It is rare for a sophisticated lender to make a mortgage loan without it paying special attention to environmental matters. In many cases, lenders will require special agreements which only address environmental matters. Obviously, these provisions may be included in the loan agreement or the mortgage. However, in most cases the environmental agreements are designed to survive the satisfaction of the loan and the mortgage. Also, in some circumstances a lender may also provide that even if a loan is non-recourse, the owners of the borrower must personally indemnify the lender from environmental conditions. The following agreement does not provide for such a personal guaranty. The agreement addresses the more typical environmental conditions (i.e., pollution) and the existence of wetlands. Further, the agreement allows the borrower to use results of the reports that it conducted in its due diligence in preparation of purchasing the land as a benchmark. However, in such cases, the lender will usually want a reliance of the lender from the environmental inspection company. That is a letter directed to the lender stating that the lender can rely upon the reports, and that it will be liable to the lender for any defects contained in the reports.

FORM 22.141 Assignment of construction contract

COMMENT

As collateral for the construction loan, a prudent lender will take an assignment of all material construction contracts. As a result of the borrower defaults and the lender must attempt to complete the project, it has the right to enforce the construction contract and force the contract to complete the improvements for the benefit of the lender. This form could be modified to be used in connection with any other material contracts relating to the project (i.e., architect, engineer, etc.)

FORM

COLLATERAL ASSIGNMENT OF CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

THIS COLLATERAL ASSIGNMENT OF CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT is made this _____[day] day of _____[month], _____[year], by and between _____[name], a(n)
_____[state] _____[entity], whose business address is _____[address]
(hereinafter referred to as the "Assignor") and _____[name], a(n)
_____[state] _____[entity], whose business address is _____[address]
(hereafter referred to as the "Assignee").

WHEREAS, the Assignor is the owner under the Construction Contract described on Exhibit A (the "Construction Contract") between Assignor and _____[name] (the "Contractor"); and

WHEREAS, pursuant to a Construction Loan and Security Agreement of even date (the "Loan Agreement"), the Assignee has made available to the Assignor a credit facility in the amount of _____ Dollars

($ _____) (the "Loan"); and

WHEREAS, as a condition for the Assignee to make the Loan, the Assignor is required to collaterally assign its interest in the Construction Contract to Assignee;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein the Assignor and the Assignee agree as follows:

1. Assignment. As security for the payment and performance of all obligations and/or amounts due, or to become due, from the Assignor under the Loan Agreement or any of the other Loan Documents (as defined in the Loan Agreement), the Assignor does hereby sell, assign, convey and transfer unto the Assignee and grant to the Assignee a first lien on, and security interest in, all right, title and interest of the Assignor in and to the Construction Contract; provided, this Assignment is conditional and shall become absolute at the option of the Assignee only upon the occurrence of an Event of Default (as defined in the Loan Agreement). In the event of an Event of Default, the Assignee shall have the option of exercising its rights under this Assignment and the Assignee shall thereupon succeed to all of the Assignor's right, title and interest in and to the Construction Contract.

2. Representations and Warranties. The Assignor hereby represents and warrants to the Assignee that: (a) the Construction Contract is in full force and effect and binding upon the parties thereto; (b) neither the Assignor nor the Contractor are in default thereunder; (c) the Assignor has not heretofore assigned or otherwise disposed of the Construction Contract, or any interest of the Assignor therein, or any of the Assignor's rights respect thereto; and (d) this Assignment does not contravene or constitute a default under any provision of applicable law or contract, agreement, indenture, mortgage, financing or other instrument binding upon the Assignor.

3. Covenants. The Assignor hereby covenants and agrees that it will not, without the prior written consent of Assignee, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld, conditioned or delayed: (a) consent to any material modification or amendment of the Construction Contract; (b) waive or release any obligation of the Contractor thereunder or consent or agree to any act or omission to act on the part of the Contractor; (c) create or permit any lien, pledge, assignment, charge, encumbrance or security interest in or on, or with respect to the Construction Contract, nor will it sell, assign, convey, or otherwise dispose of any of its right, title or interest therein; or (d) allow or permit a default by it under the Construction Contract.

4. Appointment. The Assignor does hereby irrevocably constitute and appoint the Assignee its true and lawful attorney-in-fact with full and irrevocable power and authority in the place and stead of the Assignor and in the name of the Assignor, or the name of the Assignee or otherwise, for the purpose of carrying out the terms of this Assignment, to take any and all actions and to execute any and all instruments which may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of this Assignment.

5. No Assignee Liability. The Assignor expressly agrees that it will remain liable under the Construction Contract to perform all of the conditions and obligations therein provided to be observed by it, and neither this Assignment, nor the exercise by the Assignee of its rights hereunder, shall cause the Assignee to be under any obligation or liability with respect to the Construction Contract, or any other agreement for the performance or observance of the representations, warranties, conditions, covenants, agreements or terms of the Construction Contract or any agreement, unless expressly consented to in writing by the Assignee. Further, the Assignor and Assignee agree, and by executing the Agreement, Acknowledgment and Consent set forth below, the Contractor agrees, that in the event that the Assignee exercises its rights hereunder and seeks to enforce the Construction Agreement against Contractor, that Assignee will not be

(a) liable for any act or omission of Assignee; or

(b) subject to any offsets or defenses which the Contractor might have against the Assignee; or

(c) responsible for any defaults under the Construction Contract which accrue prior to the date that Assignee exercises its rights hereunder; or

(d) bound by any agreement or modification of the Construction Contract made without the prior written consent of the Assignee.

6. Miscellaneous

A. The Assignor agrees that it will execute and deliver to the Assignee any such documents and do such other acts and things that Assignee may reasonably request in order to further effect the purposes of this Assignment and that if Assignor fails to do so, Assignee may execute any of the foregoing pursuant to the power of attorney hereunder;

B. All rights, powers, remedies granted to the Assignee hereunder and under the Construction Contract, or under the Loan Documents, shall be cumulative, may be exercised singularly or concurrently, and shall not be exclusive of any rights or remedies provided by law.

FORM 22.142 Participation agreement

COMMENT

Illustrated here is a participation agreement pursuant to which the loan correspondent and the institutional permanent lender set forth their respective rights in the collateral. It will be noted that this agreement specifies, among other things, the participation amounts, the priority of liens, and the restrictions placed upon the junior participant.

FORM

THIS AGREEMENT is made this _____[day] of _____[month], _____[year], between _____[name], a(n) _____[state] _____[entity] ("Lender A"), and _____[name], a(n) _____[state] _____[entity] ("Lender B").

Recitals

Lender B holds a mortgage dated _____[month] _____[day], _____[year], executed by _____[name] ("Borrower") in favor of Lender B. The mortgage is in the principal sum of _____ Dollars ($ _____), and was recorded in the Office of the Clerk of _____[county], _____[state], on _____[month] _____[day], _____[year], in Book _____[number] of Mortgages, Page _____[number], to secure payment of a note for a like amount.

Lender A has agreed to purchase a senior participation in the above described note and mortgage, on condition that the note is endorsed and the mortgage is assigned to Lender A, and Lender B has agreed to retain a junior participation therein.

The note has been endorsed and the mortgage assigned to Lender A. Lender A is purchasing a senior participation and Lender B is retaining a junior participation in the note and mortgage.

The unpaid principal balance on the note is _____ Dollars ($_____).

Now, therefore, the parties agree as follows:

1. Participation and Priorities. The participation of Lender A in the ownership of the note and mortgage is in the sum of _____ Dollars ($_____) with interest thereon at the rate provided, and the participation of Lender B in the ownership of the note and mortgage is in the sum of the balance of such indebtedness with interest thereon at the rate provided. The participation of Lender A is, nevertheless, in all respects prior and superior to the participation of Lender B to the same extent and like effect as if Lender A held a note for the sum of _____ Dollars ($_____) secured by a first mortgage and the participation of Lender B is in all respects junior, inferior, subject, and subordinate to the participation of Lender A to the same extent and like effect as if Lender B held a separate note for the sum of the balance of the indebtedness secured by a second and subordinate mortgage.

2. Application of Payments. Lender B is authorized to collect payments called for in the note referred to in paragraph 1, so long as it remains servicing agent for Lender A. The same proportion of each payment that _____ Dollars ($_____) bears to the principal balance of the note as of the date of this agreement shall be applied to Lender A's participation and the balance applied to Lender B's participation.

In the event that, pursuant to the terms of the mortgage, the lien of the mortgage, insofar as it affects any of the _____ (_____) parcels of land within Borrower, is released or subordinated to the lien of a construction mortgage, then, of the consideration of

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase II

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase III

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase IV

paid for such release for subordination, the sum of _____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase II

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase III

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase IV

shall be applied to the balance of the participation of Lender A, and the sum of

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase II

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase III

_____ Dollars ($_____) for the release of Phase IV

shall be applied to the balance of the participation of Lender B.

In the event of a partial prepayment of principal other than in connection with a subordination of the lien on any parcel as provided above, Lender A shall have the right to apply such prepayment to either or both participations in any manner which it may determine.

3. Rights of Senior Participant. Lender A may retain in its possession the note, mortgage, and other instruments securing or evidencing the security of the loan, and may retain this loan in its own name and deal with any person, firm, or organization concerning such loan in the same manner and with the same effect as if it were the sole owner and no participating interest were outstanding. Lender A, without Lender B's consent, may perform or enforce any agreement, condition, or covenant of the note and mortgage in the same manner as if it were the sole owner and no participating interest were outstanding. Lender A shall have the right to accept additional security for the loan and release such additional security, grant partial release or partial subordinations, release persons liable, agree to substitution of liability, and accept full or partial prepayment of the loan with or without the collection of a prepayment charge, all without Lender B's consent.

4. Restrictions of Junior Participant. Lender B shall not modify, extend, assign, pledge, or hypothecate its junior participation nor grant any forbearance in connection therewith, without obtaining Lender A's prior written consent.

5. Rights Upon Foreclosure. In the event of a default in the payment of any principal or interest or in the performance of any agreement, condition, or covenant in the note or the mortgage or other instrument securing the loan, Lender A, at its option, may according to the terms of such note and mortgage accelerate the entire amount due on such note and mortgage and may foreclose such mortgage. Should Lender A institute foreclosure proceedings because of any such default, and judgment or decree of foreclosure be entered, Lender B, at its option, may purchase the rights of Lender A in the judgment for an amount equal to the balance of Lender A's participation plus interest, advances, and all expenses incurred in the foreclosure proceedings. This option may be exercised only after the judgment has been entered and prior to ten days before the date set for the foreclosure sale. If Lender B does not exercise such option, then Lender A may proceed with the foreclosure without protecting Lender B's interest.

In the event of a foreclosure sale, Lender A shall not be obligated to bid in excess of the indebtedness due it under the senior participation, including principal, interest, advances, and costs incurred in the foreclosure proceedings. The proceeds of any foreclosure sale, after the payment of the costs of the foreclosure sale, shall be applied to the total indebtedness due Lender A, and Lender B shall be entitled to share in the proceeds of sale only after the total indebtedness due Lender A has been paid. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall be construed to imply any obligation of Lender A to enter any bid in connection with any foreclosure sale.

In the event that the proceeds of a foreclosure sale are insufficient to satisfy the total indebtedness due Lender A, Lender A shall have the right to pursue a deficiency judgment, and all moneys realized as a result thereof shall be used to satisfy the indebtedness due Lender A before Lender B will have the right to share therein. In the event that the proceeds of a foreclosure sale are sufficient to satisfy the indebtedness due Lender A but not to satisfy the indebtedness due Lender B, Lender A shall on Lender B's request execute any assignment necessary to enable Lender B to pursue a deficiency judgment.

If Lender A is the purchaser at a foreclosure sale, then in the event of a subsequent sale of the property so acquired, Lender A shall not be obligated to account to Lender B, nor shall Lender B be entitled to share in the purchase price of such subsequent sale.

6. Binding Effect. This agreement shall be binding on and shall inure to the benefit of the parties hereto, their successors, and assigns.

7. Entire Agreement. This agreement supersedes all agreements previously made between the parties relating to its subject matter. There are no other understandings or agreements between them.

8. Notices. All notices under this agreement shall be in writing and delivered personally or mailed by certified mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the parties at their last known addresses.

9. Non-Waiver. No delay or failure by either party to exercise any right under this agreement, and no partial or single exercise of that right, shall constitute a waiver of that or any other right, unless otherwise expressly provided herein.

10. Headings. Headings in this agreement are for convenience only and shall not be used to interpret or construe its provisions.

11. Governing Law. This agreement shall be construed in accordance with and governed by the laws of the State of _____[state].

12. Counterparts. This agreement may be executed in two or more counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have caused this instrument to be duly executed the day and year first above written.

FORM 22.143 Legal opinion--attorney opinion for construction loan

COMMENT

With respect to a complex commercial real estate loan, many lenders will require the borrower to engage an attorney to provide a legal opinion. The required opinion can address many different subjects and issues. Frequently, the subject matter of the legal opinion is negotiated by borrower's counsel and lender's counsel.

Typically, a lender will require a minimum opinion that the loan is authorized and that the loan documents are enforceable under the laws in the jurisdiction where the project is located. The enforceability opinion may be critical to the lender if the lender and its counsel are not familiar with the laws in the state where the project is located. If this is the case, the lender will require borrower's local counsel to confirm that the documents are enforceable under applicable local law.

The opinion may also address issues such as recording requirements, zoning compliance, issuance of permits, and a disclosure by borrower's counsel of all pending matters being handled by borrower's counsel which might adversely affect borrower's ability to repay the loan or complete the project.

The following opinion is a typical opinion that borrower's counsel would be required to deliver at closing.

Chapter 22A REAL ESTATE SECURITIES
Part I. The Tax Background

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 22A.01

§ 22A.01 Summary of this Chapter

§ 22A.02 Real Estate Entities: An Overview. Real estate owned for business or investment purposes may be held in many different forms. These forms include sole proprietorships, tenancies in common, joint ventures, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and more specialized types of ownership. In selecting a form of ownership, the taxpayer must weigh the various tax advantages and disadvantages in choosing one type of ownership over another.

§ 22A.03 C Corporations. C corporations result in double taxation. Transfer of property to new or existing corporation solely in exchange for its stock or securities is tax-free, but nonrecognition provision applies only if transferors are in control of transferee corporation immediately after exchange. Corporations, other than closely-held or personal service corporations, are exempt from passive activity loss limitations.

§ 22A.04 S Corporations. S corporations, like C corporations, provide their shareholders with protection from the corporations' liabilities. Unlike C corporations, however, S corporations are not subject to double taxation. Instead, income is passed through directly to the shareholders. S corporations are restricted in the number and type persons they may have as shareholders.

§ 22A.05 Partnerships and Limited Liability Companies. Partnerships and limited liability companies offer tax advantages over corporations. Partnership or limited liability company entity is disregarded for tax purposes, so that only partners or members in individual capacities are liable for payment of income tax.

§ 22A.06 Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs): Qualification Requirements. A corporation, trust, or association may qualify for status as a real estate investment trust (REIT) if it meets Code requirements for organization, asset ownership, sources and distribution of income, and reporting, and makes a valid election. REIT status permits entity to be treated as a conduit for tax purposes, so that its income is passed through to shareholders without tax at entity level.

§ 22A.02 Real Estate Entities: An Overview

Real estate owned for business use or investment is owned in many different forms. The most common forms of ownership for real estate are sole proprietorships, tenancies in common, joint ventures, partnerships, limited liability companies, and corporations. More specialized types of ownership include real estate investment trusts, cooperatives, condominiums, and time sharing. In deciding what form of ownership to choose when investing in real estate for business or investment purposes, the taxpayer must be guided by both tax and nontax considerations.

The nontax factors relate in large part to conveniences in operation, marketability, liability, transferability of interests, and similar considerations.ⁿ¹ From a tax standpoint, each form of ownership falls into a specific tax pattern recognized by the Internal Revenue Code with varying advantages and disadvantages in different situations. For example, sole proprietorships, partnerships, S corporations, and most limited liability companies are not subject to double taxation, unlike a regular C corporation which pays income tax in addition to income tax paid by separately by its shareholders. A joint venture or tenancy in common also is not subject to double taxation, but a separate issue may arise relating to whether the owners should be treated collectively as a partnership subject to the partnership tax rules.ⁿ²

Relatively few types of real estate entities need be concerned with securities regulation. For example, where property is held by an individual, by a sole proprietorship, or by tenants in common, those owners will not be subject to securities registration requirements. Likewise, the participants in a joint venture usually need not concern themselves with securities regulations. On the other hand, corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies are frequently used to hold real estate when investment capital is sought. An additional form of real estate ownership, known as a real estate investment trust, may also be used when a company intends to seek outside investors. As a result, it is important to recognize the potentially significant tax differences among corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and real estate investment trusts.

§ 22A.03 C Corporations

Historically, and prior to the advent of limited liability companies, real estate developers, syndicators and dealers who planned to conduct a business or a venture through an entity most often narrowed their choices down to either corporations or limited partnerships. A corporation had the attractive nontax attribute of complete insulation for shareholders against liability for corporate debts. That benefit was available to the limited partners, but not to the general partner, in a limited partnership. To be able to gain the benefit of that limited liability, the entrepreneur had to tolerate some tax disadvantages of the corporate form. If the corporation was to be a C corporation, its earnings would be subject to one tax imposed on the corporation, and then a second level of tax would be imposed on the shareholders when the earnings were paid out as dividends. This "double taxation" had to be tolerated, however, if all owners were to be insulated from liability.

As a result, the privilege of earning income through the protection of a corporate entity is usually subject to a double tax. The corporation, as a separate legal entity, must pay a corporate income tax when it realizes income;ⁿ¹ the shareholders must pay an individual income tax when the corporation's income is distributed to them in the form of dividends (to the extent of the corporation's earnings and profits).ⁿ²

The double tax is also imposed upon the liquidation of a C corporation. If the assets of the corporation are sold and the sale proceeds distributed to shareholders, or if the assets are distributed in kind to the shareholders, two levels of tax will be imposed. In the sale scenario, tax will be imposed on gain resulting from the asset sales, and then the shareholders will recognize capital gain on the liquidation if the proceeds they receive are greater than their stock basis. In the alternative, if assets are distributed to shareholders in kind, the corporation is deemed to have sold them to the shareholders at the assets' then fair market values, and again the shareholders will have capital gain upon their receipt of the net liquidation proceeds.

There are advantages when a shareholder acquires his or her shares in exchange for the transfer of property to the corporation. This is because gain or loss is not recognized when one or more persons transfer property to a corporation solely in exchange for the corporation's stock, and immediately thereafter such person or persons are in control of the corporation. One particular advantage relating to securities in this context has been eliminated. In the past, a transferor could transfer appreciated property to a corporation in exchange for stock and a debt obligation of the corporation that was a security, without recognizing gain. Effective for transfers after October 2, 1989, for purposes of the nonrecognition provisions of Code Section 351, if a transferor receives any securities, they are treated as boot in all cases.ⁿ³ A transferor who receives boot is taxed on the lesser of the amount of the boot or the gain realized on the exchange.

§ 22A.04 S Corporations

In an attempt to remove tax penalties incurred solely by reason of the form of entity chosen for doing business, the Internal Revenue Code enables certain corporations, known as S corporations, to elect to be taxed as a "pass through" entity, similar to partnerships. As a result, the corporation does not pay tax on income it earns. Instead, the shareholders take into account their pro rata shares of items of the corporation's income, loss, deduction, or credit.ⁿ¹ The main feature of this election is that the shareholders, rather than the corporation, immediately realize taxable income from the corporate earnings (in proportion to their holdings), so that corporate income tax is avoided.

A corporation is eligible to be an S corporation only if it is a domestic corporation with 100 or fewer shareholders, all of whom must be natural persons (or an estate or certain trusts and exempt organizations) who are not nonresident aliens. The corporation also generally may only have one class of stock.ⁿ² A corporation must timely file an S election in order to be treated as an S corporation.

If a corporation qualifies as an S corporation, it may be an advantageous vehicle for use in the real estate area because of the pass-through of tax attributes and limited liability features. For example, S corporations pass through losses, such as from the depreciation of real estate, to their shareholders.ⁿ³ On the other hand, several factors may restrict the use of S corporations in real estate transactions. The principal disadvantage is the provision that allows an S corporation shareholder to deduct losses only to the extent of the adjusted basis of the shareholder's stock in the S corporation plus the shareholder's adjusted basis of the corporation's indebtedness to the shareholder.ⁿ⁴ Thus, mortgage liabilities on real property owned by an S corporation cannot be added to the shareholder's basis. The effect of this provision is to limit an S corporation shareholder's ability to take immediate advantage of losses passed through to him or her from the corporation.ⁿ⁵

Current Legal Forms for Real Estate
Chapter 22A REAL ESTATE SECURITIES
Part I. The Tax Background

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 22A.05

AUTHOR: by Robert M. Nelson

§ 22A.05 Partnerships and Limited Liability Companies

[1] Comparison of Partnership/LLC and Corporation

The choice of organizing as a partnership (or a limited liability company that is treated as a partnership for federal income tax purposes) often depends upon various tax considerations. One such tax consideration that is important is the fact that partnerships are not taxed as such. Instead, they are treated as "pass through" entities, much like S corporations discussed above. Each partner is taxed on his share of partnership earnings, regardless of whether those earnings are distributed to him. Under this conduit or pass-through theory, all items of income, deduction, loss, and credit are allocated to the partners in proportion to their respective interests in the partnership.ⁿ¹ By contrast, a regular C corporation is itself subject to tax on its net earnings, and those earnings are again taxable to the shareholders if and when they are distributed as dividends to the shareholders.ⁿ²

There are many situations in which the pass-through nature of limited liability companies and partnerships makes one of those forms desirable in order to secure for the members or partners, in proportion to their respective interests in the entity, the pass-through tax benefit of depreciation, operating losses, or other deductions. This consideration is especially important in the context of real estate, where depreciation or cost recovery taken on partnership property often results in losses which may be passed through to the partners and used to offset their personal income from other sources.ⁿ³ Thus, where such pass-through of losses is an important consideration, the taxpayer should consider organizing in the limited liability company or partnership form.

An S corporation also is a pass-through entity for tax purposes. Like partnerships and limited liability companies, it is not subject to tax on its income.ⁿ⁴ Instead, its income flows through to its shareholders and is included on their individual income tax returns, regardless of whether any of the corporation's earnings are actually distributed to the shareholders.ⁿ⁵ S corporations, however, are much less flexible entities taxwise than are limited liability companies and partnerships. S corporations may only have up to 100 shareholders, and they are subject to numerous restrictions on the type of permitted shareholders.ⁿ⁶ Generally, only individuals and certain estates and trusts are eligibleⁿ⁷ and none of the shareholders may be a nonresident alien.ⁿ⁸ Also, an S corporation may only have one class of stock, unless the only distinguishing feature of the second class is that it is nonvoting stock.ⁿ⁹ So, it is not possible, for example, to offer some of the investing shareholders a preferred return over other owners as an inducement to invest.

Another important difference between partnership and S corporation tax treatment is that a partner's basis in his partnership interest includes not only the amount he contributed to the partnership and his proportionate share of the undistributed earnings of the partnership, but also his proportionate share of the partnership's liabilities.ⁿ¹⁰ The liabilities of an S corporation are not part of an S corporation shareholder's stock basis. That difference can be significant if substantial tax losses are anticipated, because the at-risk rules in the Code limit a partner's and an S corporation shareholder's opportunity to claim those losses on his personal tax return and offset other income, by allowing the losses to be taken only to the extent of the partner's or shareholder's tax basis in his ownership interest.ⁿ¹¹ So, having a greater basis because of the inclusion of partnership liabilities is a potentially great advantage to a partner that is not afforded to an S corporation shareholder.

It should be noted that a special rule applies to certain publicly traded partnerships. A publicly traded partnership (including a master limited partnership) is treated as a corporation for federal income tax purposes unless 90 percent or more of its gross income is qualifying (passive-type) income.ⁿ¹² A publicly traded partnership that is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 is generally treated as a corporation. A publicly traded partnership is defined as a partnership the interests of which are (1) traded on an established securities market, or (2) readily tradable on a secondary market (or the substantial equivalent).ⁿ¹³ Relief from classification as a corporation is provided for a partnership that inadvertently fails to meet the 90 percent requirement that its gross income be passive-type income.ⁿ¹⁴ Relief is available if the Treasury Secretary determines that the failure was inadvertent, if within a reasonable time after the discovery of such failure steps are taken so that the partnership once more meets the 90 percent gross income requirements, and if the partnership agrees to make adjustments (including adjustments with respect to the partners) or to pay amounts as required by the Secretary. The Treasury is authorized to withhold the relief allowances if the publicly traded partnership inadvertently fails to meet the 90 percent test in each of several successive years, or in several years within a longer period, thus causing the partnership to be treated as a corporation in these circumstances.ⁿ¹⁵

[2] "At Risk" Loss Deduction Limitation and Passive Loss Limitations

As noted above, the partnership tax rules provide for the pass-through of the partnership's tax deductions to its partners. This provides taxpayers exceptional tax planning opportunities, but in the absence of certain limitations, might also result in certain taxpayer abuses. To curb some of these potential abuses, the Code contains an "at risk" loss deduction limitation, which applies to most types of business activities.ⁿ¹ Unless specifically excluded, certain classes of taxpayers (including individuals, partners, shareholders of S corporations, and closely-held C corporations) engaged in a trade or business or other activity for the production of income are limited to deducting losses only to the extent that the taxpayer is "at risk." The taxpayer is at risk to the extent that he contributes money or property to the enterprise or is personally liable on borrowings used to finance the enterprise. Also at risk is the value of the taxpayer's interest in property which is not used in the enterprise but which secures loans to finance the loss generating activity.ⁿ²

If a taxpayer is engaged in the activity of holding real property and if debt meeting the statutory requirements of "qualified nonrecourse financing" ("QNF") is borrowed to finance the activity, then the taxpayer will be considered at risk with respect to such debt.ⁿ³ Qualified nonrecourse financing must be borrowed from an organization in the business of lending or from a governmental entity, or it must be guaranteed by a governmental entity. A loan from a related person will satisfy the QNF requirements only if it is commercially reasonable and lent on substantially the same terms as loans to unrelated persons. Commercially reasonable terms require a written unconditional promise to pay an ascertainable sum, on demand or on a fixed date, at a reasonable market interest rate.ⁿ⁴ A related person generally includes family members and controlled corporations or partnerships (10 percent ownership interest).ⁿ⁵ Additionally, the QNF must be nonconvertible debt, secured by the real property used in the activity and generally without personal liability.ⁿ⁶

In addition to the at risk rules, the Code imposes certain limitations on the amount a partner may deduct for passive losses. The passive loss limitations generally prohibit current deduction of passive losses or credits in excess of aggregate passive activity income. The disallowed deductions are carried forward indefinitely. A trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate constitutes a passive activity.ⁿ⁷ "Material participation" is defined in the Code with the subjective terms of regular, continuous, and substantial, but the Regulations establish safe harbors that are more objective.ⁿ⁸

Generally speaking, rental activity (i.e., any activity where payments are principally made for the use of tangible property) is considered to be a passive activity.ⁿ⁹ Therefore, deductions and credits from rental activities generally may be used only to offset income from other passive activities. Such deductions and credits cannot be deducted from nonpassive income, such as wages, dividends, interest, etc. However, there are two major exceptions to this general rule.

First, certain eligible taxpayers who materially participate in rental real estate activities may deduct losses from such activities against nonpassive income. These eligible taxpayers include individuals and closely-held C corporations that meet special eligibility requirements. An individual taxpayer meets the eligibility requirements if:

- (1) more than half of the personal services the taxpayer performs during the tax year are performed in real property trades or businesses in which the taxpayer materially participates; and
- (2) such taxpayer performs more than 750 hours of service during the tax year in the real property trades or businesses in which the taxpayer materially participates.ⁿ¹⁰

A second exception to the general rule disallowing deduction of passive losses and credits in excess of passive income is provided for natural persons actively participating in a rental real estate activity.ⁿ¹¹ Up to $25,000 of net losses and deduction-equivalent credits generated by rental real estate activities may be used to offset nonpassive income of the taxpayer if he actively participates in the activity. The active participation requirement applies both to the year when the loss or credit arose and the year in which the loss or credit is taken. An individual holding less than a 10 percent interest in the value of the activity or a limited partnership interest may not be treated as actively participating in that activity. Beyond this, the only illumination is in the Senate Reports indicating that "active" is less extensive than "material" participation. Congress intends the making of management decisions (i.e., approval of tenants and expenditures) to fulfill the active participation standard.ⁿ¹² With certain exceptions, the $25,000 exemption is phased-out at adjusted gross income levels between $100,000 and $150,000.ⁿ¹³

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 22A.06

AUTHOR: by Robert M. Nelson

§ 22A.06 Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs): Qualification Requirements

[1] Qualification for Conduit Tax Status

Real estate investment trusts, or REITs, are entities that invest in real estate and distribute most of their earnings to their shareholders-investors. If an organization meets the Code qualification for REIT status, the income of the REIT that is distributed to the investors each year generally is taxed to them without being subjected to a tax at the REIT level.ⁿ¹ In other words, a REIT is a pass-through or conduit entity similar to S corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies.

In order to qualify for conduit treatment, a REIT must be a corporation, trust, or association that is managed by one or more trustees or directors,ⁿ² and it must satisfy four tests on a year-by-year basis: organizational structure, nature of assets (asset ownership requirements), source of income (income requirements), and distribution of income. These tests are intended to allow special tax treatment for a REIT only if there actually is a pooling of investment arrangement which is evidenced by its organizational structure, if its investments are basically (at least 75 percent) in the real estate field, and if its income is clearly passive income from real estate investment (as contrasted with income from the active operation of business involving real estate). Also, substantially all (at least 90 percent) of the REIT's income must be passed through to its shareholders on a current basis.

In addition to meeting these enumerated requirements and operational tests, the REIT must make a valid election of such status in order to qualify; moreover, the election must not be revoked or the REIT status is terminated for failure to meet one or more of the statutory requirements. If the REIT qualifies, it is exempt from corporate taxes, and the income is taxed only once, in the hands of the REIT's owners.

[2] Organizational Requirements: Corporate Characteristics

In order to qualify as a REIT, an organization must meet certain organizational requirements specified in the Code.ⁿ¹ These requirements must be met during the entire taxable year, except that the requirement for a minimum of 100 shareholders (discussed below) must be complied with for at least 335 days during the year (not necessarily consecutively), or during a proportionate number of days during a shorter taxable year. However, the REIT need not meet the minimum shareholder requirement during the first tax year of the election.ⁿ²

A REIT must be a corporation, trust, or association that is managed by one or more trustees or directors.ⁿ³ Regardless of the entity used, the beneficial ownership must be evidenced by transferable shares or transferable certificates of beneficial interest that are held by 100 or more persons (shareholders).ⁿ⁴ Ownership is determined without reference to any stock attribution rules.ⁿ⁵ For purpose of the "100 or more persons" requirement, a person includes both natural persons and legal entities.ⁿ⁶ No group of five or fewer persons can own more than 50 percent of the beneficial interest of the REIT at any time during the last half of the taxable year.ⁿ⁷ Also, certain financial institutions and insurance companies subject to specified provisions of the Code are disqualified from REIT status.ⁿ⁸

[3] Real Estate Assets Requirement

In order to maintain its qualification, a REIT must satisfy certain diversification of investment requirements on a quarterly basis. At the end of each quarter of any taxable year, at least 75 percent of the value of a REIT's total assets must be represented by "real estate assets," cash and cash items (including receivables), and government securities and not more than 25 percent of the value of the trust's total assets may be invested in other securities.ⁿ¹ Moreover, the nonqualifying securities of a single issuer may not exceed 5 percent of the REIT's total assets, and the REIT cannot own nonqualifying securities which total more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting securities of the issuer.ⁿ²

The term "real estate assets," for purposes of the 75 percent asset test, means real property, interests in real property, interests in mortgages on real property, and shares (or transferable certificates of beneficial interest) in other qualified REITs. Equity capital derived from stock offerings (other than dividend reinvestment plans) is treated as within the definition of "real estate assets" for a period of one year from the date of receipt by the REIT.ⁿ³ "Interests in real property" include fee ownership and co-ownership of land or leaseholds, options to acquire land or leaseholds, and improvements with respect to any of the preceding, but do not include mineral, oil, or gas royalty interests.ⁿ⁴

"Real property" is defined to mean land or improvements of an inherently permanent nature, including structural components such as plumbing systems, elevators, and the like. State law is not controlling in determining whether an asset comes within the definition of real property.ⁿ⁵

Foreign land and improvements qualify as real property assets. Security interests in foreign real property, which are legally equivalent to mortgages or deeds of trust, qualify as "mortgages on real property."ⁿ⁶ Air rights over real property may also qualify as a real property asset or an interest in real property.ⁿ⁷

An asset is not disqualified for REIT treatment if it consists of both real and personal property. In such a case, however, an allocation of value must be made for purposes of the 75 percent asset test.ⁿ⁸

[4] Income Percentage Requirements; the 100 Percent Tax

In order to disqualify "active" trusts from REIT status, the Code contains two percentage limitations on various types of income realized by a trust in any one tax year. These two tests, which are discussed below, generally are that: (1) at least 75 percent of the trust's gross income must consist of qualified real estate income; and (2) at least 95 percent of the trust's gross income must consist of qualified real estate income and passive source income.ⁿ¹

A trust will not necessarily lose its REIT status if it fails to meet either or both of the 95 percent and 75 percent income source tests. The trust may still qualify if two conditions are met: (1) the nature and amount of each item of its gross income is itemized in a schedule filed with its income tax return; and (2) the failure to meet either or both tests is due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect.ⁿ² An additional tax is imposed, however, on the gross income, i.e., the net amount by which the trust fails to meet either or both income source tests.ⁿ³ If the trust fails to meet the conditions under this statutory exception, it cannot qualify as a REIT unless it meets both income source tests.

[a] 75 Percent Gross Income Test; Qualified Real Estate Income

At least 75 percent of the trust's gross income, excluding gross income from prohibited transactions,ⁿ⁴ must be derived from the following items:ⁿ⁵

- (1) rents from all real property;
- (2) real property mortgage interest, i.e., interest earned on obligations secured by mortgages on real property or on interests in real property;ⁿ⁶
- (3) gain from the sale or other disposition of real property (including interests in real property and in mortgages on real property) which is not Section 1221(a)(1) property under the Code;
- (4) dividends or other distributions (and gain on the sale of) shares in other REITs (unless such shares were held primarily for sale in the ordinary course of business);
- (5) abatements and refunds of taxes on real property;
- (6) income and gain derived from foreclosure property (see below);
- (7) commitment fees received under agreements to make loans secured by mortgages on or interests in real property, or to enter into purchase or lease transactions with respect to real property;
- (8) gain from the sale or other disposition of a real estate asset which is not a prohibited transaction solely by reason of Code Section 857(b)(6); and
- (9) qualified temporary investment income.

For purposes of the above provisions, as well as the 95 percent test, gross income has the same meaning as under Code Section 61. Thus, the computation of gross income includes the gross profit from the sale or other disposition of stock, securities, real property, or the like, but does not take into account any loss attributable to such transactions.ⁿ⁷ Income derived from shared appreciation mortgages is considered to be gain from the sale of the property for the purpose of satisfying the qualified real estate income requirements. This characterization permits the REIT to enter such arrangements and to avoid generating nonqualified income.ⁿ⁸

"Rents from real property" include: rents from interests in real property; charges for services customarily furnished in connection with the rental of real property (whether or not they are separately stated); and rent attributable to personal property which is leased in connection with a lease of real property, provided that the amount allocable to the personal property does not exceed 15 percent of the total rent.ⁿ⁹ Percentage rent based on a fixed percentage of gross receipts or sales is deemed qualified rent, but all other percentage rent (rent based on income or profits derived from the leased property) is excluded.ⁿ¹⁰ An example of qualified "percentage rent" is a rent based upon a percentage of gross sales over a base amount, a provision customary in shopping center leases.ⁿ¹¹ Rent received from a lessee in which the trust has at least a 10 percent interest is also disqualified rent,ⁿ¹² as is rent derived from leases under which the trust furnishes services to tenants or manages or operates the property other than through an independent contractor from whom the trust itself does not derive or receive any income.ⁿ¹³ However, services directly performed by the REIT which, if performed by a tax-exempt entity, do not generate "unrelated business income," are excepted from the independent contractor requirement. Therefore, amounts received from sale of such services are treated as qualified rent.ⁿ¹⁴

[b] 95 Percent Gross Income Test; Passive Source Income

At least 95 percent of the REIT's gross income, excluding gross income from prohibited transactions, must be derived from qualified real estate income (i.e., from items which qualify under the 75 percent income source test, discussed above), plus passive source income, such as dividends, interest, and gain on stock or securities.ⁿ¹⁵ Status as a REIT will not be lost for failure to meet the 95 percent test, assuming the other requirements for REIT qualifications are met, if a return was filed with the appropriate schedule and the failure was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect.ⁿ¹⁶ In such a case, however, the REIT must pay an additional tax on the nonqualifying income in excess of five percent.ⁿ¹⁷

Note that dividends and interest are defined more broadly under the 95 percent passive source income test than under the 75 percent qualified real estate income test. The 95 percent test permits the inclusion of dividends and interest generally, while the 75 percent test included only dividends from qualified REITs and interest derived from obligations secured by mortgages on or interests in real property.ⁿ¹⁸ Moreover, capital gain qualifies under the 95 percent test even if it is derived from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities, but capital gain from such sources is not included under the 75 percent test.ⁿ¹⁹ Other items of income, however, such as rents from real property and income from foreclosure property, are included under both tests.

[c] Primarily for Sale

A 100 percent tax is imposed on REIT net income derived from property, other than "foreclosure property," held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of its trade or business.ⁿ²⁰⁻²¹ⁿ²² This 100 percent tax on net income derived from prohibited transactions is not assessed against net income derived from the sale of "real estate assets"ⁿ²³ if four conditions are met:

- (1) the REIT has held the property for at least two years;
- (2) aggregate expenditures made by the REIT within the preceding two years, which are includable in the property's basis, do not exceed 30 percent of the property's net selling price;
- (3) during the taxable year the trust does not sell more than seven properties (excluding sales of "foreclosure property") or the aggregate adjusted basis of sold property does not exceed 10 percent of the REIT's total assets at the beginning of the tax year and marketing and development of the sold properties were handled by an independent contractor; and
- (4) the REIT has held the subject property and improvements for at least two years for rental income. (This requirement is not applicable to property acquired by foreclosure, deed in lieu of foreclosure, or lease termination.)ⁿ²⁴

[5] Distribution of Income

A REIT must distribute 90 percent of the sum of its annual real estate investment trust taxable income and 90 percent of the net after tax income derived from foreclosure property, minus any "excess noncash income."ⁿ¹ Excess noncash income is essentially the amount of imputed income, which the REIT was required to recognize before receipt, in excess of 5 percent of the REIT's taxable income. Four types of income are added to produce the gross amount of noncash income: (1) income from deferred rental agreement required to be recognized under IRS Section 467; (2) gain recognized on disposition of a real estate asset due to inadvertent failure to qualify as a like-kind-exchange under IRC Section 1031; (3) the amount of original issue discount (OID) includible as income pursuant to IRC Section 860E(a) or

[a] Election; Termination

Even though all the organizational requirements and the asset ownership and income source tests discussed above are satisfied, a taxpayer will not qualify for REIT status unless it files a valid election to be a real estate investment trust.ⁿ¹ The election is made by computing taxable income as a REIT for the first taxable year for which such status is desired.ⁿ² The election may terminate by failure to maintain REIT status, or by revocation. Termination by failure to qualify occurs if the trust fails, either intentionally or inadvertently, to meet the various requirements for REIT status during the taxable year.ⁿ³ Termination by revocation may occur if the trust revokes the election after the first taxable year for which the election is effective. The revocation must be made within the first 90 days of the first taxable year for which the revocation is to be effective, and it continues in effect until a new election is made and qualified.ⁿ⁴

A new election cannot be made for five years after the termination is effective.ⁿ⁵ The waiting period does not apply, however, if the termination was due to reasonable cause and not to willful failure to file a timely return, fraud in the return, or willful neglect.

A REIT must adopt a calendar year as its fiscal year.ⁿ⁶

[b] Recordkeeping Requirements

REITs are required to keep certain records.ⁿ⁷ These recordkeeping requirements are intended to ensure that the REIT complies with all the asset ownership and income source tests discussed above.ⁿ⁸ In addition, the shareholders must submit sufficient information to the REIT to enable it to comply with the recordkeeping requirements, and must file their own information returns.ⁿ⁹

§ 22A.15 Introduction and Scope of Practice Background

This Practice Background will review the federal and state securities law aspects of a real estate investment and/or development venture. The securities law aspects of the venture arise as soon as the principal decides that additional financing will be required beyond what the principal is able or desires to commit to the venture personally and/or through various types of bank or other institutional loan financing which may be available. Once the principal who first envisions the proposed venture decides to seek one or more other persons as investors then the principal must take care to comply with a variety of federal and state securities laws and regulations which will likely place conditions and regulatory requirements on the principal's efforts to raise the additional outside financing he or she desires to seek from other investors in the venture.

A new real estate venture may be conducted in a number of different business entities. Where the real estate venture promoter desires to solicit and obtain outside investors, the most common forms of entities chosen are: (1) corporation, (2) partnership (usually a limited partnership), (3) limited liability company or (4) real estate investment trust. A variety of tax and nontax factors will be involved in selecting the business entity deemed to be the most appropriate by the promoter for his or her real estate venture. For a discussion of those factors, see Vol. 24, Chapter 20, Real Estate Entities, §§ 20.02- 20.13, supra. The type of entity chosen to be employed by the real estate venture promoter or principal is largely irrelevant to the federal and state securities law aspects of the principal's raising of additional financing from outside investors; it doesn't matter if the choice of entity is a limited partnership, a corporation, a limited liability company, or some other type of business entity. In nearly all cases, each of these entities will involve the sale of an interest of some kind, such as a partnership interest, shares of stock, a membership interest, or some other economic interest which will be deemed to involve the sale of a "security."

Likewise, the type of real estate venture involved does not impact on the securities law aspects of the raising of additional financing to make the venture a reality. The particular venture could involve simply the purchase of undeveloped land for eventual resale, or development or it might involve the construction of a sizeable commercial or residential building or buildings on real estate, or the construction and operation of a retail strip center or mall--it is not the nature of the real estate venture which raises the federal and state securities law implications but rather the fact that a "security" is being sold.

Chapter 22A REAL ESTATE SECURITIES
Part II. The Practice Background

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 22A.16

§ 22A.16 Federal Securities Law

The primary federal securities statute involved in governing the sale of a security is the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ¹ as amended (the "Securities Act"). Generally, a security may not be lawfully sold under the Securities Act unless that security is registered under the Securities Act or unless the security being sold or the transaction in which the security is being sold is exempt from registration. Under the Securities Act a "security" includes "any note, ... bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, [and] certificate of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement..." The economic interest an outside investor in a real estate venture typically receives in return for his or her investment, such as shares of stock in a corporation, partnership interests in a limited partnership or a membership interest in a limited liability company are all securities and, thus, within the ambit of the Securities Act.

[1] Registration Under the Securities Act of 1933

One method of compliance with the Securities Act is to register the securities being sold prior to their sale with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC"). One SEC registration form typically used for a sale of securities of an issuer engaged in some type of real estate venture is known as an S-11. The General Instructions to the Form S-11 state that it may be used to register: (i) securities issued by a real estate investment trust, or REIT, as defined in *Section 856 of the Internal Revenue Code*ⁿ¹ or (ii) the securities issued by other business entities the business of which is primarily acquiring and holding real estate for investment. The Form S-11 is comprised of two Parts, the first of which is information which is required to be in the Prospectus furnished to prospective investors and the second of which is certain additional information which is not required in the Prospectus but must be furnished in Part II of the Form S-11.

The General Instructions to Form S-11 state that the information required to be in the Prospectus includes:

- Item 1. Forepart of Registration Statement and Outside Front Cover Page of Prospectus.
- Item 2. Inside Front and Outside Back Cover Pages of Prospectus.
- Item 3. Summary Information, Risk Factors and Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges.

- Item 4. Determination of Offering Price.
- Item 5. Dilution.
- Item 6. Selling Security Holders.
- Item 7. Plan of Distribution.
- Item 8. Use of Proceeds.
- Item 9. Selected Financial Data.
- Item 10. Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations.
- Item 11. General Information as to Registrant.
- Item 12. Policy with Respect to Certain Activities.
- Item 13. Investment Policies of Registrant.
- Item 14. Description of Real Estate.
- Item 15. Operating Data.
- Item 16. Tax Treatment of Registrant and Its Security Holders.
- Item 17. Market Price of and Dividends on the Registrant's Common Equity and Related Stockholder Matters.
- Item 18. Description of Registrant's Securities.
- Item 19. Legal Proceedings.
- Item 20. Security Ownership of Certain Beneficial Owners and Management.
- Item 21. Directors and Executive Officers.
- Item 22. Executive Compensation.
- Item 23. Certain Relationships and Related Transactions and Director Independence.
- Item 24. Selection, Management and Custody of Registrant's Investments.
- Item 25. Policies with Respect to Certain Transactions.
- Item 26. Limitations of Liability.
- Item 27. Financial Statements and Information.
- Item 28. Interests of Named Experts and Counsel.
- Item 28A. Material Changes.
- Item 29. Incorporation of Certain Information by Reference.

Item 29A. Disclosure of Commission Position on Indemnification for Securities Act Liabilities.

The General Guidelines further provide that the information required in Part II of the Form S-11 (but which is not required in the Prospectus) includes:

Item 30. Quantitative and Qualitative Disclosures About Market Risk.

Item 31. Other Expenses of Issuance and Distribution.

Item 32. Sales to Special Parties.

Item 33. Recent Sales of Unregistered Securities.

Item 34. Indemnification of Directors and Officers.

Item 35. Treatment of Proceeds from Stock Being Registered.

Item 37. Undertakings.

The Form S-11 concludes by requiring the signatures of the issuer, its principal executive officer or officers, its principal financial officer, its controller or principal accounting officer, and a majority of the members of its Board of Directors or persons serving similar functions. Where the issuer is a limited partnership, the Form S-11 requires the signatures of a majority of the members of the Board of Directors of the General Partner of the limited partnership.

The Instructions also call attention to the General Rules and Regulations under the Securities Act, particularly those of Regulation C,ⁿ² containing general requirements relating to the preparation and filing of registration statements. The Instructions also note Regulation S-Kⁿ³ contains details concerning required nonfinancial information. Regulation S-X,ⁿ⁴ contains details concerning financial disclosure required.

It should be noted that the preparation and filing of Form S-11 does not also automatically fulfill the state law securities law requirements of the states in which securities may be offered and sold. Care must be taken to effect the additional state law securities law compliance of all applicable states. Generally, such compliance must be effected in all states in which the securities may be offered for sale and should be effected prior to any offers being made in any state.

[2] Registration Exemptions Under the Securities Act of 1933

Registering securities under the Securities Act is time-consuming and relatively expensive. Probably the great majority of real estate ventures established in the United States do not involve registered offerings of securities. As noted above, securities may be lawfully sold by the principal in a real estate venture without going through the registration process if the securities being sold or the transaction in which the securities are being sold is exempt from registration under the Securities Act. In order to avoid the time, effort, complexity and cost of a full-scale registration of securities, the promoter of a new real estate venture or an existing real estate venture which needs more financing is most likely to attempt to qualify for a registration exemption under the Securities Act (and also under any applicable state securities laws). By far, most real estate securities are sold in exempt transactions since the type of real estate security being sold would rarely qualify as an exempt security. The transactional exemptions which most often provide such an exemption are one of: (i) the so-called intrastate exemption provided by Section 3(a)(11)ⁿ¹ of the Securities Act and SEC Rule 147ⁿ² promulgated thereunder, or, (ii) one of the limited offer or small offering Regulation Dⁿ³ exemptions, namely, Rule 504ⁿ⁴ (promulgated under Section 3(b)ⁿ⁵ of the Securities Act), Rule 505ⁿ⁶ (also promulgated pursuant to Section 3(b) of the Securities Act), or Rule 506ⁿ⁷ (promulgated pursuant to Section 4(2)ⁿ⁸ of the Securities Act).

[a] The Intrastate Offering Exemption⁹

One transactional type of exemption which may be available to the real estate promoter is the intrastate offering exemption which Section 3(a)(11)¹⁰ of the Securities Act provides is available where the issuer of the securities and all the purchasers reside in the same state. SEC Rule 147¹¹ expands further on the requirements necessary for the issuer to avail itself of the intrastate offering exemption. Rule 147 provides that:

- (1) the exemption is available only to an issuer;
- (2) all of the securities in the same offering must meet the requirements of Rule 147-- i.e., the intrastate offering exemption is not available if the offering also attempts to include other exemptions;
- (3) the issuer must be resident in, or doing business within, the same state as the residence of all the offerees and purchasers of the securities in the offering;
- (4) all the offerees and purchasers of securities in the offering must be residents of the same state;
- (5) during the period from the last sale of a security in the offering and for nine (9) months thereafter, resales of securities may be made only to persons within the same state;
- (6) the issuer must take certain precautions against interstate offers and sales of the securities being offered, namely:
 - (a) in connection with the sale of any of the securities in the offering made pursuant to Rule 147, the issuer shall:
 - (i) place a legend on the certificate or other document evidencing the security stating that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act and describing the limitations on resale set forth in (5) above;
 - (ii) give its transfer agent, if any, appropriate stop transfer instructions, or if the issuer transfers its own securities, the issuer must make an appropriate notation in its records; and,
 - (iii) obtain a written representation for each purchaser as to the purchaser's residence;
 - (b) the issuer must, with respect to any securities presented for transfer during the above nine-month time period, take the steps provided in (a)(i) and (a)(ii) above; and,
 - (c) the issuer must disclose, in writing, in connection with any offers of a security in the offering the restrictions on resale described in (5) above and the provisions described in (6)(a)(i) and (ii) and (6)(b) above.

Rule 147 states that it is not exclusive, i.e., the intrastate offering exemption provided in Section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act may be available even if not all the requirements of Rule 147 are met, although it obviously is most prudent to meet the safe harbor Rule 147 requirements. Finally, Rule 147 makes clear that it provides only an exemption under the Federal Securities Act and does not obviate the necessity of compliance with any state laws which may apply to the sale of the securities being offered.

[b] The Regulation D Exemptions¹²

Other transactional-type registration exemptions are provided by Regulation D, which is comprised of SEC Rules 501-508. Rules 501-503, 507, and 508 are rules having general application to any of the substantive rules which provide the detailed requirements of meeting the particular exemption covered by one of Rules 504, 505, or 506. Among other things, the Preliminary Notes to Regulation D make clear that these exemptions are not exclusive, are exemptions only from the registration (and not the anti-fraud, civil liability or other) provisions of the Securities Act and do not provide compliance for any state law which also may apply to a given sale of the security. Unlike the intrastate offering exemption of Rule 147, however, the Regulation D exemptions may apply to interstate (i.e., offerings made in two (2) or more states) offerings. Thus, if the real estate venture promoter knows that he or she must make offers or sell securities in more than one state, one of the Regulation D rules may provide a desirable registration exemption while Rule 147 would not. The underlying theory of these exemptions is that the offerings in which the securities are being sold are small enough or being made under conditions or to potential purchasers such that the safeguards provided by the registration process afforded by the Securities Act are not necessary.

Rule 501 contains definitions and terms which may be used generally throughout one or more of the other rules in Regulation D. Rule 502 sets forth certain general conditions which must be met in order to meet the requirements of any of the Rule 504, 505, or 506 exemptions. One of the general conditions is that all of the conditions of Regulation D must be met with respect to all sales of securities that are part of the same offering. Rule 502(b) sets forth the informational requirements pertaining to the Regulation D exemptions, both as to the timing of the delivery of information to prospective purchasers and the content (both non-financial and financial) of the information. Rule 502(c) requires that the offering must be made without any form of general solicitation or advertising (except for certain Rule 504 offerings described below). Rule 502(d) provides that there are restrictions on the resale of securities initially sold in a Regulation D exemption offering (again, except for certain Rule 504 offerings described below) and that, therefore, the securities may not be resold without registration under the Securities Act or pursuant to an available registration exemption for the resale of the securities. In addition, Rule 502(d) requires that the issuer take reasonable care that the purchasers under a Regulation D exempt offering not be underwriters within the meaning of Section 2(11) of the Securities Act. In order to meet the reasonable care requirement, the issuer is directed to: (i) make a reasonable inquiry to determine if each purchaser is purchasing for himself or herself or for other persons; (ii) make written disclosure to each purchaser that the securities being purchased have not been registered under the Securities Act and, therefore, cannot be resold without registration under the Securities Act or an exemption being available; and, (iii) placing a legend on the certificate or other document evidencing the securities that they have not been registered under the Securities Act and setting forth or referring to the transfer restrictions applying to the securities. Rule 503 requires the filing of a notice on SEC Form D within fifteen (15) days after the first sale in the offering. Furthermore, Rule 503a.4.a.1. states that: "A notice of sales on Form D must be filed with the Commission in electronic format by means of the Commission's Electronic Data Gathering, Analysis, and Retrieval System (EDGAR) in accordance with EDGAR rules set forth in Regulation S-T (17 CFR Part 232)." Rule 507 provides that an exemption under Rule 504, 505, or 506 is not available if the issuer, or any predecessor or affiliate, has been subject to any court order enjoining it for failure to file the notice required by Rule 503. Finally, Rule 508 provides that an insignificant deviation from a term, condition or requirement of Regulation D will not be deemed fatal to the claimed exemption.

Rule 504(a) provides that the issuer of the securities may not be: (1) a company required to file reports under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934¹³ (i.e., not a "public company"), (2) an investment company, or a (3) development stage company with no specific business plan or purpose. In addition, Rule 504(b)(1) provides that the issuer must comply with all of the requirements of Rules 501 and 502(a), (c) and (d). However, if the offers and sales will be made:

- (a) exclusively in one or more states requiring registration, and require the delivery of a disclosure document to investors before sale, and the offers and sales made meet those requirements;
- (b) in one or more states with no registration or delivery requirements but the securities have been registered in at least one state with such requirements and the disclosure document is delivered before sale to all purchasers, including the ones in the states having no registration or delivery requirements; or

(c) exclusively according to state law exemptions from registration that permit general solicitation and advertising provided sales are made in those states only to "accredited investors" as defined in Rule 501(a);

then the provisions of Rule 502 (c) (i.e., the limitations on the manner of offering) and Rule 502 (d) (i.e., the limitations on resale of the securities) do not apply.

Rule 504(b)(2) sets forth the $1,000,000 aggregate offering price which applies to any offering made under Rule 504. That dollar limitation applies for the period beginning twelve (12) months before the start of the offering and continues through the offering period. All offerings made within that time period pursuant to the so-called small offering exemption of Section 3(b) of the Securities Act, i.e., all offerings made in reliance on either Rule 504 or 505, must be included in determining the permissible aggregate offering price of the current offering. The Notes at the end of Rule 504 set forth helpful examples illustrating the calculation which must be made. Those Notes provide:

"Note

1: The calculation of the aggregate offering price is illustrated as follows:

If an issuer sold $900,000 on June 1, 1987 under this § 230.504 and an additional $4,100,000 on December 1, 1987 under § 230.505, the issuer could not sell any of its securities under this § 230.504 until December 1, 1988. Until then the issuer must count the December 1, 1987 sale towards the $1,000,000 limit within the preceding twelve months.

"Note

2: If a transaction under § 230.504 fails to meet the limitation on the aggregate offering price, it does not affect the availability of this § 230.504 for the other transactions considered in applying such limitation. For example, if an issuer sold $1,000,000 worth of its securities on January 1, 1988 under this § 230.504 and an additional $500,000 worth on July 1, 1988, this § 230.504 would not be available for the later sale, but would still be applicable to the January 1, 1988 sale."n14

[ii] Rule 505--Exemption for Limited Offers and Sales of Securities Not Exceeding $5,000,000

The first obvious difference between the Rule 504 and Rule 505 exemptions is that the aggregate offering price of the Rule 505 exemption is raised from the $1,000,000 limit found in Rule 504 to $5,000,000. Again, Rule 505 itself contains a Note setting forth examples which illustrate how the maximum is to be calculated. The Note provides:

"Note:

The calculation of the aggregate offering price is illustrated as follows:

"Example 1.

If an issuer sold $2,000,000 of its securities on June 1, 1982 under this § 230.505 and an additional $1,000,000 on September 1, 1982, the issuer would be permitted to sell only $2,000,000 more under § 230.505 until June 1, 1983. Until that date, the issuer must count both the prior sales towards the $5,000,000 limit. However, if the issuer made its third sale on June 1, 1983, the issuer could then sell $4,000,000 of its securities because the June 1, 1982 sale would not be within the preceding twelve months."

"Example 2.

If an issuer sold $500,000 of its securities on June 1, 1982 under § 230.504 and an additional $4,500,000 on December 1, 1982 under this § 230.505, then the issuer could not sell any of its securities under this § 230.505 until June 1, 1983. At that time it could sell an additional $500,000 of its securities."n15

While Rule 504 does not limit in any way the number of purchasers there may be in an offering exempt under that rule, Rule 505 does contain a limitation of thirty-five (35) on the number of purchasers. However, for purposes of how the number of purchases is to be calculated for purposes of Rule 505(b), Rule 502(e) provides that there is to be excluded from the number of purchasers who count toward the limit:

- (1) any relative, spouse or relative of the spouse of a purchaser who has the same principal residence as the purchaser;
- (2) any trust or estate in which a purchaser and any of the above related persons collectively have more than fifty percent (50%) of the beneficial interests;
- (3) any corporation or other organization of which a purchaser or any of the above related persons collectively are beneficial owners of more than fifty percent (50%) of the equity securities or equity interest; and
- (4) any accredited investor.

Rule 501(a) defines "accredited investor to include, among others:

- (1) any bank or savings and loan association, Securities Exchange Act registered broker or dealer;
- (2) any Internal Revenue Code 501(c)(3) organization, corporation, partnership not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the subject securities and having total assets in excess of $5,000,000;
- (3) any director, executive officer or general partner of the issuer or any director, executive officer, or general partner of the general partner of the issuer;
- (4) any natural person whose net worth, or joint net worth with his or her spouse, at the time of purchase of the subject security exceeds $1,000,000;
- (5) any natural person whose income was in excess of $200,000 in each of the most recent two (2) years or had joint income with that person's spouse in excess of $300,000 in each of those years and also has an expectation of reaching the same income level in the current year;
- (6) a trust with total assets in excess of $5,000,000 not formed specifically to purchase the subject security and where the purchase of the subject security is directed by a sophisticated person, as defined in Rule 506(b)(2)(ii); and,
- (7) any entity in which all of the equity owners are accredited investors.

The practical effect of the number of purchasers limitation and the above exclusions is that the issuer may sell to only thirty-five (35) "non-accredited," non-related" purchasers and may include any number of accredited or related purchasers without any number limitation.

Another significant difference between the Rule 504 exemption and that provided by Rule 505 is that Rule 505 requires that a very significant amount of both non-financial and financial information (as described in Rule 502(b)(2)) be delivered to non-accredited investors while there is no such informational requirement for Rule 504. Also, Rule 505 offerings are subject to the limitations on the manner of the offering (set forth in Rule 502(c)) and the limitations on resale of the subject securities (set forth in Rule 502(d)). Finally, Rule 505 also requires that the exemption is not available to any issuer which is disqualified by virtue of the so-called "bad boy" provisions of Rule 262 of Regulation A (with certain specified exceptions).

[iii] Rule 506--Exemption for Limited Offers and Sales Without Regard to Dollar Amount of Offering

The exemption provided by Rule 506 is very similar to the Rule 505 exemption with two (2) important differences. First, there is no dollar limitation placed upon the size of the offering which may be made pursuant to a Rule 506 exemption. Second, each purchaser who is not an accredited investor must be, either alone or in conjunction with a purchaser representative (as defined in Rule 501(f)), a person "who has such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters that he is capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment" or at least that the issuer reasonably believes each such non-accredited person (or his or her purchaser representative) meets that requirement. The Rule 506 exemption must also meet the same general conditions (including, limitations on the manner of the offering, resale of the subject security, and numbers of purchasers) as pertains to the Rule 505 exempt offering.

As a practical matter, most real estate venture promoters will desire to lawfully avoid the time-consuming and expensive federal registration process, particularly for a relatively small regional or local offering. In order to avoid the registration process, the promoter must avail himself or herself of a suitable registration exemption from registration. Probably, the least onerous federal exemption is the intrastate exemption provided by Rule 147 which will be available to the promoter who is able to limit the offer and sale of securities to the same state in which the issuer is resident and doing business. However, if the offering must cross state lines, then the promoter will most likely look to one of the Regulation D exemptions. Of those exemptions, the Rule 504 exemption is often the simplest to achieve. However, the Rule 504 exemption's relatively small offering limit of $1,000,000 may force the promoter to avail herself or himself of one of the remaining Regulation D exemptions. Of those two, Rule 505 and Rule 506, the Rule 505 exemption is probably the less stringent in that there is no requirement that the non-accredited investors be also sophisticated investors. But again, if the promoter has a need to acquire more than $5,000,000 of funding, she or he may have no choice but to meet the Rule 506 exemption requirements.

Of course, once the federal side of the securities law issues is complied with, the promoter still must take care to understand, and comply with, any state securities laws which may have application to the promoter's planned offering.

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 22A.17

§ 22A.17 State Securities Laws

As noted above, the appropriate registration or availability of an exemption of securities for federal securities law purposes does not also effect compliance with the state securities law, or so-called Blue Sky law, of any one or more states the securities laws of which may also apply to the particular offering. All fifty (50) states have some type of state securities law in place. Although the state securities laws have some similarities to the federal Securities Act and also to other state securities law, each state's securities laws must be reviewed to determine the proper compliance with that state's law if it is applicable to a particular securities offering. An organization called the North American Securities Administrators Association ("NASAA") maintains an excellent Internet website which contains links to all fifty (50) state securities websites and also websites of securities administrators in Canada; the NASAA website address containing these links is http://www.nasaa.org/industry_regulatory_resources/Directory_of_Securities_Laws_Regulations. A detailed treatment of all the state's securities laws is beyond the scope of this Practice Background. However, some general treatment is appropriate to the subject of the offer and sale of real estate securities.

First, a given state's Blue Sky law will generally apply to the offer and sale of the security only if the offer and sale is made to one or more persons within that state. The key factor as to the application of the Blue Sky law is not where any given offeree or purchaser resides but where the offer or sale of the securities is made. Also, as a general rule, the state Blue Sky laws normally provide that no security may be offered or sold within the state unless: (1) the security is registered or is exempt from registration, or (2) the security is offered or sold in a transaction which is exempt from registration. State Blue Sky laws provide for different types of registrations, define exempt securities and exempt transactions, and proscribe fraud in connection with the offer and sale of securities within the state.

[1] Registration Under the State Securities Laws

Whether a particular security offering must be registered in one or more states depends entirely on the securities law of each state. Even where a federal securities law exemption may be available, it may often be the case that there is not available an exemption under one or more of the state securities laws and, thus, the federally exempt securities offering must, nevertheless, be registered in one or more states. Although the particular registration process required to be availed of in one or more states may be a significant one, state securities registration is normally not as daunting as a federal securities law registration. Nearly all states securities laws provide for some form of full state registration, often called "qualification," and one or more forms of more abbreviated registration. For example, in the State of Ohio, a full registration is called Registration by Qualification;ⁿ¹ Ohio also provides for several more abbreviated forms of registration which are called Registration by Description.ⁿ² In most states, there is a form or registration which may be called something similar to Registration by Coordination or Registration by Notice which is an abbreviated form of registration used where the issuer has filed a federal registration. In such cases, the issuer is required only to file parts or all of the federal registration with or without some additional state forms to effect such an abbreviated state registration. Often, this type of registration will apply where the offering is a rather large national offering being made in all or many states.ⁿ³

In many states,ⁿ⁴ there is permitted a so-called Small Corporate Offering Registration ("SCOR") which is a type of uniform registration on Form U-7 promulgated by NASAA and which may be available where the issuer has availed itself of a federal exemption pursuant to a federal securities law registration exemption provided by Rule 504, Regulation A, or Rule 147. The Form U-7 is presented in a question and answer format and may be used in many states as a disclosure document to be given to prospective investors in lieu of a prospectus or other offering document. A majority of the states participate in the coordinated review of SCOR filings where a filing may be made in two (2) or more states within a geographical region and the review of the offering may be handled by a lead state within that region. At the present time, there are five (5) coordinated review regions, known as CR-SCOR-Mid-Atlantic (comprised of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia), CR-SCOR-Midwest (comprised of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin), CR-SCOR-New England (comprised of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont), CR-SCOR-Southwest (comprised of Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas), and CR-SCOR-West (comprised of Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming). (As of the date of this Release, a sixth (6th) coordinated review region, CR-SCOR-Southeast, is being formed). In order to determine the procedures employed in a region, contact should be made with one of the states in that region, as each CR-SCOR region operates independently and pursuant to procedures adopted by each region's participating states.ⁿ⁵ For the detailed requirements of a SCOR offering as promulgated in NASAA's Statement of Policy on the subject, see Form 22A.05 below. The SCOR offering alternative which has been adopted by certain states may vary somewhat in each state's qualifications for use.ⁿ⁶

[2] Registration Exemptions Under the State Securities Laws

The various state blue sky laws provide a myriad of securities and transactions which are exempt from the registration process. Many of those exemptions are "self-effectuating", i.e., do not require any further action or filing by the issuer to claim the exemption other than to meet its requirements. Typical securities which are exempt under state blue sky laws include:

(a) any security issued or guaranteed by the United States, any state, or any political subdivision of any state,ⁿ¹ (b) certain foreign government issued or guaranteed securities,ⁿ² (c) certain securities issued or guaranteed by a state,ⁿ³ (d) certain securities issued or guaranteed by a state or nationally chartered bank, savings and loan association, savings bank or credit union,ⁿ⁴ (e) certain securities listed, or authorized for listing, on certain securities exchanges or systems,ⁿ⁵ (f) certain securities issued by any railroad, other common carrier, public utility or holding company,ⁿ⁶ (g) certain equipment trust certificates,ⁿ⁷ (h) any security issued in connection with an employees' stock purchase, pension, savings, option, profit-sharing or similar employees' benefit plan,ⁿ⁸ or (i) certain commercial paper.ⁿ⁹

Transactions often exempted by state blue sky laws include:

(a) an isolated nonissuer transaction,ⁿ¹⁰ (b) any transaction between an issuer and an underwriter or among underwriters,ⁿ¹¹ (c) certain transactions in a bond or other evidence of indebtedness secured by a real estate mortgage, deed of trust, or security agreement,ⁿ¹² (d) a transaction by an executor, personal representative, administrator, sheriff, marshal, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, guardian, or conservator,ⁿ¹³ (e) a bona fide pledge or transaction in foreclosure of a pledge executed by a bona fide pledgee without any purpose of avoiding the securities act,ⁿ¹⁴ and (f) certain offerings to limited numbers of purchasers.ⁿ¹⁵

In the 1980s, NASAA proposed a new uniform exemption called the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE") as a state securities registration companion exemption to SEC Rule 505. Most states have adopted a version of the ULOE.ⁿ¹⁶ The primary threshold requirement of NASAA's ULOE is that the offering comply with SEC Rules 501-503 and 505. Furthermore, no commission or remuneration is to be given, directly or indirectly, to any person who is not appropriately registered in the applicable state. The issuer must not be disqualified by certain enumerated "bad boy" provisions. The issuer is to file a notice with the state administrator on SEC Form D.

[3] Summary of Registration and Exemption Provisions of the State Securities Laws

As was noted above with respect to the federal registration/exemption process, most real estate venture promoters will desire to minimize the state securities law compliance complexities relating to their offering. Sometimes the state securities law compliance may be driven or dictated by the federal compliance. For example, if there must be a federal registration of the offering, then normally the offering will be required also to be registered in one or more states as well, but the promoters may avail themselves of the availability of the more stream-lined state law registration by coordination process. Or, if the federal securities law compliance will entail reliance on the SEC Rule 505 exemption, then the relatively less complicated Uniform Limited Offering Exemption may be available in the states relevant to the particular offering.

However, it is important to note that each state's law where the offering will be made must be reviewed to determine the specific compliance issues involved in each state. Care must be taken not to assume that the specific requirements of a registration or exemption available in one or more states will necessarily also be available in other states as each state's securities laws have been adopted independently and any given state may have included or excluded an exemption or requirement commonly found in many other states.

§ 22A.31 Overview of Drafting Guidelines

The Subscription Agreement appearing in the following Section 22A.32 is a typical type of document that would be a part of a securities offering involving an offer of securities in a transaction which is fashioned to be exempt from federal securities law registration provisions pursuant to the so-called "intrastate offering" exemption or one of the Regulation D exemptions. The intrastate offering exemption is based upon section 3(a)(11) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 (the "1933 Act") and Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") Rule 147 promulgated thereunder. See § 22A.16[2][a] supra for a detailed discussion of the requirements of the intrastate offering exemption. The Regulation D Rules are SEC Rules 504, 505 (each of which is promulgated pursuant to Section 3(b) the 1933 Act, the so-called "small offering" exemption) or 506 (which is promulgated pursuant to Section 4(2) of the 1933 Act or the so-called "private offering" exemption). See § 22A.16[2][b] supra for a detailed discussion of the requirements of the Regulation D exemptions.

The document appearing below is a subscription agreement for units in an Ohio LLC which was formed to establish a relatively small family real estate investment vehicle. There are alternate provisions relating to the intrastate (SEC Rule 147) and the Regulation D (SEC Rules 504, 505, and 506) federal exemptions from registration; there are also provisions relating to several different state exemptions for small or limited offerings. The federal intrastate or SEC Rule 147 exemption does not require that any filing be made with the SEC to claim the exemption. However, reliance on one of the Regulation D exemptions usually involves the filing of a Form D with the SEC to claim the exemption. For an example of an SEC Form D, see Form 22A.10 infra. In some cases, the state securities law exemptions require no filings with any state securities agency, i.e., the exemptions are "self-effectuating," while in other cases, the state law exemption requires some type of notice filing with the appropriate state securities agency. Often, filing a copy of the SEC Form D with the appropriate state securities agency is also a sufficient filing to claim the state securities law exemption. The subscription agreement below contains a number of representations from the subscriber which relate to both the federal and state exemptions relied upon. This subscription agreement references the Federal SEC Rule 147 or Regulation D exemption and also the relevant state securities law exemption for small corporate-type equity offerings.

As can be seen below, the subscription agreement is printed in two columns. The left-hand column contains the subscription document itself, while the right-hand column contains several comments. These comments sometimes set forth some explanation of the provision opposite which it appears, while, at other times, the comment is meant to describe or discuss drafting alternatives to the provision opposite the comment.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)COMMENT(n1) The subparagraphs (A) which follow are alternative provisions which the drafter may wish to use depending upon the federal exemption being relied upon. Each references the appropriate statutory section of the Securities Act of 1933 provision which contains the exemption and the SEC Rule which is promulgated under that section. Some drafters may elect not to include such specific references but rather to use only a generic reference to reliance upon an exemption under the Federal Act so as to preserve, to the extent available, reliance upon more than one exemption if an issue later arises as to the availability of one of the exemptions.

(n2)COMMENT(n2) The intrastate offering exemption as authorized by Section 3(a)(11) and Rule 147 generally requires that the issuer and all of the purchasers be located within the same state. For more detailed information about this exemption, see § 22A.16[2][a] supra.

(n3)COMMENT(n3) The Rule 504 exemption is limited to offerings made by issuers not exceeding $1,000,000 and which meet the general applicable requirements set forth in SEC Rules 501-503 of Regulation D. There is no limit on the number of purchasers for this exemption. For more detailed information about this exemption, see § 22A.16[2][b][i] supra.

(n4)COMMENT(n4) The Rule 505 exemption is limited to offerings made by issuers not exceeding $5,000,000 and which meet the general applicable requirements set forth in SEC Rules 501-503 of Regulation D. This offering may be sold to no more than thirty-five (35) "non-accredited" purchasers. For more detailed information about this exemption, see § 22A.16[2][a] supra.

(n5)COMMENT(n5) The Rule 506 exemption does not contain any limit on the size of the offering, but is limited to no more than thirty-five (35) "non-accredited" purchasers. Also, the offering must meet the general applicable requirements set forth in SEC Rules 501-503 of Regulation D. For more detailed information about this exemption, see § 22A.16[2][a] supra.

(n6)COMMENT(n6) If the offering is being made under Rule 504 and the exception of Rule 504(b)(1) applies, then this provision is not necessary because the Securities will not be deemed restricted securities. See § 22A.16[2][a] supra for more detail.

(n8)COMMENT(n8) SEC Rule 147(e) provides that the securities sold in reliance upon the intrastate offering exemption may not be resold by the original purchaser within nine (9) months after the conclusion of the offering to any person who is not a resident in the same state as the original purchasers. Rule 147(f)(1)(i) further provides that this resale limitation must be included in a legend appearing on all certificates or other documents evidencing the securities sold in reliance on the intrastate exemption.

(n10)COMMENT(n10) The subparagraphs (D) which follow are alternative provisions which the drafter may wish to use depending upon the state securities law exemption being relied upon. Each references the appropriate statutory section of the applicable state law provision which contains the exemption. Some drafters may elect not to include such specific references but rather to use only a generic reference to reliance upon an exemption under any state law section so as to preserve, to the extent available, reliance upon more than one exemption if an issue later arises as to the availability of one of the exemptions.

(n11)COMMENT(n11) This provision refers not only to the broad enabling section of the Arizona Revised Statutes which authorize the Arizona corporation commission to create exemptions by rule but also the Rule cite in the Arizona Administrative Code which sets forth the requirements of various exemptions. Rule 126 is Arizona's rough counterpart to the SEC Regulation D exemptions. This exemption requires a notice filing which may be met by the filing of the SEC Form D.

(n12)COMMENT(n12) The California exemption referred to by this provision is a small offering type transactional exemption which requires both a notice filing and contains requirements as to the relationship between the Company and the purchasers or a degree of sophistication and experience on the part of the purchasers.

(n14)COMMENT(n14) A common (but not unanimous) requirement for many of the applicable federal and state exemptions frequently relied upon is that the issuer reasonably believe that the purchasers be purchasing for their own investment and not for the purpose of distribution or resale to others. This requirement is consistent with a private or limited offering which is what most of these exemptions contemplate.

(n15)COMMENT(n15) The federal and various state exemptions require that the issuer have a reasonable belief or make an inquiry regarding certain items relating to the purchasers in an offering based upon the applicable exemption being relied upon. In this paragraph, the drafter is attempting to comply in whole, or part, with these types of requirements.

(n16)COMMENT(n16) For example, subparagraph (A) is meant to comply with the requirement of SEC Rule 147(f)(1)(iii) that the issuer obtain a written representation from each purchaser as to the residence of each purchaser. As noted in Rule 147(d)(2), an individual is deemed to be a resident of the state in which the individual has his or her principal residence.

(n17)COMMENT(n17) Subparagraph (B) elicits a representation that the purchaser is an accredited investor; obviously, if that is not pertinent to the exemption in a particular offering, that representation can be omitted.

(n18)COMMENT(n18) Subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E), in part, are state-specific items which, in this case, are mandated by Ohio Division of Securities Rule which elaborates on the Section 1707.03(O) exemption requirement that each purchaser is purchasing for investment. See Ohio Admin. Code § 1301:6-3-03. Subparagraph (D) as the purchaser's intent to purchase for his or her own investment is also a requirement of many of the federal and state exemptions.

Subparagraph (E) also elicits an acknowledgment from the purchaser that the issuer has disclosed, and thus, met, the requirement of SEC Rule 147(f)(3) (which is not an explicit requirement of the Regulation D exemptions) that the issuer must disclose these restrictions to each purchaser.

(n20)COMMENT(n20) Subparagraph (G) is intended to elicit from the purchaser that the issuer has met its requirement set forth in Regulation D (specifically, SEC Rule 502(b)(2)(v) relating to Rule 505 and Rule 506 offerings) to give each purchaser this opportunity to obtain additional information.

(n21)COMMENT(n21) Subparagraphs (H) and (I) address another state-dictated requirement, in this case, being mandated expressly by Cal. Corp. Code Section 25102(f) which statutorily requires that each purchaser either have a pre-existing personal or business relationship with the issuer or be a person with sufficient business or financial experience (or be represented by professional advisers having such experience) so that the purchaser can fend for himself or herself with respect to the investment decision to purchase the securities being offered.

Obviously, the representations appearing in the document should be tailored to the set of federal and state law registration exemptions being relied upon. If the offering is not an intrastate offering, then it may be offered in more than one state and the drafter may need to include a variety of purchaser representations to comply with the different requirements of federal law and that of the states where the offering is being made.

Real estate investment trust offering prospectus--acquisition of diversified portfolio of income-producing health-care related real properties and leaseback to health care operators--firm commitment underwriting--Maryland issuer

COMMENT

The documents appearing below relate to an interstate offering subject to the registration and other requirements under the Federal Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934. These documents are a part of the necessary elements of a full securities registration filed on SEC Form S-11 under the Securities Act of 1933. Generally, a Form S-11 may be used to register securities offered by a real estate investment trust, as defined under Section 856 of the Internal Revenue Code, or securities issued by other issuers whose business involves primarily the acquisition and holding of real estate for investment. The Form S-11 registration is comprised of the following:

- (1) required cover sheet information;
- (2) a Part I, which sets forth certain information required to be contained in the Prospectus;
- (3) a Part II, which sets forth certain other information which is required to be filed with the Form S-11 but which is not required to appear in the Prospectus and which contains required financial statements and other required exhibits; and
- (4) required signatures of certain of the issuer's principal executives.

The Instructions to the Form S-11 refer to certain SEC regulations which contain more specific requirements as to information required by each item of the Form S-11. SEC Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.10, et seq., sets forth more specific requirements as to much of the information required in Parts I and II of Form S-11; financial disclosure requirements are set forth in detail in Regulation S-X, 17 C.F.R. § 210.1-01, et seq.

It should be emphasized that an effective federal registration statement does not automatically qualify the offering under the Blue Sky laws of every state. Some jurisdictions have even more stringent requirements than the Securities and Exchange Commission for the sale of real estate interests. Accordingly, in any state where sales literature is to be distributed and investments solicited, the particular securities laws must be consulted. Also, because real estate offerings are particularly susceptible to Internal Revenue Service scrutiny, it is imperative that federal tax consequences to the prospective investor be spelled out in readily understandable language. The instructions to Form S-11 require that discussion; the prospective investor should also be alerted to the advisability of seeking expert advice from his or her own tax counsel. For a more detailed treatment of the federal income tax consequences of REITs, see TB §§ 22A.06.

5,800,000 SHARES AMERICAN CAPITAL TRUST, INC. COMMON STOCK _____

All of the shares (the "Shares") of Common Stock, $.001 par value per share (the "Common Stock"), offered hereby (the "Offering") are being issued and sold by American Capital Trust, Inc. (the "Company"), which will invest in a diversified portfolio of income-producing healthcare-related real estate. Concurrently with the consummation of this Offering, the Company intends to acquire an initial portfolio of 20 properties (the "Initial Properties") to be leased and operated by five healthcare operators. The lessees will include subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation ("WELLHEALTH"), Oregon HealthCorp ("Oregon"), Total Health Services, Inc. ("Total Health"), Proxy Health Group, Inc. ("Quorum") and Health Surgery Corporation ("Surgical Health"). The Company expects to qualify as a real estate investment trust ("REIT") under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), for the year ended _____ [month] _____ [day], _____ [year], and to pay regular quarterly dividends, beginning with a dividend for the remainder of the quarter ended _____ [month] _____ [day], _____ [year]. See "Distributions to Stockholders."

Prior to this offering, there has been no public market for the Common Stock. It is currently estimated that the initial offering price will be between $18 and $20 per share. See "Underwriting" for information relating to the factors considered in determining the initial public offering price. The Company intends to apply for listing of the Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol "_____."

See "Risk Factors" for certain factors relevant to an investment in the Common Stock offered hereby, including the following:

--The Company is recently organized and has no operating history. Failure to consummate the purchase of one or more properties could have an adverse effect on the amount of distributions to stockholders.

--The ability of the Lessees of the properties to be acquired by the Company to make lease payments as and when due is dependent in part upon no material adverse change in existing government regulation and reimbursement in the healthcare industry and on the financial condition of such Lessees and the Guarantors of such payments.

--The Company will be taxed as a corporation if it fails to qualify as a REIT. In order to qualify and to maintain the Company's qualification as a REIT, direct and indirect beneficial ownership by any person or entity of more than 9.8% in value of the outstanding Common Stock is restricted. See "Description of Securities." This may have the effect of hindering potential takeovers of the Company.

--The Company's Board of Directors has the authority to change the investment policies of the Company without approval of the stockholders.

--While all of the Initial Properties have been appraised and are being purchased by the Company at purchase prices not more than the appraised value, appraisals are only estimates of value and should not be relied upon as a precise measure of realizable value.

--The purchasers of the Shares will experience an immediate dilution in the net tangible book value of the Common Stock.

THESE SECURITIES HAVE NOT BEEN APPROVED OR DISAPPROVED BY THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION OR ANY STATE SECURITIES COMMISSION, NOR HAS THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION OR ANY STATE SECURITIES COMMISSION PASSED UPON THE ACCURACY OR ADEQUACY OF THIS PROSPECTUS. ANY REPRESENTATION TO THE CONTRARY IS A CRIMINAL OFFENSE.

PROSPECTUS SUMMARY

The following summary should be read in conjunction with, and is qualified in its entirety by, the more detailed descriptions and financial information and statements appearing elsewhere in this Prospectus. Except as otherwise noted, the information set forth in this Prospectus assumes (i) the acquisition of and full payment for the 20 Initial Properties and (ii) no exercise of the Underwriters' over-allotment option. As used herein, unless the context requires otherwise, the term "Company" includes American Capital Trust, Inc., a Maryland corporation, and its subsidiaries. For the definition of capitalized terms not otherwise defined herein, including certain proper names of sellers of Initial Properties, Lessees, Guarantors and related parties, see "Glossary."

THE COMPANY

The Company was recently organized to qualify as an indefinite life real estate investment trust. The Company intends to invest in a diversified portfolio of healthcare properties. Upon completion of this Offering, the Company will acquire and lease back the 20 Initial Properties to five healthcare operators. The Lessees will include Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation, Oregon HealthCorp, Total Health Services, Inc., Proxy Health Group, Inc. and Health Surgery Corporation.

The Initial Properties are located in ten states primarily in the southeastern and western regions of the United States and represent a variety of facility types in diverse healthcare industry segments. The Initial Properties will be acquired for an aggregate purchase price of $115.1 million and will provide annual Base Rent to the Company of approximately $12.7 million. All of the Initial Properties have been appraised and will be purchased at prices not more than their respective appraised values. All of the Leases, which are Triple Net Leases, provide for Additional Rent commencing after the first year. All of the Leases have primary terms of 10 to 15 years and options to extend the term at least 10 additional years. WELLHEALTH, Total Health, Oregon, Quorum and Health Surgery are guarantors (the "Guarantors") of the obligations of their respective Subsidiaries under the Leases. Each of the Guarantors has one or more classes of publicly-traded debt or equity securities, except for Surgical Health, which recently filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") relating to the issuance of senior subordinated notes. The Company intends to close all of the Initial Properties into escrow on or before the Effective Date of the Offering and to release the Initial Properties from escrow as soon as practical after the closing of the Offering.

The Company's strategy is to become a leading provider of healthcare facility capital by investing in a high quality portfolio of properties managed by established operators, including long-term care, hospital management, rehabilitation and alternate-site care companies. The Company intends to diversify its portfolio by operator, geography, facility type and healthcare industry segment. Its investment criteria emphasize the credit quality of the lessee and any guarantor, competitive position of the property, attractiveness of the industry segment and fit with the Company's existing portfolio. The Company believes that there currently is significant demand for REIT financing capital in the healthcare industry. In addition, the Company believes the substantial healthcare industry experience and industry relationships of its management and directors will help the Company identify, evaluate and complete additional investments.

The Company has a written commitment for a $30 million line of credit (the "Bank Credit Facility") from AmTrust of Alabama, N.A. ("AmTrust") with which to fund a portion of the purchase price for the Initial Properties and to fund additional investments. The Company may enter into interest rate swaps in order to mitigate the effect of a rising interest rate environment on the cost of the Bank Credit Facility.

The Company will be self-administered and self-managed and will not engage or pay a separate advisor.

The Initial Properties, which will not be subject to any previously existing mortgage debt when acquired, are summarized in the following table by Guarantor:

had been signed for over 93% of the rentable space.

(5) The purchase price will equal the actual cost of construction plus $125,000 with a maximum of $7,325,000. The Company currently estimates a purchase price of $7,125,000.

Ancillary hospital facilities, which are contiguous or adjacent to a hospital, provide a variety of medical services such as diagnostic, outpatient surgery and rehabilitation services, in addition to physician offices and selected hospital support services. Outpatient rehabilitation facilities offer a comprehensive range of rehabilitative healthcare services, including physical therapy and occupational therapy, and focus predominantly on orthopaedic injuries, sports injuries, work injuries, hand and upper extremity injuries, back injuries and various neurological/neuromuscular conditions. Long-term care facilities generally provide a variety of extended care and services to the elderly. Sub-acute care facilities provide monitoring, specialized care and comprehensive rehabilitative therapy required by sub-acute and medically complex patients. Ambulatory surgery centers provide various surgical procedures, typically on an outpatient basis.

The Company may fund the purchase of additional properties by future equity or debt financing or by reinvestment of proceeds from the sale of properties. The Company may incur indebtedness and mortgage its properties in furtherance of its activities. There are no restrictions on the number of mortgages which may be placed on a single property. The Company's present policy prohibits incurring debt (secured or unsecured) in excess of 50% of its total capitalization. However, this debt limitation policy can be changed by the Board of Directors without stockholder approval. Moreover, there are no Bylaws or other provisions that require such limitation. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations--Liquidity and Capital Resources" and "Investment and Other Policies."

The Company has agreed to reimburse the actual costs incurred by American Capital Partners (the "Partnership") on behalf of the Company up to $1,475,000 from the proceeds of the Offering. American Capital Partners is an Alabama general partnership, the partners of which are M. Donal Rushmore, W. Gill McDaniel and Dee Martin Michaels. These costs relate to the activities of the Partnership prior to the formation of the Company, including organizing the Company, negotiating the acquisitions of the Initial Properties, performing due diligence investigation related to the Initial Properties, performing corporate work in contemplation of the Offering, preparing the Registration Statement, providing interim financing for and closing the acquisition of the Initial Properties, employee compensation (including salaries of the executive officers), travel and overhead. In addition, W. Gill McDaniel, M. Donal Rushmore, Dee Martin Michaels and WELLHEALTH (the "Founding Stockholders") purchased 180,000 Shares for $.001 per share, which are valued at $3,420,000 based upon the midpoint of the filing range. See "Management--Certain Transactions" for more detailed information relating to the amounts to be received by affiliates of the Company upon completion of the Offering, and "Principal Stockholders" with respect to the stock ownership of such persons.

The Company's principal executive offices are located at Six Central Southern Bldg., Suite 101-A, Birmingham, Alabama 35243, and its telephone number is (555) 111-6666.

RISK FACTORS

Prospective investors should consider carefully the matters discussed under "Risk Factors" prior to making an investment decision regarding the Shares offered hereby. Some of the significant considerations include:

--Lack of Operating History and Inexperience of Management in Operating a REIT. The Company has been recently organized and has no operating history. The Company will be self-administered and therefore will not have a third-party investment advisor. Management of the Company has not had prior experience in operating a REIT.

--Real Estate Investment Risks. Investments in the Initial Properties and any additional properties in which the Company may invest in the future are subject to risks, including illiquidity, typically associated with investments in real estate. The Company intends to concentrate its investments in healthcare-related properties and will be subject to the risks associated with investing in a single industry.

--Dependence on Lessees and Guarantors and Potential Reduction in Revenues. The success of the Company's investments will be dependent upon the success of the businesses of the Lessees and of the Guarantors of such Leases. There is no assurance that the Company will be able to renew its Leases upon their expiration or that unfavorable economic, demographic or competitive conditions or industry reform will not adversely affect the financial condition of the Lessees and/or the Guarantors and, consequently, Lease revenues and the value of the Company's investment in the Initial Properties.

--Environmental Risks and Cost of Remediation. Under various federal, state and local environmental laws, ordinances and regulations, an owner of real property, such as the Company, may be responsible for certain liabilities relating to environmental risks, including the costs of remediation, which could adversely affect the financial condition of the Company.

--Development Projects. The Company may enter into build-to-suit type agreements that by their terms require conversion to leases upon the completion of the development of the property. Such activities, if undertaken, might subject the Company to risks related to delays in construction, cost of materials, financing availability, volatility in interest rates, labor availability and other property development uncertainties.

--Healthcare Industry Risks. The healthcare industry is highly regulated by federal and state laws, licensing requirements, property inspections, reimbursement policies, regulations concerning capital and other expenditures and certification requirements. The failure of any Lessee to comply with such laws, requirements and regulations could affect its ability to operate the property or properties which it leases from the Company. New federal or state laws or regulations may be enacted or promulgated which would have a material adverse effect on the Lessees, and in turn on the Company. Additionally, the uncertainty associated with current proposals for comprehensive national healthcare reform may adversely affect the Lessees and the Guarantors, and in turn the Company.

