as a loan. Generally, it is permissible to sell notes or other obligations at a discount without the interference of usury ceilings, n78 so long as the seller is not the maker of the note. n79

The problem with the view of a tax refund assignment as a sale of a chose in action is that it ignores the basic obligation of a court in a usury case to look beyond the legal formalities of a transaction and to examine its substance. The substance of the tax refund transaction is that the taxpayer, who needs money immediately, obtains that money from another party such as a tax return preparer, and that the other party receives in return a larger payment at a later date. If that larger payment were made directly by the taxpayer, the transaction would be a textbook loan. To say that the transaction is not a loan because the later payment does not literally come from the taxpayer's pocket is to ignore the reality of the transaction.

Authorities that have been willing to look at the substance of assignment transactions have concluded that the transactions are loans which may violate usury laws. n80

Attorneys whose clients have been the victims of tax refund assignment schemes should closely examine the transaction for terms which reveal the true extension of credit. For example, if the taxpayer is in any way liable to the "assignee" if the refund is smaller than expected, the argument that the transaction is merely a sale of a chose in action would be rebutted. n81 Consumers' attorneys should also consider potential liability under disclosure statutes n82 or under statutes forbidding deceptive trade practices if the purported assignee in any way conceals the nature or terms of the transaction. n83

[b] Refund Anticipation Loans (RALs)

Some major lenders now offer "Refund Anticipation Loans," thus dropping the pretense that no credit is involved. n84 The refund is deposited directly into an "account" the borrower sets up as part of the transaction at a bank affiliated with the creditor. Commonly, the note is formally designated a demand note, and the creditor's compensation is a flat fee.

Since these loans typically are made through tax preparers, the consumer will pay a tax preparation fee, an electronic filing fee, and, often, a fee to cash the refund loan proceeds on top of the RAL fee to the lender. These fees can be substantial, as much as $267 per loan.

While there has been activity as to the Truth in Lending implications of this arrangement, n85 there has been little challenge under usury laws. Inasmuch as the effective interest rates on these short-term loans could be from 76% to 774%, exploration of the issue may be warranted, though usury claims against bank lenders have run into the federal preemption/exportation snag. n86

Several states have now addressed tax refund loans through legislation. Connecticut prohibits RAL facilitators (i.e., those who broker or process RALs) from facilitating a RAL over 60% APR and imposes a fine of $500 per violation. n87 Illinois regulates the tax preparer not the lender, but it only imposes limited disclosure requirements. n88 California added RAL regulation in 2006. n88.1 Among other things, these provisions address advertising, disclosure of fee schedules, non-English translations of the contracts, untying the tax preparation from getting a RAL, and information about the speed a customer can expect to get a refund without getting a RAL. Other states that impose disclosure rules include: Minnesota, Nevada, North Carolina, Oregon, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin. n88.2 New York City, San Antonio, and Seattle have passed ordinances dealing primarily with disclosure. n88.3

Aside from usury issues, borrowers can raise a myriad of other state law claims, particularly against the tax preparer, for example, breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, negligent misrepresentation, UDAP, breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, civil conspiracy, and The Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"). n89 Courts have split on whether to dismiss or grant summary judgment on claims alleging breach of fiduciary duty and breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing. n90 A blow to class actions against H&R Block occurred when they were abruptly snuffed out by a controversial $25 million global settlement in Zawikowski v. Beneficial National Bank. n91 The Seventh Circuit, however, overturned the approval of the settlement. The court held that the district court judge abused his discretion in approving the settlement and sent the case back to the district court with the requirement that the case be assigned to a different judge. n92 On remand, the district court rejected the settlement on the basis that the class counsel who negotiated the settlement were inadequate representatives for the plaintiff class. n93 Subsequently, the district court permitted a nationwide class action to go forward on a RICO claim, plus a breach of contract claim against Household alone. n94 Active duty servicemembers and their families are now protected against high cost RALs. The John Warner Defense Authorization Act of 2007, also known as the Military Lending Act (MLA), caps rates for loans to the military at 36% APR including fees and insurance premiums. n94.1 The Department of Defense issued regulations that include RALs as one of three loan products covered by the new federal protections. The regulations, effective October 1, 2007, cap interest rates for loans secured by expected tax refunds at 36% annual interest, which includes all fees associated with extending credit ("military APR"). Thus the "Refund Account" fee charged by RAL lenders for the dummy account used to repay the loan must be included in the military APR.

[7] Payday Loans/Check Advancement Loans

[a] The Lenders and the Loans Described

A fast growing segment of the "fringe credit" market is "payday loans," small, short-term unsecured loans with usually high fees, primarily targeted to consumers who do not have access to tradition sources for small loans.

Payday loans go by a variety of names, including "deferred presentment," "cash advances," "deferred deposits," or "check loans." They all work like this: the consumer provides the lender a live or a post-dated check written on his or her bank account for the amount borrowed plus a fee. The fee is stated as either a percentage of the check or loan amount or in a dollar amount. This fee translates into annual percentage rates typically not less than 390% and averaging close to 500%, though advocates and credit code enforcement agencies have noted rates of 1300% to 7300%. n95 The check is then held for one to four weeks (usually until the customer's payday), at which time the consumer redeems the check by paying the face amount, allows the check to be cashed, or pays another fee to extend the loan.

The largest segment of the industry consists of storefronts that provide only one product: payday loans. The leading examples as of 2001 include Advance America, CNG (Cash'n Go) Financial, and Check Into Cash. Other payday lenders offer other products as well, such as pawn loans and check cashing services. The largest of these "full-service" lenders include Ace Cash Express (a thousand locations in 29 states), Dollar Financial (244 stores in 12 states), and First Cash Financial Services (160 outlets in 11 states).

[b] Types of Abuses

The abuses occur in the making and collection of payday loans in a variety of ways. Cash-strapped consumers rarely have the ability to repay the entire loan when their payday arrives because that leaves little or nothing on which to live until the next paycheck. Lenders then encourage consumers to rollover or refinance one payday loan with another. The result is that the consumer pays another round of charges and fees and obtains no additional cash in return. Some consumers end up renewing their loans ten to twelve times before they can pay off the loan. n96

Further, payday lenders often threaten to use the criminal system to collect these debts or routinely file criminal charges when a check is returned for insufficient funds. The fact that the lender holds a borrowers check makes the collection process easier and more reliable than when consumers only sign a promissory note to repay.

Many payday lenders fail to give Truth In Lending disclosures which makes it impossible to understand the true cost of these loans. Even when TILA disclosures are given, they are frequently inaccurate.

Finally, payday lenders in usury cap states disguise these transactions, claiming that they are not making loans. In Texas, for example, the two main subterfuges presently used are "sale-leaseback" transactions and "cash-back ad sales." n97 In the sale-leaseback scam, the lender "buys" an item of personal property from the consumer, for example, a television, and "leases" it back for a "rental payment" which is due in two weeks. In cash-back ad sales, the consumer must "buy" an advertisement of one line for every $100 borrowed and pay an "ad fee" of $33 per $100 (translating to an APR of 858%). In both scenarios, the lender requires a signed check just in case the consumer fails to make the payment in two weeks hence.

[c] State Regulation of Payday Lending

Whether payday loans and the accompanying abuses violate a panoply of state and federal laws often depends, in the first instance, on the state of the law in the state where the loan transaction took place. n98 The states fall into three categories.

Category one: Twelve states, the District of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands require payday lenders to comply with state law, commonly a small loan or criminal usury law, which contain usury caps ranging from 24% to 36%, including fees. n99 These laws typically contain extensive provisions specifying the maximum loan amount, the maximum interest rate and permitted charges, the penalties for the charging of excessive interest and other violations, on other requirements. Since the allowable interest rates and fees are substantially below that which the payday industry charges, the lenders in these states are usually operating illegally by ignoring the small loan law. It is in these states where the industry has the greatest incentive to disguise the transaction.