--Reduction in Dividends from Failure to Qualify as a REIT. If in any taxable year the Company did not qualify as a REIT, it would be taxed as a corporation and distributions to stockholders would not be deductible by the Company in computing its taxable income. In addition, unless the Company were entitled to relief under certain statutory provisions, the Company would also be disqualified from treatment as a REIT for the four succeeding years following the year in which qualification was lost. Failure to so qualify, even in one taxable year, could cause the Company to dramatically reduce its dividends.

--Restrictions on Transfer and Limitations on Ownership of Shares. In order to assist the Company in meeting certain tests applicable to REITs with respect to the ownership of its capital stock, the Company's Articles of Incorporation contain certain restrictions on the transfers of Common Stock. These restrictions may deter acquisition of control of the Company by third parties.

--Risks of Leverage and Default. Subject to any limitations on borrowings which may be imposed under the Bank Credit Facility, the Company may borrow funds and mortgage its properties in connection with the acquisition of additional properties and for purposes of funding other capital and operating expenditures. If the Company defaults on any loan secured by mortgages or other security interests on any of its properties, the lenders may foreclose on such property and the Company could lose its investment therein.

--Change in Investment Policies. The Company's Board of Directors may change the investment policies of the Company without stockholder approval. Such policy changes may have adverse consequences to the Company.

--Competition. The Company competes for property acquisitions with, among others, healthcare providers, other healthcare-related REITs, real estate partnerships and financial institutions. The Company's properties will be subject to competition from the properties of other healthcare providers.

--Dependence on Key Personnel. The Company is dependent on certain of its executive officers.

--Conflicts of Interest. Two of the nine directors of the Company are executive officers and directors of WELLHEALTH. WELLHEALTH is a stockholder of the Company and will be the Lessee or Guarantor of 10 of the Initial Properties to be acquired from WELLHEALTH or its Subsidiaries (the "WELLHEALTH Initial Properties"). Conflicts of interest exist in such directors' duties to holders of the Company's Common Stock and to stockholders of WELLHEALTH. Two of the nine directors of the Company are also directors of Total Health and Health Surgery. Total Health and Health Surgery will be the Lessee or Guarantor of two and three of the Initial Properties, respectively, to be acquired from Total Health and Health Surgery or their respective Subsidiaries. Conflicts of interest may arise in their duties to holders of the Company's Common Stock and stockholders of Total Health and Surgical Health, respectively.

--Appraisals. While all of the Initial Properties have been appraised and are being purchased by the Company at purchase prices not more than appraised value, appraisals are only estimates of value and should not be relied upon as a precise measure of realizable value. See "Business--Appraisals."

--Dilution. The purchasers of the Shares will experience an immediate dilution in the net tangible book value per share of the Common Stock.

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVES

The Company will seek to generate stable and increasing distributions through a self-administered portfolio management program that will allow the Company to maintain diversity and expand the Company's healthcare properties portfolio. The Company's investment objectives are: (i) to generate current income for stockholders; (ii) to provide increased returns to stockholders through the acquisition and development of additional properties, which may require the use of additional debt or equity financing; (iii) to provide stockholders with the opportunity to realize capital growth resulting from appreciation, if any, in the residual values of properties acquired; and (iv) to preserve and protect stockholders' capital. There can be no assurance that the Company will be successful in meeting these objectives. See "Risk Factors" and "Investment and Other Policies."

USE OF PROCEEDS

At the midpoint of the filing range, the net proceeds to the Company from the sale of the Shares offered hereby are estimated to be approximately $102,115,000 after deduction of estimated underwriting commissions and Offering expenses. The purchase price of the Initial Properties, including net estimated acquisition expenses of approximately $1,050,000, will be approximately $116,150,000. All of the net proceeds will be applied against the purchase price of the Initial Properties. The balance of the purchase price required for the Initial Properties will be covered by borrowings of approximately $14,185,000 under the Bank Credit Facility. The acquisitions of the respective Initial Properties are expected to take place as soon as practical after consummation of the Offering or, in the case of the South County facility, as soon as practical after the completion of its construction and the issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy, which is expected to occur in May ____[Year]. As of April 15, ____[Year], leases had been signed for over 93% of the rentable space. See "Business--Initial Properties."

Cash available for distribution (2)	--	$	2,667,994	$	10,671,971

Cash available for distribution per share (2)	--		0.45	$	1.78

(1) The Company was incorporated on March 31, [Year].

(2) Cash available for distribution is net income plus depreciation, amortization and other non-cash items less accrued rental income. Distributions in excess of net income generally constitute a return of capital. Management considers cash available for distribution to be an informative measure of the performance of an equity REIT and consistent with measures used by analysts to evaluate equity REITs. Cash available for distribution does not represent cash generated from operating activities in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, is not necessarily indicative of cash available to fund cash needs and should not be considered as an alternative to net income as an indicator of the Company's operating performance or as an alternative to cash flow as a measure of liquidity.

DISTRIBUTIONS TO STOCKHOLDERS

The Company intends to make quarterly distributions to stockholders of approximately 85% to 95% of its cash available for distribution. In any event, the Company intends to pay annual amounts at least sufficient to satisfy the annual distribution requirements imposed on REITs. In general, such REIT distribution requirements provide that at least 95% of the Company's REIT taxable income must be distributed annually to stockholders, which on a pro forma basis would equal $1.35 per share. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Taxation of the Company." The Company expects to distribute dividends in excess of 95% of its REIT taxable income. Payment of dividends, however, will be at the discretion of the Company's Board of Directors at all times and will depend upon various factors including the Company's financial condition, earnings, anticipated investments, and other relevant factors. Under certain circumstances, it may be necessary for the Company to borrow or liquidate investments to satisfy its REIT distribution requirements. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations" and "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations--Liquidity and Capital Resources."

On a pro forma basis, aggregate Base Rent under the Leases results in cash available for distribution of $1.78 per Share after deducting interest and operating expenses. Such cash available for distribution does not give effect to any delay in the acquisition of or failure to acquire the Initial Properties, to any payments of Additional Rent, to the acquisition of any properties in addition to those identified in this Prospectus or the incurrence of indebtedness in connection therewith. No assurance can be given that the Initial Properties will perform as expected or that the anticipated cash available for distribution will be obtained. On a [Year] pro forma basis, approximately 11% to 21% of the distributions anticipated to be made by the Company represent return of capital for federal income tax purposes and, therefore, would not be subject to current federal income tax. Such nontaxable distributions would reduce a stockholder's tax basis in its Common Stock and any gain or loss recognized on the subsequent sale of such Shares or upon liquidation of the Company would be increased or reduced accordingly. Any distributions that exceed a stockholder's basis in its Common Stock would be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of such Common Stock for federal income tax purposes. See "Distributions to Stockholders" and "Pro Forma Financial Statements."

For each of the first six quarters in which dividends are paid by the Company, the Founding Stockholders have consented to contribute to the Company the after-tax portion of any dividends distributed to them for such quarter if (i) the annualized dividends paid in such quarter do not exceed $1.70 per share ($0.425 per share per quarter) or (ii) the aggregate dividends paid in such quarter on the outstanding shares exceed 95% of the cash available for distribution for the relevant quarterly period.

TAX STATUS OF THE COMPANY

The Company intends to qualify and to make an election to be taxed as a REIT under Section 856(c) of the Code, commencing with its taxable year ending December 31, [Year]. If the Company so qualifies and elects taxation as a REIT, the Company generally will not be subject to federal income tax to the extent that it distributes its REIT taxable income to stockholders. REITs are subject to a number of organizational and operational requirements. If the Company fails to qualify as a REIT in any taxable year, the Company will be subject to federal income tax (including any alternative minimum tax) on its taxable income at regular corporate rates. See "Risk Factors" and "Federal Income Tax Considerations" for a more detailed discussion of the consequences of the failure of the Company to qualify as a REIT. Even if the Company qualifies as a REIT, the Company may be subject to state and local taxes on its income and property and federal income and excise taxes on its undistributed income.

RISK FACTORS

An investment in the Common Stock involves various risks. There can be no assurance that the Company will achieve its investment objectives. In addition to general investment risks and those factors set forth elsewhere in this Prospectus, investors should consider the following factors before making a decision to purchase Shares.

LACK OF OPERATING HISTORY AND

INEXPERIENCE OF MANAGEMENT IN OPERATING A REIT

The Company has been recently organized and has no operating history. The Company will be self-administered and therefore will not have a third-party investment advisor. The Company's Board of Directors and executive officers will have overall responsibility for management of the Company. Although certain of the Company's officers and directors have extensive experience in the acquisition, development, financing and leasing of real properties and certain of the Company's directors have extensive experience in the operation of healthcare facilities and publicly-owned corporations, no officer has prior experience in the healthcare industry nor in operating a business in accordance with the Code requirements for maintaining qualification as a REIT. Failure to maintain REIT status would have an adverse effect on the Company's ability to make anticipated distributions to stockholders. There can be no assurance that the past experience of management will be appropriate to the business of the Company. See "Management."

LESS CASH AVAILABLE FOR DISTRIBUTION FROM FAILURE TO PURCHASE OR DELAY IN PURCHASING THE INITIAL PROPERTIES

The purchase of one or more of the Initial Properties may not be consummated or may be delayed for various reasons, such as the occurrence of significant casualty losses or, in the case of the South County Medical Center facility, any delays in construction. If the acquisition of any of the Initial Properties is not consummated prior to the closing date specified in the respective Purchase Agreements, the seller of such Initial Property may not be obligated thereafter to sell such Initial Property to the Company. The Company intends to close the purchase of the Initial Properties into escrow on or before the Effective Date of the Offering, and such Initial Properties will be released from escrow as soon as practical after the closing of the Offering, except for the South County Medical Center facility, which will be acquired as soon as practical after the completion of its construction and the issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy, which is expected to occur in May [Year]. As of April 15, [Year], leases had been signed for over 93% of the rentable space in the South County Medical Center. Pending identification and acquisition of alternative properties to purchase, should the consummation of the purchase of any of the Initial Properties not occur as and when planned, the funds intended for such acquisition will be invested in accordance with the Company's investment policies. The anticipated yield on such interim investments, if made, will be substantially less than the expected return on the Initial Properties and the other real estate investments that the Company will seek to make and less than the anticipated level of distributions to the Company's stockholders.

In addition, if the purchase of any of the Initial Properties does not occur, there can be no assurance that the terms of the Lease for any property acquired in substitution for such Initial Properties will be as advantageous to the Company as those pertaining to the property that was not acquired. If this occurs, there may be an adverse effect on the Company's ability to make the anticipated distributions to stockholders.

SPECIFIC RISKS RELATING TO HEALTHCARE FACILITIES

Lessees' Reliance on Government Reimbursement. A significant portion of the revenue of the Lessees and the Guarantors is derived from government reimbursement programs, such as Medicare and Medicaid. Although lease payments to the Company are not directly linked to the level of government reimbursement, to the extent that changes in these programs have a material adverse affect on the Lessees, such changes could have an impact on their ability to make lease payments. The Medicare program is highly regulated and subject to frequent and substantial changes. In recent years, fundamental changes in the Medicare program (including the implementation of a prospective payment system ("PPS") in which facilities are reimbursed generally a flat amount based on a patient's diagnosis and not based on the facility's cost for inpatient services at medical surgical hospitals) have resulted in reduced levels of payment for a substantial portion of healthcare services. The Medicaid program is a federally-mandated, state-run program providing benefits to low income and other eligible persons and is funded through a combination of state and federal funding. The method of reimbursement under Medicaid varies from state to state, but is typically based on rates negotiated between the provider and the state, or is based on per diem or per diagnosis rates similar to Medicare. Moreover, healthcare facilities have experienced increasing pressures from private payors attempting to control healthcare costs that have reduced reimbursement to levels approaching that of government payors. See "Business--Government Regulation."

Considerable uncertainties surround the future determination of payment levels under government reimbursement programs. In addition, future budget reductions in government financed programs could significantly reduce payments made to Lessees and Guarantors, and there can be no assurance that future payment rates will be sufficient to cover cost increases in providing services to patients. Reductions in payments pursuant to government healthcare programs could have an adverse impact on a Lessee's or Guarantor's financial condition and, therefore, could adversely affect the ability of the Lessee or Guarantor to make rental payments.

Impact of Reduced Occupancy Rates in Hospitals Adjacent to Ancillary Hospital Facilities Being Acquired. Most of the hospitals adjacent to the ancillary hospital facilities being acquired are substantially less than fully occupied on an inpatient basis. Despite such occupancy rates, however, the Company believes that operating cash flow produced by such hospitals will adequately cover rental payments to the Company on a pro forma basis. See information regarding annual coverage ratios under the caption "Business--Initial Properties." If the inpatient occupancy rate at such a hospital were to deteriorate to a level at which operating cash flow would be insufficient to cover the rental payments to the Company on the particular ancillary hospital facility, the Company would have to rely upon the general credit of the Lessee or the related Guarantor.

Healthcare Reform. The healthcare industry is undergoing significant changes as third-party payors attempt to control the cost, utilization and delivery of healthcare services. In addition, President Clinton recently announced a comprehensive healthcare reform proposal which includes such elements as universal coverage and the acquisition of coverage through regional health alliances. Political and other cost-control initiatives regarding the cost and delivery of healthcare are also currently being considered, and reductions in payments to physicians or other changes in reimbursement for healthcare services by other third-party payors could materially adversely affect the financial condition of the tenants of some of the Initial Properties. Substantially all of the tenants of the Initial Properties are in the medical profession and the Company believes that such tenants are dependent on payment for their services by third-party payors. No assurance can be given whether or to what extent, if any, the President's healthcare proposals will be enacted into law, or what effect any such proposals or subsequent legislation, if any, or other changes regarding healthcare would have on the financial condition of the tenants of the Initial Properties and their ability to make lease payments or renew leases.

Proximity to Hospitals. Some of the Initial Properties are in close proximity to one or more hospitals. The relocation or closure of a hospital could make the Company's Initial Properties in such area less desirable to doctors affiliated with such hospital and affect the Lessee's ability to renew leases and attract new tenants.

Government Regulation of Healthcare Industry. The healthcare industry is highly regulated by federal, state and local law, state and local licensing requirements, facility inspections, reimbursement policies, regulations concerning capital and other expenditures, certification requirements and other laws, regulations and rules. The failure of any Lessee or sublessee to comply with such laws, requirements and regulations could affect the Lessee's ability to operate the Initial Property or Initial Properties which it leases from the Company.

Potential Operator Loss of License or Certification. Healthcare operators are subject to federal and state laws and regulations which govern financial and other arrangements between healthcare providers. These laws prohibit certain direct and indirect payments or fee-splitting arrangements between healthcare providers that are designed to induce or encourage the referral of patients to, or the recommendation of, a particular provider for medical products and services. They also require compliance with a variety of safety, health and other requirements relating to the conditions of the licensed facility and quality of care provided. Possible sanctions for violation of these laws and regulations include loss of license or certification and the imposition of civil monetary and criminal penalties.

In certain circumstances, conviction of abusive or fraudulent behavior with respect to one facility may subject other facilities under common control or ownership to disqualification from participation in the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

Because this area of the law currently is subject to intense scrutiny, additional laws and regulations may be enacted which could require changes in certain operations of the Lessees and sublessees of the Company's Initial Properties. A Lessee's loss of license or Medicare/Medicaid certification could result in the Company having to obtain another Lessee for the affected Initial Property. No assurances can be given that the Company could contract with such a Lessee on a timely basis or on acceptable terms and a failure of the Company to do so could have an adverse effect on the Company's revenues.

Limitations on Transfers and Alternative Uses of Initial Properties. Transfers of operations of certain healthcare facilities are subject to regulatory approvals not required for transfers of other types of commercial operations and other types of real estate. In addition, certain of the Initial Properties are special purpose facilities that may not be easily adaptable to non-healthcare-related uses.

RISKS OF LEVERAGE AND DEFAULT

The Company may incur indebtedness and mortgage its properties in furtherance of its activities. The Company's present policy prohibits incurring debt (secured or unsecured) in excess of 50% of total capitalization. However, this limitation can be changed by the Board of Directors without stockholder approval. Moreover, there are no Bylaws or other provisions which require such limitation.

The Company may borrow funds and mortgage its properties in connection with the acquisition of additional properties and for purposes of funding other capital and operating expenditures, including expenditures relating to the renovation, modification or expansion of Initial Properties. In addition, the Company may be required to borrow money and/or mortgage its properties to fund any cash shortfall in order to meet its cash distribution requirements if 95% of the Company's REIT taxable income exceeds its cash available for distribution. See "Investment and Other Policies." The Company expects that in the definitive agreements for the Bank Credit Facility it will be prohibited from declaring or paying dividends (other than as the Company determines is necessary to maintain its status as a REIT for federal income tax purposes) if at the time of such action an event of default under the Bank Credit Facility has occurred and is continuing or would exist immediately after giving effect to such action. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations--Liquidity and Capital Resources."

Any borrowings, including borrowings under the Bank Credit Facility, as well as the resulting interest expense and principal repayments therefrom, could negatively affect the Company's cash available for distribution. If the Company defaults on any loan secured by mortgages the Company may place on any of its properties, the lenders may foreclose on such property and the Company could lose its investment therein. The degree of risk associated with borrowings will increase if the Company borrows on terms involving a variable interest rate or a "balloon" payment at maturity.

BOARD MAY CHANGE INVESTMENT POLICIES

The Company's Board of Directors may change the investment policies of the Company without stockholder approval. Such policy changes may have adverse consequences on the Company.

DILUTION

The purchasers of the Shares offered hereby will experience immediate dilution of $1.924 per share in the net tangible book value ($1.846 per share assuming full exercise of the Underwriters' over-allotment option).

REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT RISKS

Illiquidity of Real Estate Investments. Investments in the Initial Properties or properties in which the Company may invest in the future are subject to risks typically associated with investments in real estate. Equity investments in real estate are relatively illiquid, and, therefore, the ability of the Company to vary its portfolio in response to changed conditions will be limited.

Lack of Industry Diversification. While the Company is authorized to invest in various types of income-producing real estate, its current strategy is to acquire and hold, for long-term investment, healthcare-related properties. Consequently, the Company currently has chosen not to include assets selected to reduce risks associated with an investment in real estate in the healthcare industry, and will be subject to the risks associated with investments in a single industry.

Reliance on Lessees and Guarantors. The success of the Company's investments in the Initial Properties will be dependent on the success of the business of the Lessees and on the Guarantors with respect to each Lease. The operating results of the Initial Properties underlying the Company's investments will depend upon various factors over which the Company will have no control and which may affect the present or future cash flows of the Company. Those factors include general economic conditions, changes in the supply of, or demand for, competing healthcare facilities, changes in occupancy levels, the ability of the Lessees through rate increases or otherwise to absorb increases in operating expenses and changes in government regulations and zoning laws.

No assurance can be given that a Lessee will exercise any option to renew its Lease upon the expiration of the initial term. In such an instance, the Company may not be able to locate a qualified purchaser or a qualified replacement tenant, as a result of which it would lose a source of revenue while remaining responsible for the payment of its obligations.

Environmental Risks and Cost of Remediation. Under various federal, state and local environmental laws, ordinances and regulations, an owner of real property (such as the Company will be) may be liable for the costs of removal or remediation of certain hazardous or toxic substances at, under or disposed of in connection with such property, as well as certain other potential costs relating to hazardous or toxic substances (including government fines and injuries to persons and adjacent property). Such laws often impose liability without regard to whether the owner knew of, or was responsible for, the presence or disposal of such substances and may be imposed on the owner in connection with the activities of an operator of the property. The cost of any required remediation, removal, fines or personal or property damages and the owner's liability therefor could exceed the value of the property and/or the aggregate assets of the owner. In addition, the presence of such substances, or the failure to properly dispose of or remediate such substances, may adversely affect the owner's ability to sell or rent such property or to borrow using such property as collateral, which in turn would reduce the Company's revenues and ability to make distributions.

Although the Purchase Agreements and the Leases require the seller or Lessee, as the case may be, to indemnify the Company for certain environmental liabilities, the scope of such obligations may be limited and there can be no assurances that any such seller or Lessee will be able to fulfill its indemnification obligations. Nor can there be any assurance that those indemnities will be sufficient to cover any liability for any or all of the hazardous substances that may exist at the Initial Properties. See "Business--Environmental Matters."

Development Projects. The Company's investment policies permit it to enter into build-to-suit type agreements that by their terms require conversion to leases upon the completion of the development of the facility. The Initial Properties do not include any development projects. Such activities, if undertaken, might subject the Company to risks related to delays in construction, cost of materials, financing availability, volatility in interest rates, labor availability and other property development uncertainties. Development projects are generally considered to involve greater risks than the sale and lease-back of operating properties. See "Investment and Other Policies--Investment Policy." Although the Company will attempt to minimize the risks associated with development activities, including obtaining additional forms of security and collateral beyond that provided by the Leases, no assurances can be given that such additional security will be effective.

CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURE TO QUALIFY AS A REIT

The Company intends at all times to elect and operate so as to qualify as a REIT. If the Company qualifies as a REIT, it will generally be allowed a deduction for dividends paid to its stockholders in computing its federal taxable income. This treatment substantially eliminates the "double taxation" of corporate earnings. If in any taxable year the Company did not qualify as a REIT, it would be taxed as a corporation and distributions to stockholders would not be deductible by the Company in computing taxable income. In addition, unless the Company were entitled to relief under certain statutory provisions, the Company would also be disqualified from electing treatment as a REIT for the four succeeding years following the year in which qualification was lost. Failure to so qualify, even in one taxable year, could cause the Company to dramatically reduce its dividends.

To qualify as a REIT, the Company will be required, among other things, to distribute at least 95% of its REIT taxable income to stockholders each year. In order to maintain status as a REIT, the Company must satisfy certain requirements on a continuing basis, which requirements may substantially affect day-to-day decision making by the Company. No assurance can be given that the Company will at all times satisfy these tests. Possible timing differences between receipt of income and payment of expenses, and the inclusion and deduction of such amounts in determining taxable income, could require the Company to reduce its dividends below the level necessary to maintain its qualification as a REIT, which would adversely affect the Company's ability to maintain REIT status. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Taxation of the Company."

Even if the Company qualifies as a REIT, certain transactions or other events could result in the imposition of federal tax at rates ranging from four percent to 100% on certain types of the Company's income or gains.

RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSFER AND LIMITATIONS ON OWNERSHIP OF CAPITAL STOCK

For the Company to qualify as a REIT in any taxable year (other than the first year for which the Company elects to be taxed as a REIT), no more than 50% in value of its outstanding capital stock may be owned directly, or indirectly by attribution, by five or fewer individuals (as defined in the Code to include certain entities) at any time during the second half of the Company's taxable year. In addition (other than during the first year for which the Company elects to be treated as a REIT), the outstanding stock must be owned by 100 or more persons during at least 335 days of a taxable year of 12 months or during a proportional part of a shorter taxable year. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations."

Because of the stock ownership requirements applicable to REITs, the Company's Articles of Incorporation contain restrictions on transfer of its stock. Such restrictions authorize the Company to refuse to transfer stock to any person, if as a result of such transfer such person or entity would beneficially own stock in excess of 9.8% in value of the outstanding stock of the Company ("Excess Shares"). Such provisions may inhibit market activity and the resulting opportunity for stockholders to realize a premium for their Common Stock that might otherwise exist if a stockholder were attempting to assemble a block of stock in excess of 9.8% in value of the outstanding stock. Also, there can be no assurance that such provisions will in fact enable the Company to meet the relevant REIT stock ownership requirements.

COMPETITION

The Company will be competing for additional investments with, among other investors, healthcare providers, other healthcare related REITs, real estate partnerships and financial institutions. Certain of these investors may have greater capital resources than the Company.

All of the Initial Properties operate in a competitive environment, and patients and referral sources, including physicians, may change their preferences for a healthcare facility from time to time. The Initial Properties compete with other similar facilities in their various locations for the support of the medical community. Additionally, other healthcare facilities in which the Company may invest will likely compete with similar facilities for the support of the medical community and the general public. Some significant competitive factors for the placing of physicians in ancillary hospital facilities and patients in medical facilities include reputation, physical appearance of the facilities, services offered, quality of care, family preferences, physician services, location and price. See "Business."

BUSINESS COMBINATIONS; ANTI-TAKEOVER

EFFECTS OF CERTAIN ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION AND BYLAW PROVISIONS

The Maryland law regarding Business Combinations (as defined under Maryland law) require that certain transactions be approved by the holders of 80% of the outstanding voting shares of the Company. See "Description of Securities."

In addition, the Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws contain certain provisions that could have the effect of making it more difficult for a third party to acquire, or discouraging a third party from attempting to acquire, control of the Company. Such provisions could limit the price that certain investors might be willing to pay in the future for the Shares. These provisions include blank check preferred stock, super-majority voting provisions and the application of Maryland corporate law provisions on Business Combinations and Control Shares. See "Certain Provisions of Maryland Law and the Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws."

The Company's Articles of Incorporation allow the Board of Directors to classify or reclassify any unissued shares of the Company's capital stock and to determine the terms of the preferred stock, which may be issued by the Company without stockholder approval. If issued, preferred stock would have preference over the Common Stock with respect to dividends, liquidation distributions and other matters as determined by the Board of Directors. The ability of the Company to issue preferred stock in such manner could enable the Board of Directors to prevent changes in management and control of the Company.

RISKS FOR IRAs AND INVESTORS SUBJECT TO ERISA

Fiduciaries of individual retirement accounts or other pension, profit sharing or employee benefit plans subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended ("ERISA"), should consider whether an investment in the Shares satisfies the diversification requirements of ERISA and whether the investment is prudent in light of the possible limitations on the marketability of the Shares. See "Employee Plans and Individual Retirement Accounts." In addition, some or all of the distributions by a REIT to a tax-exempt employee's pension fund that owns more than 10 percent in value of such REIT may be treated as unrelated business taxable income ("UBTI") under the Code if the REIT constitutes a "pension-held REIT" and if other conditions are met. The Company does not expect that it will be a "pension-held REIT" for federal income tax purposes. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Taxation of Domestic Stockholders--Taxation of Tax Exempt Stockholders."

DEPENDENCE ON KEY PERSONNEL

The Company is dependent on the efforts of its executive officers, Messrs. McDaniel, Johnson and Cuzzins. The loss of the services of any one of these individuals could have a material adverse effect on the performance of the Company.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

A conflict of interest exists between the Company and WELLHEALTH with respect to the sale of the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties to the Company and the lease of the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties by the Company to WELLHEALTH and Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH. The acquisition price of each of the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties has been determined based upon rentals, operating history, age, location and condition of the property and other relevant factors, including appraisals. The appraised value of the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties is approximately $54,070,000. The Company will pay $50,920,000 in cash to WELLHEALTH and its Subsidiaries for the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties. See "Business--Appraisals."

Two of the nine directors of the Company are executive officers and directors of WELLHEALTH. Conflicts of interest exist with respect to their duties to Company stockholders and WELLHEALTH stockholders. There may from time to time be disputes between the Company as landlord and WELLHEALTH and Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH as tenants with respect to maintenance, repairs, defaults, and similar items. It is also possible that the Company will engage in other transactions with WELLHEALTH or its Subsidiaries in addition to acquiring and leasing the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties, such as purchasing additional properties from WELLHEALTH or its Subsidiaries and leasing back all or a portion of such additional properties. As a result, conflicts of interest between the Company and WELLHEALTH may arise under certain circumstances.

Two of the nine directors of the Company are also directors of Integrated Health and Health Surgery. A conflict of interest also exists between the Company and Total Health and Health Surgery with respect to the sale to the Company of certain of the Initial Properties owned by Total Health and Health Surgery or their Subsidiaries, and the lease of those Initial Properties from the Company to Total Health and Health Surgery or their Subsidiaries. The acquisition prices of each of the Initial Properties acquired from Total Health and Health Surgery or their Subsidiaries, have been determined based upon rentals, operating history, age, location and condition of the property and other relevant factors, including appraisals. The appraised values of the Initial Properties acquired from Total Health and Surgical Health or their Subsidiaries, are $18,300,000 and $9,212,000, respectively. The Company will pay $18,275,000 and $9,005,000 in cash for the Initial Properties acquired from Total Health and Health Surgery or their Subsidiaries, respectively.

The Company's Bylaws require that any transactions (including a property acquisition) between the Company and any of its officers and directors or their affiliates be approved by a majority of the directors not interested in such transaction, including a majority of the Disinterested Directors and such directors must conclude that the terms of the transaction are fair and reasonable and are no less favorable than can be obtained from unaffiliated third parties.

APPRAISALS

While all of the Initial Properties have been appraised and are being purchased by the Company at purchase prices not more than the appraised value, appraisals are only estimates of value and should not be relied upon as a precise measure of realizable value. Investors should exercise caution in evaluating appraisal results. See "Business--Appraisals."

ABSENCE OF PRIOR PUBLIC MARKET FOR COMMON STOCK; EFFECT OF INTEREST RATES

Prior to the Offering, there has been no public market for the Company's Common Stock. There can be no assurance that an active trading market will develop or be sustained following the Offering or that purchasers of the Common Stock in the Offering will be able to liquidate their investments or to resell such Common Stock at or above the initial offering price. The initial public offering price will be determined through negotiations between the Company and the Representatives of the Underwriters and may not be indicative of the market price of the Common Stock after the Offering. See "Underwriting" for a description of the factors to be considered by the Company and the Underwriters in setting the initial public offering price of the Common Stock. The market value of the Common Stock could be substantially influenced by general market conditions. In addition, since the market price of common stock of a publicly-traded REIT such as the Company is determined in part by the attractiveness of the yield on such common stock in relation to prevailing interest rates, an increase in interest rates could adversely affect the market price of the Common Stock. Moreover, numerous other factors, such as government regulatory action and tax laws, could have a significant impact on the future market price of the Common Stock.

USE OF PROCEEDS

At the mid point of the filing range, the net proceeds to the Company from the sale of the Shares offered hereby are estimated to be approximately $102,115,000 after deduction of estimated underwriting commissions and Offering expenses. The purchase price of the Initial Properties, including net estimated acquisition expenses of approximately $1,050,000, will be approximately $116,150,000. All of the net proceeds will be applied against the purchase price of the Initial Properties. The balance of the purchase price required for the Initial Properties will be covered by borrowings of approximately $14,185,000 under the Bank Credit Facility. The Company intends to close all of the Initial Properties into escrow on or before the Effective Date of the Offering, and such Initial Properties will be released from escrow as soon as practical after the closing of the Offering, except for the South County Medical Center facility which will be acquired as soon as practical after the completion of its construction and the issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy which is expected to occur in May [Year]. As of April 15, [Year], leases had been signed for over 93% of the rentable space in the South County Medical Center. See "Business--Initial Properties."

Any net proceeds from the exercise of the Underwriters' over-allotment option will be invested in short-term investment grade instruments, interest-bearing bank accounts or certificates of deposit, money market securities, U.S. government securities and mortgage-backed securities guaranteed by U.S. federal agencies, mortgage loans, mortgage participation and certain other similar investments, pending their use. Such funds will be used, along with funds available from the Bank Credit Facility, to acquire additional properties consistent with the Company's investment policies.

The Company has obtained a written commitment from AmTrust for a $30 million Bank Credit Facility to finance a portion of the purchase price for the Initial Properties, the acquisition of additional properties and for general corporate purposes. The Bank Credit Facility will contain customary financial covenants. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations--Liquidity and Capital Resources."

The Company has agreed to reimburse, upon closing of the Offering, the actual costs incurred by the Partnership on behalf of the Company from the proceeds of the Offering. These costs relate to organizing the Company, negotiating the acquisitions of the Initial Properties, performing due diligence related to the Initial Properties, performing corporate work in contemplation of the Offering, preparing the Registration Statement and providing interim financing for and closing the acquisition of the Initial Properties, employee compensation, travel and overhead. The Company estimates that these reimbursements will be approximately $1,475,000.

DISTRIBUTIONS TO STOCKHOLDERS

The Company intends to make quarterly distributions to stockholders of approximately 85% to 95% of its cash available for distribution. In any event, the Company expects to pay an amount at least sufficient to satisfy the annual distribution requirements of a REIT. In general, such requirements provide that at least 95% of the Company's REIT taxable income must be distributed annually, which distribution, on a pro forma basis, would equal $1.35 per share. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Taxation of the Company." The Company expects to distribute dividends in excess of 95% of its REIT taxable income. Payment of dividends, however, will be at the discretion of the Company's Board of Directors at all times and will depend upon various factors including the Company's financial condition, earnings, anticipated investments, and other relevant factors. Under certain circumstances, it may be necessary for the Company to borrow or liquidate investments to satisfy its distribution requirements as a REIT. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Taxation of the Company."

On a pro forma basis the aggregate Base Rent payable under the Leases, net of interest and operating expenses, will result in cash available for distribution of $1.78 per Share. Such cash available for distribution does not give effect to any delay in the acquisition of or failure to acquire the Initial Properties, to any payments of Additional Rent, to the acquisition of any properties in addition to those identified in this Prospectus or the incurrence of indebtedness in connection therewith, or to the realization of proceeds on the sale or disposition of Initial Properties. No assurance can be given that the properties will perform as expected or the anticipated cash available for distribution will be obtained. On a [Year] pro forma basis, approximately 11% to 21% of the distributions to be made by the Company would represent return of capital for federal income tax purposes and, therefore, would not be subject to current federal income tax. Such nontaxable distributions would reduce a stockholder's tax basis in its Common Stock, and any gain or loss recognized on the sale of such Common Stock or upon liquidation of the Company would be increased or reduced accordingly. Any distributions that exceed a stockholder's basis in its Common Stock would be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of such Common Stock for federal income tax purposes. See "Pro Forma Financial Statements."

Cash available for distribution is expected to exceed the Company's taxable income due to non-cash deductions taken by the Company for income tax purposes, primarily depreciation. Accordingly, certain distributions to stockholders may constitute a return of capital which would not be subject to federal income tax, although such distributions would lower the stockholder's basis in its Common Stock of the Company, as described above. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations."

For each of the first six quarters in which dividends are paid by the Company, the Founders have consented to contribute to the Company the after-tax portion of any dividends distributed to them for such quarter if (i) the annualized dividends paid in such quarter does not exceed $1.70 per share ($0.425 per share per quarter) or (ii) the aggregate dividends paid in such quarter on the outstanding shares exceeds 95% of the cash available for distribution for the relevant quarterly period.

DILUTION

As of March 31, [Year], the Founding Stockholders (M. Donal Rushmore, WELLHEALTH, W. Gill McDaniel, and Dee Martin Michaels) owned 180,000 shares of Common Stock. The net tangible book value of the Common Stock immediately subsequent to this Offering (based on the mid-point of the filing range of $19.00 per share, after deduction of estimated underwriting discounts and Offering expenses) will be $17.076 per share, an increase of $17.075 from the $.001 net tangible book value per share prior to the Offering (or a net tangible book value per share of $17.154 and a per share increase of $17.153, respectively, assuming full exercise of the Underwriters' over allotment option). A $1.924 per share dilution will be experienced by the purchasers of shares in this Offering (or $1.846 per share dilution assuming full exercise of the Underwriters' over-allotment option).

CAPITALIZATION

The following sets forth the historical capitalization of the Company as of March 31, [Year], and as adjusted to give effect to the sale of the Shares offered hereby (assuming an initial public offering price at the mid-point of the filing range and after deducting underwriters' discounts and Offering expenses), and the acquisitions of the Initial Properties:

The following table sets forth financial information for the Company which is derived from the Balance Sheet and the Pro Forma Financial Statements included elsewhere in this Prospectus. (1) The Company was incorporated on March 31, [Year].

(2) Cash available for distribution is net income plus depreciation, amortization and other non-cash items less accrued rental income. Distributions in excess of net income generally constitute a return of capital. Management considers cash available for distribution to be an informative measure of the performance of an equity REIT and consistent with measures used by analysts to evaluate equity REITs. Cash available for distribution does not represent cash generated from operating activities in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, is not necessarily indicative of cash available to fund cash needs and should not be considered as an alternative to net income as an indicator of the Company's operating performance or as an alternative to cash flow as a measure of liquidity.

Significant assumptions to the Pro Forma Financial Information are set forth below. This information should be read in conjunction with the Notes to the Company's Pro Forma Financial Statements beginning at page F-10.

--Total rental income from the Initial Properties for the year ended December 31, [Year] is assumed to be $13,872,706, which represents Base Rent of $12,728,964 and accrued rent of $1,143,742 from the Initial Properties under the terms of the Leases. Total rental income from the Initial Properties for the three months ended March 31, [Year] is assumed to be $3,468,176, which represents Base Rent of $3,182,241 and accrued rent of $285,935 from the Initial Properties under the terms of the Leases. Generally accepted accounting principles require that scheduled rent increases be recognized on a straight-line basis over the term of the lease. Each Lease is a Triple Net Lease and the Lessee is responsible thereunder, in addition to the rent, for all operating expenses, taxes, assessments, ground rents, water, sewer or other rents and charges, excises, tax levies, fees and all other governmental charges, utility charges and insurance premiums.

--Depreciation of buildings and land improvements is calculated using the straight-line method and useful remaining lives of approximately 40 years and 20 years, respectively. Amortization of organization costs is calculated using the straight-line method over a five-year period. The Bank Credit Facility financing commitment fee is amortized using the straight-line method over the 24-month life of the Bank Credit Facility.

--Expected first year operating costs of $1,200,000 ($300,000 for three months) consist of compensation and related benefits, legal and accounting, travel, rent and other operating costs. Annual interest expense is calculated at a rate of 6.1875% of the outstanding balance plus 0.375% of the unused portion of the Bank Credit Facility.

--Issuance of 5,800,000 shares of Common Stock for $110,200,000 at $19.00 per share, less underwriting discounts and commissions of $7,685,000.

--Cost of the Initial Properties of $115,100,000.

--Payment to the Partnership and its affiliates for reimbursement of actual costs incurred related to providing interim financing ($375,000), negotiating acquisition of the Initial Properties ($675,000), organizing the Company ($25,000), and preparing the Offering ($400,000).

--Borrowings of $14,184,820 under the Bank Credit Facility. The Company has received a written commitment from AmTrust in the amount of $30 million to finance, in part, the acquisition of the Initial Properties, the acquisition of additional properties and for other general corporate purposes.

MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

OVERVIEW

The Company was incorporated in Maryland on March 31, [Year], and intends to make an election and qualify under the Code as a REIT commencing with its taxable year ending December 31, [Year]. Substantially all of the Company's revenues are expected to be derived from: (i) Base and Additional Rents received under Triple Net Leases of healthcare related real property facilities; (ii) fees received in connection with property acquisitions and leasing transactions; (iii) interest earned from the temporary investment of funds in short-term instruments; and (iv) property dispositions effected from time to time in accordance with requirements for maintaining status as a REIT. With respect to Leases for the Initial Properties, Base Rent is the minimum annual rental payment set forth in such Leases. All of such Leases also provide for Additional Rent commencing after the first year based on either a set percentage increase or on 67% to 100% of the percentage increase in the applicable consumer price index, with annual increases generally limited to a maximum of 5%.

The Company will incur operating and administrative expenses including, principally, compensation expense for its executive officers and other employees, office rental and related occupancy costs and various expenses incurred in the process of acquiring additional properties. The Company will be self-administered and managed by its executive officers and staff, and will not engage a separate advisor or pay an advisory fee for administrative or investment services, although the Company will engage legal, accounting, tax and financial advisors from time to time.

The Company also expects to leverage its portfolio of real estate equity investments and will incur long and short-term indebtedness, and related interest expense, from time to time.

The Company intends to declare and pay dividends to its stockholders in amounts not less than the amounts required to maintain REIT status under the Code and, in general, in amounts exceeding taxable income. The Company's ability to pay dividends will depend upon its cash available for distribution.

RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

The Company has had no operations prior to March 31, [Year], (the date of its incorporation) through the date of this Prospectus. The Company's future results of operations will depend upon the acquisition of the Initial Properties and other properties and the terms of any subsequent investments the Company may make.

Management believes that inflation should not have a materially adverse effect on the Company.

PRO FORMA FINANCIAL INFORMATION

For The Year Ended December 31, [Year]

On a pro forma basis, after giving effect to the Offering and the acquisition of the Initial Properties, revenues would have been $13,872,706 and net income would have been $9,114,463 or $1.52 per share for the year ended December 31, [Year]. Depreciation, amortization and other non-cash expenses would have been $2,701,250, accrued rent would have been $1,143,742 and cash available for distribution would have been $10,671,971 or $1.78 per Share.

For The Three Months Ended March 31, [Year]

On a pro forma basis, after giving effect to the Offering and the acquisition of the Initial Properties, revenues would have been $3,468,176 and net income would have been $2,278,616 or $0.38 per share for the three months ended March 31, [Year]. Depreciation, amortization and other non-cash expenses would have been $675,313, accrued rent would have been $285,935 and cash available for distribution would have been $2,667,994 or $0.45 per share.

LIQUIDITY AND CAPITAL RESOURCES

Management believes that the net proceeds of this Offering along with the Bank Credit Facility will be sufficient to consummate the purchase of the Initial Properties and to reimburse the Partnership for expenses related to organizing the Company, negotiating the acquisition of the Initial Properties, performing due diligence investigation related to the Initial Properties, performing corporate work in contemplation of the Offering, preparing the Registration Statement and providing interim financing for and closing the acquisition of the Initial Properties. Management believes the Company will have adequate remaining credit under the Bank Credit Facility to meet its liquidity needs. See "Business--Initial Properties," "Investment and Other Policies."

The Company may, under certain circumstances, borrow additional amounts in connection with the renovation or expansion of its Initial Properties, the acquisition of additional properties or, as necessary, to meet certain distribution requirements imposed on REITs under the Code. See "Investment and Other Policies." The Company may raise additional capital by issuing, in public or private transactions, equity or debt securities, but the availability and terms of any such issuance will depend upon market and other conditions. There can be no assurance that such additional financing or capital will be available on terms acceptable to the Company.

Under the terms of the Leases, the Lessees are responsible for all operating expenses and taxes, including property and casualty insurance. See "Business--Initial Properties" and "Business--The Leases." As a result of these arrangements, the Company does not believe it will be responsible for any major expenses in connection with the Initial Properties during the terms of the respective Leases. The Company anticipates entering into similar leases with respect to additional properties. After the terms of the respective Leases, or in the event a Lessee is unable to meet its obligations, the Company anticipates that any expenditures it might become responsible for in maintaining the Initial Properties will be funded by cash from operations and, in the case of major expenditures, possibly by borrowings. To the extent that unanticipated expenditures or significant borrowings are required, the Company's cash available for distribution and liquidity may be adversely affected.

The Company has obtained a written commitment from AmTrust for a $30 million Bank Credit Facility to finance a portion of the purchase price for the Initial Properties, the acquisition of additional properties and for other general corporate purposes. See "Use of Proceeds." Interest on borrowings under the Bank Credit Facility will be paid at a rate chosen by the Company from either the base rate, which is the higher of (i) the Federal Funds Rate plus 1/2 of 1%, or (ii) the AmTrust prime lending rate, or LIBOR plus 1.75%. In addition, the Company will pay .375% per annum on the unused portion of funds available for borrowings under the Bank Credit Facility. The Company will pay a commitment fee of one-quarter of 1% of the committed amount at the closing of the Bank Credit Facility. The Bank Credit Facility will be available until the second anniversary of the closing of the facility. The Bank Credit Facility will be unsecured and will contain certain representations, warranties and financial and other covenants customary in such loan agreements. The Company may enter into interest rate swaps in order to mitigate the effect of a rising interest rate environment on the cost of the Bank Credit Facility.

Other than to purchase the Initial Properties, the Company has no commitments or understandings with respect to capital expenditures. There can be no assurance that the Company will be able to purchase or lease additional properties or to make mortgage loans to others on suitable terms.

BUSINESS

The Company was organized to invest, either directly or through wholly-owned subsidiaries, in healthcare related properties located throughout the United States. The Company has signed letters of intent to purchase the 20 Initial Properties located in 10 states. The Initial Properties will be leased to 14 Lessees, which are Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH, Total Health, Oregon, Quorum and Health Surgery, pursuant to long-term, Triple Net Leases that will be guaranteed by the respective parent companies. The Initial Properties consist of 11 ancillary hospital facilities, one research facility, one long-term care facility, one sub-acute care facility, three ambulatory surgery centers and three outpatient rehabilitation facilities.

INITIAL PROPERTIES

WELLHEALTH INITIAL PROPERTIES

WELLHEALTH, headquartered in Birmingham, Alabama, is the nation's largest provider of rehabilitative healthcare services. In its outpatient and inpatient rehabilitation facilities, WELLHEALTH has established interdisciplinary programs for the rehabilitation of patients experiencing disability due to a wide variety of physical conditions, such as stroke, head injury, orthopedic problems, neuromuscular disease and sports-related injuries. WELLHEALTH's rehabilitation services include physical therapy, sports medicine, work hardening, neurorehabilitation, occupational therapy, respiratory therapy, speech-language pathology and rehabilitation nursing. In addition to rehabilitation services, WELLHEALTH's medical center facilities also provide general and specialty medical and surgical healthcare services.

Effective December 31, [Year], WELLHEALTH acquired substantially all of the assets of the rehabilitation services division of National Medical Enterprises, Inc. ("NME"), consisting of 28 inpatient rehabilitation facilities and 45 outpatient rehabilitation locations. WELLHEALTH currently has 288 locations in 31 states, the District of Columbia and Ontario, Canada, including 172 outpatient rehabilitation centers (including 79 associated satellite clinics), 42 rehabilitation hospitals with 49 associated satellite clinics (including two rehabilitation hospitals under construction), four medical centers and 21 locations providing other patient care services.

Six ancillary hospital facilities, one research facility and three outpatient rehabilitation centers are being acquired from and will be leased to WELLHEALTH or Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH. The Leases for the WELLHEALTH Initial Properties to Subsidiaries of WELLHEALTH will be guaranteed by WELLHEALTH, whose shares are listed on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol HRC. As of December 31, [Year] and [Year], WELLHEALTH had assets of $641,799,00 and $1,168,068,000 and stockholders' equity of $290,132,000 and $294,972,000, respectively, and for the years ended December 31, [Year] and [Year], had revenues of $406,968,000 and $482,304,000 and net income of $29,738,000 and $6,687,000, respectively.

ANCILLARY HOSPITAL FACILITIES AND RESEARCH FACILITY

Upon completion of the Offering, the Company intends to acquire six ancillary hospital facilities and one research facility from WELLHEALTH, all of which are associated with three of the four medical centers owned and operated by WELLHEALTH.

WELLHEALTH's four medical centers are located in three urban areas of the country, one each in Birmingham, Alabama and Richmond, Virginia and two in the Miami, Florida area. These facilities provide general and specialty medical and surgical healthcare services, emphasizing orthopaedics, sports medicine and rehabilitation. WELLHEALTH acquired the medical centers as an outgrowth of its ambulatory rehabilitative healthcare services. Often, patients require medical and surgical intervention prior to the initiation of their rehabilitative care. In each of the markets in which WELLHEALTH has acquired a medical center, WELLHEALTH had well-established relationships with the medical communities servicing each facility. As a result of these relationships, WELLHEALTH was able to respond to opportunities to enhance its capabilities to better serve the patients and physicians in those markets. Because WELLHEALTH's facilities enjoy a national and international reputation for orthopaedic surgery and sports medicine, WELLHEALTH believes the level of service and continuum of care offered by its medical centers enable them to compete successfully.

Total Health Initial Properties

Total Health, formed in [Year], and headquartered in Owings Mills, Maryland, is one of the nation's leading providers of long-term and sub-acute healthcare services. Total Health's strategy is to use geriatric care facilities as platforms to provide a wide variety of medical and rehabilitative services more typically delivered in the acute care hospital setting. Integrated Health's focus on providing sub-acute care is designed to address the fact that cost containment measures implemented by private insurers and limitations on government reimbursement of hospital costs have resulted in the discharge from hospitals of many patients who continue to require sub-acute care. These patients often cannot be effectively cared for in the home because of the complex monitoring and specialized medical treatment required. Because geriatric care facilities have lower capital and operating costs than acute care hospitals, Total Health is able to offer these complex medical services at a significantly lower cost than acute care hospitals.

On December 1, [Year], Total Health acquired substantially all of the United States operations of Central Park Lodges, Inc., consisting of 30 geriatric care facilities, nine retirement facilities and divisions which provide pharmacy, healthcare personnel, and support services through branch locations.

Total Health provides sub-acute care through medical specialty units ("MSUs"), which are typically 20 to 75 bed specialty units with physical identities, specialized medical technology and staff separate from the geriatric care facilities in which they are located. MSUs are designed to provide comprehensive medical services to patients who have been discharged from acute care hospitals but who still require sub-acute or complex medical treatment.

The levels and quality of care provided in Total Health's MSUs are similar to those provided in the hospital but at per diem treatment costs which Total Health believes are generally 30% to 60% below the cost of such care in acute care hospitals. Because of the high level of specialized care provided, Total Health's MSUs generate substantially higher net revenue and operating profit per patient day than traditional geriatric care services.

As of December 31, [Year], Total Health operated 97 geriatric care facilities (66 owned or leased and 31 managed) and 60 MSUs located in 33 of these facilities.

The Company will acquire and lease back one long-term care facility and one sub-acute care facility from Subsidiaries of Total Health. The Leases will be guaranteed by Total Health, whose shares are listed on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol IHS. As of December 31, [Year] and [Year], Total Health had assets of $311,973,000 and $767,664,000 and stockholders' equity of $145,596,000 and $209,338,000, respectively, and for the years ended December 31, [Year] and [Year], had net revenues of $195,262,000 and $282,160,000 and net income of $9,141,000 and $15,471,000, respectively.

Gravois. Gravois, a sub-acute care facility constructed in 1966 with additions and renovations in [Year], [Year] and [Year], is a 167-licensed bed sub-acute care facility containing a 49,700 net rentable square foot, multi-story building located on 5.2 acres in St. Louis County, Missouri. Although the Gravois facility has historically been used as a skilled nursing facility, Total Health recently divided the market between skilled nursing care and sub-acute care, dedicating the Gravois facility as the sub-acute care provider and the other Total Health facility, Total Health of St. Louis at Big Bend Woods, as the skilled nursing provider. This change will create more efficient operations at both facilities and should result in more sub-acute care patients for the Gravois facility. The total population within a ten mile radius of the facility is approximately 640,000 and the population 65 years and older within the ten mile radius is approximately 96,800.

Gravois Health Care, Inc., a Subsidiary of Total Health, will be the sole Lessee of the Gravois facility pursuant to a ten-year lease with three five-year renewal options. The Base Rent per square foot will be $18.55.

Mountain View. Mountain View, a long-term care facility constructed in [Year] and renovated in [Year], is a 137-licensed bed long-term care facility containing 52,700 net rentable square feet in a multi-story building located on 8.2 acres in Unity Township, Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh. Total Health will provide a full range of services at the Mountain View facility, including skilled nursing, complex care (post surgery, cancer, etc.), respiratory therapy and physical therapy. The total population within a ten mile radius is approximately 166,500 and the population 65 years and older within a ten mile radius is approximately 27,300. There are other skilled nursing care providers servicing the market; however, entry into the market is regulated through Pennsylvania's certificate of need ("CON") process.

Mountain View Nursing Center, Inc., a Subsidiary of Total Health, will be the sole Lessee of the Mountain View facility pursuant to a ten-year lease with three five-year renewal options. The Base Rent per square foot will be $20.11.

The Las Vegas MSA has an estimated population of 870,000. Desert Springs Hospital was established in [Year] and has grown to its current operating capacity through its diversified and specialized product lines and medical staff, including cardiac specialty services. There are eight acute care hospitals serving the Las Vegas MSA with a total of 2,018 licensed beds. The hospital sits on a 17.5-acre campus, which also contains the two-story ancillary hospital facility which will be purchased by the Company.

Desert Springs. Desert Springs, an ancillary hospital facility constructed in [Year], is a 26,700 net rentable square foot, multi-story building located on 3.34 acres in Clark County, Nevada. Current tenants of the facility include physicians who practice on the medical staff of Desert Springs Hospital.

NC-DSH, Inc., a Subsidiary of Quorum, will be the sole Lessee of Desert Springs under a ten-year lease with three five-year renewal options. The Base Rent per square foot is $19.80.

Health Surgery Initial Properties

Health Surgery, headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia, and formed in [Year], is a leading operator of freestanding outpatient surgery centers. Health Surgery's surgery centers provide the facilities and medical support staff necessary for physicians to perform on an outpatient basis non-emergency surgical procedures. Health Surgery owns and operates a network of 30 freestanding surgery centers in 11 states with an aggregate of 123 operating and procedures rooms and is developing an additional eight surgery centers in three states. Based on industry sources, Health Surgery believes that it is the third-largest operator of freestanding outpatient surgery centers in the United States.

Health Surgery's strategy is to establish networks of high quality freestanding surgical centers in selected markets. Health Surgery has established regional networks in eight markets. This strategy is designed to enhance Health Surgery's ability to contract with managed care companies, enable Health Surgery to implement effective sale and marketing programs at lower marginal costs and provide physicians and patients with increased accessibility to its surgery centers. Health Surgery pursues a marketing strategy of developing relationships with associations of prominent primary care and specialist physicians in its market areas and utilizing these relationships to establish affiliations with managed care companies. Health Surgery is also exploring joint ventures with hospitals.

The Company will acquire three ambulatory surgery centers from Surgical Health. Health Surgery will guarantee the Leases of the facilities leased to Subsidiaries of Health Surgery. On March 30, [Year], Health Surgery filed a registration statement with the SEC related to the issuance of $75 million principal amount of senior subordinated notes that are expected to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. As of December 31, [Year] and [Year], Health Surgery had assets of $94,157,000 and $162,896,000 and stockholders' equity of $21,046,000 and $36,140,000, respectively, and for the years ended December 31, [Year] and [Year], had net revenues of $36,561,000 and $80,883,000 and net income of $187,000 and $3,909,000, respectively.

South County Medical Center. The South County Medical Center facility is a multi-story, ambulatory surgery center, scheduled to be completed and occupied in May [Year]. The Company will acquire South County Medical Center upon the completion of its construction and issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy. As of April 15, [Year], leases had been signed for over 93% of the rentable space. The facility is situated on approximately 10 acres of land in St. Louis County, Missouri, will contain approximately 45,200 net rentable square feet, with Health Surgery's surgery center and related activities occupying approximately 25,000 square feet. Physicians practicing the following specialties are expected to use the four surgery suites at the facility: general surgery, gastroenterology, orthopaedic, urology, ENT and gynecology. A Subsidiary of WELLHEALTH will lease approximately 4,300 square feet to use as an outpatient rehabilitation facility. The remaining space will be leased to physicians.

Healthcare Real Estate Holdings II, Inc., a Subsidiary of Health Surgery, will be the sole Lessee of South County Medical Center under a 15-year lease with three five-year renewal options. The Base Rent per square foot is $17.73.

Northlake. Northlake, an ambulatory surgery facility constructed in [Year], is an 8,749 square foot, single-story facility located on approximately 2.16 acres in Dekalb County, Georgia. Physicians practicing the following specialties are expected to use the four surgery suites located at the facility: general surgery, podiatry, ophthalmology, ENT, gynecology and oral surgery. One of Health Surgery's Subsidiaries will sublease the facility from the Company under a 13 year sublease with two five-year renewal options, which will be guaranteed by Health Surgery. The Northlake facility is located on real estate being ground leased from J. T. Honea, Sr. and J. T. Honea, Jr. The Company will assume the existing ground lease between the seller and the Honeas, including the right of first refusal in favor of the seller, and will sublease the real property to one of Health Surgery's Subsidiaries. The Base Rent will be $12.86 per square foot, exclusive of ground rent, which will be paid by the sublessee.

The CON for the Northlake facility has been challenged by HCA Health Services of Georgia, Inc., d/b/a/ Northlake Regional Medical Center in two related Georgia state court proceedings on the basis that the Georgia State Health Planning Agency did not have authority by statute or regulation to permit the relocation of the facility without a new CON. Regulations have since been proposed that would permit such a relocation which contain a grandfather provision that would be applicable to the Northlake facility. If the proposed regulations are not finally adopted as published or are challenged and held invalid, or if Health Surgery does not prevail on the issue of whether the facility was properly grandfathered from the CON requirements, Health Surgery may be required to discontinue operation of the Northlake facility and apply for a new CON. In such event the Company can require Health Surgery to substitute one or more comparable properties for the Northlake facility.

North Shore. North Shore, an ambulatory surgery facility constructed in, completely remodeled in [Year] and acquired in [Year] by Surgical Health, is a 5,100 net rentable square foot, single-story facility located on approximately 2.2 acres in Cook County, Illinois. Physicians practicing the following specialties are expected to use the two surgery suites located at the facility: general surgery, gastroenterology, urology, gynecology and orthopaedics. One of Health Surgery's Subsidiaries will lease the facility from the Company, which Lease will be guaranteed by Health Surgery. The Base Rent per square foot will be $20.71.

ACQUISITION OF INITIAL PROPERTIES

The Company has signed letters of intent to acquire the 20 Initial Properties and expects to sign Purchase Agreements as soon as practical. The Purchase Agreements are expected to include customary representations and warranties from each current owner of the particular Initial Property relating to such matters as title, compliance with laws, condition of the properties and other similar items. Certain of the warranties may be qualified and may not afford the Company as much protection as unqualified warranties.

The Company intends to close the purchase of all of the Initial Properties into escrow on or before the Effective Date of the Offering and to release the Initial Properties from escrow immediately after the closing of the Offering, except for the South County Medical Center facility which will be acquired as soon as practical after the completion of its construction and the issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy. If the acquisition of any of the Initial Properties does not occur by the date specified in the applicable Purchase Agreement, the seller of such Initial Property will no longer be contractually bound to sell such property to the Company. The Company has no reason to believe that it will not be able to acquire the Initial Properties under the terms of the Purchase Agreements. The consummation of the closings of the Initial Properties held in escrow is contingent only upon the closing of the Offering no later than June 30, [Year]. The closing for the purchase of the South County Medical Center facility pursuant to the applicable Purchase Agreement is subject to satisfaction of conditions which are generally customary in similar real estate transactions. Because certain of the Initial Properties are subject to governmental regulation and indebtedness which require consent prior to a change of ownership, no assurance can be given that all of the Initial Properties will be available for purchase by the Company.

The purchase price for each of the Initial Properties has been determined by negotiation with the sellers after taking into consideration the rentals, operating history, age and condition of each of the Initial Properties, and other relevant factors, including appraisals. The applicable Disinterested Directors have approved the purchase price and other terms relating to the acquisition of each of the Initial Properties. In the opinion of management, each of the Initial Properties is well maintained, in good repair, and suitable for its intended use.

APPRAISALS

Current appraisals for each of the Initial Properties have been received by the Company. Each of the appraisals was prepared by appraisers unrelated to the Company and to WELLHEALTH and the other sellers of the Initial Properties. The appraisals indicated that the Initial Properties have an aggregate current fair market value of $120,402,000. Each of the Initial Properties will be purchased at a purchase price not more than its appraised value.

The appraised values of the Initial Properties were generally developed based on considerations of the following valuation approaches: cost, market and income. The cost approach considers the land value of the sites and depreciated replacement cost of the improvements. The market approach analyzes sales of other going concern facilities in comparison to the Initial Properties. The income approach develops a going concern value of the Initial Properties by capitalizing their projected operating income. The appraisals of the Initial Properties valued the Initial Properties on a going-concern basis. The income approach normally provides the most reliable value estimate for multi-tenant professional office buildings. The value of the property is strongly related to the expected income stream of the property. Although the buyers of professional office buildings are usually owner/occupants, these buyers are generally aware of the property's cash flow potential and its value from an investor's perspective. For this reason, appraisers consider the income approach the best indicator of value for the subject. Appraisals based upon the liquidation approach may produce values lower than those produced by the income approach.

Operating data, financial data and legal descriptions provided to the appraisers were assumed by the appraiser to be accurate and correct, and no audit or verification was undertaken by the appraiser in connection with its report. The appraisers did not assume responsibility for matters of title.

Because the appraisals represent only an estimate of value, and are subject to numerous assumptions, the appraisals do not purport to represent precise measures of realizable value and should not be relied upon for purposes of determining such value at any particular time. The appraisals assume that the appraised facilities could be sold on an orderly basis under stable market conditions. The estimate of the aggregate value of the appraised facilities is the sum of the values determined for the individual facilities. No adjustment was made with respect to a bulk sale of a group of facilities.

LEASES

The following description of the Leases does not purport to be complete, but rather contains a general summary of certain provisions thereof. Reference is made to the Leases filed with the SEC as exhibits to the Registration Statement of which this Prospectus is a part, and the following summary is qualified in its entirety by such reference.

Each Lease relates to a healthcare facility, comprised generally of the land, buildings, other improvements and certain fixtures, for a use, in most cases, restricted to the intended healthcare related use and for such other uses as may be necessary in connection with or incidental to such use (the "Primary Intended Use"). Generally, personal property is not being purchased or leased, although the Company has been granted an option to purchase any personal property necessary or appropriate for the operation of the Initial Properties for an amount equal to the then-current book value (original cost less accumulated depreciation on the books of the Lessee). The Leases have initial terms ranging from 10 to 15 years with one or more renewal terms exercisable by the Lessee of at least 10 additional years. The Leases are subject to earlier termination upon the occurrence of certain contingencies. Base Rent varies by Lease, taking into consideration many factors, including the credit of the Lessee, operating performance of the facility, location, type and physical condition of the facility. All of the Leases provide for Additional Rent commencing after the first year based on either a set percentage increase or on 67% to 100% of the percentage increase in the applicable consumer price index, with annual increases generally limited to a maximum of 5%.

Each Lease is a Triple Net Lease and the Lessee is responsible thereunder, in addition to Base Rent and any Additional Rent, for all additional charges, including every fine, penalty, interest and cost which may be levied for nonpayment or late payment thereof, all taxes, assessments, levies, fees, water and sewer rents and charges, all governmental charges with respect to each of the Initial Properties, all utility and other charges, including insurance premiums, incurred in connection with the operation of the Initial Property and including ground rent in the case of the Virginia Beach and North Shore facilities.

Each Lessee is required, at its expense, to maintain its leased property in good order and repair. The Company is not required to repair, rebuild or maintain the Initial Properties. Under certain Leases, the Company must purchase from the Lessees certain structural capital improvements and replacements made by such Lessees.

Most Leases also contain provisions which generally permit the Lessees, under certain circumstances, to terminate the Leases and to repurchase the leased property for a price equal to the Minimum Repurchase Price (as defined in the Leases) or to substitute another property or properties for the applicable Initial Property. These circumstances include (i) the occurrence of certain damage to or destruction of one of the Initial Properties, (ii) condemnation, and (iii) mutual agreement of the parties. The Lessees also have a right of first refusal to purchase the leased property during the terms of the Leases and for a short period of time following the expiration of the terms of the Leases on the same terms and conditions as the Company may propose to sell one of the Initial Properties.

INSURANCE

The Company will require the Lessees to obtain title insurance with respect to each of the Initial Properties in amounts equal to their respective purchase prices, insuring that the Company holds title to each of the Initial Properties free and clear of all liens and encumbrances, except those approved by the Company. In the opinion of the management of the Company, the Initial Properties will be adequately covered by comprehensive liability, fire, flood (if available) and extended coverage with respect to the Initial Properties with policy specifications and insured limits customarily carried for similar properties. While the Company believes that its insurance coverage will be adequate, there are certain types of losses which may either be uninsurable or not economically insurable. Except with respect to the Midway facility, the Company generally does not require the Lessees to carry earthquake insurance with respect to its Initial Properties. This decision was based upon a number of factors, including the structural design of the buildings and the general lack of seismic activity in the areas where the Initial Properties are located. Should an uninsured loss occur the Company could lose its investment in, and anticipated profits and cash flow from, an Initial Property.

MEDICAID, MEDICARE, BLUE CROSS AND OTHER REVENUE

Payments for patient care earned by Lessees and Sublessees are received from the federal Medicare program, state Medicaid programs, private insurance carriers, employers and Blue Cross plans, health maintenance organizations, preferred provider arrangements and directly from patients. Medicare payments to acute care hospitals for inpatient services are made pursuant to the Prospective Payment System ("PPS") under which a hospital is paid a prospectively established rate based on diagnosis. In general, Medicare payments for psychiatric care and rehabilitative care are exempt from PPS and continue to be reimbursed on a cost basis system.

Under regulations effective November 1, [Year], the capital related costs of PPS hospitals are to be reimbursed by the Medicare program on a prospective basis, phased in over a ten-year transition period, eventually to be a set federal rate. The effects of the new payment methodology on actual levels of reimbursement cannot yet be predicted. Properties not subject to PPS will continue to be reimbursed by Medicare for capital costs on a percentage of cost basis. Payments from state Medicaid programs for acute care, rehabilitative and psychiatric care are based on reasonable costs or are at fixed rates. Medicare and Medicaid payments are generally below a facility's actual charge schedule and in some cases payments are limited, delayed or reduced because of federal and sometimes state budget deficits.

In recent years, fundamental changes in the Medicare program (including the implementation of a PPS for inpatient services at medical surgical hospitals) have resulted in reduced levels of payment for a substantial portion of healthcare services. Moreover, healthcare facilities have experienced increasing pressures from private payors attempting to control healthcare costs, that have reduced reimbursement to levels approaching that of government payors. Considerable uncertainties surround the future determination of payment levels under the Medicare program for inpatient hospital services as well as outpatient services.

Blue Cross payments in different states and areas are based on costs, negotiated rates or retail rates. Payments from health maintenance organizations and preferred provider organizations generally are negotiated, usually at a discount from published charge schedules, which may take the form of a flat payment per enrollee in the plan offered by such organizations.

FUTURE ACQUISITIONS OF HEALTHCARE FACILITIES

The Company's strategy is to become a leading provider of healthcare facility capital by investing in a high quality portfolio of properties managed by established operators including long-term care, hospital management, rehabilitation and alternate-site care companies. The Company intends to diversify its portfolio by operator, geography, facility type and healthcare industry segment. Its investment criteria emphasize the credit quality of the guarantor, competitive position of the property, attractiveness of the industry segment, and fit with the Company's existing portfolio. The Company believes that there currently is significant demand for REIT financing capital in the healthcare industry. In addition, the Company believes the substantial healthcare industry experience and numerous relationships of its management and directors will help the Company identify, evaluate and complete additional investments. Management believes that opportunities for property acquisitions are currently particularly attractive because of the increasing demand for alternate site and outpatient healthcare services, anticipated capital requirements by the healthcare industry to fund these and other properties, and the reduced supply of available financing from traditional sources. Management also believes that there are opportunities to provide development funding to established healthcare industry operators on a selective basis.

The following are brief descriptions of the types of healthcare facilities in which the Company will seek additional investment:

Ancillary Hospital Facilities and Acute Care Hospitals

Ancillary hospital facilities are generally not subject to separate licensing requirements, although certain hospital ancillary services may be subject to licensing, CON and other regulatory requirements in addition to those applicable to acute care hospitals. The success of an ancillary hospital facility is dependent on its proximity to a hospital. The Company may purchase one or more hospital properties in the future. Acute care hospitals are subject to extensive federal, state and local legislation and regulation. Acute care hospitals undergo periodic inspections regarding standards of medical care, equipment and hygiene as a condition of licensure. Various licenses and permits also are required for narcotics, laboratories, pharmacies, radioactive materials and certain equipment. Accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations is generally required for participation in government sponsored provider programs. Acute care hospitals are subject to and comply with various forms of utilization review. In addition, under PPS, each state must have a Professional Review Organization to carry out a federally mandated system of review of Medicare patient admissions, treatment and discharges in acute care hospitals. Medical and surgical services and practices are extensively supervised by committees of staff doctors at each acute care hospital, and are reviewed by each acute care hospital's local governing board and quality assurance personnel. New regulations governing the control of disposal of hazardous wastes may increase the costs of operating acute care facilities.

Physician Clinics

Physician clinics are subject to extensive federal, state, and local legislation and regulation. Every state imposes licensing requirements on individual physicians and on facilities and services operated by physicians. In addition, federal and state laws regulate health maintenance organizations and other managed care organizations with which the physician groups may have contracts. Many states require regulatory approval, including CONs, before establishing certain types of physician-directed clinics, offering certain services or making expenditures in excess of statutory thresholds for healthcare equipment, facilities, or programs. In connection with the expansion of existing operations and the entry into new markets, physician clinics and affiliated practice groups may become subject to compliance with additional regulation.

Ambulatory Surgery Centers

Ambulatory surgery centers are subject to extensive federal, state and local legislation and regulation. Ambulatory surgery centers undergo periodic inspections regarding standards of medical care, equipment and hygiene as a condition of licensure. Many states require regulatory approval, including CONs, before establishing certain types of healthcare facilities, offering certain services or making expenditures in excess of statutory thresholds for healthcare equipment, facilities or programs. License and certification standards vary by jurisdiction and undergo periodic revision. In connection with the expansion of existing operations and the entry into new markets, ambulatory surgery centers may become subject to compliance with additional regulation.

Long-Term Care and Sub-Acute Care Facilities

Long-term care and sub-acute care facilities are licensed by state healthcare agencies, and are subject to extensive federal, state, and local regulatory and inspection requirements. License, CON and certification standards and requirements vary by jurisdiction and undergo periodic revision. These requirements relate to, among other things, the quality of the nursing care, the qualifications of administration personnel and nursing staff, the condition of the long-term care facility and the adequacy of its equipment, and continuing compliance with laws and regulations to the operation of the facilities.

GOVERNMENT REGULATION AND RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

The financial condition of Lessees or sublessees may be affected by changes in the reimbursement, licensing and certification policies of federal, state and local governments for healthcare related facilities. Certain of the Initial Properties may also be affected by changes in accreditation standards or procedures of accrediting agencies that are recognized by governments in the certification process. In addition, expansion (including the addition of new beds or services or acquisition of medical equipment) and occasionally the discontinuation of services of healthcare facilities is generally subjected to state regulatory approval through CON programs.

Rental arrangements are subject to federal and state laws and regulations governing illegal rebates and kickbacks where co-investors are physicians or others in a position to refer patients to the facilities. The effect of these laws and regulations is generally to prohibit, through the imposition of criminal and civil penalties (including program exclusion), payment arrangements that are construed to include compensation for patient referrals. Although there can be no assurance that government enforcement agencies' and courts' interpretations of these laws will be consistent with that of the Company, the Company does not believe it or any of the Lessees or sublessees of the Initial Properties has any Base Rent arrangements that do not comply in all material respects with these laws. Legislative and regulatory proposals may be enacted or adopted in the future that adversely affect physicians and other healthcare providers that invest in healthcare facilities, regardless of whether there is compensation for referrals, by limiting reimbursement by the Medicare and Medicaid programs of otherwise covered services, requiring disclosures of such interests, or imposing civil monetary and criminal penalties for violations of proscriptions against referrals to such facilities.

State CON statutes generally provide that, prior to the addition of new beds, the construction of new facilities or the introduction of new services, a state health planning designated agency ("SHPDA") must determine that a need exists for those beds, facilities or services. The CON process is intended to promote comprehensive healthcare planning, assist in providing high quality healthcare at the lowest possible cost and avoid unnecessary duplication by ensuring that only those healthcare facilities that are needed will be built.

Typically, the provider of services submits an application to the appropriate SHPDA with information concerning the area and population to be served, the anticipated demand for the facility or service to be provided, the amount of capital expenditure, the estimated annual operating costs, the relationship of the proposed facility or service to the overall state health plan and the cost per patient day for the type of care contemplated. Whether the CON is granted is based upon a finding of need by the SHPDA in accordance with criteria set forth in CON statutes and state and regional health facilities plans. If the proposed facility or service is found to be necessary and the applicant to be the appropriate provider, the SHPDA will issue a CON containing a maximum amount of expenditure and a specific time period for the holder of the CON to implement the approved project.

Licensure and certification are separate, but related, regulatory activities. The former is usually a state or local requirement and the latter is a federal requirement. In almost all instances, licensure and certification will follow specific standards and requirements that are set forth in readily available public documents. Compliance with the requirements is monitored by annual on-site inspections by representatives of various government agencies. The Gravois facility and the Mountain View facility are currently required to be licensed.

Loss by a facility of its ability to participate in government sponsored programs because of licensing, certification or accreditation deficiencies or because of program exclusion resulting from violations of law would have adverse effects on its revenues.

In December [Year], the American Medical Association modified its ethical position on physician referrals to facilities in which they have an ownership interest. Generally, physicians are prohibited from making referrals to facilities in which they have an ownership interest unless they provide services at the facility (such as surgeons at surgery centers and physicians with staff privileges at hospitals). A narrow exception to this rule is permitted when a facility is clearly needed in a community and alternative financing is not available if certain strict conditions are satisfied. While it is generally believed that these regulations are not intended to affect physician ownership in large, publicly-traded companies such as the Company, physicians considering an investment to the Company should be aware of the existence of these ethical considerations and consider the potential applicability to the proposed investment.

In recent years, a number of proposals have been introduced in Congress that would reform various aspects of the healthcare system, including malpractice reform, universal access to healthcare, global budgeting of public and private healthcare spending, Medicare payment reform and establishment of national health or single payor insurance programs financed by the federal government. Legislation introduced in Congress known as "The Managed Competition Act of [Year]" would have, if enacted, (i) provided tax incentives to employers who provide basic healthcare benefits coverage for their employees, but would limit deductions for providing additional benefits; (ii) provided universal access to coverage through varying levels of direct government subsidies for individuals with incomes below 200% of the poverty level; (iii) incorporated insurance reform and malpractice reform to reduce costs; and (iv) encouraged through tax incentives the establishment of accountable health plans consisting of providers and insurance companies that compete on the basis of offering high quality, low cost healthcare.

In September [Year], President Clinton proposed plans for healthcare reform. Although elements of the Managed Competition Act, along with other health reform initiatives, are being considered, no assurance can be given as to what elements will be included in the President's comprehensive national healthcare reform package, whether such proposal will be enacted into law, or what effect such proposals would have on the operations of Initial Properties.

REGULATORY COMPLIANCE

The Company believes that healthcare regulations will continue to change and, therefore, regularly monitors developments in healthcare law. There can be no assurance that all facilities to be subject to Leases can remain in compliance with applicable law.

ENVIRONMENTAL MATTERS

Under various federal, state and local environmental laws, ordinances and regulations, an owner of real property may be liable for the costs of removal or remediation of certain hazardous or toxic substances at, under or disposed of in connection with such property, as well as certain other potential costs relating to hazardous or toxic substances (including fines and injuries to persons and adjacent property). Most, if not all, of these laws, ordinances and regulations contain stringent enforcement provisions including, but not limited to, the authority to impose substantial administrative, civil and criminal fines and penalties upon violators. Such laws often impose liability without regard to whether the owner knew of, or was responsible for, the presence or disposal of such substances and may be imposed on the owner in connection with the activities of an operator of the property. The cost of any required remediation, removal, fines or personal or property damages and the owner's liability therefor could exceed the value of the property and/or the aggregate assets of the owner. In addition, the presence of such substances, or the failure to properly dispose of or remediate such substances, may adversely affect the owner's ability to sell or lease such property or to borrow using such property as collateral.

Operations at the Initial Properties have been and will continue to be subject to numerous federal, state, and local environmental laws, ordinances and regulations, including those relating to the generation, segregation, handling, packaging and disposal of medical wastes as well as facility siting, construction, occupational training and safety, disposal of non-medical wastes, underground storage tanks and ash emissions from incinerators. Operations of nuclear medicine departments at some of the Initial Properties also involve the use and handling, and subsequent disposal of, radioactive isotopes and similar materials, activities which are closely regulated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and state regulatory agencies. In addition, several of the Initial Properties were built prior to the time prohibitions on the use of asbestos in building construction were enacted and other such facilities may be acquired by the Company in the future. Seven of the Initial Properties contain non-friable asbestos-containing materials, and other facilities may contain friable and non-friable asbestos-containing materials. The presence of such materials could result in significant costs in the event that any friable asbestos-containing materials requiring immediate removal and/or encapsulation are located in or on any of such facilities or in the event of any future renovation activities.

The Company has had new environmental audits conducted on only some of the Initial Properties, while recent audits were relied upon with respect to the balance of the Initial Properties. All of the Purchase Agreements and leases pertaining to the Initial Properties contain indemnification provisions relating to environmental liabilities or conditions, although there can be no assurances that the seller will be able to fulfill its indemnification obligations. In addition, the scope of such indemnification obligations may be limited and there can be no assurances that such indemnification obligations will apply to all environmental costs or liabilities incurred by the Company. The Leases do not give the Company control over the operations of the Lessees, nor will the Company monitor the Lessees with respect to environmental matters.

Although the Company has not, in many cases, conducted or received an independent investigation or analysis of the environmental conditions or liabilities associated with the Initial Properties, the Company is not aware of any such condition or liability that management presently believes would have a material adverse effect on the Company's earnings, expenditures or continuing operations.

No assurance can be given that the provisions of either the Purchase Agreements or the Leases will fully protect the Company or that any prior owner, Lessee or future lessee of a Initial Property did not and will not create environmental conditions not known to the Company.

COMPANY OFFICES

The Company's headquarters are located in offices at Six Central Southern Bldg., Suite 101-A, Birmingham, Alabama 35243, which are leased by the Company from Birmingham Realty Company until May 31, [Year]. Annual rental is $7,755.00. The office lease covers approximately 1,500 square feet at rent of $5.17 per square foot.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

In June [Year], Mr. Gerald Chandler filed a lawsuit in the Circuit Court for Jefferson County, Alabama, against M. Donal Rushmore, Carleton Residence, Dee Martin Michaels, W. Gill McDaniel and a to be formed REIT, seeking damages arising out of the defendants' alleged breaches of alleged verbal agreements to employ Mr. Chandler. The Company is of the opinion that this lawsuit is without merit and will not have a material adverse effect on the Company and is defending the lawsuit vigorously.

The CON for the Northlake facility has been challenged by HCA Health Services of Georgia, Inc., d/b/a/ Northlake Regional Medical Center in two related Georgia state court proceedings on the basis that the Georgia State Health Planning Agency did not have authority by statute or regulation to permit the relocation of the facility without a new CON. Regulations have since been proposed that would permit such a relocation which contain a grandfather provision that would be applicable to the Northlake facility. If the proposed regulations are not finally adopted as published or are challenged and held invalid, or if Health Surgery does not prevail on the issue of whether the facility was properly grandfathered from the CON requirements, Health Surgery may be required to discontinue operation of the Northlake facility and apply for a new CON. In such event, the Company can require Health Surgery to substitute one or more comparable properties for the Northlake facility.

INVESTMENT AND OTHER POLICIES

The following is a summary of the Company's investment policy and policies with respect to certain other activities.

INVESTMENT POLICY

The Company's investment objectives are to (i) generate current income for stockholders, (ii) provide increased returns to stockholders through the acquisition and development of additional properties, which may require the use of additional debt or equity financing, (iii) provide the opportunity to realize capital growth resulting from appreciation, if any, in the residual values of any properties acquired and (iv) preserve and protect stockholders' capital. There can be no assurance that any of these objectives will be realized.

The Bylaws of the Company permit the Board of Directors with the consent of a majority of the Executive Committee, but without the approval of the stockholders, to alter the Company's investment policies if they determine in the future that such a change is in the best interests of the Company and its stockholders. The methods of implementing the Company's investment policies may vary as new investment and financing techniques are developed.

The Company intends to invest in real property, principally for the production of income, although the prospect for capital appreciation is a factor that will be considered in making such investments. The Company's present policy is not to have any single property or lease account for more than 20% of either its assets or annualized rental revenue. There are no limitations on the number or amount of mortgages that may be placed on any single property, but the Company's present policy prohibits aggregate debt (secured or unsecured) in excess of 50% of the Company's total capitalization. The Company intends to close all of the Initial Properties in escrow on or before the Effective Date of the Offering and to release the Initial Properties from escrow immediately after the closing of this Offering, except for the South County Medical Center facility which will be purchased after the completion of its construction and the issuance by the proper authority of a certificate of occupancy. Thereafter, the Company intends to seek growth through the acquisition of additional income-producing projects developed by third parties. The Company will concentrate on investments in healthcare-related facilities, including acute care hospitals, rehabilitation hospitals, physician clinics, ambulatory surgery centers, clinical laboratories, ancillary hospital facilities, long-term care facilities, and medical centers, but may also consider opportunities in other kinds of income-producing real property. Management has no present intention to invest in properties unrelated to the healthcare industry.

The Company may acquire additional income-producing properties, expand and improve its properties or sell such properties when, in the opinion of the Company, circumstances warrant. The Company may also participate with other entities in property ownership, through joint ventures or other types of co-ownership, so long as the Company is the controlling party in any such venture. While the Company presently intends to acquire equity investments in real estate, it may, in its discretion, invest in mortgages and other types of interests in real estate. The Company may also invest in securities of concerns engaged in real estate activities or securities of other issuers, either for investment purposes or for the purpose of exercising control, subject to limitations on such investments necessary for REIT qualification. The Company has the authority to invest in securities of other issuers and interests in real estate, but has no present plans to do so. Except for the policy that no one property may account for more than 20% of the Company's assets or annualized rental revenue, there is no limit to the percentage of assets that may be invested in securities or interests in real estate.

The Company may enter into build-to-suit type agreements that by their terms require conversion to leases upon the completion of the development of the facility. During the term of the development of the facility, funds will be advanced pursuant to requests made by the developer in accordance with the terms and conditions of the applicable development agreement. Simultaneously with the commencement of the development of a facility, the Company will enter into a lease with the developer. The Base Rent under such a lease will be established at a specified rate or at a specified number of basis points over an agreed-upon United States treasury security's yield in effect at the time of certified substantial completion of the facility.

The Company's development program will generally include a variety of additional forms of security and collateral beyond that provided by the Leases, such as irrevocable letters of credit from financial institutions, payment and performance completion bonds or completion guarantees. In addition, prior to any advance of funds by the Company under a development agreement, the developer generally must provide: (i) satisfactory evidence in the form of an endorsement to the Company's title insurance policy that no intervening liens have been placed on the property since the date of the Company's previous advance; (ii) a certificate executed by the architect-of record that indicates that all construction work completed on the facility conforms with the requirements of the plans, specifications, and any change orders previously approved by the Company; (iii) a certificate executed by the general contractor or construction manager that all work requested for reimbursement has been completed; and (iv) satisfactory evidence that the funds remaining unadvanced are sufficient for the payment of all costs necessary for the completion of the facility in accordance with the terms and provisions of the agreement. As a further safeguard during the development period, the Company will generally retain a percentage of construction costs incurred until it has received satisfactory evidence that the facility has been substantially completed in accordance with the applicable plans, specifications, and approved change-orders, and the period during which liens may be perfected with respect to any work performed, or labor or materials supplied, in connection with the construction of the facility has expired. The Company anticipates that it will also monitor the progress of the development of each facility and the accuracy of the developer's requests for funds by having a third-party inspector perform monthly on-site inspections.

In evaluating potential investments, the Company will consider such factors as: (i) the geographic area, type of property and demographic profile; (ii) the location, construction quality, condition and design of the property; (iii) the current and anticipated cash available for distribution and its adequacy to meet operational needs and lease obligations and to provide a competitive market return on equity to the Company's investors; (iv) the potential for capital appreciation, if any; (v) the growth, tax and regulatory environment of the communities in which the properties are located; (vi) the occupancy and demand for similar health facilities in the same or nearby communities; (vii) an adequate mix of private and government sponsored patients; (viii) any potential alternative uses of the facilities; (ix) prospects for liquidity through financing or refinancing; (x) industry segment and operator diversification; and (xi) the suitability of the potential investments in light of maintaining REIT status.

In making future investments, the Company intends to focus on established, credit-worthy potential lessees which meet the Company's standards for quality and experience of management. In order to determine creditworthiness of potential lessees, the Company will review historical and prospective financial information of the lessee, together with appropriate financial information of any guarantor. Factors considered in connection with such financial review with respect to the lessee and any guarantor will include the net worth, profitability and cash flow, debt position, and the ability of the lessee and any guarantor to provide additional credit enhancements.

The Company will actively seek to maintain diversification of its investments in terms of geographic location, lessee and facility types, although investments are not limited (as to percentage of assets or otherwise) to any geographic area or any specific type of property. A fundamental investment objective of the Company will be to obtain contractual Base Rent escalations under long-term, noncancellable, Triple Net Leases and to obtain credit enhancements based upon the credit of the Lessee or its parent.

Management of the Company will conduct market research and analysis for all potential investments. Management also will review the value of the property, the interest rates and debt service coverage requirements of any debt to be assumed and the anticipated sources of repayment for the investment. There are no limitations on the percentage of the Company's total assets that may be invested in any one property or joint venture or other investment. The Board of Directors may establish limitations as it deems appropriate from time to time without a vote of the stockholders of the Company. No limits have been set on the number of properties in which the Company will seek to invest, or on the concentration of investment in any one property or any one city or state.

The Company may determine to finance acquisitions through the exchange of properties or the issuance of shares of its capital stock to others, if such transactions otherwise satisfy the Company's investment criteria. The Company also has authority to repurchase or otherwise reacquire its Common Stock or any other securities and may determine to do so in the future.

To the extent that the Company's Board of Directors determines to obtain additional capital, the Company may raise such capital through additional equity offerings, debt financings or retention of cash available for distribution (subject to provisions of the Code concerning the taxability of undistributed income of REITs), or a combination of these methods. See "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations," "Liquidity and Capital Resources," supra, and "Other Policies," infra.

The Company expects to hold its properties as long-term investments and has no maximum period for retention of each investment. To the extent that the Company holds its properties for long periods, it may not have sufficient funds available to acquire additional properties unless such funds are available through the Bank Credit Facility or other borrowings, or are raised through additional equity or debt financing, including debt incurred by mortgaging existing properties.

The Company may invest its cash in certain short-term investment grade instruments. Such investments may be in interest-bearing bank accounts, certificates of deposit, money-market securities, United States government securities, mortgage-backed securities guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association, mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration, mortgage loans, mortgage loan participation and certain other similar investments. The Company's ability to make certain of these investments may be limited by tax considerations.

The Company may sell a property if such property has significantly appreciated in value. The Company anticipates that the value of the properties that it intends to acquire will appreciate over the term of its ownership. Appreciation of the properties is dependent upon many factors, including: (i) growth of the healthcare industry in general, which in turn is dependent upon a rising demand for healthcare services, (ii) availability of financial resources to pay for increased healthcare services, and (iii) supply of healthcare facilities within the geographical area of the Company's properties which is available to satisfy the demand for such facilities. Supply and demand for healthcare facilities within the geographical area of the Company's properties is dependent, among other considerations, upon (i) availability of capital for construction of new healthcare facilities; (ii) competing healthcare facilities; and (iii) population growth and the demographic composition thereof. The Company, in employing its investment criteria, has selected properties for acquisition with respect to which it believes there is reasonable likelihood for appreciation based upon the foregoing considerations.

In the event the Company sells or otherwise disposes of any of its properties, the Board of Directors will determine whether and to what extent the Company will acquire additional properties or distribute the proceeds to the stockholders.

OTHER POLICIES

The Company may incur indebtedness when, in the opinion of the Board of Directors, it is advisable to do so subject to the limitation described in "Investment Policy" and limitations imposed by financing as described under "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations --Liquidity and Capital Resources." The Company has obtained a written commitment from AmTrust for the $30 million Bank Credit Facility, which will be used to purchase the Initial Properties, acquire additional properties and for general corporate purposes. The Company may from time to time negotiate lines of credit or arrange for other short-term borrowings from banks or otherwise. The Company may also arrange for long-term borrowings from public offerings, banks or other institutional investors. Such borrowings may be for general corporate purposes, to improve or expand existing properties, to acquire additional properties or to fund any shortfall of cash necessary to meet its cash distribution requirements that could arise if its taxable income exceeds its cash available for distribution.

In addition, the Company may incur mortgage indebtedness on real estate which it owns. Where terms are deemed favorable, the Company may invest in properties subject to existing mortgages, deeds of trust or similar liens on the properties. The Company also may obtain non-recourse or other mortgage financing for unleveraged properties in which it has invested or may refinance properties acquired on a leveraged basis. There is no limitation on the number or amount of mortgages which may be placed on any one property, although the Company's policy is not to incur indebtedness in excess of 50% of its total capitalization.

The Company has no present intention to issue senior securities; however, its Articles of Incorporation authorize the Board of Directors to classify or reclassify any unissued shares of stock, including the right to issue up to 10,000,000 shares of preferred stock in series, and the Company may in the future issue senior securities to raise equity or debt capital, to acquire real estate or other assets or in connection with a merger or other business acquisition or for any other corporate purposes. The Company may repurchase or otherwise reacquire its own shares, although it may not issue stock that is redeemable at the option of the holder.

The Company intends to hold the properties it acquires for long-term investment. The Company will seek to sell the properties it owns when management determines that the continued ownership no longer meets its then current criteria or where a higher yield would be achieved through another investment. Proceeds from the sale of properties may be used by the Company to acquire additional investments.

The Company intends to match a portion of the deferred amount. The amounts credited to a participant's account will be credited with the results of a selected investment option, which are expected to include funds primarily investing in debt issued by the United States Government, equity securities, or a combination of debt and equity securities. All amounts in an account of a participant will be fully vested at all times and may be withdrawn by a participant 30 days following such participant's termination of employment. All directors receive reimbursement of travel expenses incurred in attending Board and committee meetings.

INDEMNIFICATION OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS

The Company's Articles of Incorporation provide that a director or officer shall not be personally liable to the Company or its stockholders for money damages unless (i) it is proved that the person actually received an improper benefit or profit in money, property or services, for the amount of the benefit or profit in money, property, or services actually received, or (ii) a judgement or other final adjudication adverse to the person is entered in a proceeding based on a finding in the proceeding that the person's action, or failure to act, was the result of active and deliberate dishonesty and was material to the cause of action adjudicated in the proceeding. The Articles of Incorporation further provide that if the law of the State of Maryland is amended to authorize corporate action further limiting or eliminating the personal liability of directors or officers then the liability of directors and officers to the corporation or its stockholders shall be limited or eliminated to the fullest extent permitted. While liability for monetary damages may be eliminated under certain circumstances as a result of these provisions, equitable remedies such as injunctive relief or rescission remain available.

The Company's Articles of Incorporation provide that the Company shall indemnify directors, officers, employees and agents to the fullest extent permitted by the law of the State of Maryland. The Company's Bylaws require it to indemnify each director, officer, employee and agent of the Company and purchase and maintain liability insurance for those persons as, and to the extent permitted by Maryland law. Maryland law provides that any present or former director or officer who has been successful, on the merits or otherwise, in the defense of a proceeding to which he was made a party by reason of his services in that capacity may be indemnified against judgments, penalties, fines, settlements and reasonable expenses incurred by him in connection with the proceeding unless it is established that: (i) his act or omission was committed in bad faith or was the result of active or deliberate dishonesty; (ii) he actually received an improper personal benefit in money, property, or services; or (iii) in the case of a criminal proceeding, he had reasonable cause to believe that his act or omission was unlawful, but, if the proceeding is one by, or in the right of Company, indemnification is not permitted with respect to any proceeding in which the director has been adjudged to be liable to the Company. The termination of any proceeding by conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent creates a rebuttable presumption that the director failed to meet the requisite standard of conduct required for permitted indemnification. The termination of any proceedings by judgement, order or settlement, however, does not create a presumption that the director failed to meet the requisite standard of conduct for permitted indemnification. In addition, Maryland law provides that reasonable expenses incurred by a director or officer who is a party to a proceeding may be paid or reimbursed, in advance of final deposition of a proceeding, provided that the Company shall have received (i) a written affirmation by the director or officer of his good faith belief that he has met the standard of conduct necessary for indemnification by the Company as authorized by the Bylaws and (ii) a written undertaking by or on his behalf to repay the amount paid or reimbursed by the Company if it shall ultimately be determined that the standard of conduct was not met.

Indemnification under the provisions of the Maryland General Corporation Law ("MGCL") is not deemed exclusive of any other rights, by indemnification or otherwise, to which a director may be entitled under the Article of Incorporation, Bylaws, resolutions of stockholders or allegation, conduct or otherwise.

Indemnification of the Company's directors and officers is subject to certain limitations where claims of securities laws violations are involved. Insofar as indemnification for liabilities arising under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), may be permitted to directors and officers of the Company pursuant to the foregoing provisions or otherwise, the Company has been advised that, in the opinion of the SEC, such indemnification is against public policy as expressed in the Securities Act and is, therefore, unenforceable. In addition, indemnification may be limited by state securities laws.

INSURANCE

The Company expects to maintain appropriate liability insurance and casualty insurance on the Company's office premises and directors' and officers' liability insurance for the officers and directors of the Company.

DESCRIPTION OF SECURITIES

The summary of the terms of the Common Stock of the Company set forth below does not purport to be complete and is subject to and qualified in its entirety by reference to the Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws of the Company, copies of which are exhibits to the Registration Statement of which this Prospectus is a part. See "Additional Information."

GENERAL

The Articles of Incorporation of the Company provide that the Company may issue up to 60,000,000 shares of stock, consisting of 50,000,000 shares of Common Stock and 10,000,000 shares of preferred stock, par value $.001 per share ("Preferred Stock"). As of March 31, [Year], 180,000 shares of Common Stock were issued and outstanding and held by four record holders and no shares of Preferred Stock were outstanding. Under Maryland law, stockholders generally are not liable for the corporation's debts or obligations.

COMMON STOCK

Holders of Common Stock will be entitled to receive such dividends as the Board of Directors may declare out of funds legally available for the payment of dividends. Upon issuance, the Common Stock will be fully paid and nonassessable and have no preferences or conversion, exchange, or preemptive rights. In the event of any liquidation, dissolution, or winding-up of the Company, the holders of Common Stock are entitled to share ratably in any of the Company's assets remaining after the satisfaction of all obligations and liabilities of the Company and after required distributions to holders of Preferred Stock, if any. The Common Stock is subject to restrictions on transfer under certain circumstances. See "Restrictions on Transfer."

Each share of Common Stock will be entitled to one vote on all matters voted upon by the holders of Common Stock. Holders of Shares will have no cumulative voting rights. The Company's Bylaws provide that the President or a majority of the Board may call a special meeting and the Secretary of the Company must call a special meeting of stockholders upon written request of stockholders entitled to cast at least 25% of all votes entitled to be cast at the meeting.

The transfer agent and registrar for the Company's Common Stock is AmSouth Bank N.A.

The Company intends to apply to list the Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange. Prior to this Offering, there has been no market for the Common Stock.

PREFERRED STOCK

The Board of Directors is empowered by the Company's Articles of Incorporation to designate and issue from time to time one or more classes or series of Preferred Stock and to classify or reclassify any shares of unissued stock without stockholder approval. The Board of Directors may determine the relative rights, preferences and privileges of each class or series of Preferred Stock so issued. Because the Board of Directors has the power to establish the preferences and rights of each class or series of Preferred Stock, it may afford the holders in any series or class of Preferred Stock preferences, powers and rights, voting or otherwise, senior to the rights of holders of Common Stock. The issuance of Preferred Stock could have the effect of delaying or preventing a change in control of the Company. The Board of Directors has no present plans to issue any shares of Preferred Stock.

RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSFER

For the Company to qualify as a REIT under the Code in any taxable year after the first year of its election to be treated as a REIT, (i) not more than 50% in value of its outstanding Stock (as defined below) may be owned, directly or indirectly (after application of certain complex attribution rules), by five or fewer individuals at any time during the last half of its taxable year, and (ii) its Stock must be beneficially owned by 100 or more persons during at least 335 days of a taxable year of 12 months or during a proportionate part of a shorter taxable year.

In connection with the foregoing, if the Board of Directors shall, at any time and in good faith, believe that direct or indirect ownership (as determined under applicable federal tax attribution rules) of at least 9.8% or more in value of the outstanding Common Stock and/or Preferred Stock (collectively, the "Stock") has or may become concentrated in the hands of one beneficial owner, the Board of Directors has the power to refuse to transfer or issue Stock to a person whose acquisition of such Stock would cause a beneficial holder to hold in excess of 9.8% in value of the outstanding Stock. Further, any transfer of Stock that would create a beneficial owner of more than 9.8% of the outstanding Stock shall be deemed null and void, and the intended transferee shall be deemed never to have had an interest therein.

If at any time there is a transfer in violation of such restrictions, the Excess Shares shall be deemed to have been transferred to the Company, as trustee for the benefit of such persons to whom the Excess Shares are later transferred.

Subject to the Company's right to purchase the Excess Shares, the interest in the trust representing the Excess Shares shall be freely transferable by the intended transferee at a price that does not exceed the price paid by the intended transferee for the Excess Shares. Excess Shares shall have no voting rights, and shall not be considered for the purpose of any stockholder vote or determining a quorum, but shall continue to be reflected as issued and outstanding stock. No dividends shall be paid with respect to Excess Shares. The Company shall have the right to purchase Excess Shares for the lesser of the amount paid by the intended transferee for the Excess Shares or the market price. The market price for any Stock so purchased, shall be equal to the fair market value of such Shares reflected in (i) the closing sales price for the Stock, if then listed on only one national securities exchange, (ii) the average closing sales price of such Stock if then listed on more than one national securities exchange, or (iii) if the Stock are not then listed on a national securities exchange the latest bid quotation for the Stock if then traded over-the-counter, as of the day immediately preceding the date on which notices of such purchase are sent by the Company. If no such closing sales prices or quotations are available, the purchase price shall equal the net asset value of such Stock as determined by the Board of Directors in good faith.

The market price for any Stock so purchased, shall be equal to the fair market value of such Shares reflected in (i) the closing sales price for the Stock, if then listed on only one national securities exchange, or (ii) the average closing sales price of such Stock if then listed on more than one national securities exchange, or (iii) if the Stock is not then listed on a national securities exchange the latest bid quotation for the Stock if then traded over-the-counter, as of the day immediately preceding the date on which notices of such purchase are sent by the Company. DIVIDEND REINVESTMENT PLAN

The Company intends to adopt a Dividend Reinvestment Plan to provide registered owners of the Company's Common Stock with a simple and convenient method of investing dividends and other distributions paid in cash ("dividends") in additional Shares of the Company's Common Stock at a 5% discount from current market value and without payment of any brokerage commission or service charge. Since such additional shares of Common Stock will be purchased from the Company, the Company will receive additional funds which will be used for its general corporate purposes.

Participating stockholders ("Participants") may have cash dividends on all or a portion of their shares of Common Stock automatically reinvested in additional shares of the Company's Common Stock ("Plan Shares"). Participants' funds will be fully invested because the Dividend Reinvestment Plan permits fractions of shares to be credited to a Participant's account. Dividends on such fractions, as well as on whole shares, will be reinvested in additional shares, and such shares will be credited to a Participant's account. Participants will avoid the need for safe keeping of stock certificates for Plan Shares credited to their accounts under the Dividend Reinvestment Plan.

Regular statements reflecting all current activity, including purchases and latest balances and, if applicable, amounts withheld in conformity with any United States federal income tax requirements, will simplify Participants' recordkeeping.

Implementation of the Dividend Reinvestment Plan will commence upon compliance with applicable federal and state securities laws.

SHARES ELIGIBLE FOR FUTURE SALE

Prior to the Offering there has not been any public market for securities of the Company. No prediction can be made as to the effect, if any, that market sales of Common Stock or the availability of Common Stock for sale will have on the market price prevailing from time to time. Nevertheless, sales of substantial amounts of Common Stock of the Company in the public market could adversely affect the prevailing market prices.

Upon completion of this Offering, a total of 5,980,000 shares of Common Stock will be outstanding, assuming no exercise of options under the Stock Incentive Plan to purchase shares of Common Stock. The 5,800,000 Shares sold in this Offering will be freely tradeable without restriction or further registration under the Securities Act, except (i) for shares purchased by "affiliates" of the Company as that term is defined in Rule 144 under the Securities Act and (ii) for shares governed by the Excess Share provisions. See "Restrictions on Transfer."

The remaining 180,000 shares are deemed "Restricted Shares" under Rule 144 in that they were originally issued and sold by the Company in private transactions in reliance upon exemptions from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. An aggregate of 180,000 shares held by existing stockholders are subject to "lock-up agreements" under which the holders of such shares have agreed not to sell or otherwise dispose of any of their shares without the prior written consent of the Representatives of the Underwriters for 180 days after the date of this Prospectus. After the expiration of these "lock-up agreements," certain of the shares subject to such agreements will be eligible for sale in the public market subject to volume limitations, holding period requirements and other requirements of Rule 144 promulgated by the SEC under the Securities Act.

In general, under Rule 144 as currently in effect, a person (or persons whose shares are aggregated), including an affiliate, who has beneficially owned Restricted Shares for at least two years from the later of the date such Restricted Shares were acquired from the Company and (if applicable) the date they were acquired from an affiliate, is entitled to sell within any three-month period a number of shares that does not exceed the greater of one percent of the then outstanding shares of the Common Stock (59,800 shares based on the number of shares to be outstanding after this Offering) or the average weekly trading volume in the public market during the four calendar weeks preceding such sale. Sales under Rule 144 are also subject to certain requirements as to the manner and notice of sale and the availability of public information concerning the Company. In addition, a person who is not deemed to have been an affiliate of the Company at any time during the three months preceding a sale, and who has beneficially owned the Shares proposed to be sold for at least three years, would be entitled to sell such shares under Rule 144(k) without regard to the requirements described above.

The Company has reserved 418,600 shares of Common Stock to be outstanding from time to time for issuance pursuant to grants under its Stock Incentive Plan. See "Management _____ [Year] Stock Incentive Plan." Options to purchase a total of 260,000 shares of Common Stock will be granted to executive officers of the Company on the date of this Prospectus at the initial public offering price.

CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF MARYLAND LAW AND OF THE COMPANY'S ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION AND BYLAWS

The following paragraphs summarize certain provisions of Maryland law and the Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws. The summary does not purport to be complete and is subject to and qualified in its entirety by reference to Maryland law and the Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws for complete information.

REMOVAL OF DIRECTORS

The Articles of Incorporation provide that a director may be removed with or without cause only by the affirmative vote of at least two-third of the votes entitled to be cast in the election of directors. This provision, when coupled with the provision in the Bylaws authorizing the Board of Directors to fill vacant directorships, may preclude stockholders from removing incumbent directors except upon a substantial affirmative vote and filling the vacancies created by such removal with their own nominees.

BUSINESS COMBINATIONS

Under the MGCL, certain "business combinations" (including a merger, consolidation, share exchange, or, in certain circumstances, an asset transfer or issuance or reclassification of equity securities) between a Maryland corporation and any person who beneficially owns 10% or more of the voting power of the corporation's shares or an affiliate of the corporation who, at any time within the two-year period prior to the date in question, was the beneficial owner of 10% or more of the voting power of the then-outstanding voting stock of the corporation (an "Interested Stockholder") or an affiliate thereof, are prohibited for five years after the most recent date on which the Interested Stockholder became an Interested Stockholder. Thereafter, any such business combination must be recommended by the Board of Directors of such corporation and approved by the affirmative vote of at least (i) 80% of the vote entitled to be cast by holders of outstanding voting shares of the corporation and (ii) two-thirds of the votes entitled to be cast by holders of outstanding voting shares of the corporation other than shares held by the Interested Stockholder with whom the business combination is to be effected, unless, among other things, the corporation's stockholders receive a minimum price (as defined in the MGCL) for their shares and the consideration is received in cash or in the same form as previously paid by the Interested Stockholder for its shares. These provisions of Maryland law do not apply, however, to business combinations that are approved or exempted by the Board of Directors of the corporation prior to the time that the Interested Stockholder becomes an Interested Stockholder.

CONTROL SHARE ACQUISITIONS

The MGCL provides that "control shares" of a Maryland corporation acquired in a "control share acquisition" have no voting rights except to the extent approved by a vote of two-thirds of the votes entitled to be cast on the matter, excluding shares of stock owned by the acquiror or by officers or directors who are employees of the corporation. "Control Shares" are voting shares of stock which, if aggregated with all other shares of stock previously acquired by the acquiror, or in respect of which the acquiror is able to exercise or direct the exercise of voting power, would entitle the acquiror to exercise voting power in electing directors within one of the following ranges of voting power: (i) one-fifth or more but less than one-third; (ii) one-third or more but less than a majority; or (iii) a majority of all voting power. Control shares do not include shares the acquiring person is then entitled to vote as a result of having previously obtained stockholder approval. A "control share acquisition" means the acquisition of control shares, subject to certain exceptions.

A person who has made or proposes to make a control share acquisition, upon satisfaction of certain conditions (including an undertaking to pay expenses), may compel the Board of Directors to call a special meeting of stockholders to be held within 45 days of demand to consider the voting rights of the shares. If no request for a meeting is made, the corporation may itself present the question at any stockholders meeting.

If voting rights are not approved at the meeting or if the acquiring person does not deliver an acquiring person statement as required by the statute, then, subject to certain conditions and limitations, the corporation may redeem any or all of the control shares (except those for which voting rights have previously been approved) for fair value determined, without regard to the absence of voting rights for the control shares, as of the date of the last control share acquisition or of any meeting of stockholders at which the voting rights of such shares are considered and not approved. If voting rights for control shares are approved at a stockholder meeting and the acquiror becomes entitled to vote a majority of the shares entitled to vote, all other stockholders may exercise appraisal rights. The fair value of the shares as determined for purposes of such appraisal rights may not be less than the highest price per share paid by the acquiror in the control share acquisition.

The control share acquisition statute does not apply to shares acquired in a merger, consolidation or share exchange if the corporation is a party to the transaction, or to acquisitions approved or exempted by the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation.

The business combination statute and the control share acquisition statute could have the effect of discouraging offers to acquire the Company and of increasing the difficulty of consummating any such offer.

AMENDMENT OF THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

Certain provisions of the Company's Articles of Incorporation, including the provisions governing removal of directors, may be amended only by the affirmative vote of the holders of not less than 90% of all of the votes entitled to be cast on the matter.

DISSOLUTION OF THE COMPANY

The dissolution of the Company must be approved by the affirmative vote of the holders of not less than two-thirds of all of the votes entitled to be cast on the matter or the written consent of all holders of shares entitled to vote on the matter.

ADVANCE NOTICE OF DIRECTOR NOMINATIONS AND NEW BUSINESS

The Bylaws of the Company provide that (a) with respect to an annual meeting of stockholders, nominations of persons for election to the Board of Directors and the proposal of business to be considered by stockholders may be made only (i) pursuant to the Company's notice of the meeting, (ii) by the Board of Directors, or (iii) by a stockholder who is entitled to vote at the meeting and has complied with the advance notice procedures set forth in the Bylaws. The Bylaws further provide that with respect to special meetings of stockholders, only the business specified in the Company's notice of meeting may be brought before the meeting of stockholders, and nominations of persons for election of the Board of Directors may be made only (i) pursuant to the Company's notice of the meeting, (ii) by the Board of Directors, or (iii) provided that the Board of Directors has determined that directors shall be elected at such meeting, by a stockholder who is entitled to vote at the meeting and has complied with the advance notice provisions set forth in the Bylaws.

The provisions in the Bylaws for removal of directors, the business combination and control share acquisition provisions of the MGCL, and the advance notice provisions of the Bylaws could have the effect of discouraging a takeover or other transaction in which holders of some, or a majority, of the shares of Common Stock might receive a premium for their shares over the then prevailing market price or which such holders might believe to be otherwise in their best interests.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSIDERATIONS

GENERAL

The following discussion summarizes the material federal income tax considerations to the Company and a prospective holder of Common Stock. Based upon representations of the Company with respect to certain facts set forth herein, Etores & Premull, P.C., which has acted as tax counsel to the Company in connection with the formation of the Company and the Company's election to be taxed as a REIT commencing with its taxable year ending December 31, [Year], is of the opinion that the following discussion fairly summarizes the material federal income tax considerations to the Company and a holder of Common Shares. This discussion and such opinion are based on current law. The following discussion is not exhaustive of all possible tax considerations. This summary does not give a detailed discussion of any state, local or foreign tax considerations, nor does it discuss all of the aspects of federal income taxation that may be relevant to a prospective stockholder in light of his or her particular circumstances or, unless otherwise indicated, to certain types of stockholders (including insurance companies, tax-exempt entities, financial institutions or broker-dealers, foreign corporations and persons who are not citizens or residents of the United States) who are subject to special treatment under the federal income tax laws.

PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS OF THE SHARES OF COMMON STOCK OFFERED HEREBY ARE URGED TO CONSULT WITH THEIR OWN TAX ADVISORS AS TO THE SPECIFIC FEDERAL, STATE, LOCAL, FOREIGN AND OTHER TAX CONSEQUENCES RELATING TO THE PURCHASE, OWNERSHIP AND DISPOSITION OF SUCH SHARES OF COMMON STOCK.

TAXATION OF THE COMPANY

The Company intends to elect and to qualify as a REIT for federal income tax purposes under Sections 856 through 860 of the Code (the "REIT Provisions of the Code"), commencing with its taxable year ending December 31, [Year]. The Company believes that, commencing with such taxable year, it will be organized and will operate in such a manner as to qualify for taxation as a REIT under the Code, and the Company intends to continue to operate in such a manner. No assurance can be given, however, that the Company will operate in a manner so as to qualify or remain qualified as an REIT. It should be noted that the Code, rules, regulations, and administrative and judicial interpretations are all subject to change (possibly on a retroactive basis).

In the opinion of Etores & Premull, P.C., upon consummation of the Offering, the Company will be organized in conformity with the requirements for qualification as a REIT and its proposed method of operation as described in this Prospectus will permit it to meet the requirements for qualification and taxation as a REIT under the Code. This opinion is based on various assumptions relating to the organization and operation of the Company and is conditioned upon certain representations made by the Company as to certain relevant factual matters, including matters related to the organization and expected manner of operation of the Company. Qualification of the Company as a REIT will depend upon its ability to meet, through actual annual operating results, the various qualification tests imposed under the Code, as discussed below. Sirote & Permutt, P.C. will not review compliance with these tests on a continuing basis. The Company will receive an opinion of Etores & Premull, P.C. that it has been organized in conformity with the requirements for REIT status under the Code and that its proposed ownership and method of operations, as described in this Prospectus, will enable it to meet the requirements for qualification and taxation as a REIT under the Code. Such opinion will be based upon a review of the Leases in place before the Offering, representations and opinions as to reasonable values, and other matters set forth in the opinion. Such opinion assumes, although no assurance can be given, that the actual results of the Company's operations for any one taxable year will satisfy such requirements. See "Failure to Qualify" below.

In brief, if certain detailed conditions imposed by the REIT Provisions of the Code are met, entities such as the Company that invest primarily in real estate and that otherwise would be treated for federal income tax purposes as corporations subject to regular corporate income tax are generally not taxed at the corporate level on their "REIT taxable income" that is distributed to stockholders. This treatment substantially eliminates the "double taxation" (at both the corporate and stockholder level) that generally results from the use of corporate investment vehicles.

If the Company were to fail to qualify as a REIT in any year, however, it would be subject to federal income tax at regular corporate income tax rates as if it were a domestic corporation, and its stockholders would be taxed in the same manner as stockholders of regular corporations. In this event, the Company could be subject to potentially significant tax liabilities, and, therefore, the amount of cash available for distribution to its stockholders would be reduced.

General. If the Company qualifies for taxation as a REIT, it generally will not be subject to federal income tax on that portion of its ordinary income or capital gain that is currently distributed to stockholders. The Company will be subject to federal income tax, however, as follows: First, the Company will be taxed at regular corporate rates on any undistributed "REIT taxable income," including undistributed net capital gains. Second, under certain circumstances, the Company may be subject to the "alternative minimum tax" on its items of tax preference, if any. Third, if the Company has net income from the sale or other disposition of foreclosure property that is held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business or other nonqualifying income from foreclosure property, it will be subject to tax on such income at the highest corporate rate. Fourth, any net income that the Company has from prohibited transactions (which are, in general, certain sales or other dispositions of property other than foreclosure property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business) will be subject to a 100% tax. Fifth, if the Company was to fail to satisfy either the 75% or 95% gross income tests (as discussed below), and nonetheless maintain its qualification as a REIT because certain other requirements have been met, it would be subject to a 100% tax on the net income attributable to the greater of the amount by which the Company fails the 75% or 95% gross income tests, multiplied by a fraction intended to reflect the Company's profitability. Sixth, if the Company fails to distribute during each year at least the sum of (i) 85% of its REIT ordinary income for such year, (ii) 95% of its REIT capital gain net income for such year, and (iii) any undistributed taxable income from preceding periods, then the Company would be subject to a 4% excise tax on the excess of such required distribution over the amounts actually distributed. Seventh, provided certain federal tax elections are made, if, during the 10-year period commencing on the day on which assets having a net unrealized built-in gain are acquired by the Company from a C corporation in a transaction in which the Company inherits the tax basis in such assets from the C corporation, the Company recognizes a gain from the disposition of all or a portion of such assets, then the Company will be subject to tax at the highest regular corporate rate on the excess, if any, of the fair market value over the adjusted basis of any such asset disposed of determined as of the beginning of the relevant 10 year period.

Requirements for Qualification as a REIT. To qualify as a REIT for a taxable year under the Code, the Company must elect or have in effect an election to be so treated and must meet other requirements, all of which are summarized below, including percentage tests relating to the sources of its gross income, the nature of the Company's assets, and the distribution of its income to stockholders. Such election, if properly made and assuming continuing compliance with the qualification tests described herein, will continue in effect for subsequent years.

The Code defines a REIT as a corporation, trust or association: (1) which is managed by one or more trustees or directors; (2) the beneficial ownership of which is evidenced by transferable shares or by transferable certificates of beneficial interest; (3) which would be taxable, but for the REIT Provisions of the Code, as an association taxable as a domestic corporation; (4) which is neither a financial institution nor an insurance company subject to certain provisions of the Code; (5) the beneficial ownership of which is held by 100 or more persons, determined without reference to any rules of attribution (the share ownership test); (6) which is not closely held as determined under the personal holding company stock ownership test of Section 542(a) (as applied with certain modifications); and (7) which meets certain other tests, described below, regarding the nature of its income and assets. The Code provides that conditions (1) through (4), inclusive, must be met during the entire taxable year and that condition (5) must be met during at least 335 days of a taxable year of 12 months, or during a proportionate part of a taxable year of less than 12 months. By reason of condition (6) above, the Company will fail to qualify as a REIT for a taxable year if at any time during the last half of such year more than 50% in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly by five or fewer individuals (the five or fewer test). For purposes of the five or fewer test, any stock held by a qualified trust described in Section 401(a) of the Code will be treated as if the stock is held directly by the beneficiaries of the trust in proportion to their actual interest in the trust rather than as held by the trust. The five or fewer test and the share ownership test do not apply to the first taxable year for which an election is made to be treated as a REIT. Prior to the consummation of the Offering, the Company will not satisfy the five or fewer or share ownership tests of conditions (5) and (6) above. The Company anticipates issuing sufficient Shares pursuant to the Offering to allow it to satisfy the share ownership test and the five or fewer test. In addition, the Company's Articles of Incorporation will provide restrictions regarding the transfer of Common Stock that are intended to assist the Company in continuing to satisfy the share ownership test and the five or fewer test described in (5) and (6) above. See "Description of Securities--Restrictions on Transfer."

In addition, a corporation may not elect to become a REIT unless its taxable year is the calendar year. The Company will have a calendar year taxable year.

If a REIT owns a qualified REIT subsidiary, the Code provides that the qualified REIT subsidiary is disregarded for federal income tax purposes, and all assets, liabilities, and items of income, deduction and credit of the qualified REIT subsidiary are treated as assets, liabilities and such items of the REIT itself. A qualified REIT subsidiary is a corporation all of the outstanding capital stock of which has been owned by the REIT from the commencement of such subsidiary corporation's existence.

Gross Income Tests. There are three separate percentage tests relating to the sources of the Company's gross income that must be satisfied annually.

1. The 75% Test. At least 75% of the Company's gross income from the taxable year must be "qualifying income." Qualifying income generally includes (i) rents from real property (except as modified below); (ii) interest on obligations collateralized by mortgages on, or interest in real property; (iii) gains from the sale or other disposition of interests in real property and real estate mortgages, other than gain from property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the Company's trade or business ("dealer property"); (iv) dividends or other distributions on shares in other REITS, as well as gain from the sale of such shares; (v) abatements and refunds of real property taxes; (vi) income from the operation, and gain from the sale of property reduced to possession following a lessee's default under the terms of a lease or, of property acquired at or in lieu of a foreclosure of the mortgage collateralized by such property ("foreclosure property"); (vii) commitment fees received for agreeing to make loans collateralized by mortgages on real property or to purchase or lease real property; and (viii) certain qualified temporary investment income attributable to the investment of new capital received by the Company in exchange for its shares (including the Shares issued pursuant to the Offering) during the one-year period following the receipt of such new capital.

2. The 95% Test. In addition to deriving 75% of its gross income from the sources listed above, at least 95% of the Company's gross income for the taxable year must be derived from the above-described qualifying income, or from dividends, interest or gains from the sale or disposition of stock or other securities that are not dealer property. Dividends and interest on any obligations not collateralized by an interest in real property are included for purposes of the 95% test, but not for purposes of the 75% test. Similarly, any payments made to the Company by a financial institution pursuant to a rate protection agreement that hedges variable rate indebtedness incurred by the Company to acquire or carry real estate assets will be included as qualifying income for purposes of the 95% gross income test, but not for purposes of the 75% test.

For purposes of determining whether the Company complies with the 75% and 95% income tests, gross income does not include income from prohibited transactions. A "prohibited transaction" is a sale of dealer property, excluding sales of foreclosure property and certain sales of dealer property exempted from the prohibited transaction tax by virtue of a limited safe harbor rule.

In order to qualify as rents from real property, the amount of rent received generally must not be determined on the income or profits of any person, but may be based on a fixed percentage or percentages of receipts or sales. The Code also provides that rents will not qualify as rents from real property, in satisfying the gross income tests, if the REIT owns 10% or more of the tenant, whether directly or pursuant to certain attribution rules. The Company intends to lease property only under circumstances such that substantially all rents from such property would qualify as rents from real property. Although it is possible that a tenant could sublease space to a sublessee in which the REIT is deemed to own directly or indirectly 10% or more of the tenant, the Company believes that as a result of the provisions in the Articles of Incorporation limiting ownership to 9.8% such occurrence would be unlikely. Application of the 10% ownership rule is, however, dependent upon complex attribution rules provided in the Code and circumstances beyond the control of the Company. Ownership, directly or by attribution, by an unaffiliated third party of more than 10% of the Company's Common Stock and more than 10% of the stock of any lessee or sublessee would result in a violation of the rule.

In order to qualify as interest on obligations secured by mortgages on real property, the amount of interest received generally must not be determined on the income or profits of any person, but may be based on a fixed percentage or percentages of receipts or sales.

In addition, the Company must not manage its properties or furnish or render services to the tenants of its properties, except through an independent contractor from whom the Company derives no income. There is an exception to this rule permitting a REIT to perform directly certain customary tenant services which are "reasonable and customary" in the geographic area in which the services are performed. The Company anticipates that any services provided for tenants will meet this requirement.

If rent attributable to personal property leased in connection with a lease of real property is greater than 15% of the total rent received under the lease, then the portion of rent attributable to such personal property will not qualify as rents from real property. Generally, this 15% test is applied separately to each lease. The portion of rental income treated as attributable to personal property is determined according to the ratio of the tax basis of the personal property to the total tax basis of the property which is rented. The determination of what fixtures and other property constitute personal property for federal tax purposes is difficult and imprecise. The Company does not believe that it will have 15% in value of any of its real properties classified as personalty. If however, rent payments do not qualify, for reasons discussed above, as rents from real property for purposes of Section 856 of the Code, it will be more difficult for the Company to meet the 95% or 75% gross income tests.

The Company may temporarily invest its working capital in short-term investments, including shares in other REITs or interests in REMICs. Although the Company will use its best efforts to ensure that its income generated by these investments will be of a type which satisfies the 75% and 95% gross income tests, there can be no assurance in this regard (see the discussion above of the new capital rule under the 75% gross income test). Moreover, the Company may realize short-term capital gain upon sale or exchange of such investments, and such short-term capital gain would be subject to the limitations imposed by the 30% gross income test. The Company generally expects to meet the 75% and 95% gross income tests through the rental of the property it acquires.

If the Company fails to satisfy one or both of the 75% or 95% gross income tests for any taxable year, it may nevertheless qualify as a REIT for such year if it is entitled to relief under certain provisions of the Code. It is not possible, however, to know whether the Company would be entitled to the benefit of these relief provisions as the application of the relief provisions is dependent on future facts and circumstances. If these relief provisions apply, a special tax generally equal to 100% is imposed upon the net income attributable to the greater of the amount by which the Company failed the 75% or 95% gross income tests, multiplied by a fraction intended to reflect the Company's profitability.

3. The 30% test. Not more than 30% of the Company's gross income for each taxable year may be derived from the sale or other disposition of (i) stock or securities held for less than one year, (ii) dealer property that is not foreclosure property, and (iii) real property held for fewer than four years (apart from involuntary conversions and sales of foreclosure property).

Asset Tests. At the close of each quarter of the Company's taxable year, it must also satisfy three tests relating to the nature of its assets. First, at least 75% of the value of the Company's total assets must consist of real estate assets (including interests in real property and interests in mortgages on real property as well as its allocable share of real estate assets held by joint ventures or partnerships in which the Company participates, if any), cash, cash items and government securities. Second, not more than 25% of the Company's total assets may be represented by securities other than those includible in the 75% asset class. Finally, of the investments included in the 25% asset class, the value of any one issuer's securities owned by the Company may not exceed 5% of the value of the Company's total assets, and the Company may not own more than 10% of any one issuer's outstanding voting securities. The Company may own 100% of another corporation, however, if it is a qualified REIT subsidiary. Under that circumstance, the qualified REIT subsidiary is ignored and the assets, income, gain, loss and other attributes are treated as being owned or generated directly by the Company for federal income tax purposes. The Company has one or more wholly-owned REIT subsidiaries.

If the Company meets the Asset Tests described above at the close of any quarter, it will not lose its REIT status merely because of a change in the value of its assets in a subsequent quarter unless, subject to a 30 day grace period ending after the close of such subsequent quarter, such change exists immediately after the acquisition of any security or other property and is wholly or partly the result of such an acquisition during such quarter. The Company intends to maintain adequate records of the value of its assets to maintain compliance with the Asset Tests.

Annual Distribution Requirements. The Company, in order to qualify as a REIT, is required to distribute dividends (other than capital gain dividends) to its stockholders in an amount equal to or greater than the excess of (A) the sum of (i) 95% of the Company's real estate investment trust taxable income (computed without regard to the dividends paid deduction and the Company's net capital gain) and (ii) 95% of the net income, if any, (after tax) from foreclosure property, over (B) the sum of certain non-cash income (from certain imputed rental income and income from transactions inadvertently failing to qualify as like-kind exchanges). To the extent that the Company does not distribute all of its net long-term capital gain and all of its real estate investment trust taxable income, it will be subject to tax thereon. In addition, the Company will be subject to a 4% excise tax to the extent it fails within a calendar year to make required distributions to its stockholders of 85% of its ordinary income and 95% of its capital gain net income plus the excess, if any, of the grossed up required distribution for the preceding calendar year over the amount treated as distributed for such preceding calendar year. For this purpose, "grossed up required distribution" for any calendar year is the sum of the taxable income of the Company for the taxable year (without regard to the deduction for dividends paid) and all amounts from earlier years that are not treated as having been distributed under the provision. Dividends declared in the last quarter of the year (October, November or December) and paid during the following [month], will be treated as having been paid and received on December 31.

It is possible that the Company, from time to time, may not have sufficient cash or other liquid assets to meet the 95% distribution requirements due to timing differences between actual receipt of income and actual payment of deductible expenses or dividends on the one hand and the inclusion of such income and deduction of such expenses or dividends in arriving at real estate investment trust taxable income of the Company on the other hand. The problem of inadequate cash to make required distributions could also occur as a result of the repayment in cash of principal amounts due on the Company's outstanding debt, particularly in the case of balloon repayments or as a result of capital losses on short-term investments of working capital. Therefore, the Company might find it necessary to arrange for short-term, or possibly long-term, borrowing or new equity financing. If the Company were unable to arrange such borrowing or financing as might be necessary to provide funds for required distributions, its REIT status could be jeopardized.

Under certain circumstances, the Company may be able to rectify a failure to meet the annual REIT distribution requirements for a taxable year by paying deficiency dividends to stockholders within a specified period.

Share Ownership Test. As described above, the Company's Common Stock must be held by a minimum of 100 persons for at least approximately 92% of the days in each taxable year subsequent to [Year]. In addition, at all times during the second half of each taxable year subsequent to [Year], no more than 50% in value of the shares of beneficial interest of the Company may be owned, directly or indirectly, and by applying certain constructive ownership rules, by five or fewer individuals. In order to ensure compliance with this test, the Company has placed certain restrictions on the transfer of the Common Stock to prevent further concentration of share ownership. Moreover, to evidence compliance with these requirements, the Company must maintain records which disclose the actual ownership of its outstanding Common Stock. In fulfilling its obligations to maintain records, the Company must and will demand written statements each year from the record holders of designated percentages of its Common Stock disclosing the actual owners of such Common Stock. A list of those persons failing or refusing to comply with such demand must be maintained as a part of the Company's records. A stockholder failing or refusing to comply with the Company's written demand must submit with his tax returns a similar statement disclosing the actual ownership of Common Stock and certain other information. In addition, the Company's declaration of trust provides restrictions regarding the transfer of its shares that are intended to assist the Company in continuing to satisfy the share ownership requirements.

Other REIT Issues. With respect to property acquired from and leased back to the same or an affiliated party of a lessee, the IRS could assert that the Company realized prepaid rental income in the year of purchase to the extent that the value of the leased property exceeds the purchase price paid by the Company for that property. In litigated cases involving sale-leasebacks which have considered this issue, courts have concluded that buyers have realized prepaid rent where both parties acknowledged that the purported purchase price for the property was substantially less than fair market value and the purported rents were substantially less than the fair market rentals. Because of the lack of clear precedent and the inherently factual nature of the inquiry, complete assurance cannot be given that the IRS could not successfully assert the existence of prepaid rental income. The value of and fair market rent for properties involved in sale-leasebacks are inherently factual matters and always subject to challenge.

Subject to a safe harbor exception for annual sales of up to seven properties (or properties with a basis of up to 10% of the REIT's assets) that have been held for four years, gain from the sale of a property held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business is subject to a 100% tax. The simultaneous exercise of rights of first refusal granted to certain Lessees or other events could result in sales of properties by the Company that exceed this safe harbor. However, the Company believes that in such event, it will not have held such properties for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business.

Depreciation of Initial Properties. For tax purposes, the Company's real property generally is expected to be depreciated over 40 years and personal property over seven years utilizing the straight-line method of depreciation.

Failure to Qualify. If the Company fails to qualify for taxation as a REIT in any taxable year and the relief provisions do not apply, the Company will be subject to tax (including any applicable alternative minimum tax) on its taxable income at regular corporate rates. Distributions to stockholders in any year in which the Company fails to qualify will not be deductible by the Company, nor will they be required to be made. In such event, to the extent of current or accumulated earnings and profits, all distributions to stockholders will be taxable as ordinary income, and, subject to certain limitations in the Code, corporate distributees may be eligible for the dividends received deduction. Failure to qualify and to maintain qualification as a REIT would force the Company to significantly reduce its distributions and possibly incur substantial indebtedness or liquidate substantial investments in order to pay the resulting corporate taxes. In addition, the Company, once having obtained REIT status and having lost such status, would not be eligible to elect REIT status for the four subsequent taxable years, unless its failure to maintain its qualification was due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect, and certain other requirements were satisfied. In order to elect again to be taxed as a REIT, the Company would be required to distribute all of its earnings and profits accumulated in any non-REIT taxable year.

TAXATION OF DOMESTIC STOCKHOLDERS

Taxation of Taxable Domestic Stockholders. As long as the Company qualifies as a REIT, distributions other than capital gain dividends (including reinvestments pursuant to the Company's dividend reinvestment plan, if any) made to the Company's taxable domestic stockholders out of current or accumulated earnings and profits will be taken into account by them as ordinary income, and corporate stockholders will not be eligible for the dividends received deduction. Distributions that are designated as capital gain dividends will be taxed as long-term capital gains to the extent they do not exceed the Company's actual net capital gain for the taxable year, although corporate stockholders may be required to treat up to 20% of any such capital gain dividend as ordinary income. Distributions in excess of current or accumulated earnings and profits will not be taxable to a stockholder to the extent that they do not exceed the adjusted basis of a stockholder's shares of Common Stock, but will reduce the basis of such stockholder's shares of Common Stock. To the extent that such distributions exceed the adjusted basis of a stockholder's shares of Common Stock, they will be included in income as long-term capital gain (or short-term capital gain if the shares of Common Stock have been held for not more than one year) assuming the shares of Common Stock are a capital asset in the hands of the stockholder. Stockholders may not include, in their respective income tax returns, any net operating losses or capital losses of the Company.

Dividends declared by the Company in the last quarter of the calendar year (October through December) to stockholders of record on a date in such quarter, shall be treated as both paid by the Company and received by such stockholders on December 31 of such year, provided that the Company actually pays such dividends during January of the following calendar year.

In general, any gain or loss recognized by a stockholder on the sale or other taxable disposition of shares of Common Stock will be treated as capital gain or loss, provided the shares are a capital asset in the hands of the seller. In general, any loss upon a sale or exchange of shares of Common Stock by a stockholder who has held such shares for not more than six months (after applying certain rules), will be treated as a long-term capital loss to the extent of distributions from the Company required to be treated by such stockholder as long-term gain.

Tax preference and other items which are treated differently for regular and alternative minimum tax purposes are to be allocated between a REIT and its stockholders under regulations which are to be prescribed. It is likely that these regulations would require tax preference items to be allocated to the Company's stockholders with respect to any accelerated depreciation claimed by the Company.

Backup Withholding. Under certain circumstances, taxable domestic stockholders may be subject to backup withholding at the rate of 31% imposed for payments of interest, dividends and payments of gross proceeds by brokers. This withholding applies only if a stockholder, among other things, (i) fails to furnish the Company with his taxpayer identification number certified under penalties of perjury, (ii) furnishes the Company an incorrect taxpayer identification number, (iii) fails properly to report interest or dividends from any source or (iv) under certain circumstances fails to provide the Company or his securities broker with a certified statement, under penalties of perjury, that he or she is not subject to backup withholding. Stockholders should consult their tax advisors as to their qualification for exemption from withholding and the procedure for obtaining such an exemption. Finally, United States persons are required to certify their United States status in order to receive dividends without the withholding imposed by the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of [Year] ("FIRPTA").

The Company will report to its stockholders and the IRS the amount of dividends paid or deemed paid during each calendar year, and the amount of tax withheld, if any.

Taxation of Tax-Exempt Stockholders. As a general rule, amounts distributed by a REIT to a tax-exempt entity do not constitute unrelated business taxable income ("UBTI") and thus distributions by the Company to a stockholder that is a tax-exempt entity should not constitute UBTI, provided that the tax-exempt entity has not financed the acquisition of Common Stock with "acquisition indebtedness" within the meaning of the Code and the shares of Common Stock are not otherwise used in an unrelated trade or business of the tax-exempt entity. If a REIT constitutes a "pension-held REIT" in a taxable year, distributions by such REIT to a tax-exempt employee's pension trust that owns more than 10% of the REIT may be treated as UBTI in an amount equal to the percentage of gross income of the REIT that is derived from an "unrelated trade or business" (determined as if the REIT were a pension trust and subject to certain de minimus rules) divided by the gross income of the REIT for the year in which the dividends are paid. This rule only applies, however, if (i) the percentage of the gross income derived from the REIT for the year in which the dividends are paid is at least five percent, (ii) the REIT qualifies as a REIT only because the pension trust is not treated as a single individual for purposes of the "five-or-fewer" rule (see "Taxation of the Company--Requirements for Qualification as a REIT") and (iii) (A) one pension trust owns more than 25% of the value of the REIT, or, (B) a group of pension trusts individually holding more than 10 percent of the value of the REIT collectively own more than 50 percent of the value of the REIT. The Company does not expect that it will constitute a "pension-held REIT" in part because the ownership limits in the Company's Articles of Incorporation (assuming no waiver of such limits by the Board of Directors) would prevent such a pension trust from acquiring Common Stock in excess of the Ownership Limit.

TAXATION OF FOREIGN STOCKHOLDERS

The following is a discussion of certain anticipated U.S. federal income and estate tax consequences of the ownership and disposition of Common Stock applicable to Non-U.S. Holders of such shares. A "Non-U.S. Holder" is any person other than (i) a citizen or resident of the United States, (ii) a corporation or partnership created or organized in the United States or under the laws of the United States or of any state thereof, or (iii) an estate or trust whose income is includible in gross income for U.S. federal income tax purposes regardless of its source. The discussion is based on current law and is for general information only. The discussion addresses only certain and not all aspects of U.S. federal income and estate taxation.

Distributions from the Company

Ordinary Dividends. The portion of dividends received by Non-U.S. Holders payable out of the Company's earnings and profits which are not attributable to capital gains of the Company and which are not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business of the Non-U.S. Holder will be subject to U.S. withholding tax at the rate of 30% (unless reduced by treaty). In general, Non-U.S. Holders will not be considered engaged in a U.S. trade or business solely as a result of their ownership of Common Stock. In cases where the dividend income from a Non-U.S. Holder's investment in Common Shares is (or is treated as) effectively connected with the Non-U.S. Holder's conduct of a U.S. trade or business, the Non-U.S. Holder generally will be subject to U.S. tax at graduated rates, in the same manner as U.S. stockholders are taxed with respect to such dividends (and may also be subject to the 30% branch profits tax in the case of a Non-U.S. Holder that is a foreign corporation).

To determine the applicability of a tax treaty providing for a lower rate of withholding, dividends paid to an address in a foreign country are presumed under current Treasury Regulations to be paid to a resident of that country. Treasury regulations proposed in [Year] which have not been finally adopted, however, would require Non-U.S. Holders to file certain forms to obtain the benefit of any applicable tax treaty providing for a lower rate of withholding tax on dividends. Such forms would contain the holder's name and address and other pertinent information, to be certified by such holder under penalties of perjury, and an official statement by the competent authority (as defined in the applicable treaty) in the foreign country attesting to the holder's status a resident thereof.

Non-Dividend Distributions. Distributions by the Company which do not represent dividends paid out of the current and accumulated earnings and profits of the Company will not be subject to a Non-U.S. Holder withholding tax. If it cannot be determined at the time a distribution is made whether or not such distribution will be in excess of current and accumulated earnings and profits, the distribution will be subject to withholding at the rate applicable to dividends. The Non-U.S. Holder may seek a refund of such amounts from the IRS, however, if it is subsequently determined that such distribution was, in fact, in excess of current and accumulated earnings and profits of the Company.

Capital Gain Dividends. Under FIRPTA, a distribution made by the Company to a Non-U.S. Holder, to the extent attributable to gains from dispositions of United States Real Property Interests ("USRPIs") such as the Initial Properties beneficially owned by the Company ("USRPI Capital Gains"), will be considered effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business of the Non-U.S. Holder and subject to U.S. income tax at the rate applicable to U.S. individuals or corporations, without regard to whether such distribution is designated as a capital gain dividend. In addition, the Company will be required to withhold tax equal to 35% of the amount of dividends to the extent such dividends constitute USRPI Capital Gains. Distributions subject to FIRPTA may also be subject to a 30% branch profits tax in the hands of a foreign corporate stockholder that is not entitled to treaty exemption.

Dispositions of Common Stock

Unless the Common Shares constitute a USRPI, a sale of Common Stock by a Non-U.S. Holder generally will not be subject to U.S. taxation under FIRPTA. The Common Stock will not constitute a USRPI if the Company is a "domestically controlled REIT." A domestically controlled REIT is a REIT in which, at all times during a specified testing period, less than 50% in value of its shares is held directly or indirectly by Non-U.S. Holders. It is currently anticipated that the Company will be a domestically controlled REIT, and therefore, that the sale of Common Shares will not be subject to taxation under FIRPTA. Because the Common Stock will be publicly traded, however, no assurance can be given the Company will continue to be a domestically controlled REIT.

If the Company does not constitute a domestically controlled REIT, a Non-U.S. Holder's sale of Common Stock generally will still not be subject to tax under FIRPTA as a sale of a USRPI provided that (i) the Company's Common Stock are "regularly traded" (as defined by applicable Treasury Regulations) on an established securities market (e.g., the NYSE, on which the Common Stock will be listed) and (ii) the selling Non-U.S. Holder held 5% or less of the Company's outstanding Common Stock at all times during a specified testing period.

If gain on the sale of Common Stock were subject to taxation under FIRPTA, the Non-U.S. Holder would be subject to the same treatment as a U.S. stockholder with respect to such gain (subject to applicable alternative minimum tax and a special alternative minimum tax in the case of nonresident alien individuals) and the purchaser of Common Stock could be required to withhold 10% of the purchase price and remit such amount to the IRS.

Capital gains not subject to FIRPTA will nonetheless be taxable in the United States to a Non-U.S. Holder in two cases: (i) if the Non-U.S. Holder's investment in Common Stock is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business conducted by such Non-U.S. Holder, the Non-U.S. Holder will be subject to the same treatment as a U.S. stockholder with respect to such gain, or (ii) if the Non-U.S. Holder is a nonresident alien individual who was present in the United States for 183 days or more during the taxable year and has a "tax home" in the United States, the nonresident alien individual will be subject to a 30% tax on the individual's capital gain.

Estate Tax

Common Stock owned or treated as owned by an individual who is not a citizen or resident (as specially defined for U.S. federal estate tax purposes) of the United States at the time of death will be includible in the individual's gross estate for U.S. federal estate tax purposes, unless an applicable estate tax treaty provides otherwise. Such individual's estate may be subject to U.S. federal estate tax on the property includible in the estate for U.S. federal estate tax purposes.

Information Reporting and Backup Withholding

The Company must report annually to the IRS and to each Non-U.S. Holder the amount of dividends (including any capital gain dividends) paid to, and the tax withheld with respect to, each Non-U.S. Holder. These reporting requirements apply regardless of whether withholding was reduced or eliminated by an applicable tax treaty. Copies of these returns may also be made available under the provisions of a specific treaty or agreement with the tax authorities in the country in which the Non-U.S. Holder resides.

U.S. backup withholding (which generally is imposed at the rate of 31% on certain payments to persons that fail to furnish the information required under the U.S. information reporting requirements) and information reporting will generally not apply to dividends (including any capital gain dividends) paid on Common Stock to a Non-U.S. Holder at an address outside the United States.

The payment of the proceeds from the disposition of Common Stock to or through a U.S. office of a broker will be subject to information reporting and backup withholding unless the owner, under penalties of perjury, certifies, among other things, its status as a Non-U.S. Holder, or otherwise establishes an exemption. The payment of the proceeds from the disposition of Common Stock to or through a non-U.S. office of a non-U.S. broker generally will not be subject to backup withholding and information reporting except as noted below. In the case of a payment of proceeds from the disposition of Common Stock to or through a non-U.S. office of a broker which is (i) a U.S. person, (ii) a "controlled foreign corporation" for U.S. federal income tax purposes, or (iii) a foreign person 50% or more of whose gross income for certain periods is derived from a U.S. trade or business unless the broker has documented that such holder is a Non-U.S. Holder and certain other conditions are met.

Backup withholding with respect to foreign stockholders is not an additional tax. Rather, the amount of any backup withholding with respect to a payment to a Non-U.S. Holder will be allowed as a credit against any United States federal income tax liability of such Non-U.S. Holder. If withholding results in an overpayment of taxes, a refund may be obtained provided that the required information is furnished to the IRS.

OTHER TAX CONSEQUENCES

The Company and its stockholders may be subject to state or local taxation in various state or local jurisdictions, including those in which it or they transact business or reside. The state and local tax treatment of the Company and its stockholders may not conform to the federal income tax consequences discussed above. Consequently, prospective stockholders should consult their own tax advisors regarding the effect of state and local tax laws on an investment in the Common Stock of the Company.

The Company will report to its stockholders and the IRS the amount of dividends paid or deemed paid during each calendar year, and the amount of tax withheld, if any.

There may be other federal, state, local or foreign income, or estate and gift tax considerations applicable to the circumstances of a particular investor. Stockholders should consult their own tax advisors with respect to such matters.

DIVIDEND REINVESTMENT PLAN

Stockholders participating in any dividend reinvestment plan adopted by the Company will be deemed to have received the gross amount of any cash distributions which would have been paid by the Company to such stockholders had they not elected to participate. These deemed distributions will be treated as actual distributions from the Company to the participating stockholders and will retain the character and tax effects applicable to distributions from the Company generally. See "Taxation of Taxable Domestic Stockholders" and "Taxation of Foreign Stockholders." Participants in the dividend reinvestment plan are subject to Federal income tax on the amount of the deemed distributions to the extent that such distributions represent dividends or gains, even though they receive no cash. Shares of Common Stock received under the plan will have a holding period beginning with the day after purchase, and a tax basis equal to their cost (which is the gross amount of the deemed distribution).

ERISA CONSIDERATIONS

The following is a summary of material considerations arising under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended ("ERISA"), and the prohibited transaction provisions of Section 4975 of the Code that may be relevant to prospective investors. This discussion does not purport to deal with all aspects of ERISA or the Code that may be relevant to particular investors in light of their particular circumstances.

A PROSPECTIVE INVESTOR THAT IS AN EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN SUBJECT TO ERISA, A TAX-QUALIFIED RETIREMENT PLAN, AN IRA, OR A GOVERNMENTAL, CHURCH, OR OTHER PLAN THAT IS EXEMPT FROM ERISA IS ADVISED TO CONSULT ITS OWN LEGAL ADVISOR REGARDING THE SPECIFIC CONSIDERATIONS ARISING UNDER APPLICABLE PROVISIONS OF ERISA, THE CODE, AND STATE LAW WITH RESPECT TO THE PURCHASE, OWNERSHIP, OR SALE OF THE COMMON STOCK BY SUCH PLAN OR IRA.

A fiduciary of a pension, profit-sharing, or other employee benefit plan (an "Employee Plan") subject to ERISA should consider fiduciary standards under ERISA in the context of the Employee Plan's particular circumstances before authorizing an investment of all or any portion of such Employee Plan's assets in the Shares. Among other factors, such fiduciary should consider (i) whether the investment satisfies the prudence requirements of Section 404(a)(1)(B) of ERISA, (ii) whether the investment satisfies the diversification requirements of Section 404(a)(1)(C) of ERISA and (iii) whether the investment is in accordance with the documents and instruments governing the plan as required by Section 404(a)(1)(D) of ERISA. In addition, persons who control the investments of individual retirement accounts ("IRAs") should consider that IRAs may only make investments that are authorized by the appropriate governing documents and under applicable state law.

In addition to the imposition of general fiduciary standards of investment prudence and diversification, ERISA, and the corresponding provisions of the Code, prohibit a wide range of transactions involving the assets of an Employee Plan or IRA and persons who have certain specified relationships to the Employee Plan or IRA ("parties in interest" within the meaning of ERISA or "disqualified persons" within the meaning of the Code). Such transactions are treated as "prohibited transactions" under Section 406 of ERISA and Section 408(e)(2) of the Code and excise taxes are imposed upon such persons by Section 4975 of the Code. Thus, a fiduciary of an Employee Plan or a person making the investment decision for an IRA should consider whether the acquisition or the continued holding of the Shares might constitute or give rise to a direct or indirect non-exempt prohibited transaction.

The Department of Labor (the "DOL") has issued final regulations (the "DOL Regulations") as to what constitutes assets of an employee benefit plan under ERISA. Under the DOL Regulations, if an Employee Plan or IRA acquires an equity interest in an entity, which interest is neither a publicly offered security nor a security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended, the Employee Plan's or IRA's assets would include, for purposes of the fiduciary responsibility provisions of ERISA, both the equity interest and an undivided interest in each of the entity's underlying assets unless certain specified exceptions apply. The DOL Regulations define a publicly-offered security as a security that is "widely held," "freely transferable" and either (i) part of a class of securities registered under Section 12(b) or 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "1934 Act"), or (ii) sold pursuant to an effective registration statement under the Securities Act, if the class of securities of which such security is a part is registered under the 1934 Act within 120 days after the end of the fiscal year of the issuer during which the offering occurs. The Shares will be sold pursuant to an effective registration statement under the Securities Act and will be registered under the 1934 Act.

The DOL Regulations provide that a security is widely held only if it is part of a class of securities that is owned by 100 or more investors independent of the Company and of one another. A security will not fail to be widely held because the number of independent investors falls below 100 subsequent to the Offering as a result of events beyond the Company's control. The Company expects the Common Stock to be "widely held" upon completion of the Offering.

The DOL Regulations provide that whether a security is "freely transferable" is a factual question to be determined on the basis of all relevant facts and circumstances. The DOL Regulations further provide that when a security is part of the Offering in which the minimum investment is $10,000 or less, as is the case with this offering, certain restrictions ordinarily will not, alone or in combination, affect the finding that such securities are freely transferable. Employee Plan and IRA fiduciaries should be aware that the Company's Articles of Incorporation contain certain restrictions on any transfer of Shares that would create a beneficial owner of more than 9.8% in value of the Company's outstanding Common Stock. See "Description of Securities--Restrictions on Transfer." While the Company believes that such a restriction is generally permitted under the DOL Regulations and is not likely to result in the failure of the Common Stock to be freely transferable, the DOL Regulations only establish a presumption in favor of the finding of free transferability, and, therefore, no assurance can be given that the DOL and the Treasury Department will not reach a contrary conclusion.

Assuming that the Common Stock will be widely held, the Company believes that the Common Stock will be publicly offered securities for purposes of the DOL Regulations and that the assets of the Company will not be deemed to be plan assets of any Employee Plan or IRA that invests in the Common Stock.

Employee Plans and IRAs and their fiduciaries are strongly urged to consult with their advisors before acquiring Common Stock of the Company.

UNDERWRITING

Subject to the terms and conditions of the Underwriting Agreement, the Underwriters named below have severally agreed to purchase from the Company, and the Company has agreed to sell to them, the following respective numbers of Shares at the initial public offering price less the underwriting discounts set forth on the cover of this Prospectus.

NUMBER OF

UNDERWRITER SHARES

Alabama Securities Corp. _____

The Underwriting Agreement provides that the obligations of the several Underwriters to pay for and accept delivery of the Shares offered hereby are subject to approval of certain legal matters by their counsel and to certain other conditions. The Underwriters are obligated to take and pay for all the Shares offered hereby (other than those covered by the over-allotment option described below) if any of such Shares are taken.

The Company has been advised by Alabama Securities Corp. (the "Representative") that the Underwriters propose to offer the Shares to the public at the initial public offering price set forth on the cover of this Prospectus and to certain dealers at such price, less a concession not in excess of $ per share. The Underwriters may allow, and such dealers may re-allow, a concession not in excess of $ per share to certain other dealers. After the initial public offering, the public offering price and other selling terms may be changed by the Representative.

The Company has granted to the Underwriters an option, exercisable not later than 30 calendar days from the date of this Prospectus, to purchase up to 870,000 additional shares at the same price per share as the Company receives for the shares that the Underwriters have agreed to purchase. To the extent that the Underwriters exercise such option to purchase up to a total of 870,000 shares, each of the Underwriters will have a firm commitment to purchase approximately the same percentage thereof that the number of shares to be purchased by it shown in the above table bears to the total number of shares shown in the above table, and the Company will be obligated, pursuant to the option, to sell such shares to the Underwriters. The Underwriters may exercise such option only to cover over-allotments made in connection with the sale of the shares offered hereby. If purchased, the Underwriters will sell such additional 870,000 shares on the same terms as those on which the shares are being offered.

The Company will pay an advisory fee equal to 0.67% of the gross proceeds of the Offering (including any exercise of the Underwriters' over-allotment option) to Alabama Securities Corp. for advisory services in connection with the evaluation, analysis and structuring of the Company's formation and the Offering.

The Underwriting Agreement contains covenants of indemnity among the Underwriters and the Company against certain civil liabilities, including liabilities under the Securities Act.

The Company has agreed, and shall cause each officer, director and existing stockholder of the Company to agree that, without the prior written consent of the Representative, such person will not register, offer, sell, contract to sell, grant any option to purchase or otherwise dispose of any Shares of Common Stock or any securities convertible into or exercisable or exchangeable for Common Stock, or warrants to purchase Common Stock, for a period of 180 days, subject to certain exceptions set forth in the Underwriting Agreement.

The Representative has engaged and may in the future engage in investment banking services for certain affiliates of the Company.

Prior to this Offering there has been no established public market for the Common Stock. Consequently, the offering price has been determined by negotiation between the Company and the Representative. Among the factors considered in such negotiations were the number of shares to be offered, the projected revenues to the Company under the Leases and the expected cash available to the Company for distribution to its stockholders, the current yields and prices of publicly traded securities believed to be somewhat comparable to the Company, prevailing market conditions and other factors deemed relevant.

The Representative has informed the Company that the Underwriters do not intend to confirm sales to any account over which they exercise discretionary authority.

LEGAL MATTERS

The validity of the Shares offered hereby will be passed upon for the Company by Etores & Premull, P.C. of Birmingham, Alabama. Etores & Premull, P.C. has represented WELLHEALTH on matters unrelated to the Offering. Both the Company and WELLHEALTH have consented to this arrangement. Dowe & Flower Co., L.P.A., New York, N.Y., will pass upon certain legal matters relating to the Offering for the Underwriters.

NOTES TO BALANCE SHEET

(1) ORGANIZATION

American Capital Trust, Inc. (the Company) was incorporated in the State of Maryland on March 31, [Year] and issued a total of 180,000 shares of common stock to the Company's chairman, its president, one of its directors, and WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation (WELLHEALTH) for total consideration of $180. The chairman of the Company and one of its directors are executive officers of WELLHEALTH. The Company is in the process of an initial public offering pursuant to which it plans to issue approximately 5,800,000 additional shares of common stock (the Offering). The 180,000 shares issued upon incorporation (the Founders Shares) will constitute approximately 3 percent of the outstanding shares immediately after consummation of the Offering.

The Company has had no operations. Upon consummation of the Offering, the Company intends to begin operations by purchasing a diversified portfolio of healthcare properties and leasing the properties back to the healthcare operators.

(2) FEDERAL INCOME TAXES

At the earliest possible date, the Company intends to qualify as a real estate investment trust under the Internal Revenue Code and, accordingly, will not be subject to federal income taxes on amounts distributed to stockholders provided it distributes at least 95 percent of its real estate investment trust taxable income and meets certain other conditions. The Company may, however, be subject to state or local taxation in various state or local jurisdictions.

(3) PLANNED TRANSACTIONS

The Company plans to use the Offering proceeds and borrowings under a bank credit facility to purchase 20 healthcare properties for $115,100,000. Ten of the properties will be acquired from WELLHEALTH for $50,920,000 and five of the properties will be acquired for $27,280,000 from two companies whose chairmen are directors of the Company.

The Company has agreed to reimburse actual costs incurred on its behalf by American Capital Partners and its affiliates upon consummation of the Offering. The actual costs incurred relate to organizing the Company, negotiating property acquisitions, performing due diligence related to the properties, performing corporate work in contemplation of the Offering, preparing the registration statement and providing interim financing for the acquisition of the properties. This amount is estimated to be approximately $1,475,000 and will only be payable upon the closing of the Offering and will be paid from the proceeds of the Offering. The Company's chairman, its president and one of its directors are the partners in American Capital Partners.

(4) STOCKHOLDERS' EQUITY

For each of the first six quarters in which dividends are paid by the Company, the founders have consented to contribute to the Company the after-tax portion of any dividends distributed to them for such quarter if (i) the annualized dividends paid in such quarter do not exceed $1.70 per Share ($0.425 per Share per quarter) or (ii) the aggregate dividends paid in such quarter on the outstanding Shares exceed 95% of the cash available for distribution for the relevant quarterly period.

The Company intends to adopt a dividend reinvestment plan.

(5) EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

The Company's board of directors intends to adopt a deferred compensation plan, a retirement plan for executive officers and has adopted a stock incentive plan. The Company has reserved 418,600 shares of common stock for issuance under the stock incentive plan. As of the effective date of the Offering, the Company intends to grant options to purchase 260,000 shares of common stock.

(7) Certain of the leases provide for scheduled annual rent increases. NOTES TO UNAUDITED PRO FORMA FINANCIAL STATEMENTS--(CONTINUED) OTHER DATA--CASH AVAILABLE FOR DISTRIBUTION

Cash available for distribution is net income plus depreciation, amortization and other non-cash items less accrued rent. Distributions in excess of net income generally constitute a return of capital. Management considers cash available for distribution to be an informative measure of the performance of an equity REIT and consistent with measures used by analyst to evaluate equity REITs. Cash available for distribution does not represent cash generated from operating activities in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, is not necessarily indicative of cash available to fund cash needs and should not be considered as an alternative to net income as an indicator of the Company's operating performance or as an alternative to cash flow as a measure of liquidity.

WELLHEALTH REHABILITATION CORPORATION AND SUBSIDIARIES NOTES TO CONSOLIDATED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

[Month] [Day], [Year]

1. SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

The significant accounting policies followed by WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation and its subsidiaries (the Company) are presented as an integral part of the consolidated financial statements.

PRINCIPLES OF CONSOLIDATION

The consolidated financial statements include the accounts of WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation (WELLHEALTH) and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, as well as its limited partnerships (see Note 8). All significant intercompany accounts and transactions have been eliminated in consolidation.

WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation is engaged in the business of providing comprehensive rehabilitative and clinical healthcare services on an inpatient and outpatient basis.

MARKETABLE SECURITIES

Marketable securities are stated at cost, which approximates market, adjusted for amortization of premium and accretion of discount. The adjusted cost of the specific security sold method is used to compute gain or loss on the sale of securities.

ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE AND THIRD-PARTY REIMBURSEMENT ACTIVITIES

Receivables from patients, insurance companies and third-party contractual insured accounts (Medicare and Medicaid) are based on payment agreements which generally result in the Company collecting an amount different from the established rates. Final determination of the settlement is subject to review by appropriate authorities. Adequate allowances are provided for doubtful accounts and contractual adjustments. Uncollectible accounts are written off against the allowance for doubtful accounts after adequate collection efforts are made. Net accounts receivable include only those amounts estimated by management to be collectible.

The concentration of net accounts receivable from third-party contractual payors and others, as a percentage of total net accounts receivable, was as follows:

	[Month] [Day], [Year] [Year]
Medicare _____	34%	31%
Medicaid _____	2%	4%
Other _____	64%	65%

INVENTORIES

Inventories are stated at the lower of cost or market using the specific identification method.

PROPERTY, PLANT AND EQUIPMENT

Property, plant and equipment are recorded at cost. Upon sale or retirement of property, plant or equipment, the cost and related accumulated depreciation are eliminated from the respective account and the resulting gain or loss is included in the results of operations.

Interest cost incurred during the construction of a facility is capitalized. The Company incurred interest of $11,880,000, $12,815,000 and $15,067,000 of which $1,968,000, $1,979,000 and $2,384,000 was capitalized during [Year], [Year] and [Year], respectively.

Depreciation and amortization is computed using the straight-line method over the estimated useful lives of the assets or the term of the lease, as appropriate. The estimated useful life of buildings is 30-40 years and the general range of useful lives for leasehold improvements, furniture, fixtures and equipment is 10-15 years.

INTANGIBLE ASSETS

Cost in excess of net asset value of purchased facilities is amortized over 20 to 40 years using the straight-line method. Organization and start-up costs incurred prior to opening a new facility and partnership formation costs are deferred and amortized on a straight-line basis over a period of 36 months. Organization, partnership formation and start-up costs for a project that is subsequently abandoned are charged to operations in that period. Debt issue costs are amortized over the term of the debt. Noncompete agreements are amortized using the straight-line method over the term of the agreements.

MINORITY INTERESTS

The equity of minority investors in limited partnerships of the Company is reported on the balance sheet as minority interests. Minority interests reported in the income statement reflect the respective shares of income or loss of the limited partnerships attributable to the minority investors, the effect of which is removed from the results of operations of the Company.

REVENUES

Revenues include net patient service revenues and other operating revenues. Net patient service revenues are reported at the estimated net realizable amounts from patients, third-party payors and others for services rendered, including estimated retroactive adjustments under reimbursement agreements with third-party payors.

INCOME PER COMMON AND COMMON EQUIVALENT SHARE

Income per common and common equivalent share is computed based on the weighted average number of common shares and common equivalent shares outstanding during the periods. Common equivalent shares include dilutive employees' stock options, less the number of treasury shares assumed to be purchased from the proceeds using the average market price of the Company's common stock. Fully diluted earnings per share (based on 27,855,000 shares in [Year]) assumes conversion of the 73/4 % Convertible Subordinated Debentures Due [Year] issued in [Month] [Year]. The debentures were converted to common stock in [Year].

RECLASSIFICATIONS

Certain amounts in the [Year] and [Year] Consolidated Financial Statements have been reclassified to conform with the [Year] presentation. Such reclassifications had no material effect on the previously reported financial position, net income or cash flows of the Company.

During [Year], the Company entered into a Credit Agreement with AmTrust of North Carolina, N.A. and participating banks (the [Year] Credit Agreement) which consists of a $390,000,000 revolving facility and term loan. The [Year] Credit Agreement replaced a previous credit agreement with AmSouth Bank N.A. Interest is paid quarterly based on LIBOR rates plus a pre-determined margin, a base rate, or competitively bid rates from the participating banks. The Company is required to pay a fee of 0.25% on the unused portion of the [Year] revolving credit facility. The principal amount is payable on November 20, [Year]. The maturity date is extendible for two one year periods upon the mutual agreement of the Company and the lenders. The Company has provided a negative pledge of all its assets and has granted a first priority security interest in and lien on all shares of stock of its subsidiaries and rights and interests in its partnerships.

Effective December 31, [Year], the Company completed an acquisition of selected rehabilitation facilities from National Medical Enterprises, Inc. (NME) (see Note 9). The acquisition was financed by the Company through a $410,000,000 Acquisition and Revolving Credit Facility (the NME Acquisition Credit Facility) with AmTrust of North Carolina, N.A., and six participating banks. Interest is paid quarterly based on LIBOR or a base rate plus a predetermined margin. This credit facility has an initial term ending June 30, [Year], but may be extended to June 30, [Year]. The Company has provided a negative pledge on all assets acquired in the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition and granted the banks a first priority security interest in all shares of stock of its subsidiaries and rights and interests in its controlled partnerships relating to facilities acquired in the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition.

The amount shown as Due to National Medical Enterprises, Inc. at December 31, [Year] was subsequently financed through the NME Acquisition Credit Facility.

On February 1, [Year], the Company filed a Registration Statement on Form S-3 with the Securities and Exchange Commission to issue $250,000,000 ($287,500,000 if the underwriter's over-allotment option is exercised in full) in Senior Subordinated Notes Due [Year] and $100,000,000 ($115,000,000 if the underwriters' over-allotment option is exercised in full) Convertible Subordinated Debentures Due [Year]. The Company intends to use proceeds from these debt offerings to repay indebtedness outstanding under its existing bank credit facilities. Accordingly, all amounts outstanding under the Company's existing bank credit facilities are shown as non-current in the accompanying financial statements at December 31, [Year].

7. STOCK OPTIONS

The Company has various stockholder-approved stock option plans which provide for the grant of options to Directors, officers and other key employees to purchase common stock at 100% of the fair market value as of the date of grant. During [Year], the Company's Board of Directors adopted the [Year] Stock Option Plan, which is subject to approval by the stockholders at their next meeting. The Board of Directors administers the stock option plans. Options may be granted as incentive stock options or as non-qualified stock options. Incentive stock options vest 25% annually, commencing upon completion of one year of employment subsequent to the date of grant. Non-qualified stock options generally are not subject to any vesting provisions. The options expire at dates ranging from five to ten years from the date of grant.

The following table summarizes activity in the stock option plans:

8. LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS

WELLHEALTH operates a number of rehabilitation centers as limited partnerships. WELLHEALTH serves as the general partner and operates the partnerships as comprehensive outpatient rehabilitation facilities or inpatient rehabilitation facilities. These limited partnerships are included in the consolidated financial statements (as more fully described in Note 1 under "Minority Interests"). The limited partners share in the profit or loss of the partnerships based on their respective ownership percentage (ranging from 1% to 50% at December 31, ____[Year]) during their ownership period.

Beginning in ____[Year], due to federal and state regulatory requirements, the Company began the process of buying back the partnership interests of its physician limited partners. The buyback prices for the interests were in general based on a pre-determined multiple of projected cash flows of the partnerships. The excess of the buyback price over the book value of the limited partners' capital amounts was charged to the Company's retained earnings.

9. ACQUISITIONS

Effective December 31, ____[Year], the Company completed an acquisition from National Medical Enterprises, Inc. (NME) of 28 inpatient rehabilitation facilities and 45 outpatient rehabilitation centers, which constituted substantially all of NME's rehabilitation services division (the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition). The purchase price was approximately $296,661,000 cash, plus net working capital of $64,503,000, subject to certain adjustments as of June 30, ____[Year], the assumption of approximately $16,313,000 of current liabilities and the assumption of approximately $17,111,000 in long-term debt (see Note 6).

Also, at various dates during ____[Year], the Company acquired outpatient operations in nineteen cities located throughout the United States. The Company also acquired eight satellite locations. The combined purchase price of these acquired outpatient operations and satellites was approximately $23,943,000.

In connection with these transactions, the Company entered into non-compete agreements totaling $4,730,000.

The fair value of the total net assets acquired in ____[Year] was approximately $301,382,000. The total cost for ____[Year] acquisitions exceeded the fair value of the net assets acquired by approximately $83,725,000. This excess is being amortized over a forty-year period on a straight-line basis. The allocation of the purchase price of the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition is tentative pending completion of appraisals on the facilities and equipment acquired. The allocation may change with the completion of these appraisals.

All of the acquisitions described above were accounted for as purchases and, accordingly, the results of operations of the acquired businesses are included in the accompanying consolidated financial statements from their respective dates of acquisition.

The following table summarizes the unaudited consolidated pro forma results of operations, assuming the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition described above had occurred at the beginning of each of the following periods. This pro forma summary does not necessarily reflect the results of operations as they would have been had the Company and the acquired entities constituted a single entity during such periods.

Net income per common and common equivalent share _____	1.53	.49

As a result of the NME Selected Hospitals Acquisition, the Company has recognized an expense of approximately $49,742,000 during the year ended December 31, ____[Year]. By recognizing this expense, the Company has provided for the write-down of certain assets to realizable value as the result of anticipated facility reorganizations and consolidations, related costs of certain employee separations, and the write-off of certain capitalized development project costs.

10. INCOME TAXES

WELLHEALTH and its subsidiaries file a consolidated federal income tax return. The limited partnerships file separate income tax returns. WELLHEALTH's allocable portion of each partnership's income (loss) is included in the taxable income of the Company. The remaining income (loss) of each partnership is allocated to the limited partners.

Effective ____[month] ____[day], ____[year], the Company changed its method of accounting for income taxes to the liability method required by Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) Statement No. 109, "Accounting for Income Taxes." The cumulative effect of adopting Statement 109 was not material. Previously, the Company had used the liability method as prescribed by FASB Statement No. 96.

Deferred income taxes reflect the net effects of temporary differences between the carrying amounts of assets and liabilities for financial reporting purposes and the amounts used for income tax purposes. All employees who have completed one year of service with a minimum of 1,000 hours worked are eligible to participate in the plan. In ____[Year], the Company established an Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP) for the purpose of providing substantially all employees of the Company the opportunity to save for their retirement and acquire a proprietary interest in the Company. The ESOP currently owns approximately 830,000 shares of the Company's Common Stock, which were purchased with funds borrowed from the Company, $10,000,000 in ____[Year] (the ____[Year] ESOP Loan) and $10,000,000 in ____[Year] (the ____[Year] ESOP Loan). At December 31, ____[Year], the combined ESOP Loans had a balance of $18,932,000. The ____[Year] ESOP Loan, which bears an interest rate of 10%, is payable in annual installments covering interest and principal over a ten-year period beginning in ____[Year]. The ____[Year] ESOP Loan, which bears an interest rate of 8.5%, is payable in annual installments covering interest and principal over a ten-year period beginning in ____[Year]. Company contributions to the ESOP began in ____[Year] and shall at least equal the amount required to make all ESOP Loan amortization payments for each plan year. An amount equal to the par value of the shares issued has been transferred from additional paid-in capital to the common stock account. All weighted average share and per share amounts have been restated to give effect to the stock split.

14. TERMINATED MERGER

On January 2, ____ [Year], the Company and Continental Medical System, Inc. (CMS) jointly announced an agreement to combine their business operations as provided in an Agreement and Plan of Reorganization (the Plan). INFORMATION NOT REQUIRED IN PROSPECTUS

ITEM 30. QUANTITATIVE AND QUALITATIVE DISCLOSURES ABOUT MARKET RISK

The Company may be exposed to interest rate changes primarily as a result of long-term debt bearing interest at variable rates that the Company will likely incur to acquire properties and make loans and other permitted investments. The Company's interest rate risk management objectives will be to limit the impact of interest rate changes on earnings and cash flows and to lower overall borrowing costs. To achieve these objectives, the Company expects to borrow primarily at fixed rates or variable rates with the lowest margins available and, in some cases, with the ability to convert variable rates to fixed rates. With regard to variable rate financing, the Company will assess interest rate cash flow risk by continually identifying and monitoring changes in interest rate exposures that may adversely impact expected future cash flows and by evaluating hedging opportunities.

The Company sold an aggregate of 180,000 shares of Common Stock to M. Donal Rushmore (82,656 shares), WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation (71,280 shares), W. Gill McDaniel (18,000 shares) and Dee Martin Michaels (8,064 shares), its Founding Stockholders, for $.001 per share (an aggregate of $180) on March 31, ____[Year].

ITEM 33. RECENT SALES OF UNREGISTERED SECURITIES

The Company sold an aggregate of 180,000 shares of Common Stock to the four Founding Stockholders for an aggregate of $180 on March 31, ____[Year] pursuant to the exemption from registration contained in Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

The Articles of Incorporation of the Company provides for indemnification of directors to the full extent permitted by the laws of the State of Maryland.

Section 2-418 of the MGCL generally permits indemnification of any director made a party to any proceedings by reason of service as a director unless it is established that (i) the act or omission of such person was material to the matter giving rise to the proceeding and was committed in bad faith or was the result of active and deliberate dishonesty; or (ii) such person actually received an improper personal benefit in money, property or services; or (iii) in the case of any criminal proceeding, such person had reasonable cause to believe that the act or omission was unlawful. The indemnity may include judgments, penalties, fines, settlements and reasonable expenses actually incurred by the director in connection with the proceeding; but, if the proceeding is one by, or in the right of the corporation, indemnification is not permitted with respect to any proceeding in which the director has been adjudged to be liable to the corporation. The termination of any proceeding by conviction or upon a plan of nolo contendere or its equivalent creates a rebuttable presumption that the director did not meet the requisite standard of conduct required for permitted indemnification. The termination of any proceeding by judgment, order or settlement, however, does not create a presumption that the director failed to meet the requisite standard of conduct for permitted indemnification.

Indemnification under the provisions of the MGCL is not deemed exclusive of any other rights, by indemnification or otherwise, to which a director may be entitled under the Articles of Incorporation, Bylaws, resolution of stockholders or directors, contract or otherwise.

The Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws provide that the Company shall indemnify and advance expenses to its currently acting and its former directors to the fullest extent permitted by the MGCL, and that the Company may indemnify and advance expenses to its officers to the same extent as its directors and to such further extent as is consistent with law. The MGCL provides that a corporation may indemnify any director made a party to any proceeding by reason of service in that capacity unless it is established that: (1) the act or omission of the director was material to the matter giving rise to the proceeding and (a) was committed in bad faith or (b) was the result of active and deliberate dishonesty, or (2) the director actually received an improper personal benefit in money, property or services, or (a) in the case of any criminal proceeding the director had reasonable cause to believe that the act or omission was unlawful. The statute permits Maryland corporations to indemnify its officers, employees or agents to the same extent as its directors and to such further extent as is consistent with law. The Company's Articles of Incorporation authorize the Company to indemnify persons serving as its officers to the same extent that the Company is obligated to indemnify its Directors. The Company's Bylaws, adopted by the Board of Directors provide that officers of the Company shall be entitled to such indemnification except to the extent that the Board of Directors may otherwise prospectively determine in any situation.

The Registrant intends to obtain officers and directors liability insurance.

The Company undertakes to provide to the Underwriters at the Closing specified in the Underwriting Agreement certificates in such denominations and registered in such names as required by the Underwriters to permit prompt delivery to each purchaser.

Insofar as indemnification for liabilities arising under the Securities Act may be permitted to directors, officers and controlling persons of the registrant, the registrant has been advised that in the opinion of the Commission such indemnification is against public policy as expressed in the Securities Act and is, therefore, unenforceable. In the event that a claim for indemnification against such liabilities (other than the payment by the registrant of expenses incurred or paid by a director, officer or controlling person of the registrant in the successful defense of any action, suit or proceeding) is asserted by such director, officer or controlling person in connection with the securities being registered, the registrant will, unless in the opinion of its counsel the matter has been settled by controlling precedent, submit to a court of appropriate jurisdiction the question of whether such indemnification by it is against public policy as expressed in the Securities Act and will be governed by the final adjudication of such issue.

(1) For purposes of determining any liability under the Securities Act, the information omitted from the form of prospectus filed as part of this registration statement in reliance upon Rule 430A and contained in a form of prospectus filed by the registrant pursuant to Rule 424(b)(1) or (4) or 497(h) under the Securities Act shall be deemed to be part of this registration statement as of the time it was declared effective.

(2) For the purpose of determining any liability under the Securities Act, which post-effective amendment that contains a form of prospectus shall be deemed to be a new registration statement relating to the securities offered therein, and the offering of such securities at that time shall be deemed to be the initial bona fide offering thereof.

Chapter 22A REAL ESTATE SECURITIES
Part IV. FORMS
A. REIT FORM S-11 REGISTERED OFFERING

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate FORM 22A.02

FORM 22A.02

Real estate investment trust offering--acquisition of diversified portfolio of income-producing health-care related real properties and leaseback to healthcare operators--firm commitment underwriting--Maryland issuer--Exhibits to S-11--exhibit index--underwriting agreement--real estate purchase agreement--appraisal

COMMENT

This Form contains certain filed exhibits to the REIT offering set forth in the S-11 at Form 22A.01. Note that all the documents included here are just some of the relevant documents which may be required to be filed as exhibits to Part II, which follows the prospectus and financial statements of Part I, as shown in Form 22A.01. The instructions to Item 35 of SEC Form S-11 require, in addition to a listing of the financial statements which are filed as a part of the registration statement, the registrant to furnish the exhibits required by Item 601 of SEC Regulation S-K, 17 C.F.R. § 229.601. Item 601 sets forth in tabular form the documents which are required to be filed in connection with certain registration forms under the Securities Act of 1933 (including a Form S-11 registration) and certain periodic reports under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. That item also requires that the registration statement also include an exhibit index, an example of which appears below.

This Form contains an underwriting agreement, a real estate purchase agreement and an appraisal, all of which were filed in connection with the Form S-11 REIT registration statement which appears in Form 22A.01. The underwriting agreement sets forth the terms under which the underwriter will purchase from the issuer and then resell the issuer shares being registered in a public offering. In a real estate offering such as this REIT offering, the issuer often may be using a significant portion of the offering proceeds to purchase and/or develop real estate which it intends to own and operate. In this offering, the issuer was purchasing several different existing real estate properties from the current affiliated owners and then proposed to lease back those properties to the owners to operate. Obviously, in this type of transaction, the purchase agreements setting forth the terms of purchase, including price and payment terms, and the appraisals which opine as to the value of the properties being purchased are very significant documents and would be a relevant exhibit to the offering.

Dear Sirs:

American Capital Trust, Inc., a Maryland corporation (the "Company") intending to qualify for federal income tax purposes as a real estate investment trust ("REIT") pursuant to Sections 856 through 860 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), proposes to issue and sell, upon the terms and conditions set forth in Section 2 hereof, an aggregate of 5,800,000 shares (the "Firm Shares") of its common stock, $.001 par value per share (the "Common Stock"), to the several underwriters named in Schedule I hereto (the "Underwriters"). The Company also proposes to issue and sell to the Underwriters, upon the terms and conditions set forth in Section 2 hereof, up to an additional 870,000 shares (the "Additional Shares") of Common Stock solely to cover over-allotments, if any. The Firm Shares and the Additional Shares are hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Shares."

The Company and WELLHEALTH Rehabilitation Corporation ("WELLHEALTH" and, together with the Company, the "Co-registrants"), a Delaware corporation and the co-registrant with the Company with respect to the offering of the Shares pursuant to the registration statement (as such term is defined in Section 1 of this Agreement), wish to confirm as follows their respective agreements with you (the "Representatives") and the other Underwriters on whose behalf you are acting, in connection with the several purchases of the Shares by the Underwriters.

1. Registration Statement and Prospectus. The Co-registrants have prepared and filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") in accordance with the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the rules and regulations of the Commission thereunder (collectively, the "Act"), a registration statement on Form S-11 under the Act (the "Registration Statement"), including a prospectus subject to completion relating to the Shares. The term "Registration Statement" as used in this Agreement means such registration statement (including all financial schedules and exhibits), as amended at the time it becomes effective, or, if such registration statement became effective prior to the execution of this Agreement, as supplemented or amended prior to the execution of this Agreement. If it is contemplated, at the time this Agreement is executed, that a post-effective amendment to the registration statement will be filed and must be declared effective before the offering of the Shares may commence, the term "Registration Statement" as used in this Agreement means the registration statement as amended by said post-effective amendment. The term "Prospectus" as used in this Agreement means the prospectus in the form included in the Registration Statement, or, if the prospectus included in the Registration Statement omits information in reliance on Rule 430A under the Act and such information is included in a prospectus filed with the Commission pursuant to Rule 424(b) under the Act, the term "Prospectus" as used in this Agreement means the prospectus in the form included in the Registration Statement as supplemented by the addition of the Rule 430A information contained in the prospectus filed with the Commission pursuant to Rule 424(b). The term "Pricing Prospectus" as used in this Agreement means the prospectus subject to completion in the form included in the registration statement at the time of the initial filing of the registration statement with the Commission, and as such prospectus shall have been amended from time to time prior to the date of the Prospectus.

2. Agreements to Sell and Purchase. The Company hereby agrees, subject to all the terms and conditions set forth herein, to issue and sell to each Underwriter and, upon the basis of the representations, warranties and agreements of each of the Company and WELLHEALTH herein contained and subject to all the terms and conditions set forth herein, each Underwriter agrees, severally and not jointly, to purchase from the Company, at a purchase price of $ per Share (the "purchase price per share"), the number of Firm Shares set forth opposite the name of such Underwriter in Schedule I hereto (or such number of Firm Shares increased as set forth in Section 10 hereof).

The Company also agrees, subject to all the terms and conditions set forth herein, to sell to the Underwriters, and, upon the basis of the representations, warranties and agreements of the Company herein contained and subject to all the terms and conditions set forth herein, that the Underwriters shall have the right to purchase from the Company, at the purchase price per share, pursuant to an option (the "over-allotment option") which may be exercised at any time prior to 9:00 P.M., New York City time, on the 30th day after the date of the Prospectus (or, if such 30th day shall be a Saturday or Sunday or a holiday, on the next business day thereafter when the New York Stock Exchange is open for trading), up to an aggregate of 870,000 Additional Shares from the Company. Upon any exercise of the over-allotment option, each Underwriter, severally and not jointly, agrees to purchase from the Company the number of Additional Shares (subject to such adjustments as you may determine in order to avoid fractional shares) which bears the same proportion to the number of Additional Shares to be purchased by the Underwriters as the number of Firm Shares set forth opposite the name of such Underwriter in Schedule I hereto (or such number of Firm Shares increased as set forth in Section 10 hereof) bears to the aggregate number of Firm Shares.

3. Terms of Public Offering. The Company has been advised by you that the Underwriters propose to make a public offering of their respective portions of the Shares as soon after the Registration Statement and this Agreement have become effective as in their judgment is advisable and initially to offer the Shares upon the terms set forth in the Prospectus.

4. Delivery of the Shares and Payment Therefor. Delivery to the Underwriters of and payment for the Firm Shares shall be made at the office of Dowe & Flower Co., L.P.A., 191 Ninth Avenue, New York, New York 10022, at 10:00 A.M., New York City time, on, ____ [Year] (the "Closing Date"). The place of closing for the Firm Shares and the Closing Date may be varied by agreement between you and the Company.

Delivery to the Underwriters of and payment for any Additional Shares to be purchased by the Underwriters shall be made at the aforementioned office of Dowe & Flower Co., L.P.A. at such time on such date (the "Option Closing Date"), which may be the same as the Closing Date but shall in no event be earlier than the Closing Date nor earlier than three nor later than ten business days after the giving of the notice hereinafter referred to, as shall be specified in a written notice from you to the Company of your determination to purchase a number, specified in such notice, of Additional Shares. The place of closing for any Additional Shares and the Option Closing Date for such Additional Shares may be varied by agreement among you and the Company.

Certificates for the Firm Shares and for any Additional Shares to be purchased hereunder shall be registered in such names and in such denominations as you shall request prior to 1:00 P.M., New York City time, on the third business day preceding the Closing Date or any Option Closing Date, as the case may be. Such certificates shall be made available to you in New York City for inspection and packaging not later than 9:30 A.M., New York City time, on the business day next preceding the Closing Date or the Option Closing Date, as the case may be. The certificates evidencing the Firm Shares and any Additional Shares to be purchased hereunder shall be delivered to you on the Closing Date or the Option Closing Date, as the case may be, against payment of the purchase price therefor by certified or official bank check or checks payable in New York Clearing House (next day) funds to the order of the Company.

5. Agreements of the Co-registrants. The Co-registrants agree, severally and not jointly (each with respect to itself only), with the several Underwriters as follows:

(a) If, at the time this Agreement is executed and delivered, it is necessary for the Registration Statement or a post-effective amendment thereto to be declared effective before the offering of the Shares may commence, the Co-registrants will use their best efforts to cause the Registration Statement or such post-effective amendment to become effective as soon as possible and will advise you promptly and, if requested by you, will confirm such advice in writing, when the Registration Statement or such post-effective amendment has become effective.