Category two: The small loan laws of one state and of Puerto Rico permit payday lenders to operate and charge any interest rate or fee which the parties to the loan agree to pay. The lenders in these states usually must comply with other provisions of the state's small loan act, however. n100 lending, usually in derogation of a protective usury statute. n101 Generally, these laws require either licensing or registration. Some mandate that the lenders put up a bond and/or maintain a certain level of net assets or worth. They typically specify a maximum term and maximum amount of the loan and fix the interest rate or fees to be charged.

Category three: Thirty-seven states have enacted industry-backed laws or regulations specifically authorizing payday

Where payday loans are authorized in category-three states, many obligate the lender to provide a written agreement to the consumer. About half of these states prohibit rollovers, i.e., the refinancing or repaying of one such loan with another, at which time the consumer incurs another round of charges. (Many payday lenders avoid this prohibition by refinancing the loan rather than renewing it.) Others set a maximum number of such loans that a consumer may have outstanding at any one time. Additionally, most states create some type of criminal or administrative penalties. However, only seven states provide for some type of limited private right of action allowing the consumer to obtain relief against the lender. Only a small number prohibit the lender from threatening to file or filing criminal charges against a consumer as a mechanism to collect on the debt. Finally, in seven of these states, only check cashers are allowed to make payday loans. On the other hand, several states expressly prohibit check cashers from accepting post-dated checks, making loans, or failing to immediately deposit the check for payment. n102

[d] Legal Claims

The first line of defense raised by payday lenders when sued in states where such loans are illegal is to claim that the transaction is really not a loan, but is rather the deferred presentment of a check. In category-one states, the courts have uniformly pierced this smokescreen to hold that the transaction is, in substance, a loan. n103 Several consequences flow from this fundamental finding. The state usury law is violated because the usury cap is exceeded (often by more than 100 times), and also, in small loan states, licensing and other requirements are ignored. Payday companies routinely fail to give Truth In Lending disclosures because of the pretense that the arrangement is not a loan. n104

In addition, several courts have addressed the viability of a RICO claim and ruled favorably. n105 In the payday loan context, the claim arises where the state usury law is violated and the amount of interest charged or collected exceeds twice the cap. n106 Violating RICO is particularly significant for recovery purposes because the act allows the consumer to hold the individuals liable as well as the company as an entity.

If the lender threatens or uses the criminal bad check law to collect the debt, such behavior may violate the state unfair or deceptive trade practices act. Giving a post-dated check is not passing a "bad" check, because the lender knows the consumer does not have sufficient funds in the checking account at the time of the loan to cover the amount of the cash advanced. n107 Such conduct could also violate state fair debt collection practices acts that apply to creditors as collectors (and the federal act where the collector is a third party or attorney). n108

State federal credit repair laws may provide additional remedies in the payday lending context. Typically, these laws require registration, bonding, disclosures, and a right to cancel. Almost all offer a private cause of action, often with minimum damages, punitive damages, and attorney fees. Significantly, most of these state statutes cover organizations that assist or offer to assist consumers in obtaining extensions of credit. n109 Local storefronts who partner with banks to assist the customer in obtaining credit, for example, should be covered. The federal Credit Repair Organizations Act may have a more limited use in the payday lending context, unless the creditor expressly or impliedly claims that the payday loan will improve the customer's credit record. n110

Viable defenses to payday lending exist even in states whose laws expressly permit these transactions. Truth In Lending disclosures are often inaccurate, or may be presented in such a way so as to violate the requirement that the disclosures be clear and conspicuous and separately segregated n111 The check itself may be security for the loan and must be properly disclosed as such. n112

In addition, the doctrine of unconscionability can be used to challenge the amount of fees and interest that is charged in states with no caps. Finally, noncompliance with payday loan laws can arguably void the loan if only criminal penalties are imposed. Violation of the act may also trigger UDAP liability.