(b) The Co-registrants will advise you promptly and, if requested by you, will confirm such advice in writing: (i) of any request by the Commission for amendment of or a supplement to the Registration Statement, any Prepricing Prospectus or the Prospectus or for additional information; (ii) of the issuance by the Commission of any stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement or of the suspension of qualification of the Shares for offering or sale in any jurisdiction or the initiation of any proceeding for such purpose; and (iii) within the period of time referred to in paragraph (f) below, of any change in the Company's or WELLHEALTH'S condition (financial or other), business, prospects, properties, net worth or results of operations, or of the happening of any event which makes any statement of a material fact made in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (as then amended or supplemented) untrue or which requires the making of any additions to or changes in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (as then amended or supplemented) in order to state a material fact required by the Act or the regulations thereunder to be stated therein or necessary in order to make the statements therein not misleading, or of the necessity to amend or supplement the Prospectus (as then amended or supplemented) to comply with the Act or any other law. If at any time the Commission shall issue any stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement, the Co-registrants will use their best efforts to obtain the withdrawal of such order at the earliest possible time.

(c) The Co-registrants will furnish to you, without charge, three signed copies of the registration statement as originally filed with the Commission and of each amendment thereto, including financial statements and all exhibits to the registration statement, and will also furnish to each of you and your counsel without charge such number of conformed copies of the registration statement as originally filed and of each amendment thereto, as you may request.

(d) The Co-registrants will not (i) file any amendment to the Registration Statement or make any amendment or supplement to the Prospectus of which you shall not previously have been advised or to which you shall object after being so advised or (ii) so long as, in the opinion of counsel for the Underwriters, a Prospectus is required to be delivered in connection with sales by any Underwriter or dealer, file any information, documents or reports pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act"), without delivering a copy of such information, documents or reports to you, as Representatives of the Underwriters, prior to or concurrently with the filing.

(e) Prior to the execution and delivery of this Agreement, the Company has delivered or will deliver to you, without charge, in such quantities as you have requested or may hereafter request, copies of each form of the Prepricing Prospectus. The Co-registrants consent to the use, in accordance with the provisions of the Act and with the securities or Blue Sky laws of the jurisdictions in which the Shares are offered by the several Underwriters and by dealers, prior to the date of the Prospectus, of each Prepricing Prospectus so furnished by the Company.

(f) As soon after the execution and delivery of this Agreement as possible and thereafter from time to time for such period as, in the opinion of counsel for the Underwriters, a prospectus is required by the Act to be delivered in connection with sales by any Underwriter or dealer, the Company will expeditiously deliver to each Underwriter and each dealer, without charge, as many copies of the Prospectus (and of any amendment or supplement thereto) as you may request. The Co-registrants consent to the use of the Prospectus (and of any amendment or supplement thereto) in accordance with the provisions of the Act and with the securities or Blue Sky laws of the jurisdictions in which the Shares are offered by the several Underwriters and by all dealers to whom Shares may be sold, both in connection with the offering and sale of the Shares and for such period of time thereafter as the Prospectus is required by the Act to be delivered in connection with sales by any Underwriter or dealer. If during such period of time any event shall occur that in the judgment of the Co-registrants or in the opinion of counsel for the Underwriters is required to be set forth in the Prospectus (as then amended or supplemented) or should be set forth therein in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or if it is necessary to supplement or amend the Prospectus in order to comply with the Act or any other law, the Co-registrants will forthwith prepare and, subject to the provisions of paragraph (d) above, file with the Commission an appropriate supplement or amendment thereto, and will expeditiously furnish to the Underwriters and dealers a reasonable number of copies thereof. In the event that the Company or WELLHEALTH and you agree that the Prospectus should be amended or supplemented, the Company and/or WELLHEALTH, as appropriate, if requested by you, will promptly issue a press release announcing or disclosing the matters to be covered by the proposed amendment or supplement.

(g) The Co-registrants will cooperate with you and with counsel for the Underwriters in connection with the registration or qualification of the Shares for offering and sale by the several Underwriters and by dealers under the securities or Blue Sky laws of such jurisdictions as you may designate and will file such consents to service of process or other documents as are necessary or appropriate in order to effect such registration or qualification; provided that in no event shall either of the Co-registrants be obligated to qualify to do business in any jurisdiction where it is not now so qualified or to take any action which would subject it to service of process in suits, other than those arising out of the offering or sale of the Shares, in any jurisdiction where it is not now so subject.

(h) The Company will make generally available to its security holders pursuant to Section 11(a) of the Act an earning statement, which need not be certified by independent certified public accountants unless required by the Act or the regulations promulgated thereunder, covering a twelve-month period commencing after the effective date of the Registration Statement, as soon as practicable after the end of such period, which earning statement shall satisfy the provisions of Section 11(a) of the Act.

(i) During the period of three years hereafter the Company shall furnish to you as soon as available, a copy of each report of the Company mailed to stockholders or filed with the Commission, and from time to time such other information concerning the Company as you may request.

(j) If this Agreement shall terminate or shall be terminated after execution pursuant to any provisions hereof (otherwise than pursuant to the second paragraph of Section 10 hereof or by notice given by you terminating this Agreement pursuant to Section 10 or Section 11 hereof), or if this Agreement shall be terminated by the Underwriters because of any failure or refusal on the part of the Company or WELLHEALTH to comply with the terms or fulfill any of the conditions of this Agreement, the Co-registrants agree to reimburse the Representatives for all out-of-pocket expenses (including fees and expenses of counsel for the Underwriters) incurred by you in connection herewith.

(k) The Company will apply the net proceeds from the sale of the Shares to be sold by it hereunder substantially in accordance with the description set forth in the Prospectus.

(l) If Rule 430A of the Act is employed, the Company will timely file the Prospectus pursuant to Rule 424(b) under the Act and will advise you of the time and manner of such filing.

(m) Except as provided in this Agreement, the Company will not offer, sell, contract to sell or otherwise dispose of any Common Stock or any securities convertible into or exercisable or exchangeable for Common Stock or grant any options or warrants to purchase Common Stock (except that the Company may grant options to purchase Common Stock under the Company's stock option plans) for a period of 180 days after the date of the Prospectus, without the prior written consent of Alabama Securities Corp. (on behalf of the several Underwriters).

(n) Except as stated in this Agreement and in the Prepricing Prospectus and Prospectus, the Company has not taken, nor will it take, directly or indirectly, any action designed to or that might reasonably be expected to cause or result in stabilization or manipulation of the price of the Common Stock to facilitate the sale or resale of the Shares.

(o) The Company will use its best efforts to have the Shares listed, subject to notice of issuance, on the New York Stock Exchange on or before the effective date of the Registration Statement.

(p) The Company has obtained or will obtain for the benefit of the Underwriters (and addressed to them) the written agreement of each of the executive officers, directors and stockholders of the Company not, without the prior written consent of Alabama Securities Corp. (on behalf of the Underwriters), to offer, sell, contract to sell, grant any option to purchase or otherwise dispose of any Common Stock or any securities convertible into or exercisable or exchangeable for Common Stock or warrants to purchase Common Stock for a period of 180 days after the date of the Prospectus.

(q) The Company will furnish the Representatives with copies of all reports on Form SR required by Rule 463 under the Act.

(r) The Company will use its best efforts to meet the requirements to qualify, commencing with the fiscal year ending December 31, [Year], as a REIT under the Code.

6. Representations and Warranties of the Co-registrants. The Company and WELLHEALTH represent and warrant (in the case of the Company, with respect to paragraphs (g)-(i), (k)-(m), (q) and (z) below, only to the extent such representations and warranties relate to the Company and excluding paragraph (f), and in the case of WELLHEALTH, with respect to paragraphs (g)-(i), (k)-(m), (q), and (z) below, only to the extent such representations and warranties relate to WELLHEALTH and excluding paragraphs (c)-(e), (n)-(p), (r)-(y), (aa) and (bb), severally and not jointly, to each Underwriter that:

(a) Each Prepricing Prospectus included as part of the registration statement as originally filed or as part of any amendment or supplement thereto, or filed pursuant to Rule 424 under the Act, complied when so filed in all material respects with the provisions of the Act. The Commission has not issued any order preventing or suspending the use of any Prepricing Prospectus.

(b) The registration statement in the form in which it became or becomes effective and also in such form as it may be when any post-effective amendment thereto shall become effective and the prospectus and any supplement or amendment thereto when filed with the Commission under Rule 424(b) under the Act, complied or will comply in all material respects with the provisions of the Act and did not or will not at any such times contain an untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, except that this representation and warranty does not apply to statements in or omissions from the Registration Statement or the Prospectus made in reliance upon and in conformity with information relating to any Underwriter furnished to the Company in writing by or on behalf of any Underwriter through you expressly for use therein.

The Shares to be issued and sold by the Company have been duly authorized and, when issued and delivered to the Underwriters against payment therefor in accordance with the terms hereof, will be validly issued, fully paid and nonassessable, and free of any preemptive or similar rights, and the capital stock of the Company conforms to the description thereof in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus.

(d) The Company is a corporation duly organized and validly existing in good standing under the laws of the State of Maryland. The Company has full power and authority to own, lease and operate its properties and to conduct its business as described in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus, and is duly registered and qualified to conduct its business and is in good standing in each jurisdiction or place where the nature of its properties or the conduct of its business requires such registration or qualification, except where the failure to so register or qualify does not have a material adverse effect on the condition (financial or other), business, prospects, properties, net worth or results of operations of the Company and the Subsidiaries (as hereinafter defined) taken as a whole (a "Material Adverse Effect").

(e) All the Company's subsidiaries (collectively, the "Subsidiaries") are listed in an exhibit to the Registration Statement. Each Subsidiary is a corporation duly organized, validly existing and in good standing in the jurisdiction of its incorporation, with full corporate power and authority to own, lease and operate its properties and to conduct its

(g) There are no legal or governmental proceedings pending or, to the knowledge of the Company or WELLHEALTH, threatened against the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or to which the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or to which any of their respective properties are subject, that are required to be described in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus but are not described as required, and there are no agreements, indentures, leases or other instruments that are required to be described in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus or to be filed as an exhibit to the Registration Statement that are not described or filed as required by the Act.

(h) None of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH is (i) in violation of its certificate or articles of incorporation or by-laws, or other organizational documents, or (ii) in violation of any law, ordinance, administrative or governmental rule or regulation applicable to the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH or of any decree of any court or governmental agency or body having jurisdiction over the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or (iii) in default in the performance of any obligation, agreement or condition contained in any bond, debenture, note or other evidence of indebtedness or in any material agreement, indenture, lease or other instrument to which the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH is a party or by which any of them or any of their respective properties may be bound.

(i) None of the issuance and sale of the Shares, the execution, delivery or performance of this Agreement by the Company and WELLHEALTH or the agreements pursuant to which the Company will acquire the Initial Properties (as defined in the Registration Statement) and which have been filed as exhibits to the Registration Statement (the "Purchase Agreements") by the Company, or the consummation by the Company of the transactions contemplated hereby and by the Purchase Agreements (i) requires any consent, approval, authorization or other order of or registration or filing with, any court, regulatory body, administrative agency or other governmental body, agency or official (except such as may be required for the registration of the Shares under the Act and the Exchange Act and compliance with securities or Blue Sky laws of various jurisdictions, all of which have been or will be effected in accordance with this Agreement); (ii) conflicts or will conflict with or constitutes or will constitute a breach of, or a default under, the certificate or the articles of incorporation or by-laws, or other organizational documents, of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH; or (iii) conflicts or will conflict with or constitutes or will constitute a breach of, or a default under, any agreement, indenture, lease or other instrument to which the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH is a party or by which they or any of their respective properties may be bound, or violates or will violate any statute, law, regulation or filing or judgment, injunction, order or decree applicable to the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH or any of their respective properties, or will result in the creation or imposition of any lien, charge or encumbrance upon any property or assets of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH pursuant to the terms of any agreement or instrument to which any of them is a party or by which any of them may be bound or to which any of their respective properties or assets is subject.

(j) Each of the accountants who have certified or shall certify the financial statements filed or to be filed as part of the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto) are independent public accountants as required by the Act.

The unaudited pro forma selected financial statements included in the Registration Statement comply in all material respects with the applicable accounting requirements of Rule 11-02 of Regulation S-X and the pro forma adjustments have been properly applied to the historical amounts in the compilation of that data. The financial statements, together with related schedules and notes, included in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (and any amendment or supplement thereto), present fairly the consolidated financial position, results of operations and changes in financial position of WELLHEALTH on the basis stated in the Registration Statement at the respective dates or for the respective periods to which they apply; such statements and related schedules and notes have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles consistently applied throughout the periods involved, except as disclosed therein; and the other financial and statistical information and data included in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (and any amendment or supplement thereto) are accurately presented and prepared on a basis consistent with such financial statements and the books and records of WELLHEALTH and its properties.

(l) The execution and delivery of, and the performance by the Company and WELLHEALTH of their respective obligations under, this Agreement have been duly and validly authorized by the Company and WELLHEALTH and this Agreement has been duly executed and delivered by the Company and WELLHEALTH and constitutes the valid and legally binding agreement of each of the Company and WELLHEALTH, enforceable against each of the Company and WELLHEALTH in accordance with its terms, except as rights to indemnity and contribution hereunder may be limited by federal or state securities laws.

(m) Except as disclosed in or contemplated by the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto), subsequent to the respective dates as of which such information is given in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto), none of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH has incurred any liability or obligation, direct or contingent, or entered into any transaction, not in the ordinary course of business, that is material to the Company and the Subsidiaries taken as a whole, and there has not been any change in the capital stock, or material increase in the short-term debt or long-term debt, of the Company, or any change or development involving a material adverse change, in the condition (financial or other), business, prospects, properties, net worth or results of operations of the Company and the Subsidiaries taken as a whole.

(n) Upon consummation of the offering of the Shares and application of the net proceeds therefrom towards consummation of the transactions contemplated by the Purchase Agreements, the Company and the Subsidiaries will each carry, or will be covered by, insurance in such amounts and covering such risks as will be adequate for the conduct of its business and the value of its properties and as is customary for companies engaged in similar businesses in similar industries.

(o) Upon consummation of the offering of the Shares and application of the net proceeds therefrom towards consummation of the transactions contemplated by the Purchase Agreements, the Company and the Subsidiaries will have title insurance on all real properties described in the Prospectus as to be owned by them in an amount at least equal to the greater of (a) the aggregate Purchase Prices (as defined) for acquisition of such property as set forth in the Purchase Agreements relating to such property and (b) the cost of construction of the improvements located on such properties.

(p) The Purchase Agreements have been duly authorized, executed and delivered by the Company, and, to the best knowledge of the Company, the other parties thereto. Such Purchase Agreements and all deeds, assignments of leases and other documents delivered or to be delivered in connection therewith are legally sufficient to effect the sale to the Company of all right, title and interest in and to the Initial Properties upon payment of the consideration therefor. Upon the sale of the Firm Shares on the Closing Date and application of the net proceeds therefrom, together with amounts to be drawn under the Company's credit facility, the Company will have good and marketable title in fee simple absolute to each of the items of real property except for three such items which are subject to ground leases and good title to each of the items of personal property which are included in the Initial Properties or are referred to in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus or are reflected in the financial statements referred to in Section 6(k) hereof as being owned by the Company, and valid and enforceable leasehold interests in each of the items of real and personal property which are included in the Properties or are referred to in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus as being leased by the Company, in each case free and clear of all liens, claims, security interests, and other encumbrances, except such as (i) are described in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus or (ii) would not have a material adverse effect on the expected business operations of the Company following consummation of the acquisition of the Initial Properties.

(q) The Co-registrants have not distributed and, prior to the later to occur of (i) the Closing Date and (ii) completion of the distribution of the Shares, will not distribute any offering material in connection with the offering and sale of the Shares other than the Registration Statement, the Prepricing Prospectus, the Prospectus or other materials, if any, permitted by the Act.

(r) The Company and each of the Subsidiaries have such permits, licenses, franchises and authorizations of governmental or regulatory authorities ("permits") as are necessary to own its respective properties and to conduct its business in the manner described in the Prospectus, subject to such qualifications as may be set forth in the Prospectus; the Company and each of the Subsidiaries have fulfilled and performed all its material obligations with respect to such permits and no event has occurred which allows, or after notice or lapse of time would allow, revocation or termination thereof or results in any other material impairment of the rights of the holder of any such permit, subject in each case to such qualification as may be set forth in the Prospectus; and, except as described in the Prospectus, none of such permits contains any restriction that is materially burdensome to the Company or any of the Subsidiaries.

(s) The Company maintains a system of internal accounting controls sufficient to provide reasonable assurances that (i) transactions are executed in accordance with management's general or specific authorization; (ii) transactions are recorded as necessary to permit preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and to maintain accountability for assets; (iii) access to assets is permitted only in accordance with management's general or specific authorization; and (iv) the recorded accountability for assets is compared with existing assets at reasonable intervals and appropriate action is taken with respect to any differences.

(t) Neither the Company nor any employee or agent of the Company has made any payment of funds or received or retained any funds in violation of any law, rule or regulation, which payment, receipt or retention of funds is of a character required to be disclosed in the Prospectus.

(u) The Company and each of the Subsidiaries has filed all tax returns required to be filed, which returns are complete and correct, and neither the Company nor any of the Subsidiaries is in default in the payment of any taxes which were payable pursuant to said returns or any assessments with respect thereto.

(v) No holder of any security of the Company has any right to require registration of any Common Stock or any other security of the Company because of the filing of the Registration Statement or consummation of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement.

(w) Subject to the assumptions, conditions and exceptions set forth in Exhibit 8 to the Registration Statement, the Company is organized so that it will meet the requirements for qualification as a REIT under Sections 856 through 860 of the Code and the rules and regulations thereunder and the Company's proposed method of operation as described in the Registration Statement will enable it to meet the requirements for taxation as a REIT under the Code as currently in effect commencing with the year ending December 31, [Year].

(x) The Company is not now, and, after sale of the Shares to be sold by the Company hereunder and application of the net proceeds from such sale as described in the Prospectus under the caption "Use of Proceeds," will not be, an "investment company" within the meaning of the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended.

(y) The Company and the Subsidiaries own or possess all patents, trademarks, trademark registration, service marks, service mark registrations, trade names, copyrights, licenses, inventions, trade secrets and rights described in the Prospectus as being owned by them or necessary for the conduct of their business, and neither the Company nor any Subsidiary is aware of any claim to the contrary or any challenge by any other person to the rights of the Company and the Subsidiaries with respect to the foregoing.

(z) There are no agreements or understandings between the Company and/or WELLHEALTH and any person that would give rise to a valid claim against the Company, WELLHEALTH or any Underwriter for a brokerage commission, finders fee or other like payment with respect to the consummation of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement.

(i) The Company has complied with all provisions of Florida Statutes, Section 157.075, relating to issuers doing business with Cuba.

(ii) To the best of the Company's knowledge, except as described in the Registration Statement and Prospectus, the Company and the Subsidiaries (i) are in compliance with any and all applicable foreign, federal, state and local laws and regulations relating to the protection of human health and safety, the environment, hazardous or toxic substances or wastes, pollutants or contaminants ("Environmental Laws"), (ii) have received all permits, licenses or other approvals under applicable Environmental Laws required in connection with their businesses, properties or assets as conducted or contemplated to be conducted as described in the Registration Statement, and (iii) are in compliance with all terms and conditions of any such permit, license or approval, except where such noncompliance with Environmental Laws, failure to receive required permits, licenses or other approvals or failure to comply with the terms and conditions of such permits, licenses or approvals would not, singly or in the aggregate, have a Material Adverse Effect on the Company and the Subsidiaries taken as a whole.

7. Indemnification and Contribution.

(a) The Company and WELLHEALTH, jointly and severally, agree to indemnify and hold harmless each Underwriter and each person, if any, who controls any Underwriter within the meaning of Section 15 of the Act or Section 20 of the Exchange Act from and against any and all losses, claims, damages, liabilities and expenses (including reasonable costs of investigation) arising out of or based upon any untrue statement or alleged untrue statement of a material fact contained in any Prepricing Prospectus or in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus or in any amendment or supplement thereto, or arising out of or based upon any omission or alleged omission to state therein a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, except insofar as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses arise out of or are based upon any untrue statement or omission or alleged untrue statement or omission which has been made therein or omitted therefrom in reliance upon and in conformity with the information relating to such Underwriter furnished in writing to the Company by or on behalf of any Underwriter through you expressly for use in connection therewith; provided, however, that the indemnification contained in this paragraph (a) with respect to any Prepricing Prospectus shall not inure to the benefit of any Underwriter (or to the benefit of any person controlling such Underwriter) on account of any such loss, claim, damage, liability or expense arising from the sale of the Shares by such Underwriter to any person if a copy of the Prospectus shall not have been delivered or sent to such person within the time required by the Act and the regulations thereunder, and the untrue statement or alleged untrue statement or omission or alleged omission of a material fact contained in such Prepricing Prospectus was corrected in the Prospectus, provided that the Company has delivered the Prospectus to the Underwriters in requisite quantity on a timely basis to permit such delivery or sending. The foregoing indemnity agreement shall be in addition to any liability which the Company may otherwise have.

(b) If any action, suit or proceeding shall be brought against any Underwriter or any person controlling any Underwriter in respect of which indemnity may be sought against the Company or WELLHEALTH, such Underwriter or such controlling person shall promptly notify the Co-registrants, and the Co-registrants shall assume the defense thereof, including the employment of counsel and payment of all fees and expenses. Such Underwriter or any such controlling person shall have the right to employ separate counsel in any such action, suit or proceeding and to participate in the defense thereof, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at the expense of such Underwriter or such controlling person unless (i) the Co-registrants have agreed in writing to pay such fees and expenses, (ii) the Co-registrants have failed to assume the defense and employ counsel, or (iii) the named parties to any such action, suit or proceeding (including any impleaded parties) include both such Underwriter or such controlling person and the Company or WELLHEALTH and such Underwriter or such controlling person shall have been advised by its counsel that representation of such indemnified party and the Company or WELLHEALTH by the same counsel would be inappropriate under applicable standards of professional conduct (whether or not such representation by the same counsel has been proposed) due to actual or potential differing interests between them (in which case the Co-registrants shall not have the right to assume the defense of such action, suit or proceeding on behalf of such Underwriter or such controlling person). It is understood, however, that the Co-registrants shall, in connection with any one such action, suit or proceeding or separate but substantially similar or related actions, suits or proceedings in the same jurisdiction arising out of the same general allegations or circumstances, be liable for the reasonable fees and expenses of only one separate firm of attorneys (in addition to any local counsel) at any time for the Underwriters and controlling persons not having actual or potential differing interests with you or among themselves, which firm shall be designated in writing by Alabama Securities Corp., and that all such fees and expenses shall be reimbursed as they are incurred. Neither of the Co-registrants shall be liable for any settlement of any such action, suit or proceeding effected without its written consent, but if settled with such written consent, or if there be a final judgment for the plaintiff in any such action, suit or proceeding, the Co-registrants agree to indemnify and hold harmless any Underwriter, to the extent provided in the preceding paragraph, and any such controlling person from and against any loss, claim, damage, liability or expense by reason of such settlement or judgment.

(c) Each Underwriter agrees, severally and not jointly, to indemnify and hold harmless each of the Co-registrants, their respective directors, their respective officers who sign the Registration Statement, and any person who controls either Co-registrant within the meaning of Section 15 of the Act or Section 20 of the Exchange Act, to the same extent as the foregoing indemnity from the Co-registrants to each Underwriter, but only with respect to information relating to such Underwriter furnished in writing by or on behalf of such Underwriter through you expressly for use in the Registration Statement, the Prospectus or any Prepricing Prospectus, or any amendment or supplement thereto. If any action, suit or proceeding shall be brought against either of the Co-registrants, any of their respective directors, any such officer, or any such controlling person based on the Registration Statement, the Prospectus or any Prepricing Prospectus, or any amendment or supplement thereto, and in respect of which indemnity may be sought against any Underwriter pursuant to this paragraph (c), such Underwriter shall have the rights and duties given to the Co-registrants by paragraph (b) above (except that if the Co-registrants shall have assumed the defense thereof such Underwriter shall not be required to do so, but may employ separate counsel therein and participate in the defense thereof, but the fees and expenses of such counsel shall be at such Underwriter's expense), and the Co-registrants, their respective directors, any such officer, and any such controlling person shall have the rights and duties given to the Underwriters by paragraph (b) above. The foregoing indemnity agreement shall be in addition to any liability which any Underwriter may otherwise have.

(d) If the indemnification provided for in this Section 7 is unavailable to an indemnified party under paragraphs (a) or (c) hereof in respect of any losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses referred to therein, then an indemnifying party, in lieu of indemnifying such indemnified party, shall contribute to the amount paid or payable by such indemnified party as a result of such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses (i) in such proportion as is appropriate to reflect the relative benefits received by the Co-registrants on the one hand and the Underwriters on the other hand from the offering of the Shares, or (ii) if the allocation provided by clause (i) above is not permitted by applicable law, in such proportion as is appropriate to reflect not only the relative benefits referred to in clause (i) above but also the relative fault of the Co-registrants on the one hand and the Underwriters on the other in connection with the statements or omissions that resulted in such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses, as well as any other relevant equitable considerations. The relative benefits received by the Co-registrants on the one hand and the Underwriters on the other shall be deemed to be in the same proportion as the total net proceeds from the offering (before deducting expenses) received by the Company bear to the total underwriting discounts and commissions received by the Underwriters, in each case as set forth in the table on the cover page of the Prospectus. The relative fault of the Co-registrants on the one hand and the Underwriters on the other hand shall be determined by reference to, among other things, whether the untrue or alleged untrue statement of a material fact or the omission or alleged omission to state a material fact relates to information supplied by either of the Co-registrants on the one hand or by the Underwriters on the other hand and the parties' relative intent, knowledge, access to information and opportunity to correct or prevent such statement or omission.

(e) The Co-registrants and the Underwriters agree that it would not be just and equitable if contribution pursuant to this Section 7 were determined by a pro rata allocation (even if the Underwriters were treated as one entity for such purpose) or by any other method of allocation that does not take account of the equitable considerations referred to in paragraph (d) above. The amount paid or payable by an indemnified party as a result of the losses, claims, damages, liabilities and expenses referred to in paragraph (d) above shall be deemed to include, subject to the limitations set forth above, any legal or other expenses reasonably incurred by such indemnified party in connection with investigating any claim or defending any such action, suit or proceeding. Notwithstanding the provisions of this Section 7, no Underwriter shall be required to contribute any amount in excess of the amount by which the total price of the Shares underwritten by it and distributed to the public exceeds the amount of any damages which such Underwriter has otherwise been required to pay by reason of such untrue or alleged untrue statement or omission or alleged omission. No person guilty of fraudulent misrepresentation (within the meaning of Section 11(f) of the Act) shall be entitled to contribution from any person who was not guilty of such fraudulent misrepresentation. The Underwriters' obligations to contribute pursuant to this Section 7 are several in proportion to the respective numbers of Firm Shares set forth opposite their names in Schedule I hereto (or such numbers of Firm Shares increased as set forth in Section 10 hereof) and not joint.

(f) No indemnifying party shall, without the prior written consent of the indemnified party, effect any settlement of any pending or threatened action, suit or proceeding in respect of which any indemnified party is or could have been a party and indemnity could have been sought hereunder by such indemnified party, unless such settlement includes an unconditional release of such indemnified party from all liability on claims that are the subject matter of such action, suit or proceeding.

(g) Any losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses for which an indemnified party is entitled to indemnification or contribution under this Section 7 shall be paid by the indemnifying party to the indemnified party as such losses, claims, damages, liabilities or expenses are incurred. The indemnity and contribution agreements contained in this Section 7 and the representations and warranties of the Company and WELLHEALTH set forth in this Agreement shall remain operative and in full force and effect, regardless of (i) any investigation made by or on behalf of any Underwriter or any person controlling any Underwriter, the Company, its directors or officers, WELLHEALTH, its directors or officers or any person controlling the Company or WELLHEALTH, (ii) acceptance of any Shares and payment therefor hereunder, and (iii) any termination of this Agreement. A successor to any Underwriter or any person controlling any Underwriter, or to the Company, its directors or officers, WELLHEALTH, its directors or officers or any person controlling the Company or WELLHEALTH shall be entitled to the benefits of the indemnity, contribution and reimbursement agreement contained in this Section 7.

8. Conditions of Underwriter's Obligations. The several obligations of the Underwriters to purchase the Firm Shares hereunder are subject to the following conditions:

(a) If, at the time this Agreement is executed and delivered, it is necessary for the Registration Statement or a post-effective amendment thereto to be declared effective before the offering of the Shares may commence, the Registration Statement or such post-effective amendment shall have become effective not later than 5:30 P.M., New York City time, on the date hereof, or at such later date and time as shall be consented to in writing by you, and all filings, if any, required by Rules 424 and 430A under the Act shall have been timely made; no stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement shall have been issued and no proceeding for that purpose shall have been instituted or, to the knowledge of the Company, WELLHEALTH or any Underwriter, threatened by the Commission; and any request of the Commission for additional information (to be included in the registration statement or the Prospectus or otherwise) shall have been complied with to your satisfaction.

(b) Subsequent to the effective date of this Agreement, there shall not have occurred (i) any change, or any development involving a prospective change, in or affecting the condition (financial or other), business, prospects, properties, net worth, or results of operations of the Company, WELLHEALTH or their respective subsidiaries not contemplated by the Prospectus, which in your opinion, as Representatives of the Underwriters, would materially adversely affect the market for the Shares, or (ii) any event or development relating to or involving the Company or WELLHEALTH, or any officer or director of the Company or WELLHEALTH, which makes any statement made in the Prospectus untrue or which, in the opinion of the Company and its counsel, WELLHEALTH and its counsel or the Underwriters and their counsel, requires the making of any addition to or change in the Prospectus in order to state a material fact required by the Act or any other law to be stated therein or necessary in order to make the statements therein not misleading, if amending or supplementing the Prospectus to reflect such event or development would, in your opinion, as Representatives of the several Underwriters, materially adversely affect the market for the Shares.

(c) You shall have received on the Closing Date, an opinion of Sirote & Permutt, P.C., counsel for the Company and WELLHEALTH, dated the Closing Date and addressed to you, as Representatives of the Underwriters, to the effect that:

(i) The Company is a corporation duly organized and validly existing in good standing under the laws of the State of Maryland with full corporate power and authority to own, lease and operate its properties and to conduct its business as described in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (and any amendment or supplement thereto), and is duly registered and qualified to conduct its business and is in good standing in each jurisdiction or place where the nature of its properties or the conduct of its business requires such registration or qualification, except where the failure so to register or qualify does not have a Material Adverse Effect;

(ii) To the best knowledge of such counsel, after reasonable inquiry, the Company has no subsidiary other than the Subsidiaries. Each of the Subsidiaries is a corporation duly organized and validly existing in good standing under the laws of the jurisdiction of its organization, with full corporate power and authority to own, lease, and operate its properties and to conduct its business as described in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (and any amendment or supplement thereto); and all the outstanding shares of capital stock of each of the Subsidiaries have been duly authorized and validly issued, are fully paid and nonassessable, and are owned by the Company directly, or indirectly through one of the other Subsidiaries, free and clear of any perfected security interest, or, to the best knowledge of such counsel after reasonable inquiry, any other security interest, lien, adverse claim, equity or other encumbrance;

(iii) WELLHEALTH is a Delaware corporation duly organized and validly existing in good standing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with full corporate power and authority to own, lease, and operate its properties and to conduct its business as described in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (and any amendment or supplement thereto), and is duly registered and qualified to conduct its business and is in good standing in each jurisdiction or place where the nature of its properties or the conduct of its business requires such registration or qualification, except where the failure so to register or qualify does not have WELLHEALTH Material Adverse Effect;

(v) All the shares of capital stock of the Company outstanding prior to the issuance of the Firm Shares have been duly authorized and validly issued, and are fully paid and nonassessable; and except as described in the Prospectus, there are no duly authorized and outstanding options, warrants or other rights calling for the issuance of, or to such counsel's best knowledge after reasonable inquiry, any duly authorized commitment, plan or arrangement to issue, any Common Stock of the Company or any right or security convertible into or exchangeable or exercisable for any Common Stock of the Company or for any such right or security;

(vi) The Shares have been duly authorized and, when issued and delivered to the Underwriters against payment therefor in accordance with the terms hereof, will be validly issued, fully paid and nonassessable, and free of any preemptive, or to such counsel's best knowledge, after reasonable inquiry, similar rights that entitle or will entitle any person to acquire any Shares upon the issuance thereof by the Company;

(vii) The form of certificates for the Shares conforms to the requirements of the Maryland General Corporation Law;

(viii) The Registration Statement and all post-effective amendments, if any, have become effective under the Act and, to the best knowledge of such counsel after reasonable inquiry, no stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement has been issued and no proceedings for that purpose are pending before or contemplated by the Commission; and any required filing of the Prospectus pursuant to Rule 424(b) has been made in accordance with Rule 424(b);

(ix) Each of the Company and WELLHEALTH has all requisite corporate power and authority to enter into this Agreement and to issue, sell and deliver the Shares to the Underwriters as provided herein, and this Agreement has been duly authorized, validly executed and delivered by each of the Company and WELLHEALTH and is a valid, legal and binding agreement of each of the Company and WELLHEALTH enforceable against the Company and WELLHEALTH in accordance with its terms, except as enforcement of rights to indemnity and contribution hereunder may be limited by federal or state securities laws or principles of public policy and subject to the qualification of the enforceability of the obligations of the parties hereto may be limited by bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization, moratorium and other laws relating to or affecting creditors' rights generally and by general equitable principles;

(x) None of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH is (i) in violation of its respective certificate or articles of incorporation or by-laws, or other organizational documents; (ii) to such counsel's best knowledge after reasonable inquiry, (A) in default in the performance of any material obligation, agreement or condition contained in any bond, debenture, note or other evidence of indebtedness or in any material agreement, indenture, lease, or other instrument known to such counsel to which such person is a party or by which any of them or their respective properties may be bound, except as may be disclosed in the Prospectus, or (B) in violation of any law, ordinance, administrative or governmental rule or regulation applicable to the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH Subsidiaries or of any decree of any court or governmental agency or body having jurisdiction over the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH which violation would have a Material Adverse Effect;

(xi) None of the offer, sale or delivery of the Shares, the execution, delivery or performance of this Agreement, compliance by the Company and WELLHEALTH with the provisions hereof, the execution, delivery and performance of the Purchase Agreements by the Company, compliance by the Company with the provisions thereof, or consummation by the Company of the transactions contemplated hereby and by the Purchase Agreements (i) conflicts with or will conflict with or constitutes or will constitute a breach of, or a default under, (x) the certificate or articles of incorporation or by-laws, or other organizational documents, of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries, WELLHEALTH or (y) any agreement, indenture, lease or other instrument known to such counsel to which the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH is a party or by which any of them or any of their respective properties may be bound or (ii) to such counsel's best knowledge, after reasonable inquiry, violates any statute, law, regulation or filing or judgment, injunction, order or decree applicable to the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or any of their respective properties, or results in the creation or imposition of any lien, charge or encumbrance (except as described in the Prospectus) upon any property or assets of the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH pursuant to the terms of any agreement or instrument to which any of them is a party or by which any of them may be bound or to which any of them or their respective properties or assets is subject; or (iii) requires any consent, approval, authorization or other order of, or registration or filing with, any court, regulatory body, administrative agency or other governmental body, agency, or official (except as have been obtained under the Act and the Exchange Act or such as may be required under state securities or Blue Sky laws governing the purchase and distribution of the Shares);

(xii) The Registration Statement and the Prospectus and any supplements or amendments thereto (except for the financial statements and the notes thereto and the schedules and other financial and statistical data included therein, as to which such counsel need not express any opinion) comply as to form in all material respects with the requirements of the Act;

(xiii) To such counsel's best knowledge, after reasonable inquiry, (A) other than as described or contemplated in the Prospectus (or any supplement thereto), there are no legal or governmental proceedings pending or threatened against the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or to which the Company, any of the Subsidiaries or WELLHEALTH, or any of their respective properties is subject, which are required to be described in the Registration Statement or Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto) and (B) there are no agreements, indentures, leases or other instruments, that are required to be described in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto) or to be filed as an exhibit to the Registration Statement that are not described or filed as required;

(xiv) The statements in the Registration Statement and Prospectus under the captions "Risk Factors," "Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations," "Business," "Investment and Other Policies," "Management," "Description of Securities" and "Certain Provisions of Maryland Law and of the Company's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws," insofar as they are descriptions of agreements or other legal documents, or refer to statements of law or legal documents are accurate and present fairly the information required to be shown; and

(xv) Each of the Purchase Agreements has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by the Company and constitutes a valid and binding agreement of the Company, enforceable against such party in accordance with its terms, except as enforcement of rights to indemnity and contribution by any party thereunder may be limited by federal or state securities laws or principles of public policy and subject to the qualification of the enforceability of the obligations of the parties thereto may be limited by bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization, moratorium and other laws relating to or affecting creditors' rights generally and by general equitable principles. The Purchase Agreements and all deeds, assignments of leases and other documents to be delivered in connection therewith are legally sufficient to effect the sale to the Company of all right, title and interest in and into the properties upon payment of the consideration therefor.

The requirements of this section shall be satisfied with respect to subparagraphs (x), (xi) and (xiii) by receipt of the opinion of David D. Arthur, in-house general counsel to WELLHEALTH.

In addition, such counsel shall also state that, although counsel has not undertaken, except as otherwise indicated in their opinion, to determine independently, and does not assume any responsibility for, the accuracy or completeness of the statements in the Registration Statement, such counsel has participated in the preparation of the Registration Statement and the Prospectus, including review and discussion of the contents thereof, and nothing has come to the attention of such counsel that has caused it to believe that the Registration Statement, at the time the Registration Statement became effective, or the Prospectus, as of its date and as of the Closing Date or the Option Closing Date, as the case may be, contained an untrue statement of a material fact or omitted to state a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading or that any amendment or supplement to the Prospectus, as of its respective date and as of the Closing Date or the Option Closing Date, as the case may be, contained any untrue statement of a material fact or omitted to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements therein, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading (it being understood that such counsel need express no opinion with respect to the financial statements and the notes thereto and the schedules and other financial and statistical data included in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus).

Such counsel shall also (i) reaffirm as of the Closing Date their opinions filed as Exhibits 5 and 8 to the Registration Statement and (ii) state that such counsel has been advised by the New York Stock Exchange that the Shares have been duly authorized for listing, subject to official notice of issuance, on the New York Stock Exchange.

In rendering their opinions as aforesaid, counsel may rely upon an opinion or opinions, each dated the Closing Date, of other counsel retained by them or the Company as to laws of any jurisdiction other than the United States or the State of Alabama, provided that (1) each such local counsel is acceptable to the Underwriters, (2) such reliance is expressly authorized by each opinion so relied upon and a copy of each such opinion is delivered to the Underwriters and is, in form and substance satisfactory to them and their counsel, and (3) counsel shall state in their opinion that they believe that they and the Underwriters are justified in relying thereon.

(d) You shall have received on the Closing Date an opinion of Dowe & Flower Co., L.P.A., counsel for the Underwriters, dated the Closing Date, with respect to the matters referred to in clauses (vi), (viii), (ix) (solely with respect to the Company) and (xii) of the foregoing paragraph (c), and such other related matters as you may request.

(e) You shall have received letters addressed to you and dated the date hereof and the Closing Date from Andrew Arther and Whinney & Whinney, each being independent certified public accountants, substantially in the forms heretofore approved by you.

(f)(i) No stop order suspending the effectiveness of the Registration Statement shall have been issued and no proceedings for that purpose shall have been taken or, to the knowledge of the Company or WELLHEALTH, shall be contemplated by the Commission at or prior to the Closing Date; (ii) there shall not have been any change in the capital stock of the Company nor any material increase in the short-term or long-term debt of the Company (other than in the ordinary course of business) from that set forth or contemplated in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (or any amendment or Supplement thereto); (iii) there shall not have been, since the respective dates as of which information is given in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto), except as may otherwise be stated in the Registration Statement and Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto), any material adverse change in the condition (financial or other), business, prospects, properties, net worth or results of operations of the Company and the Subsidiaries taken as a whole; (iv) the Company shall not have any liabilities or obligations, direct or contingent (whether or not in the ordinary course of business), that are material to the Company and the Subsidiaries taken as a whole, other than those reflected in the Registration Statement or the Prospectus (or any amendment or supplement thereto); and (v) all the representations and warranties of the Company and WELLHEALTH contained in this Agreement shall be true and correct on and as of the date hereof and on and as of the Closing Date as if made on and as of the Closing Date, and you shall have received a certificate, dated the Closing Date and signed by the respective chief executive officers and chief financial officers of the Company and WELLHEALTH (or such other officers as are acceptable to you), to the effect set forth in this Section 8(f) and in Section 8(g) hereof.

(g) The Company or WELLHEALTH shall not have failed at or prior to the Closing Date to have performed or complied with any of its agreements herein contained and required to be performed or complied with by it hereunder at or prior to the Closing Date.

(h) Prior to commencement of the offering of the Shares, the Shares shall have been listed, or approved for listing upon official notice of issuance, on the New York Stock Exchange.

(i) Each of the Company and WELLHEALTH shall have furnished or caused to be furnished to you such further certificates and documents as you shall have reasonably requested.

All such opinions, certificates, letters and other documents will be in compliance with the provisions hereof only if they are satisfactory in form and substance to you and your counsel.

Any certificate or document signed by any officer of the Company or WELLHEALTH and delivered to you, as Representatives of the Underwriters, or to counsel for the Underwriters, shall be deemed a representation and warranty by the Company or WELLHEALTH to each Underwriter as to the statements made therein.

The several obligations of the Underwriters to purchase Additional Shares hereunder are subject to the satisfaction on and as of any Option Closing Date of the conditions set forth in this Section 8, except that, if any Option Closing Date is other than the Closing Date, the certificates, opinions and letters referred to in paragraphs (c) through (f) shall be dated the Option Closing Date in question and the opinions called for by paragraphs (c) and (d) shall be revised to reflect the sale of Additional Shares.

9. Expenses. The Company agrees to pay the following costs and expenses and all other costs and expenses incident to the performance by it of its obligations hereunder: (i) the preparation, printing or reproduction, and filing with the Commission of the Registration Statement (including financial statements and exhibits thereto), each Prepricing Prospectus, the Prospectus, and each amendment or supplement to any of them; (ii) the printing (or reproduction) and delivery (including postage, air freight charges and charges for counting and packaging) of such copies of the Registration Statement, each Prepricing Prospectus, the Prospectus, and all amendments or supplements to any of them, as may be reasonably requested for use in connection with the offering and sale of the Shares; (iii) the preparation, printing, authentication, issuance and delivery of certificates for the Shares, including any stamp taxes in connection with the original issuance and sale of the Shares; (iv) the printing (or reproduction) and delivery of this Agreement, the preliminary and supplemental Blue Sky Memoranda and all other agreements or documents printed (or reproduced) and delivered in connection with the offering of the Shares; (v) the registration of the Shares under the Exchange Act and the listing of the Shares on the New York Stock Exchange; (vi) the registration or qualification of the Shares for offer and sale under the securities or Blue Sky laws of the several states as provided in Section 5(g) hereof (including the reasonable fees, expenses and disbursements of counsel for the Underwriters relating to the preparation, printing or reproduction, and delivery of the preliminary and supplemental Blue Sky Memoranda and such registration and qualification); (vii) the filing fees and the fees and expenses of counsel for the Underwriters in connection with any filings required to be made with the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc.; (viii) the transportation and other expenses incurred by or on behalf of officers and employees of the Company and WELLHEALTH in connection with the presentations to potential purchasers of the Shares; and (ix) the fees and expenses of the Company's accountants and the fees and expenses of counsel (including local and special counsel) for the Company.

10. Effective Date of Agreement. This Agreement shall become effective: (i) upon the execution and delivery hereof by the parties hereto; or (ii) if, at the time this Agreement is executed and delivered, it is necessary for the Registration Statement or a post-effective amendment thereto to be declared effective before the offering of the Shares may commence, when notification of the effectiveness of the Registration Statement or such post-effective amendment has been released by the Commission. Until such time as this Agreement shall have become effective, it may be terminated by the Company, by notifying you, or by you, by notifying the Company.

If any one or more of the Underwriters shall fail or refuse to purchase Shares which it or they are obligated to purchase hereunder on the Closing Date, and the aggregate number of Shares which such defaulting Underwriter or Underwriters are obligated but fail or refuse to purchase is not more than one-tenth of the aggregate number of Shares which the Underwriters are obligated to purchase on the Closing Date, each non-defaulting Underwriter shall be obligated, severally, in the proportion which the number of Firm Shares set forth opposite its name in Schedule I hereto bears to the aggregate number of Firm Shares set forth opposite the names of all non-defaulting Underwriters or in such other proportion as you may specify in accordance with Section 20 of the Master Agreement Among Underwriters of Alabama Securities Corp., to purchase the Shares which such defaulting Underwriter or Underwriters are obligated, but fail or refuse, to purchase. If any one or more of the Underwriters shall fail or refuse to purchase Shares which it or they are obligated to purchase on the Closing Date and the aggregate number of Shares with respect to which such default occurs is more than one-tenth of the aggregate number of Shares which the Underwriters are obligated to purchase on the Closing Date and the aggregate number of Shares with respect to which such default occurs is more than one-tenth of the aggregate number of Shares which the Underwriters are obligated to purchase on the Closing Date and arrangements satisfactory to you and the Company for the purchase of such Shares by one or more non-defaulting Underwriters or other party or parties approved by you and the Company are not made within thirty-six (36) hours after such default, this Agreement will terminate without liability on the part of any non-defaulting Underwriters or the Company. In any such case which does not result in termination of this Agreement, either you or the Company shall have the right to postpone the Closing Date, but in no event for longer than seven days, in order that the required changes, if any, in the Registration Statement and the Prospectus or any other documents or arrangements may be effected. Any action taken under this paragraph shall not relieve any defaulting Underwriter from liability in respect of any such default of any such Underwriter under this Agreement. The term "Underwriter" as used in this Agreement, includes, for all purposes of this Agreement, any party not listed in Schedule I hereto who, with your approval and the approval of the Company, purchases Shares which a defaulting Underwriter is obligated, but fails or refuses, to purchase.

Any notice under this Section 10 may be given by telegram, telecopy or telephone but shall be subsequently confirmed by letter.

11. Termination of Agreement. This Agreement shall be subject to termination in your absolute discretion, without liability on the part of any Underwriter to the Company, by notice to the Company, if prior to the Closing Date or any Option Closing Date (if different from the Closing Date and then only as to the Additional Shares), as the case may be, (i) trading in securities generally on the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange or The Nasdaq Stock Market or of the Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange, shall have been suspended or materially limited, (ii) a general moratorium on commercial banking activities in New York or Alabama shall have been declared by either federal or state authorities, or (iii) there shall have occurred any outbreak or escalation of hostilities or other international or domestic calamity, crisis or change in political, financial or economic conditions, the effect of which on the financial markets of the United States is such as to make it, in your judgment, impracticable or inadvisable to commence or continue the offering of the Shares at the offering price to the public set forth on the cover page of the Prospectus or to enforce contracts for the resale of the Shares by the Underwriters. Notice of such termination may be given to the Company by telegraph, telecopy or telephone and shall be subsequently confirmed by letter.

12. Information Furnished by the Underwriters. The statements set forth in the last paragraph on the cover page, the stabilization legend on the inside cover page, and the first, third, eighth and tenth paragraphs under the caption "Underwriting" in any Prepricing Prospectus and in the Prospectus, constitute the only information furnished by or on behalf of the Underwriters through you as such information is referred to in Sections 6(b) and 7 hereof.

13. Miscellaneous. The purpose of this valuation is to estimate the market value of the subject property's leased fee estate as of September 29, ____[Year], subject to a master lease from WellHealth Rehabilitation Corporation. The report is to be used for asset valuation purposes. WellHealth Rehabilitation Corporation is selling nine professional office buildings for the purpose of establishing a real estate investment trust (REIT). This valuation assumes that the prospective REIT is the owner of the property, with WellHealth Rehabilitation Corporation guaranteeing annual net rental income of $12.00 per rentable square foot.

This appraisal investigation includes visits to the facility, discussions with the current owners and management of the property, a review of available financial data, discussions with local brokers and government offices, and research and analysis of the market.

"Market value" is defined as:

"The most probable price which a property should bring in a competitive and open market under all conditions requisite to a fair sale, the buyer and seller each acting prudently and knowledgeably, and assuming the price is not affected by undue stimulus. Implicit in this definition is the consummation of a sale as of a specified date and the passing of title from seller to buyer under conditions whereby:

- Buyer and seller are typically motivated;
- Both parties are well informed or well advised, and acting in what they consider their own best interests;
- A reasonable time is allowed for exposure in the open market;
- Payment is made in terms of cash in U.S. dollars or in terms of financial arrangements comparable thereto; and
- The price represents the normal consideration for the property sold unaffected by special or creative financing or sales concessions granted by anyone associated with the sale."

The subject property is a three-story professional office building containing 30,144 gross square feet and 27,800 leasable square feet. The building is a Class B facility, with a steel frame and poured-in-place concrete structure and dryvit and brick veneer exterior walls. It was constructed in ____[Year]. The building is currently occupied by the U.S. Sports Med Complex, which is owned by and associated with the WellHealth Medical Center.

In arriving at the opinion expressed in this report, it is assumed that the title to the property is free and clear and held under responsible ownership. The information furnished us by others is believed to be reliable, but no responsibility for its accuracy is assumed. The value reported herein is based upon the integrity of the information provided.

Based upon the procedures, assumptions and conditions outlined in this report, we estimate the market value of the leased fee interest in the U.S. Sports Med Complex Building, as of September 29, ____[Year], to be:

INTRODUCTION

PROPERTY IDENTIFICATION

The subject of this appraisal is U.S. Sports Med Complex Building located at 1313 13th Street South in Birmingham, Alabama. The subject is a three-story building that is situated just east of the new WellHealth Hospital. The property is identified by Jefferson County as tax parcel number 29-0-1-3-008-11.001. The property has a parking lot on its south end, with parking spaces for 26 vehicles.

PURPOSE AND EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE APPRAISAL

The purpose of this appraisal is to estimate the market value of the real property identified above. The effective date of valuation is September 29, ____[Year], the date of our last inspection.

FUNCTION OF THE APPRAISAL

The report is to be used for internal financial valuation purposes. The owners are considering the sale of nine professional office buildings for the purpose of establishing a real estate investment trust (REIT). The subject property would be included in that sale.

SCOPE OF THE APPRAISAL

This appraisal engagement includes all three of the standard valuation approaches and is in conformity with the requirements of the Code of Professional Ethics and Standards of Professional Practice of the Appraisal Institute and Society of Real Estate Appraisers. The scope of our assignment included collecting, verifying and analyzing market and property data applicable to the three approaches and consistent with the property's highest and best use. The results of the three approaches are then reconciled into a final value conclusion considering the relevancy and quality of data presented in each of the approaches.

PROPERTY RIGHTS APPRAISED

The property right appraised herein is the Leased Fee Estate.

"Leased Fee Estate" is:

ownership held by the landlord with the right of use and occupancy conveyed by lease to others; the rights of lessor (the leased fee owner) and leased fee are specified by contract terms contained within the lease."

[The Appraisal of Real Estate, p. 123, 10th Ed., published by The Appraisal Institute].

DEFINITION OF VALUE

For the purpose of this valuation, "market value" is defined as follows:

"The most probable price which a property should bring in a competitive and open market under all conditions requisite to a fair sale, the buyer and seller each acting prudently and knowledgeably, and assuming the price is not affected by undue stimulus. Implicit in this definition is the consummation of a sale as of a specified date and the passing of title from seller to buyer under conditions whereby:

- Buyer and seller are typically motivated;
- Both parties are well informed or well advised, and acting in what they consider their own best interests;
- A reasonable time is allowed for exposure in the open market;
- Payment is made in terms of cash in U.S. dollars or in terms of financial arrangements comparable thereto; and
- The price represents the normal consideration for the property sold unaffected by special or creative financing or sales concessions granted by anyone associated with the sale."

[The Appraisal of Real Estate, p. 21, 10th Ed., published by The Appraisal Institute].

HISTORY OF THE PROPERTY

WellHealth Medical Center, Inc., acquired the assets of the South Highlands Hospital in November ____[Year] [Deed Book 3726/Page 014]. A new main hospital building and the Alabama Rehabilitation Center were constructed in ____[Year]. From ____[Year] through ____[Year], WellHealth Medical Center acquired 15 parcels containing 1.7525 acres east of the existing hospital, and assembled and rezoned 1.0242 acres for the construction of the U.S. Sports Med Complex (ASMI). The ASMI facility was constructed in late ____[Year] and early ____[Year]. The top floor of the facility is vacant, and the tenant finish work has not yet been completed on this space.

The subject professional building has reportedly not been marketed for sale and is not currently under an agreement of sale. No other deed transfers were noted in the last three years. A title search is recommended for official determination.

HISTORY AND NATURE OF THE BUSINESS ENVIRONMENT

United States Economic Performance and Outlook

The value of the business enterprise value is influenced by potential returns available from alternative investments. These return expectations are affected by economic conditions as they impact the ability of a business enterprise to generate a return on its invested capital. Perhaps the most important economic indicator affecting potential investor returns is the aggregate demand for goods and services. Aggregate demand is measured by a country's Gross Domestic Product (GDP), which is the sum of all domestic expenditures for consumption, government services, and net exports.

As of the valuation date, the United States economy is currently mired in a period of slow economic growth. Gross Domestic Product (GDP) increased at a 2.1 percent annual rate during ____[Year] after declining (1.2%) during ____[Year]. The GDP was 0.7 percent and 1.6 percent, respectively, for the first and second quarters of ____[Year], or an annualized rate of 1.1 percent.

The components of GDP indicate that the economic recovery is affecting many sectors of the economy. Personal consumption expenditures, which account for approximately two-thirds of GDP, rose only 1.3 percent during the first half of ____[Year]. Non-residential Fixed Investment advanced 2.2 percent and Residential Fixed Investment grew 1.7 percent. Federal Government Purchases declined (0.6%) over the same period. Federal Government Purchases account for 7.2 percent of the total GDP, and this decline is limited to the rate of overall GDP growth.

The value of the business enterprise value is also affected by the current and expected levels of inflation and interest rates. Inflation creates uncertainty in the mind of investors as they attempt to estimate future investment returns. This uncertainty is incorporated into both the required return on equity and debt capital.

The economic downturn has resulted in sharply lower inflation. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) ended ____[Year] with a 3.0 percent increase compared to a 4.2 percent increase during ____[Year]. The CPI for ____[Year] is currently estimated at 3.3 percent. The GDP Deflator, a much broader price level index, ended ____[Year] with a 2.6 percent annual increase compared to a 4.0 percent increase during ____[Year]. The GDP Deflator is currently estimated at 2.5 percent for ____[Year].

The Federal Reserve Bank has adopted a relatively easier monetary policy as a result of the recession. Interest rates, as represented by long-term Treasury bond yields, declined approximately ten basis points compared to rates existing a year earlier. Long-term corporate bond rates have also decreased and the Federal Reserve's discount rate reductions have prompted commercial banks to lower their prime lending rate to 6.0 percent. Selected monetary statistics are presented in the following table.

INTEREST RATES AND SELECTED STATISTICS

	JUNE 30, [Year]	JANUARY 2, [Year]
Federal Fund Rate	3.0%	3.9%
90-Day Treasury Bill Rate	3.1%	3.9%
30-Year Treasury Bond	6.9%	7.5%
Aaa Bond Yield	7.4%	8.2%
Prime Rate	6.0%	6.5%

Economic Outlook

According to Value Line's Quarterly Economic Review, dated June 30, ____ [Year], the economic recovery is now two years old, but shows much slower growth than normal for a mature recovery. Among factors cited by Value Line for contributing to the slow growth are "high debt, stagnant personal income, low consumer confidence and a troubling unemployment rate." Value Line's Quarterly Economic Review identified the following estimates for selected economic statistics from ____ [Year] to ____ [Year].

	[Year]	[Year]	[Year]
Real GDP	2.7%	3.2%	3.3%
Personal Consumption Expenditures	2.8%	2.7%	2.5%
Federal Government Purchases	(5.2%)	(3.0%)	(4.0%)
30-Year Treasury Bond Yields	7.1%	7.2%	7.2%
Price Rate	6.0%	6.3%	6.7%
Consumer Price Index	3.5%	3.5%	3.6%

MARKET DATA--METROPOLITAN BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham is recognized as a leading financial, transportation, communication, manufacturing, healthcare and distribution center for the southeast United States. The region's central location within the state of Alabama has been a major factor in its economic success.

The Birmingham Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) consists of five counties with an estimated ____ [Year] population of 917,100. This ranks the metropolitan area as the 46th largest in the county. The larger 16-county primary market area contains a population of 1,341,500. A map of the Birmingham MSA is shown in the Exhibit Section of this report.

Trends in population, housing, employment and income are contributing social and economic forces that impact property values. Each of these elements is discussed separately.

POPULATION

Historical data and growth projections reflect the economic climate of an area and have both a direct and indirect impact on property values. Table 1 shows the county population totals by decade. Table 1 also shows the annual percentage increases in population for the individual counties in the Birmingham MSA.

The fastest annual population growth in the Birmingham MSA occurred in the decade of the ____ [Year]. The rate of growth in the ____ [Year], however, was only 1.13 percent per year, compared to 2.0 percent to 3.0 percent per year for many other large Southeast US metropolitan cities during the decade. The City of Birmingham, in Jefferson County, and Walker County experienced population declines during the most recent decade.

TABLE 1 POPULATION BY COUNTY

COUNTY	[Year] CENSUS	[Year] CENSUS	[Year] CENSUS
Blount	27,956	28,555	28,945
Jefferson	26,853	36,459	39,248
City of Birmingham*	644,991	671,392	651,525
Saint Claire	300,991	286,799	265,968
Shelby	27,956	41,205	50,009
Walker	56,382	68,660	67,670
TOTAL MSA	794,083	884,014	907,810

* City of Birmingham included in Jefferson County totals.

AVERAGE PERCENTAGE INCREASE

COUNTY	[Year]s	[Year]s	[Year]s
Blount	3.58%	0.79%	0.37%
Jefferson	0.41%	-0.30%	0.25%
Saint Claire	4.74%	2.14%	1.25%
Shelby	7.43%	4.99%	3.25%
Walker	2.21%	-0.14%	0.25%
TOTAL MSA	1.13%	0.27%	0.5%

Jefferson County, excluding the City of Birmingham, grew 1.18 percent per year in population during the ____ [Year], but experienced little growth during the ____ [Year]. The estimated population growth rate so far in the ____ [Year] is still slow, but faster than experienced in the ____ [Year].

HOUSING

The growth in housing in the Birmingham MSA was also slow but stable during the ____ [Year]. As was the case in other cities during the decade, much of the new housing occurred due to a decline in the average household size. In the Birmingham MSA, there were 3.01 persons per household in ____ [Year], compared to 2.41 persons per household in _____[Year].

So far in the _____[Year], single-family housing sales have been brisk, with record sales in _____[Year] and thus far in _____[Year]. The area ranks 48th in new homes built in _____[Year], with 3,510 new homes the first half of _____[Year]. New apartment construction totaled over 6,000 units from _____[Year] through _____[Year], or an average of 1,545 per year. New multifamily units only totaled 40 in _____[Year] and 140 for the first six months of _____[Year]. Most of the new apartment construction has been concentrated south of the City of Birmingham along the U.S. Highway 280 and U.S. Highway 31 corridors. Looking forward, the average household size is not expected to continue to decline indefinitely. The growth in housing, therefore, should equal the population growth plus the replacement of obsolete housing.

EMPLOYMENT

In the _____[Year], the average annual growth in employment in the MSA was 3,520, compared to 8,290 per year during the _____[Year]. So far, in the _____[Year], the region is averaging 3,233 new jobs each year. The unemployment rate at the end of _____[Year] was 6.1 percent, compared to 7.3 percent and 7.4 percent for the state of Alabama and the U.S., respectively.

TABLE 2 EMPLOYMENT BY SECTOR

SECTOR	PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL LABOR DOLLARS	PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL ESTABLISHMENTS
Health Services	11.7%	6.5%
Other Services	14.0%	26.5%
Manufacturing	15.7%	5.7%

Mining & Agricultural	3.5%	1.4%
Miscellaneous	0.2%	3.6%
REGION	100.0%	100.0%

Source: Birmingham Chamber of Commerce

In _____[Year], manufacturing accounted for 28.3 percent of the employment in the MSA. By _____[Year], manufacturing only accounted for 13.1 percent of the area's employment. The manufacturing jobs have been replaced with service jobs. The service sector accounts for 25.4 percent of all jobs in _____[Year], versus 14.3 percent in _____[Year].

As of April _____[Year], the largest employers in the Birmingham MSA are as follows:

University of Alabama	15,696
U.S. Government	9,501
South Central Bell	7,450
State of Alabama	6,304
Birmingham City Schools	4,733
Alabama Power Company	4,611

INCOME

Jefferson County and the Birmingham MSA are very representative of the average per capita income and average household income in the United States. Table 3 below shows the area's income averages compared to the entire U.S.

TABLE 3

COUNTY	AVERAGE PER CAPITA	PERCENT OF U.S. AVERAGE	AVERAGE HOUSEHOLD INCOME	PERCENT OF U.S. AVER- AGE
Blount	$13,135	70%	$27,219	77%

Walker	14,556	78%	26,585	75%
MSA	17,479	94%	34,315	100%

Jefferson County has approximately the same per capita income and household income as the national average.

In summary, metropolitan Birmingham has experienced a slow but stable growth rate in recent years. Its economic base is diverse. National trends of a lower manufacturing work force and lower household size have also been the experience in Birmingham.

DESCRIPTIVE DATA

NEIGHBORHOOD ANALYSIS

The subject neighborhood is identified as the "Southside" area of Birmingham. This area is just south of the Central Business District (CBD) of Birmingham and east of the Red Mountain Expressway. This neighborhood is bounded on the north by the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB), on the east by the Red Mountain Expressway (U.S. Highway 31), on the south by Red Mountain with the famous Vulcan Statue, and on the west by Interstate 65. A map of the neighborhood is located in the Exhibit Section.

The Southside includes many of the city's old restored homes. The Highland/Five-Points area has undergone considerable renovation, and is becoming a restaurant and entertainment center. The subject medical office building, which is part of the WellHealth Medical Center, is located one-quarter-mile west of the Highland/Five-Points area, and just north of Red Mountain. The upscale residential communities of Homewood and Mountain Brook are located just south and east of the Southside. The property is situated at 1313 13th Street South. The block bounded by 13th Place South, 12th Avenue South and 13th Street South contains the subject building. East and south of the property are primarily older residential areas. The WellHealth Medical Center and the WellHealth Professional Condominium Building are situated to the west of the property. Some homes have been converted to commercial uses around the hospital. A few neighboring parcels have been redeveloped with small apartment buildings, including the site just south of the property.

North of the WellHealth Medical Center is UAB, which is reportedly now the second largest university in Alabama. The university has been growing rapidly and has absorbed most of the land uses in a six by fifteen block area. The UAB Medical Center is considered by some to be in the same class as the Mayo Clinic in some medical research fields.

In summary, the neighborhood is an older residential area that is undergoing renovation and restoration. Development in the area is being driven primarily by hospital growth which includes the subject WellHealth Medical Center, the UAB Medical Center and St. Vincent Medical Center. Although medical service is the focus of new development, new retail, restaurant and residential development is also active in the area.

ZONING

The subject property is zoned "COI, Conditional Office and Institutional District," by the City of Birmingham. According to the City zoning requirements, the office and institutional district provides "for the orderly arrangement of institutional, clerical and administrative space". Permitted uses include public, semi-private or private office; public or semi-private, religious, educational or charitable institutions; and, other similar uses consistent with this zoning code's purpose and surrounding uses. This zoning shall not include properties with industrial characteristics, communal living facilities or correctional institutions.

The subject's "conditional" zoning provided for the specific medical services property that was constructed on the site. The owners of the building were reportedly granted setback and parking variances prior to the construction of the building. Since the site plan was approved prior to construction, and the occupancy permit received after construction, it is assumed that the property conforms to all the required conditions of zoning. The zoning variance may have provided for an easement with the hospital for additional parking spaces on the north side of the property. A letter of zoning compliance from the City of Birmingham is recommended for an official determination regarding any zoning conformity issues.

REAL ESTATE TAXES AND ASSESSMENTS

The subject property is situated in the City of Birmingham, and subject to the taxing authority of the City and Jefferson County. Commercial properties in the City and County are assessed at 20 percent of tax-appraised value for tax purposes. The subject's tax-appraised values and assessed values are summarized as follows:

	TAX APPRAISAL MARKET VALUE	ASSESSMENT VALUES
Land	192,000	$ 38,400
Improvements	$2,147,980	429,597
Total	$2,339,980	$467,996

The ____[Year] millage rate is $69.50 per $1,000 of assessed value. The ____[Year] taxes are calculated as follows:

$$$467,996/$1,000 \times $69.50 = $32,526$$

SITE ANALYSIS

The subject site is rectangularly-shaped with frontage of 240 feet on the east side of 13th Street South and 240 feet along the west side of 13th Place South. The subject site is 185.9 feet deep between the two streets. It contains 44,616 square feet, or 1.0242 acres. A survey showing the site containing 48,001 square feet is included in the Exhibit Section. The subject site is this survey site excluding 3,385 square feet that is now a hospital parking lot on the north side of the building. This survey is the subject property, excluding 3,385 square feet that is now a hospital parking lot on the north side of the building.

A legal description of the 48,001 square foot site was provided to the appraisers and is included in the Exhibit Section. A current survey and legal description of the subject 44,616 square feet was not available to the appraisers at the time of this report. We reserve the right to modify our report if the actual acreage is found to vary significantly from the 44,616 square feet.

The topography of the site slopes slightly downward from the parking lot on its south end to its north end adjoining the hospital parking lot. The front and main entrance to the building is on the first or ground floor. Entrance to the building from the south end parking lot is on the second floor of the building. The subject building is located on a hill and does not contain any flood plain.

Utilities serving the site include water, sewer, telephone, gas and electricity. Police services and fire protection are located in the neighborhood.

Other site improvements consists of general landscaping, asphalt paving, concrete paving and curbing, some shrubs and general signage. The parking lot to the north of the building contains 26 parking spaces, including two handicap spaces. We are not aware of any detrimental easements or encroachments encumbering the site. Further, we assume that the subject site is not encumbered with detrimental easements or encroachments. A copy of a Jefferson County tax plat map is included in the Exhibit Section.

To our knowledge, no environmental study has been conducted on the subject site. As appraisers, we are not qualified to detect hazardous materials. Consequently, our report assumes that there are no environmentally hazardous materials in the site or building that would adversely affect the subject property's value.

BUILDING AND SITE IMPROVEMENTS

The ASMI Building was constructed in ____[Year]. It contains 30,144 gross square feet and 27,800 leasable square feet on three floors. The rentable area excludes the mechanical rooms and vertical penetrations (stairwells, elevator shafts). The building area by floor is shown on floor plans included in the Exhibit Section of this report.

The building is a three-story, reinforced concrete and steel structure building, with a dryvit and brick veneer exterior. The entire building is sprinklered. The building has a metal deck roof structure, with a waterproof membrane roof and large-stone gravel covering. Ceiling heights are approximately nine and one-half feet on the first floor and nine feet on the second and third floors. Ceiling finishes consists of acoustical ceiling tiles and recessed fluorescent lighting and cone directional lights. The interior walls are wall paper on gypsum board over metal studs.

Air conditioning is supplied via Trane packaged units on each floor. A gas-fired Teledyne boiler provides heated air to the building. A natural gas emergency generator is located in the back of the building. The second floor of the building contains a computer room with raised floors.

The interior floors are mostly carpeted, with some vinyl and ceramic tile in the lab and bathroom areas. Windows and doors are metal framed, and interior doors are solid-core wood. The first floor contains the lobby, office and patient rooms, a laboratory area and a two-story gymnasium or rehab area. The second floor contains a library, a conference room, offices, a staff lounge and a television studio.

A detail description of the building and site improvements are included in the Exhibit Section of this report.

CONDITION OF IMPROVEMENTS AND OBSOLESCENCE

The building is new and in good condition. There is no deferred maintenance, functional or economic obsolescence. The top floor of the building contains 3,091 gross square feet and 2,607 net leasable square feet. The tenant finish work has not yet been completed on this space, and the floor is currently vacant. Since the master lease provides for WellHealth guaranteeing income on this space, this report assumes that WellHealth will complete the tenant finish work prior to prospective sale to the REIT.

HIGHEST AND BEST USE

The Appraisal Institute defines "highest and best use" as follows:

"The reasonably probable and legal use of vacant land or an improved property, which is physically possible, appropriately supported, financially feasible, and that results in the highest value"

[The Appraisal of Real Estate, Page 45, 10th Edition published by The Appraisal Institute].

The four categories of highest and best use analysis are:

1. Physically Possible--Uses which are physically possible for the site and improvements being analyzed.
2. Legally Permissible--Uses permitted by zoning and deed restrictions applicable to the site and improvements being analyzed.
3. Financially Feasible--This step identifies if the physically possible and legally permitted alternatives produce a net income equal to or greater than the amount needed to satisfy operating expenses.
4. Maximally Productive--This step clarifies which of the financially feasible alternatives provides the highest value consistent with the rate of return warranted by the market for a particular use.

There are two types of highest and best use: THE HIGHEST AND BEST USE OF LAND AS VACANT and THE HIGHEST AND BEST USE OF A PROPERTY AS IMPROVED. Both types are discussed as follows using the four categories of highest and best use.

As Vacant

The purpose of this analysis, given the site is vacant or can easily be made vacant, is to determine if something should be constructed on the site, and, if so, what should be constructed on the site.

PHYSICALLY POSSIBLE

The size and shape of the subject site is adequate for the development of a number of alternative uses including small residential, commercial, office/institutional, industrial and special-purpose properties. The site possesses good access and visibility. The size of the parcel would preclude any large developments.

LEGALLY PERMISSIBLE

As stated earlier in the Zoning section of this report, the property is currently zoned "COI, Conditional Office and Institutional." Permitted uses in this general zoning category vary widely. Potential legal uses would include some retail and restaurants, office/institutional, hotels, hospitals and other medically-oriented uses. The subject's conditional zoning provided for the construction of the subject medical facility, with variances for setbacks and parking received prior to construction.

Surrounding uses include the hospital, other professional office uses, some apartments and some old single-family residential properties. These use patterns would likely preclude industrial, retail or future single-family development on the site.

FINANCIALLY FEASIBLE

Having established that the site is physically suited for and legally restricted to office/institutional development, the next consideration is economic feasibility. Financially feasible uses for the site, if vacant, are those uses that would generate an economic return to the land. New hospital related development on the west side of the building indicates that new development is financially feasible. WellHealth Medical Center, UAB Medical Center and St. Vincent Medical Center have all recently built new medical office facilities.

MAXIMALLY PRODUCTIVE

The maximally productive use is a financially feasible use that would produce the greatest land value. Office/institutional use is physically possible and legally permissible, and new development is financially feasible. Based on this analysis, the current highest and best use of the land, if vacant, would be for office/institutional development based on the growth needs of the hospital.

As Improved

The subject site is currently improved with a 27,800 rentable square foot professional building and associated site improvements. The purpose of this discussion is to determine whether to leave the improvements as they are, to modify the improvements or to remove the improvements.

PHYSICALLY POSSIBLE

It would obviously be physically possible to leave the improvements as they are, to demolish the existing improvements and replace them with new improvements, or to modify existing improvements. The improvements were recently constructed and are considered functional.

LEGALLY PERMISSIBLE

The building, as improved, is assumed to be a legal conforming use, since the property was recently constructed and received an occupancy permit. Under the current zoning, the property could remain as it is, be torn down or renovated.

FINANCIALLY FEASIBLE

The highest and best use of the land, if vacant, was to develop with an office/ institutional use based on the adjacent hospital's growth needs. Of the physically possible and legally permissible changes that could be made to the existing facility, demolishing the building would significantly reduce the current asset value, and would not be financially feasible. The only financially feasible use of the existing improvements is its current use as medical office space.

MAXIMALLY PRODUCTIVE

The maximally productive use for the existing property is the financially feasible use that produces the greatest property value. The existing use was the only financially feasible use. The highest and best use, as improved, is the property's current use.

VALUATION SECTION

VALUATION METHODOLOGY

There are three principal methods to estimate the market value of the assets of the subject property. These are summarized as follows:

COST APPROACH: This method is based on the principle of substitution, whereby no investor would prudently pay more for a property than it costs to buy land and build a comparable new building. The market value is estimated by calculating the replacement costs of a new building and subtracting all forms of depreciation and obsolescence present in the existing facility. This provides a depreciated value of the subject improvements if replaced new. The estimate of the current value of the subject land is then added to provide a market value of the property.

DIRECT SALES COMPARISON APPROACH: The principle of substitution also says that market value can be estimated as the cost of acquiring an equally desirable substitute property, assuming no costly delay in making the substitution. This method analyses the sales of other comparable improved properties. Since two properties are rarely identical, the necessary adjustments for differences in quality, location, size, services and market appeal are a function of appraisal experience and judgment.

INCOME APPROACH: This method is based on the principle of anticipation, which recognizes that underlying value of the subject property can be estimated by its cash flow or stream of earnings. This approach simulates the future earnings for the property, and converts those earnings into a present market value estimate.

Consideration has been given to each of the three methods to arrive at a final opinion of value. The application of each approach to value is further discussed in the appropriate sections which follow.

COST APPROACH

In the Cost Approach, the subject property is valued based upon the market value of the land, as if vacant, to which is added the depreciated replacement cost of the improvements. The replacement cost new of the improvements is adjusted for accrued depreciation resulting from physical deterioration, functional obsolescence, and external (or economic) obsolescence.

The sum of the market value of the land and the depreciated replacement cost of the improvements and equipment is the estimated market value via the Cost Approach.

- Land Valuation
- Land valuation, assuming the site is vacant, is based upon the following steps:
 - A comparison with recent sales and/or asking prices for similar land.
 - Interviews with reliable real estate brokers and other informed sources who are familiar with local real estate activity.
 - Our experience in estimating land values.

The following sales are located within the general market area of the subject property and are considered to be representative of market activity and conditions as of the valuation date. Unless otherwise indicated, the sales involved arms-length transactions that conveyed a fee simple interest, and only real property was included in the transactions.

Discussion of Land Comparables

LAND COMPARABLE 1 was one parcel of 15 that were assembled by the hospital around what is now the U.S. Sports Med Complex. Downward adjustments are indicated because of the more level topography of this comparable parcel and because of its smaller size. The adjustments are shown on a Land Sale Adjustment Grid at the end of this discussion. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $16.40 per square foot.

LAND COMPARABLE 2 was a parcel containing an old house. The site was purchased by the hospital for future parking needs of the hospital. The improvements were not considered to have any significant value. A large upward adjustment is indicated because of the inferior location of this parcel compared to the subject that is adjacent to the hospital. Downward adjustments are indicated because of the comparable's level topography and its smaller size. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $9.30.

LAND COMPARABLE 3 was a 45,600 square foot parcel north of the hospital that contained a Methodist Church. The church has relocated and the land is being used for hospital overflow parking. The remaining building is reportedly scheduled to be removed in the near future. Downward adjustments are indicated because of the declining economy since this purchase and because of the level topography of this site. The adjusted price for this comparable is $28.12 per square foot.

LAND COMPARABLE 4 is a parcel that UAB purchased for future parking or development. It is located one-quarter-mile south of the UAB campus. An upward adjustment is indicated due to the inferior location of this comparable. A downward adjustment is indicated for size. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $14.85.

LAND COMPARABLE 5 is the current listing of a site just north of UAB Medical Center. This site is zoned for high rise development. A significant downward adjustment is indicated because this is a listing rather than an actual sale. Downward adjustments are also indicated for location, topography and due to the superior zoning density of this site. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $32.73 per square foot. The adjusted land prices range from $9.30 per square foot to $32.73 per square foot, with the prices of the most comparable sites being in the middle of this range. Based on our analysis of the subject versus these comparables, it is our opinion that a land price of $18.25 per square is representative of the subject site. The average price per square foot for the land assembled around what is now the U.S. Sports Med Complex was $18.16 per square foot. The subject land value is estimated as follows:

Building and Site Improvements

The building and site improvements have been valued on the basis of replacement cost less accumulated depreciation. The cost new was estimated via the segregated cost method, with cost factors obtained from Marshall Valuation Services, Inc., a national cost manual. The unit cost includes both direct and indirect costs, with adjustments made for special building features, construction quality, time and location. The composite unit cost has then been applied to the gross square footage of the building to derive the replacement cost new. The total project replacement costs for the subject building are estimated to be $3,176,887 using Marshall Valuation Services. A schedule at the end of this section shows the estimated replacement cost by category for the subject building plus estimates of all forms of depreciation.

The total accumulated depreciation of a structure represents the loss in value due to physical deterioration, functional obsolescence, or external (or economic) obsolescence. Economic life of a structure or improvement is the period over which they contribute to the value of the property. These terms are defined as follows:

Physical Deterioration: The loss in value due to deterioration or ordinary wear and tear, i.e., natural forces taking their toll of the improvements. This begins at the time the building is completed and continues throughout its physical life.

Functional Obsolescence: The loss in value due to poor plan, functional inadequacy, or super-adequacy due to size, style, design, or other items. This form of depreciation occurs in both curable or incurable forms.

External (or Economic) Obsolescence: The loss in value caused by forces outside the property itself. It can take many forms such as excessive noise levels, traffic congestion, abnormally high crime rates, or any other factors which affect a property's ability to produce an economic income, thereby causing a decline in desirability. Other forms of economic obsolescence may include governmental restrictions, excessive taxes, or economic trends.

Economic Life: The economic life of a good quality medical office buildings is typically 40 to 50 years. For the subject Class B building, we have assumed an economic life of 45 years.

Remaining Economic Life: Remaining economic life can be defined as the number of years remaining in the economic life of the structure or structural components as of the date of the appraisal.

Marshall Valuation Services, Inc., and the actual experience of other buildings in the market, were used to estimate the overall economic life of the improvements. The assignment of economic lives assumed that, except for the building shell and foundation, building components would be replaced periodically over the life of the building.

Physical Depreciation

The amount of physical depreciation and obsolescence in the subject building is judged normal for a building of this age. Observation of the subject property indicated that the structure and related component parts have been adequately maintained through a continuous maintenance service program.

The subject property was constructed in early ____ [Year], and it is in excellent to good condition. After taking into consideration all significant physical factors affecting the subject property, it is judged that the subject has an effective age equal to its actual age of one and one-half years. The remaining useful life is estimated to be 43.5 years. This translates into a physical depreciation estimate of 3.3 percent (1.5 years divided by 45 years). The amount of depreciation attributable to the property has been estimated on a straight-line basis, which is founded on the assumption that depreciation of a property occurs equally throughout its economic life.

The elements which make up site improvements have shorter economic lives than the building. We have estimated the aggregate useful lives of these items to be 15 years with an effective age of one and one-half years and a remaining useful life of 13.5 years. Therefore, the depreciation rate attributable to the site improvements on a straight-line basis is estimated to be approximately 10.0 percent. Entrepreneurial profit and miscellaneous replacement costs are depreciated at a blended depreciate rate.

We also requested the actual construction costs for the property, since it was completed in early ____[Year]. The total costs of the improvements was reported by WellHealth to be $2,973,780, including architectural and engineering expenses but excluding any profit. The detailed cost information was not audited by the appraisers, but is assumed to be correct. The total replacements costs via the Marshall Valuation Service, excluding the entrepreneurial profit, was approximately $200,000 higher than the WellHealth costs.

The actual development costs of $2,973,780 for the subject property is considered more reliable than the Marshall numbers because of the special-purpose nature of the subject building. We, however, believe that an entrepreneurial profit of 10.0 percent is normal and customary in the market to encourage new development. Including the entrepreneurial profit of 10.0 percent, or $297,378, the total building replacement costs are $3,271,158.

Total depreciation is estimated at $109,509, based on 3.3 percent depreciation of building replacement costs and 10.0 percent depreciation of site improvements. The total depreciated value of the subject replacement costs is $3,271,158 less $109,509, or $3,161,649. The $815,000 land value is added to the depreciated replacement costs, for a final Cost Approach value of $3,976,649.

Cost Approach Conclusion

Based on the investigation as previously defined, the market value of the subject property by the Cost Approach, as of September 29, ____[Year], is rounded to:

DIRECT SALES COMPARISON APPROACH

The Direct Sales Comparison Approach is based upon the principle of substitution; that is, when a property is replaceable in the market, its value tends to be set at the cost of acquiring an equally desirable substitute property, assuming there is no costly delay in making the substitution. Since two properties are rarely identical, the necessary adjustments for differences in quality, location, size, services and market appeal are a function of appraisal experience and judgment.

The Direct Sales Comparison Approach gives consideration to actual sales of other similar properties with adjustments as previously stated. The sales prices are analyzed in common denominators and applied to the subject property in respective categories to be indicative of market value.

The unit of comparison used in this analysis is the price per square foot, which is the gross purchase price of the building divided by the net leasable area in the building. The following sales are considered to be representative of market activity and conditions as of the valuation date. Unless otherwise indicated, the sales involved arm's length transactions that conveyed a fee simple interest, and only real property was included in the transactions. Also, all purchase prices quoted in this report represent all cash sales unless seller financing is noted and the sale prices adjusted for cash equivalency.

In our analysis, we obtained details on four professional office building sales which have occurred over the past two years. The terms of the sale and significant data was verified to the extent possible by county deed records and with parties to the transaction. Information on these sales is shown on the following pages:

The Grantor was an affiliate of WellHealth Medical Center. The hospital paid more than market value for the building, so the Grantee/physician would move his surgical practice to the WellHealth Medical Center. The location and building quality for this comparable are very inferior to the subject property.

COMMENTS

This is a two-story office building that was constructed specifically for a dental practice. The construction is wood frame with brick veneer siding. It is situated among the Lenox Pointe Office buildings at the intersection of Lenox Road and Buford Highway.

These four sales are summarized as follows:

		SUMMARY OF IMPROVED SALES
SAL E NO	ADDRESS	RENTABLE (SQUARE FEET)	SALE PRICE	PRICE PER SQUARE FOOT
1	Independence Court Birmingham, Alabama	6.928	$ 850,000	$ 122.69

4	38A Lenox Pointe Atlanta, Georgia	1,200	$	184,000	$	153.33

The unadjusted prices of these comparables range from $84.13 per square foot to $153.33 per square foot. Each of the comparables will be discussed and adjusted for comparisons with the subject property. An Improved Sales Adjustment Matrix is shown at the end of this section.

SALE 1 is a Class C professional office building that is located near the Brookwood Medical Center. An affiliate of WellHealth Medical Center purchased this building to entice its physician/owner to move his practice to their facility. This transaction was reportedly at a market value price. However, a downward adjustment is still indicated because the building was not marketed as a vacant building due to this relationship. A downward adjustment to the price per square foot is indicated because of the smaller size of this comparable. The building is located at the end of a steep winding road, and has poor visibility. An upward adjustment is indicated due to this inferior location compared to the subject. Upward adjustments to this comparable are also indicated because of the subject's superior construction quality and because the building is new. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $130.36.

SALE 2 is the sale of a building purchased by UAB to use as a Medical Genetics Center. Upward adjustments are indicated because of the subject's superior location, and because of the older age of this comparable. An upward adjustment to the price per square foot of this comparable is also indicated because it is larger than the subject building. The adjusted price for this comparable is $121.99 per square foot.

SALE 3 was the sale of a three-building professional office facility that is located approximately one-quarter-mile from the North Fulton Medical Center in Roswell, Georgia. A downward adjustment is indicated because 80 percent of this facility was net leased to the hospital. An upward adjustment is indicated because of the subject's slightly superior location. The adjusted price per square foot of this comparable is $125.31.

SALE 4 was the August ____ [Year] sale of a small dental office building in Atlanta, Georgia. A large downward adjustment to the price per foot of this comparable is indicated because of the comparable's small size. Upward adjustments are indicated for location and for quality of improvements. The adjusted price for this comparable is $145.66 per square foot.

The adjusted prices per square foot range from $121.99 to $145.66, with most of the adjusted sales prices in the lower end of this range. An adjusted price of $125.00 per square foot is representative of the subject property. Based on this analysis, the market value of the subject property by the Direct Sales Comparison Approach, as of September 29, ____ [Year], the effective date of this report, is calculated as follows:

INCOME APPROACH

The Income Approach is based on the principle of anticipation, and has as its premise that value is represented by the present worth of expected future benefits. The price that an investor will pay for an income property usually depends on the anticipated income stream. The Income Approach represents an attempt to simulate the future cash flows for the property, and to quantify the future benefits in present dollars.

The subject property is one of nine professional office buildings that WellHealth is selling for the purpose of establishing a real estate investment trust (REIT). WellHealth Rehabilitation Corporation, the seller, will provide a net rental guarantee, in the form of a master lease. The REIT, as the new property owner, will receive the net rental master lease rate per square foot of rentable office area, regardless of the rental rates charged or received from the actual physician/tenants.

This master lease is a credit enhancement vehicle that will enable the REIT issuer to sell the REIT shares. It will also allow WellHealth leasing flexibility for the office space. WellHealth can lease office space to various physicians at different rates and terms, or they can use the office space for hospital purposes.

The appraisers received a draft of the form of master lease agreement, but the actual master lease agreement for each property are not yet available. For the purpose of our Income Approach, the gross income will be the master lease rate for each property times the rentable building area. We reserve the right to modify the Income Approach valuation if the actual master lease for each property differs significantly from the draft lease presented to us.

As discussed earlier, this report assumes that the tenant finish work on the top floor of this building will be completed prior to the prospective sale to the REIT.

The master lease rate for the subject property will be $12.00 per square foot of net rentable area. The gross income for the subject property is calculated as follows:

$$27,800 \text{ SF} \times $12.00/\text{SF} = $333,600$$

The subject appraisal assumes 100 percent of the income is guaranteed through the master lease agreement. Since the leased fee interest is being appraised, there is no deduction for vacancy or credit loss.

Since the master lease provides for an income level to the REIT net of all operating expenses, the only out-of-pocket expenses to the REIT will be accounting, legal and internal administration or management expenses. These management expenses are estimated at 5.0 percent of effective gross income, or $16,680, based on the management experience of other properties. The net operating income for the property is $333,600 less $16,680, or $316,920.

The estimated direct capitalization rates, or overall rates (OARs), for the four improved sale comparables presented in the Direct Sales Comparison Approach Section of this report are summarized as follows:

Sale No.	Property Location	Sale Date	OAR (%)
1	Independence Court Birmingham, Alabama	March [Year]	8.0%
2	20th Street South Birmingham, Alabama	December [Year]	9.0%
3	Upper Hembree Roswell, Georgia	November [Year]	10.1%
4	Lenox Pointe Atlanta, Georgia	August [Year]	8.2%

The direct capitalization, or overall rates, for these comparables ranged from 8.0 percent to 10.1 percent.

Since the market net income per square foot for the subject property is estimated to be the master lease rate of $12.00, a capitalization rate in the middle of this range, or 9.0 percent, is considered appropriate for the property.

It is, therefore, our opinion that the market value of the subject property by the Income Approach is calculated and rounded as follows:

Net Operating Income/OAR = Estimated Value

Rounded to: $3,520,000

CORRELATION AND CONCLUSION

We have considered three approaches to value in order to estimate the value of the 1313 13th Street South Office Building. The three approaches are summarized as follows:

Cost Approach _____	$3,975,000
Direct Sales Comparison Approach _____	$3,475,000
Income Approach _____	$3,520,000

The Cost Approach involved a detailed analysis of the individual components of the property. These costs were estimated using reliable sources, including an estimator service and the actual costs provided by the building owners. The Cost Approach is usually considered a good indicator of value for a new special purpose property such as the subject. Some actual costs, however, may not translate into a higher value in the eyes of some prospective investors or property buyers. Overall, this approach is considered a good indicator of value.

The Direct Sales Comparison Approach is based on the price that investors and owner-occupants have recently paid for comparable professional office buildings. The quality and quantity of data available in this approach was considered good, but two of the four sales were not properties located in the Birmingham market. The appraisers only consider this approach to be a fair indicator of value for the subject property.

The Income Approach normally provides the most reliable value estimate for multi-tenant professional office buildings. The subject property is a special purpose facility that would likely be occupied by one or a very few number of tenants. For this reason, the Income Approach is only considered a fair indicator of value for the subject.

Based on this analysis, it is our opinion that the market value of the 1313 13th Street South Office Building, as of September 29, ____ [Year], and based on the assumptions and limiting conditions in this report, is:

FORM 22A.03

Real estate investment trust offering--amendment to Form S-11 registration statement

COMMENT

Generally, one or more amendments will be filed with respect to an S-11 registration statement. The amendment may be necessary for a variety of reasons. Often, the SEC will review the registration statement and communicate its comments to the registrant; those comments may require or strongly suggest changes to the material in the prospectus filed in Part I of the registration statement. A second reason that amendments are often filed is to provide more recent financial information regarding the registrant and/or its affiliates. Third, amendments are often used to file one or more documents as exhibits and/or to provide information which was not available at the time of the original filing.