Payday lenders, like many finance companies, are placing arbitration clauses in their contracts. In those states where payday loans are illegal because they violate the usury cap, the courts may refuse to enforce arbitration on the theory that the underlying transaction, the loan, is unenforceable or unconscionable. n113

Payday loans made over the Internet present special problems. The lenders may behave as though they are not subject to the laws of the state where the consumer resides. The loan agreements likely include choice of law provisions that identifies another state or country's law as governing the transaction. Despite these clauses, state agencies often take the position that the consumer's home state law applies. n113.1 This means that the licensing and usury or payday laws apply, which the Internet lenders would have invariably violated.

[e] Federal and State Laws Protecting Military Personnel and Dependents from Payday Loans

On September 30, 2006, Congress enacted legislation that caps the interest rate on loans to military servicemembers and their dependents at 36%. The provision (the "Talent/Nelson Amendment") was added by Senators Jim Talent (R-Mo.) and Bill Nelson (D-Fla.) as an amendment to the Sen. John Warner National Defense Authorization Act, n113.2 which President Bush signed in October 2006.

The statute gives the Department of Defense (DOD) authority to promulgate regulations and to define key terms. DOD did so on August 31, 2007. n113.3 Both the Act and the regulations went into effect on October 1, 2007.

The regulations define payday lending covered under the Act to include only closed-end credit, with a term of 91 days or less, and an amount financed of $2,000 or less. The borrower, contemporaneously with receipt of funds, must provide a check or other payment instrument or debit authorization that is deferred for more than one day. n113.4

The Act contains a provision that preserves the ability of states to pass additional measures to protect the military from abusive credit practices so long as they are not inconsistent with the federal law. n113.5 Several states have passed special protections for members of the military, including: Arkansas, Arizona, Georgia, and Virginia. However, one state attorney general issued a letter in which he opined that the federal act preempts applicable state law when the two conflict, in this case over whether a payday loan can be made to military personnel even at the 36% cap. n113.6 The attorney general answered in the negative because the federal law prohibits the lender from using a check or other method of access to a bank account as security for the loan. Therefore, no payday loan at any price can be extended to military personnel.

[8] Income Buyers

Another form of high-cost lending occurs when companies buy the rights to certain future income sources in exchange for immediate cash payment. These income sources may include a stream-of-government benefits, n114 actual or potential settlements of legal actions, n115 and lottery winnings. n116 The annualized interest rates on these loans have been reported to be as high as 280%. n117

Most times, lenders will not characterize these transactions as loans, but will call them an assignment, sale of a chose in action, or similar name. n118 Such characterizations may be harder to challenge if the income source is contingent upon an event, such as potential settlement of a lawsuit. n119 For streams of income that are not contingent, these transactions may present not only usury claims, but claims under state UDAP statutes. n120 Finally, note that the terms of the income source may prohibit assignment. n121

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawFederal ActsGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryGeneral OverviewBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryInterestBanking LawNational BanksInterest & UsuryUsury LitigationContracts LawDebtor & Creditor Relations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.05[3] infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Eskridge, One Hundred Years of Ineptitude: The Need for Mortgage Rules Consonant with the Economic and Psychological Dynamics of the Home Sale and Loan Transaction, 70 Va. L. Rev. 1083, 1092 (1984).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Matter of Ferris, 764 F.2d 1475 (11th Cir. 1985) (document preparation fee not interest in Georgia); Fikes v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan of Anchorage, 533 P.2d 251 (Alaska 1975) ; Harris v. Guar. Fin. Corp., 244 Ark. 218, 424 S.W.2d 355 (1968) ; Klett v. Security Acceptance Corp., 38 Cal. 2d 770, 242 P.2d 873 (1952) ; Collins v. Union Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 662 P.2d 610 (Nev. 1983) . See also Anderson v. Chainani (In re Kemper), 263 B.R. 773 (E.D. Tex. 2001) (summary judgment inappropriate on issue of whether a "consulting fee" is interest as parties dispute whether any services were actually performed); Eskridge, One Hundred Years of Ineptitude: The Need For Mortgage Rules Consonant With the Economic and Psychological Dynamics of the Home Sale and Loan Transaction, 70 Va. L. Rev. 1083, 1096 (1984). But cf. Pechinski v. Astoria Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 238 F. Supp. 2d 640 (S.D.N.Y.) , aff'd, 345 F.3d 78 (2d Cir. 2003) ("assignment fee" constituting 0.875% of outstanding mortgage balance was not finance charge under TILA, despite fact that bank conceded fee bore little relationship to cost of assignment; court declined to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims after dismissing TILA claim).