Form 22A.03 contains a second amendment which was filed in connection with the REIT S-11 registration statement which is the subject of Form 22A.01. This Amendment included a completely revised prospectus in Part I (which is not set forth in this Form) and also provided new or revised information for Part II and additional exhibits. In particular, the second amendment completed the information as to expenses of issuance and distribution in Item 30; the original registration statement indicated (as was the case with several other items and/or exhibits) that the information would be provided by amendment. This amendment also furnished additional financial statements, some of which were included in the prospectus and others of which were not. Finally, additional documents were filed as exhibits with Amendment No. 2.

INFORMATION NOT REQUIRED IN PROSPECTUS

ITEM 30. QUANTITATIVE AND QUALITATIVE DISCLOSURES ABOUT MARKET RISK

The Company may be exposed to interest rate changes primarily as a result of long-term debt bearing interest at variable rates that the Company will likely incur to acquire properties and make loans and other permitted investments. The Company's interest rate risk management objectives will be to limit the impact of interest rate changes on earnings and cash flows and to lower overall borrowing costs. To achieve these objectives, the Company expects to borrow primarily at fixed rates or variable rates with the lowest margins available and, in some cases, with the ability to convert variable rates to fixed rates. With regard to variable rate financing, the Company will assess interest rate cash flow risk by continually identifying and monitoring changes in interest rate exposures that may adversely impact expected future cash flows and by evaluating hedging opportunities.

ITEM 33. RECENT SALES OF UNREGISTERED SECURITIES

The Company sold an aggregate of 180,000 shares of Common Stock to the four Founding Stockholders for an aggregate of $180 on March 31, [Year], pursuant to the exemption from registration contained in Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended.

ITEM 34. INDEMNIFICATION OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS

The MGCL permits a Maryland corporation to include in its charter a provision limiting the liability of its directors and officers to the corporation and its stockholders for money damages except for liability resulting from (i) actual receipt of an improper benefit or profit in money, property or services or (ii) active and deliberate dishonesty established by a final judgment as being material to the cause of action. The Charter of the Company contains such a provision which limits such liability to the maximum extent permitted by the MGCL.

The Charter of the Company authorizes it to obligate itself to indemnify and to pay or reimburse reasonable expenses in advance of final disposition of a proceeding to directors, officers, employees and agents of the Company to the fullest extent permitted by Maryland law. The Bylaws of the Company obligate it to indemnify and to pay or reimburse reasonable expenses in advance of final disposition of a proceeding to (a) any present or former director or officer who is made a party to the proceeding by reason of his service in that capacity or (b) any individual who, while a director of the Company and at the request of the Company, serves or has served another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan or any other enterprise as a director, officer, partner or trustee of such corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, employee benefit plan, or other enterprise and who is made a party to the proceeding by reason of his service in that capacity. The Bylaws also permit the Company to indemnify and advance expenses to any person who served a predecessor of the Company in any of the capacities described above and to any employee or agent of the Company or a predecessor of the Company.

The MGCL requires a corporation (unless its charter provides otherwise, which the Company's Charter does not) to indemnify a director or officer who has been successful, on the merits or otherwise, in the defense of any proceeding to which he is made a party by reason of his service in that capacity. The MGCL permits a corporation to indemnify its present and former directors and officers, among others, against judgments, penalties, fines, settlements and reasonable expenses actually incurred by them in connection with any proceeding to which they may be made a party by reason of their service in those or other capacities unless it is established that (a) the act or omission of the director or officer was material to the matter giving rise to the proceeding and (i) was committed in bad faith or (ii) was the result of active and deliberate dishonesty, (b) the director or officer actually received an improper personal benefit in money, property or services or (c) in the case of any criminal proceeding, the director or officer had reasonable cause to believe that the act or omission was unlawful. However, a Maryland corporation may not indemnify for an adverse judgment in a suit by or in the right of the corporation. In addition, the MGCL requires the Company, as a condition to advancing expenses, to obtain (a) a written affirmation by the director or officer of his good faith belief that he has met the standard of conduct necessary for indemnification by the Company as authorized by the Bylaws and (b) a written statement by or on his behalf to repay the amount paid or reimbursed by the Company if it shall ultimately be determined that the standard of conduct was not met.

Indemnification under the provisions of the MGCL is not deemed exclusive of any other rights, by indemnification or otherwise, to which a director may be entitled under the Charter, Bylaws, resolution of stockholders or directors, contract or otherwise.

The Company undertakes to provide to the Underwriters at the Closing specified in the Underwriting Agreement certificates in such denominations and registered in such names as required by the Underwriters to permit prompt delivery to each purchaser.

Insofar as indemnification for liabilities arising under the Securities Act may be permitted to directors, officers and controlling persons of the registrant, the registrant has been advised that in the opinion of the Commission such indemnification is against public policy as expressed in the Securities Act and is, therefore, unenforceable. In the event that a claim for indemnification against such liabilities (other than the payment by the registrant of expenses incurred or paid by a director, officer or controlling person of the registrant in the successful defense of any action, suit or proceeding) is asserted by such director, officer or controlling person in connection with the securities being registered, the registrant will, unless in the opinion of its counsel the matter has been settled by controlling precedent, submit to a court of appropriate jurisdiction the question of whether such indemnification by it is against public policy as expressed in the Securities Act and will be governed by the final adjudication of such issue.

- (1) For purposes of determining any liability under the Securities Act, the information omitted from the form of prospectus filed as part of this registration statement in reliance upon Rule 430A and contained in a form of prospectus filed by the registrant pursuant to Rule 424(b)(1) or (4) or 497(h) under the Securities Act shall be deemed to be part of this registration statement as of the time it was declared effective.
- (2) For the purpose of determining any liability under the Securities Act, which post-effective amendment that contains a form of prospectus shall be deemed to be a new registration statement relating to the securities offered therein, and the offering of such securities at that time shall be deemed to be the initial bona fide offering thereof.

A. REIT FORM S-11 REGISTERED OFFERING

28-22A Current Legal Forms for Real Estate FORM 22A.04

AUTHOR: by Robert M. Nelson

FORM 22A.04 Real estate investment trust offering--amendment to Form S-11 registration statement--exhibits--tax counsel opinion letter--factual representations by issuer

COMMENT

As an important assurance and inducement to prospective investors, a REIT offering will commonly include an opinion letter to the issuer from its tax counsel which opines that the entity will qualify as a REIT for tax purposes and that the various tax consequences resulting to the investor will be as described in the prospectus. In order to enable tax counsel to give the requested opinions, many of which depend upon factual matters, the issuer provides to its tax counsel a letter making all relevant factual representations and agreeing that tax counsel is entitled to rely upon such representations in rendering its tax opinions.

Examples of both tax counsel's opinion letter and the issuer's factual representation letter follow in this Form 22A.04. Both of these documents relate to the Form S-11 REIT registration appearing in Form 22A.01 above and were filed by way of an amendment of the type set forth above as Form 22A.03.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

We have acted as tax counsel to American Capital Corporation (the "Company") in connection with the transaction (the "Transaction") described in the Prospectus that constitutes Part I of the Registration Statement filed by the Company with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Securities Act of 1933 on April 15, ____[Year], as amended through the date hereof (the "Prospectus"). In connection with the Transaction, we have been asked to provide opinions on certain federal income tax matters described in the Prospectus. Capitalized terms used in this letter and not otherwise defined herein have the meaning set forth in the Prospectus.

The opinions set forth in this letter are based on relevant provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), of Treasury Regulations thereunder (including Proposed and Temporary Regulations), and interpretations of the foregoing as expressed in court decisions, administrative determinations, and legislative history as of the date hereof. These provisions and interpretations are subject to changes that might result in modification of our opinion.

In rendering the following opinions, we have examined such statutes, regulations, records, certificates and other documents as we have considered necessary or appropriate as a basis for such opinions, including the following: (1) the Prospectus and the Registration Statement (including the Exhibits thereto); (2) the Charter and Bylaws of the Company as in effect on the date hereof; (3) the Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws of Crescent Capital of Alabama, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Company ("CCA"), as in effect on the date hereof; and (4) the Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws of Crescent Capital of Pennsylvania, Inc. (formerly "American Capital of Pennsylvania, Inc."), a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Company ("CCP"), as in effect on the date hereof. In such examination, we have assumed that documents that have been reviewed in proposed form will be executed in substantially the form of the proposed agreements we have reviewed. We have also assumed the genuineness of all signatures, the proper execution of all documents, the authenticity of all documents submitted to us as originals, the conformity to originals of documents submitted to us as copies, and the authenticity of the originals of any copies.

This opinion is based in part on our opinion to be delivered at the closing of the Transaction addressed to the Underwriters that (i) the Company is a validly organized and duly incorporated corporation under the laws of the State of Maryland; (ii) CCA is a validly organized and duly incorporated corporation under the laws of the State of Alabama; and (iii) CCP is a validly organized and duly incorporated corporation under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania.

This opinion is also based on the representations of the Company contained in a letter to us dated June 21, ____[Year], and attached hereto.

We are not aware of any facts or circumstances contrary to or inconsistent with the foregoing representations and assumptions. To the extent that the representations of the Company are with respect to matters set forth in the Code or the applicable Treasury Regulations, we have reviewed with the individuals making such representations the relevant provisions of the Code, applicable Treasury Regulations and published administrative interpretations thereof. Based on the foregoing, we are of the opinion that:

(1) Commencing with the Company's taxable year ending December 31, [Year], and assuming consummation of the Transaction as contemplated in the Prospectus and assuming a timely election of REIT status, the Company will be organized in conformity with the requirements for qualification as a REIT under the Code, and the Company's proposed method of operation will enable it to meet the requirements for qualification and taxation as a REIT.

(2) The discussion in the Prospectus under the heading "Federal Income Tax Considerations" fairly summarizes the federal income tax considerations that are likely to be material to a holder of Common Stock.

For a discussion relating the law to the facts and the legal analysis underlying the opinions set forth in this letter, we incorporate by reference the discussion of federal income tax issues, which we prepared, in the section of the Prospectus under the heading "Federal Income Tax Considerations."

We hereby consent to the filing of this opinion as an exhibit to the Registration Statement and to the use of the name of our firm therein and under the caption "Federal Income Tax Considerations" in the Prospectus filed as a part of the Registration Statement.

Very truly yours,

Etores & Premill, P.C.

NASAA Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR)--Overview: Introduction, Requirements, and Instructions--NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations

COMMENT

The documents appearing below are official documents of the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) which is the body that adopted and promulgated the Small Company Offering Registration. The first part of the document is NASAA's overview of the background, provisions, explanation and instructions regarding the SCOR document. The second part of the document is the official NASAA Statement of Policy which adopted and promulgated SCOR. Since its inception, SCOR has been adopted in the great majority, but not all, of the state jurisdictions. Many states have not adopted SCOR verbatim; thus, it is always prudent to check the state specific SCOR language in a given jurisdiction.

FORM

NASAA Overview of
Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR)

NASAA revised the Form U-7, Disclosure Document on September 28, 1999. The revised Form U-7 has not been adopted by the Securities and Exchange Commission for use as the disclosure document in connection with Regulation A. If you intend to qualify your offering of securities under SEC Regulation A using Model A as the disclosure document, you may be required to use Form U-7, Small Corporate Offering Registration, adopted April 29, 1989.

Introduction, Requirements, and Instructions

Introduction.

Welcome to SCOR. In this document, you will find information on the requirements your company must meet in order to use the Form U-7, called the "SCOR Form," to offer and sell securities. You will find specific instructions on how to complete the Form in the SCOR Manual. It may be helpful to review the entire SCOR Form before responding to any of the items. This will help you determine the appropriate place for the Company's disclosure.

The SCOR Form is not available for use in connection with every type of securities offering. The Form was designed for use by companies seeking to raise capital through a public offering of securities exempt from registration with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) under SEC Regulation A, Rule 504 of SEC Regulation D ("Rule 504"), or Section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933. Your completed SCOR Form will become the main disclosure document for offerings being registered in all states accepting SCOR. A Company offering its securities under SEC Regulation A should check with the SEC to determine whether the SCOR Form may be used as the disclosure document.

The SCOR Form does not have Items that cover all types of industries and businesses. If the Items in the SCOR Form do not cover all the important areas of disclosure about your Company or its business, you may find it necessary to add material disclosure to Item 117, Other Material Factors.

Throughout this document and the SCOR Manual we refer to the Form U-7 as the "SCOR Form" or the "Disclosure Document."

These materials are intended to help small companies understand state securities laws and their filing requirements. You should be aware that the Company must also comply with federal securities laws. Information on complying with these laws is available from the SEC at the following website address: www.sec.gov.

Requirements.

Many jurisdictions require companies that want to use the SCOR Form to sell their securities to comply with the Statement of Policy of the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) regarding Small Company Offering Registrations. Information about NASAA and help for small businesses may be found at the following website address: www.nasaa.org. The provisions of the NASAA Statement of Policy are summarized below:

The Company must:

- be a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company organized under the laws of the United States or Canada;
- not be subject to the reporting requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;
- not be an investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
- not be engaged in petroleum exploration and production, mining, or other extractive industries; and

- not be a development stage company with no specific business plan or purpose other than merger.

Additionally, the Company may not use the SCOR Form to offer and sell its securities if the Company or any of its officers, directors, principal stockholders or promoters are disqualified because of prior violations of the securities laws. The Company also may not use salespersons who are disqualified because of prior violations of the securities laws.

The Company must set an offering price for common stock or common ownership interests that is equal to or greater than US $1.00 per share or unit of interest. The Company must agree with the appropriate securities regulatory agencies that it will not split its common stock, or declare a stock dividend, for two years after effectiveness of the registration if to do so has the effect of lowering the price below US $1.00.

If the Company pays a commission, fee or other remuneration to any person for soliciting any prospective purchaser in connection with the offering, that person must be registered or licensed if required under securities law.

The Company's financial statements must be prepared in accordance with either U.S. or Canadian generally accepted accounting principles. Interim financial statements may be unaudited. All other financial statements must be audited by independent certified public accountants. If certain conditions set out in the Statement of Policy are met, the Company's financial statements, instead of being audited, may be reviewed by an independent certified public accountant in accordance with the Accounting and Review Service Standards promulgated by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants or the Canadian equivalent.

Although summarized above, you should read the Statement of Policy in its entirety.

State securities laws.

State securities laws are designed to provide investors with information needed to make an informed investment decision. Additionally, they are designed to protect investors from being victimized by dishonest promoters of fraudulent business schemes posing as legitimate business enterprises.

In order to comply with state securities laws, you must disclose in the SCOR Form all material information about the Company that a typical investor would want to know before making an investment in the Company. Many state securities laws also require Company promoters to share the potential risks and rewards of holding stock in the Company fairly with public investors. If you file an application to register the company's securities in those states, examiners will review the Company's offering for compliance with substantive standards.

The Company will receive comments from examiners in states in which the SCOR Form is filed. Comments may be limited to requests for disclosure of additional information or may require that certain terms of the offering be modified to comply with a state's substantive standards. Failure to resolve outstanding comments can lead to denial of an application for registration.

If the Company intends to offer its securities in two or more states within a geographic region, you should contact those states to determine if the Company can request regional review. By requesting regional review, the Company will, in most cases, confer with a lead jurisdiction that will coordinate the review and comments of all states within the region in which the Company intends to offer its securities. To link to the various regional review programs, go to the NASAA website at: www.nasaa.org and click on "Corporate Finance".

Prior to completing the SCOR Form, you may wish to contact your local securities regulator to review applicable standards. It may be possible to arrange a pre-filing conference.

General instructions.

You should use "Plain English" in writing the Company's Disclosure Document. If any answer requiring significant information is materially inaccurate, incomplete or misleading, the Company, its management and principal stockholders may be liable to investors. If the Company is using a salesperson to help sell its securities, the salesperson should ask questions to determine that the Disclosure Document is accurate and not misleading, or the salesperson may also be liable.

The SCOR Form when properly filled in, signed and submitted, together with the exhibits scheduled below and a Form U- 1, Uniform Application to Register Securities, constitutes an application to register securities in the states where filed. If the Company is relying on Rule 504, a copy of the Form D that you have filed with the SEC becomes part of the Company's application and you must also file it with the securities regulators. The Company must submit a signed original of the SCOR Form, together with an executed Form U-1 and any other required documents. Certain items on the Form U-1 may not be applicable depending on which federal exemption the Company relies.

You must file a separate Form U-1 in each state in which you want to sell securities indicating the amount of securities being registered in that state. You also must enclose a check for the amount of the filing fee. Each state must separately declare the registration effective by an order to that effect unless that state has some other procedure.

You must reproduce each Item in the SCOR Form exactly as it appears, although the Items or the Company's responses may appear in boldface type in order to distinguish between them. The Items and the Company's responses must appear in the same type size. You should not use script or italic type.

The Company must file an opinion that the securities being offered have been duly authorized and when issued will be legally and validly issued, fully paid and non-assessable and binding on the Company in accordance with their terms. The opinion must be from an attorney licensed to practice in a state or territory of the U.S. or in a province or territory of Canada.

Once the Company's SCOR Form is filled out, filed and declared effective, it becomes the Company's disclosure document. The Company may reproduce the SCOR Form for dissemination to potential investors or may place it on the Internet. You should make sure that the copies that are reproduced are readable and the same as the accepted SCOR form. You should also make sure that no one changes the Form that is given to investors or that is posted on the Internet because the Company may be held responsible for any inaccurate information. Do not include a cover of any type in the document you distribute.

If the Company intends to offer securities, including a public solicitation, before the offering is registered, it must ensure that it has complied with one of the available federal exemptions as well as with applicable state law.

If the Company is relying on an exemption from registration under Rule 504, the Company may not be able to conduct a public solicitation of its securities until the registration has been declared effective in at least one state. If the Company is making an intrastate offering of securities under Section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933 or making an offering under SEC Regulation A, the Company may be able to make offers, but not sales, in certain jurisdictions prior to registration. In all three cases, you should contact the appropriate securities regulator to determine whether that jurisdiction's laws allow you to make an offer or public solicitation before the registration is declared effective.

Examples of activities that the Company may not be able to engage in until the offering is registered include giving the SCOR Form to potential investors, placing it on the Internet, taking orders, giving a potential investor a subscription agreement and taking money in exchange for securities. If the Company offers securities before allowed by the applicable securities laws, securities regulatory agencies may take action to delay or stop the offering, or to order the Company or its management to return money to investors. An action taken by a regulator in one jurisdiction may prevent the offering from going forward in another jurisdiction. When the registration has been declared effective in a state, offers and sales may be made in that state even though registration in other states has not been declared effective.

You must deliver the Disclosure Document to each investor before a sale is made. The securities regulator will issue an order indicating the length of time the registration will be effective. The length of time a registration will remain effective in a particular jurisdiction is usually limited to a one year period, unless renewed.

If a material event concerning the Company or the offering occurs after the registration has been declared effective, and while the offering is still in progress, the Company will need to change its Disclosure Document so that it is accurate and complete. The Company must file its amended Disclosure Document with the appropriate securities regulators. The Company may not use the amended Disclosure Document until the securities regulators have cleared it. If any of the changes would be material to the making of an investment decision by an investor, and if the minimum proceeds have not been raised, the Company must deliver the amended Disclosure Document to persons that have previously subscribed. They must be given the opportunity to rescind or reconfirm their investment.

The Company must file all supplemental selling literature or advertisements announcing the offering with the securities regulator of each state prior to publication or circulation within that state.

You must include financial information about the Company. To do that, you must attach the Company's financial statements to the Disclosure Document. Refer to Item 118 of the SCOR Manual for details about the required financial statements. You also are encouraged to contact the securities regulatory agencies to discuss financial statement requirements, as certain jurisdictions may have financial statement requirements that differ from those disclosed in the SCOR Manual.

You should file the following exhibits with each application to register securities:

- Sales Agreement between the Company and a broker dealer or selling agent.
- Articles of Incorporation or Organizational Documents and all amendments to those documents
- By-Laws, as amended to date
- Any indenture, form of note or other contractual provision containing terms of notes or other debt, or of options, warrants or rights to be offered
- Specimen of security to be offered (including any legend restricting resale)
- Consent to service of process (Form U-2) accompanied by appropriate corporate resolution (Form U-2A), if required
- All advertising or other materials directed to or to be furnished investors in the offering
- Form of impound agreement for impound of proceeds
- Consent to inclusion in Disclosure Document of Accountant's report
- Consent to inclusion in Disclosure Document of Tax Advisor's opinion or description of tax consequences

- Consent to inclusion in Disclosure Document of any evaluation of litigation or administrative action by counsel
- Form of any Subscription Agreement for the purchase of securities in this offering
- Opinion of Counsel
- Computations of responses to Items 10, 34, 37, 40 and 65 (check your work against the Company's financial statements)

Statement of Policy Regarding
Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR)

ADOPTED APRIL 28, 1996

I. Introduction

The following guidelines of the North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. ("NASAA") provide for the uniform treatment of registrations of small company offerings which are exempt from federal registration under Rule 504 of Regulation D, Regulation A, or Rule 147 of the Securities Act of 1933, and are consistent with public investor protection and in the public interest. The Securities administrator ("administrator") may waive any standard set forth in this Policy Statement and may also impose substantive standards not contained in this Policy Statement.

II. Application

The requirements contained in this Policy Statement shall apply to registrations that utilize Registration Form U-7 and are exempt from federal registration under (1) Rule 504 of Regulation D, (2) Regulation A, or (3) Rule 147 of the Securities Act of 1933.

III. Requirements

Registrations covered in this Policy Statement shall meet the following requirements:

A. The issuer shall:

1. be a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company organized under the law of the United States or Canada, or any state, province, or territory or possession thereof, or the District of Columbia, and have its principal place of business in one of the foregoing;
2. not be subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;
3. not be an investment company registered or required to be registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
4. not be engaged in or propose to be engaged in petroleum exploration and production, mining, or other extractive industries;

5. not be a development stage company that either has no specific business plan or purpose or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies or other entity or person; and

6. not be disqualified under Section IV of this Policy Statement.

B. The offering price for common stock or common ownership interests (hereinafter, collectively referred to as common stock), the exercise price for options, warrants, or rights to common stock, or the conversion price for securities convertible into common stock, must be greater or equal to US $1.00 per share or unit of interest. The issuer must agree with the Administrator that it will not split its common stock, or declare a stock dividend for two years after the effective date of the registration if such action has the effect of lowering the price below US $1.00.

C. Commissions, fees, or other remuneration for soliciting any prospective purchaser in connection with the offering in the state are only paid to persons who, if required to be registered or licensed, the issuer believes, and has reason to believe, are appropriately registered or licensed in the state.

D. Financial statements shall be prepared in accordance with either US or Canadian generally accepted accounting principles. If appropriate, a reconciliation note should be provided. If the Company has not conducted significant operations, statements of receipts and disbursements shall be included in lieu of statements of income. Interim financial statements may be unaudited. All other financial statements shall be audited by independent certified public accountants, provided, however, that if each of the following four conditions are met, such financial statements in lieu of being audited may be reviewed by independent certified public accountants in accordance with the Accounting and Review Service Standards promulgated by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants or the Canadian equivalent;

1. the Company shall not have previously sold securities through an offering involving the general solicitation of prospective investors by means of advertising, mass mailing, public meetings, "cold call" telephone solicitation, or any other method directed toward the public;

2. the Company has not been previously required under federal, state, provincial or territorial securities laws to provide audited financial statements in connection with any sale of its securities;

3. the aggregate amount of all previous sales of securities by the Company (exclusive of debt financing with banks and similar commercial lenders) shall not exceed US $1,000,000; and

4. the amount of the present offering does not exceed US $1,000,000.

E. The offering shall be made in compliance with Rule 504 of Regulation D, Regulation A, or Rule 147 of the Securities Act of 1933.

F. The issuer shall comply with the General Instructions to SCOR in Part I of the NASAA SCOR Issuer's Manual.

IV. Disqualifications

A. Unless the Administrator determines that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the disqualification under this section be applied, application for registrations referred to in Section II shall be denied if the issuer, any of its officers, directors, ten percent or greater stockholders, promoters, or selling agents or, any officer, director or partner of any selling agent:

1. has filed an application for registration which is subject to a currently effective stop order entered pursuant to any state or provincial securities laws within five years prior to the filing of the registration statement;
2. has been convicted, within five years prior to the filing of the current application for registration, of any felony involving fraud or deceit, including, but not limited to, forgery, embezzlement, obtaining money under false pretenses, larceny, or conspiracy to defraud;
3. is currently subject to any state or provincial administrative enforcement order or judgment entered by that state's or province's securities administrator within five years prior to the filing of the current application for registration;
4. is subject to any state or provincial administrative enforcement order or judgment in which fraud or deceit, including, but not limited to, making untrue statements of material facts and omitting to state material facts, was found, and the order or judgment was entered within five years prior to the filing of the current application for registration;
5. is subject to any state or provincial administrative enforcement order or judgment which prohibits, denies, or revokes the use of any exemption from registration in connection with the offer, purchase, or sale of securities;
6. is currently subject to any order, judgment, or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction that temporarily, preliminarily, or permanently restrains or enjoins such party from engaging in or continuing any conduct or practice in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, or involving the making of any false filing with the state, entered within five years prior to the filing of the registration statement; or
7. has violated the law of a foreign jurisdiction governing or regulating any aspect of the business of securities or banking or, within the past five years, has been the subject of an action of a securities regulator of a foreign jurisdiction denying, revoking, or suspending the right to engage in the business of securities as a broker-dealer, agent, or investment adviser or is the subject of an action of any securities exchange or self-regulatory organization operating under the authority of the securities regulator of a foreign jurisdiction suspending or expelling such person from membership in such exchange or self-regulatory organization.

B. The prohibitions of Subsections IV.A.1. through 3., and 5. shall not apply if the person subject to the disqualification is duly registered or licensed to conduct securities related business in the state or province in which the administrative order or judgment was entered against such person, or if the broker-dealer employing such person is registered or licensed in the state and the Form B-D filed in the state discloses the order, conviction, judgment, or decree relating to such person.

C. No person disqualified shall act in any capacity other than the capacity for which the person is registered or licensed.

D. Disqualification is automatically waived if the jurisdiction which created the basis for disqualification determines upon a showing of good cause that it is not necessary under the circumstances that registration be denied.

FORM 22A.06 NASAA Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR) Manual--Form U-7 Disclosure Document

COMMENT

The Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR) Manual appearing below has been promulgated by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) to assist persons responsible for preparing the Form U-7 Disclosure Document which is the main part of a SCOR registration. Many states have adopted (and in many instances modified) the SCOR form of Registration proposed by NASAA. The SCOR filing will normally accompany an offering which is relying on a SEC Rule 504 or Regulation A exemption. The filing may be made in a number of state jurisdictions which may have somewhat different provisions in each state's statutory and regulatory material. Since each state's regulatory provisions may vary from the NASAA Form U-7 and the Manual's instructions, it is prudent to review each state's SCOR requirements. As the Manual suggests, each state's securities regulator may be contacted with questions about the state's SCOR statute, regulations, and Form U-7.

After you have completed the entire Disclosure Document, review the page numbers in the Table of Contents against the actual content of the rest of the Disclosure Document as printed. Be particularly careful to check the page numbers in the Table of Contents of the document you file with securities regulatory agencies.

When the Company makes its offering document available in other types of media, such as when the Company e-mails it as an electronic document or places it on its web site, the page numbers will change. Add a note to each page of the Table of Contents stating that the page numbers correspond to the printed version of the Disclosure Document.

RISK FACTORS

1. List in the order of importance the factors that the Company considers to be the most significant risks to an investor.

PURPOSE. The purpose of risk factors is twofold.

- To warn investors of the risks involved in purchasing the security; and
- To protect the Company from later claims that investors were not told all of the material risks.

AVOID GENERALIZED STATEMENTS. You should avoid generalized statements and include risk factors that are specific to the Company and the offering. No specific number of risk factors is required to be identified. Do not respond to Item 1 with a statement that there are no risks to purchasing securities in the offering. Every offering of securities involves risks. Additionally, do not qualify statements of risk in any manner that is intended to minimize the importance of the risks.

RISK FACTORS COMMON TO SMALL COMPANIES. There are several risks that are common to most small companies, especially those in the development stage. These risks include:

- cash flow and liquidity problems;
- inadequate capitalization;
- inexperience of management;
- absence of operating history;
- absence of a market for the company's products or services; and
- absence of a market for its stock or other securities.

OTHER RISK FACTORS. Other risk factors commonly appearing in connection with a securities offering address absence of profitable operations in recent periods, an erratic financial history, the overall financial position of the Company, the nature of the business in which the Company is engaged or proposes to engage, conflicts of interest between the Company and Management, arbitrary establishment of offering price, and reliance on the efforts of a single individual for success in operating the business. This listing is not intended to be inclusive as risks vary according to the nature of the Company's business and the type of security offered.

SPECIAL RISK FACTORS RELATED TO SALES OF PREFERRED STOCK OR DEBT. When a Company sells preferred stock or a debt security, generally the purchaser expects to receive a preference on payments of dividends or interest. Consequently, additional risk factors are required addressing the ability of the Company to pay the preference or repay the debt and the possibility that the preference may not be paid or the debt repaid at all. These risks may be the most important risks disclosed in connection with the offering and you should place them in an appropriate position.

PLACEMENT OF RISK FACTORS. Each risk factor should be stated in a separate concise paragraph. The title of the paragraph should state in specific language the risk discussed in the risk factor. The risk factors should appear in order of importance with the most important risk factors appearing first. If the Company has no operating history or a limited operating history, generally, risks addressing the Company's financial condition should appear first. This is especially true in a debt or preferred stock offering.

You should include cross-references at the end of each risk factor to the place in the Disclosure Document where the risk is discussed in detail. You may find it helpful to write your risk factors and determine their priority after you have completed all the other Items in the Disclosure Document.

Examples of risk factors can be found in Appendix A.

BUSINESS AND PROPERTIES

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF THE BUSINESS

2. Describe the business of the Company, including its products or services.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BUSINESS. Describe the Company's business, focusing on the products or services the Company will be selling. Be brief, but include enough information that a person who knows nothing about the Company's business can understand what the Company does or will do. If the nature of the Company's business is technical, you should consider whether to include definitions or an explanation of terms in your response to this Item.

Cover the Company's main product or service and explain the context in which the Company provides the product or service. Answers that discuss how the Company intends to produce the products belong in Item 3; answers about the Company's competitive strategy belong in Items 13 and 14 and answers that discuss the Company's marketing strategy belong in Item 15.

In describing the business you should answer these questions:

- Who does the Company sell its products or services to?
- Why are customers using the Company's products or services?
- Is the Company's business retail or wholesale?
- Are products made to customer specifications or mass-produced?

PRESENT v. FUTURE OPERATIONS. Your response to this Item must be broken down into its parts:

- What products or services the Company produces or offers now; and
- What products or services the Company proposes to produce or offer in the future.

Generally, you should limit your answers to activities the Company presently engages in and activities in which it intends to engage in the next 12 months. If the Company plans to engage in activities using money from sources other than the proceeds from this offering of securities, your answer should disclose this fact. You should consider discussing these activities in a separate paragraph.

MULTIPLE PRODUCTS OR BUSINESSES. If you disclose that the Company will undertake to manufacture a number of products or provide more than one service, the disclosure must be directed to the Company's first (or most important) product or service. You should emphasize the product or service covered by the proceeds from the offering. Generally, the time frame for the development of a small company should correspond to the use of its available resources and the use of the offering proceeds.

3. Describe how the Company produces or provides these products or services and how and when the Company intends to carry out its activities.

MANUFACTURING COMPANIES. Your answer should address manufacturing, assembly, and marketing. It is important to disclose what the Company does itself and what it relies on others to do. For example, the Company might manufacture the final product; it might manufacture components and sell them to others who will produce the final product; or it might assemble a product from components it purchases. You should disclose who markets and distributes the Company's product and what resources (plant, inventory, employees, capital) the Company will need to start or continue manufacturing, assembling, marketing and/or distributing the product.

If the Company plans to offer a new product, disclose the present stage of development, including whether or not the Company has a working prototype. Indicate if the Company will use a material amount of its resources to complete development of the product, and estimate the amount of resources the Company will need to complete development of the product.

If the Company already is producing a product, emphasize how the production of the product will change when the Company has access to the offering proceeds. Discuss what will happen if the Company raises the maximum offering proceeds and what will happen if the Company raises the minimum offering proceeds. The disclosure should be consistent with Item 30, Use of Proceeds.

You should avoid using technical terms to describe the production process, but if you must use them, they should be defined.

SERVICE COMPANIES. If the Company provides a service or intends to provide a service in the future, you should discuss promotion activities, including advertising, public relations, publicity and networking. With respect to an existing service, you should disclose how the service would change when the Company has access to the offering proceeds. Discuss what will happen if the Company raises the maximum proceeds and what will happen if the Company raises the minimum proceeds. The disclosure should be consistent with Item 30, Use of Proceeds.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS. If the Company has a plant, an office or other operations in a foreign country, or is dependent upon foreign suppliers or companies, summarize matters particular to its international operations.

SUPPLIERS

4. Does the Company have any major supply contracts? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe.

Describe the material terms of major or sole source contracts. Material terms include such Items as a requirement to purchase a minimum amount of raw materials or supplies, a requirement to purchase at a specified price, or other performance requirements.

5. (a) Is the Company dependent upon a limited number of suppliers?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe.

5. (b) Does the Company expect to continue to be dependent upon a limited number of suppliers? ☐ Yes

☐ No If yes, describe.

Items 5 (a) and (b) are included for the purpose of disclosing the impact on the Company's business should it lose its ability to obtain essential raw materials or other supplies or services. Disclose whether the Company depends on or expects to depend on one or a limited number of suppliers for essential raw materials or other supplies. Discuss the impact on the Company if its supplier(s) drastically raises prices, or interrupts or discontinues supplies. You should answer the following questions:

- Are there other sources of supply?
- How long will it take to replace the supplies?
- At what cost?

You should disclose the consequences of the impact in this Item and you should further consider if a special risk factor should be included in Item 1, Risk Factors.

CUSTOMER SALES AND ORDERS

6. Does the Company have any major sales contracts? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe.

Describe the material terms of major existing sales contracts, including the quantity or quality of the goods and services, or performance dates. If a major contract is oral or informal, you should disclose that fact and the difficulty of enforcing the contract.

If the status of any major contract is uncertain or subject to cancellation, include disclosure in Item 1, Risk Factors.

7. State the total amount of the Company's sales of products or services for the most recent 12 month financial reporting period.

If the Company has not had sales, state so here, and state that you will not be responding to Items 8 through 11.

8. State the dollar amount of a typical sale.

You should be careful to point out if the figure disclosed represents an average rather than actual order size.

9. Are the Company's sales seasonal or cyclical? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, explain.

If the Company has sales, disclose what percentage of the Company's annual sales revenues are received in each financial quarter. If the pattern of sales shows significant variation among the quarters, disclose the reasons for the variation.

10. State the amount of foreign sales as a percent of total sales for last fiscal year:

Explain the nature of these sales, including any anticipated changes.

If the Company sells its product or service in a foreign country, summarize matters particular to that country that may have a negative impact on the ability of the Company to conduct business in the country. Such matters may include: devaluation of currency, political instability, or international trade agreements. Describe the impact on the Company. If the impact on the Company's operations is or might be substantial, disclose that in Item 1, Risk Factors.

11. Name any customers that account for, or based upon existing orders will account for, a major portion (20% or more) of the Company's sales.

Disclose any special legal or business relationship the Company has with the customer. Also disclose whether the loss of the customer would have a material adverse effect on the Company. You should consider whether the impact of the loss warrants a special disclosure under Item 1, Risk Factors.

In applying the 20% test, a group of affiliated customers should be regarded as a single customer.

12. State the dollar amount of firm orders.

A firm order is an order that has been confirmed and is not subject to cancellation in the usual course of business. If the Company does not have firm orders, state that you have not completed this Item because the Company has no firm orders.

COMPETITION

13. (a) Describe the market area in which the business competes or will compete.

Generally, limit the discussion of competition to the Company's geographic area. For example, if the Company is building budget motels in a particular city it should discuss competition in the surrounding metropolitan area and not address competition across the state or the United States. If, however, the Company truly competes with businesses outside its geographic area, you should discuss those businesses. An example of a company whose market is outside its geographic area is a company that does business mainly over the Internet.

You should not include information from segments of the market in which the Company does not or will not operate. For example, if the Company is in the business of operating a budget motel, it should not include information relating to resort hotels.

You should not use industry information to project how much the Company could sell if it achieves a certain market share. If you disclose facts and figures, you may be required to file information to document their source.

13. (b) Name the Company's principal competitors and indicate their relative size and financial and market strengths.

Identification of the Company's principal competitors requires a two-step analysis. First, identify the Company's customers and potential customers. Then determine whether other companies exist that are likely to fulfill the needs of the Company's customers and potential customers. You should not forget that another company might use a different method or product to satisfy customers' needs. These companies are competitors and should be included in the response to this Item. An example of two companies that provide the same service in different ways is the company that produces the yellow pages of the phone book and the company that operates an 800 number providing telephone listings.

14. (a) Does the Company compete, or expect to compete, by price?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe its competitive strategy.

If the Company's strategy is to compete on price, you should describe the strategy. If the Company has new technology that will allow it to compete on price, you should generally describe how it will be done.

If competition is by price, disclose the price or price range of the product or service. The price or price range of the product or service may be broken down in a number of ways:

- the cost of the product or services;
- the market price of the product or service; or
- the negotiated price of the product or service.

Disclose if the product is at a stage of development in which it is too early for you to determine its price. If the product has not been produced yet, discuss how you have made the determination that the Company can compete on price? You will need to explain how the Company will go about pricing the product.

14. (b) Does the Company compete, or expect to compete, by service?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe its competitive strategy.

14. (c) Does the Company compete, or expect to compete, on some other basis?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, state the basis and describe the Company's competitive strategy.

If your response to both Items 14(a) and 14(b) is "no", then you must explain on what other basis the Company expects to compete. Other common bases of competition include a unique product or service, a narrow market, or a product or service warranty.

MARKETING

15. (a) Describe how the Company plans to market its products or services during the next 12 months, including who will perform these marketing activities.

MARKETING STRATEGY v. TACTICS. You should describe how the Company intends to make its products or services known to potential customers. Typically you should disclose whether the Company will make direct sales at retail or wholesale, or sell through distributors or franchises. You need not include every tactic the Company intends to use in its marketing campaign. For example, if the Company will market its product through advertising inserted in telephone bills, it is not necessary to disclose the details of how many households will receive the advertising in each mailing. However, if the advertising is targeted to a certain demographic group, this should be disclosed. In general, it is the fact that the Company targets a particular group for advertising that is relevant, not the details of the targeting method.

MARKETING STUDIES. You should not refer to marketing studies unless you show that there is a basis to believe the marketing study is reasonable and accurate. You should not disclose marketing studies that contain unfounded projections; if a reference is made to a marketing study, you should set out the key assumptions, methods and findings. If the Company has not conducted any formal or scientific marketing studies, this fact should be disclosed.

If the Company has no marketing study or marketing plan, you should disclose this in Item 1, Risk Factors.

15. (b) State how the Company will fund these marketing activities?

If marketing activities are to be paid for with offering proceeds, set out the expenditure in Item 28, Milestones and in Item 30, Use of Proceeds. If the offering involves a minimum and maximum amount, describe the marketing activities to be undertaken at both the minimum and the maximum offering amounts.

EMPLOYEES

16. (a) State the number of the Company's present employees by type of employee (i.e., clerical, operations, administrative, etc.).

16. (b) State the number of employees the Company anticipates it will have within the next 12 months by type of employee (i.e., clerical, operations, administrative, etc.).

DEFINITION OF EMPLOYEE. If a person is within the normal work group for the Company's type of business, you should treat that person as an employee for disclosure purposes regardless of what the Company calls the person (e.g., employee, independent contractor, consultant).

You should disclose the number of the Company's existing employees and the number of employees the Company anticipates it will hire during the next 12-month period. The number of employees the Company will hire will be dependent upon the amount of money the Company anticipates it will have available to fund these positions.

Distinguish between employees to be added during the next 12-month period based upon the success of the offering and the number of employees that might be added regardless of whether the offering is successful. Distinguish between part time and full time employees. In an offering with a minimum and maximum offering amount, set out the number and type of employees (e.g., clerical, operations, and administrative) to be added if the Company raises the minimum offering amount as well as if the Company raises the maximum offering amount.

17. Describe the Company's labor relations.

Discuss whether the Company has experienced any problems in finding and retaining suitable employees and whether the Company anticipates any similar problems in the future.

If any of the Company's employees are subject to collective bargaining agreements, you should disclose the nature of the agreements. Include the dates the collective bargaining agreements expire.

If the Company's employees are on strike, or have been on strike in the past 3 years, or are threatening to strike, describe the dispute.

18. Indicate any benefits or incentive arrangements the Company provides or will provide to its employees.

You should first cover those benefits that the Company is presently giving its employees and then, those that it expects to give its employees in the future. If the Company intends to offer benefits, disclose whether the board of directors or stockholders must approve them.

Benefits or incentive arrangements can vary widely. Employee fringe benefits usually cover medical insurance, dental insurance, life insurance, vacation leave, sick leave and pension. Incentive arrangements include stock options, stock appreciation rights, low cost loans, bonuses, deferred compensation, profit sharing plans, employment agreements, commissions and royalties on product sales. Incentive arrangements in small businesses more often benefit officers, directors and key employees.

Emphasize benefits to all employees or rank and file employees. Benefits that are available to Officers, Directors and key persons only, should be disclosed in Item 83, Compensation.

You should discuss stock purchase agreements, stock options, rights or warrants that benefit current stockholders or employees in Item 101, Options and Warrants.

PROPERTIES

19. (a) Describe generally the principal properties that the Company owns or leases.

GENERAL. Item 19 (a) relates both to tangible property such as real estate, plant and equipment, and to intangible property such as patents, licenses, copyrights, trademarks, service marks, trade names, trade secrets, and other intellectual property that the Company owns prior to the offering and will use in the business. Generally, you should describe the important types of property the Company owns or leases.

Focus on the principal properties owned or leased. You should include only the amount of detail necessary to inform investors as to the suitability, adequacy, productive capacity and extent of utilization of the properties and facilities owned or leased by the Company. Descriptions of real estate such as office or warehouse space should be on a square-footage basis. You should disclose the location and character of the property, if this is important to the offering.

If any of the Company's properties are not owned outright, you should disclose the extent of the encumbrances or installment payments. If the terms of purchase constitute long term debt, you should disclose this fact.

You may need to disclose separately the Company's property that is subject to depreciation or obsolescence. If, for example, computer systems constitute an essential part of the business plan, you should discuss obsolescence, replacement and the method of financing replacements. If the Company does not have a plan for replacing plant and equipment, you should disclose this fact.

LEASES. If the Company leases property, you should include a summary of the terms under the leases, including the amount of payments, expiration dates and the terms of any renewal options. If the Company has decided to lease instead of own its property, you should disclose the reasons for the decision. A short term or annual lease raises the questions: What if the Company cannot renew the lease? What will the Company do next? What can the Company afford to do next?

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY. Indicate the extent to which the Company's operations depend upon or are expected to depend upon patents, copyrights, trade secrets, know-how, or other proprietary information. Discuss how the Company will use intellectual property, such as a patent, copyright or trade secret to become profitable. Describe the steps the Company has undertaken to secure and protect this intellectual property, including any use of confidentiality agreements, covenants not-to-compete, and efforts taken to protect rights under state, federal and foreign laws. The Company may find it costly to perfect and protect these rights. If such rights have not been secured, you should disclose the cost and time period it will take to secure them. Foreign rights, patents, trade secrets, trademarks and copyrights can exist, but such protection does not always exist to the same extent as in the United States. You should disclose any limitations on foreign rights, patents, trade secrets, trademarks and copyrights. If important, you should discuss each right separately.

Additionally, you should disclose the value the Company has placed on these intangibles and explain how the Company determined that value.

NEGATIVE DISCLOSURE. If the Company has chosen not to protect intellectual property, you should disclose this fact and explain why the Company has chosen not to try to protect its property.

DESCRIPTION OF TYPES OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

Patent. A patent is a right granted by the government to make, use or sell an invention for a period of years.

Copyright. A copyright is a right granted by the government to an "author" of a work in a tangible medium for the exclusive publication, production, sale and distribution of the work. A "work" includes writings, literature, art, drama, motion pictures, and other electronically produced materials.

Trade Secret. A trade secret consists of any formula, pattern, device or calculation of information used in business to obtain a competitive advantage. The owner must take precautions to keep the process or device secret. Examples of possible trade secrets include, but are not limited to, blue prints, production formulas, manufacturing processes, customer lists, price and cost information and computer programs. Precautions might include confidentiality agreements and restrictions on access to the information.

Know-how. Know-how usually means being able to perform successfully, known processes that go to the heart of the production of the product or the operation of the enterprise. For instance, a process may be known by only one employee. An example is winemaking.

Trademark. A trademark is a word, logo, symbol, design or shape used on or in connection with the sale or distribution of a company's product.

Service Mark. A service mark is a word, logo, symbol, design or shape used to identify or in connection with the rendering of a service.

Trade Name. The name of a company that is used in commerce.

LICENSE AGREEMENTS. A license is a grant of rights from the owner of a patent, trademark, trade secret or copyright to another person. Summarize the principal terms and expiration dates of any significant license agreements, including the amount the Company expects to spend during the year. Disclose the relationships with the other party under the license agreement. A license agreement may be exclusive or shared. The Company must be certain before it uses the term "exclusive" license agreement. License agreements often do not assign all of the rights and interests involved.

RISK FACTORS. Many possible risk factors arise out of the treatment, valuation and protection of intangible rights. For example, essential computer software or customer lists may become obsolete within a short period of time. Loss of a key employee may be critical to the Company. Patent or trademark infringement actions either by or against the Company may be very expensive and beyond the means of the Company. You may need to include a general or specific risk factor with regard to the inability of the Company to protect its intellectual property even though the Company has made required filings under law or taken other precautions. If the Company decides not to protect important intellectual property, disclose this fact in Item 1, Risk Factors.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST. In the event the Company has purchased or leased properties from its officers, directors, stockholders or other key persons, disclose the relationship and, if relevant, the conflict of interest. You also should disclose whether the transactions were on terms at least as favorable to the Company as those generally available from unaffiliated third parties.

19. (b) Indicate what properties the Company intends to acquire or lease.

Generally, you should limit your answer to properties the Company intends to acquire in the next 12 months. In addition to describing a proposed acquisition, you should describe why it is being considered and how it will be accomplished. If property is to be acquired with offering proceeds, set out the acquisition in Item 28, Milestones and Item 30, Use of Proceeds. If the offering involves a minimum and maximum amount, describe properties to be acquired at both the minimum and the maximum offering amounts.

Include the cost of such acquisitions and the sources of financing the Company expects to use in obtaining these properties; whether by purchase, lease or otherwise. Address whether the Company will have the cash, credit worthiness, or capital stock available to purchase or lease the property. Disclose sources of financing available to the Company other than the offering proceeds or bank financing.

If you disclose acquisitions of property, you should distinguish between mere intentions, oral agreements, and written obligations.

If the Company has not yet identified properties to be acquired, you should disclose the criteria or standards the Company will use to select and acquire the properties.

If no properties are going to be acquired, you should disclose that the Company does not plan to acquire any properties in the immediate future.

In the event the Company is purchasing or leasing, or intends to purchase or lease, properties from officers, directors, stockholders or other key persons, you should disclose the relationship and, if relevant, the conflict of interest. Disclose whether the Company has established a policy with respect to affiliated transactions.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

20. Indicate the amounts that the Company spent for research and development during its last fiscal year.

Research is the planned effort of a company to discover new information to help create a new product, service, process or technique or vastly improve a current one. Research does not include market research and market testing as this activity relates to the selling and marketing operations of the company. Development takes the findings generated by research and formulates a plan to create the desired item or improve the existing one.

Research and development implies a future benefit. You should disclose how the knowledge gained through research and development will be valuable to the Company and how the Company is likely to be able to derive a commercial benefit from that knowledge. The Company might exploit the knowledge by producing the product or offering the service or by licensing or selling the technology to others.

In discussing historical research and development expenditures, you must identify any expenditures that relate to products or processes that the Company no longer expects to pursue. Additionally, you should distinguish between cumulative research and development and research and development for the last fiscal year.

If the Company has engaged in research and development and had revenues in the last fiscal year, disclose the percentage of the Company's fiscal year revenues these amounts represent.

21. (a) Will the Company expend funds on research and development during the current fiscal year? ☐ Yes ☐ No

21. (b) If yes, how much does the Company plan to spend on research and development during the current fiscal year?

21. (c) How does the Company intend to fund these research and development costs?

Disclose all sources of funding. If the Company intends to apply proceeds from the offering to research and development costs, set out the use in Item 28, Milestones and Item 30, Use of Proceeds. If the offering involves a minimum and maximum amount, include the amount of proceeds to be applied to research and development at both the minimum and the maximum offering amounts.

GOVERNMENTAL REGULATION

22. (a) Is the Company's business subject to material regulation by any governmental agency? ☐ Yes ☐ No

22. (b) Are the Company's products or services subject to material regulation by any governmental agency? ☐ Yes ☐ No

22. (c) Are the Company's properties subject to material regulation by any governmental agency? ☐ Yes ☐ No

22. (d) Explain in detail any "yes" answers to Items 22(a), 22(b), or 22(c), including the nature and extent of the regulation and its effect or potential effect upon the Company.

Concentrate on regulations that extend to the core of the Company's business. Avoid disclosing regulations that are not material or important to the Company's business. The key question is: Does the regulation have a substantial impact on the Company at this phase of the Company's business? If the answer is yes, you should disclose it.

Regulations can be imposed on a company by federal, state, provincial or local government agencies. In completing your response to this Item, you should first identify the type of regulation and then, if it is material, disclose the impact of the regulation. In determining the impact or the potential impact of regulation upon the Company, consider whether a capital expenditure may be necessary, earnings may be curtailed, the competitive position of the Company may be changed, or the continuation of the business may be imperiled.

Discuss regulatory related expenditures that the Company anticipates will be significant. If proceeds of the offering are to be used to pay for them, disclose the expenditure in Item 30, Use of Proceeds.

If the Company is highly dependent upon compliance with a certain governmental regulation in order to do business, disclose this fact in Item 1, Risk Factors.

If compliance with a certain government regulation is a key to the Company's near term profitability, you should include compliance with that regulation as a step in Item 28, Milestones.

The Company must look at indirect and direct impact of a regulation upon the Company's business, products or properties. An example of an indirect regulatory impact would be a decline in the business of a company that makes wood pellets for wood pellet stoves due to the fact that its customers become subject to strict environmental regulation for emissions.

23. (a) Is the Company required to have a license or permit to conduct business?
☐ Yes ☐ No

23. (b) If yes, does the Company have the required license or permit?
☐ Yes ☐ No

23. (c) If the answer to Item 23(b) is "yes," describe the effect on the Company and its business if it were to lose the license or permit.

23. (d) If the Company has not yet acquired a required license or permit, describe the steps the Company needs to take to obtain the license or permit. Estimate the time it will take to complete each step.

To respond to this Item ask yourself the following questions:

- What licenses, permits or other authority does the Company already have?
- What licenses, permits or other authority must the Company have in order to conduct business?
- How long will it take the Company to obtain the license or permit?
- What if the Company does not obtain the license or permit?
- What if the Company loses its license or permit?

If the Company is highly dependent upon obtaining a license or permit in order to do business, this fact should be disclosed as a risk factor.

If obtaining a license or permit is a key to achieving profitability in the near term, disclose that fact as a step in Item 28, Milestones.

COMPANY HISTORY AND ORGANIZATION

24. Summarize the material events in the development of the Company.

Why was the Company started? What was the initial strategy of the Company? If the strategy of the Company changed from its initial concept, explain.

If the Company history includes a merger, acquisition, spin-off, recapitalization, or other similar corporate or company transaction, disclose that event.

25. Describe any recent stock split, stock dividend, recapitalization, merger, acquisition, spin-off, or reorganization.

When you respond to this Item, you should cover the past five (5) years, or the period the Company has been in existence, if less than five (5) years. If the Company recently has undergone a stock split, stock dividend or recapitalization in anticipation of this offering, describe the transaction (and adjust historical per share figures elsewhere in this Disclosure Document accordingly). You should disclose major transactional and financial milestones and include significant stock sales. State the purpose for each transaction. If the Company has been in business for some time, the materiality of the disclosure should be treated on a sliding scale. Earlier events should be disclosed only if they are important and continue to be relevant.

26. Discuss any pending or anticipated stock split, stock dividend, recapitalization, merger, acquisition, spin-off, or reorganization.

You should disclose any type of pending or anticipated corporate or company reorganization.

27. State the names of any parent, subsidiary, or affiliate of the Company. For each, indicate its business purpose, its method of operation, its ownership, and whether it is included in the Financial Statements attached to this Disclosure Document.

CORPORATE STRUCTURE. You should answer this question so that the corporate or organizational structure is clear to the investor. A chart showing the relationship between affiliates may be a valuable supplement to narrative disclosure.

PARENT. Generally, a parent of the Company is a company that controls the Company, directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries.

SUBSIDIARY. Generally, a subsidiary of the Company is a company that the Company controls, directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries.

AFFILIATE. Generally, an affiliate of the Company is a company that directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries controls the Company, or is controlled by the Company, or is under common control with the Company.

A person is said to control a company when that person has the power to direct or influence the direction of the management of the company through the ownership of voting securities, by contract or otherwise.

METHOD OF OPERATION. To understand the risks of the investment, the investor should know how the Company actually will be operated in relation to its parent, subsidiaries or affiliates. Consider the following questions in preparing your response:

- In which company are the proceeds of the offering to be used?
- In which company are the significant assets to be held or deployed?
- Which company will have significant revenues and earnings ?

- How will earnings of a parent, subsidiary, or affiliate be distributed to or benefit the Company?
- If a parent owns less than 100% of the Company, who owns the rest?

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS. If the Company has a parent, subsidiary or affiliate, you should consider the effect of accounting standards. Generally, a company that controls 50% or more of the stock of another company must have consolidated financial statements. If an affiliate is not included in the financial statements attached to the Disclosure Document, or is included, and the financial statements are not consolidated, you should include an explanation.

MILESTONES

28. Describe in chronological order the steps management intends to take to achieve, maintain, or improve profitability during the 12 months following receipt of the offering proceeds.

If management does not expect the Company to achieve profitability during that time period, describe the business objectives for that period and the steps management intends to take to achieve those objectives.

Indicate the probable timing of each step.

PURPOSE OF MILESTONES. The Milestone Section lists step- by-step future events that management believes must occur in order for the Company to become profitable or to meet its business objectives, and describes the activity management will undertake to complete each step. Your response to Items 28 and 29 should provide sufficient information so that an investor is able to assess the likelihood that the Company's resources will prove adequate to accomplish its goals.

MAJOR STEPS. List the major steps in your business plan. A company that is opening a new business needs to describe the specific steps to open the business. For example, you might list steps such as obtaining a state license; entering into construction contracts; purchasing specific equipment; and hiring a specific number of personnel. This example is particularly useful for development stage companies. It outlines the important steps the Company must take to reach its goal of opening the business.

The following are examples of typical milestones for small business offerings:

- acquiring a specific piece of equipment,
- registering a trademark,
- granting a license,
- acquiring a specific contract for goods or services,
- achieving a specific level of net sales,

- reaching a specific number of new markets,
- generating a specific level of manufacturing output,
- reaching a specific level of inventory purchases, or
- implementing the next stage of a business plan (e.g., hiring a marketing staff and creating a new marketing department or creating a new production line).

METHOD OF ACHIEVING THE STEPS. You should describe what the Company must do to complete each step. For example, if you have listed "obtain a patent on its product" as a Milestone, the expected manner of occurrence might be to hire an attorney to file an application with the US Patent and Trademark Office. If you have listed "purchase machinery" as a Milestone, the expected manner of occurrence might be to contact a dealer in that type of machinery and to enter into a contract for its purchase.

ORDER OF THE STEPS. List the steps of the Company's business plan in chronological order. To determine the sequence of disclosure here, ask the following questions:

- What are the most important things the Company must do?
- What things must the Company do first?
- What things are dependent upon others?

To the extent possible you should determine the "critical path" of the steps. What is the last point in time when a step can take place or a condition can be fulfilled before the entire plan is off schedule? What steps are dependent upon others? For instance, should leasing the premises come before or after hiring staff and purchasing equipment? Finally, you should not include past events in the Milestone Section.

The sequence of the steps also must be consistent with the Use of Proceeds Section, Item 30. The Use of Proceeds Section sets out the categories and amounts of funds for use by the Company. The Milestone Section shows the sequence in which the Company will use those funds.

TIMING OF THE STEPS. You should disclose when each step will occur. While a date may be given, it is preferable to state a range or number of months in which the Company expects to accomplish the business objective. In addition, you should indicate when the steps begin, such as upon completion of the minimum offering. The period of disclosure should not exceed 12 months.

COST OF COMPLETION OF THE STEPS. You should indicate the monetary cost to achieve each step. You may express this amount as a range. If the Company does not have access to funds from sources other than the proceeds of the offering, your response should track the Use of Proceeds table. If the Company will exhaust the offering proceeds prior to completing a step, you should indicate whether the Company has access to other sources of funds, identify the sources and disclose whether they are contingent or firm.

Be Specific. You should be detailed in describing what the Company needs to do to meet its business objectives. You should state a specific numerical amount or range when you describe certain steps. Examples of specific disclosure include:

"Reach sales of $100,000," for a manufacturing and merchandising company;

"Acquire 40 large account customers," for a service provider; and
"Sign up 10,000 new subscriptions," for a magazine publisher.

OPERATING COMPANIES. If the Company has already been operating for some time, the Company's disclosure should accurately reflect:

- the current stage of the Company's business plan, and
- how the achievement of a particular business plan objective will have a positive effect on the Company's operations or profits.

TABULAR FORMAT. Describe in tabular form:

- what the steps are;
- what the Company must do to achieve each step;
- the order in which the Company will perform each step;
- the time it will take to complete each step; and
- how much money the Company will spend to complete each step.

EXAMPLE MILESTONE TABLE

Milestone or Step	Expected Manner of Occurrence or Method of Achievement	Date, or Number of Months after Receipt of Offering Proceeds When Step Should be Accomplished	Cost of Completion
Formation and Setup of Company	Find and Lease Location for Company, Purchase Equipment, Hire Employees	2 months	$150,000
Start Operations	Purchase Materials, Start Assembling Widgets	2-4 months	$250,000
Start Marketing Phase	Develop Sales Materials, Start Mailings and Product Presentations	2-4 months	$200,000
Reach Sales of 3,000 Widgets	Finish and Ship Widgets	6-9 months	$150,000

29. (a) State the anticipated consequences to the Company if any step is not completed as scheduled.

State the consequences to the Company if there are delays in achieving any of the steps listed in Item 28. You should emphasize the effect on the Company's available funds. In addition, state whether the steps in the Milestone Section are based on receipt of the minimum or maximum offering proceeds. If the steps are based on receipt of the maximum offering proceeds, you should also disclose the effect on the Company of raising only the minimum offering amount.

29. (b) Describe how the Company will deal with these consequences.

After the Company states the probable consequences of delay, identify how the Company will deal with the delays. If the Company has a liquidity problem, disclose how the Company will cut down on expenses. If the lack of funding will impact the Company's business plan, provide detailed disclosure. For example, if the Company is unable to turn a profit in the first year of operation, disclose that the "Company would have insufficient funds to open the second store discussed in the Disclosure Document."

NOTE:

After reviewing management's discussion of the steps it intends to take, potential investors should consider whether achievement of each step within the estimated time frame is realistic. Potential investors should also assess the consequences to the issuer of any delays in taking these steps and whether the Company will need additional financing to accomplish them.

USE OF PROCEEDS

Total Use of Net Proceeds	$	100% $	100%

Use of Proceeds Section. This Item requires you to disclose in a table how the Company will use the proceeds from the offering. You start with the total amount of the offering and show how much it is reduced by the offering expenses. Next show how the Company expects to spend the Net Proceeds.

Offering Expenses. Calculate and disclose the direct costs associated with the offering. These costs usually include: commissions, legal and accounting, printing and copying, and advertising. Also disclose any miscellaneous fees and costs connected with the offering, such as filing, consulting, impound and escrow accounts, travel, postage, and sales meeting expenses.

Carefully check the figures in this part of the Table to avoid mistakes. Make sure that the percentages listed for the offering expenses are based on a percentage of the Total Proceeds of the offering, not the Net Proceeds.

Total Net Proceeds. In the second part of the Table, disclose in order of priority the use of the Net Proceeds. Check the figures and percentages. Make sure the percentages are based on the Net Proceeds of the offering.

Specific Line Items for the use of Net Proceeds. Disclose the principal purposes for the use of the net proceeds and the amount to be used for each purpose. Consider using the following categories: leases, rent, utilities, payroll (by position or type), purchase or lease of specific items of equipment or inventory, payment of notes, accounts payable, etc., marketing or advertising costs, taxes, consulting fees, permits, professional fees, insurance and supplies. The categories you use will depend on the Company's plans. Replace general labels, such as marketing or research and development, with specific items, such as purchases or salaries.

Related Party Transactions. Disclose all payments that the Company will make to any officer, director, principal stockholder, or key person. Include payments to acquire assets from or to reimburse an officer, director, stockholder, or key person for services already rendered, assets previously transferred, or moneys loaned or advanced. Make sure that your answer is consistent with the information in Items 108 and 109. If the Company has contractual agreements with its officers or employees to pay salaries, show those payments in this Item, unless the Company is profitable and has on-going operations.

Allocation of the Net Proceeds to Unspecified Purposes. This Disclosure Document is intended as a vehicle to raise capital for particular business purposes. The net proceeds should be allocated to specific business purposes following the Company's business plan. In the event that the Company is in the development stage and has no specific business plan or purpose, the Company may be disqualified from using this Disclosure Document under the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR)(April 28, 1996). The Company may also be disqualified from using this Disclosure Document if it allocates a substantial amount of the offering proceeds to working capital or reserves.

Allocation of the Net Proceeds to Acquisition of Other Businesses. If the Company is raising capital for a merger or acquisition, you need to make specific disclosures about the planned acquisition. Simply reserving a substantial amount of the proceeds for "acquisition of other businesses" is not sufficiently specific and may cause the Company to be disqualified from using this Disclosure Document.

If the Company has identified the business it intends to acquire, identify the business and the status of any negotiations. Describe the business in detail and attach a copy of its financial statements to the Disclosure Document. Disclose whether the enterprise has business operations similar to the Company's core business and describe the business plan for expanding the business. You may need to discuss the acquisition in other sections of the Disclosure Document.

If the Company plans to use the offering proceeds to acquire another business but has not yet identified a specific enterprise, disclose the type of business the Company is seeking. Disclose whether the Company plans to acquire an enterprise with business operations similar to the Company's core business and describe the business plan for expanding the business. You may need to discuss the planned acquisition in other sections of the Disclosure Document.

Setting the Minimum Offering Amount. State law often authorizes the state securities administrator to require the Company to set a minimum offering amount and to place all offering proceeds into an impound account at a bank until a minimum offering amount is raised. This ensures that the Company does not spend the offering proceeds until a sufficient amount is raised to carry out the Company's business objective. Most small businesses are asked to set a minimum offering amount. If the minimum offering amount is not reached, the offering will be cancelled.

How you set the minimum offering amount is important. If the Company needs the proceeds to purchase a specific piece of property, or to complete a project, you must set the minimum offering amount at (or above) the cost of the property or project plus the costs of the offering. In some cases the minimum amount will be 100% of the offering proceeds.

In other circumstances the amount of the required minimum may be difficult to determine. In these instances, assess the Company's cash needs under a variety of assumptions and provide for a minimum based on its cash needs for the next twelve months under the least favorable assumptions. In some cases the 12 month period may be too long or too short. You will need to make adjustments for the time it takes to conduct the offering. For many small companies the minimum offering amount is simply: How much money will the company need to stay in business over the next 12 months?

To set the minimum, carefully review each item in the Use of Proceeds Section and the Milestone Section and decide which expenditures and purchases the Company must make to get the business plan off the ground, or to keep it from totally failing. With the help of the Milestone Section, recheck the "critical path" to determine the minimum amount of proceeds necessary.

Right to Change the use of Proceeds . If the Company intends to change the use of proceeds after the offering has started, you must reserve the right to do so. You should discuss the alternatives under which the Company may alter the use of proceeds.

After the offering has started, a material change in the Use of Proceeds Section may require the Company to offer a refund of money to investors who purchased before the change. As a matter of course, material changes during the ongoing offering require the Company to change the Disclosure Document on file with the securities regulators.

31. (a) Is there a minimum amount of proceeds that must be raised before the Company uses any of the proceeds of this offering? ☐ Yes ☐ No

31. (b) If yes, describe how the Company will use the minimum Net Proceeds of this offering.

Do not respond to this Item if you answered "no" to Item 31(a).

Give a detailed breakdown of each item listed in the "Use of Net Proceeds" part of the minimum offering column in the table in question 30. Describe each planned use in sequence and in order of priority.

Be specific. For example, identify a building or piece of property to be purchased or leased by its size, location, and the general terms of the purchase agreement or lease. Identify each specific piece of equipment the Company plans to purchase or lease and the general terms of the purchase or lease agreement. If the Company is hiring new personnel, identify each position by title, salary, and expected hiring date.

If the Company plans to use any material part of the proceeds to discharge indebtedness, describe the terms of that indebtedness, including the interest rates. If the Company incurred the indebtedness within the current or previous fiscal year, describe how it used the proceeds of the indebtedness.

Make sure that your answer to this Item is consistent with the information in Items 28 and 30.

31. (c) If the answer to Item 31(a) is "yes," describe how the Company will use the Net Proceeds of this offering that exceed the amount of the minimum offering proceeds.

Do not respond to this Item if you answered "no" to Item 31(a).

Give a detailed breakdown of how the Company plans to spend the offering proceeds that exceed the minimum offering amount. Describe each planned use in sequence and in order of priority. Be specific and make sure that your answer to this Item is consistent with the information in Items 28 and 30. See the discussion of Item 31(b) for more specific instructions.

31. (d) If the answer to Item 31(a) is "no," describe how the Company will use the Net Proceeds of this offering.

Do not respond to this Item if you answered "yes" to Item 31(a).

Give a detailed breakdown of each item listed in the Net Proceeds part of the Maximum offering column in the table in question 30. Describe each planned use in sequence and in order of priority. What expenses will the Company pay first, after the offering expenses? Be specific and make sure that your answer to this Item is consistent with the information in Items 28 and 30. See the discussion of Item 31(b) for more specific instructions.

When there is no minimum offering amount set, you may need to include a special risk factor in Item 1 with respect to the use of the proceeds and the ability of the Company to meet its business objectives. For instance, if only a small amount is raised, all or substantially all of the offering proceeds may be applied to cover the offering expenses and the Company will not otherwise benefit from the offering.

32. (a) Will the Company use other funds, together with the offering proceeds, to fund any project or activity identified in Item 31?

☐ Yes ☐ No

32. (b) If yes, state the amounts and sources of the other funds.

32. (c) Indicate whether the availability of the funds is firm or contingent. If contingent, explain.

Firm or Contingent Funding. In this Item disclose whether the source of the other funds is firm or contingent. You should disclose material conditions or contingencies even if the agreements are called firm commitments. For example, the bank may have promised its loan only if the Company completes the securities offering or hires a specific manager. In the case of a bank line of credit, you must disclose that it is due on demand or short notice and may not be available when the Company needs it. Likewise leases may be terminated, sales of assets may fall through, and private investment loans may never be made.

What will the Company do or what will happen if the Company does not receive the other funds? You should disclose whether or not the Company has a back up plan.

If the funds are critical to the business objectives disclosed or the continued operation of the business, include the contingent nature of the financing as a risk factor.

NOTE:

See the answer to Item 70 for information about proceeds used to compensate sales agents. See the answer to Items 108 and 109 for information about proceeds used to purchase assets from officers, directors, key persons, or principal stockholders or their associates or to reimburse them for services previously provided or moneys borrowed.

SELECTED FINANCIAL INFORMATION

NOTE:

The Company has adjusted all numbers in this section to reflect any stock splits or recapitalizations.

GENERAL

33. What were net, after-tax earnings for the last fiscal year? (If losses, show in parenthesis.)

Total $

Per share $

Earnings Per Share. You should first disclose the total earnings (or losses) of the Company and then disclose the earnings (or losses) on a per share basis.

Sample Calculation: Earnings per Share = Net after Tax Earnings / Outstanding Shares= $183,246/863,020 = $0.22/Share

In disclosing the per share data, you must include all outstanding shares. In determining what shares to include, you should include the shares outstanding prior to the offering and should not include shares being offered in this offering. For the purposes of this Item you are required to treat all outstanding options, warrants and rights as exercised. You use the exercise price in the option or warrant agreement to determine the number of shares to be issued. If the Company has issued a significant number of shares during the year, you should check with your accountant to determine whether a weighted average per share would be more appropriate. If so, you should disclose that the number reflects the weighted average per share.

Fiscal Year. You should disclose the after-tax earnings for the last fiscal year. The net after-tax earnings for the last fiscal year should be available from the Company's income statement. Even though the Company may not have operated for a full fiscal year, you must still disclose, its earnings or losses. The disclosure for this Item should reflect the fact that the Company has not been in existence for a full fiscal year, either by setting forth the dates in a parenthetical or by narrative. A typical disclosure might read: "The Company commenced operations in June 1999. The losses as of October 31, 1999 totaled $195,000."

Interim Activity. If operations have substantially changed since the end of the last fiscal year, you also should show those interim earnings or losses.

Changes in Form of Entity. If the Company recently has reorganized or changed the form of its business entity, such as from a sole proprietorship or partnership, you should show the changes from the old entity to the new one.

Lack of Operations. If the Company is a start-up or development stage company that has had no operations, state: "The Company has not yet operated."

Accounting Review. Net after tax earnings must be based on generally accepted accounting principles.

34. If the Company had profits, show offering price as a multiple of earnings.

$$\frac{\text{Offering Price Per Share}}{\text{Net After-Tax Earnings Per Share for Last Fiscal Year}} = \frac{\text{price/earnings}}{\text{multiple}}$$

Offering Price/Earnings Multiple. The price/earnings multiple simply reflects the ratio of the offering price of the common stock (or other equity security) to the Company's historical earnings. To respond to this Item use the earnings per share calculation in Item 33 and take into consideration some of the other points discussed under Item 33. The price/earnings multiple must be based on financial statements prepared according to generally accepted accounting principles for the Company's last fiscal year. If you disclosed interim earnings in Item 33, you should complete the price/earnings multiple for the interim period.

Sample Calculation: Price/Earnings Multiple = Offering Price per share/Net After Tax Earnings per Share
$5.00/$0.22 = 22.7x

If the Company has no earnings, you cannot calculate the price/earnings multiple. In this event, you should disclose that the Company was not profitable.

CAPITALIZATION

35. Indicate the capitalization of the Company as of the most recent balance sheet date, and as adjusted to reflect the sale of the minimum and maximum amount of securities in this offering and the use of the net proceeds from this offering.

Capitalization Table. In the format provided, you must set forth the short and long term debts owed by the Company, equity of the stockholders, paid in capital for common and preferred shares, earnings retained or earnings deficits, and the number of preferred and common shares authorized. You may want to ask your accountant to help you with this Item.

Comparison to Financial Statements. The figures in the Capitalization Table must be consistent with those in the Company's most recent Financial Statements. If the Company has mandatory redeemable preferred stock, include the amount of the redemption in "long term debt" instead of under the preferred stock heading and so indicate by footnote to that category in the Capitalization Table.

Analysis of Financial Statements. In addition to comparing the figures in the Capitalization Table to the Financial Statements, you should check whether the Company's balance sheet accurately reflects the Company's capitalization in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. You or your accountant should consider whether debt is correctly classified as short-term or long-term, whether leases should be capitalized, and whether a corporate combination should be treated as a pooling of interest or as a purchase. See the Financial Statements in Item 118.

Review of Authorized Capital. To answer the portion of this Item concerning the number of shares authorized, you should refer to the articles of incorporation or organization of the Company, and any amendments to the articles. Make sure your answer to this Item is consistent with the current articles.

DILUTION

36. (a) The price of the securities in this offering has been arbitrarily determined.
☐ Yes ☐ No

Risk Based on Arbitrary Pricing. If you have not done financial or market analysis to arrive at the price, you should answer yes, that the selection of the offering price was arbitrary. Even if you have considered certain financial indications of value, such as net tangible book value per share or earnings per share, you still may want to disclose that pricing is arbitrary.

If your answer is yes, disclose in Item 1, Risk Factors, that the Company arbitrarily decided the offering price. The following are two examples of such risk factor disclosures:

Arbitrary Offering Price. The offering price of $5.00 per share was determined by the Company and the selling agent. The price bears no relationship to established value criteria such as net tangible assets, or a multiple of earnings per share and accordingly should not be considered an indication of the actual value of the Company.

Arbitrary Offering Price. The price for the shares of stock of this offering has been established in an arbitrary manner and is not related to net tangible assets per share or any price previously paid for the Company's stock by others. The price is 10 times that paid by the founders of the Company. The offering price may not be justified by the ultimate results of operations of the Company.

36. (b) If no, explain the basis on which the price of the securities was determined.

Disclose the various factors you considered in arriving at the offering price. Typical factors include: the established public trading market that dictates the price; the net tangible book value per share or the earnings per share (if the Company has any earnings); the stock prices of other similar companies; or the amount of money required by the Company to fund the product or project.

37. (a) The net tangible book value per share before offering is: $

Net Tangible Book Value Per Share. The net tangible book value of a company is the accounting value of all assets on the balance sheet of the Company after subtracting all liabilities and all intangible assets. Intangible assets that appear on the balance sheet usually include such items as patents, copyrights, franchises, trademarks, operating rights and goodwill. Various costs incurred in the formation of the Company are also treated as intangible assets.

GAAP. You must base net tangible book value on the Company's most recent balance sheet prepared according to generally accepted accounting principles consistently applied. Calculating the net tangible book value depends upon the integrity of the balance sheet. If the assets or liabilities are improperly characterized, the net tangible book value may be materially inaccurate.

Computing Net Tangible Book Value Per Share. To compute the net tangible book value per share of common stock, you divide the total number of common shares outstanding immediately prior to the offering, by the net tangible book value related to common stockholders. The net tangible book value shall be computed based on the latest balance sheet.

You should take into consideration any shares issued between the date of the last balance sheet and the time of the offering when determining the number of outstanding shares.

Sample Calculation: Net Tangible Book Value per Share =

Net Tangible Assets: $ 827,115

Less Total Liabilities: $ 684,260

Net Tangible Book Value: $ 142,855

Shares Outstanding (Before Offering): 524,920

$142,855/524,920 = $ 0.27/share

Preferred Stock. If the Company has issued preferred stock, you must determine the amount of the total net tangible assets (capital) attributable to preferred stockholders. Subtract the net tangible assets attributable to preferred stockholders from the total net tangible assets. The remainder is the net tangible assets available to common stockholders.

37. (b) For the minimum offering:

The net tangible book value per share after the minimum offering will be: $

The amount of increase in net tangible book value per share as a result of receipt of cash from purchasers in this offering will be: $

The dilution per share to purchasers will be: $

37. (c) For the maximum offering:

The net tangible book value per share after the maximum offering will be: $

The amount of increase in net tangible book value per share as a result of receipt of cash from purchasers in this offering will be: $

The dilution per share to purchasers will be: $

38. For each share purchased in this offering a purchaser will pay $ _____ but will receive a share representing only $ _____ in net tangible book value, if the minimum offering is achieved, or $ _____, if the maximum offering is achieved.

The difference between the amount a purchaser pays for a share and the amount of net tangible book value that share represents is the dilution to the purchaser.

39. In a table, compare the existing stockholders' percentage ownership in the Company and the consideration paid for that ownership with that of purchasers in this offering.

	Shares Purchased		Total Consideration		Average Price
	Num-ber	Percent	Amount	Percent	Per Share
Existing holders:
New Purchasers:
Minimum of-fering
Maximum of-fering

In this Table you compare the effective cash cost of the shares held by existing stockholders to the contribution of the purchasers in this offering. The calculation of the average price per share should be on a fully diluted basis.

40. Using the offering price of these securities, what value is the Company's management attributing to the entire Company before the offering?

Evaluation of the Company. Multiply the total number of shares outstanding before the offering by the offering price. For the purpose of this calculation assume that all rights to convert into the shares of the Company have been exercised.

NOTE:

You should consider carefully whether the Company actually has this value at the present time. Some issues you should think about include: (1) the risks to which the Company is subject before it achieves success (see Item 1, Risk Factors); (2) the exercise prices of outstanding options (see Item 101); and (3) the prices that the Company's officers, directors, and principal stockholders paid for their shares (see Items 104 and 105).

MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF CERTAIN RELEVANT FACTORS

41. Is the Company having or does the Company anticipate having within the next 12 months any cash flow or liquidity problems? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, explain.

Cash Flow Problems. If the Company is having current cash flow problems, you need to explain what is causing those problems and what the Company intends to do about them. If the Company anticipates having any cash flow problems in the next twelve months, you should explain the anticipated problems and what the Company intends to do about them.

In completing this Item, you should focus on the possibility that everything will not go according to plan. You also should consider whether the minimum offering amount is adequate to give the Company a reasonable chance of surviving a cash flow problem within the next twelve months.

Predicting Future Cash Flow. To predict whether the Company will have future cash flow problems, you need to do a cash flow analysis. You should start by considering the Company's stage of development and the extent to which it intends to change its operations in the near term. How fast will it burn up the money from the offering together with any funds available to it from other sources? When will the Company begin production of its product? When will it begin to sell its product or its services to the public? What level of sales must it achieve to reach its break even point?

You should be prepared to discuss your fixed costs. Rent is often a fixed cost as is depreciation of equipment. Variable costs are much more difficult to estimate for a Company that has not begun production. You should estimate your variable costs.

Until the Company can pay its expenses from its own operations, it will need some other source of funds to pay those expenses. Salaries are one of the main expenses the Company will have to pay. The discussion of the Company's work force in answer to Items 16, 17 and 18 should provide indications as to its cash needs. Items 83 and 84, dealing with compensation to officers, directors, and key persons, also are relevant. If officers and directors will be drawing salaries from the proceeds of the offering, how long will they be allowed to do so at their proposed rates of pay?

You should discount the possibility of substantial contributions from operations to the Company unless the results of the Company's prior operations demonstrate its earning power. Even if the Company is currently profitable in limited operations, you should consider the effect of any proposed expansion of the scope of those operations, including the addition of new product lines and new processes on the Company's cash flow. Coordinate the prediction of future cash flow with Items 28 and 29, Milestones.

42. (a) Is the Company in default of the terms of any note, loan, lease, or other indebtedness or financing arrangement requiring the Company to make payments?

☐ Yes ☐ No

42. (b) If yes, explain, identifying the creditor stating the amount in default or the term that the Company has not complied with, and describing any consequences to the Company resulting from the default.

43. Are a significant amount of the Company's trade payables more than 90 days old?

☐ Yes ☐ No

44. Is the Company subject to any unsatisfied judgments, liens, or settlement obligations? ☐ Yes ☐ No
If yes, state the amounts.

45. Describe the Company's plans to resolve the problems identified in Items 41-44.

Plans to Resolve Existing Overdue Obligations. If the Company has existing overdue obligations to persons other than insiders that it will not pay before the completion of the offering, you may want to include in the amount of the offering the sum necessary to pay these obligations. In this case you would also disclose the payment of the obligations in the use of proceeds for the offering. As to the obligations to insiders, you would disclose any plan to defer payment on these obligations.

46. (a) Do the Company's financial statements show losses from operations?

☐ Yes ☐ No

46. (b) If yes, explain the causes underlying these losses and what steps the Company has taken or is taking to address these causes.

Causes of Losses from Operations. If the Company has shown losses from operations, you need to explain the causes of the losses and how the Company has or expects to address these causes. Why does the Company believe that its losses will not continue? Is the Company going to change its competitive strategy? Is the Company going to introduce a new product? Is it going to change its manufacturing or service delivery process? Is it going to trim its general and administrative expenses? Is it going to launch a new marketing program to attempt to achieve a sales level that will allow it to break even? It may be useful to review your answers to the Business and Properties Section, especially Items 13, 14, and 15.

This Item is not applicable if the Company's Financial Statements do not show losses from operations. You should, however, be sure that you are properly applying the definition of "losses from operations." Generally, the definition means the loss before interest expense, interest income, or gains, and losses on sales of assets, and other extraordinary items.

If one or more of the Company's promoters has operated a predecessor or similar business that failed or was abandoned, address how the Company intends to avoid a similar fate. The probability of continuing losses requires a special risk factor disclosure in Item 1.

47. (a) Describe any trends in the Company's historical operating results.

47. (b) Indicate any changes now occurring in the underlying economics of the Company's business which, in the opinion of Management, will have a significant impact upon the Company's results of operations within the next 12 months.

47. (c) Describe the probable impact on the Company.

47. (d) Describe how will the Company will deal with this impact.

Trends. This Item focuses on how the Company's business plan addresses the effects of external forces (primarily trends in the Company's industry) on the Company's operating results. Generally you will be looking for matters that either would have an impact on future operations and have not had an impact in the past or that have had an impact in the past and are not expected to have an impact in the future. This Item is especially important for companies in industries experiencing rapid change, whether that change is technological, regulatory, or market related.

If the Company has financial statements available for more than one fiscal period, you can compare the operating results to look for trends. You also may use general economic trends to answer this Item. For example, if the Company offers luxury goods, it may have difficulty surviving an economic downturn. How does the Company intend to address this type of problem?

Raising Additional Funds. If the Company cannot satisfy its cash needs for the next twelve months, you must disclose the consequences of not having sufficient cash. Include a special risk factor in Item 1, the Risk Factor Section. If the Company's answer involves raising further funds, you must disclose in detail the source or sources of these funds. If the Company will borrow money from a financial institution or other lender, disclose the details of the lender's commitment. If the Company does not have such a commitment, you must disclose that there is no assurance that the Company will be able to obtain a loan.

If the Company intends to use internally generated funds to provide additional necessary funds during the next twelve months, the Company's current operating results must support this claim.

If the Company plans to raise funds through the sale of additional shares or upon the exercise of outstanding warrants, you must state that there is no assurance that the Company will be able to successfully conduct such an offering or that the warrants will be exercised.

If the Company contemplates raising additional funds through the sale of assets, you must state that there is no assurance that the Company will be able to sell its assets at prices sufficient to raise the needed funds.

48. (a) Will the proceeds from this offering and any available funds identified in Item 32, satisfy the Company's cash requirements for the 12 month period after it receives the offering proceeds? ☐ Yes ☐ No

48. (b) If no, explain how the Company plans to satisfy its cash requirements. State whether it will be necessary to raise additional funds. State the source of the additional funds, if known.

Internally Generated Funds. Another source of financing may be internally generated funds (i.e., the (future) cash flow of the business.) If the Company has been operating at a steady profit for many years, it may be realistic to rely on internally generated funds combined with the offering proceeds to accomplish a further business objective. You may include future profits in your response to this Item only if the Company has a reasonable basis to support the disclosure and you discuss the assumptions and limitations on which the disclosure is based.

Other Sources of Funds. Describe material sources of other funds that will be employed in conjunction with the offering funds. The Company may combine investor funds with other funding sources. Some of the typical outside sources of financing: bank loans and lines of credit; asset sales; lease financing; and consignment inventories.

In some cases the true capital needs of the Company are much larger than the maximum offering amount. This frequently occurs when the Company is relying on Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 504 of Regulation D that limits the Company's securities offering to one million dollars. To make up for the short fall the Company may attempt to raise additional amounts through other methods of financing, such as bank loans or private financing. When the other financing the Company intends to rely on is concurrent with the securities offering, you should enlarge, Item 30, the Use of Proceeds Section, to include these funds as part of the Total Use of Net Proceeds. This will correctly reflect both the need for and the use of those funds. This will require adjusting Item 30.

Materiality. Disclose "material" amounts of funds from other sources. Generally, you should consider any source of financing that is 10% or more of the net offering proceeds to be material. Financing sources of less than this may also be material if they are critical to the Company's operation or business objective. For example, if bank financing is necessary to make a purchase in conjunction with funds from the use of proceeds, the amount (regardless of the percentage of the net offering proceeds) would be material, and you would need to disclose the financing in this Item. Also if the amount of outside financing is an item disclosed in the Company's Milestone Section, you should treat it as material. In disclosing the sources of financing, such as bank loans or lines of credit, disclose not only the amounts, but also the terms and conditions and timing of the receipt of the funds by the Company.

DESCRIPTION OF SECURITIES OFFERED

GENERAL

49. The securities being offered are:

- ☐ Common Stock
- ☐ Preferred or Preference Stock
- ☐ Notes, Debentures, or Bonds
- ☐ Limited Liability Company Membership Interests
- ☐ Units of two or more types of securities, composed of:
- ☐ Other (specify):

If the company is offering more than one type of security or the security has unusual features that make it hard to classify, you cannot simply use the name the company has chosen for the security but must look behind that name to see how the security will function. An example is if the shares offered are called preferred stock, but the shares are actually inferior to the company's common stock in dividend or liquidation preferences. Disclose the specific preferences that the security has (and doesn't have).

Preferred Stock . Normally, call stock "preferred stock" only if it has an unqualified preference over all outstanding classes of stock of the company as to both liquidation and dividends. Disclose if the dividends on preferred stock are cumulative. (See discussion of Item 54, Cumulative Dividends.) If the stock offered has certain preferences over some but not all outstanding classes of stock as to liquidation or dividends, you may refer to it as preference stock. In this case you must prominently disclose the exact nature of the preference and any limitations on the preference granted.

Debt Securities . For debt offerings, you should check the box "Notes, Debentures or Bonds" regardless of what the Company calls the debt instrument. In responding to Item 56, Interest Rate and Item 57, Maturity Date, discuss all the special characteristics of the debt being offered. You should be very careful when disclosing that a debt security is insured or guaranteed to ensure that those claims are accurate.

LLC Membership Interest. If the Company is a Limited Liability Company, check this box. Summarize the material provisions of a Limited Liability Company' governing agreements under Item 11, Other Material Factors.

Units of More than One Type of Security. If the Company is offering securities consisting of two or more types of securities, include an explanation of whether, and if so, when and under what conditions, the parts of the unit can be transferred independently of each other.

Other Types of Securities . If the Company is offering a security other than a stock, a debt instrument or a membership interest (such as an interest in a cooperative), disclose the special features of the security being offered.

50. These securities have:

Yes No

- ☐ ☐ Cumulative voting rights
- ☐ ☐ Other special voting rights
- ☐ ☐ Preemptive rights to purchase any new issue of shares
- ☐ ☐ Preference as to dividends or interest
- ☐ ☐ Preference upon liquidation
- ☐ ☐ Anti-dilution rights
- ☐ ☐ Other special rights or preferences (specify):

Explain any yes answers.

To help you respond to this Item, you or your attorney should review the statute under which the Company was organized as well as the Company's corporate or governance documents. Incorporation statutes typically set default provisions for voting rights and preemptive rights. If the Company has not specified particular rights for the securities being issued, the rights will generally be those specified by statute. Disclose the rights of holders of preferred stock, notes or other securities being offered. You may do this by summarizing the charter, bylaw or other provision that gives rise to those rights.

Lack of Rights. You also should state if the securities offered lack any rights typically granted to securities of the type offered. For example, if the securities offered are called "common shares" but lack equal voting rights, you should provide information about the shares that have the voting preference.

Anti-Dilution. Anti-dilution rights generally provide that the conversion price of a security that is convertible into common shares will be adjusted if the Company issues additional common shares at a price that is less than the conversion price. If the securities carry anti-dilution rights, describe the anti-dilution formula applied and why the rights might be beneficial to the investor. If the securities carry a combination of different anti-dilution provisions, describe that combination and the relative benefits to the investor.

51. Are there any restrictions on dividends or other distributions? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe.

Describe any restrictions to be imposed at the termination of the offering as well as those in place at the time the offering begins. For example, the Company may intend to use all or part of the offering proceeds to acquire a business and the seller of the business may be taking a loan back. If the loan agreement includes any restrictions on dividends, disclose those restrictions in responding to this Item even though the restrictions will not be in force until after the offering.

52. Are the securities convertible? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, state conversion price or formula.

Date when conversion becomes effective:

_____/_____/_____

Date when conversion expires:

This Item applies to any security convertible into another security at the option of the investor. A typical example is a note or preferred stock that is convertible into the Company's common stock. Describe securities convertible at the option of the Company in your response to Item 55, Preferred Stock) or Item 60, Debt Securities.

If the Company is issuing warrants that are part of a unit, disclose those warrants as convertible securities even if the warrants are or will be traded separately from the other securities to be issued.

The "date when conversion becomes effective" is the first date when the purchaser may convert the securities into other securities. Similarly, the "date when conversion expires" means the last date on which the purchaser may convert the securities into other securities. If the purchaser becomes entitled to convert the securities or loses the right to convert the securities because an event has occurred, describe that event.

53. Describe any resale restrictions on the securities and when the restrictions will terminate.

Securities regulatory agencies or the Company itself may impose resale restrictions for a variety of reasons. Resale restrictions affect an investor's ability to resell the security and, therefore, the value of the security. Be thorough and accurate when you describe the restrictions so that the investor is aware of any resale limitations before purchasing the security.

Legend Conditions. Legends are statements printed on the certificate representing the security that describe resale and other restrictions. Legend conditions inform securities purchasers of these restrictions. Many jurisdictions have specific requirements concerning where and how the legend conditions are to be placed on the certificate. You should be familiar with these requirements before placing the legend on the securities.

Offering to Limited Group. The Company may want to restrict ownership of the securities. For example, it may want to limit ownership to employees, independent contractors, or franchisees of the Company, property owners in a certain area, members of a social organization, etc. If the group that can buy the securities is restricted, disclose this as a resale restriction because it will affect whether an investor will be able to find a member of that group when the investor wants to sell the securities.

Restrictions Imposed by Securities Regulation . If a securities regulatory agency imposes any restrictions on the sale or resale of these securities, disclose those restrictions.

Restrictions for Intrastate Offerings. If you only want to sell the securities within one state and intend to rely on an exemption from registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission as an intrastate offering, you must disclose the restrictions imposed on the securities by federal securities legislation.

Restrictions Imposed by Other Authorities. Laws the Company must comply with may restrict the resale of the securities. For example, you may need to restrict transfer to meet Internal Revenue Code requirements (such as for an S corporation or a limited liability company), or to satisfy regulatory bodies governing the Company's industry. A licensing authority, for example, may restrict the resale of the securities so that the authority can check the background of new stockholders to determine whether they have any criminal history.

Required Resale to Company . If the Company requires that shares be sold back to it, disclose the resale price or formula with a description of how any formula operates. If the stockholder is guaranteed a return, answer the following questions: Will the Company set aside a reserve for this purpose? What is the basis for predicting that it will have the cash to make the payment? Is this basis reasonable?

Requirement that Company Consent to Resale . If stockholders wishing to transfer their shares must obtain the consent of the Company to the transfer, specify the conditions under which the Company will consent to a transfer.

PREFERRED STOCK

If the securities being offered are Preference or Preferred stock:

If the Company is not offering preferred or preference stock, state that you will not be responding to Items 54 and 55. Otherwise, respond to these Items.

54. Are unpaid dividends cumulative? ☐ Yes ☐ No

Dividends are cumulative if, when dividends are not paid when due, these unpaid dividends accumulate and must be paid before any dividends may be paid on the Company's common shares. If the dividends are not cumulative, disclose this in Item 1, Risk Factors, and on the Cover Page.

55. (a) Are the securities callable? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe.

55. (b) Are the securities redeemable? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe, including redemption prices.

A security is callable if the Company has the option to repurchase it. You should explain the terms and conditions under which the Company may call the securities. A security is redeemable if the Company is required to repurchase it. You should explain the terms and conditions under which an investor may redeem the securities, including the redemption price.

If the Company is required to repurchase preferred stock (rather than having an option to do that), you should treat the preferred stock as if it were debt and should answer Item 65, Ratio of Earnings to Fixed Charges.

DEBT SECURITIES

If securities being offered are notes or other types of debt securities:

If the Company is not offering notes or other types of debt securities, state that you will not be responding to Items 56 to 64. Otherwise, respond to these Items.

56. What is the interest rate on the debt securities? _____%

If the interest rate is variable or there are multiple interest rates, describe.

If the Company is offering securities with a variable interest rate, and the rate is based on the rate of a financial institution, clearly identify the institution and the name of the rate. If the rate is to be adjusted at intervals, explain when and how the Company will adjust the rate. Even after disclosing that the rate is based on a specific institution or index, you should choose a method of adjustment in the event that the rate base is discontinued. Describe when interest will be paid to investors (for example, monthly, quarterly, annually, or on the maturity of the debt security.)

57. What is the maturity date?

If the securities will have serial maturity dates, describe.

Debt instruments have serial maturity dates if a predetermined amount of the principal becomes due and payable at specified intervals or if individual instruments have different due dates or redemption dates. Explain the due dates for the instruments and the method by which the Company expects to pay the instrument when due. A prospective investor should know the date his or her instrument will fall due or be considered for redemption.

58. Is there a sinking fund? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe.

Sinking funds are established so that the Company can make periodic payments for the purpose of accumulating funds to retire a debt issue. The Company uses the funds (as specified in the indenture or contract establishing the fund) for periodic partial redemption of debt, for periodic retirement of serial bonds, or for the repayment of the debt at maturity. Describe the payment schedule, how the fund may be used, and whether the Company or an independent trustee will administer the fund.

If the required payments to the fund are not of a sufficient size and regularity for the Company to pay the debt as agreed, you should disclose this. Even if the required payments would be adequate, disclose whether the Company's financial position will permit it to make these payments.

59. Is there a trust indenture? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, state the name, address, and telephone number of Trustee.

A trust indenture establishes a trust relationship in which a trustee is appointed to represent the interests of the debt holders. You should determine if securities regulators will require that the Company enter into a trust indenture.

Disclose the material terms of any trust indenture and discuss what protections the trust will provide to investors. The Federal Trust Indenture Act of 1939 requires trust indentures to meet certain standards.

If there will be no trust indenture in connection with the issuance of debt, you should disclose in Item 1, Risk Factors, the lack of a trust indenture and the lack of an independent trustee representing the interests of the debt holders.

60. (a) Are the securities callable? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe.

60. (b) Are the securities redeemable? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe, including redemption prices.

A security is callable if the Company has the option to repurchase it. You should explain the terms and conditions under which the Company may call the securities. A security is redeemable if the Company is required to repurchase it. You should explain the terms and conditions under which an investor may redeem the securities, including the redemption price.

61. Are the securities secured by real or personal property? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe.

If the securities are secured by property, describe fully both the property and the security arrangement, including the value of the property. Disclose if the property will be purchased with the proceeds of the offering, and whether the purchase was made from Officers, Directors, or affiliates of the Company.

You should emphasize the degree to which any secured interest in property protects the debt holders. Disclose if there are any other creditors with secured interests in the property superior to or equal to the interest of the debt holders? If so, disclose details of the prior claim. You should disclose any arrangement that allows the Company to further encumber the property and to what degree. Disclose if the secured interest of the debt holders in the property has been perfected (through filing of a financing statement or otherwise under the Uniform Commercial Code) or if it will be perfected prior to the release of the offering proceeds from escrow. If not, disclose that, both in the answer to this Item and in Item 1, Risk Factors.

62. (a) Are the securities subordinate in right of payment of principal or interest?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, explain the terms of the subordination.

Securities are subordinated if the right of the holders to receive payment is subordinated to prior payment of other indebtedness of the Company. Disclose fully the terms of any subordination agreement or subordination clause in an indenture or agreement. You may need to disclose in Item 1, Risk Factors, that the debt offered is subordinated.

In addition, discuss the protections, if any, given to the purchasers in the present offering if the Company incurs future debt. Protections might include limitations on additional borrowing or a pledge that if the Company incurs any secured debt it will provide equivalent security to the holders of the debt offered under this Disclosure Document. If the Company will not provide investors with significant protection against subsequently incurred debt, you may need to disclose that in Item 1, Risk Factors.

62. (b) How much currently outstanding indebtedness of the Company is senior to the securities in right of payment of interest or principal? $

Check the figures here against the Company's most recent Financial Statements and the notes to those statements.

63. How much currently outstanding indebtedness ranks equally in right of payment with the securities?

Check the figures here against the Company's most recent Financial Statements and the notes to those statements.

64. How much currently outstanding indebtedness is junior (subordinated) to the securities? $

Check the figures here against the Company's most recent Financial Statements and the notes to those statements.

RATIO OF EARNINGS TO FIXED CHARGES

65. (a) If the Company had earnings during its last fiscal year, show the ratio of earnings to fixed charges on an actual and pro forma basis for that fiscal year.

		Actual		Pro Forma
		Last Fiscal	Interim	Minimum	Maximum
		Year	Period
"Earnings"	=
"Fixed Charges"

65. (b) If no earnings, show "Fixed Charges" only

If the Company is not offering debt securities or preferred stock that the Company is required to repurchase, state that you will not be completing this Item.

"Fixed Charges" means interest (including capitalized interest), amortization of debt discount, premium and expense, preferred stock dividend requirements of majority owned subsidiary, and the portion of rental expense that can be demonstrated to be representative of the interest factor in the particular case. The pro forma ratio of earnings to fixed charges should include incremental interest expense as a result of the offering of the securities.

"Earnings" means pretax income from continuing operations plus fixed charges and capitalized interest.

If the Company cannot show a ratio of earnings to fixed charges, on a pro forma basis, of at least 1:1, the Company may not have sufficient earnings to fulfill its obligations to debt holders. Unless the Company has other means to repay investors, you must disclose the Company's limited ability to repay its obligations in Item 1, Risk Factors.

You may find the following sample calculation of earnings/fixed charges ratio helpful to you in completing this calculation.

Assume that earnings for the last fiscal year were $300,000

Assume that fixed charges were $50,000

Assume that the Company is issuing debt that will require it to pay $100,000 per year if the minimum amount of the offering is sold and $200,000 per year if the maximum amount of the offering is sold.

Assume that there are no other changes to fixed charges and that earnings do not change as a result of the offering.

Sample Table. The actual numbers for the Company will be different.

		Actual		Pro Forma
		Last Fiscal	Interim	Minimum	Maximum
		Year	Period
"Earnings"	=	300,000	150,000	300,000	300,000
		50,000	25,000	150,000	250,000
"Fixed Charges"
Ratio		6:1	6:1	2:1	1.2:1

NOTE:

See the Financial Statements and especially the Statement of Cash Flow. Exercise care in interpreting the significance of the ratio of earnings to fixed charges as a measure of the "coverage" of debt service. The existence of earnings does not necessarily mean that the Company will have cash available at any given time to pay its obligations. See Items 41-48. Prospective purchasers should not rely on this ratio as a guarantee that they will receive the stated return or the repayment of their principal.

HOW THESE SECURITIES WILL BE OFFERED AND SOLDCompany Salespersons

66. Provide the following information for each officer, director, or Company employee who intends to offer or sell the securities:

Use the format in 66(a) to identify the officers, directors, and/or Company employees that will be offering or selling the securities. Repeat the format as often as necessary, using (a), (b), (c), etc. to label each person.

66. (a) Name:

Title:

Address:

Telephone Number:

67. Describe any compensation that the Company will pay each person in addition to his or her customary salary and compensation.

Include cash, securities, contracts, bonuses, rewards or other consideration as part of the compensation.

Contact the securities regulators for information concerning licensing requirements and other related matters.

OTHER SALES PERSONS AND FINDERS

68. Provide the following information for each salesperson who is not an officer, director, or employee of the Company:

Use the format in 68(a) to identify the persons that will be offering or selling the securities who are not officers, directors, and/or employees of the Company. Repeat the format as often as necessary, using (a), (b), (c), etc. to label each person.

66. (a) Name:

Company:

Address:

Telephone Number:

Salesperson and Broker-Dealer Disciplinary History. Check the disciplinary history of each person the Company intends to use as a salesperson or broker-dealer. You may determine whether a sales person or broker-dealer has disciplinary history by contacting the appropriate securities regulatory agency.

Broker-Dealer Licensing. If the salesperson the Company is planning to use to sell the offering is not affiliated with a licensed broker-dealer, the securities regulator may require the sales person to be registered as a broker-dealer. If the salesperson is a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD), file the Disclosure Document with NASD Regulation. NASD Regulation will review compensation to be paid to the salesperson to determine whether it complies with NASD rules. The jurisdictions in which you want to sell your offering cannot register the offering until NASD Regulation has completed its review. NASD Regulation will need time to complete its review, so you should file the Disclosure Document with NASD Regulation at the same time you file it with the jurisdictions in which you want to sell the offering.

69. Provide the following information for each person who is a finder:

Use the format in 69(a) to identify the finders that will be assisting in the offer or sale the securities. Repeat the format as often as necessary, using (a), (b), (c), etc. to label each person.

69. (a) Name:

Company:

Address:

Telephone Number:

"Finders" are persons who are compensated for acting as intermediaries in obtaining salespersons or otherwise making introductions to help the offering succeed. Certain securities regulators may require finders to be registered as securities salespersons.

70. Describe all compensation that the Company will pay to each person identified in Items 68 and 69.

Disclose compensation as well as contractual and indemnification arrangements. Include cash, securities, contracts, bonuses, rewards or other consideration as part of the compensation, in addition to the cash commission that you disclosed as a percent of the offering price on the cover page of this Disclosure Document. Indicate whether the Company will indemnify the sales persons or finders against liabilities under the securities laws and summarize the terms of any agreement to provide that indemnity.

Disclose all contracts between sales persons and the Company whether in the form of underwriting agreements with broker-dealers, employment contracts, or contracts with independent contractors. Where the Company is compensating them with additional securities, disclose.

71. Describe any material relationships between any of these sales persons or finders and the Company or its management.

Discuss any material relationships between sales persons or finders and the Company or its management so that an investor could understand possible conflicts of interest. You will even need to disclose relationships without formal written agreements if they are material. Because the idea of "materiality" is sometimes subjective, you should consider most relationships that the Company has with its sales persons material and disclose them.

The sales person may be related to an officer, director or controlling stockholder of the Company by blood or marriage. If so, you should disclose the identity of the related person and nature of the relationship.

PURCHASER LIMITATIONS

72. (a) Is the offering limited to certain purchasers? ☐ Yes ☐ No

72. (b) Is the offering subject to any other purchaser limitations? ☐ Yes ☐ No

72. (c) If the answer to either 72(a) or 72(b) is yes, describe the limitation.

Typical limitations are based on sales only to employees, independent contractors, or franchisees of the Company; property owners in a certain area; residents of a single state; members of a social organization; or investors meeting specified financial suitability standards or number.

Describe what steps the Company will take to ensure that the purchasers will meet the offering limitations.

IMPOUND OF OFFERING PROCEEDS

73. (a) Will the Company impound the proceeds of the offering until it raises the minimum offering proceeds? ☐ Yes ☐ No

73. (b) If yes, what is the minimum amount of proceeds that the Company must raise and place in an impound account before the Company can receive and use the proceeds?

73. (c) If the answer to Item 73(a) is "yes," state the date on which the offering will end if the Company has not raised the minimum offering proceeds. _____

An impound account is an account at a financial institution where proceeds of the offering will be held, generally until the minimum amount of proceeds is raised.

The primary purpose of placing funds raised in a securities offering into an impound account is to protect investors in the event that the Company's offering objectives are not met. If the proposed business of the Company requires a minimum amount of proceeds to commence or proceed with the business in the manner proposed, most states require that an impound account be established with a bank or other similar depository institution acting as independent impound agent. Refer to the discussion under Item 30, in the Use Of Proceeds section, on setting the minimum amount. The Company and its sales persons will deposit all proceeds received from investors into the impound account until the minimum amount of proceeds has been raised. Before spending significant time and expense, you should determine whether the securities regulators will accept the intended impound holder and the proposed terms and conditions of the impound agreement.

If a securities regulator requires that an impound agent be used to hold the offering proceeds, the agent generally must obtain the permission of the securities regulator before it can release the funds. Generally, these agreements provide for release of the funds when the minimum amount has been raised.

RELEASE OF IMPOUND CONTINGENT ON ANOTHER EVENT. In some circumstances, the Company may want to have the release of impound contingent on occurrence of some other event in addition to raising the minimum offering amount. Often, the other event will be the receipt of funds from another source. The Company might need both the minimum offering amount and the funds from the outside source to complete its objectives. You might want to keep the funds in an impound account until a government agency provides the Company with an approval or the Company acquires a license necessary for the Company to begin operations or to engage in a particular activity.

RELEASE OF PROCEEDS. If the Company does not raise the minimum proceeds during the offering period, investors that purchased securities will be entitled to a return of their investment. State the date on which the proceeds will be returned to investors if the Company has not raised the minimum offering amount.

74. (a) Does the Company reserve the right to extend the impound period?

☐ Yes ☐ No

74. (b) If yes, describe the circumstances under which the Company might extend the impound period.

Summarize any provisions in the impound agreement that allow the Company to extend the offering period. If no provision exists in the agreement that allows the Company to extend the period, you will need to apply to the securities regulators to request an extension. In that event, the Company will need to offer to rescind any sales made during the initial offering period.

75. State the name, address, and telephone number of the bank or other similar depository institution acting as impound agent.

76. If the offering proceeds are returned to investors at the end of the impound period, will the Company pay any interest earned during the impound period to investors?

☐ Yes ☐ No

MANAGEMENT

OFFICERS AND KEY PERSONS OF THE COMPANY

77. Provide the following information for each Officer and key person. The term "key person" means a person, other than the chief executive officer, chief operating officer, and chief financial officer, who makes a significant contribution to the business of the Company. Identify who performs the functions of Chief Executive Officer, Chief Operating Officer, and Chief Financial Officer.

Use the format in Item 77(a) to provide background information on the Company's chief executive officer, chief operating officer, chief financial officer, and other key employees. Repeat the format as often as necessary, using (a), (b), (c), etc. to label each person. Identify positions by title.

77. (a) Name: _____ Age: _____

Title: _____

Office Street Address: _____

Telephone Number: _____

Names of employers, titles, and dates of positions held during past five years, with an indication of job responsibilities.

Education (degrees, schools, and dates): _____

Also a Director of the Company ☐ Yes ☐ No

Indicate amount of time to be spent on Company matters if less than full time: _____

Officers and Key Persons of the Company. Identify all executive officers and the positions they hold in the Company. Also identify key persons who are not executive officers and their significance to the Company. Describe the responsibilities of all officers and key persons in enough detail to show whether their experience and abilities are relevant to their designated management positions.

Executive Officers and Key Persons Defined. When completing this Item, use the following definitions:

The "chief executive officer" has the overall authority to run the Company. In the small business context, the chief executive officer usually is the Company's president or general manager and is often the owner or principal stockholder.

The "chief operating officer," generally is entrusted with supervising the day-to-day business of a Company. Depending on the Company's size and structure, the chief executive officer may also be the chief operating officer.

The "chief financial officer" is usually the Company's "treasurer," the person who has custody of the Company's funds and financial records.

The term "key person" means a person, other than your chief executive officer, chief operating officer, and chief financial officer, who makes a significant contribution to the business of the Company. Examples of key persons are vice presidents, production managers, sales managers, and research scientists. A key person may be an employee, independent contractor, or consultant.

Employment History. For each executive officer and key person, describe all employment for the past five years, including each position held and the type of business involved. Include a complete five-year history of all prior occupations. Do not omit past ventures, successful or not. Securities laws require full disclosure of all material information. In addition, potential investors will notice gaps in employment history and may assume that the Company intentionally omitted information.

Note: When you respond to this Item, review Items 87 and 88. If Item 87 or 88 contains a detailed discussion of someone's employment history from the last five years, you do not need to provide a lot of information in this Item. Name the employer and the position held and refer the reader to Item 87 or 88, as appropriate, for more information.

Education. Briefly describe the education of executive officers and key persons. Do not include information about honorary degrees or training certificates unless it is relevant to the Company's business. Similarly, do not disclose outside affiliations with fraternal, charitable, or community organizations unless they are relevant to the Company's business.

Directors. Indicate which officers also serve as directors of the Company. State whether they have been elected for a specific term and whether they are serving under any special circumstances or arrangements.

Part-Time Officers and Key Persons. Indicate whether the Company's executive officers and key persons work less than full time. Disclose the approximate amount of time each part-time officer and key person devotes to Company matters. In addition, if an officer spends less than full time on Company matters, disclose why. Does the Company lack resources to pay his or her salary? Is the officer involved in other enterprises that demand his or her time? Is the officer engaged in another activity that is a conflict of interest?

If the reason that an executive officer or key person is part-time could have a negative impact on Company operations, disclose that information in detail in this section and summarize it in Item 1, Risk Factors.

DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY

78. (a) Number of Directors:

78. (b) Are Directors elected annually? ☐ Yes ☐ No If no, explain.

If directors are not elected annually, disclose how and when they are elected.

78. (c) Are Directors elected under a voting trust or other arrangement?

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, explain.

If there is a voting trust, stockholder agreement, or other agreement relating to the election of directors, describe all material provisions of the agreement.

Include in the description:

- the class of the securities held;
- the amount of securities held;
- the duration of the agreement;
- the names and addresses of the voting trustees; and
- the voting rights and other powers of the voting trustees.

If a voting trust, or similar arrangement, controls 10% or more of the Company's shares, disclose its impact on the ability of new investors to elect directors and exercise control over the Company. Also, you may need to summarize this information in Item 1, Risk Factors.

79. Provide the following information for each Director not described in Item 77:

Use the format in Item 79(a) to provide background information on each such Director. Repeat the format as often as necessary, using (a), (b), (c), etc. to label each person.

79. (a) Name:

Age:

Office Street Address:

Telephone Number:

Names of employers, titles, and dates of positions held during past five years, with an indication of job responsibilities.

Education (degrees, schools, and dates):

Identify all directors not described in Item 77, their term of office, and the period of time that they have already served. Describe their business experience for the past five years and identify other directorships they hold, naming each company and any affiliation with the Company. If a director holds a special title or serves in a special capacity, such as a member of a committee of the board of directors to review employee compensation or internal controls of the Company, briefly describe his or her responsibilities. Describe the background and responsibilities in enough detail to allow potential investors to determine whether their experience and abilities are relevant to their directorship.

CONSULTANTS

80. (a) Are all key persons employees of the Company? ☐ Yes ☐ No

80. (b) If no, state the details of each contract or engagement.

This Item requires you to disclose the terms of contracts or agreements for the services of key persons who are not employees of the Company. Disclose why these persons are not employees and describe the terms of the consulting agreement. Explain whether the terms of the consulting agreement reflect standard industry practice and whether the agreement favors one party over the other. Does the agreement permit a consultant to also work for a competitor of the Company or to go into the business of the Company on his or her own? Also disclose any past relationships between the consultant and any officers, directors, or key employees of the Company.

If any aspect of the arrangement with a consultant may negatively impact the Company, provide appropriate risk disclosure and add to Item 1, Risk Factors.

ARRANGEMENTS WITH OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND KEY PERSONS

81. Describe any arrangements to ensure that Officers, Directors, and key persons will remain with the Company and not compete with the Company if they leave.

Disclose the Company's arrangements to ensure the continued availability of officers, directors, and key persons through long-term contracts, non-compete agreements, or other arrangements. Also disclose the lack of such an arrangement with an officer, director, or key person.

Required Disclosures. Describe the terms and conditions of any of the following contracts, plans, or arrangements:

- Any employment contract between the Company and an officer, director, or key person;
- Any compensatory arrangement activated by the resignation, retirement, or other termination of an officer, director, or key person; and
- Any compensatory arrangement activated by a change in the person's responsibilities after a change in control of the Company.

Disclose the amount involved, including all periodic payments or installments.

Disclosure of Agreements Not to Compete. Disclose the terms of any agreements of the Company's officers, directors, and key persons not to compete with the Company if they leave the Company. Describe the steps the Company might take to enforce each agreement.

82. (a) Describe the impact on the Company if it loses the services of any Officer, Director, or key person due to death or disability.

The loss of an officer, director, or key person represents a significant risk to the on-going operations of the Company. This is particularly true if a few people manage the Company. Discuss the potential impact of such a loss on the business of the Company and the risk this poses to investors. Also disclose any relevant factors, such as age or health of an officer, director, or key person, which may increase the risk that his or her services will become unavailable. OUTSTANDING SECURITIES

96. Describe all outstanding securities.

You should describe briefly each outstanding class of equity security, including any preferred stock. If the Company has issued any debt securities, also provide a brief description of each class issued. If the only classes of securities currently outstanding are already described in your answer to Items 49-64, simply provide a cross reference to those answers.

97. Describe any resale restrictions on currently outstanding securities and when those restrictions will terminate, if this can be determined.

Resale Restrictions on Outstanding Shares . Disclose all resale restrictions on currently outstanding shares and the anticipated termination of these restrictions. Disclose any effect the potential sale of formerly restricted securities will have on the price of the securities purchased by investors in this offering.

Resale Restrictions for Shares Sold Under Exemptions. If the shares outstanding were not sold in a registered offering, they may have been sold pursuant to a federal or state exemption from registration that required the shares to be restricted. Outstanding shares of the Company that are restricted may be subject to the requirements of Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 144. Outstanding shares may also be restricted if they were sold solely within one state under Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 147. You should disclose the amount of shares held and the expected periods of time persons subject to these rules are required to hold their shares.

Restrictions Under Promotional Stock Escrow. You also must disclose all restrictions on transfer of promoters' shares. A promoter is defined as a person who is a founder of the Company or owner of 10% or more of the stock of the Company. The stock held by a promoter is called promotional stock, which securities regulators may require to be placed in an escrow with a financial institution, and a restriction called a legend may also be required on the stock certificates. If a promotional escrow or legend is required, disclose the terms of the promotional stock escrow and legend and identify the amount of shares affected and the amount held by each affected stockholder.

98. Describe any anti-dilution rights on outstanding securities.

Anti-Dilution Rights. Disclose any rights or provisions that protect existing stockholders from dilution of their interest in the securities of the Company. Give the details of any anti-dilution formulas, including such provisions regarding preferred shares, convertible debt or in other agreements dealing with securities of the Company. You should describe the dividend policy of the Company, and emphasize that the past payment of dividends or distributions of its stock should not be viewed either as an indication of the success of the Company or that the Company will pay dividends or make any distributions in the future.

You should disclose if the dividends have been paid from the Company's capital or from gains from nonrecurring sales of assets, rather than from earnings from operations.

Issuance or Sale. Disclose the issuance of all "securities", not just common stock. This may require changing the headings on the tabular disclosure. If the number of persons to whom securities were issued was less than 10, their names should be listed. You must also disclose the price, if any, at which the securities were issued and the date of sale.

TABULAR DISCLOSURE. Tabular disclosure is recommended with a narrative explanation preceding or following the table. The following is an example of tabular disclosure:

Options on Shares. If options, warrants or other rights have been issued in the last year, the number of shares that could be issued upon exercise must be disclosed, together with a footnote that describes the material terms of any options, warrants or rights, including the exercise price.

Stock Splits. Stock splits do not change a stockholder's percentage of ownership in the Company. The number of shares and prices disclosed should be restated to reflect any stock splits. Items 25-26 should discuss the stock split.

Note:

If the Company has not issued or sold any securities in the last 12-month period, you should make that disclosure.

PRINCIPAL STOCKHOLDERS

105. In the following table, provide the name and office street address of each person who beneficially owns at least 10% of the common or preferred stock of the Company.

..	Average		No. of Shares
..	Price		No. of		Held After
..	Per		Shares		% of
..	Class of		Share		% of
..			Now Held		All Securities
			Total		Total

Shares

Sold

106. Number of shares beneficially owned by all Officers and Directors as a group:

106. (a) Before offering: _____ shares (_____ % of total outstanding)

106. (b) After offering: Assuming minimum securities sold: _____ shares (_____ % of total outstanding)

106. (c) After offering: Assuming maximum securities sold: _____ shares (_____ % of total outstanding)

Principal Stockholders. You should disclose the ownership interest of principal stockholders, officers and directors of the Company. List the principal stockholders (any stockholder whose ownership interest represents 10% or more of the total stock outstanding) in order of their percentage of interest. Shares held by family members, through corporations or partnerships, or through any other arrangement or agreement that would allow a stockholder, officer, or director to direct or control the voting of the shares are considered to be "beneficially owned" by the person who controls them. Those shares should be included when calculating the percentage of ownership interest.

The remainder of the required information should be calculated as follows:

"Average Price per Share": means the average price paid for securities currently owned by each principal stockholder, or in the case of options, warrants or convertible securities, their exercise price. Additional disclosure should be provided in a footnote to the table if the securities were obtained in a non-cash transaction. Describe the type of non-cash consideration given in exchange for receiving shares, and how the value of the consideration was determined.

"Number of Shares Now Held" means the number of shares of common stock (or options, warrants, or convertible securities, if more than one class of securities is owned) beneficially owned prior to the offering.

"% of Total" means the percentage of that class of securities outstanding prior to the offering or, as used in the last column, the percentage of the total of that class of securities outstanding after giving effect to the sale of all securities being offered in this offering. The total amount of securities outstanding is calculated assuming all options have been exercised and all convertible securities have been converted.

Note:

This Item asks the Company to disclose the number of shares beneficially owned by all officers and directors as a group. The required information (including the figures representing the total shares outstanding) should be calculated assuming the exercise of all options and the conversion of all convertible securities. Tabular disclosure is recommended with a narrative explanation preceding or following the table. The following is an example of tabular disclosure:

Sample Calculation: Beneficial Ownership of Officers and Directors (assumes 647,020 shares outstanding prior to the offering; minimum offering of 40,000 shares; and maximum offering of 216,000 shares).

Name	Shares	Options	Total
CEO	244,312	45,000	289,312
CFO	214,582	12,000	226,582
Director	1,000	19,000	20,000

Total	459,894	76,000	535,894
% Ownership Pre-Offering	535,894/647,020	=	82.8%
% Ownership Post-Offering Minimum	535,894/687,020	=	78.0%

NOTE:

These calculations assume that all outstanding options have been exercised and all convertible securities have been converted.

MANAGEMENT RELATIONSHIPS AND TRANSACTIONSFAMILY RELATIONSHIPS

107. Is there a family relationship between any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder? ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, describe.

Family Relationships. Describe the nature of any family relationship between any director, executive officer, key person, 10% stockholder, or any person nominated or chosen by the Company to become one of the foregoing.

The term "family relationship" means any relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption, but not extending beyond a first cousin.

MANAGEMENT TRANSACTIONS

108. (a) Will the Company use any offering proceeds to acquire assets from any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder?
☐ Yes ☐ No

108. (b) Will the Company use any offering proceeds to acquire assets from an associate of any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder?
☐ Yes ☐ No

108. (c) If the answer to Item 108(a) or (b) is "yes," provide detailed information about each transaction. Include the name of the person, the cost to the Company, the method used to determine the cost, and any profit to the seller.

The Company must disclose acquisitions to be made with offering proceeds.

Acquisition of Assets. You should respond fully to this Item. Even if a particular acquisition of assets is already discussed in Item 30, Use of Proceeds, you should emphasize the particular acquisition of assets, in this Item. The acquisition of assets usually will be purchases by the Company. However, a long term lease might also be considered to be an acquisition of assets. If so, you should describe it as if it were a purchase. The Company must set out the cost and material terms of the acquisition transaction.

Principal Stockholders. As set forth in Item 105 a person is a "principal stockholder" if the person beneficially owns, directly or indirectly, 10% or more of the common or preferred stock (or equity interests) presently outstanding. If the shares are held by family members, through corporations or partnerships or otherwise in a manner that would allow a person to direct or control the voting of shares, the Company must include these shares as beneficially owned.

Associate. An associate includes a person who is an officer, director, a partner, or is a direct or indirect beneficial owner of 5% or more of any class of equity security of an affiliate; a trust or estate in which an affiliate has a substantial beneficial interest or for which an affiliate serves as a trustee or in a similar capacity; or an affiliate's spouse and an affiliate's relative by blood or marriage.

Valuation. If the Company is purchasing an asset from an associate, you should disclose the name of the person, the cost to the Company, and the method of determining the cost. One method of determining cost is the fair market value as established by a market for the particular asset. The cost to the seller might form the basis for the cost to the Company. Generally you should disclose the lower of the seller's cost or market value. You also might disclose the asset's chain-of-title back to an independent third party so as to demonstrate a starting point for fair market value or original cost.

If the Company has obtained or will obtain an appraisal of the value of the asset to be acquired, disclose the value. If the Company has not obtained an appraisal, disclose that fact.

Disclosure of Profit. The Item requires the Company to disclose any profit to an officer, director, employee, principal stockholder, or an associate. Based upon their relationship with the Company, these persons should be required to disclose their profit. The seller acquired the property for a certain amount and sold it for a certain amount so that the profit may be estimated in that manner. The seller of the asset must report profits earned for income tax purposes, usually calculated as the sale price minus the cost basis in the asset. If the seller cannot determine what his or her basis is, the Company should assume that the seller's tax basis is zero and insist that the entire amount received be disclosed as profit.

Risk Factors. At a minimum, the Company must disclose that any transaction with an officer or director or other affiliated person was not engaged in as an arms-length transaction. Additionally, if the method of determining the value is not based on the lower of fair market value or the cost to the seller a special disclosure covering this must be made. If the Company has not obtained an appraisal of the particular asset being acquired, an appropriate risk factor also might be needed.

109. (a) Will the Company use any offering proceeds to reimburse any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder for services already rendered, assets previously transferred, or moneys loaned or advanced, or otherwise? ☐ Yes ☐ No

109. (b) If yes, provide detailed information about each transaction. Include the name of the person, the cost to the Company, the method used to determine the cost, and any profit to the person.

Reimbursement. You should disclose if any amount of the proceeds is to be used to reimburse an officer, director, employee or stockholder for past services, assets transferred, moneys loaned and any other such transactions. Reimbursement covers actual out of pocket payments. A typical example of reimbursement arises upon the formation of the Company. A person may advance funds for legal services for the formation of the Company and may also advance funds for the initial accounting in preparation for the securities offering.

You should discuss the particular transaction and the benefit to the Company; evaluate the services rendered or assets transferred to the Company; and finally, the value to be reimbursed. Additionally, disclose whether the person is making any profit on the particular transaction. Generally, a person may not seek reimbursement for activities that have not benefited the Company, such as for his or her own purchase of Company stock.

110. (a) Has the Company made loans to any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder within the last two years? ☐ Yes ☐ No

110. (b) Does the Company plan to make loans to its Officers, Directors, key persons, or principal stockholders in the future?

☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe any policies the Company has adopted to deal with the conflicts of interest in these transactions:

DISCLOSURE OF LOANS. You should disclose in the Disclosure Document if the Company is permitted to make loans to its officers, directors, key persons or principal stockholders in the future, excluding advances made in the normal course of business for travel, business expense and similar ordinary operating expenditures. Disclosure should include whether loans must be approved by a resolution of the Board of Directors and what role, if any, independent directors play in the approval process. Disclose any steps to be taken by the Company to determine if the loans should be made, including purpose for the loans, repayment schedules, maturity lengths, interest rates, credit reports, and promissory notes.

111. (a) Has the Company done business with any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder within the last two years? ☐ Yes ☐ No

111. (b) Is the Company currently doing business with any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder? ☐ Yes ☐ No

111. (c) Does the Company plan to do business with its Officers, Directors, key persons, or principal stockholders in the future? ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, describe any policies the Company has adopted to deal with the conflicts of interest in these transactions:

DISCLOSURE. You should disclose if the Company is permitted to do business with its officers, directors, key persons or principal stockholders in the future. Disclosure should include whether business arrangements will be on terms comparable to those available from unaffiliated third parties. Disclose any approval process required by the Board of Directors and what role, if any, Directors not having an interest in the business arrangements play in the approval process.

112. Explain any "yes" answers to Items 110(a), 111(a), or 111(b). State the principal terms of any significant loans, agreements, leases, financing, or other arrangements.

Transactions with Management . Describe any material transactions involving the purchase or sale of assets by the Company (or any of its subsidiaries) other than in the ordinary course of business. You should state the cost of those assets to the purchaser and, if acquired by the seller within the previous two years of the transaction, the cost to the seller. Describe the methods used in determining the Company's purchase or sale price and the name(s) of the person(s) making that determination.

Materiality of an Interest. To determine if a transaction needs to be disclosed, consider the relationship between the parties and the amount of the transaction as well as its importance to the Company and prospective stockholders.

113. (a) Has any Officer, Director, key person, or principal stockholder guaranteed or co-signed the Company's bank debt or other obligations? [] Yes [] No

113. (b) If yes, explain the terms of each transaction and describe the Company's plans for repayment.

LITIGATION

114. Describe any recent or pending litigation or administrative action which has had or may have a material effect upon the Company's business, financial condition, or operations. State the names of the principal parties, the nature and current status of the matters, and the amounts involved.

115. Describe any threatened litigation or administrative action that may have a material effect upon the Company's business, financial condition, or operations. State the names of the principal parties, and the nature and current status of the matters.

Introduction . In response to Items 114 and 115 the Company or its counsel should evaluate the merits of each pending litigation proceeding, including the potential impact on the Company's business, and financial condition.

Scope of Litigation Disclosure. You should disclose any litigation that is likely to have a material effect on the Company. Disclosure includes information not only about present pending litigation, but also includes past concluded litigation, and future unasserted claims of which the Company is aware. Disclosure is not limited to actions in which the Company is a party, but also includes separate litigation filed against the Company's directors, officers or key persons if the litigation is likely to have a material effect on the Company. The Company also should disclose any material litigation involving any subsidiary or affiliate. The Company also should include in its litigation disclosure, any outstanding judgments or liens that are a result of litigation.

MATERIALITY. If the litigation is material in its effect on the Company, you must disclose that. The Company should use its own judgment to determine if disclosure is needed. If there is any doubt about what is material, the Company should seek the assistance of an attorney or an accountant. A business may routinely generate a certain type of claim, for example, a negligence claim. The claim may not be material unless it exceeds the average for that type of claim. Claims for damages below 10% of the net assets of the Company are not usually material. A proceeding for bankruptcy, receivership or a similar proceeding is always material. Regulatory problems involving securities law violations should always be disclosed. Finally, disclose any material legal proceeding in which certain corporate insiders or affiliates of the Company are in a position that is contrary to that of the Company.

In determining the disclosure necessary in the Company's financial statements, answer the question: Should pending or threatened litigation be disclosed as a contingent liability? You should consider the following factors: the period in which the underlying cause of action occurred; if the litigation is pending, the probability of an unfavorable outcome, or if the litigation is threatened, the probability that a suit may be filed and the possibility of an unfavorable outcome; and, the ability to reasonably estimate the amount or range of potential losses.

Counsel for the Company should be asked to assess the likelihood that the company may lose. Based on the ability to reasonably estimate the amount of any contingent liability, an assessment may be required as to the material impact the resulting liability would have on the financial condition of the Company. Ordinarily, contingent liabilities associated with securities law violations must be disclosed.

CONTENT OF DISCLOSURE. To fully respond to this Item, you should include the name of the court where the proceeding is pending, a description of the facts underlying the claim and the relief sought.

TAX ASPECTS

116. Describe any material tax consequences to investors in this offering.

Tax Impact on Investors. You should discuss the federal income tax treatment of the Company and its impact on investors. If the Company is set up as an "S Corporation," a limited liability company, or other entity in which income is usually "passed through," you should discuss the impact on investors. Investors need to know how they will be taxed. Discuss other relevant tax treatment that may have an impact on investors.

Potential Loss of S Corporation Status. The primary risk involved in S corporation status is the Company's potential loss of that status. Disqualifying factors should be discussed in light of the individual circumstances of the issuer.

Feasibility Of S Corporation Status for Companies Registering an Offering. Because an S Corporation may have only 75 stockholders and one class of stock, an exemption from any state registration process should be actively pursued prior to considering registration. A Company claiming S corporation status that files an application should retain a qualified tax advisor to evaluate the tax aspects and risks and obtain a written analysis or opinion. If such analysis and opinion is not obtained from an independent tax advisor, the Company should disclose this fact.

Limited Liability Companies . Since this type of entity may provide the tax advantages of a limited partnership and the liability protection of a corporation and may issue multiple classes of stock, you should discuss any tax impact on the company and its members.

REIT' S and Cooperatives. Certain types of businesses organized under state law as corporations may qualify for special tax treatment. Two possible examples are the real estate investment trust and the cooperative. If a corporation qualifies as a REIT or a co-op for tax purposes, there may be a substantial individual tax impact on the members, which you should disclose to potential investors.

Net Operating Losses. Some companies may have accumulated a substantial net operating loss that may be carried forward into subsequent tax years to shelter income. If the Company intends to emphasize this disclosure in the offering, specific and accurate disclosure, should be included.

OTHER MATERIAL FACTORS

117. Describe any other material factors, either adverse or favorable, that will or could affect the Company or its business or which are necessary to make any other information in this Disclosure Document not misleading or incomplete.

Catch All. The Items in this Disclosure Document do not cover all industries and types of businesses. You may find it necessary to add material disclosure under this Item that is not covered elsewhere. You should understand that an investor may not be able to make an informed investment decision unless full and complete information about the Company is given when completing the Disclosure Document.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

118. (a) Describe the types of information that the Company will provide to security holders in the future.

118. (b) Describe the schedule for providing this information.

Your Disclosure Document should disclose what financial information about the company's progress will be provided after the offering of securities has been completed. You also should disclose when that information will be provided. Generally, stockholders will receive an annual report within 120 days after the end of your fiscal year. The report should contain financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and reviewed by independent certified public accountants in accordance with the accounting and review service standards promulgated by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. See Appendix B.

118. (c) Attach the Company's financial statements to the Disclosure Document.

General Instructions for Financial Statements. There should be total consistency between the information in the narrative responses to Disclosure Document Items and the information appearing in the Financial Statements, including the accompanying Notes. You should contact your securities regulator to discuss financial statement requirements, as certain states have financial statement requirements that differ from those discussed in this manual.

Financial Statements. Attach to the Disclosure Document for the Company and its consolidated subsidiaries, a balance sheet as of the end of the most recent fiscal year. If the Company has been in existence for less than one fiscal year, attach a balance sheet as of the date within 135 days of the date of filing the registration application. If the first effective date of state registration, as set forth on the Cover Page of the Disclosure Document, is within 45 days after the Company's fiscal year end and financial statements for the most recent fiscal year are not available, the balance sheet may be as of the end of the preceding fiscal year. An additional balance sheet, at least as current as the end of the Company's most recent third fiscal quarter, should be included. Also attach, for the Company and its consolidated subsidiaries, and for its predecessors, statements of income and cash flows and statements of changes in stockholders' equity for the most recent fiscal year or such shorter period as the Company (including predecessors) has been in existence. In addition, for any interim period at least as current as the end of the Company's most recent third fiscal quarter, attach statements of income and cash flows. Financial statements shall be prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. If the Company has not conducted significant operations, statements of receipts and disbursements shall be included in place of statements of income. Interim financial statements may be unaudited. All other financial statements shall be audited by independent certified public accountants; provided, however, that if each of the following four conditions are met, such financial statements in place of being audited may be reviewed by independent certified public accountants in accordance with the Accounting and Review Service Standards promulgated by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants: (a) the Company shall not have previously sold securities in an offering involving the general solicitation of prospective investors using advertising, mass mailings, public meetings, "cold call" telephone solicitation or any other method directed toward the public, (b) the Company has not been previously required under federal or state securities laws to provide audited financial statements in connection with any sale of its securities, (c) the aggregate amount of all previous sales of securities by the Company (exclusive of any debt financing with banks and similar commercial lenders) shall not exceed $1,000,000, and (d) the amount of the present offering does not exceed $1,000,000.

If since the beginning of its last fiscal year the Company has acquired another business, you should provide a pro forma combined balance sheet as of the end of the fiscal year, and a pro forma combined statement of income as if the acquisition had occurred at the beginning of the Company's last fiscal year, and any of the following exists: (a) the investments in and advances to the acquired business by the Company and its subsidiaries (other than the acquired business) exceed 20% of the Company's assets on its consolidated balance sheet at the end of the Company's last fiscal year, (b) the Company's and its subsidiaries (other than the acquired business') proportionate share of the total assets (after intercompany eliminations) of the acquired business exceeds 20% of the assets on the consolidated balance sheet, or (c) the Company's and its subsidiaries (other than the acquired business') equity in income from continuing operations before income taxes, extraordinary items and cumulative effect of a change in accounting principle, of the acquired business exceeds 20% of such income of the Company and its consolidated subsidiaries for the Company's last fiscal year.

The financial statements should reflect all stock splits (including reverse stock splits), stock dividends and recapitalizations even if they have occurred since the date of the financial statements.

Any responses to Items in the Disclosure Document discussing income or revenues should identify the accounting period(s) involved and those figures should agree with the figures on the Income Statement for the same period(s). Any discussion of outstanding shares, warrants, and options (both in number and price) in your Disclosure Document should take into account stock splits and stock dividends. Often the stock dividends and splits are reflected only in the Financial Statements (or in a subsequent event Note to the latest Financial Statement).

The above discussion of financial statements may appear to permit the Company to include only the Balance Sheet and Income Statement in an annual report. In order for the financial statements to be in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, the Company must also present the Statement of Cash Flows and the Statement of Retained Earnings.

SIGNATURES:

The Company's Chief Executive Officer, Chief Financial Officer, and its Directors must sign this Disclosure Document. When they sign this Disclosure Document, they represent that they have diligently attempted to confirm the accuracy and completeness of the information in the Document.

When the Chief Financial Officer signs this Disclosure Document, he or she represents that the financial statements in the Document have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles which have been consistently applied, except where explained in the notes to the financial statements and represents that the financial statements fairly state the Company's financial position and results of operations, or receipts and disbursements, as of the dates and period(s) indicated. He or she also represents that year-end figures include all adjustments necessary for a fair presentation under the circumstances.

SAMPLE RISK FACTORS

These examples are intended to aid the Company in developing risk factor disclosure for the Company's own offering. These examples should not be copied word for word nor will they apply to every offering. An offering may require risk factor disclosure for which an example is not included in this list. Each risk factor should summarize the potential impact of the risk on the investor and not simply state a fact.

For a company with a limited operating history:

We have a limited operating history.

We were incorporated on xx/xx/xx and have been operating only since xx/xx/xx. Because we have been operating for only a short period of time, we have not produced a profit. There is no assurance that we will ever produce a profit. As a new enterprise, we are likely to be subject to risks our management has not anticipated. We have limited resources and will not be able to continue operating without the proceeds from this offering. It is possible that the proceeds from this offering and our other resources may not be sufficient for us to continue to finance our operations.

For a company that has a history of losses with no expectation for immediate profits:We have incurred losses since inception and may incur future losses.

We have not yet generated a profit from operations. As of the date of our most recent financial statements, we had an accumulated deficit of $ _____. We expect to continue to experience losses from operations and we cannot predict when or if we will become profitable. If we achieve profitability, we may not be able to sustain it.

For a company competing in a highly technical area where products rapidly become obsolete:

The (insert description) business is highly technical and our failure to introduce new products to the market may harm our business.

We operate in a highly technical industry, which is characterized by frequent introductions of new products and services into the market. Our success will depend, in part, on our ability to improve our present products, to develop new products and to provide necessary services and support. The proceeds of this offering may not provide us with sufficient funds to finance our research and development needs.

For a company that competes against larger and better financed companies in a competitive business:We may not have sufficient financial resources to successfully compete in the (insert description) business.

A large number of enterprises provide products or services similar to ours. We will be competing with established businesses that have a operating history, and greater financial resources, management experience and market share than we have. There can be no assurance that we will be able to compete or capture adequate market share. We will not be profitable if we cannot compete successfully with other businesses.

For a company that depends on the services of a limited number of key persons:

We depend on the services of key employees, whose knowledge of (insert description) would be difficult to replace.

Our success depends substantially on the services of (insert names and title of key persons). Our business may be harmful if we lose the services of these people and we are not able to attract and retain qualified replacements.

For a company with inexperienced management:

Our officers and directors have no experience managing a company in the (insert description) business.

None of our officers and directors has managed a company in the (insert description) business nor has experience in managing a development stage enterprise. Our ability to operate successfully may depend on our ability to attract and retain qualified technical personnel, who may be in great demand.

For a company whose management has been involved in other business ventures that have not been successful:

Our officers and directors have been involved in other business ventures that have not been successful.

Prior to organizing the Company, (insert name of appropriate officers and directors) operated a business similar to ours in which shareholders lost part or all of their investment. (Insert name of appropriate officers and directors) operated a company in the (insert description) business, which while not similar to our business, also resulted in losses to investors. Our ability to operate successfully may be determined by the ability of our officers and directors to succeed where they have failed before.

For a company whose business is highly regulated:

Our failure to comply with government rules and regulations may harm our business.

Our business must comply with local, state and federal rules and regulations. (BRIEFLY identify type of regulations, e.g., taxation, environmental, licenses.) We believe that we comply with the rules and regulations with which we are required to comply. If we fail to comply with a rule or regulation we may be subject to fines, or other penalties, or our permit or license may be lost or suspended. We may have to stop operating and our investors may lose their entire investment.

For a company whose officers, directors or key persons own a substantial number of promotional shares and options:

Our officers, directors and key persons will continue to have substantial control over the Company after the offering.

Officers, directors and key persons own (insert number) shares of common stock, which will represent (insert number) % of outstanding common stock. Consequently, they will be able to elect all of the directors and control the direction of the Company. They paid an average price of $_____ per share as compared with the public offering price of $_____ per share. In addition, they own (insert number) options or warrants which are exercisable to purchase additional shares of common stock at an average price of $_____ during the next (insert number) years. See Item 105, Principal Stockholders.

For a Company that has significant dilution between the offering price and book value:

The price of a share in this offering is significantly higher than the book value of the stock.

If we sell only the minimum number of shares in this offering, the book value per share will be $ _____. This is (insert number) % of the offering price. As a result, investors participating in this offering will incur immediate and substantial dilution. To the extent outstanding options or warrants to purchase our shares are exercised, new investors will incur further dilution. Book value is determined by subtracting liabilities from tangible assets and dividing the answer by the number of outstanding shares.

For shares that have no existing market:

Because there is no market for our common stock, you may not be able to sell your shares.

You may never be able to sell your shares and recover any part of your investment, unless we are able to complete a subsequent public offering or we are able to sell the Company for cash or merge with a public company.

For an arbitrary offering price:

The offering price of our shares is arbitrary.

The offering price of $ _____ per share bears no relationship to established value criteria such as net tangible assets, or a multiple of earnings per share and accordingly should not be considered an indication of the actual value of the Company.

For a debt offering where no sinking fund will be established:

We have not established a sinking fund for the purpose of accumulating funds for retiring the (insert name of debt instrument).

A sinking fund provides for periodic accumulation of funds over the life of the obligation with an independent trustee for the purpose of retiring the (insert name of debt instrument) at maturity. We will not maintain a sinking fund for the retirement of the (insert name of debt instrument) offered here and may not have the ability to retire the obligations when they mature.

For a debt offering where there will be no independent trustee:

We have not retained an independent trustee to act on investors' behalf in the event of default of our obligation to repay the (insert name of debt instrument).

We have not retained an independent trustee to act on investors' behalf in the event of default. Therefore, there is no independent third-party to protect investors' interests in the event the Company fails to meet any of the agreements contained in the trust indenture.

For an offering to be sold by company employees:

We have not retained an independent party to sell the offering and the failure of our officers to sell the offering may result in a shortage of operating funds.

Officers of the Company are offering our shares on a "best-efforts" basis. We have not contracted with an underwriter, placement agent, or other person to purchase or sell all, or a portion of our shares and there is no assurance that we can sell all or any of the shares. Further, if we had hired an underwriter, placement agent, or other independent person to sell the offering, that person would have conducted an independent due diligence examination into our business.

Accounting Terminology

The following is a description of some of the more important terms and concepts used in accounting:

Financial Statements

General Purpose Financial Statements

The term "financial statements" refers to a presentation of financial data, including accompanying notes, derived from accounting records and intended to communicate an entity's economic resources or obligations at a point in time or the changes therein for a period of time in conformity with a comprehensive basis of accounting. Financial statements are the means by which the information accumulated and processed in financial accounting is periodically communicated to those who use it. Although financial statements come in a wide variety of forms, which serve various purposes, there are four basic general purpose statements. These are:

Balance Sheet

Statement of Income or Statement of Operations

Statement of Retained Earnings or Statement of Changes in Stockholders' Equity

Statement of Cash Flows

A Balance Sheet is a statement which presents (as of a moment in time, unlike the other three statements which cover a time period) the assets, liabilities, and net worth of an entity. Sometimes this statement is titled Statement of Assets and Liabilities, Statement of Financial Position, or a similar title.

The Statement of Income or Statement of Operations presents for a period of time, an entity's revenues, costs, expenses, and net income or loss for the period involved. Other titles which are used include Profit and Loss Statement. An analogous statement for a cash basis entity could be a Statement of Receipts and Disbursements.

A Statement of Changes in Stockholders' Equity presents the changes that occurred during a given period affecting the corporation's capital accounts including retained earnings. If the only changes resulted from earnings, losses, or dividends, a company may simply present a Statement of Retained Earnings, or may combine the Statement of Changes in Retained Earnings with the Statement of Income. For partnerships, the analogous statement would be a Statement of Changes in Partners' Capital; for not-for-profit organizations, the corresponding statement would be a Statement of Changes in Fund Balances.

The Statement of Cash Flows is a statement that presents cash inflows and outflows from operating, financing, and investing activities for a given period.

Prospective Financial Statement.

Prospective financial information refers to any financial information about the future. The information may be presented as complete financial information or limited to one or more elements, items, or accounts. A prospective financial statement may be either a Financial Forecast or a Financial Projection.

A Financial Forecast is a prospective financial statement that presents, to the best of the responsible party's knowledge and belief, an entity's expected financial position, results of operations, and changes in financial position. In contrast, a Financial Projection is a prospective financial statement that presents, given one or more hypothetical assumptions, an entity's expected financial position, results of operations, and changes in financial position.

Classification of Financial Statements

Introduction

Financial statements may be classified by the kind of third party involvement. In this context there are two classes of financial statements: Audited and Unaudited. Audited financial statements include only those statements which have been audited by independent certified public accountants (CPAs) and in some states, independent public accountants (PAs). Unaudited financial statements include those reviewed or compiled by CPAs or PAs, but also include financial statements prepared by management without any service performed by an independent CPA or PA.

Audited Statements

The term audit, audited, or auditing refers to an examination of the books and records of an entity by an independent CPA or independent PA intended to serve as a basis for the expression of opinion on the fairness with which the entity's financial statements present financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP). The auditor's report is the medium through which the accountant expresses an opinion or, if circumstances dictate, disclaims an opinion. Also, if circumstances require it, the auditor's report may contain an explanatory paragraph describing an uncertainty about the entity's ability to continue as a going concern for a reasonable period of time.

The terms "certified" or "examined" are sometimes used synonymously with the term "audited."

Sometimes, an independent accountant may audit financial statements that are not prepared in accordance with GAAP, but rather are prepared on another comprehensive basis of accounting (OCBOA). Such statements include cash basis, tax basis, regulatory basis, and other non-GAAP basis. Such statements are generally titled differently from the equivalent GAAP statements. For example, a cash basis financial statement reflecting financial position might be titled Statement of Assets and Liabilities Arising from Cash Transactions instead of Balance Sheet.

Unaudited Statements

The term "unaudited" refers to all statements which have not been audited. Four classes of unaudited statements are discussed in this Appendix. These are:

Management prepared statements without any third party involvement.

Compilations pursuant to AICPA's Statement on Standards for Accounting and Review Service (SSARS).

Reviews pursuant to SSARS of a nonpublic entity (although under certain circumstances a review of a public entity may be made under SSARS).

Reviews of interim financial statements of public entities pursuant to SAS.

The following is a brief description of the four classes of unaudited statements:

Statements Prepared by Management Only

These are statements in which no third party accounting service by an independent CPA or PA is involved. Such statements may have been prepared by an in-house accountant or other qualified individual or may have been prepared by someone with a very limited accounting background.

Statements prepared by management would not necessarily be in accordance with GAAP. Often such statements are prepared on an OCBOA basis.

Compilations

A compilation is a service by a CPA or a PA which involves reading compiled statements and considering whether they appear to be appropriate in form and free from obvious material errors.

Compiled financial statements are accompanied by a report which states that:

A compilation has been performed.

A compilation is limited to presenting in the form of financial statements information that is the representation of management.

The statements have not been audited or reviewed and no opinion or any other form of assurance is expressed on them.

A compiled financial statement would not necessarily be in accordance with GAAP.

Reviews Pursuant to SSARS

A review under SSARS is a service performed by a CPA or PA which includes making inquiries of the entity's personnel and applying analytical procedures, and reading statements to consider, on the basis of information known, whether the statements appear to conform with generally accepted accounting principles.

Financial statements reviewed under SSARS are accompanied by a report that states:

A review was performed in accordance with SSARS issued by the AICPA.

All information included in the statements is the representation of management.

A review consists principally of inquiries of company personnel and analytical procedures applied to financial data.

A review is substantially less in scope than an audit, and that no opinion is expressed.

The CPA is not aware of any material modifications that should be made to the statements for them to be in conformity with GAAP.

Unaudited Financial Statements of a Public Entity

If a Public Entity is involved, neither a compilation nor a review under SSARS may generally be used. However, certain unaudited statements may be presented. For example, if in a public offering the issuer presented audited statements for three years [year], [year], and [year] and an unaudited stub period for the three months ended March 31, [year], the latter statement could not be compiled or reviewed under SSARS. The stub period statement could be indicated as being unaudited. The CPA or PA involved may have certain responsibilities with respect to the unaudited stub statements including performing inquiries and other varied procedures as deemed appropriate.

Unaudited stub period financial statements of a Public Entity may be accompanied by a report that states:

The statements were not audited.

No opinion is expressed on them.

(Under certain circumstances, a SSARS review may be performed for a Public Entity that is not required to have audited financial statements. When a Public Entity decides not to have its financial statements audited and is not required to do so, it may have its interim and annual financial statements reviewed under the provisions of SSARS.)

Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP)

GAAP is a technical accounting term that encompasses the conventions, rules, and procedures necessary to define accepted accounting principles at a particular time.

The word "principle" has several definitions one of which is "a general law or rule adopted or professed as a guide to action; a settled ground or basis of conduct or practice..." It is this definition which most accountants mean by the word principle when using the expression accounting principle. A generally accepted accounting principle is one which has substantial authoritative support.

Although there may be agreement on the existence of a body of generally accepted accounting principles, the determination of whether a particular accounting principle has substantial authoritative support may be difficult because no single reference source exists for all such principles. There is, however, a hierarchy of the various sources of GAAP, a summary of which is as follows:

1. Statements and interpretations of the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB), Opinions of the Accounting Principles Board (APB) of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), and AICPA Research Bulletins.
2. FASB Technical Bulletins, AICPA Industry Audit and Accounting Guides, and the AICPA Statements of Position (SOPs).
3. Consensus positions of the FASB Emerging Issues Task Force (EITF), and AICPA Practice Bulletins.
4. AICPA accounting interpretations, "Qs and As" published by the FASB staff, as well as industry practices widely recognized and prevalent.
5. Other Accounting Literature.

Accrual basis and cash basis financial statements are examples of GAAP and non-GAAP financial statements, respectively. Accrual accounting attempts to record the financial effects on an entity of transactions in the period in which such transactions occur rather than in the period in which cash is received or paid by the entity. Accrual basis accounting recognizes that the acquisition of resources needed to provide services and the rendering of service by the organization during a period often do not coincide with the cash receipts and payments of the period. Typical accruals for small business include depreciation, accounts receivable, accounts payable, and taxes payable.

Another example of a non-GAAP financial statement is one that omits some of the required disclosure or where the disclosure is inadequate. For example, the Statement of Cash Flows is required by GAAP. If such a statement were omitted the auditor would have to qualify his or her report which would take the form of a separate paragraph in the report drawing the reader's attention to the omission and indicating that the Statement of Cash Flows is required by GAAP. The opinion paragraph of the auditor's report would be qualified by a phrase to the effect that "except that the omission of a statement of cash flows results in an incomplete presentation..." followed by the opinion. An accountant's review report would contain an analogous qualification.

Generally Accepted Auditing Standards (GAAS) and Statements on Standards for Accounting and Review Services(SSARS)

When a CPA issues a report on the audit of the financial statements of any entity he or she states that the examination was made in accordance with GAAS. The auditing standards referred to are those which have been promulgated by the auditing standards board of the AICPA in a series of releases titled Statements on Auditing Standards (SAS).

An accountant may issue a compilation or review of the financial statements of an entity in accordance with SSARS. A compilation or a review is a service which is substantially less in scope than an audit and generally may be used only with respect to nonpublic companies. However, there is an exception. When a public entity does not have its annual statements audited, the AICPA permits an accountant to review the entity's annual or interim statements in accordance with SSARS.

Interim financial statements of public or nonpublic companies may be reviewed by a CPA under standards established by the AICPA through SAS. Interim and annual financial statements of nonpublic companies as well as interim and annual financial statements of public companies which are not required to have their annual statements audited may be reviewed under the lower standards of SSARS.

Responsibility for Financial Statements

The financial statements are always management's responsibility. With respect to audited financial statements, the auditor's responsibility is to express an opinion on the financial statements.

The opinion expressed relates to whether the financial statements present fairly the financial position of the entity and the results of its operations and cash flows in conformity with GAAP.

Unaudited financial statements are also management's responsibility. When an accountant is associated (i.e., consented to the use of his or her name in a report, document, or written communications containing the statements) with the unaudited financial statements, he or she is required to disclose the degree of responsibility, if any, being taken.

Predecessor

The term "Predecessor" means an entity the major portion of the business and assets of which another entity acquired in a single succession, or in a series of related successions in each of which the acquiring entity (the "Successor") acquired the major portion of the business and assets of the acquired entity.

The acquisition of assets by the Successor organization is generally recorded as a Purchase. In some situations, if certain criteria are met, two or more businesses may be combined through a Pooling of Interest in which the ownership interests of the two or more businesses are continued (usually involving an exchange of common stock for common stock) with a new entity being formed, and in such a combination each of the original businesses are considered to be a Predecessor.

When a business combination is effected by the Purchase of assets by the Successor, the assets acquired are recorded at their fair value; where the business combination meets the criteria for a Pooling of Interest, the assets and liabilities are carried forward at the valuations reflected in the books of the Predecessor companies.

Where the Predecessor is a related party and the transaction does not meet the criteria for a Pooling of Interest, and thus the acquisition of the business and assets acquired are effected by means of a Purchase, the analyst should request documentation with respect to how the fair values of the assets acquired were reached.

FORM 22A.07 Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR) Manual--Form U-7--Disclosure Document--State of Minnesota--Limited Liability Company--Acquisition of Land and Construction and Operation of Motel Property

COMMENT

The Form U-7 appearing below relates to a Registration filed in the State of Minnesota which is one of many states that have adopted (and in many instances modified) the SCOR form of Registration proposed by NASAA. The SCOR filing will normally accompany an offering which is relying on a SEC Rule 504 or Regulation A exemption. A SCOR filing is meant to effect compliance with the applicable state securities laws; although many state jurisdictions accept SCOR filings, not all do so it is advisable to check the law of each state in which the offering will be made to determine if each state accepts SCOR. The filing may be made in a number of jurisdictions and a co-ordinated regional review of the filing may be available, depending upon the states in which the SCOR filing will be made. For example, Minnesota participates in the CR-SCOR-Midwest region (comprised of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin). The other co-ordinated review regions are: (1) the CR-SCOR-Mid-Atlantic region (comprised of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia), (2) the CR-SCOR-New England region (comprised of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont), (3) the CR-SCOR-Southwest (comprised of Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas), and (4) the CR-SCOR-West region (comprised of Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming). If a co-ordinated review is available, the states' review of the offering materials filed in the states in the region is lead by one state's securities agency.

The Form U-7 is presented in a question and answer format and may be circulated among the potential purchasers of an offering as the offering's disclosure document.

SEC Rule 505 Offering Exemption--Limited Partnership--Private Placement Memorandum

COMMENT

The documents appearing below relate to an interstate offering of units in a limited partnership which is meant to rely upon the SEC Rule 505 exemption for offerings up to $5,000,000 made to no more than thirty-five (35) nonaccredited investors (plus any number of "accredited investors" as that term is defined in Rule 501(a)). The units being offered will be subject to the limitation of offering restrictions set forth in Rule 502(c) and the units will be "restricted" securities subject to the limitations on resale as described in Rule 502(d). It is anticipated that this offering will also qualify for small offering exemptions in the states in which the units are offered for sale. The Private Placement Memorandum is fairly lengthy and complex due to the tax aspects of the offering (including both tax credit provisions and limited partnership taxation matters). The Memorandum is intended to comply with the informational requirements of Rule 502(b). The Memorandum includes a copy of the partnership's Amended and Restated Limited Partnership Agreement and a package of investor documents, including a Promissory Note to be tendered for part of the purchase price.

VMB RESIDENCE TAX CREDIT FUND VI, L.P.,
 SERIES 11 and SERIES 12
 Units of Limited Partnership Interest

VMB Housing Tax Credit Fund VI, L.P., Series 11 and Series 12 will invest in other entities owning low income apartment complexes. Federal tax law provides tax credits to investors in low income apartment complexes. Investors in Units can use these tax credits to reduce their own federal income tax liabilities. Approximately 75% of the Series' capital will be invested in low income apartment complexes. Approximately 15% will be used to pay fees to or expenses.

A purchase of Units involves risks. See "Risk Factors" on page _____. Risks include:

- ☐ There can be no assurance as to the amount of tax credits because compliance with the tax credit rules is complicated.
- ☐ An individual's ability to use tax credits is limited. See "Who Should Invest; Limitations on Use of Credits and Losses."
- ☐ An investor's ability to sell Units is limited. See "Transferability of Units."
- ☐ A market for Units probably will not develop.
- ☐ If mortgage payments for an apartment complex are not made, the lender could foreclose on the apartment complex.

	Per Unit	Total Minimum	Total Maximum
Public Price	$ 1,000	$ 1,400,000	$ 5,000,000	The Units are offered in two Series of 2,500 Units each by VMB Capital Corporation.
Selling Commissions and Dealer Man- ager Fee	$ 90	$ 126,000	$ 500,000	The broker-dealers are not required to sell any specific number of Units, but will use their best efforts to sell the Units.
Proceeds to Series	$ 910	$ 1,274,000	$ 4,500,000

No Units in a Series will be sold unless a minimum of $1,400,000 in cash is received within one year from the start of the Series' offering. Each Series will deposit its subscriptions in an escrow account with AmeriBank.

Neither the Securities and Exchange Commission nor any state securities commission has approved or disapproved of these securities or passed upon the accuracy or adequacy of this Memorandum. Any representation to the contrary is a criminal offense. The use of forecasts in this offering is prohibited. Any representations to the contrary and any predictions, written or oral, as to the amount or certainty of any present or future cash benefit or tax consequence which may flow from an investment in this program is not permitted.

The date of this Memorandum is _____ [month] _____ [day],
_____ [year].

RISK FACTORS

Risks arising from the Internal Revenue Code rules governing tax credits

Low income housing tax credits might not be available

Low income housing tax credits might be less than anticipated

Unless a bond is posted low income housing tax credits may be recaptured if apartment complexes are not owned for 15 years

Sales of apartment complexes after 15 years are subject to limitations which may impact a local limited partnership's ability to sell its apartment complex

Investors can only use low income housing tax credits in limited amounts

Historic tax credits may be unavailable or may be recaptured

Other tax credits may be unavailable or may be recaptured

Risks related to investment in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes

If a Series has few investments, each investment will have a great impact on the Series' results of operations

The failure to pay mortgage debt could result in a forced sale of an apartment complex

The Series will not control the local limited partnerships and must rely on the local general partners

Projects subsidized by other government programs are subject to additional rules which may make it difficult to operate and sell apartment complexes

Keen competition may increase the price of investments

Uninsured casualties could result in losses and recapture

Apartment complexes without financing or operating subsidies may be unable to pay operating expenses

Investors may be unable to evaluate their Series' investments

SUMMARY OF THE OFFERING

This summary outlines the main points of the offering. This summary does not replace a full and careful reading of this Memorandum. This summary is qualified by the remainder of this Memorandum. All prospective investors are urged to read this Memorandum in its entirety.

The Series	VMB Housing Tax Credit Fund VI, L.P., Series 11 and Series 12 are Kansas limited partnerships. Series 11 and Series 12 have been organized as limited partnerships because that structure permits the pass through of tax benefits to investors. The principal place of business of Series 11 and Series 12 is that of management: 3480 Brown Valley Trail, Suite 120, Topeka, KS 66699. The telephone number is 785-555-6666.
Management	The Fund Manager is VMB National Partners, LLC, a Kansas limited liability company. VMB & Associates, Inc., a Kansas corporation, is the sole member of the Fund Manager and the Sponsor of this offering. Management personnel of VMB & Associates, Inc. will be responsible for the management of each Series. Affiliates of VMB & Associates, Inc. will also provide services to the Series.
Investment and Objectives Policies	Each Series' principal investment objective is to generate tax credits for its investors over a period of 10 to 12 years. To do this each Series will acquire interests in residential properties which qualify for low income housing tax credits under Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended. Some residential properties may qualify for historic tax credits under Section 47 of the Internal Revenue Code, or other tax credits yet to be enacted. The Series will not directly purchase apartment complexes. Rather, each Series will invest in other limited partnerships or limited liability companies owning apartment complexes. These other entities in which the Series will invest are referred to herein as local limited partnerships. The developers of the apartment complexes will not be affiliates of the VMB entities. The developer or an affiliated company will be the sponsor and the general partner of the local limited partnership. The general partners of the local limited partnerships are referred to herein as the local general partners. In addition to a Series, other persons may be limited partners of the local limited partnerships. These other persons may include affiliates of the

VMC entities:

- ☐ Investing on the same terms as the Series,
- ☐ Investing in state tax credits of the local limited partnerships, or
- ☐ Serving as the special limited partner.

None of the local limited partnerships have been selected yet.

This two-tier limited partnership form for investing in low income housing is common practice. The two-tier form:

- ☐ Gives a Series the same tax benefits which would be available if the Series invested directly in the housing, and
- ☐ Insulates the investors by providing a Series with limited liability for each of its investments.

Each Series will try to invest in a geographically-diversified portfolio of apartment complexes. There are no parameters concerning the types of communities in which the apartment complexes will be located. The apartment complexes can be located in rural areas, suburban communities or in urban areas. The properties will be rented either to senior citizens only, or to a mix of senior citizens, families and others.

The low income housing tax credit rules impose penalties if apartment complexes are sold before the sixteenth year. The rules of other government subsidy programs also can limit the sale of apartment complexes. And it can be hard to sell apartment complexes rented to low income tenants unless the federal government provides tax incentives to new owners. Under current law, tax credits are awarded to investors who purchase a qualifying apartment complex more than 10 years after it was last placed in service if the new owners substantially rehabilitate the apartment complex. Nonetheless, it is hard to tell when or whether a Series will be able to sell an apartment complex.

Each Series will try to liquidate its investments after 15 years, but whether it can and for how much is impossible to predict.

The Low Income Housing Tax Credit

Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code awards valuable low income housing tax credits to investors in low income housing. These tax credits are designed to attract private capital to build and preserve low income housing. They are an integral element of the nation's low income housing program.

The federal government has provided tax benefits to investors in low income housing for more than three decades. Tax credits are the latest component of that policy. Internal Revenue Code Section 42 gives taxpayers an alternative to paying federal income taxes. Taxpayers can invest in a Series and receive tax credits which will directly reduce their federal income taxes each year for 10 to 12 years.

Internal Revenue Code Section 42 and the rules the IRS has adopted to administer these tax credits are extremely complicated. VMC's personnel are experienced in working with these laws and rules, and will do their best to follow them. However, no one is guaranteeing that a Series will comply with all of the laws and rules.

Other rules govern the investors' ability to claim tax credits on their individual tax returns. For example, natural persons generally can only use tax credits to shelter:

- ☐ Income from other limited partnerships and other similar sources, and
- ☐ Up to $25,000 of other income.

The low income housing tax credit rules include a complicated concept called recapture. Congress created this concept to ensure that apartment complexes are rented as low income housing for at least a 15-year period, even though the tax credits are claimed over a 10-year period. These are referred to herein as the 15-year compliance period and the 10-year credit period. Recapture means that a taxpayer must include in taxable income a portion of tax credits previously claimed if there is non-compliance with the tax credit rules during the 15-year compliance period. Recapture applies to the accelerated portion of the low income housing tax credits, as follows:

Year of Event Giving Rise to Recapture	Portion Recaptured
12	4/15
13	3/15
15	1/15

Interest is also imposed on the amount recaptured. The dollar amount recaptured will be additional taxes owed in the year of recapture.

Risk Factors

An investment in the Series involves risks, including the following:

- ☐ Risks Related to Low Income Housing Tax Credits:
 - ☐ The low income housing tax credit rules are extremely complicated. Noncompliance with these rules results in the loss of future tax credits and the fractional recapture of tax credits already taken.
 - ☐ In most cases the annual amount of tax credits that an individual can use is limited to the tax liability due on the person's last $25,000 of taxable income.
 - ☐ The local limited partnerships may be unable to sell the apartment complexes at a profit. Accordingly, a Series may be unable to distribute any cash to its investors. Tax credits may be the only benefit from an investment in a Series.
- ☐ Investment Risks:

- ☐ If a Series does not raise much capital it will invest in a limited number of local limited partnerships. Such limited diversity means that the results of operation of each single apartment complex will have a greater impact on the Series. With limited diversity, poor performance of one apartment complex could impair a Series' ability to satisfy its investment objectives.
- ☐ Each apartment complex will be subject to mortgage indebtedness. If a local limited partnership failed to pay its mortgage it could lose its apartment complex in foreclosure. Foreclosure would result in:
 - ☐ a loss of future tax credits, if the foreclosure occurred during the first 10 years,
 - ☐ a fractional recapture of prior tax credits, if the foreclosure occurred during the first 15 years, and
 - ☐ a loss of the Series' investment in the apartment complex.
- ☐ A Series will be a limited partner or non-managing member of each local limited partnership. Accordingly, each Series will have very limited rights with respect to management of the local limited partnerships. Each Series will rely totally on the local general partners.
- ☐ Other Tax Risks:
 - ☐ The IRS may audit a Series or a local limited partnership and challenge the tax treatment of tax items. The amount of tax credits and tax losses allocable to the investors could be reduced if the IRS were successful in such a challenge.
- ☐ Series-Related Risks:
 - ☐ No trading market for the Units will develop. Investors may be unable to sell their Units except at a discount and should consider their Units to be a long-term investment.

Who Should Invest;
Limitations on Use of Credits and Losses

Natural persons should invest in a Series only if they have federal income tax liabilities against which the tax credits can be applied. In most cases, the annual amount of tax credits that a natural person can use is limited to the tax liability due on the person's last $25,000 of taxable income. For example, a person in the 35% federal tax bracket could use up to a maximum annual amount of $8,750 in tax credits because $$25,000 \times 35\% = $8,750$. Generally, a natural person can claim a Series' tax losses only in very limited circumstances.

Closely-held and personal service corporations are subject to other limits on the use of tax credits and tax losses.

For all investors:

- ☐ Tax credits cannot be used to reduce the federal alternative minimum tax.
- ☐ Tax credits are subject to the general limitations on the use of all business tax credits.

Estimated Use of Proceeds	An IRA, Keogh or other retirement plan cannot buy Units. Each Series will invest approximately 75% of its capital in local limited partnerships, will hold 3% in working capital reserves, and will use the balance to pay fees and expenses to the VMB entities and others. Working capital reserves are amounts set aside for contingencies and to pay administrative expenses.
Management Compensation	Each Series will pay the VMB entities compensation for management services. The following are the most significant items: <table border="0"> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 567 730 598">Dealer manager fee</td><td data-bbox="860 567 1263 598">Up to 2% of the capital raised</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 609 730 640">Nonaccountable underwriting</td><td data-bbox="860 609 1263 682">Up to 1% of the capital raised expense allowance</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 693 730 724">Acquisition and investment</td><td data-bbox="860 693 1263 766">Up to 7% of the capital raised management fee</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 777 836 871">Nonaccountable reimbursement- organization and offering expenses other than selling expenses</td><td data-bbox="860 777 1263 976">3% of the capital raised in exchange for an agreement to pay all of the expenses in connection with the formation of each Series and the sale of the Units, other than selling expenses</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 987 836 1050">Nonaccountable reimbursement- acquisition expenses</td><td data-bbox="860 987 1263 1144">2% of the capital raised in exchange for an agreement to pay all of the expenses related to the selection and acquisition of local limited partnerships</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 1155 730 1186">Asset management fee</td><td data-bbox="860 1155 1263 1291">0.5% of the sum of a Series' cash investments in local limited partnerships plus the mortgage debts of the local limited partnerships</td></tr> <tr> <td data-bbox="446 1302 730 1333">Subordinated disposition fee</td><td data-bbox="860 1302 1263 1365">Up to 1% of the sales price of the apartment complexes</td></tr> </table> There are a number of other items of compensation and reimbursement which the VMB entities may receive. Asset management fee	0.5% of the sum of a Series' cash investments in local limited partnerships plus the mortgage debts of the local limited partnerships
Subordinated disposition fee	Up to 1% of the sales price of the apartment complexes
Conflicts of Interest	The VMB entities have conflicts of interest in their organization and management of the Series, including the following: ☐ The compensation to the VMB entities is not the result of arm's-length negotiations. The manner in which the Series' investments are purchased, managed and sold will determine the amount of some compensation. As a result, a Series: ☐ Might make investments which are less desirable to the investors but more desirable to the VMB entities, or ☐ Might retain an investment at a time when a sale of the investment could generate distributions to the investors. ☐ The VMB entities must allocate their time between the activities of each Series and their other activities. Although not anticipated, the VMB entities might be unable to fully discharge their duties to each Series.

- ☐ The VMB entities have some interests that are inconsistent with those of the investors. For example, the VMB entities can engage in activities without providing the benefits of such activities to the Series. As a result, an affiliate might purchase an investment which is suitable for purchase by a Series.

Fiduciary Responsibility

The Fund Manager is a fiduciary to each Series. This means that the Fund Manager owes the investors the utmost good faith and loyalty. However, each Series will hold the VMB entities harmless from liability to the Series for their actions and will compensate the VMB entities for damages suffered from their actions, provided the actions:

- ☐ Did not constitute negligence or misconduct, and
- ☐ Were the result of a course of conduct which the Fund Manager determined was in the best interests of the Series.

As a result an investor's ability to pursue an action against the VMB entities is diminished.

Local Limited Partnership Investment Protection Policies

The most uncertain stages of an investment in a local limited partnership occur during construction and rent-up of the local limited partnership's apartment complex. Each Series will try to protect its investments in local limited partnerships during these stages in the following ways:

- ☐ Staged Pay-In. Each Series will stage its capital payments to each local limited partnership. Capital payments will be due when conditions or benchmarks regarding construction or rental of apartment units are satisfied.
- ☐ Construction Guarantees. The local general partner or other guarantor will agree to provide all funds needed through completion of development and construction, after applying mortgage loan proceeds and the Series' capital contribution. This policy is intended to cause completion of an apartment complex at no extra cost to the Series where construction costs exceed the budgeted amount.
- ☐ Operating Deficit Guarantees. Each local general partner will agree to fund any operating deficits for a specified period following completion of construction or rehabilitation.
- ☐ Repurchase Guarantees. Each local general partner will be obligated to repurchase the Series' local limited partnership interest if the local limited partnership fails to: (i) receive an allocation of tax credits in the year in which the apartment complex is placed in service; (ii) cause the apartment complex to be placed in service in a timely manner; or (iii) remain eligible for tax credits during the period when the Series is required to make its capital contributions.
- ☐ Tax Credit Guarantees. During the 15-year compliance period, each local general partner will agree to fund any loss of tax credits and costs associated therewith which result from recapture. Each local general partner also will guarantee the annual tax credit amount and will fund any shortfall during the first five years of the compliance period.

- ☐ Tax Credit Adjusters. In the event the tax credits actually allocated to a Series are less than the agreed to amount, the local limited partnership will reduce the Series' capital contribution.
- ☐ Voting Rights. The Series will have the right to approve or disapprove the sale or refinancing of the apartment complexes.

The Fund Manager will agree to eliminate these provisions only in unusual circumstances.

There can be no absolute guarantee that these policies will protect a Series' investment in a local limited partnership.

Prior Performance Summary Through [month] [day], [year], the VMB entities have raised and invested equity as follows:

- ☐ More than 3,600 investors, including more than 1,000 investors in tax credit offerings,
- ☐ 240 properties, including nearly 110 properties in tax credit offerings,
- ☐ More than 6,000 apartment units located in 14 states, and the District of Columbia, including more than 5,000 apartment units located in 7 states and the District of Columbia in tax credit offerings,
- ☐ Nearly $0.6 billion in aggregate acquisition costs, including approximately $0.5 billion in aggregate acquisition costs in tax credit offerings.

Of the 17 tax credit partnerships organized by the VMB entities through [month] [day], [year], 15 have a total of 70 apartment complexes which have completed the 10-year credit period, and six have a total of 11 apartment complexes which have completed the 15-year compliance period.

Federal Income Tax Considerations

The section of this Memorandum entitled "Federal Income Tax Considerations" includes a discussion of numerous federal income tax issues pertinent to the Series. That section also contains a description of the federal income tax legal opinions that the Series will receive from tax counsel.

Profits and Losses, Tax Credits and Cash Distributions

Generally, 99.9% of the tax credits, profits and losses of a Series are allocated to its investors and 0.1% to the Fund Manager. It is unlikely that a Series will distribute cash from operations. The section of this Memorandum entitled "Profits and Losses, Tax Credits and Cash Distributions" includes a discussion of how each Series will distribute net proceeds from the liquidation of its investments.

Summary of Certain Provisions of the Partnership Agreement

The Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership included as Exhibit B is the governing document for each Series. A Series' partnership agreement governs the relationship between the investors and the Fund Manager. It is a complex legal document. Portions of the partnership agreement are summarized throughout this Memorandum.

Investors should be aware of the following terms of each Series' partnership agreement:

- ☐ Investors owning more than 50% of the Units in a Series can take the following actions with respect to the Series:

- ☐ amend the Series' partnership agreement,
 - ☐ remove the Fund Manager and elect its replacement, and
 - ☐ approve the dissolution of the Series.
 - ☐ Each Series is organized as a separate Kansas limited partnership.
 - ☐ No investor will have any control over the business of his Series or any right to act in the Series name.
 - ☐ The books and records of each Series are kept at 3158 Redhill Avenue, Suite 120, Topeka, Kansas. An investor may examine his Series' books and records at any and all reasonable times.
- Transfer of Units Under the terms of the Series' partnership agreement, investors may transfer their Units, except where the transfer would result in adverse tax consequences. Investors may not transfer Units to a foreign person or a tax-exempt entity. The Units will not be listed on a securities exchange, and no market will exist for the Units. It is unlikely that an investor will be able to sell his Units except at a discount. A Series can require that a transfer fee be paid in an amount up to $100.
- Terms of the Offering and Plan of Distribution The Units are offered in two Series on an all-or-none minimum, best-efforts maximum basis, which means that:
- ☐ No one is guaranteeing that any specified amount of capital will be raised,
 - ☐ No Units in a Series will be sold unless at least $1,400,000 in cash is raised, and
 - ☐ As much as $2,500,000 in Units may be sold by each Series.
- The Fund Manager will decide in its discretion when to terminate the Series 11 offering and commence the Series 12 offering.

PRIVACY NOTICE

SEC Regulation S-P requires that financial institutions such as the Series provide their consumer customers with written notice of their policies and procedures for disclosure of their customers' nonpublic personal information.

Investors should be aware of the following policies relating to disclosure of their nonpublic personal information:

1. The Series collect nonpublic personal information about investors from the following sources:

- ☐ Information received from an investor on applications or other forms;
- ☐ Information about your transactions with the Series, the Series' affiliates, or others.

2. The Series do not disclose any nonpublic personal information about their customers or former customers to anyone, except as permitted by law.

3. The Series restrict access to nonpublic personal information about investors to those employees who need to know that information to provide products or services to investors.
4. The Series maintain physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards that comply with federal standards to guard investors' nonpublic personal information.

If an investor has any questions about these policies or the use, maintenance and disclosure of the investor's nonpublic personal information, please contact Investor Services at 800-555 -6666, x111.

RISK FACTORS

The purchase of Units involves a number of significant risk factors. The material risk factors that prospective purchasers should consider are:

Risks arising from the Internal Revenue Code rules governing tax credits.

Each prospective investor is urged to carefully read and understand this section and the section entitled "The Low Income Housing Tax Credit" to determine whether an investment in a Series is suitable for the prospective investor.

Low income housing tax credits might not be available. Each Series will acquire an interest in apartment complexes to be rented to low income tenants.

Each Series expects to claim low income housing tax credits for each apartment complex. However, if an apartment complex does not satisfy the requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 42, then the apartment complex will not be eligible for low income housing tax credits.

An apartment complex cannot comply with Internal Revenue Code Section 42 until it is placed in service. In many instances, a Series will acquire an apartment complex which is still under construction. If so, the Series would be relying only upon guarantees and representations of the local general partners that the apartment complex will satisfy the Internal Revenue Code Section 42 requirements. If it ultimately did not, the Series would not receive low income housing tax credits from the investment.

Low income housing tax credits might be less than anticipated. The local general partners will calculate the amount of the low income housing tax credits. No opinion of counsel will cover the calculation of the amount of low income housing tax credits. The IRS could challenge the amount of the low income housing tax credits claimed for any apartment complex under any of a number of provisions set forth in Internal Revenue Code Section 42. A successful challenge by the IRS would decrease the amount of the low income housing tax credits from the amount paid for by the Series.

Unless a bond is posted, low income housing tax credits may be recaptured if apartment complexes are not owned for 15 years. Apartment complexes must comply with Internal Revenue Code Section 42 for a 15-year compliance period. Low income housing tax credits will be recaptured with interest to the extent that an apartment complex is not rented as low income housing or in some other way does not satisfy the requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 42 during the 15-year compliance period. For example, unless a bond is posted recapture with interest would occur if:

- ☐ a local limited partnership disposed of its interest in an apartment complex during the 15-year compliance period, or

- ☐ a Series disposed of its interest in a local limited partnership during the 15-year compliance period.

For these purposes, disposition includes transfer by way of foreclosure.

There can be no assurance that recapture will not occur.

Sales of apartment complexes after 15 years are subject to limitations which may impact a local limited partnership's ability to sell its apartment complex. Each local limited partnership will execute an extended low income housing commitment with the state in which the apartment complex is located. The extended low income housing commitment will state the number of years that the local limited partnership and any subsequent owners must rent the apartment complex as low income housing. Under federal law, the commitment must be for at least 30 years. The commitment actually agreed to may be significantly longer than 30 years. In prioritizing applicants for low income housing tax credits, most states give additional points for commitment periods in excess of 30 years. On any sale of the apartment complex during the commitment period, the purchaser would have to agree to continue to rent the apartment complex as low income housing for the duration of the commitment period. This requirement reduces the potential market, and possibly the sales price, for the apartment complexes. The sale of an apartment complex may be subject to other restrictions. For example, federal lenders or subsidizers may have the right to approve or disapprove a purchase of an apartment complex. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that a local limited partnership will be able to sell its apartment complex. Even if it does so, there can be no assurance that any significant amount of cash will be distributed to the investors. As a result, a material portion of the low income housing tax credits may represent a return of the money originally invested in the Series.

Investors can only use low income housing tax credits in limited amounts. The ability of an individual or other non-corporate investor to claim low income housing tax credits on his individual tax return is limited. For example, an individual investor can use low income housing tax credits to reduce his tax liability on:

- ☐ an unlimited amount of passive income, which is income from entities such as the Series, and
- ☐ $25,000 in income from other sources.

However, the use of low income housing tax credits by an individual against these types of income is subject to ordering rules, which may further limit the use of low income housing tax credits. Some corporate investors are subject to similar and other limitations. They include corporations which provide personal services, and corporations which are owned by five or fewer shareholders.

Any portion of a low income housing tax credit which is allowed to an investor under such rules is then aggregated with all of the investor's other business credits. The aggregate is then subject to the general limitation on all business credits. That limitation provides that an investor can use business credits to offset the investor's annual tax liability equal to $25,000 plus 75% of the investor's tax liability in excess of $25,000. However, business credits may not be used to offset any alternative minimum tax. All of these concepts are extremely complicated. Investors are urged to read "The Low Income Housing Tax Credit" and "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities," "General Business Tax Credit Limitations" and "Other Important Tax Considerations--Alternative Minimum Tax," for examples.

Historic tax credits may be unavailable or may be recaptured. It is possible that a Series will invest in a local limited partnership intending to obtain historic tax credits. There can be no assurance that an apartment complex will meet the requirements for the historic tax credit set forth in Internal Revenue Code Section 47. In order for an apartment complex to be eligible for historic tax credits, it must:

- ☐ meet the statutory requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 47, and
- ☐ be certified by the Department of the Interior.

Even if it does meet the requirements, the IRS may challenge the calculation of the historic tax credit. The local general partners will calculate the amount of the historic tax credit. That calculation will not be the subject of an opinion of counsel.

An investor must recapture historic tax credits if:

- ☐ the local limited partnership sells the apartment complex during the first five years of operation,
- ☐ the Series sells the interest in the local limited partnership during the first five years of operation, or
- ☐ the investor sells his Units during the first five years of operation.

Other tax credits may be unavailable or may be recaptured. Proposals have been offered from time to time to provide tax credits for single-family home ownership. Other proposals may be forthcoming. If any are enacted into law, a Series may invest in local limited partnerships intending to obtain such tax credits. There can be no assurance that an apartment complex will generate any such tax credits, or that such credits would not be recaptured.

Risks related to investment in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes:

If a Series has few investments, each investment will have a great impact on the Series' results of operations. Geographic and other diversification of a Series' investments will depend upon the amount of capital raised by the Series.