(n5)Footnote 5. See also Johnston v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 659 F.2d 865 (8th Cir. 1981) (applying Arkansas law); In re General Am. Communications Corp., 63 B.R. 534 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986) (when creditor obtained loans from bank and reloaned funds to borrower, the interest paid by the creditor to the bank was overhead expense which could not be passed on to borrower except as interest). Some state statutes do permit lenders additional fees to cover their overhead expenses. See, e.g., Henley v. Cameron Auto Pawn (In re Henley), 228 B.R. 425 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1998) (Tennessee auto title pawn law permits lender to charge 2% interest plus "customary fee to defray the ordinary costs of operating a title-pledge office"; in this case, lender permitted to charge "customary fee" of $432 per month on loan of $2,400; court noted that generally Tennessee law indicated that lender charges should not include overhead, but the auto title pawn statute was legislatively created exception).

(n6)Footnote 6. Motzer Dodge Jeep Eagle, Inc. v. Ohio Atty. Gen., 95 Ohio App. 3d 183, 642 N.E.2d 20 (1994) (fee violated Ohio UDAP act where delivery and handling fee, supposedly optional, was actually mandatory, where dealer failed to itemize the activities performed for the fee and where manufacturer actually reimbursed for some of the fees). See also Dressel v. Ameribank, 635 N.W.2d 328 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001) , appeal pending (entity which charged a fee for preparing or filling in the blanks on legal documents was engaged in the unauthorized practice of law, reversing the trial court's dismissal of a UDAP claim predicated upon the charging of an illegal fee). Note that the charging of a fee that is otherwise illegal may have Truth In Lending implications depending upon whether that fee is treated as a finance charge. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 3.9.6.2.3 (6th ed. 2007) (document preparation fees charged in a real estate secured loan must be bona fide and reasonable to be disclosed as part of the amount financed; if fee is illegal, it cannot be either bona fide or reasonable).

(n7)Footnote 7. If the fee is imposed on credit customers and not loan customers, it should be included in the finance charge. See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 3.6.5 (6th ed. 2007). See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 3.9.6.2.3 (6th ed. 2007) (document preparation fees charged in a real estate secured loan must be bona fide and reasonable to be disclosed as part of the amount financed; if fee is illegal, it cannot be either bona fide or reasonable).

(n8)Footnote 8. 786 N.E.2d 279 (Ind. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See generally Eskridge, One Hundred Years of Ineptitude: The Need For Mortgage Rules Consonant With the Economic and Psychological Dynamics of the Home Sale and Loan Transaction, 70 Va. L. Rev. 1083, 1093 (1984). Miner v. Beneficial Mortgage Co. of Kan. (In re Miner), 369 B.R. 655, 659 n.4 (D. Kan. 2007) (agreeing that one point equals 1% of the loan amount but characterizing "points" to mean "discount points").

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fikes v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan of Anchorage, 533 P.2d 251 (Alaska 1975) (among other considerations listed, the variation of a "loan fee" with the amount or risk of a loan suggests interest).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., United-Bilt Homes, Inc. v. Teague, 245 Ark. 132, 432 S.W.2d 1 (1968) ; VanderWeyst v. First State Bank of Benson, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn. 1988) (origination fee is interest if not related to expenses; affidavit of bank officer simply making that assertion not adequate to establish that; case remanded for factual determination), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S. Ct. 269, 102 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1988) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Smith v. Anderson, 801 F.2d 661 (4th Cir. 1986) (applying Virginia law); Perry v. Stewart Title Co., 756 F.2d 1197 (5th Cir. 1985) (front end charges were interest, but "spreading" of interest avoids usury violation); Johnston v. Citizens Bank & Trust, 659 F.2d 865 (8th Cir. 1981) (applying Arkansas law). See also Kidd v. Delta Funding Corp., 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 29 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Feb. 22, 2000) (processing fee which was not identified as a permitted "application" fee violates N.Y. Banking regulation for motion to dismiss purposes). But see Olympic Coast Inv., Inc. v. Wright (In re Wright), 256 B.R. 626 (Bankr. D. Mont. 2000) (in commercial case, court held origination fee is not interest, or at least not usurious, using the spreading doctrine).