The less capital received by the Series, the fewer number of investments purchased by the Series. The risks of limited diversification will exist if any Series:

- ☐ invests in a few local limited partnerships owning large apartment complexes rather than a greater number of local limited partnerships owning smaller apartment complexes,
- ☐ invests in local limited partnerships which have the same or affiliated local general partners, or
- ☐ invests in local limited partnerships which own apartment complexes located in the same area. If a Series' investments are not diversified then any single apartment complex experiencing poor operating performance, impairment of value or recapture of low income housing tax credits would have a significant impact upon the Series as a whole.

The failure to pay mortgage debt could result in a forced sale of an apartment complex. Each local limited partnership will leverage a Series' investment therein by incurring mortgage debt. If a local limited partnership's revenues are less than its debt payments and taxes and other operating costs, the local limited partnership would have to use working capital reserves, seek additional funds, or suffer a forced sale of its apartment complex, which could include a foreclosure. The same results could occur if government subsidies ceased. If the apartment complex is highly-leveraged, a relatively slight decrease in the rental revenues could adversely affect the local limited partnership's ability to pay its debt service requirements. Mortgage debt may:

- ☐ have either fixed or variable interest rates, or
- ☐ be repayable in a self-amortizing series of equal installments or with a large balloon final payment.

Variable rate loans create the risk that debt service could rise during periods of high interest rates. Balloon payments maturing prior to the end of the anticipated holding period for the apartment complex create the risk of a forced sale if the debt cannot be refinanced. There can be no assurance that additional funds will be available to any local limited partnership if needed on acceptable terms or at all.

The Series will not control the local limited partnerships and must rely on the local general partners. The local general partners will make all management decisions for the local limited partnerships and the apartment complexes. Each Series will have very limited rights with respect to management of the local limited partnerships. Neither Series will be able to exercise any control with respect to its business decisions and operations. Consequently, the success of each Series will depend on the abilities of the local general partners. Investors may not have the opportunity to judge the local general partners for themselves.

Projects subsidized by other government programs are subject to additional rules which may make it difficult to operate and sell apartment complexes. It is anticipated that most of the apartment complexes will receive government financing or operating subsidies in addition to the tax credits. The following are risks associated with some such subsidy programs:

- ☐ Obtaining tenants for the apartment complexes. Government regulations limit the types of people who can rent subsidized housing. These regulations may make it more difficult to rent the residential units in the apartment complexes.
- ☐ Obtaining rent increases. In many cases rents can only be increased with the prior approval of the subsidizing agency.
- ☐ Limitations on cash distributions. The amount of cash that may be distributed to owners of subsidized apartment complexes is less than the amount that could be earned by the owners of non-subsidized apartment complexes.
- ☐ Limitations on sale or refinancing of the apartment complexes. A local limited partnership may be unable to sell its apartment complex or to refinance its mortgage loan without the prior approval of the subsidizer.

The subsidizer may withhold such approval in the discretion of the subsidizer. Approval may be subject to conditions. In addition, any prepayment of a mortgage may result in the assessment of a prepayment penalty.

- ☐ Limitations on transfers of interests in local limited partnerships. A Series may be unable to sell its interest in a local limited partnership without the prior approval of the subsidizer. The subsidizer may withhold such approval in the discretion of the subsidizer. Approval may be subject to conditions.

- ☐ Limitations on removal and admission of local general partners. A Series may be unable to remove a local general partner from a local limited partnership except for cause, such as the violation of the rules of the subsidizer. Regulations may prohibit the removal of a local general partner or permit removal only with the prior approval of the subsidizer. Regulations may also require approval of the admission of a successor local general partner even upon the death or other disability of a local general partner.
- ☐ Limitations on subsidy payments. Subsidy payments may be fixed in amount and subject to annual legislative appropriations. The rental revenues of an apartment complex, when combined with the maximum committed subsidy, may be insufficient to meet obligations. Congress or the state legislature, as the case may be, may fail to appropriate or increase the necessary subsidy. In those events, the mortgage lender could foreclose on the property unless a workout arrangement could be negotiated.
- ☐ Possible changes in applicable regulations. Legislation may be enacted which adversely revises provisions of outstanding mortgage loans. Such legislation has been enacted in the past.

Keen competition may increase the price of investments. Each Series will compete for investments with other entities. Such other entities include limited partnerships, limited liability companies and other entities engaged in real estate investment activities, and may include the other Series and other affiliates of the VMB entities.

The availability of such investments is limited in that there is a maximum amount of low income housing tax credits that may be allocated each year under Internal Revenue Code Section 42. Other factors may also limit availability of investments. Consequently, competition for desirable investments may be particularly keen. The purchase prices paid for such investments could increase as a result. In this connection, a state's allocation plan for low income housing tax credits must:

- ☐ give preference to applicants serving the lowest income tenants,
- ☐ give preference to applicants serving qualified tenants for the longest periods, and
- ☐ allocate no more tax credits to an applicant than is necessary for its project's financial feasibility and viability. The state may reduce the amount of the low income housing tax credits below the amounts for which the applicant would otherwise be eligible, if the state believes that the full amounts are not necessary in light of other sources of assistance that are available to the applicant.

In the recent past, heightened demand for apartment complexes has increased the purchase prices thereof. Further increases would reduce the return to investors and hamper a Series' ability to satisfy its principal investment objective.

Uninsured casualties could result in losses and recapture. There are casualties which are either uninsurable or not economically insurable. These include earthquakes, floods, wars and losses relating to hazardous materials or environmental matters. If an apartment complex experienced an uninsured casualty, a Series could lose both its invested capital and anticipated profits in such property. Even if the casualty were an insured loss, the local limited partnership might be unable to rebuild the destroyed property. A portion of prior tax credits could be recaptured and future tax credits could be lost if the apartment complex were not restored within a reasonable period of time. And liability judgments against the local limited partnership could exceed available insurance proceeds or otherwise materially and adversely affect the local limited partnership. The cost of liability and casualty insurance has increased in recent years. Casualty insurance has become more difficult to obtain and may require large deductible amounts.

Apartment complexes without financing or operating subsidies may be unable to pay operating expenses. If a local limited partnership were unable to pay operating expenses, one result could be a forced sale of the property. If a forced sale occurs during the first 15 years of an apartment complex, a partial recapture of tax credits could occur. In this regard, some of the local limited partnerships may own apartment complexes which have no subsidies other than low income housing credits. Those apartment complexes will not have the benefit of below-market-interest-rate financing or operating subsidies which often are important to the feasibility of low income housing. Those apartment complexes will have to rely solely on rents to pay expenses. However, in order for any apartment complex to be eligible for low income housing tax credits, it must restrict the rent which may be charged to tenants. Over time, the expenses of an apartment complex will increase. If a local limited partnership cannot increase its rents, it may be unable to pay increased operating expenses. Investors may be unable to evaluate their Series' investments. Except as otherwise set forth in a supplement to this Memorandum, the Series have not identified any of the apartment complexes in which they will invest. Accordingly, investors may not have the opportunity to evaluate for themselves the Series' investments. An investor who acquires his Units later in the offering period may have more information available concerning specific apartment complexes than the earlier purchaser.

There can be no assurance that any apartment complexes in which a Series invests will actually meet the investment objectives of the Series.

A Series' local limited partnership investment protection policies will be worthless if the net worth of the local general partners is not sufficient to satisfy their obligations. There is a risk that the local general partners will be unable to perform their financial obligations to the Series. The Fund Manager has not established a minimum net worth requirement for the local general partners. Rather, each local general partner must demonstrate a net worth which the Fund Manager believes is appropriate under the circumstances. The assets of the local general partners are likely to consist primarily of real estate holdings and similar assets. The fair market value of these types of assets is difficult to estimate. These types of assets cannot be readily liquidated to satisfy the financial guarantees and commitments which the local general partners will make to a Series. Moreover, other creditors may have claims on these assets. No escrow accounts or other security arrangements will be established to ensure performance of a local general partner's obligations. The cost to enforce a local general partner's obligations may be high. If a local general partner does not satisfy its obligations the Series may have no remedy, or the remedy may be limited to removing the local general partner as general partner of the local limited partnership.

Fluctuating economic conditions can reduce the value of real estate. Any investment in real estate is subject to risks from fluctuating economic conditions. These conditions can adversely affect an investor's ability to realize a profit or even to recover his invested capital. Among these conditions are:

- ☐ the general and local job market,
- ☐ the availability and cost of mortgage financing,
- ☐ monetary inflation,
- ☐ tax, environmental, land use and zoning policies,
- ☐ the supply of and demand for similar properties,
- ☐ neighborhood conditions, and

☐ the availability and cost of utilities and water.

Properties under development may not be completed. A Series may invest in apartment complexes which are under development. In general, investment in an uncompleted apartment complex involves more risk than the purchase of a completed property. The local general partners' ability to complete development and construction and rent the property may be affected by conditions beyond their control. If a property is not constructed as anticipated, the permanent loan commitment might be of no effect. The lender could refuse to advance the permanent loan, and the local limited partnership might be unable to repay the construction loan. Furthermore, a decision to invest in an uncompleted apartment complex is made based on projections of rental income and expenses. Whether the property will operate at such projected income and expense levels cannot be known.

Investments made before the sale of Units may be subject to loss. A Series may invest in apartment complexes at a time before the commencement or completion of its offering of Units. Such investments would be made in anticipation of the receipt of offering proceeds. The Series may borrow funds from the VMB entities for such purposes. The Series ultimately may be unable to pay its obligations with respect to such investments. If a Series didn't pay its obligations to a local limited partnership, the local limited partnership could reduce or terminate the Series' interest without returning the amounts paid by the Series. The local limited partnership could sue the Series to require performance of such obligations. If tax credits had already been claimed by the Series, the credits could be recaptured under Internal Revenue Code Section 42.

If a loan made to a local limited partnership is not repaid the amount of capital available for investment would be reduced. A Series may make a loan to a local limited partnership before the Series' acquisition of an interest therein. If the Series didn't invest in the local limited partnership, the local limited partnership might not repay the loan. If the local limited partnership didn't repay the loan, the amount of capital available for investment in local limited partnerships would be reduced.

Lack of control or risk of impasse in joint investments. A Series may invest in local limited partnerships jointly with the other Series or other limited partnerships, including partnerships formed by the VMB entities. There is a risk that a Series may not acquire a controlling interest in a joint investment. There is also a risk of impasse on decisions if the Series and its joint venture partner acquire equal interests in the joint venture.

Tax risks other than those relating to tax credits.

In addition to the risks pertaining specifically to tax credits, there are other federal income tax risks associated with an investment in Units. Neither Series will request rulings on any income tax matters from the IRS. Rather, they will rely on opinions of their independent legal counsel to the Series and the VMB entities, and opinions of counsel to the local limited partnerships. Unlike a ruling from the IRS, an opinion of counsel has no binding effect or official status of any kind. No assurance can be given that the IRS will not contest any conclusions reached in an opinion.

These additional federal income tax risks associated with the ownership of Units and the operations of the Series and the local limited partnerships include, but are not limited to, the following:

No opinion of counsel as to certain matters. No legal opinion will be obtained regarding matters:

☐ the determination of which depends on future factual circumstances,

☐ which are peculiar to individual investors, or

- ☐ which are not customarily the subject of an opinion.

The more significant of these matters include:

- ☐ allocating purchase price among components of a property, particularly as between buildings and fixtures, the cost of which is depreciable, and the underlying land, the cost of which is not depreciable,
- ☐ characterizing expenses and payments made to or by a Series or a local limited partnership,
- ☐ identifying the portion of the costs of any apartment complex which qualify for historic and other tax credits,
- ☐ applying to any specific investor the limitation on the use of tax credits and tax losses. Investors must determine for themselves the extent to which they can use tax credits and tax losses, and
- ☐ the application of the alternative minimum tax to any specific investor, or the calculation of the alternative minimum tax by any investor. The alternative minimum tax could reduce the tax benefits from an investment in a Series.

There can be no assurance, therefore, that the IRS will not challenge some of the tax positions adopted by a Series. The courts could sustain an IRS challenge. An IRS challenge, if successful, could have a detrimental effect on a Series' ability to realize its investment objectives.

Passive activity rules will limit deduction of Series' losses and impose tax on interest income. The Internal Revenue Code imposes limits on the ability of most investors to claim losses from investments in real estate. An individual may claim these so-called passive losses only as an offset to income from investments in real estate or rental activities. An individual may not claim passive losses as an offset against other types of income, such as salaries, wages, dividends and interest. These passive activity rules will restrict the ability of most investors to use losses from a Series as an offset of non-passive income.

A Series may earn interest income on its reserves and loans. The passive activity rules generally will categorize interest as portfolio income, and not passive income. Passive losses cannot be used as an offset to portfolio income. Consequently, an investor in a Series could pay tax liability on portfolio income from the Series.

At risk rules might limit deduction of Series' losses. If a significant portion of the financing used to purchase apartment complexes does not consist of qualified nonrecourse financing, the at risk rules will limit an investor's ability to claim Series losses to the amount the investor invests in the Series. The at risk rules of the Internal Revenue Code generally limit an investor's ability to deduct Series losses to the sum of:

- ☐ the amount of cash the investor invests in the Series, and
- ☐ the investor's share of Series qualified nonrecourse financing.

Qualified nonrecourse financing is non-convertible, nonrecourse debt which is borrowed from:

- ☐ a government, or
- ☐ with exceptions, any person actively and regularly engaged in the business of lending money.

Tax liability on sale of apartment complex or local limited partnership interest may exceed the cash available from the sale. When a local limited partnership sells an apartment complex it will recognize gain. Such gain is equal to the difference between:

- ☐ the sales proceeds plus the amount of indebtedness secured by the apartment complex, and
- ☐ the adjusted basis for the apartment complex. The adjusted basis for an apartment complex is its original cost, plus capital expenditures, minus depreciation.

Similarly, when a Series sells an interest in a local limited partnership the Series will recognize gain. Such gain is equal to the difference between:

- ☐ the sales proceeds plus the Series' share of the amount of indebtedness secured by the apartment complex, and
- ☐ the adjusted basis for the interest. The adjusted basis for an interest in a local limited partnership is the amount paid for the interest, plus income allocations and cash distributions, less loss allocations.

Accordingly, gain will be increased by the depreciation deductions taken during the holding period for the apartment complex. In some cases, an investor could have a tax liability from a sale greater than the cash distributed to the investor from the sale.

Alternative minimum tax liability could reduce an investor's tax benefits. If an investor pays alternative minimum tax, the investor could suffer a reduction in benefits from an investment in a Series. The application of the alternative minimum tax is personal to each investor. Accordingly, each investor is urged to consult his own tax adviser regarding how the alternative minimum tax will impact his investment in Units. Tax credits may not be utilized to reduce alternative minimum tax liability.

IRS could audit the returns of the Series, the local limited partnerships or the investors. The IRS can audit a Series or a local limited partnership at the entity level with regard to issues affecting the entity. The IRS does not have to audit each investor in order to challenge a position taken by a Series or a local limited partnership. Similarly, only one judicial proceeding can be filed to contest an IRS determination. A contest by the Series of any IRS determination might result in high legal fees.

An audit of a Series or a local limited partnership also could result in an audit of an investor. An audit of an investor's tax returns could result in adjustments both to items that are related to the investor's Series and to unrelated items. The investor could then be required to file amended tax returns and pay additional tax plus interest and penalties.

Each Series must register under the tax shelter registration provisions. Under those provisions, the IRS assigns a registration number to each Series. The investors must enter that number on their tax returns. An investor could be subject to a penalty if the investor does not enter the registration number on the investor's tax return. It is uncertain whether registration as a tax shelter materially increases the risk of IRS audit. Registration does not imply that the IRS has reviewed, examined or approved the investment or the claimed benefits of the investment.

A successful IRS challenge to tax allocations of the Series and the local limited partnerships would reduce the tax benefits of an investment in the Series. Under the Internal Revenue Code, a partnership's allocation of income, gains, deductions, losses and tax credits must have substantial economic effect. Substantial economic effect is a highly-technical concept. The fundamental principle is two-fold. If a partner will benefit economically from an item of partnership income or gain, that item must be allocated to him so that he bears the correlative tax burden. Conversely, if a partner will suffer economically from an item of partnership deduction or loss, that item must be allocated to him so that he bears the correlative tax benefit. If a partnership's allocations do not have substantial economic effect, then the partnership's tax items are allocated in accordance with each partner's interest in the partnership. The IRS might challenge the allocations made by a Series:

- ☐ between its investors and the Fund Manager,
- ☐ among its investors, or
- ☐ between the Series and a local general partner.

If any allocations were successfully challenged, a greater share of the income or gain or a lesser share of the losses or tax credits might be allocated to the investors. This would increase the tax liability or reduce the tax benefits to the investors.

Tax liabilities could arise in later years of the Series. After a period of years following commencement of operations by a local limited partnership, the local limited partnership may generate profits rather than losses. An investor would have tax liability on his share of such profits unless he could offset the income with:

- ☐ unused passive losses from his Series or other investments, or
- ☐ current passive losses from other investments.

In such circumstances, the investor would not receive a cash distribution from his Series with which to pay any tax liability.

IRS challenge to tax treatment of expenditures could reduce losses. The IRS may contend that fees and payments of a Series or a local limited partnership:

- ☐ should be deductible over a longer period of time or in a later year,
- ☐ are excessive and may not be capitalized or deducted in full,
- ☐ should be capitalized and not deducted, or
- ☐ may not be included as part of the basis for computing tax credits.

Any such contention by the IRS could adversely impact, among other things:

- ☐ the eligible basis of an apartment complex used to compute low income housing tax credits,
- ☐ the adjusted basis of an apartment complex used to compute depreciation,
- ☐ the correct deduction of fees,
- ☐ the amortization of organization and offering expenses and start-up expenditures.

If the IRS were successful in any such contention, the anticipated tax credits and losses of the Series would be reduced, perhaps substantially.

Changes in tax law might reduce the value of tax credits. Although all low income housing tax credits are allocated to an apartment complex at commencement of the 10-year credit period, there can be no assurance that future legislation may not adversely affect an investment in a Series. For example, legislation could reduce or eliminate the value of tax credits. In this regard, before 1986, the principal tax benefit of an investment in low income housing was tax losses. These tax losses generally were used to reduce an investor's income from all sources on a dollar-for-dollar basis. Investments in low income housing were made in reliance on the availability of such tax benefits. However, tax legislation enacted in 1986 severely curtailed deduction of such losses. It is unlikely that the pre-enactment limited partnerships will provide their investors with all of the tax benefits expected at the commencement of those partnerships.

New administrative or judicial interpretations of the law might reduce the value of tax credits. Many of the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code related to low income housing and real estate investments have not been interpreted by the IRS in regulations, rulings or public announcements, or by the courts. In the future, these provisions may be interpreted or clarified by the IRS or the courts in a manner adverse to the Series or the local limited partnerships. The IRS constantly reviews the federal tax rules, and can revise its interpretations of established concepts. Any such revisions could reduce or eliminate tax benefits associated with an investment in a Series.

State income tax laws may adversely affect the investors. An investor may be required to file income tax returns and be subject to tax and withholding in each state or local taxing jurisdiction in which:

- ☐ an apartment complex is located,
- ☐ the investor's Series or a local limited partnership engages in business activities, or
- ☐ the investor is a resident.

Corporate investors may be required to pay state franchise taxes.

The tax treatment of particular items under state or local income tax laws may vary materially from the federal income tax treatment of such items. Nonetheless, many of the federal income tax risks associated with an investment in a Series may also apply under state or local income tax law. A Series may be required to withhold state taxes from distributions or income allocations to investors in some instances. In deciding whether to invest in a Series, prospective investors should consider the additional cost of preparing state and local tax returns, as well as the additional state and local taxes which may be payable. This Memorandum makes no attempt to summarize the state and local tax consequences to an investor in any state or locality. Accordingly, prospective investors are urged to consult their tax advisers in this regard.

Risks related to the Series and the Series' partnership agreement.

A Series may be unable to timely provide financial reports to the investors which would adversely affect the investors' ability to monitor Series' operations. The failure of the local general partners to timely provide financial information to the Series would result in the investors' inability to timely receive reports. Each local general partner is required to retain independent public accountants and to report financial information to the Series in a timely manner.

Lack of liquidity of investment. It is unlikely that a public market will develop for the purchase and sale of Units. Accordingly, investors may not be able to sell their Units promptly or at a reasonable price. Units should be considered as a long-term investment because the Series are unlikely to sell any local limited partnership interests for at least 15 years.

The investors will not control their Series and must rely totally on the Fund Manager. The Fund Manager will make all management decisions for each Series. Management decisions include:

- ☐ selecting apartment complexes,
- ☐ selecting the date on which a Series will terminate its offering, and
- ☐ exercising powers granted to a Series by a local limited partnership.

Investors have no right or power to take part in their Series' management. Accordingly, a person should not purchase Units if he is unwilling to entrust all aspects of management to the Fund Manager.

Individual investors will have no recourse if they disagree with actions authorized by a vote of the majority. The partnership agreement of each Series grants to investors owning more than 50% of the Units in the Series the right to:

- ☐ remove the Fund Manager and elect a replacement fund manager,
- ☐ amend the Series' agreement of limited partnership, and
- ☐ terminate the Series.

Accordingly, a majority-in-interest of the investors in a Series could cause any such events to occur, even if investors owning 49% of the Units in the Series opposed such action.

Limitations on liability of the VMB entities to the Series. The investors' ability to sue the VMB entities is subject to limitations. The partnership agreement of each Series limits the liability of the VMB entities to the investors. The VMB entities will not be liable to the investors for acts and omissions:

- ☐ performed or omitted in good faith, and
- ☐ performed or omitted in a manner which the Fund Manager reasonably believed to be within the scope of its authority and in the best interest of the investors, provided

☐ such conduct did not constitute negligence or misconduct.

Therefore, investors may be less able to sue the VMB entities than would be the case if such provisions were not included in the Series' partnership agreement.

Payment of fees to the VMB entities will reduce cash available for investment in local limited partnerships. The VMB entities will perform many services for the Series. They will be paid fees for these services, which will reduce the amount of the Series' cash available for investment in local limited partnerships. The nonaccountable acquisition expense reimbursement payable to VMB & Associates, Inc. will exceed the amount of expenses historically incurred by the VMB-partnerships and may exceed the actual amount of expenses incurred by the Series. Accordingly, an investor investing directly in a low income housing apartment complex would have a greater amount available for investment than an investor investing in low income housing through a Series.

Investors in one Series may be subject to different risks and receive different yields than investors in another Series. Each Series has been formed as a separate partnership under Kansas law. Each Series will invest in its own local limited partnerships. Therefore, investors in one Series may receive different yields than investors in the other Series. Investors in one Series may be subject to different risks regarding that Series' investments than investors in the other Series.

Obligations of investors paying for Units with promissory notes is unconditional. Each investor who subscribes for 20 or more Units may elect to pay one-half of the purchase price of his Units upon subscription and the balance in accordance with a promissory note. If an electing investor fails to pay the deferred installment when due, he will face serious consequences. These consequences include the foreclosure and sale of his Units, and the recapture of tax credits previously claimed by the investor. The Series may impose late charges. The investor may also be liable for attorneys' fees and other costs of collection incurred by the Series.

A Series may be at risk if its investors fail to pay their promissory notes. The Series may be unable to meet its obligations to local limited partnerships, and could suffer a dilution or termination of its interest in a local limited partnership. That could cause:

- ☐ recapture and loss of tax credits, and
- ☐ legal actions by the local general partners to require performance and to recover damages and costs.

Therefore, defaulting investors could adversely affect non-defaulting investors.

Lack of operating history. Neither Series has an operating history. No assurance can be given that operations will be successful or that a Series will meet its stated investment objectives.

WHO SHOULD INVEST; LIMITATIONS ON USE OF CREDITS AND LOSSES

All Investors.

An investor should invest in a Series only if he:

- ☐ reasonably expects to have federal tax liabilities which can be offset by tax credits during the next 10 to 12 years, and
- ☐ has adequate financial means to bear the risks associated with the Units. See "Risk Factors."

An investment in Units is not suitable for tax-exempt entities, including pension or profit-sharing plans, Keogh plans and Individual Retirement Accounts. Accordingly, such entities cannot invest in a Series.

There are many different financial investments available to investors. These include mutual funds, stocks, bonds, annuities, insurance and real estate, among others. An investor's decision as to the appropriate investment depends in part on the investor's goals and the aspects of each of the available investments. Tax reduction is an element of the investment decision. Many people and corporations have used low income housing tax credits as a long-term tax reduction tool.

The alternative minimum tax may limit the benefit of tax credits to an investor. The alternative minimum tax is a complex concept which is discussed under "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Other Important Tax Considerations--Alternative Minimum Tax." The Internal Revenue Code imposes an alternative minimum tax if a taxpayer's alternative minimum tax liability exceeds his regular tax liability. Tax credits cannot be used to reduce alternative minimum tax liability. Even where a taxpayer does not have alternative minimum tax liability, the taxpayer cannot use tax credits to reduce his regular tax liability to an amount less than his alternative minimum tax liability. Accordingly, investors are urged to consult their tax advisers to determine whether the alternative minimum tax limits their ability to benefit from tax credits.

The broker-dealers selling the Units have agreed to ask prospective investors whether an investment in Units is suitable for them. The broker-dealers have agreed to maintain records of their suitability determinations. Each broker-dealer has agreed to make every reasonable effort to determine that an investment in Units is suitable and appropriate for a potential investor, based on information provided by the potential investor as to his financial situation and investment objectives. In making this determination, a broker-dealer will have reasonable grounds to believe that the prospective investor:

- ☐ meets the minimum income and net worth standards set forth below,
- ☐ is or will be in a financial position appropriate to enable him to realize to a significant extent the benefits described in this Memorandum, including the federal income tax benefits,
- ☐ has an overall financial position sufficient to bear the risks of the investment, and
- ☐ understands the federal income tax benefits and risks.

Individual Investors.

Low income housing tax credits and, possibly, historic tax credits and other tax credits are the principal benefits from an investment in Units. The extent to which a prospective investor can use these tax benefits will help determine whether or not he is a suitable investor.

With respect to natural persons, federal tax law imposes limitations on the utilization of credits from passive activities and general business credits. Each of those categories includes low income housing tax credits, historic tax credits and other tax credits which a Series may generate. A Series will generate tax credits over a period of 10 to 12 years. Accordingly, an investment in a Series is not suitable for a prospective investor unless for the next 12 years he will be able to utilize his share of tax credits under:

- ☐ the passive activity rules discussed below,
- ☐ the general business credit rules discussed below, and
- ☐ the alternative minimum tax rules referred to above.

The Internal Revenue Code sorts income into several categories. Income can be:

- ☐ active, such as salaries and wages,
- ☐ portfolio, such as interest and dividends,
- ☐ passive, such as income from limited partnerships, or
- ☐ the result of material participation in real estate activities, such as the income of a landlord who invests significant amounts of time in managing his property.

Prospective non-corporate investors can use an unlimited amount of tax credits against income taxes due on passive income. They can also use tax credits against income taxes due on a maximum of $25,000 of active or portfolio income each year if they do not materially participate in rental real estate activities. This is known as the $25,000 deduction equivalent rule. However, a natural person can use historic tax credits in this manner only to the extent his adjusted gross income does not exceed $200,000. A natural person's ability to use historic tax credits is phased out if his gross income is between $200,000 and $250,000, and eliminated if his gross income exceeds $250,000. It is expected that the use of other tax credits will be similarly limited.

In general, a natural person can use losses from a Series only to the extent he has passive income.

Investors should read the entire discussion under "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities" and "General Business Tax Credit Limitations." That section includes more information regarding the principal limitations on the use of tax credits and losses from an investment in Units.

Corporate and Other Entity Investors.

Trusts and Estates. A trust other than a grantor trust is a taxable entity and should consider an investment in a Series only if it will have passive income against which the Series' tax credits and losses can be used. There is no $25,000 deduction equivalent for non-grantor trusts.

A grantor trust is not a taxable entity. The grantor of a grantor trust includes the tax items of the trust in his tax return.

Therefore, a grantor trust should consider an investment only if the grantor meets the criteria applicable to it.

Generally, an estate has no $25,000 deduction equivalent. A limited exception permits estates to use the $25,000 deduction equivalent in a tax year ending less than two years after the decedent's death.

Corporations. The passive activity rules do not apply to regular corporations. A regular corporation should consider an investment in a Series only if it will have during the next 12 years sufficient income from all sources to use the Series' tax credits and losses. Regular corporations are corporations which:

- ☐ have not elected to be subject to Subchapter S under the Internal Revenue Code,
- ☐ are not closely-held, and
- ☐ are not personal service corporations.

A corporation is closely-held for these purposes if more than 50% of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by five or fewer shareholders at any time during the last half of its relevant tax year. A corporation is a personal service corporation if it performs services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts or consulting.

Special rules apply to all types of corporations other than regular corporations. A corporation other than a regular corporation should consider an investment in a Series only as follows:

- ☐ A personal service corporation must have during the next 12 years sufficient passive income to use the Series' tax credits and losses.
- ☐ A corporation which has elected to be subject to Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code must have shareholders who meet the criteria applicable to such shareholders. Thus, if all the shareholders are individuals, the shareholders must meet the criteria described above for individuals.
- ☐ A closely-held corporation which is not a personal service corporation and which has not elected to be subject to Subchapter S of the Internal Revenue Code must have during the next 12 years sufficient passive income and active income to use the Series' tax credits and losses.

Partnerships. A partnership should consider an investment only if each of its partners meets the investment criteria applicable to the partner. Thus, if all the partners are individuals, the partners must meet the criteria described above for individuals.

See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities."

Entity Financial Reports. An entity investor should also consider the effect of an investment in a Series on the entity's financial reports.

The actual effect on an entity investor's net income for financial reporting purposes will depend upon the results of Series' operations and the method of accounting adopted by the investor to record its investment in the Series. The Emerging Issues Task Force of the Financial Accounting Standards Board has been examining the methods of accounting used by entities investing in low income housing through limited partnerships. In general, as of the date hereof, the Emerging Issues Task Force has determined that the permissible methods used to account for such investments are the modified cost method, the equity method, the effective yield method and the full consolidation method.

Under the modified cost method, an entity investor initially capitalizes the cost of its investment in the limited partnership, and then amortizes the difference between the carrying cost and the aggregate estimated residual value of the limited partnership's property portfolio over the tax credit period of such portfolio. The estimated residual value of a property is its estimated residual value at the end of the last period in which tax credits are allocated to the investor and will not reflect anticipated inflation.

Under the equity method, an entity investor initially capitalizes the cost of its investment in the limited partnership, and then reduces or increases the carrying value by the investor's allocable share of losses or income, respectively, from the limited partnership. The carrying value may not be reduced below zero.

Under the effective yield method, an entity investor initially capitalizes the cost of its investment in the limited partnership, and then amortizes the cost to provide a constant effective yield over the period that the tax credits are allocated to the investor. The effective yield is the internal rate of return on the investment, based on the cost of the investment and the tax credits allocated to the investor. Any expected residual value of the investment is excluded from the effective yield calculation.

Under the full consolidation method, the low income housing properties themselves, and the results of operations therefrom are included in the entity investor's financial statements.

Regardless of the method selected, the Emerging Issues Task Force has not changed the requirement that an investment be reviewed periodically to determine impairment of value.

With the exception of the effective yield method, the method of accounting to be used by an entity investor in a low income housing program generally is not elective but rather is determined by the level of the entity's investment in the limited partnership and/or the ability of the investor to control the limited partnership. The effective yield method may be elected if:

- ☐ the tax credits allocable to the investor are guaranteed by a creditworthy entity,
- ☐ the investor's yield based solely on the cash flows from the guaranteed tax credits is positive, and
- ☐ the investor is a limited partner for legal and tax purposes and the investor's liability is limited to its capital investment.

If the investor is unable to or does not elect to use the effective yield method, the appropriate method will be:

- ☐ the modified cost method, if the investor's interest in the limited partnership is so minor as to give the investor virtually no influence over partnership operating and financial policies;
- ☐ the equity method, if the investor owns less than 50% of the limited partnership and has no significant control over partnership policies; or
- ☐ the full consolidation method, if the investor owns 50% or more of the limited partnership unless the investor has no significant control over partnership policies, in which event the equity method is to be used.

To date, the Emerging Issues Task Force has provided no bright-line ownership test for use in determining when an investor's interest is so minor as to give the investor "virtually no influence over partnership operating and financial policies." The staff of the SEC, however, understands that accounting practice generally has viewed investments of more than 3% to 5% to be more than minor.

It is anticipated that entity investors in a Series will use either the modified cost method or the equity method. As indicated above, under the equity method an investor will actually report its share of Series' losses or income. In this regard, for financial reporting purposes each Series is expected to use the equity method, which will result in recognition by the Series of its share of losses or income from the limited partnerships in which it invests.

Minimum State Suitability Requirements.

The Series have established the subjective standards described above. These subjective standards apply to all investors. Each state has established objective standards for individuals which also must be satisfied. These standards are set forth below. An individual must satisfy the standard for his state of residency before he can consider an investment in Units. In the case of sales to fiduciary accounts, these minimum suitability standards must be met by the beneficiary, the fiduciary account, or by the donor or grantor who directly or indirectly supplies the funds to purchase the Units if the donor or grantor is one of the fiduciaries.

The Units may be offered and sold only in those jurisdictions in which they have been registered or qualified for sale, or are exempt from the registration or qualification requirement.

Set forth below are the minimum suitability standards for residents of each state in which the Series have applied to have the Units registered or qualified for sale or in which the sale of Units is exempt from registration. For these purposes, net worth is exclusive of home, furnishings and automobiles.

Arkansas	annual gross income of at least $45,000 and a net worth of at least $45,000 or a net worth of at least $150,000
Colorado	annual gross income of at least $35,000 and a net worth of at least $35,000 or a net worth of at least $75,000

Kansas	annual gross income of at least $45,000 and a net worth of at least $45,000 or a net worth of at least $150,000
Missouri	annual gross income of at least $45,000 and a net worth of at least $45,000 or a net worth of at least $150,000; no investor may invest more than 10% of his net worth in a Series

ESTIMATED USE OF PROCEEDS

The following table sets forth the estimated use of the proceeds from the sale of the Units. As indicated herein, approximately 75% of the total proceeds will be invested in local limited partnerships. The amounts in the table represent the Fund Manager's present estimates and the actual amounts may be different. At a minimum, each Series must invest in local limited partnerships and in reserves the greater of:

- ☐ 80% of the gross offering proceeds reduced by 0.1625% for each 1% of the Series' share of the mortgage financing encumbering the apartment complexes, or
- ☐ 70% of the gross offering proceeds.

Assuming that a Series share of the financing encumbering apartment complexes is 40%, the calculation is: $40 \times 0.1625\% = 6.5\%$; $80\% - 6.5\% = 73.5\%$. If the Series' share of financing is 61.75%, the calculation is: $61.75 \times 0.1625\% = 10\%$; $80\% - 10\% = 70\%$. In performing this calculation, there is a limit on the amount which may be invested in reserves. No more than 5% of gross offering proceeds may be considered as reserves at the Series level, and no more than 5% of gross offering proceeds may be considered as reserves at the local limited partnership level.

The following table excludes one Unit purchased by the initial limited partner in connection with the organization of the Series. It also excludes interest due under the investors' promissory notes. The amount of that interest to be received cannot be estimated. It will depend on the amounts and dates of payment of the investor promissory notes. Any such interest will constitute cash flow under the Series' partnership agreement. As such it may be used to pay administrative costs, or to increase reserves.

Some investors may purchase Units with a reduced selling commission. The following table assumes that the maximum selling commissions will be paid on all purchases of Units.

	Minimum Proceeds	Percent of Gross Proceeds	Maximum Proceeds	Percent of Gross Pro- ceeds

Proceeds invested as set forth in the table above represent amounts to be paid:

- ☐ to acquire interests in local limited partnerships, and
- ☐ possibly, to repay loans incurred to acquire such interests and to pay interest and carrying costs on the loans.

Proceeds invested in local limited partnerships will be used by the local limited partnerships to pay or reimburse costs, to fund reserves, and to pay fees to the local general partners. These costs will consist of:

- ☐ acquisition costs,
- ☐ construction costs,
- ☐ construction interest and taxes,
- ☐ financing fees, and
- ☐ developmental and organizational expenses.

The exact manner in which a local limited partnership will use the proceeds will be negotiated in each case. It is anticipated that the local general partners will be paid approximately 10% to 30% of the cost of the apartment complex as a development fee and other compensation. In some cases it may be as much as 40%. In the discretion of the Fund Manager, this amount will be paid:

- ☐ over a period of two to three years, coinciding with the payments of the Series' capital contributions, or ☐ pursuant to an interest-bearing note generally payable no later than the eleventh year of the note.

Additional compensation will be payable to the local general partners from local limited partnership cash flow for their services in managing and selling apartment complexes. See "Investment Objectives and Policies--The Local General Partners--Compensation of Local General Partners."

MANAGEMENT COMPENSATION

The following table summarizes the types and estimated amounts of compensation to be paid to the VMB entities. Such compensation was not determined by arm's-length negotiations. Investment and management decisions which such persons make for the Series will affect the amount of the compensation actually to be received. See "Conflicts of Interest." Other than as set forth herein, no compensation is to be paid to the VMB entities. Such compensation cannot be increased by reclassifying into different categories fees or reimbursements which are in excess of the limitations set forth herein.

Operating cash expenses include the actual cost of goods, materials and administrative services used for or by the Series, whether incurred by VMB & Associates, Inc. or a non-affiliated person. As used in the preceding sentence:

- ☐ actual cost of goods and materials means the actual cost of goods and materials used for or by the Series and obtained from entities not affiliated with VMB & Associates, Inc., and
- ☐ actual cost of administrative services means the pro rata cost of personnel, but in no event to exceed a competitive amount.

In no event will reimbursements be permitted for:

- ☐ rent, depreciation or other such administrative items, or
- ☐ salaries, fringe benefits or travel expenses of a controlling person of VMB & Associates, Inc.

Liquidation Stage
Share of Series' sale or refinancing proceeds to VMB National Partners, LLC	After: ☐ a Series' investors have received sale or refinancing proceeds equal to the amounts of their capital contributions and their preferred return, and ☐ VMB National Partners, LLC has received sale or refinancing proceeds equal to the amount of its capital contributions and any subordinated disposition fee, the Series will distribute any additional sale or refinancing proceeds 90% to its investors and 10% to VMB National Partners, LLC.	Actual amounts are not determinable at this time.
Share of Series' sale or refinancing proceeds to VMB National Partners, LLC	Sale or refinancing proceeds are the Series' cash distributions from a local limited partnership's sale, financing or refinancing of an apartment complex, less any reserves funded with such proceeds. The investors' preferred return is an annual, cumulative, but not compounded, return to the Series' investors on their capital contributions equal to 10% through December 31, 2013,

Interest in Series
Share of Series' profits, losses and tax credits to VMB National Partners, LLC	Generally, 0.1% of profits, losses and tax credits, except that in the case of profits from a sale or refinancing, the percentage may be increased to as much as 10%. See "Profits and Losses, Tax Credits and Cash Distributions."	Actual amounts are not determinable at this time.

- (1) It is possible that a local limited partnership may generate federal tax credits and state tax credits. If so, the VMB entities may organize another entity to invest in the state tax credits. See "Investment Objectives and Policies - Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements -Interests in Profits, Losses and Distributions." The VMB entities would receive compensation from the other entity in connection with such activities.
- (2) Despite the information in the tables, the interest of the VMB entities in cash to be distributed by the Series from cash available for distribution and sale or refinancing proceeds, and from similar sources in the case of the local limited partnerships, will not exceed, in the case of cash available for distribution, 10% of total cash available for distribution and, in the case of sale or refinancing proceeds, 15% of sale or refinancing proceeds remaining after required payments to the investors. For a discussion of the required payments to investors, see "Profits and Losses, Tax Credits and Cash Distributions."

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

The interests of the VMB entities may conflict with the interests of the investors. These conflicts include:

Receipt of Fees and Other Compensation by the VMB Entities.

The Fund Manager will decide:

- ☐ which investments will be made by the Series,
- ☐ in what manner the acquisitions will occur,
- ☐ how the investments will be managed, and
- ☐ when the investments will be sold.

As a result of these transactions, the VMB entities will receive fees, compensation and other income. See "Management Compensation." Such compensation arrangements were not negotiated at arm's length and may create conflicts between the interests of the VMB entities and those of the investors.

For example, the consent of a Series may be necessary in connection with the sale of an apartment complex by a local limited partnership. The Fund Manager may face a conflict in these circumstances because the VMB entities' share of fees and cash distributions from the transaction may be more or less than their expected share of fees if the apartment complex were not sold. And in its negotiations with local general partners over the terms of the Series' investments, the Fund Manager may request that VMB Management, Inc. serve as the property manager for the apartment complex. As property manager, VMB Management, Inc. would earn property management fees from the local limited partnerships. The result of these conflicts could be that a Series may make investments which are less desirable, or on terms which are less favorable, to the Series than might otherwise be the case.

Other Business Activities of the VMB Entities.

The VMB entities have formed and are serving as general partners of other public and private real estate limited partnerships. They also are providing administrative and consulting services for other real estate limited partnerships of which they were not the original managing general partners. See "Management" and "Prior Performance Summary." In addition, the VMB entities may become general partners of other public or private real estate limited partnerships and may become involved in other business activities unrelated to the business of the Series.

Under the Series' partnership agreement, the Fund Manager is required to devote to Series' affairs only such time as is necessary for the proper performance of its duties to the Series. The officers, directors and employees of VMB & Associates, Inc. will perform the duties of the Fund Manager. None of them will devote their full time to the performance of such duties. Therefore, conflicts may arise in the allocation of the time of such people among the activities of each Series and the other activities of the VMB entities. The Fund Manager believes that VMB & Associates, Inc. has sufficient personnel to fully discharge the Fund Manager's duties to the Series.

Competition with the VMB Entities with Respect to the Purchase or Ownership of Properties.

Some of the VMB entities are also general partners of other real estate limited partnerships and limited liability companies and will form and manage additional real estate entities. The other existing partnerships have, and it is expected that any entities to be organized in the future will have, the same or similar investment objectives as the Series.

VMB & Associates, Inc. might be presented with an investment opportunity which is appropriate for a Series and one or more other entities managed by the VMB entities, including the other Series. VMB & Associates, Inc. will decide which entity will make the investment. That decision will be based upon such factors as:

- ☐ the effect of the acquisition on the diversification of each entity's portfolio,
- ☐ the estimated income tax effects of the purchase on each entity,
- ☐ the amount of funds of each entity available for investment, and
- ☐ the length of time funds have been available for investment.

If a particular investment is determined to be suitable for more than one entity, the entity having uninvested funds for the longest period of time will have priority over the other entities. However, if an investment generates federal and state low income housing tax credits, then an entity formed to provide federal and state tax credits to its investors will have priority over each Series and other entities which are not formed to provide such state tax credits.

The VMB entities, and the local general partners and their affiliates may own or acquire interests in properties near or adjacent to the apartment complexes in which a Series may invest. It is possible that the value of such persons' properties may be enhanced by their proximity to the Series' apartment complexes. It is also possible that such properties may be in competition with the Series' apartment complexes for prospective tenants or purchasers. As a result, the interests of the VMB entities, the local general partners and their affiliates may conflict with those of a Series.

Other Transactions with Developers, Local General Partners, Lenders and Joint Venturers.

Certain persons controlling or having business dealings with some of the local limited partnerships, such as general partners, developers and lenders, will be persons with whom the VMB entities do business. The VMB entities may receive compensation, profits or other benefits in connection with such other transactions. As a result, conflicts may arise between their interests and the interests of the Series. For example, the Fund Manager generally is entitled to remove a local general partner without the consent of the investors. If a VMB entity has other business dealings with the local general partner, the Fund Manager might be reluctant to remove the local general partner under circumstances which otherwise would warrant removal.

Representation in Tax Audit Proceedings.

The Fund Manager has been designated the tax matters partner of each Series. As such, it is authorized and directed to represent each Series and its investors at the expense of the Series in connection with all examinations of the Series' affairs by tax authorities, including any resulting administrative or judicial proceedings. Such proceedings may involve or affect the other Series and other partnerships and limited liability companies managed by the VMB entities. In such situations, the positions taken by the VMB entities with respect to the Series may have differing effects on the Series and the other entities.

Distribution of Units.

The Series have not engaged an independent managing underwriter for the distribution of the Units. VMB Capital Corporation, as the dealer manager for the offering of Units, may sell Units and will perform wholesaling services for the Series. VMB Capital Corporation has not retained counsel separate from the Series' counsel but has conducted such due diligence review as it deems necessary under the circumstances. However, investors will not have the benefit of an independent investigation of the Series performed by an independent, unaffiliated underwriter.

Joint Investments.

A Series may invest in local limited partnerships jointly with the other Series, other limited partnerships formed by the VMB entities or other limited partnerships if the conditions set forth under "Investment Objectives and Policies--Joint Investments" are met. There is always a risk that joint venture partners will reach an impasse respecting the activities of the joint venture. For example, it may be in the best interest of a Series to sell a jointly-held local limited partnership interest at a time when it is in the best interest of its co-venturer to retain such investment. In such event, the Series may be unable to sell the local limited partnership interest.

Resolution of Conflicts of Interest.

Except as set forth above, the Series have not developed any formal process for resolving conflicts of interest. However, the Fund Manager is subject to a fiduciary duty to exercise good faith and integrity in handling the affairs of each Series, and that duty will govern its actions in all such matters. See "Fiduciary Responsibility." Furthermore, the manner in which the Series can make investments and the manner in which the Series can operate are subject to restrictions contained in the Series' partnership agreement. See "Investment Objectives and Policies." Nonetheless, the conflicts described in this section could result in materially adverse effects on the investors, particularly where the Fund Manager has a fiduciary duty to more than one entity. In such cases, the Fund Manager will resolve the conflicts by exercising its best business judgment.

Lack of Separate Representation.

The Series, the VMB entities, and the investors are not represented by separate counsel. See "Legal Matters." All of the attorneys, accountants and other experts performing services for the Series also perform services for the VMB entities. Following the termination of the offering, if any controversy arises in which the interests of a Series appear to be in conflict with those of:

- ☐ the other Series,
- ☐ the VMB entities, or
- ☐ a local limited partnership, other counsel would be retained for one or more of the parties.

Organizational Diagram

The following diagram illustrates the relationships among the Series, the VMB entities, and certain other parties:

As of November 30, ____[Year], the VMB entities are serving as general partners of more than 80 real estate limited partnerships, including 67 tax credit partnerships. See "Prior Performance Summary."

No VMB entity can be the local general partner of a local limited partnership at the time of the Series' acquisition of an interest therein. A VMB entity can become a local general partner after acquisition of the local limited partnership interest only:

- ☐ upon request by a lender that such action be taken,
- ☐ in the event of the bankruptcy, death, dissolution, withdrawal, removal or adjudication of incompetence of a local general partner,
- ☐ in the event of a material default by a local general partner in the performance of its duties, or
- ☐ in the event of a material default by the local limited partnership under its mortgage loan.

FIDUCIARY RESPONSIBILITY

The Fund Manager is accountable to each Series as a fiduciary. The Series have been advised by counsel that the laws of the State of Kansas govern the fiduciary obligations of the Fund Manager to each Series and its investors. Under such laws, a general partner owes its partners the utmost good faith and loyalty. The Series' partnership agreement does not modify these fiduciary obligations provided under Kansas law. Rather, the Series' partnership agreement expressly provides that the Fund Manager:

- ☐ has fiduciary responsibility for the safekeeping and use of all funds and assets of each Series, whether or not in its immediate possession or control,
- ☐ may not employ or permit another to employ such funds or assets in any manner except for the exclusive benefit of the Series,
- ☐ may not contract away its fiduciary duty, and
- ☐ may engage in other business activities independent of the Series provided that the right to engage in such activities does not relieve it of its general fiduciary obligation to the Series.

Subject to the rules of Kansas law, a limited partner may institute legal action on behalf of a partnership to recover damages from third parties or to recover damages for a breach by a general partner of its fiduciary duty. This is known as a partnership derivative action. In addition, a limited partner may institute a legal action on behalf of himself and all other similarly situated limited partners to recover damages for a breach by a general partner of its fiduciary duties, subject to Kansas rules. This is known as a partnership class action. In any such action, the Fund Manager could assert defenses based on the exculpation provision in the Series' partnership agreement, described in the following paragraph. If the Fund Manager satisfied the standards for exculpation, it would be deemed not to have breached its fiduciary obligation. This area of the law is changing and developing and investors who have questions concerning the fiduciary duties of the Fund Manager are urged to consult with their counsel.

The exculpation provision of the Series' partnership agreement holds the Fund Manager and its affiliates harmless from liability for losses suffered by the Series due to acts or omissions that any of them performs or fails to perform:

- ☐ in good faith, and
- ☐ in a manner which the Fund Manager reasonably believes to be within the scope of authority granted to it and in the best interest of the Series, provided
- ☐ the acts or omissions did not constitute negligence or misconduct.

The Series' partnership agreement also indemnifies the Fund Manager and its affiliates against losses and liabilities sustained by them when acting on behalf of the Series or performing services for the Series, provided such conduct:

- ☐ did not constitute negligence or misconduct, and
- ☐ was the result of a course of conduct which the Fund Manager, in good faith, determined was in the best interests of the Series.

Indemnification means the Series will pay any losses or liabilities suffered by the Fund Manager or its affiliates.

As a result of these exculpation and indemnification provisions, an investor may have a more limited right of action against the Fund Manager and its affiliates than he would otherwise have had in the absence of such provisions. In the opinion of the Securities and Exchange Commission, indemnification for liabilities arising under the Securities Act of 1933 is against public policy and therefore unenforceable.

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVES AND POLICIES

Principal Investment Objectives.

Each Series' principal investment objective is to provide tax benefits in the form of:

- (a) A predictable stream of tax credits which investors may use to offset their federal income tax liabilities.
- (b) Tax losses which:
 - ☐ some corporations may use to offset any type of income, and
 - ☐ other corporations and individuals may use to offset passive income. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities."

In addition, each Series will seek to preserve and protect its invested capital and to return such capital through cash distributions resulting from sale or refinancing transactions. See "Sale or Other Disposition of Investments" below in this section.

The Series will not seek to provide cash distributions from operations.

There can be no assurance that these investment objectives will be achieved. In addition, the degree to which each Series achieves its objectives may vary.

This Memorandum will be supplemented to identify a specific investment when the Fund Manager believes a reasonable probability exists that the investment will be acquired. Any such supplement will set forth available data with respect to the investment, including the proposed terms of purchase, a description of the apartment complex and local general partners, and other information considered appropriate for an understanding of the transaction. The consummation of any pending acquisition will be subject to further negotiation with the local general partners and execution of a final agreement. Such final agreement may differ in material respects from prior understandings or agreements between the local general partners and the Series. And the acquisition or retention of each investment will be subject to the terms and conditions of closing. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that any potential investment initially disclosed in a supplement to this Memorandum will ultimately be acquired, or that the terms of any acquisition will not differ substantially from those which were initially disclosed.

Low income housing tax credits are available for an apartment complex over a 10-year period commencing with the date that the property is placed in service and otherwise meets the requirements for the credit. It is expected that investors will be allocated low income housing tax credits beginning in the year they are admitted to the Series or the next year. It is also expected that the amount of low income housing tax credits available to investors will be higher in later years because of the time that is necessary:

- ☐ to identify the local limited partnerships in which a Series will invest, and
- ☐ for such local limited partnerships to complete construction of their respective apartment complexes.

Any reduction in low income housing tax credits in the first and second years of a Series should result in additional low income housing tax credits in the eleventh and twelfth years of a Series. A Series will be able to identify the annual amount of its tax credits and the month it will commence generating its stream of tax credits when its investments are identified and commence operations. Historically, investors in partnerships sponsored by the VMB entities generally have been allocated some tax credits in the year of investment and the next year, and the full amount of annual tax credits in the second full year following investment.

The Fund Manager believes that each Series will be able to acquire a sufficient number of investments at a purchase price which will enable the Series to provide the amounts of tax credits anticipated at commencement of the Series' offering. This belief is based upon the general knowledge that the management personnel of the VMB entities have with respect to the current and past purchase prices for tax credit properties. In negotiating the purchase price to be paid by a Series for its interest in a local limited partnership, VMB & Associates, Inc. will determine the portion of the Series capital that can be paid for such interest which will enable the investors to receive the anticipated amount of tax credits. VMB & Associates, Inc. will take into consideration the possibility that a local limited partnership will not provide all of the tax credits that are expected. To the extent a Series does not make distributions in respect of a Unit equal to the $1,000 purchase price of the Unit, the tax credits generated by the Series would in effect represent a return of and not a return on the investor's investment in the Series.

Among other things, the Fund Manager's estimate of the amount of tax credits that will be provided by each Series is based upon the assumption that demand for tax credit properties does not increase the price for such properties. In the past, heightened demand for interests in local limited partnerships increased the purchase price for such interests. Further increases could impair the ability of a Series to provide investors with the anticipated amount of tax credits.

The Fund Manager's estimate of the amount of the tax credits that will be provided by each Series is based upon additional assumptions, including, that:

- ☐ no tax laws or regulations or court interpretations thereof will be enacted or adopted or issued which would adversely affect the Series,
- ☐ the apartment complexes will qualify for the anticipated tax credits at the appropriate times,
- ☐ that portion of the costs of the low income residential units in each apartment complex expected to qualify for the low income housing tax credits in fact will qualify for the low income housing tax credits,
- ☐ the low income residential units in each apartment complex will be rented to eligible tenants,
- ☐ the qualified basis of each apartment complex used to calculate the low income housing tax credits will not decrease during the 15-year compliance period,
- ☐ each local limited partnership will continually meet the rental and occupancy tests for the low income residential units during the 15-year compliance period,
- ☐ development fees to the local general partners or their affiliates will be included in the qualified basis of each apartment complex used to calculate the low income housing tax credits, and
- ☐ in the case of an existing apartment complex, the acquisition thereof will constitute a purchase for purposes of Internal Revenue Code Section 42.

See "The Low Income Housing Tax Credit."

Events occurring after the acquisition of interests in local limited partnerships could materially affect a Series' ability to provide all of the anticipated tax credits. For example, the amount of tax credits for a property depends, in part, on the costs to construct the property. If the costs to construct are less than anticipated, the amount of the tax credits will be less than anticipated. Also, the amount of tax credits is based in part on current interest rates. If there is a change in interest rates from the time a Series' agrees to acquire a property and the time the property is placed in service, the tax credits will be less or more than anticipated. The amount of tax credits could also be materially and adversely affected by the failure of any other of the assumptions listed above. However, as discussed below in this section under "Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements," the partnership agreements of the local limited partnerships will include adjuster and other provisions intended to reduce these adverse consequences to a Series.

The foregoing investment objectives are set forth in the partnership agreement of each Series and can only be changed by an amendment to the partnership agreement.

Investment Policies.

Investment Criteria. In selecting apartment complexes, the Fund Manager will evaluate, among other factors:

- ☐ the amount of low income housing tax credits which are anticipated,
- ☐ the amount of cash flow from operations, if any, which is anticipated,
- ☐ the location of the apartment complex,
- ☐ general rental market conditions in the area of the apartment complex, including vacancy rates and information as to the numbers of eligible tenants in the area,
- ☐ the expenses, rental rates and costs of construction of the apartment complex and comparable apartment complexes,
- ☐ the data supplied to the agency providing government financing subsidies or other lender,
- ☐ the financial strength of the local general partners,
- ☐ the prior performance of the local general partners,
- ☐ the experience and prior performance of the property manager,
- ☐ the types of guarantees which can be obtained from the local general partners and other sellers and developers, and
- ☐ the prior experience and reputation of the builder and architect of the apartment complex.

The criteria for selecting a particular investment for a Series will include the following:

- ☐ The apartment complex must be completed, under development or in the process of being rehabilitated. For these purposes, development activities include:
 - ☐ engaging contractors,
 - ☐ engaging architects and other artisans,
 - ☐ applying for loan commitments,
 - ☐ applying for tax credit reservation, and
 - ☐ applying for building permits.
- ☐ In the case of a newly constructed or rehabilitated apartment complex, no substantial part of the Series' investment can be made before receipt of a commitment for the construction loan and no more than 75% of the Series' investment can be made before receipt of a commitment for the permanent loan.

☐ The local general partners must represent that a specified percentage of the residential units comprising the apartment complex will be set aside for low income tenants. In compliance with the rules under Internal Revenue Code Section 42, the local general partners must represent that either 20% or more of the residential units will be set aside for occupants with incomes of 50% or less of area median income, or 40% or more of the residential units will be set aside for occupants with incomes of 60% or less or area median income.

☐ The local limited partnership must agree to provide the Series with a specific amount of tax credits.

☐ In no case shall the Series invest in any local limited partnership if, at the date of initial investment, a VMB entity is a local general partner or an affiliate of a local general partner, or otherwise has an interest therein, except that:

☐ another entity may invest in state tax credits, as discussed below under "Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements--Interests in Profits, Losses and Distributions,"

☐ a Series may invest as a co-venturer, as discussed below under "Joint Investments,"

☐ a Series may purchase the interest of the Series' joint venture partner in a local limited partnership interest,

☐ a Series may purchase an interest in a local limited partnership from a VMB entity if such person purchased the interest in its name in order to facilitate the acquisition by the Series, and

☐ VMB Housing, L.P. may be a special limited partner in the local limited partnership as described below in this section under "Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements--Role of Special Limited Partner."

This limitation does not prevent a Series from investing in a local limited partnership which is an affiliate of another local limited partnership in which a Series or another VMB-partnership has invested. Also, this does not prevent a VMB entity from becoming a local general partner of a local limited partnership after a Series has acquired an investment therein. However, a VMB entity would become a local general partner only under the circumstances described under "Conflicts of Interest--Organizational Diagram."

☐ A real estate developer with at least two years' experience must agree to supervise management of the apartment complex or to serve as the local general partner for a period of time acceptable to the Fund Manager.

The Fund Manager will seek to ascertain the status of certain matters with respect to a local limited partnership as a condition to a Series becoming a limited partner or member of the local limited partnership. These matters are expected to include:

- ☐ assurance that the local limited partnership has title to its apartment complex,
- ☐ assurance that the local limited partnership is duly formed as a limited partnership or limited liability company under the laws of its state of origin, and
- ☐ receipt of an opinion of counsel for the local limited partnership as to the limited liability of the Series as a limited partner or member thereof.

Such counsel's opinion will also include, or permit the Series counsel to render, an opinion that:

- ☐ the local limited partnership is a partnership for federal income tax purposes,
- ☐ the allocation provisions of the partnership agreement of the local limited partnership will not be significantly modified by the IRS, and
- ☐ based on the assumption that the local limited partnership will operate as represented by the local general partners, that the apartment complex will qualify for the anticipated tax credits.

A Series will not acquire an interest in a local limited partnership unless the Series has received, with respect to the apartment complex of such local limited partnership, either:

- ☐ an appraisal prepared by a competent, independent appraiser, or
- ☐ a form of a state or other governmental agency setting forth estimates with respect to construction and mortgage financing costs and initial rental income and operating expenses. These forms may include:
 - ☐ Forms 1924-13 (estimate and certificate of actual cost) and 1930-7 (statement of budget, income and expense) or comparable forms of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development,
 - ☐ Form 2264 (project cost and budget analysis) or comparable form of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development,
 - ☐ a comparable form of any successor of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development or the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, or
 - ☐ a form of any applicable tax credit allocation agency.

In any case, the appraisal or form will be maintained in the Series' records for at least five years, and will be available for inspection and duplication by any investor.

Each Series intends to invest only in local limited partnerships which will arrange for comprehensive insurance coverage for their apartment complexes, including liability, fire and extended coverage, of the type which is customarily obtained for similar properties. See, however, "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes."

Eligibility for Low Income Housing Tax Credits. Each Series will invest in local limited partnerships which own and operate apartment complexes to be eligible for tax credits. With respect to apartment complexes which will generate low income housing tax credits, at a minimum, at least:

- ☐ 40% of the residential units in each apartment complex, and
- ☐ 70% of the total number of residential units in all of the apartment complexes, will be expected to be set aside for low income tenants.

Historic Tax Credits. Some of the local limited partnerships in which a Series invests may own apartment complexes which qualify for historic tax credits in addition to, or instead of, low income housing tax credits. Historic tax credits are available for rehabilitation expenditures incurred in improving certified historic structures. The historic tax credit is generally equal to 20% of the qualified rehabilitation expenditures. Unlike low income housing tax credits, the full amount of the historic tax credit is claimed in the year in which the rehabilitated structure is placed in service. The historic tax credit is more fully discussed in "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Historic Tax Credit" and "Historic Tax Credit Recapture."

Other Tax Credits. Proposals have been offered from time to time by members of Congress to provide tax credits for single-family home ownership. Other proposals may be forthcoming from the Administration or Congress. If any tax credits relating to housing are enacted into law, the Fund Manager will evaluate them. If the Fund Manager determines that it is appropriate for a Series to do so, a Series may invest in local limited partnerships intending to obtain such tax credits.

Types of Properties. Each Series might invest in two basic types of apartment complexes. The first type consists of newly-constructed or substantially rehabilitated apartment complexes financed either:

- ☐ with the proceeds of tax-exempt bonds or state and local bonds which are not tax-exempt,
- ☐ under the Home Investment Partnership program,
- ☐ by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development, or
- ☐ with other below-market-interest-rate indebtedness.

These properties may also receive rental assistance.

The second type consists of newly-constructed or substantially rehabilitated apartment complexes without federal or state government subsidies, but which otherwise qualify for tax credits, including single-room occupancy complexes.

Location of Properties. The apartment complexes may be located in any of the United States, or the territories or possessions of the United States. Apartment complexes assisted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development will be located in towns with a population of less than 50,000. Other apartment complexes may be located in urban, suburban or rural areas. Each Series will seek as much diversity as is reasonably possible in the locations of the apartment complexes. However, a Series' ability to provide such diversification will be substantially influenced by the amount of the proceeds it receives from its offering and the purchase prices of its investments. See "Number of Investments" below in this section and "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes." The Series do not intend to invest in any distressed low income areas with a high risk of property deterioration and neighborhood instability. A Series may invest in renewal areas where the Fund Manager believes there is a strong probability of economic success.

Number of Investments. The number of apartment complexes in which a Series invests will depend on the amount of the proceeds from its offering and the purchase prices of its investments. If a Series receives only the minimum proceeds of $1,400,000, it is expected that the Series would invest in only a few apartment complexes. If a Series receives the maximum proceeds of $2,500,000, the number of the Series' apartment complexes would be substantially greater. A Series has no policy or limitation as to the amount or percentage of its proceeds which may be invested in any one local limited partnership or group of local limited partnerships or local limited partnerships with which any person or group of persons is affiliated.

Timing of Investments. Subject to the limitations discussed below, a Series may make or commit to make investments in apartment complexes at any time, including a time before the completion of its offering. There are risks involved in making or committing to make investments before the receipt of offering proceeds. See "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes." The Fund Manager will attempt to mitigate the risks by limiting such investments and commitments and by attempting to negotiate protective provisions in the related agreements or commitments. Such provisions may include extensions of the due dates for payment, releases from commitments if proceeds are not available, or reduction of an interest in a local limited partnership.

Any portion of a Series' capital contributions which has not been invested or committed to investment in local limited partnerships or reserves within the later of:

- ☐ 24 months from the date of commencement of the Series' offering, or
- ☐ 12 months after termination of the offering, will be returned by the Series to its investors. No interest will be payable to the investors if uninvested funds are returned to them. The VMB entities will not receive any fees from capital returned to investors. For these purposes, capital will be deemed committed to an investment no later than the date a Series executes a written agreement in principle, commitment letter, letter of intent or understanding, option agreement or other similar understanding or contract with respect to such investment. Once capital is treated as committed under that policy it need not later be returned to the investors even if the identified investment is not consummated. Rather, such capital could be used for another investment.

Until required by a Series for use in connection with its business and operations as described in this Memorandum, all funds received by a Series from its offering will be held by the Series in:

- ☐ United States government securities,
- ☐ securities issued or fully guaranteed by United States government agencies,
- ☐ certificates of deposit and time or demand deposits in, or repurchase agreements constituting obligations of, commercial banks with deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or

- ☐ other short-term, highly-liquid investments.

The rate of return on such types of investments has been relatively low in recent years and may be significantly less than that obtainable from investments in apartment complexes.

Payment for Investments. A Series will normally make its capital contributions to a local limited partnership in stages over a period of from one to two years, with each contribution due when conditions regarding construction or operation of the apartment complex have been fulfilled. In this way the Series will risk as little capital as is possible during the most uncertain stages of an apartment complex. For example, and solely for illustrative purposes, the Series' contribution could be made over a one- to two-year period subject to satisfaction of some or all of the following requirements:

- ☐ reservation of low income housing credits and receipt of IRS Form 8609 (Low Income Credit Allocation Certification),
- ☐ admission of the Series as a limited partner or member in the local limited partnership,
- ☐ receipt of a commitment for or closing of the construction loan,
- ☐ substantial completion of the apartment complex,
- ☐ receipt of a commitment for or closing of the permanent loan, or
- ☐ occupancy by qualified tenants.

In connection with the acquisition of an interest in a local limited partnership owning a completed project, a Series may make its capital contribution in stages, as described above, or in full at the time of acquisition.

In general, each of the Series' payments to a local limited partnership will be made only after receipt of representations and warranties of the local general partners to the effect that there is no material default by the local limited partnership under any mortgage loan or under any other material agreements. See "Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements" below in this section.

Once an investment has been selected, the asset management personnel of VMB & Associates, Inc. will monitor the apartment complex monthly to determine compliance with construction and rent-up schedules. After stabilized occupancy has been achieved, quarterly reviews and regular on-site visits will be conducted to monitor building maintenance, occupancy and other operations and maintenance of reserves.

In determining whether or not to acquire an interest in a local limited partnership, a Series may make a loan to the local limited partnership before acquiring the interest. Any such loan must be for a term of one year or less and must, unless earlier repaid, be repaid from the Series' initial capital contribution to the local limited partnership. The amount of any such loan may not exceed 50% of the total capital contribution to be made to the local limited partnership. If a Series does not make an investment in the local limited partnership and the local limited partnership does not repay the loan, the amount of capital the Series has available for investment in other local limited partnerships would be reduced. See "Risk Factors--Investment Risks--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes."

The Local General Partners.

The local general partners will operate and control the business of the local limited partnerships. The role of a Series in a local limited partnership will be limited to that of a limited partner or non-managing member. Hence, the experience and the financial condition of the local general partners will be crucial to the success of any apartment complex.

Financial Condition and Experience of Local General Partners. Before any investment in a local limited partnership, the acquisitions personnel of VMB & Associates, Inc. will obtain financial statements from the local general partners. The financial statements may be unaudited. VMB & Associates, Inc. will also obtain information and representations with respect to the prior real estate and tax credit experience of the local general partners. Except in the case of non-profit organizations, the local general partners or the person guaranteeing the obligations of any local general partner will be required to demonstrate an aggregate net worth:

- ☐ which is in an amount deemed appropriate by the Fund Manager, and
- ☐ which is sufficiently liquid or otherwise readily available to be able to protect the local limited partnership in view of:
 - ☐ the size and scope of the apartment complex,
 - ☐ the obligations of the local general partners and their affiliates to the local limited partnership,
 - ☐ any security or other assurances or measures taken to perform such obligations, and
 - ☐ the material contingent liabilities of the local general partners.

Despite the preceding, there cannot be any assurance that full and accurate disclosure will be made by local general partners of their financial condition, or that their financial condition will not change during the term of the Series' investment in the local limited partnership.

Except in the case of non-profit organizations, the local general partners generally will be individuals or closely-held entities which depend, for their successful management and operation, on one or a very limited number of principal owners. In a typical apartment complex the principal owners will, directly or through entities controlled by them, provide rent-up, property management and other services related to ownership of the apartment complex, and may also construct the apartment complex.

Compensation of Local General Partners. As discussed under "Estimated Use of Proceeds," the local general partners will receive compensation payable from the Series' capital contributions to the local limited partnerships. Each local general partner also will receive fees from cash flow of the local limited partnership in consideration of:

- ☐ management of the local limited partnership and the apartment complex, and
- ☐ the sale of the apartment complex.

Fees payable from local limited partnership cash flow are not set forth under "Management Compensation" or "Estimated Use of Proceeds" but are set forth under "Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreement--Interests in Profits, Losses and Distributions" below.

Withdrawal of Local General Partners. A local general partner will not be permitted to withdraw from the local limited partnership without the consent of the Series, unless a designated successor acceptable to the Series is admitted in its place.

Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements.

Through the partnership agreement of each local limited partnership, a Series will impose significant responsibilities on the local general partners. The precise terms of such responsibilities, and the limitations thereon, will be subject to negotiation. However, the Fund Manager anticipates that the terms of the partnership agreement of each local limited partnership may include the provisions described below. Except for the provisions concerning the allocations of tax items and distributions, each of the following provisions is designed to protect the Series' investments.

Construction Completion Guarantees. In the case of an apartment complex under development, the local general partners or other guarantor of the local limited partnership will agree to provide all funds needed through the completion of the construction or rehabilitation of the apartment complex and the closing of its long-term mortgage financing, after applying mortgage loan proceeds and the Series' capital contribution. Funds so provided may or may not be reimbursable by the local limited partnership. In the event of the failure of the local general partners to perform those obligations, they will be in default pursuant to the terms of the local limited partnership agreement, and may be removed from the local limited partnership by the Series.

Tax Credit Guarantees. Each local general partner will agree to take no action which would cause a termination or discontinuance of the qualification of an apartment complex as a qualified low-income housing project under Internal Revenue Code Section 42(g)(1). Each local general partner will agree to take no action which would cause the recapture of any tax credit under the Code without the consent of the Series. If the local general partner does so, or in the event there is a reduction in the qualified basis of an apartment complex following an audit by the IRS resulting in recapture, the local general partner generally will be obligated to pay to the Series an amount equal to any tax deficiency plus interest or penalties, or to furnish such other safeguards as are appropriate to protect the Series and the investors against the consequences of recapture. The local general partner will guarantee the annual tax credit amount and will fund any such reduction during the first five years of the 15-year initial compliance period.

Operating Deficit Guarantees. The local general partners or another guarantor will agree to provide funds to the local limited partnership to defray any operating deficits for a specified period of time following the completion of the development and construction or rehabilitation of the apartment complex. The local general partners may or may not be entitled to reimbursement of such funds by the local limited partnership. A Series may invest in local limited partnerships for which such operating guarantees are not required if the Fund Manager determines that there are adequate alternative forms of assurance protecting the Series' investment.

Repurchase Guarantees. The local general partner will be responsible for the overall operations and tax credit compliance of the apartment complex. The local general partner will agree to repurchase the Series' interest in the local limited partnership if the apartment complex does not receive an allocation of tax credits in the year in which it is placed in service, or the apartment complex is not placed in service in a timely manner, or the apartment complex does not remain eligible for tax credits during the period in which the Series is required to make its capital contributions.

Tax Credit Adjusters. It is possible that the amount of tax credits actually allocated to a Series by a local limited partnership could be less than the amount expected when the investment in the local limited partnership was made. The difference between the amount expected and the amount allocated is a shortfall. To reduce the adverse consequences which a Series would experience in the event of a shortfall, the local limited partnership agreement will include adjuster provisions. Adjuster provisions are designed to provide the Series with a substantially similar aggregate return on investment as would have been received had the tax credits been as originally anticipated. Such provisions may adjust one or more of the required capital contribution by the Series, the local general partners' share of the cash available for distribution, or the Series' share of sale proceeds.

Rights of Limited Partner. As a limited partner or non-managing member of a local limited partnership, a Series will have no right to manage its operations. However, the Series will have voting rights, including the rights:

- ☐ to replace the local general partner on the basis of the performance and discharge of the local general partner's obligations,
- ☐ to approve or disapprove a sale or refinancing of the apartment complex,
- ☐ to approve or disapprove the dissolution of the local limited partnership, and
- ☐ to approve or disapprove amendments to the partnership agreement of the local limited partnership.

However, in the case of an apartment complex which has government-subsidized financing or rental assistance, the ability of the Series to take such actions may be subject to the prior approval of the government agency providing the assistance. See "Other Government Assistance Programs" and "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes."

The partnership agreement of each local limited partnership will provide the Series with other rights, including rights relating to the calling of meetings, reports and access to records comparable to those granted to the investors by each Series. Generally, the Fund Manager will exercise each of the foregoing voting and other rights on behalf of the Series, and investors will not have any right to participate therein. See "Conflicts of Interest" above and "Role of Special Limited Partner" below. However, if a VMB entity serves as a local general partner of a local limited partnership, then the Series' voting and other rights will be exercisable by the Series' investors.

Role of Special Limited Partner. VMB Housing, L.P. is a Kansas limited partnership. The general partner of VMB Housing, L.P. is VMB & Associates, Inc. VMB Housing, L.P. was formed in ____ [Year] to act as a special limited partner in all limited partnerships invested in by VMB-partnerships. It is anticipated that VMB Housing, L.P. will be a special limited partner in each of the local limited partnerships and will be granted most of the following rights:

- ☐ to assume the duties and receive the benefits of the local general partner upon the removal or withdrawal of the local general partner,
- ☐ to approve the selection of, and/or dismiss, any manager of the apartment complex,
- ☐ to approve the selection of, and/or dismiss, the accountants for the local limited partnership,
- ☐ to direct the decisions of the tax matters partner of the local limited partnership, including the right to bring and defend administrative and judicial actions and make tax elections,

- ☐ to compel the local general partner to locate a buyer for the apartment complex or the Series' interest in the local limited partnership, and
- ☐ to approve or disapprove transactions outside of the ordinary course of business proposed by the local limited partnership.

In the case of an apartment complex which has government-subsidized financing or rental assistance, the ability of the special limited partner to take such actions may be subject to the prior approval of the government agency providing such assistance. See "Other Government Assistance Programs" and "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes."

An explanation of the laws concerning limited liability is helpful to understand why VMB Housing, L.P. serves in this capacity. A limited partner is referred to as such because his liability for his partnership's obligations is limited. A limited partner's exposure is limited to the amount of his capital contribution. In order to preserve his status as a limited partner, a person named as a limited partner must not participate in the control of the business of the partnership. The meaning of control for these purposes may vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. It is possible that the powers listed above could be found to constitute control of a local limited partnership. If so, and if they were performed by a Series, the Series would have general liability for the obligations of the local limited partnership. Accordingly, in order to avoid to the extent possible exposure for general liability, VMB Housing, L.P. will possess and exercise such powers on behalf of the Series. VMB Housing, L.P. will receive no compensation for acting in this fashion, and will receive an immaterial interest in the tax items of the local limited partnerships. See "Management Compensation."

Interests in Profits, Losses and Distributions. In almost all instances each Series will acquire at least a 90% interest in the profits, losses and federal tax credits of each local limited partnership. Only in rare cases would a Series acquire a lesser interest in the profits, losses and federal tax credits of a local limited partnership. See, for example, "Joint Investments" below in this section. Except for an immaterial interest in each local limited partnership not to exceed 0.1% which will go to VMB Housing, L.P., the balance of 10% or less will go to the local general partners and their affiliates. The exact amount to be allocated to each party will be negotiated in each instance.

It is possible that a local limited partnership may generate state low income housing tax credits as well as federal low income housing tax credits. If so, the state tax credits may be allocated entirely to the local general partners or to a special or other limited partner which may or may not be an affiliate of the local general partners or the VMB entities. A nominal interest in federal income tax items and credits might also be allocated with the state tax credits. If the special or other limited partner were an affiliate of the VMB entities, the VMB entities would receive compensation from the affiliate for arranging the transaction.

The local general partners will receive reimbursements of expenses from cash flow from operations and distributions of a portion of such cash flow as management fees and/or partnership participations. The Series will receive from 10% to 50% of the sale or refinancing proceeds. The sharing arrangements for all cash distributions will depend upon:

- ☐ the competition for interests in apartment complexes,
- ☐ the proportion of residential units in the apartment complex eligible for low income housing tax credits,
- ☐ the amount invested in the apartment complex by the Series relative to the other sources of financing,

- ☐ the percentage interest in the profits and losses of the local limited partnership acquired by the Series relative to the interests held by other parties, and
- ☐ the amounts of cash flow and appreciation anticipated.

Joint Investments.

A Series may invest in a local limited partnership jointly with the other Series or limited partnerships, including VMB-partnerships, provided that:

- ☐ the partnerships have similar investment objectives,
- ☐ there are no duplicate property management or other fees,
- ☐ the compensation to the sponsors of each partnership is substantially similar,
- ☐ the investment of each partnership is on substantially the same terms and conditions,
- ☐ each partnership will have a right of first refusal if another partnership wishes to sell its interest in the local limited partnership. There is a risk that a partnership may not have sufficient resources to make such a purchase.

See "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes" and "Conflicts of Interest." A Series cannot engage in activities through a joint venture that it could not undertake alone.

The Fund Manager currently does not anticipate that the Series will invest jointly in local limited partnership interests. However, a Series may do so at any time.

Use of Leverage.

The Series may borrow funds to make initial investments in local limited partnerships before the sale of Units. Otherwise, the Series do not anticipate borrowing funds, although they have full authority to borrow money as deemed necessary or appropriate to achieving the Series' investment objectives.

VMB & Associates, Inc. or its affiliates may advance funds from time to time to a Series so that the Series may make initial investments, loans and/or deposits in local limited partnerships before the sale of the Series' Units. Such advances, together with interest thereon, will be repaid from the proceeds of the offering. See "Estimated Use of Proceeds." Loans provided by VMB & Associates, Inc. or an affiliate must:

- ☐ be on a short-term basis,
- ☐ not be subject to any prepayment charge or penalty, and

- ☐ not bear any interest, charges or fees in excess of the amounts which would be charged by unrelated lending institutions on comparable loans for the same purpose in the same locality.

In no event may interest be more than the prime rate of AmeriBank plus 2% per annum. The prime rate is the prime or reference rate charged by AmeriBank to its most creditworthy customers.

The ability of a Series to generate tax credits in the amounts anticipated will depend in part on the use of leverage by the local limited partnerships.

Accordingly, the Fund Manager expects that the local limited partnerships will use debt to finance approximately 30% to 80% of the acquisition and development costs of their apartment complexes. Financing may include loans made, guaranteed or subsidized by agencies of federal, state or local governments, including:

- ☐ state or local government bond financing,
- ☐ mortgages which are not amortized over their terms but which require large payments on maturity,
- ☐ loans providing for variable interest rates after 15 years,
- ☐ loans with renegotiable interest rates, and
- ☐ loans from non-profit organizations.

See "Other Government Assistance Programs" and "Risk Factors--Risks related to investments in local limited partnerships and apartment complexes." The Series will not impose any limitation on the indebtedness which may be incurred by any local limited partnership. However, following the termination of its offering, a Series' share of indebtedness may not exceed:

- ☐ with respect to non-subsidized apartment complexes, the sum of 85% of the aggregate purchase price of all apartment complexes which have not been refinanced, and 85% of the aggregate fair market value of all apartment complexes which have been refinanced, and
- ☐ with respect to subsidized apartment complexes, the sum of 100% of the aggregate purchase price of all apartment complexes which have not been refinanced, and 100% of the aggregate fair market value of all apartment complexes which have been refinanced.

Sale or Other Disposition of Investments.

In general, the sale of an apartment complex or the sale of a Series' interest in a local limited partnership will be subject to restrictions. These restrictions will require that the investments be held for substantial periods. A Series will hold its investments for the 15-year compliance period in order to avoid recapture of tax credits. See "The Low Income Housing Tax Credit." Subject to the restrictions discussed below, after the 15-year compliance period a Series will attempt to sell its investments with the objective of returning to its investors, at a minimum, their invested capital. However, the Fund Manager may cause a Series to sell or refinance any investments at an earlier or later time if it decides that it is in the best interests of the Series to do so under all of the then applicable circumstances.

The low income residential units in an apartment complex generally must be rented as low income housing for at least 30 years and, possibly, of up to 55 years or longer. As a result, any sale of an apartment complex during that period must be to a purchaser who agrees to maintain the apartment complex as low income housing for the duration of such period.

Additional restrictions on sale will be imposed on apartment complexes receiving government financing or operating subsidies. For example, current regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture, Rural Development permit the sale of a property which is financed by Rural Development only with the approval of Rural Development. Mortgage loans funded by Rural Development cannot be prepaid at any time during their terms. Similarly, current regulations of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development require that HUD must approve the sale of more than 50% of the interests in any limited partnership or limited liability company which owns a property receiving some form of HUD subsidies.

However, consistent with the foregoing and other applicable regulatory restrictions, the Fund Manager believes that the local limited partnerships should be able to sell the apartment complexes after a 15-to 20-year holding period to:

- ☐ an entity similar to the Series or the local limited partnership which would agree to continue to operate the apartment complex as low income housing for the balance of the required period. Such a sale would be likely only if at the time of sale the Internal Revenue Code offered benefits to the owners of existing low income housing; or
- ☐ other types of purchasers which may have incentives to acquire and operate the low income housing, such as an organization formed on behalf of the tenants or a state agency or non-profit organization.

Reserves.

Each Series initially will set aside at least 3% of the offering proceeds as reserves for contingencies and to pay expenses. The Fund Manager will increase or decrease the reserve balance from time to time as it deems appropriate. The reserves may be used to cure any problems of the apartment complexes, although most apartment complexes will have their own reserves. A Series may also use its reserves to pay its expenses, including the annual asset management fee, to the extent cash flow is insufficient for such purposes.

Other Policies.

Until required by a Series for use in connection with its business and operations as described in this Memorandum, all funds received by a Series from its offering will be held in:

- ☐ United States government securities,
- ☐ securities issued or fully guaranteed by United States government agencies,
- ☐ certificates of deposit and time or demand deposits in, or repurchase agreements constituting obligations of, commercial banks with deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or ☐ other short-term, highly-liquid investments, excluding common stock.

No Series will lend funds, except that a Series may:

☐ make loans to, or post letters of credit for, a local limited partnership, and ☐ may make temporary investments of the type described in the preceding paragraph.

No Series will:

☐ underwrite securities of other issuers,

☐ offer securities in exchange for property,

☐ except in connection with the investments of funds in local limited partnerships, invest in securities of other issuers, other than in temporary investments as described above,

☐ utilize cash from operations to acquire interests in local limited partnerships, or ☐ reinvest proceeds from a sale or refinancing transaction unless the Series distributes to each investor an amount equal to the federal, state and local income tax liability of the investor arising from the sale or refinancing transaction. In computing tax liability for these purposes the Series will assume that each investor is in a combined federal, state and local marginal income tax bracket of 30%. In no event will sale or refinancing proceeds be reinvested following the second anniversary of the termination of the Series' offering.

After the conclusion of its offering a Series may repurchase Units upon the written request of an investor. No Series is obligated to repurchase any Units at any time, and there is no assurance that a Series will in fact ever repurchase any Units. No Units will be repurchased from the VMB entities.

Neither Series is a real estate investment trust and, therefore, neither is subject to the restrictions imposed on such entities by the Internal Revenue Code. Each Series will use its best efforts to conduct its operations so as not to be required to register as an investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

Neither Series will engage in any transaction which would result in the receipt by a VMB entity of any undisclosed rebate or give-up. Neither Series will engage in any reciprocal business arrangement which would result in the circumvention of the restrictions contained in its partnership agreement.

THE LOW INCOME HOUSING TAX CREDIT

Summary.

Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code provides low income housing tax credits to investors in low income housing. Following is a summary of the material concepts included in Internal Revenue Code Section 42 and its interrelation with other Internal Revenue Code provisions. Each of these other provisions is discussed in greater detail in the subsections below and under "Federal Income Tax Considerations."

Low income housing tax credits are indirect federal subsidies of low income housing. They are being used by individuals, small businesses and large corporations. Low income housing tax credits offset tax liability dollar-for-dollar regardless of a taxpayer's tax bracket because they are tax credits and not tax deductions. Therefore, tax credits are more valuable than tax deductions or tax deferrals. Taxes are one of the largest expenses faced by taxpayers and one of the greatest barriers to retaining earned income. According to a report issued by the Tax Foundation, in ____ [Year] the average American had to work two hours and twenty-four minutes of each eight-hour workday to pay all taxes. Federal taxes used one hour and thirty-seven minutes of earnings, and state and local taxes used forty-seven minutes of earnings. The report states that American workers utilized a greater portion of the workday to pay taxes than to pay for food, clothing, and housing and household operations. An investment in low income housing tax credits reduces federal tax liability and thereby can increase after-tax spendable income.

As stated above, low income housing tax credits are tax credits rather than the more familiar tax deductions. Tax credits offset tax liability dollar-for-dollar. For example, a married couple filing jointly with taxable income of $100,000 in ____ [Year] would be subject to federal income tax liability in the amount of approximately $18,600. The last $25,000 of their income would be taxed at a 25% marginal rate. See "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Other Important Tax Considerations--Tax Rates" and "Changes in Tax Law."

GRAPHIC DELETED

If the couple had $6,250 in low income housing tax credits, their federal tax liability of $18,600 would be reduced by $6,250 to $12,350. As discussed under "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities--Exception for Tax Credits," the maximum permissible amount of low income housing tax credits to the couple under the so-called $25,000 deduction equivalent at a marginal tax rate of 25% is $6,250.

GRAPHIC DELETED

These pie charts are intended to display that low income housing tax credits reduce income taxes dollar-for-dollar. They are not, nor should they be interpreted as, predictions of low income housing tax credits to be allocated to an investor. The absolute and/or relative percentage reduction in federal income taxes to be realized by any investor will depend on his actual tax liabilities and his actual low income housing tax credits.

According to the ____ [Year] Housing Credit Conference & Marketplace Reference Manual, National Council of State Housing Agencies, low income housing tax credits accounted for the construction of approximately 59,400 housing units in ____ [Year]. Nonetheless, the affordable housing problem has worsened over the last 25 years. According to the ____ [Year] issue of The State of the Nation's Housing, published by the Joint Center for Housing Studies of Harvard University, "A staggering three in ten US households have housing affordability problems. Fully 14.3 million are severely cost-burdened (spend more than 50 percent of their incomes on housing) and another 17.3 million are moderately cost-burdened (spend 30-50 percent of their incomes on housing). Some 9.3 million households live in over-crowded units or housing classified as physically inadequate. And a disheartening 3.7 million households face more than one of these problem...The simple fact is the cost of supplying even the most modest housing far exceeds the amount many lower-income households can pay. Based on HUD's fair market rent measure, households with one full-time minimum wage earner cannot afford to rent even a one-bedroom apartment anywhere in the country."

Low income housing tax credits are designed to subsidize either 70% or 30% of the costs of the low income residential units in an apartment complex. Accordingly, the amount of low income housing tax credits is based on the cost of a property, rather than the operations of the property, and are pre-determined when the property is placed in service. The subsidy is realized by claiming low income housing tax credits every year for 10 years. This results in a steady and predictable stream of tax credits. Unlike other investments, once determined, the amount of tax credits does not fluctuate.

In exchange for the right to claim low income housing tax credits, the owner of the apartment complex must:

- ☐ itself rent the low income residential units to low income individuals at reduced rental rates for at least 15 years, and
- ☐ grant the state in which the property is located the power to require that the property be rented as low income housing for a total period of 30 or more years.

Failure to comply with the first requirement results in ineligibility for the low income housing tax credits not yet claimed and the recapture of a portion of credits previously claimed.

Low income housing tax credits are allocated by the state in which the housing is located. Internal Revenue Code Section 42 authorizes a fixed amount of low income housing tax credits which any state may allocate in any year.

Most taxpayers are not able to claim low income housing tax credits in unlimited amounts. Rather, the ability to use tax credits is limited by the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code known as the passive activity rules, the at risk rules, the overall limitation on general business tax credits, and the alternative minimum tax rules. Each of these rules is discussed in greater detail under "Federal Income Tax Considerations."

The low income housing tax credit program is extremely technical in nature. The U.S. Department of the Treasury has issued Regulations with regard to a portion of the program's rules, but not with regard to other important portions, and there can be no assurance that the provisions of Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code will be interpreted in a manner consistent with the description set forth below. Furthermore, the discussion that follows is general in nature. Because the Series have not yet identified any of the local limited partnerships in which they will invest, it is impossible to predict how specific provisions of the low income housing tax credit program will apply to the apartment complexes.

Qualified Properties.

Qualified Low Income Projects. Low income housing tax credits are available only for qualified low income housing projects. Qualified low income housing projects are residential rental properties in which:

- ☐ 20% or more of the residential rental units are occupied by individuals with incomes of 50% or less of area median income, as adjusted for family size, or
- ☐ 40% or more of the residential rental units are occupied by individuals with incomes of 60% or less of area median income, as adjusted for family size.

This minimum set-aside requirement must be met in order for any portion of an apartment complex to be eligible for low income housing tax credits. Additional residential rental units in an apartment complex beyond the minimum set-aside also can qualify for low income housing tax credits.