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Kan. Code § 16a-2-401(9)(3 points authorized in real estate loans; 2 points on other closed-end loans); Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 12-401. Consumers' attorneys should check statutes which permit the exclusion of a percentage fee from interest to see how this fee may be calculated. Equitably, fees should be calculated as a percentage of the sum received by the borrower. Yet, lenders often collect a percentage of every sum that they finance, including previously assessed fees and the points themselves. Depending on the precise statutory language, this practice of assessing fees on fees may well be usurious. See In re Bogan, 281 F. Supp. 242 (W.D. Tenn. 1968) ; Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 12-107.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Va. Code Ann. § 6.1-330.72 (Michie 1988 Replacement Volume) (broker's fee by lender payable as part of "loan fee" or interest); Ind. Code § 24-4.5-3-202(1)(h)(i) (2% origination fee authorized unless document preparation fee imposed).

(n15)Footnote 15. United Cos. Lending Corp. v. Autrey, 723 So. 2d 617 (Ala. 1998) , reh'g denied, (Oct. 16, 1999) (points equal finance charge and excess over 5% cap violates Alabama's Mini-Code; issue arose in context of resolving which of two possible remedy provisions apply); see Smith v. Anderson, 801 F.2d 661 (4th Cir. 1986) (applying Virginia law); Bandas v. Citizens State Bank, 412 N.W.2d 818 n.1 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987) (controlling statute designates permitted charges which are not interest; loan origination fee is not listed, therefore, is interest), rev'd and remanded on other grounds sub nom. VanderWeyst v. First State Bank, 425 N.W.2d 803 (Minn. 1988) (different statute controlled transaction), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 943, 109 S. Ct. 369, 102 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1988) .

(n16)Footnote 16. E.g., St. Petersburg Bank & Trust Co. v. Hamm, 414 So. 2d 1071 (Fla. 1982) ; People v. Cent. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 46 N.Y.2d 41, 412 N.Y.S.2d 815, 385 N.E.2d 555 (1978) . But cf. Brazosport Bank v. Oak Park Townhouses, 837 S.W.2d 652 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) (evidence inconclusive that up-front fee was a bona fide commitment fee or authorized interest, so court upheld trial finding that it was an unauthorized fee for making loan; appellate court held appropriate penalty under relevant statute was disallowance of fee rather than a usury violation), rev'd on other grounds, 851 S.W.2d 189 (Tex. 1993) . See generally Annot., 93 A.L.R.3d 1156 (1979) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Altherr v. Wilshire Mortgage Corp., 104 Ariz. 59, 448 P.2d 859 (1968) (reasonable commitment fee); First Am. Bank & Trust v. Windjammer Time Sharing Resort, Inc., 483 So. 2d 732 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.

1986) (reasonableness depends on market conditions and industry practice; 20% commitment fee was clearly unreasonable when industry norm was between 1.5% and 5%).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Henslee v. Madison Guar. Sav. & Loan, 297 Ark. 183, 760 S.W.2d 842 (1988) ; First Nat'l Mortgage Co. v. Arkmo Lumber & Supply Co., 277 Ark. 298, 641 S.W.2d 31 (1982) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Pacific E. Corp. v. Gulf Life Holding Co., 902 S.W.2d 946 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1995) (where insurance company was a lender, question of fact whether life insurance policy required as collateral on life of a principal in a commercial loan was pretext for usury).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Darden v. Schussler, 154 Ala. 372, 45 So. 130 (1907) ; Curtiss Nat'l Bank of Miami Springs v. Solomon, 243 So. 2d 475 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1971) ; Standard Sav. Ass'n v. Greater New Canaan Missionary Baptist Church, 786 S.W.2d 774 (Tex. Ct. App. 1990) (payment of third party debt interest only when required as condition of making loan; it is a question of fact, though borrower's affidavit alone insufficient to warrant finding of usury on motion for summary judgment; stricter standard of proof required); Dodson v. Citizens State Bank of Dalhart, 701 S.W.2d 89 (Tex. Ct. App. 1986) (assumption of third party debt is interest only when it is a condition for the extension of credit). But cf. Victoria Bank & Trust Co. v. Brady, 811 S.W.2d 931 (Tex. 1991) (amount of third party debt owed to a different lender that borrower was required to assume is not interest; it was third party expense to protect priority as to creditor's security, which is not necessarily interest (note dissent)). See generally Annot., 31 A.L.R.3d 763 (1970) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Annot., 16 A.L.R.3d 475 (1967) (sharing earnings from property as usurious). See also Bagri v. Desai, 349 S.E.2d 309 (N.C. Ct. App. 1986) (loan for purchase of motel; profits from motel shared with lender). E.g., Jones v. Wells Fargo Bank, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 835 (Ct. App. 2003) (example of a "classic shared appreciation loan arrangement" in real estate investment context; no usury because California law exempted from usury cap national banks acting as a fiduciary for a trust).

(n22)Footnote 22. Compare Beavers v. Taylor, 434 S.W.2d 230 (Tex. Civ. App. 1968 writ ref'd n.r.e.) ("no interest" contract that gave lender a percentage of business' gross receipts was not usurious because payments were contingent on existence and quantity of any gross receipts), with Najarro v. SASI Int'l, Ltd., 904 F.2d 1002 (5th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1048, 111 S. Ct. 755, 112 L. Ed. 2d 775 (1991) (a contract is usurious if there is any contingency by which the lender can receive usurious interest). In First USA Mgmt., Inc. v. Esmond, 911 S.W.2d 100 (Tex. App. 1995) , rev'd on other grounds, 960 S.W.2d 625 (Tex. 1997) , the court reconciled the apparent conflict by noting that in Beavers, the sum which would be payable under the contract in the event of the contingency was uncertain, and would not necessarily have been usurious. By contrast, in Najarro, the amount of contingent interest written into the contract was usurious: if the contingency occurred, the amount payable would definitely be usurious.

(n23)Footnote 23. Even if late fees are considered to be interest, courts may apply the spreading doctrine to hold that the late fees do not make the loan usurious. Torres v. Overby, 2000 Tex. App. LEXIS 2493 (Tex. App. Apr. 17, 2000) . For a discussion of the spreading doctrine, which allows a court to ignore the fluctuations in the effective rate of return during the loan term and look at whether the actual charges exceed the permitted charges, see National Consumer Law Center, The Cost of Credit: Regulation, Preemption and Industry Abuses, § 4.6.5 (3rd ed. and Supp.).

(n24)Footnote 24. See § 6.07[2] infra, on statutory construction.

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Camilla Cotton Oil Co. v. Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., 257 F.2d 162 (5th Cir. 1958) ; Bunn v. Weyerhauser Co., 268 Ark. 445, 598 S.W.2d 54 (1980) (stating rule); Hayes v. First Nat'l Bank, 256 Ark. 328, 507 S.W.2d 701 (1974) (distinguishing late fees from extension fees); Harris v. Guar. Fin. Corp., 244 Ark. 218, 424 S.W.2d 355 (1968) ; O'Connor v. Televideo Sys., Inc., 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237 (6th Dist. 1990) ; Barbour v. Handlos Real Estate & Bldg. Corp., 152 Mich. App. 174, 393 N.W.2d 581 (1986) ; Alston v. Crown Auto, Inc., 224 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2000) ; Domizio v. Progressive County Mut. Ins. Co., 54 S.W.2d 867 (Tex. App. 2001)