Minimum Set-Aside Income Computation
Applicable Minimum Set-Aside Percentage (50% or 60%)	X	Area Median Gross Income (Based on Actual Number of Persons)	=	Allowable Household Income

Additionally, the gross rent charged to low income tenants cannot exceed 30% of the applicable minimum set-aside income. The applicable minimum set-aside income is 50% or 60% of area median income. This rent restriction test uses a statutory assumption that, in the case of a unit which does not have a separate bedroom, the unit is occupied by one individual, and, in all other cases, that the unit is occupied by one and one-half individuals per separate bedroom. Gross rent for this purpose includes the cost of any utilities, other than telephone, and any mandatory costs for services such as meals and social services. Federal, state and local rental assistance payments are not included in gross rent. Thus an owner may receive a rental subsidy payment in addition to the amount paid by the tenant.

Rent Restriction Computation

1.	Number of bedrooms	X	1.5	=	Imputed Household*
2.	Area Median Gross Income (Based on Imputed Household)	X	Applicable Minimum Set-Aside Percentage (50% or 60%)	=	Imputed Income
3.	Imputed Income	X	.30	=	Maximum Gross Rent

* Imputed household =1 if studio apartment.

Units which satisfy both the minimum set-aside test and the rent restriction test are low income residential units. To qualify for low income housing tax credits low income residential units cannot be used on a transient basis.

Under Internal Revenue Code Section 42(g)(3) an apartment complex must meet the minimum set-aside requirements as well as the rent restriction test not later than the close of the first year of the 15-year compliance period for the property. The owner may elect which of the 20-50 minimum set-aside test or the 40-60 minimum set-aside test it proposes to meet but, once made, the election is irrevocable. In order to avoid tax credit recapture, the apartment complex must remain in compliance with the rules governing the low income housing tax credit program for the 15-year compliance period.

Eligible Basis. The qualified basis of an apartment complex with respect to which low income housing tax credits are computed is generally:

- ☐ the applicable fraction of
- ☐ the eligible basis in a building attributable to the low income residential units.

In general, the eligible basis of a building is its adjusted basis for federal income tax purposes. Eligible basis is determined as of the close of the first year of the 15-year compliance period. For a newly constructed building, eligible basis is the cost of construction, including all direct costs and related soft costs, such as construction period interest, developer's and architects' fees, other compensation, insurance and general and administrative expenses related to construction. However, the IRS has issued Technical Advice Memorandums indicating that some items, under certain circumstances, may not be includable in eligible basis. These items included construction loan costs, one-time local impact fees, and land preparation costs. For a substantially rehabilitated building, eligible basis is comprised of the rehabilitation costs aggregated over a 24-month period. Acquisition costs may only be included in eligible basis to the extent they satisfy the principles for inclusion discussed below in this section under "Maximum Amount of Credit." Land costs may not be included in eligible basis. Because only the adjusted basis of a building may be included in eligible basis, an owner must take into account the adjustments to basis described in Section 1016 of the Internal Revenue Code, except for depreciation. For example, a reduction in basis equal to any historic tax credit allowed with respect to a property would be taken into account. Similar treatment may be afforded other types of tax credits. No opinion of counsel will be rendered with respect to the calculation of an apartment complex's adjusted basis.

It is likely that the IRS will give careful attention to the calculation of eligible basis if the IRS audits the owner of a low income housing property. In particular, in addition to the items listed above, the IRS may review the inclusion of developer's fees in eligible basis. The IRS has taken the position that developer's fees were paid for more than developer's services. Depending on the circumstances, the IRS has asserted that the fee also covered land acquisition activities, syndication activities and organization activities. Fees for those types of activities are not properly included in eligible basis. The IRS could also take adverse positions concerning developer's fees paid with a promissory note. The IRS could contend that fees paid with a promissory note:

- ☐ cannot be included in eligible basis at all, as discussed under "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Basis of Local Limited Partnerships in Their Apartment Complexes,"
- ☐ must be allocated to the general partners of the owner and not the limited partners, as discussed under "Profits and Losses, Tax Credits and Cash Distributions--Allocations of Profits and Losses--Special Allocations," or
- ☐ do not satisfy the at risk rules, as discussed under "Utilization of the Low Income Housing Tax Credit--Low Income Housing Tax Credit At Risk Rules."

The eligible basis of any building is reduced by the portion of the adjusted basis of the building which is attributable to residential rental units in the building which:

- ☐ are not low income residential units, and
- ☐ which are above the average quality standard of the low income residential units.

However, at the election of the taxpayer, the cost of a residential unit that would otherwise be excluded from eligible basis under this rule may be included in eligible basis if:

- ☐ the excess of the cost of such unit over the average cost of the low income residential units does not exceed 15% of the average cost of the low income residential units, and
- ☐ the excess cost is excluded from eligible basis.

For all types of buildings, eligible basis includes not only the adjusted basis of the residential rental units but also the adjusted basis of property used in common areas and amenities used by the tenants. Amenities include major appliances. Subject to limitations, the eligible basis of a building located in a qualified census tract may also include the adjusted basis of depreciable property used in providing a community service facility. A community service facility is one designed to service primarily individuals whose income is 60% or less of area median income. The costs of amenities in the non-low income residential units may only be included if the amenities are comparable to the costs of amenities in the low income residential units. Also, the allocable costs of tenant facilities such as swimming pools or other recreational facilities and parking areas may be included provided there is not a separate fee for use of these facilities and they are available on a comparable basis to all tenants.

Residential rental property may qualify for low income housing tax credits even though a portion of the building is available for commercial use. However, no portion of the cost of such nonresidential property may be included in eligible basis.

Eligible basis may not include the amount of any federal grant, whether or not such grant is includable in gross income. A federal grant for such purpose includes any grant to the extent it is federally funded. A federal grant does not include a federal loan or rental subsidy.

The eligible basis of a building located in an area designated by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development as a qualified census tract or as difficult to develop will be deemed to be 130% of the eligible basis determined under the principles outlined above. A qualified census tract means a census tract or an enumeration district designated by HUD either:

- ☐ in which 50% or more of the households have an income which is less than 60% of the area median gross income, or
- ☐ which has a poverty rate of at least 25%.

An area is treated as difficult to develop if it has high construction, land and utility costs relative to area median gross income.

Determination of Eligible Basis

Eligible Basis Can Include:

Construction and rehabilitation costs
Acquisition costs
Site improvements

Eligible Basis Excludes:

Depreciation
Land
Historic and other tax credits claimed

Developer's and architects' fees	Federal grants
Comparable non-low income units	Non-comparable non-low income units

Qualified Basis. The qualified basis if an apartment complex with respect to which low income housing tax credits are computed is generally the applicable fraction of the eligible basis in the building attributable to the low income residential units.

The applicable fraction is the lesser of:

- ☐ the proportion of occupied low income residential units to all residential rental units, whether or not occupied, or
- ☐ the proportion of floor space in the occupied low income residential units to the total floor space of all residential rental units, whether or not occupied.

Maximum Amount of Credit.

Under Internal Revenue Code Section 42, an owner of low income housing receives tax credits for a 10-year credit period. The ceiling on tax credits limits the present value of the 10-year stream of credits to 70% or 30% of the qualified basis of the housing. The present value percentage is determined primarily by long-term interest rates at the outset of the 10-year credit period, and does not fluctuate with stock or bond prices. There are two basic credit categories:

1. Properties which are not federally subsidized and which are newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated receive a maximum credit which will yield a present value of 70% of the qualified basis of the property. Congress determined that for 1987 a 9% annual credit would have a present value of 70%; thus 9% was the applicable percentage for 1987. For years after 1987, each month the Treasury Department redetermines the appropriate yearly applicable percentage that will yield a 70% present value over 10 years utilizing a prescribed discounting methodology. For properties placed in service in July ____ [Year], the yearly applicable percentage is 7.78%.

2. Properties which are federally subsidized and which are newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated receive a maximum credit which will yield a present value of 30% of the qualified basis of the property. Congress determined that for 1987 a 4% annual credit would have a present value of 30%; thus 4% was the applicable percentage for 1987. For years after 1987, the Treasury Department makes monthly redeterminations in a manner corresponding to that described for the 70% present value credit. For properties placed in service in July ____ [Year], the yearly applicable percentage is 3.33%.

For purposes of the low income housing tax credit program, federal subsidies include only tax-exempt financing and below-market-interest-rate federal loans. See the material below under the caption "Other Government Assistance Programs" for a discussion of whether the loan programs which may be used by local limited partnerships are considered federal subsidies for these purposes. An owner has the option of excluding federally subsidized loans from qualified basis and then using the 70% present value credit against the remaining qualified basis.

Calculation of Low Income Housing Tax Credit

Qualified Basis	X	Applicable Percentage	=	Low Income Housing Tax Credit

Substantial rehabilitation is defined as capital expenditures other than acquisition costs incurred in connection with the rehabilitation of a property aggregated over a 24-month period in an amount equal to at least the greater of 10% of adjusted basis or $3,000 per low income residential unit.

The acquisition costs of existing buildings will only be eligible for a credit if the buildings are subject to substantial rehabilitation. If the substantial rehabilitation test is satisfied the acquisition costs are eligible for the 30% present value credit. However, acquisition costs are not available for the 30% present value credit if the property was last transferred, or if it underwent rehabilitation work, during the prior 10 years, although the Secretary of the Treasury may waive this rule in defined instances.

The applicable percentage for a property is determined in the earlier of:

- ☐ the month in which the property is placed in service, or
- ☐ at the election of the owner, the month in which the owner and the state housing credit agency enter into an agreement to allocate low income housing tax credits to the property.

Credits Subject to State Allocation.

The Internal Revenue Code limits the amounts of low income housing tax credits which can be allocated in any year. Low income housing tax credits are allocated by the states. In most cases, a state directly allocates low income housing tax credits to properties. For ____ [Year], the maximum allocation is the greater of $1.75 per resident or $2,000,000.

The volume cap will be increased in ____ [Year] and each year thereafter by a cost of living adjustment.

If a state fails to allocate its maximum tax credits in a year, the Internal Revenue Code permits a one-year carry forward of the unused amount by that state. If the unused amount is not used by the state during the carryforward period, it is reallocated to other states through a national pool.

In other cases, a state indirectly allocates tax credits by authorizing the issuance of tax-exempt bonds, the proceeds of which are used to finance the construction of low income housing. The ability of a state to issue tax-exempt bonds is subject to a ceiling included in the Internal Revenue Code.

Once tax credits are allocated to an apartment complex, the development does not have to reapply for tax credits in later years. Accordingly, all low income housing tax credits to be claimed by investors over the 10-year credit period are allocated at the outset of the 10-year period.

Generally, a building must be placed in service during the year for which the low income housing tax credits are allocated by the housing credit agency. There are exceptions to this general rule, the most important of which is the 10% carryover rule. Under this exception, a building can be placed in service not later than the close of the second calendar year following the calendar year in which the allocation is made. This exception is available if the taxpayer's basis in the building as of a designated date is more than 10% of the taxpayer's reasonably expected basis in such building as of the close of such second calendar year. The designated date is the later of:

- ☐ the date which is six months after the date the allocation is made, or
- ☐ the close of the calendar year.

For this purpose only, basis includes the cost of land.

Low income housing tax credits may not be allocated to any property unless the owner and the state execute an extended low income housing commitment for the apartment complex. In general, the extended low income housing commitment will require that the building be rented as low income housing for the period agreed to by the owner and the state. The period cannot be less than 30 years, and might be substantially longer. The extended low income housing commitment does not prevent the sale of the building to a new owner. It only requires that the new owner continue to rent the building as low income housing.

The extended low income housing commitment must be:

- ☐ binding on all successors of the owner,
- ☐ grant all individuals meeting the income limitation applicable to the building the right to enforce its terms in state court,
- ☐ be recorded as a restrictive covenant,
- ☐ prohibit any increase in the gross rent for a low income residential unit not otherwise permitted by Internal Revenue Code Section 42,
- ☐ prohibit the refusal to lease to a holder of a Section 8 voucher or certificate of eligibility because of the status of the prospective tenant as such a holder, and

- ☐ prohibit the disposition to any person of any portion of the low income residential units unless all of the low income residential units are disposed of to such person.

After a period of 14 years, the owner may make a request that the state find someone to buy the building. The state will have one year to locate a buyer at a price no less than:

- ☐ with respect to the portion of the building which does not constitute low income residential units, the fair market value thereof, and
- ☐ with respect to the low income residential units, the applicable fraction of
- ☐ the outstanding indebtedness secured by the building, plus
 - ☐ the adjusted investor equity in the building, minus
 - ☐ cash distributions made or available from the building.

For these purposes, adjusted investor equity is the aggregate amount of cash invested in the building increased by a cost of living adjustment.

Step 2	Unit Applicable Fraction or Floor Space Applicable Fraction	X	Result of Step 1

If no buyer is located, the building may be converted to market-rate use. Low income tenants may not be evicted for a three-year period.

Despite the preceding, the one-year notice provision outlined above will not apply to the extent more stringent requirements are imposed under the extended low income housing commitment or state law.

Internal Revenue Code Section 42(m) imposes requirements on the state agencies which allocate low income housing tax credits. In general, an allocating agency must develop and follow a qualified allocation plan which ranks the developments applying for tax credits. The selection criteria must address:

- ☐ location factors, e.g., broad geographic distribution, designated target areas such as inner cities, Community Development Block Grant neighborhoods, distressed communities, pockets of poverty and rural areas,

- ☐ housing needs characteristics, e.g., low vacancy rate, income mix of tenants within the development and meeting state, regional or local housing needs and priorities,
- ☐ development characteristics, e.g., whether the development increases the stock of low-income housing, whether substantial rehabilitation expenditures are needed by the development, energy conservation, quality of units and type of financing, including whether the project includes the use of existing housing as part of a community revitalization plan,
- ☐ sponsor characteristics, e.g., nonprofit sponsorship and minority participation in development and management,
- ☐ tenant populations with special housing needs, e.g., elderly, handicapped, disabled, homeless, large families and the displaced,
- ☐ public housing waiting lists,
- ☐ tenant populations of individuals with children, and
- ☐ developments intended for eventual tenant ownership.

The agency also must:

- ☐ notify the chief executive officer of the local jurisdiction within which the development is located of such development and provide the officer a reasonable opportunity to comment on the development,
- ☐ require a comprehensive market study of the housing needs of low income people in the area to be serviced by the development to be conducted before the credit allocation is made and at the developer's expense by a disinterested party who is approved by such agency, and
- ☐ make available to the public a written explanation for any credit allocation which is not made in accordance with established priorities and criteria.

Once the agency has selected its developments, it must allocate tax credits by giving preference to developments serving the lowest income tenants, developments obligated to serve tenants for the longest periods, and projects which are located in qualified census tracts and the development of which contributes to a concerted community development plan. Further, an allocating agency must use good faith efforts to allocate no more tax credits to a development than are necessary for the development's financial feasibility and viability as low income housing through the 10-year credit period. In making this determination the agency must consider:

- ☐ the sources and uses of funds,
- ☐ the available federal, state and local subsidies committed to the development,

- ☐ the total financing planned for the development,
- ☐ the proceeds or receipts expected to be generated by reason of tax benefits,
- ☐ the percentage of the tax credits to be used for project costs other than the cost of intermediaries, and
- ☐ the reasonableness of the developmental and operational costs.

The allocating state agency may reduce the tax credits for which the development would otherwise be eligible if the agency believes that the full amounts are not necessary in light of other sources of assistance that are available to the development.

At least 10% of a state's annual tax credits must be allocated to properties in which a qualified nonprofit organization:

- ☐ has an ownership interest, and
- ☐ materially participates in the development and operation.

Each state is required to monitor all developments for non-compliance with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. Each state must report non-compliance to the IRS.

Utilization of the Low Income Housing Tax Credit.

Reduction for Partial Year of Operations. Low income housing tax credits are claimed over a 10-year credit period. In the first year, the allowable credit amount is based on the number of months the low income residential units were occupied by low income individuals. This determination uses an averaging convention. For example, if half of the low income residential units were first occupied in October and the remaining half were first occupied in December, a calendar year taxpayer would adjust the amount of his tax credits to reflect that the units were occupied on average only 2 months, or 1/6 of the year. To the extent that there is a reduction of tax credits in the first year, there is an addition to tax credits in the eleventh year.

Low Income Housing Tax Credit At Risk Rules. In order to fully utilize low income housing tax credits, a taxpayer who is:

- ☐ an individual,
- ☐ an S corporation, or
- ☐ a closely-held corporation, must be at risk with respect to the investment in the low income housing. For these purposes an S corporation is a corporation which elects to be subject to Subchapter S under the Internal Revenue Code. A closely-held corporation is one in which five or fewer shareholders directly or indirectly own more than 50% of the stock at any time during the last half of its relevant fiscal year. Generally, the qualified basis to any such taxpayer for the low income housing is reduced for at risk purposes by the amount of any non-qualified nonrecourse financing. Qualified commercial financing is not considered non-qualified nonrecourse financing. Therefore, a taxpayer will be considered to be at risk for purposes of low income housing tax credits with respect to qualified commercial financing. Qualified commercial financing is financing with respect to any property if the taxpayer acquires the property from an unrelated person, and the financing is borrowed from:

- ☐ any federal, state or local government,
- ☐ a person who is actively and regularly engaged in the business of lending money and who is not:
 - ☐ a person from whom the taxpayer acquired the property, or
 - ☐ a person who receives a fee with respect to the taxpayer's investment in the property, or
- ☐ a nonprofit organization which:
 - ☐ is not affiliated with or controlled by a for-profit organization,
 - ☐ has the purpose of fostering low-income housing, and
 - ☐ does not receive a fee with respect to the taxpayer's investment in the property,if the financing from the nonprofit organization is:
 - ☐ not in excess of 60% of the eligible basis of the apartment complex,
 - ☐ secured by the building, and
 - ☐ fully repaid on or before the earliest of:
 - ☐ the maturity date,
 - ☐ the date the building is sold or the loan is refinanced, or
 - ☐ 90 days after the close of the 15-year compliance period. If the nonprofit organization or an affiliate did not sell the property to the taxpayer, this is extended to 90 days after the earlier of:
 - ☐ the date the apartment complex ceases to be a qualified low income project, or
 - ☐ the date which is 15 years after the close of the 15-year compliance period.

The Fund Manager does not anticipate that the amount of low income housing tax credits allowable to investors will be limited under the at risk rules because each Series intends to invest in local limited partnerships that obtain qualified commercial financing as described above. However, counsel has rendered no opinion on this issue because it depends upon the specific nature of each apartment complex and its financing.

Other Limitations. Most investors are limited in their use of tax credits. Generally, individuals who have no passive income can only use tax credits to shelter up to the equivalent of $25,000 of active or portfolio income. The allowance of tax credits is subject to other limitations. For a more complete discussion of these limitations see "Federal Income Tax Considerations--Limitations on Losses and Credits from Passive Activities," "General Business Tax Credit Limitations" and "Other Important Tax Considerations--Alternative Minimum Tax."

Recapture of Low Income Housing Tax Credits.

During each year of the 15-year compliance period the owner must certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that its apartment complex has complied throughout the year with the requirements for the tax credits. The owner must also report:

- ☐ the qualified basis of the development, and
- ☐ the maximum applicable percentage and qualified basis taken into account by the state allocating agency.

A Series will lose unclaimed tax credits and the investors will be required to recapture with interest a portion of any tax credits previously taken if, during the 15-year compliance period, any of the following events occur:

- ☐ an apartment complex is sold,
- ☐ an interest in a local limited partnership is sold,
- ☐ the qualified basis of the apartment complex is reduced. Events causing a reduction in qualified basis can include casualty losses and the failure to meet the minimum set-aside test or the rent restriction test.

The Internal Revenue Code provides rules for avoiding recapture penalties. For example, no recapture applies if the failure to satisfy the minimum set-aside requirement is:

- ☐ a de minimis error, and
- ☐ the failure is waived by the Secretary of the Treasury.

No recapture occurs if the reduction in qualified basis is corrected within a reasonable period, although the term reasonable is not defined in the Internal Revenue Code. A tenant's income may rise by as much as 140% over the qualifying income for that unit and the unit may still be considered a low income residential unit if it continues to be rent-restricted. Even if the tenant's income increases by more than that 140% amount, no recapture results unless any vacant unit of comparable or smaller size in the development is rented to a non-qualifying tenant.

A local limited partnership or a Series can avoid recapture upon change of ownership by posting a bond with the Secretary of the Treasury, but only if it can be expected that the development will be operated as a qualified low income project for the remainder of the 15-year compliance period. As an alternative to posting a bond, a local limited partnership or a Series may establish a Treasury Direct Account. To do so, the local limited partnership or a Series would pledge Treasury securities to the IRS as security for the continued use of the development as a qualified low income project.

There is no recapture of low income housing tax credits if a casualty loss causes a reduction in qualified basis and the loss is restored by reconstruction or replacement within a reasonable period of time.

The amount of recapture is the accelerated portion of the low income housing tax credits on the project for all prior years. In addition, interest will be charged on the recapture amount. Interest is calculated from the due date for the return for the year the recapture amount was originally claimed.

The accelerated portion of low income housing tax credits in any year is the amount of the credit determined for the year less the amount which would have been determined for the year if all credits had been allowable ratably over the 15-year compliance period rather than the 10-year credit period.

State Low Income Housing Tax Credits.

A few states offer tax credits for low income housing located within the respective state. However, the Fund Manager does not expect that a significant number, if any, of the Series' investments will qualify for a state tax credit. For those that do, the state tax credits may be allocated to a partner or member of the local limited partnership other than the Series. See "Investment Objectives and Policies - Terms of the Local Limited Partnership Agreements - Interests in Profits, Losses and Distributions."

OTHER GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

The discussion which follows describes federal and state government financing subsidy programs and operating subsidy programs used in the past by VMB-partnerships. Some of a Series' apartment complexes may use these programs. The discussion is not all-inclusive. There can be no assurance that the terms of the programs discussed below will remain the same. The Fund Manager cannot predict which of these programs will be used by the local limited partnerships, or the percentage of apartment complexes which will receive any government financing subsidies or operating subsidies, until its investments have been selected.

Low income housing tax credits can be available for projects that receive financing subsidies or operating subsidies, as well as those that do not receive such subsidies. If a financing subsidy constitutes a federal subsidy under Internal Revenue Code Section 42, only the 30% present value tax credit can be available.

State and Local Bond Programs.

A number of states and some local jurisdictions have established housing finance agencies to assist in the development and financing of low and moderate income housing. Housing finance agencies are empowered to issue their own obligations which may be exempt from federal income tax. If so, the housing finance agencies sell the obligations in the tax-exempt municipal bond market at interest costs below conventional money market rates. The housing finance agencies then use the proceeds of the sale of their obligations to make or purchase mortgage loans for low and moderate income apartment complexes.

Generally, in cases where the mortgage loans of housing finance agencies are also insured by HUD, the HUD underwriting and regulatory standards and procedures are employed without any substantial additional requirements.

When a housing finance agency provides direct construction and permanent mortgage loans for multi-family housing without HUD mortgage insurance, the housing finance agency itself generally determines the economic feasibility of, market need for, demand for, and architectural construction characteristics of, the apartment complex. In such cases, the housing finance agency generally also monitors the progress of construction, marketing, rent-up and management of the completed apartment complex.

Although the criteria and requirements of housing finance agencies for non-HUD-insured direct mortgage loans vary, generally such loans are available in an amount of up to 90% of a housing finance agency's estimate of the total development cost of the apartment complex for terms of up to 40 years.

Generally, the owner must accept a limit on the amount of operating income which may be distributed annually. The direct loan programs of housing finance agencies frequently include requirements as to operating assurances, escrow, working capital and other deposits.

In order to maintain the tax-exempt nature of obligations issued by housing finance agencies:

- ☐ 20% of the units in an apartment complex must be rented to households at 50% of the area median income as adjusted for family size, or
- ☐ 40% of the units in an apartment complex must be rented to households at 60% of the area median income as adjusted for family size, and
- ☐ tenants may not pay more than 30% of their adjusted incomes for rent.

Typically, a mortgage loan financed with the proceeds of tax-exempt bonds may not be prepaid during the qualified project period. Thereafter, it may be prepaid only upon payment of amounts necessary to redeem the housing finance agency's obligations, including the payment of premiums for early redemption. A housing finance agency's direct mortgage loan programs also impose limitations on the sale, refinancing or change in use of the apartment complex. They may also require that a restrictive covenant be placed on record prohibiting the use of the apartment complex for anything other than rental housing. Further, they may require approval of the sale of an interest in a partnership or limited liability company owner.

Apartment complexes financed by tax-exempt bonds issued by housing finance agencies may be eligible for low income housing tax credits. Apartment complexes financed by housing finance agencies typically are not allocated low income housing tax credits from a state's general pool. Rather, the Internal Revenue Code imposes a ceiling on the amount of tax-exempt bond authority available to a state or local agency. Apartment complexes financed by housing finance agencies are considered to be federally subsidized for purposes of low income housing tax credits, and thus eligible only for the 30% present value credit.

Home Investment Partnership Program

The Home Investment Partnership program was authorized under Title II of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act, enacted into law in 1990. The Home program is a federal housing program intended to support a wide variety of state and local low income housing programs.

Home program funds are allocated by HUD on a formula basis to participating state and local governments. Home program funds can be used to expand the supply of low income housing and to increase the number of households served by assisted housing programs. Funds can be used for acquisition, construction, moderate or substantial rehabilitation activities or for tenant-based rental assistance programs.

State and local jurisdictions are statutorily required to meet matching requirements in order to qualify for Home program funding. This match requirement is currently 25%.

Participating jurisdictions are allowed to use funds for equity investments, interest-bearing or non-interest-bearing loans, advances, interest subsidies, or other forms of assistance that HUD finds to be consistent with the purpose of the program.

Apartment complexes which are assisted with Home program funds must be occupied by low income families. For this purpose, low income families are those whose incomes do not exceed 80% of area median income, adjusted for family size. At least 20% of the dwelling units must be occupied by very low income families who pay rent equal to no more than:

- ☐ 30% of their adjusted income, or
- ☐ the amount permitted under the low income housing tax credit program.

Very low income families are those whose incomes do not exceed 50% of the area median income, adjusted for family size. The other 80% of the dwelling units must be rented at amounts which do not exceed the lesser of:

- ☐ the existing fair market rent under the HUD Section 8 program, or
- ☐ 30% of the adjusted income of a family whose income is 65% of the area median income, adjusted for family size.

Accordingly, the rents allowed for the other 80% of the dwelling units may exceed the amounts permitted under the low income housing tax credit program.

If an apartment complex receives a Home program loan having a below-market-interest-rate, the apartment complex generally would be eligible only for the 30% present value low income housing tax credit because the apartment complex would be considered to be federally subsidized.

HUD Grant Programs to Local Governments.

The Community Development Block Grant program is authorized under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended. Seventy percent of the program's allocation provides annual entitlement grants on a formula basis to metropolitan cities and urban counties. The remaining 30% is distributed to small cities either by states electing their own programs or by HUD on a competitive basis.

Grant recipients must give maximum feasible priority to CDBG activities which either benefit low-and moderate-income persons, aid in the elimination of slums and blight or address urgent needs of the community. Grant recipients may use CDBG funds for a wide range of activities. While rehabilitation, which may be accomplished through grants, loans or guarantees to developers, is a specifically-enumerated eligible activity, assistance to developers for new housing construction is generally only eligible when undertaken with the participation of neighborhood-based non-profit organizations, small business investment companies or local development corporations. Construction-related activities, such as land assembly, clearance and demolition, can be assisted without the participation of such entities.

The terms and conditions of the grant or loan of CDBG funds from a grant recipient to a developer will be negotiated between the grant recipient and the developer. Assisted activities are generally subject to several federal program requirements, including non-discrimination, environmental review and, in certain circumstances, payment of Davis-Bacon prevailing wage rates.

CDBG funds can be utilized with respect to an apartment complex eligible for low income housing tax credits. However, the amount of the grant must be deducted from the eligible basis of the apartment complex. After the deduction is made, the remaining qualified basis of the apartment complex would be eligible for the 70% present value credit if there were no other federal subsidies within the meaning of Section 42 of the Code.

HUD Section 8 Rental Assistance Programs.

HUD administers the Existing Housing Program under Section 8 of the National Housing Act. Under the Existing Housing Program low income tenants are given housing vouchers through a local housing authority. Tenants can use these vouchers to pay a significant portion of the rents for housing available in the private market, but only in projects approved by HUD on the basis of housing quality and suitability standards.

The definition of federally subsidized for purposes of the low income housing tax credits excludes all of the Section 8 programs except for the Moderate Rehabilitation Section 8 program, other than funds disbursed under the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act of 1988, so that units receiving such assistance may be eligible for the 70% present value credit.

RD Financing and Rural Rental Assistance Programs.

Section 515 of the Housing Act of 1949 authorizes the United States Department of Agriculture, Rural Development to provide direct below-market-interest-rate mortgage loans for rural rental housing. RD was formerly known as the Farmers Home Administration of the USDA. Such loans are in amounts of up to 95% of costs and for terms of up to 50 years. In addition, RD may provide an owner with mortgage interest subsidies, which effectively lower the interest rate of the loan to 1% per annum after the completion of the apartment complex. The owner must pass the benefits of the reduced interest rate on to tenants in the form of lower rents. A Section 515-financed apartment complex may be eligible for low income housing tax credits. However, if the financing is a below-market-interest-rate loan, the apartment complex would be considered federally subsidized and thus eligible only for the 30% present value credit.

RD regulations govern the operation of Section 515-financed apartment complexes. Failure of an owner to operate its apartment complex in compliance with RD regulations could result in termination of RD assistance.

RD regulations limit owners' cash distributions to a maximum cumulative return of 8% per annum on their equity investments. RD also requires monthly payments to a reserve account until 10% of the total construction cost of the apartment complex has been set aside. Among other things, RD must approve the management agent, the management agreement, any rent increases, a transfer or encumbrance of the apartment complex, the admission or removal of a general partner to a partnership owner or a manager to a limited liability company owner, and the reduction of a general partner's interest in a partnership owner. Prepayment of an RD mortgage loan is prohibited.

In its application to RD for interest credit subsidies, the owner of an apartment complex must submit budgets for market rents and budgets for basic rents. Market rents are rents required to operate on a limited profit basis with mortgage payments based on the interest rate provided in the RD mortgage loan. Budget rents are rents required to operate on a limited profit basis assuming a mortgage bearing interest at 1% per annum. The owner will have the option of charging basic rent or rent equal to 30% of a tenant's monthly adjusted income less a utility allowance. In neither case would the tenant be charged more than the market rent or less than the basic rent. Utilities are not included in either the basic rent or market rent. The owner will receive interest subsidies so that the amount which it must pay for debt service is the same as if the interest rate on its RD mortgage loan were 1% per annum, rather than the actual interest rate on the RD mortgage loan, plus the amount of overage for the month. Overage is the amount by which 30% of one-twelfth of a tenant's adjusted gross annual income exceeds the basic rent for his unit.

RD also provides rent subsidies, known as Rental Assistance Payments. In order to obtain Rental Assistance Payments for a newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated apartment complex, the owner must execute a rental assistance agreement with RD for a term of up to 20 years. However, some contracts may have only a five-year term. Upon expiration of the term of the agreement, a new agreement may be executed for a period of up to five years. Additional units in the apartment complex may later be eligible if funds are available.

PRIOR PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

All VMB-Partnerships.

From its formation through November 30, ____[Year], VMB & Associates, Inc. and its affiliates had raised equity from more than 6,000 investors to acquire interests in a total of 240 properties located in 14 states and the District of Columbia, and representing nearly more than $60,000,000 in aggregate acquisition costs. Estimates of acquisition costs are equal to equity contributions and debt financing.

Since 1982, VMB & Associates, Inc. has sponsored 38 limited partnerships, in which capacity it has been responsible for the offerings, the identification and acquisition of local limited partnership interests, the management of the limited partnerships' assets, and investor and regulatory reporting and relations. A VMB entity serves as general partner of each of these sponsored limited partnerships.

Prior to 1982, VMB & Associates, Inc. assisted developers of low income housing to structure investments which could be sold in private placements. In connection with these 27 structured partnerships, VMB & Associates, Inc. provided structuring and consulting services to developers concerning the organization of the limited partnerships which were to own the low income housing developments, arranged for preparation of partnership agreements and other requisite documents for the projects, including legal opinions as to federal income tax and organizational matters, and arranged for the placement of securities, typically in accordance with Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933. The developers relied on independent broker-dealers to place such securities.

VMB & Associates, Inc. was not an initial managing general partner of any of the structured partnerships. In the years immediately following the sale of the structured partnerships' interests, VMB & Associates, Inc. monitored the structured partnerships' activities and results of operations. Since then, VMB & Associates, Inc. has provided administrative services to some of the structured partnerships such as the preparation of partnership income tax information. Except for some of the structured partnerships as to which a VMB entity has become the substituted managing general partner, VMB & Associates, Inc. has no role in the ongoing management of the structured partnerships. Accordingly, the structured partnerships in which VMB & Associates, Inc. has no management role are distinguished from the partnerships as to which a VMB entity serves as managing general partner. Unlike the structured partnerships, generally these sponsored partnerships are similar to the Series in that VMB & Associates, Inc. is or was solely responsible for the conduct of the offering, the identification and acquisition of local limited partnership interests, and the management of the sponsored partnerships.

GRAPHIC OF U.S. MAP NOT SHOWN

Of the 240 properties, 10 of the 213 properties owned by the sponsored partnerships had been sold or refinanced as of November 30, ____[Year] and nine of the 27 properties owned by the structured partnerships had been sold as of November 30, ____[Year]. Four of the properties sold by sponsored partnerships were tax credit properties.

One of the 38 sponsored partnerships and nine of the 27 structured partnerships had completed operations as of November 30, ____[Year]. None of these partnerships were tax credit partnerships.

Exhibit A to this Memorandum includes Tables I, II and III which contain additional information as of November 30, ____[Year] with regard to some of the more recent public sponsored partnerships. Table V included in Exhibit A contains information with respect to recent sales of properties by sponsored public partnerships as of November 30, ____[Year]. Table IV has been omitted as none of the sponsored public partnerships had sold properties or terminated operations as of November 30, ____[Year].

Reference also is made to Table VI included in the Registration Statement which describes in greater detail the properties in which some of the more recent sponsored partnerships have invested. The Fund Manager will send to any prospective investor upon request and without a charge a copy of Table VI.

Of the 38 sponsored partnerships, 7 public and 20 non-public partnerships entailed low income housing tax credit offerings. As of November 30, ____[Year], the 17 tax credit partnerships had raised an aggregate of approximately $775,820,000 from more than 14,800 investors, and had invested in a total of 139 apartment complexes at an aggregate acquisition cost of approximately $1,467,587,000 in the jurisdictions set forth below. Five of the 17 tax credit partnerships have held one or more of their apartment complexes for the full 10-year credit period. None of the 57 structured partnerships entailed low income housing tax credit offerings.

SEC Rule 504 Offering Exemption--Limited Liability Company--Operating Agreement--Securities Exemption Legend and Resale Restrictions

COMMENT

The document appearing below is an Operating Agreement for an Ohio LLC which was formed to establish a relatively small family real estate investment vehicle. The promoters relied on SEC Rule 504 for a federal exemption from registration and also relied on state exemptions for small or limited offerings which required no filings with any state securities agency, i.e., the exemptions were "self-effectuating." This Operating Agreement contains provisions which relate to both the federal and state exemptions relied upon. SEC Rule 504(b)(1) excepts an offering from having to meet the limitations on the manner of the offering (i.e., no use of general solicitation and advertising) set forth in Rule 502(c) and also from the limitations on resale (i.e., that the securities are "restricted" and may not be freely resold without registration or the availability of an exemption) as set forth in Rule 502(d) but only in certain circumstances. Those Rule 504(b)(1) exceptions only apply if:

(1) the offering is made exclusively in one or more states that require registration, a public filing and delivery of a disclosure document to prospective purchasers prior to sale, or

(2) the offering is made in one or more states without such requirements but the securities are registered in at least one state requiring a public filing and a delivery of a pre-sale disclosure document and that document is delivered to all purchasers including those in the states not having such a requirement, or

(3) the offering is made exclusively according to state law registration exemptions which permit general solicitation and advertising so long as sales are made only to "accredited investors" as defined in SEC Rule 501(a).

None of those excepting circumstances are present with respect to this offering and, as a result, the Rule 502(c) and (d) limitations apply. In order to meet those limitations, no general solicitation or advertising may be used with respect to this offering. In addition, the Operating Agreement sets forth a legend stating that the LLC membership units have not been registered and the Agreement also provides in Paragraph 9. F. that no transfer of the units may be made without compliance with applicable federal and state securities law.

FORM

OPERATING AGREEMENT OF CRISTINO FAMILY REAL ESTATE INVESTMENTS LLC

(An Ohio Limited Liability Company)

THE MEMBERSHIP UNITS EVIDENCED BY THIS AGREEMENT HAVE NOT BEEN REGISTERED UNDER THE SECURITIES ACT OF 1933, AS AMENDED, OR ANY STATE SECURITIES LAWS, AND MAY NOT BE RESOLD UNLESS REGISTERED UNDER FEDERAL AND STATE SECURITIES LAWS OR, UNLESS AN EXEMPTION FROM REGISTRATION UNDER THE FEDERAL AND STATE SECURITIES LAWS IS AVAILABLE FOR ANY SUCH RESALE.

THIS OPERATING AGREEMENT is entered into as of the _____ [day] day of _____ [month], _____ [year], by and among ALEX CRISTINO, FRANCINE CRISTINO, JULIA CRISTINO, ALICIA CRISTINO, and EVELINA CRISTINO (said individuals being hereinafter referred to collectively as the "Members" and individually as "Member"), and CRISTINO FAMILY REAL ESTATE INVESTMENTS LLC, an Ohio limited liability company (the "Company").

WHEREAS, the Members own all of the membership units in the Company and desire the Company to be operated upon the terms and conditions set forth in this Agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants set forth herein, the following is hereby adopted as the Operating Agreement of the Company:

1. Formation and Name of Limited Liability Company. The Members have formed the Company pursuant to the provisions of Sections 1705.01 to 1705.61, both inclusive, of the Ohio Revised Code (the "LLC Act") under the name "Cristino Family Real Estate Investments LLC." All rights, liabilities and obligations of the Members, both as among themselves and as to persons not parties to this Agreement, shall be as provided in the LLC Act, except as otherwise provided herein.

2. Principal Office. The principal office of the Company shall be 1717 East Sferra Circle, Cleveland, Ohio 44114, or at such other place in the State of Ohio as may be designated by the Voting Members (as hereinafter defined) by written notice to all of the Members.

3. Purposes of the Company. The purposes of the Company shall be to engage in any lawful acts or activities for which limited liability companies may be formed under the LLC Act.

4. Duration of the Company. The Company shall commence on the date on which its Articles of Organization are filed with the Ohio Secretary of State's Office, and shall continue until terminated and dissolved in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

5. Classes of Interests; Capitalization; Capital Accounts.

A. Capitalization. The Company has been capitalized by the Member contributing the money indicated opposite such Member's name on Exhibit A attached hereto, with the Member holding the number of units ("Membership Unit") as set forth on such Exhibit. The Company and the Members may, from time to time, after the execution of this Agreement designate any additional capital amounts of the Members on such Exhibit A. Each such designation of a capital amount shall be dated as of the date it is added to such Exhibit A and shall be signed by the President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Company. Each Membership Unit represents an equal capital interest in the Company.

B. Capital Accounts. An individual capital account shall be established and maintained for each Member and has been or shall be credited with the amount of each Member's capital contribution to the Company. Each Member's capital account shall be determined and maintained throughout the term of the Company in accordance with the requirements of Section 704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the "Code") or its counterpart in any subsequently enacted Internal Revenue Code, the applicable Treasury Regulations (the "Regulations") thereunder and the provisions of Exhibit B attached hereto and incorporated herein.

6. Division of Profits, Losses, and Cash Flow.

A. Profits and Losses. The Company's "net profits" and "net losses," computed in accordance with the provisions of Exhibit C attached hereto and incorporated herein, shall be, subject to the provisions of such Exhibit, allocated among, or borne by, the Members in proportion to their respective number of Membership Units.

B. Cash Flow. The cash flow of the Company shall be the net profits and losses of the Company, computed as provided in Exhibit C attached hereto, plus depreciation and other noncash charges deducted in determining such profits and losses, minus principal payments on all mortgages, and any other cash expenditures which have not been deducted in determining the net profits and losses of the Company, and minus the amount reasonably determined by the Members to be necessary to maintain for the Company sufficient working capital and a reasonable reserve for repairs and/or replacements. The cash flow of the Company shall be determined separately for each fiscal year and not cumulatively.

C. Distribution or Retention of Cash Flow. Cash flow, as so determined, shall be distributed to the Members in proportion to their respective Membership Units at such time or times as may be determined by vote of the Members owning, in the aggregate, a majority of the Membership Units.

7. Control and Operation of the Company.

A. Powers of Members; Compensation. The Members shall have the control and management of the day-to-day operation of the Company's business. The Members shall not be entitled to compensation for managing the Company's business, but shall be reimbursed by the Company for all reasonable expenses incurred by them in their performance of acts on behalf of the Company.

B. Majority Approval Required. In exercising authority under this Agreement or over the day-to-day operation of the Company's business, all actions taken on behalf of the Company by a Member shall require the prior approval of Members owning, in the aggregate, a majority of the Membership Units.

C. Taxable Year; Accounting Method. The taxable year of the Company shall be a calendar year, and the first taxable year shall end on December 31st of the year in which the Company is formed. The books and records of the Company shall be maintained on the cash method of accounting.

D. Liability of Members. The Members shall not have any liability to the Company or to any other Member for any mistakes or errors in judgment, or for any act or omission believed in good faith to be within the scope of a Member's authority conferred by this Agreement. A Member shall be liable only for acts and/or omissions involving intentional wrongdoing. Actions or omissions taken in reliance upon the advice of legal counsel that they are within the scope of a Member's authority hereunder shall be conclusive evidence of good faith; provided, however, a Member shall not be required to procure such advice to be entitled to the benefit of this subparagraph.

E. Return of Capital Contribution. No Member shall have the right to demand or receive the return of such Member's capital contribution except as otherwise expressly provided herein.

8. Officers.

A. Officers Generally. The officers of this Company shall be a President, a Vice President and a Secretary-Treasurer. Any two offices may be held by one person. The officers shall be chosen by the Members by a majority vote and shall hold office for one (1) year or until their successors are elected and qualified, whichever shall later occur. Any officer may be removed at any time by a vote of a majority of the Members.

B. Officers. The names and offices are as follows:

ALEX CRISTINO	--	President
FRANCINE CRISTINO	--	Vice President
JULIA CRISTINO	--	Secretary-Treasurer

C. Execution and Signing of Documents. Deeds and other formal instruments to be executed on behalf of the Company shall be signed by the President and, if necessary, attested by the Secretary-Treasurer. Checks on the Company's bank accounts and all ordinary business contracts may be signed by the officer or officers, or other agents, as the President may from time to time authorize or designate. In any case where the signatures of two officers are required for any document or other instrument to be executed on behalf of the Company, such signatures must be those of two different persons.

9. Assignment, Transfer or Sale of Membership Interests.

A. Substitute Member. A Membership Unit may be assigned, transferred or sold only as provided in this Paragraph 9. With respect to any such permitted assignment, transfer or sale, the assignee, transferee or purchaser of one or more Membership Units shall be treated and considered as a "Member" hereunder for all purposes provided such transferee has complied with subparagraph 9.E. below.

B. Restrictions on Transfer. No Member shall pledge, cause a lien to be placed against, or encumber such Member's Membership Units, or transfer, sell, alienate, assign, or otherwise dispose of any of such Member's Membership Units, whether voluntarily, involuntarily, by operation of law, at judicial sale, or otherwise, except in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

C. Voluntary Lifetime Transfers.

(1) Without the consent of any other Member, a Member may transfer all, or a portion of, such Member's Membership Units to, or in trust for the benefit of, such Member's spouse or any of such Member's descendants or, if a Member is a trust, to or in trust for the beneficiaries of the trust or the spouse or descendants of the beneficiaries ("Permitted Transferees").

(2) If a Member receives a bona fide offer from anyone other than a Permitted Transferee to purchase all, or a portion of, the Membership Units owned by such Member, such Member (the "Transferring Member") shall give written notice to the other Member or Members (the "Nontransferring Member(s)"), which notice shall set forth the identity of the prospective transferee (the "Offeror"), the number of Membership Units proposed to be sold (the "Offered Units"), and the price and other terms of the offer received by the Transferring Member. Upon receipt of such notice, the Nontransferring Member(s) shall have the right and option to purchase, or to cause the Company to purchase, the Offered Units at the price which was offered to the Transferring Member by the Offeror. To exercise such right, the Nontransferring Member(s) shall give written notice to the Transferring Member of such Member(s) intention to exercise such right, which notice shall be given within sixty (60) days after the receipt by the Nontransferring Member(s) of notice from the Transferring Member. Such notice shall set forth the number of Membership Units to be purchased by the Nontransferring Member(s) and/or the Company, it being understood that the Company and the Nontransferring Member(s) shall purchase, in the aggregate, all of the Offered Units. The number of Offered Units, if any, to be purchased by the Company shall be determined in the sole discretion of the Nontransferring Member(s) owning, in the aggregate, a majority of the Membership Units (exclusive of the Offered Units). Each Nontransferring Member shall purchase a number of the Offered Units which are not being purchased by the Company as determined by agreement of all of the Nontransferring Members or, if the Nontransferring Members are unable to so agree, in proportion to the number of Membership Units owned by each nontransferring Member (exclusive of the Offered Units). In the event the right to purchase the Offered Units pursuant to this subparagraph 9.C.(2) is exercised, the Transferring Member and the Nontransferring Member(s) (and/or the Company, as the case may be) shall complete the purchase and sale of the Offered Units in accordance with the terms of the offer (including the payment terms set forth therein) received by the Transferring Member; provided, however, in the event the Offeror's offer provides for the transfer, in whole or in part, of property or other non-cash consideration to the Transferring Member in exchange for the Offered Units, the Members agree to negotiate in good faith with one another to arrive at a value of such property, which value shall be paid in cash by the Nontransferring Member(s) and/or the Company, as the case may be, at the closing of the purchase and sale transaction. If the right to purchase the Offered Units pursuant to this subparagraph 9.C.(2) is not exercised, the Transferring Member may sell the Offered Units to the Offeror at a price, and on terms, no more favorable to the Offeror than those set forth in the notice given to the Nontransferring Member(s); provided, however, that if said sale shall not be concluded within thirty (30) days following the expiration of the 60-day option period, then the terms and conditions of this subparagraph shall again apply in the case of any proposed sale by the Transferring Member.

D. Involuntary Lifetime Transfers. A Member shall immediately notify the other Member(s), in writing, upon becoming aware of facts which would reasonably lead such Member to believe that a court ordered transfer or sale of all or a portion of such Member's Membership Units is foreseeable or likely, including, but not limited to, a court ordered transfer incident to any divorce or marital property settlement or pursuant to applicable community property, quasi-community property or similar state law. Such notice shall set forth the facts relating to the anticipated court order and the type and number of Membership Units expected to be subject thereto. In the event of such notice, the provisions of Paragraph 9.C.(2) shall apply with the following modifications: (a) the Nontransferring Member(s) shall have the right and option to purchase, or cause the Company to purchase, the Membership Units anticipated to be subject to the court ordered transfer at a price equal to the lesser of the fair market value of such Membership Units as determined by the certified public accountant then servicing the account of the Company or the value, if any, attributed to such Membership Units in connection with the involuntary transfer; and (b) the Nontransferring Member(s) may exercise such right with respect to less than all of the Membership Units anticipated to be subject to the court order.

E. Continuation of Restrictions. This Agreement, and the terms, conditions and restrictions set forth herein, shall continue to apply to any Membership Units transferred by a Member in accordance with this Paragraph 9. As a condition to any transfer of Membership Units hereunder, a transferee shall agree in writing to be bound by all of the terms, conditions and restrictions of this Agreement, which writing may take the form of a certificate of acceptance and adoption of this Agreement. Failure to execute such a writing shall not relieve a transferee of any restrictions or obligations hereunder.

F. Securities Laws. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this Paragraph 9, no proposed or intended assignment, transfer or sale of Membership Units shall be effective, unless and until it appears, to the satisfaction of counsel for the Company, that such assignment, transfer or sale will not be in violation of, or otherwise render the Company and/or any Member liable under, the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder, or under the applicable state securities laws of any state or states.

G. Terminating Transfers. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this Paragraph 9, no sale or exchange of an interest may be made if the Membership Units sought to be sold or exchanged, when added to the total of all Membership Units sold or exchanged within the period of twelve (12) months prior thereto, would result in the termination of the Company under Section 708 of the Code, or any successor section thereto.

10. Effect of Death, Bankruptcy or Incompetency of a Member. A Member shall not be permitted to withdraw or resign from the Company. The death, adjudication of bankruptcy, whether voluntary or involuntary, or adjudication of incompetency of a Member who is an individual, or the bankruptcy or dissolution of a Member that is a corporation, partnership or trust, during the term of this Agreement, shall not effect the Company or its business. The executor, administrator, trustee or other legal representative of the deceased, bankrupt, incompetent or dissolved Member shall succeed to the rights of such Member, subject to the provisions of this Agreement.

11. Termination of the Company. The Company shall be terminated and dissolved upon the written consent of all of the Members.

12. Dissolution and Liquidation of the Company.

A. Winding Up. Upon the termination of the Company pursuant to Paragraph 11, above, a full and general accounting shall be taken of the Company's business, and the affairs of the Company shall be wound up. Any profits earned or losses incurred since the last previous accounting shall be allocated among, or borne by, the Members in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph 6.A., above. The Members shall wind up and liquidate the Company by selling the Company's assets, or by distributing such assets in kind, subject to the Company's liabilities, or by a combination thereof, as determined by the Members. The proceeds of such liquidation shall be applied and distributed in the following order of priority, by the end of the taxable year during which the liquidation occurs (or, if later, within ninety (90) days after the date of the liquidation):

(i) to the payment of any debts and liabilities of the Company;

(ii) to the setting up of any reserve which the Members shall reasonably deem necessary to provide for any contingent or unforeseen liabilities or obligations of the Company, with any excess in such reserve remaining after such liabilities are satisfied to be distributed as soon as practicable in the manner hereinafter set forth; and

(iii) thereafter, the balance of the proceeds, if any, shall be distributed in accordance with the positive capital account balances of the Members, as determined after taking into account all capital account adjustments for the Company taxable year during which such liquidation occurs. For purposes of this subparagraph, a liquidation of the Company shall mean a liquidation as defined in Section 1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(g) of the Regulations.

B. Statement. The Members shall be furnished with a statement prepared by the Company's accountants, which shall set forth the assets and liabilities of the Company as of the date of complete liquidation.

C. Return of Capital Contributions. Notwithstanding anything in this Agreement to the contrary, no Member shall be personally liable for the return of the capital contributions of the Members, or any portion thereof, it being expressly understood that any such return of the capital contributions of the Members shall be made solely from Company assets.

13. Tax Matters Member. The Members shall select a Member to serve as the Tax Matters Member of the Company, as provided in Regulations issued pursuant to Section 6231 of the Code. Such selection shall be made by the Members owning, in the aggregate, a majority of the Membership Units. The initial Tax Matters Member shall be Alex Cristino, who shall serve until a successor is selected. Each Member, by the execution of this Agreement (or acceptance of Membership Units in the case of a Member who is a transferee or successor transferee to a Member who has executed this Agreement), consents to such designation of the Tax Matters Member and agrees to execute, certify, acknowledge, deliver, swear to, file and record at the appropriate public offices such documents as may be necessary or appropriate to evidence such consent. The Company shall indemnify and reimburse the Tax Matters Member for all expenses, including legal and accounting fees, claims, liabilities, losses and damages incurred in connection with any administrative or judicial proceeding with respect to the tax liability of the Members. The payment of all such expenses shall be made before any distributions to Members are made by the Company. The taking of any action and the incurring of any expense by the Tax Matters Member in connection with any such proceeding, except to the extent required by law, is a matter in the sole discretion of the Tax Matters Member.

14. Amendments. This Agreement may be amended only with the written approval of Members owning, in the aggregate, two thirds (2/3) or more of the outstanding Membership Units.

15. Notices. All notices, consents or other instruments hereunder shall be in writing and mailed by United States mail, postage prepaid, and shall be directed to the parties hereto at the last addresses of the parties furnished by them in writing to the Company, and to the Company at its principal office. The Company and/or any Member shall have the right to designate a new address for receipt of notices by notice addressed to the other Member(s) and the Company and mailed as aforesaid. Such notices shall be made a permanent part of the Company records.

16. Obligations and Rights of Transferees. Any person who acquires in any manner whatsoever any interest in the Company, irrespective of whether such person has accepted and assumed in writing the terms and provisions of this Agreement, shall be deemed by the acceptance of the benefit of the acquisition thereof to have agreed to be subject to, and to be bound by, all the obligations of this Agreement with the same force and effect as any predecessor in interest of such person.

17. Benefit and Binding Effect. This Agreement shall inure to the benefit of, and be binding upon, the parties hereto and their respective next of kin, heirs, legatees, devisees, administrators, executors, legal representatives, nominees, successors and permitted assigns.

18. Governing Law. This Agreement and the rights of all parties hereunder shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Ohio.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, each party has executed this Operating Agreement as of the day first written above.

Capital Account Accounting Principles

Section 1. For purposes of computing the amount of any item of income, gain, deduction or loss to be reflected in the Members' capital accounts, the determination, recognition and classification of any such item shall be the same as its determination, recognition and classification for federal income tax purposes; provided, however, that:

(a) Any deductions for depreciation, cost recovery or amortization (other than depletion under Section 611 of the Code) attributable to a Contributed Property (as defined below) shall be determined as if the adjusted basis of such property on the date it was acquired by the Company was equal to the Agreed Value (as defined below) of such property. Upon an adjustment to the Carrying Value (as defined below) of any Company property subject to depletion under Section 611 of the Code, any further deductions for such depreciation, cost recovery or amortization attributable to such property shall be determined as if the adjusted basis of such property were equal to the Carrying Value of such property immediately following such adjustment.

(b) Any income, gain or loss attributable to the taxable disposition of any property (including any property subject to depletion under Section 611 of the Code) shall be determined by the Company as if the adjusted basis of such property as of such date of disposition were equal in amount to the Company's Carrying Value with respect to such property as of such date.

(c) The computation of all items of income, gain, loss and deduction shall be made by the Company and, as to those items described in Section 705(a)(1)(B) or Section 705(a)(2)(B) of the Code, without regard to the fact that such items are not includable in gross income or are neither currently deductible nor capitalizable for federal income tax purposes.

Section 2. A transferee of an Interest in the Company will succeed to the capital account relating to the Interest transferred; provided, however, that if the transfer causes a termination of the Company under Section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code, the Company's properties shall be deemed to have been distributed in liquidation of the Company to the Members (including the transferee of the Interest) and recontributed by such Members and transferees in reconstitution of the Company. The capital accounts of such reconstituted partnership shall be maintained in accordance with the principles set forth herein.

Section 3. Upon an issuance of additional interests in the Company for cash or Contributed Property, the capital accounts of all Members (and the Carrying Values of all Company properties) shall, immediately prior to such issuance, be adjusted (consistent with the provisions hereof) upward or downward to reflect any unrealized gain or unrealized loss attributable to each Company property (as if such unrealized gain or unrealized loss had been recognized upon an actual sale of such property at the fair market value thereof, immediately prior to such issuance, and had been allocated to the Members, at such time, pursuant to subparagraph 6.A. of the Operating Agreement). In determining such unrealized gain or unrealized loss attributable to the properties, the fair market value of Company properties shall be determined by the Members using such reasonable methods of valuation as they may adopt.

Section 4. Immediately prior to the distribution of any Company property in liquidation of the Company pursuant to Paragraph 11 of the Operating Agreement, the capital accounts of all Members (and the Carrying Values of all Company properties) shall, immediately prior to any such distribution, be adjusted (consistent with the provisions hereof and of Section 704 of the Code) upward or downward to reflect any unrealized gain or unrealized loss attributable to each Company property (as if such unrealized gain or unrealized loss had been recognized upon an actual sale of each such property, immediately prior to such distribution, and had been allocated to the Members, at such time, pursuant to subparagraph 6.A. of the Operating Agreement). In determining such unrealized gain or unrealized loss attributable to the properties, the fair market value of Company properties shall be determined by the Members using such reasonable methods of valuation as they may adopt.

Section 5. For the purposes of this Exhibit B, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated unless the context clearly indicates otherwise:

" Agreed Value" means the fair market value of a Contributed Property as agreed to by the contributing Member and the Company, using such reasonable method of valuation as they may adopt.

" Carrying Value" means: (a) with respect to Contributed Property, the Agreed Value of such property, reduced (but not below zero) by all amortization, depreciation and cost recovery deductions charged to the Members' capital accounts with respect to such property, as well as any other charges for sales, retirements and other dispositions of assets included in a Contributed Property, as of the time of determination; and (b) with respect to any other property, the adjusted basis of such property for federal income tax purposes as of the time of determination. The Carrying Value of any property shall be adjusted in accordance with the principles set forth herein.

" Contributed Property" means each Member's interest in property or other consideration (excluding services and cash) contributed to the Company by such Member.

For purposes of this Exhibit, all other capitalized terms will have the same meaning herein as is ascribed to them in the Operating Agreement.

EXHIBIT C

Allocations of Profits and Losses

Section 1. The terms "net profits" and "net losses," as used herein, shall mean the net amount of the Company's profits and losses, as determined for federal income tax purposes, and shall also include each Member's share of income described in Section 705(a)(1)(B) of the Code, any expenditures described in Section 702(a)(2)(B) of the Code, any expenditures described in Section 709(a) of the Code which are not deducted or amortized in accordance with Section 709(b) of the Code and losses not deductible pursuant to Section 267(a) or 707(b) of the Code.

Section 2. Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, to the extent required by law, income, gain, loss and deduction attributable to property contributed to the Company by a Member shall be allocated among the Members so as to take into account any variation between the tax basis of the property and the fair market value thereof at the time of contribution, in accordance with the requirements of Section 704(c) of the Code.

Section 3. Company income, gain, loss and deduction shall be allocated to the Members in accordance with the portion of the year during which the Members have held their respective Membership Units. All items of income and loss shall be considered to have been earned ratably over the fiscal year of the Company, except that gains and losses arising from the disposition of assets shall be taken into account as of the date thereof.

Section 4. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, at all times during the existence of the Company, the interest of each Member in each material item of Company income, gain, loss, deduction or credit will be equal to at least one percent (1%) of each such item.

Section 5. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, in the event the Company is entitled to a deduction for imputed interest under any provision of the Code on any loan or advance from a Member, such deduction shall be allocated solely to such Member.

Section 6. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, losses allocated pursuant to subparagraph 6.A. of the Operating Agreement shall not exceed the maximum amount of losses that can be so allocated without causing the Member receiving such allocation to have an Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance (as defined below) at the end of any fiscal year of the Company.

Section 7. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, if there is a net decrease in Company Minimum Gain during any Company fiscal year, Members who would otherwise have an Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance at the end of such year shall be specially allocated items of Company income and gain for such year (and, if necessary, subsequent years) in an amount and manner sufficient to eliminate such Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance as quickly as possible. The items to be so allocated shall be determined in accordance with Section 1.704-2 of the Regulations. This Section 7 is intended to comply with the minimum gain chargeback requirement in such section of the Regulations and shall be interpreted consistently therewith. "Company Minimum Gain" shall be computed in the manner described in Section 1.704-2(d)(1) of the Regulations. "Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance" shall mean the deficit capital account balance of a Member, if any, as of the end of the relevant fiscal year of the Company, after giving effect to the following: (A) credit to such capital account any amounts the Member is obligated to restore pursuant to the penultimate sentence of Section 1.704-2 of the Regulations; and (B) debit to such capital account the items described in Sections 1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), (5) and (6) of the Regulations.

Section 8. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, to the extent the payment of any expenditure by the Company is treated as a distribution to a Member for federal income tax purposes, there will be a gross income allocation to such Member in the amount of such distribution.

Section 9. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, if items of income or gain to be allocated include income or gain treated as ordinary income for federal income tax purposes because it is attributable to the recapture of depreciation under Section 1245 or 1250 of the Code, such income or gain, to the extent treated as ordinary income, shall be allocated to and reported by the Members in proportion to their then respective cumulative allocations of depreciation.

Section 10. Notwithstanding any provision of the foregoing Operating Agreement to the contrary, except as provided in Section 7 of this Exhibit C above, in the event any Member unexpectedly receives any adjustments, allocations, or distributions described in Sections 1.704-1(b)(2)(ii)(d)(4), (5) or (6) of the Regulations, items of Company income and gain shall be specially allocated to such Member in an amount and manner sufficient to eliminate the Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance in the Member's capital account created by such adjustments, allocations, or distributions as quickly as possible. Any special allocations of items of income or gain pursuant to this Section 10 shall be taken into account in computing subsequent allocations of other net profits, net losses and items thereof pursuant to the foregoing Operating Agreement (including the exhibits attached thereto), so that the net amount of any items so specially allocated pursuant to this Section 10 and the other net profits, net losses and all other items allocated to the Member pursuant to the Operating Agreement, to the extent possible, be equal to the net amount that would have been allocated to the Member had such unexpected adjustments, allocations or distributions not occurred.

Section 11. Except as provided in Section 7, above, in the event a Member has an Adjusted Deficit Capital Account Balance at the end of any Company fiscal year which is in excess of the sum of (i) the amount the Member is obligated to restore pursuant to any provision of this Agreement, and (ii) the amount the Member is deemed to be obligated to restore pursuant to the penultimate sentence of Section 1.704-2 of the Regulations, such Member shall be specially allocated items of Company income and gain in the amount of such excess as quickly as possible.

FORM 22A.10 SEC Rule 504 Offering Exemption--Limited Liability Company--SEC Form D--Notice of Sale of Securities Pursuant to Regulation D, Section 4(6), and/or Uniform Limited Offering Exemption

COMMENT

The SEC Form D appearing below relates to a relatively small family interstate offering intended to be made to family members in two different states. Since the offering will not be made only in one state, the federal intrastate offering exemption provided by SEC Rule 147 is not available. The offering is small enough (not in excess of $1,000,000) and otherwise meets the requirements of SEC Rule 504 which is one of the federal registration exemptions available under Regulation D. This particular offering was to be sold to less than ten (10) individuals in the same family who resided in two different states. In that instance, both of the states involved had available a small or limited offering type of exemption (to be made to a specified small number of purchasers in the state) which was available for the contemplated offering. In addition, these state exemptions were "self-effectuating" in that no filing of any kind was required to be made in either state in order to obtain the exemption.

FORM 22A.11 SEC Rule 504 Offering Exemption Limited Liability Company Subscription Agreement Purchaser Representations Securities Exemption Legend and Resale Restrictions

COMMENT

The document appearing below is a subscription agreement for units in an Ohio LLC which was formed to establish a relatively small family real estate investment vehicle. The promoters relied on SEC Rule 504 for a federal exemption from registration and also relied on state exemptions for small or limited offerings which required no filings with any state securities agency, i.e., the exemptions were "self-effectuating." This subscription agreement contains representations from the subscriber which relate to both the federal and state exemptions relied upon. The document references the federal SEC Rule 504 exemption and also the Ohio exemption available under Section 1707.03(O) of the Ohio Revised Code for small corporate-type equity offerings.

Current Legal Forms for Real Estate
Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.01

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.01 Summary of this Chapter

§ 23.02 Rental Payments--In General. Lessee may deduct rental payments only for leased property used in lessee's trade or business or for production of income. For cash basis lessor, rental income is taxable when received; for accrual basis lessor, such income is taxable when he has right to receive it.

§ 23.03 Lessee's Payment of Lessor's Expenses. Lessee's payment of lessor's expenses pursuant to lease agreement are deductible by lessee as rent and are taxable to lessor as rental income.

§ 23.04 Assignment of Rent. Assigning right to rental income does not shift lessor's tax liability to assignee. Split of authority exists on issue of whether lessor's assignment of his leasehold interest shifts tax liability to assignee.

§ 23.05 Advance Rentals, Bonuses and Security Deposits. Advance rentals and bonuses are taxable income for year of receipt, regardless of lessor's accounting method. Lessee must deduct advance rentals and bonuses proportionately over life of lease. Security deposit is income to lessor only if lessee fails to perform lease obligations. Otherwise, lessor must return deposit at end of lease term.

§ 23.06 Lease Acquisition Costs. Lessee's expenditures to purchase leasehold and other initial acquisition costs are not deductible when paid or incurred. They represent part of lessee's cost of lease which must be amortized over lease term. Many of lessor's expenses in procuring tenant must also be amortized ratably over term of lease.

§ 23.07 Cost of Improvements to the Property. Cost of lessee's construction of buildings or other permanent improvements on leased property is not currently deductible, but must be amortized or depreciated over time. Lessor does not realize income on account of such improvements unless made in lieu of rent. Cost of lessor's constructions of buildings or permanent improvements in connection with execution of lease not currently deductible but must be recovered over estimated useful life of improvement.

§ 23.08 Demolition of Structures. Where lessor or lessee demolishes structure, neither may claim deduction for demolition expense or for loss arising from demolition. Such expense and loss are chargeable to capital account of land where structure formerly stood.

§ 23.09 Lessee's Costs of Repairs, Replacements and Restoration. Lessee's expenses in maintaining and repairing leased premises are currently deductible. Where lease requires lessee to maintain premises at established level by making replacements, cost of replacements is currently deductible, even if replacement has useful life exceeding one year. Similarly, lessee's payment of money to lessor to restore premises at end of lease term to their original state is currently deductible.

§ 23.10 Lessor's Costs in Managing and Maintaining Rental Property. Taxpayer engaged in business of dealing in real property (i.e., selling, trading and renting real property) may deduct all ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in carrying on such business. Similarly, taxpayer who owns and invests in rental property, but is not real estate dealer, may deduct ordinary and necessary expenses arising from managing and maintaining such property and collecting rents.

§ 23.11 Cost of Cancelling, Extending or Renewing Lease. Lessee's payment to cancel lease is deductible as current business expense. Lessee's payment to extend or renew lease is acquisition cost that must be amortized over life of extended or renewed lease. Payments received by lessor to cancel or modify lease are taxable in year of receipt. Lessor's payment made to lessee to obtain cancellation of tenant's lease must generally be amortized over remaining life of cancelled lease.

§ 23.12 Lease Agreements Between Related Parties. Where lessor and lessee are "related parties"--e.g., family members, corporation and its shareholder--question exists as to whether parties dealt with each other at arm's length, resulting in rental approximately equal to what stranger would have been required to pay.

§ 23.13 Renting Out Dwelling Units Used for Personal Purposes. If taxpayer rents out dwelling unit that he also uses for any personal purpose, rental expenses must be pro-rated between periods of rental and personal use. If dwelling is also taxpayer's "residence," rental expense deductions may not exceed gross rental income. But if dwelling is rented for less than 15 days, neither rental income nor expense is recognized for federal income tax purposes.

§ 23.14 Lease or Sale of Property? No deduction is allowed for "rental payments" that are actually payments toward purchase price of property. Determination of whether transaction is sale or lease is question of fact to be ascertained from intent of parties. Generally, where lessee has option to purchase property at price reduced by rent previously paid, rent paid before exercise of option is ordinary income to lessor and deductible expense to lessee; amounts paid thereafter are selling price of property.

§ 23.15 Sale-Leaseback Transactions. Sale-leaseback transactions offer tax and other financial advantages to seller, as lessee, and purchaser, as lessor. However, if transaction has no legitimate business purpose and is considered to be primarily for tax avoidance, it may be recharacterized for tax purposes as mortgage loan or similar arrangement, resulting in corresponding changes to anticipated tax benefits. Each case is decided on its own facts.

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.02

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.02 Rental Payments--In General

[1] "Rent" Defined

Rent is the payment required of a lessee for the right to use or occupy the lessor's property.ⁿ¹ Although most commonly in the form of periodic (e.g., monthly, annual), fixed payments of money, rent may take a variety of other forms as well.

For example, where a lessee owned stock in the lessor-corporation and transferred the stock to the lessor in exchange for a lease renewal, the Tax Court held that the fair market value of the stock was rental income.ⁿ²

Rent may also take the form of services performed by the lessee for the lessor,ⁿ³ payment of a percentage of the lessee's profits from the trade or business that he conducts on the leased premises,ⁿ⁴ his assumption of the lessor's expenses or other financial obligations,ⁿ⁵ or the erection of buildings or other permanent improvements by the lessee on the leased premises.ⁿ⁶

Rent has even been found in the reduction of the sale price of real estate in exchange for the seller's right to temporarily occupy the property following the sale at little or no charge.

Example:

The taxpayer sold warehouse property that had been offered for sale at approximately $1 million, receiving $750,000 in cash, plus the contractual right to retain occupancy of a portion of the premises "without further payment" for two and a half years. The Tax Court held that the transaction constituted a sale and leaseback of property. In exchange for the property, the taxpayer-lessee received the $750,000 payment and "a 21/2-year leasehold interest..." The fair market value of that leasehold was $253,090.75. This sum, in turn, was deductible as rent by the taxpayer-lessee during the life of the lease.ⁿ⁷

[2] Deductibility of Rental Payments

A lessee may deduct as a trade or business expense rental payments made for the use or possession of real property to which he has not taken or is not taking title, or in which he has no equity. However, the property must be used for the purposes of the lessee's trade or business.ⁿ¹

No deduction is allowed if rental payments are made for the purpose of maintaining a household. Such payments are considered to be "personal, living or family expenses," and the Code and Regulations expressly preclude a deduction for them.ⁿ² A taxpayer who rents property for residential purposes, but incidentally conducts business there (his place or business being elsewhere), may not deduct any part of the rent. If, however, he uses part of the house as his place of business, the portion of the rent that is attributable to the place of business may be deductible as a business expense.ⁿ³

In the case of an individual taxpayer, rent paid or incurred during the tax year is deductible if:

- (1) it is paid or incurred for the production or collection of income, or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income; and
- (2) the rent is an ordinary and necessary expense.

In such case, the rent is deductible by the individual as a nontrade or nonbusiness expense.ⁿ⁴

The lessee's method of accounting determines when he may claim a deduction for a rental payment. A cash basis lessee, for example, deducts rental payments for the tax year in which they are paid.ⁿ⁵ By contrast, an accrual basis lessee takes the deduction for the tax year in which all events have occurred that determine the fact of the liability, and the amount of the liability can be determined with reasonable accuracy.ⁿ⁶

[3] Taxation of Rental Income

A taxpayer's gross income includes all income from whatever source derived, including rent.ⁿ¹

The time for reporting rental income is dependent upon the lessor's method of accounting.ⁿ² If the lessor is a cash basis taxpayer, he must report such income at the time of receipt.ⁿ³ When this method is used, the "constructive receipt" doctrine applies. Under this doctrine, even though income has not yet entered into the lessor's physical possession, he nonetheless has constructively received it in the tax year in which:

- (1) it is credited to his account;
- (2) set apart for him; or
- (3) otherwise made available to him so that he may draw upon it at any time.

Rental income is not constructively received if the lessor's control of it is subjected to substantial limitations or restrictions.ⁿ⁴

If, on the other hand, the taxpayer utilizes the accrual method of accounting, he must include rental income "when all of the events have occurred which fix the right to receive such income and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy."ⁿ⁵ When rent is based on a percentage of the lessee's sales, the rent accrues as income for the period during which the sales are made, even though the rent is not due until the following year.ⁿ⁶

There are a number of frequently recurring business transactions for which the courts have identified the proper party responsible for reporting rental income. For example, if leased property is sold to a third party subject to an outstanding lease, the rent income after transfer is taxable to the purchaser; however, if the seller retains the right to the rents, as well as the benefits and obligations of ownership for the balance of the term of the lease, the rent is taxable to the seller.ⁿ⁷

If property is acquired in a foreclosure sale, subsequent rental income is taxable to the purchaser. If, however, a court later determines that the mortgagor has a right to redemption, and that the mortgagee-purchaser was merely holding the property for the mortgagor's benefit, rent received by the mortgagee belongs to the mortgagor and is taxable to him. In such a case, the mortgagor's income is realized when he applies the rent due to him toward redemption of the property.ⁿ⁸

[4] Special Accrual Rules for Certain Leases

Congress enacted special accrual rules that are applicable to the reporting of rental income and deductions arising from leases known as "Section 467 rental agreements."ⁿ¹ The purpose of these rules is to prevent the mismatching of income and deductions.ⁿ² A section 467 rental agreement is any rental agreement for the use of tangible property under which the total rental payments, plus the total fair market value of any other consideration received for use of the property, exceed $250,000; and either

(1) there are increases in the amount to be paid as rent under the agreement; or

(2) at least one amount allocable to use of the property during a calendar year is to be paid after the calendar year following the calendar year in which the use occurs.ⁿ³

Sale of real property disguised as lease will result in disallowance of "rent" deduction. If a so-called "lease agreement" is actually a sale of real estate in disguise, a deduction for "rental" payments claimed by the lessee will be disallowed.

Example: An oil company sold 320 parcels of land for use as service station sites to a tax-exempt trust and simultaneously leased them back. Under the terms of the lease agreement, the company bore the burdens, risks and responsibilities and received important benefits traditionally reserved to the owner of property. The leases also bore similarities to debt financing agreements. The court held that the so-called rental arrangement was actually a financing agreement in disguise and disallowed the company's deductions for "rental" payments. ⁿ⁴

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.03

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.03 Lessee's Payment of Lessor's Expenses

[1] Lessee's Payments Made Under a Lease for Lessor's Benefit

Generally, if a lessee pays any of his lessor's expenses pursuant to the lease, such payments are additional rental income to the lessor.ⁿ¹ These include, among others, property taxes, insurance premiums, mortgage interest and principal, maintenance costs, utilities and even the lessor's income taxes. Such payments are deductible as rental payments if the lessee uses the property in a trade or business or holds it for the production of income.ⁿ²

[a] Property Taxes

The amount of taxes paid by a tenant for the landlord's benefit are deducted by the tenant as rent payments, and not as taxes. The lessor, in turn, must report such payments as income. However, the lessor is also entitled to claim a deduction in the same amount,ⁿ³ since real property taxes are expressly deductibleⁿ⁴ and taxes are generally deductible "only by the person upon whom they are imposed."ⁿ⁵

Example:

A Hawaii statute provided that, when land is leased for a term of 15 years or more, the lessee is deemed to be the owner of the property for the purposes of paying the real property taxes. In determining whether a lessee was entitled to claim a deduction for taxes paid, the Service noted that, in general, taxes are deductible only by the person upon whom they are imposed. Ordinarily, that person is the lessor; however, the state statute imposed liability on the lessee instead. Consequently, the lessee was entitled to claim the deduction for taxes.ⁿ⁶

For a lessee who utilizes the accrual method of accounting, the deduction is taken when the lessee becomes liable for the taxes under the terms of the lease, rather than when the owner becomes liable. This date may prove different from the assessment date of the taxes.ⁿ⁷

[b] Insurance Premiums, Custodial Costs, Utilities and Interest on Indebtedness

Along with payment of property taxes owed by the landlord, other expenses that the tenant assumes pursuant to the lease are deductible by the tenant and considered income to the landlord. The Service has ruled that the lessee may deduct all expenses which, under the terms of the lease, he is required to pay to, or for, the lessor.ⁿ⁸ Some of these include:

- (1) insurance premiums (e.g., fire, theft, liability, etc.);
- (2) custodial costs;
- (3) utilities;
- (4) interest on indebtedness (i.e., mortgage interest);ⁿ⁹ and
- (5) payments to the lessor's creditors.ⁿ¹⁰

[c] Lessor's Income Taxes

Lessor's income taxes that are paid by the lessee pursuant to the lease are income to the lessor and deductible as rent to the lessee.

Example:

Railroad A leased all of its property to Railroad B. Under the lease, Railroad B agreed to pay, among other expenses, "all taxes of every description, federal, state, and municipal, upon the lessor's property, business, indebtedness, income,..." The Supreme Court held that these tax payments were taxable income to the lessor and deductible expenses to the lessee.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Lessee's Payment of Lessor's Mortgage: a Capital Expenditure

If a lease requires that the tenant pay all or part of the principal and interest on the landlord's mortgage, such payments are capital expenditures which must be amortized by the lessee.ⁿ¹ Conversely, the tenant's payments of principal and interest are income to the landlord in the year in which they were paid, regardless of whether the landlord was personally obligated on the mortgage debt.ⁿ²

Planning Note

The "pyramided" taxes problem. A prospective lessee should be advised against agreeing to a lease provision that would require him to pay the lessor's personal income taxes as part of the rent. Such an arrangement would result in the "pyramided" taxes problem. Pyramided taxes, also known as "taxes on taxes," result from a lessee's obligation to bear the full burden of any income taxes imposed upon the lessor.

For instance, if the lessor's tax liability in a given year is $50,000, and the lessee pays the amount, the lessor has realized $50,000 of income. Pursuant to the lease, the lessee must now pay taxes on the lessor's $50,000. In other words, the lessee must pay taxes on the $50,000 in taxes that he already paid for the lessor. For example, where a corporation pays the federal and state income taxes owed by an officer as part of his salary, such payments are taxable income to the officer.ⁿ³

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.04

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.04 Assignment of Rent

A lessor's assignment of his right to receive rental income does not shift his tax liability to the assignee. Rather, the lessor remains responsible for reporting the income.ⁿ¹ In one case, for example, the court held that rental payments made by a sublessee to a third party were taxable to the sublessor, even though the sublessor had lost control over the disposition of the rents pursuant to a court-approved settlement.ⁿ²

Tax liability shifts to the transferee only if a lessor makes a valid transfer of the rent-producing property itself.

Example:

A property owner executed an instrument which purported to quitclaim her entire interest in the property to one of her sons. The instrument reserved to the owner the right to personally occupy the premises during her lifetime. After her death, the property would be distributed between both of her sons. The instrument failed to incorporate two of the formal elements of a quitclaim deed. Moreover, the instrument attempted to make a testamentary disposition of property without following the statutory prerequisites for the execution of a will. Accordingly, the instrument was held to be an invalid transfer of property, and the owner remained liable for taxes on the rental income generated by the property.ⁿ³

The courts and the Service frequently have addressed the issue of whether the assignment of the leasehold interest itself successfully shifts tax liability from the assignor to the assignee, or whether such a transaction is merely a sham. There is a split of authority on the question. In a decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, a property owner assigned his "rights as landlord" to his wife for the period of a one-year lease. The court held that under local (New Jersey) law, the landlord had not simply assigned rents; instead, he had transferred his "interest as landlord." Accordingly, his transferee-wife was responsible for income taxes imposed on the rents received.ⁿ⁴

The Third Circuit decision is at odds with decisions by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and the Service.ⁿ⁵ In the Fourth Circuit case, where an owner of leased property assigned to his wife all the rights of a landlord, the court held that the owner had merely conveyed the right to receive rental income, which remained taxable to him.

The court emphasized in its opinion that the owner continued to pay expenses for maintenance and improvement of the property after executing the assignments, and that the owner did not transfer his reversions to his wife.ⁿ⁶

Similarly, in a decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, a property owner assigned his rights under a lease to a trust established for the benefit of his children. The assignment remained in effect only for the ten-year duration of the trust. The court held that the owner had merely assigned future income from the property, and that the rent paid under the lease remained taxable to him. The court noted that the owner retained both a reversionary interest in the lease and the entire reversionary interest in the land itself.ⁿ⁷

Finally, upon the sale of rental property, the parties to the transaction often agree that all or part of the sale price will consist of a percentage of the future rents paid by third party-lessees. In such case, the buyer, rather than the seller, must report that percentage of the rents as income. To the seller, these payments are proceeds from the sale, rather than taxable rental income.

Example:

Two taxpayers entered into a contract to purchase certain rental property. Under the terms of the agreement, rent was paid directly by the tenant to the seller of the property for a fixed number of years. The payments were used to discharge the taxpayers' obligations under the contract of sale. The Court held that the payments were taxable income to the taxpayers.ⁿ⁸

Planning Note

The feasibility of shifting tax liability by assigning a lease. The practical lesson taught by Lum v. Comm'r is that, while the assignment of rental income does not shift tax liability, it may be possible under state law to avoid this rule by assigning the entire leasehold interest to a third party. As noted above, in Lum New Jersey real property law allowed the transfer of an owner's "interest as landlord," and the Third Circuit viewed the transaction as much more than a mere assignment of income. Thus, counsel should carefully research local property law to determine the feasibility of following the Lum approach in an appropriate case.

If it is feasible to transfer the entire leasehold, the transfer should include not only the "rights" of a landlord, but also the common burdens of ownership. The Service is more likely to challenge the transaction if, after the assignment, the assignor-lessor has continuing responsibilities under the lease. Such burdens should be assumed by the assignee. Assignments to related persons are particularly vulnerable to attack.

Current Legal Forms for Real Estate
Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.05

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.05 Advance Rentals, Bonuses and Security Deposits

[1] Nature of Payments

Advance rentals are payments made in anticipation of fixed, future rental obligations.ⁿ¹ By contrast, a "bonus" is an extra premium or profit given the lessor and arising out of the leasing of the property.ⁿ² A security deposit is a sum of money that the lessee pays upon execution of the lease in order to secure performance of his obligations under the lease. The lessor, in turn, is required to repay the deposit at the lease's end, assuming the lessee has performed his duties.ⁿ³

Generally, where a lessor is bound under the terms of the lease to account to the lessee for the deposit and to return the amount upon the expiration of the lease if the lessee performs his obligations, the amount is considered a security deposit and not an advance rental.ⁿ⁴ If, on the other hand, the lessor has a free and unfettered right to spend the sum as he chooses, it is an advance rental.ⁿ⁵

Where the lessor has a free and unrestricted right to use the sum, and the sum both secures the lessee's performance of his obligations under the lease and is to be applied against rent in later years, the payment is treated as an advance rental.ⁿ⁶ If, however, the lessor is required to place the sum in an escrow account or trust (thereby preventing him from using the sum for his own purposes), it is considered a security deposit, even though it is to be applied against future rent obligations.ⁿ⁷

A payment is not automatically treated as a security deposit simply because it is referred to as a "deposit" in the lease and is refundable.

Example:

A taxpayer in the business of renting farm land received deposits from lessees which were to be applied toward the rent of the next crop year. These payments were refundable if the leases were not subsequently signed. The court held that, although refundable, the sums were advance rentals since they were applicable toward rent of the next year.ⁿ⁸

The following are some of the factors which support a conclusion that a payment is a security deposit:

- (1) the lessee is credited with interest on the amount;
- (2) the lease provides for the return of the amount in the event Clinton Hotel Realty Corp. v. Comm'r, 128 F.2d 968 (5th Cir. 1942) of the property's destruction;ⁿ⁹ or
- (3) the lease requires the lessor to deposit the amount in a trust or escrow account.ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Advance Rentals and Bonuses

[a] When Lessor Must Report Advance Rentals and Bonuses as Income

The lessor must include advance rentals in income for the year in which they are received, regardless of the period covered or the method of accounting that the lessor uses.ⁿ¹ Similarly, a bonus paid to a cash basis lessor is taxable in the year of receipt and not in the year of the lease's execution.ⁿ² However, one federal appeals court held that an accrual basis lessor must report a bonus as income at the time the lease is executed.ⁿ³ The argument that advance rentals and bonuses should not be reported as income until later in the lease term when such payments are applicable has been rejected.ⁿ⁴

The payment of funds that may later be applied toward the cost of exercising a purchase option is an advance rental that is taxable upon receipt.ⁿ⁵

The Service has ruled that advance rent payments are taxable when they are paid to an escrowee at the lessor's direction, although they may be refunded to the lessee.ⁿ⁶

Like an advance rental payment, a bonus in the form of real estate is income to the lessor in the year of receipt. The amount of income is measured by the property's fair market value.ⁿ⁷ Similarly, a sublessor must report as income in the year of receipt a bonus paid by a sublessee for the former's granting of the sublease.ⁿ⁸

[b] When Lessee May Deduct Advance Rentals and Bonuses

Unlike the rule applied to the lessor, the lessee must deduct advance rental paymentsⁿ⁹ and bonusesⁿ¹⁰ proportionately over the life of the lease. This rule also applies to rental payments made in the initial portion of the term which exceed payments in later years. In such cases, the excess amount paid during the initial years must be deducted over the entire lease term.ⁿ¹¹

Similarly, where a 99-year lease was executed for a building with a useful life of less than 34 years, and the lessee was required to make mortgage payments during the initial seven years of the lease, those mortgage payments were advance rentals and were deductible over the life of the lease.ⁿ¹²

However, in the case of deferred possession of leased property, rental payments made before the lessee's occupancy need not be deducted over the term of the lease, as long as the rental payments remain constant throughout the term.ⁿ¹³

[3] Security Deposits

[a] Lessor's Treatment of Security Deposit

A security deposit constitutes income to the lessor only if the lessee fails to perform his obligations under the lease. In such case, the lessor's obligation to repay the security is terminated, and he must report the amount of the security deposit as income.ⁿ¹ As previously noted, if the lessor has a free and unfettered right to use the funds on deposit, then they constitute an advance rental payment, rather than a security deposit.ⁿ²

The amount of income that must be reported upon the forfeiture of a security deposit can be a troublesome issue. One court held that when a forfeiture occurs prior to the expiration of the lease term, the lessor must report only the current value of the amount of the security which would have been refundable at the end of the lease term.ⁿ³ This holding was extended to a case in which the lessee relinquished his right to the security deposit under an agreement to accelerate termination of the lease. The court held that the lessor was only required to pay taxes on the current, discounted value of the amount which would have been refundable at the end of the lease.ⁿ⁴

It should be noted that the Service has refused to follow the holdings in the two cases discussed above. It is the position of the Service that when a lessee releases a lessor from the latter's obligation to repay a security deposit as consideration for cancellation of a lease, the entire amount realized by the lessor from the release is includable in income in the year of release.ⁿ⁵

[b] Lessee's Treatment of Security Deposit

Where a security deposit both secures the lessee's performance of his obligations and is to be applied against rent due at the end of the lease, the lessee deducts the deposit at the end of the lease term when it is actually applied against rent. The lessee need not amortize the amount of the deposit over the life of the lease.ⁿ⁶

If the lessee forfeits the security deposit by failing to perform his obligations under the lease, he is entitled to a loss deduction.ⁿ⁷

Planning Note

Avoiding the requirement of deducting advance rental payments over the lease term. As previously noted, a lessee must deduct advance rental payments proportionately over the life of the lease, rather than claim them as a deduction in the year of payment. However, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit created an exception to this rule in Zaninovich v. Comm'r In that case, lessees who had entered into a 20-year lease made an advance rental payment in December 1973, covering the first year of the lease: December 1973--November 1974.

The court held that the entire payment was deductible for 1973. Invoking the "one-year rule," the court explained that an expenditure is treated as a capital expenditure if it creates an asset, or secures a like advantage to the taxpayer, having a useful life of more than one year. Instantly, the rental expenditure did not have a useful life of more than a year because the payment covered one month in 1973 and 11 months in 1974. Hence, the payment did not have to be deducted over the life of the lease.ⁿ⁸

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.06

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.06 Lease Acquisition Costs

[1] Lessee's Costs in Acquiring Lease Must be Amortized

[a] Amortizable Costs

A lessee's expenditures to purchase a leasehold for business purposes and other costs in procuring a lease are not deductible when paid or incurred. Rather, such payments represent a part of the lessee's cost of the lease and must be amortized over its term.ⁿ¹

Among the amortizable expenses are real estate brokerage commissions paid by the lessee² and attorneys' fees for services in obtaining leases.ⁿ³ Outstanding taxes due on the leased property and assumed by the lessee are likewise amortizable.ⁿ⁴

Example:

A taxpayer leased premises for 99 years. As part of the consideration for the lease, the lessee agreed to pay all taxes, water rents and other charges which were then assessed against the premises. The delinquent taxes were not deductible for the year when the liability was assumed or paid, but were prorable over the life of the lease as a cost of capital assets.ⁿ⁵

Lease acquisition costs include a mortgage obligation on leased property which a lessee assumes as a term of his lease.ⁿ⁶ Where a lessee pays an amount to acquire the right to lease additional space under an existing lease, the amount is amortizable over the remaining term of the lease.ⁿ⁷

Fees paid for a study of the advisability of purchasing a leasehold must be amortized over the lease term. These might include payments to geologists to investigate the oil-drilling potential of a tract of land,ⁿ⁸ or to surveyors, engineers, architects, etc. A fee paid to obtain a guarantee that a lease renewal will be granted must also be amortized.ⁿ⁹

If a taxpayer acquires all of the assets of a business solely to obtain the business's lease, the entire expenditure is considered leasehold acquisition cost.ⁿ¹⁰ Similarly, a lessee's payment to secure immediate possession of a 99-year lease from a sublessee is an amortizable capital expense,ⁿ¹¹ as are litigation costs incurred by a lessee in defending his title to the premises.ⁿ¹²

[b] Amortization Period

In determining the amount of the deduction allowable to a lessee during the tax year for amortization of lease acquisition costs, the term of the lease includes all renewal options, and any other period for which the parties reasonably expect the lease to be renewed, but only if less than 75 percent of the acquisition cost is attributable to the portion of the term of the lease remaining on the date of acquisition.ⁿ¹³ In computing the "term of the lease remaining," the taxpayer should not take into account any period for which the lease may subsequently be renewed, extended or continued under an option exercisable by the lessee.ⁿ¹⁴

Example 1:

On January 1, 1989, a lessee paid $10,000 to acquire a 20-year lease. The lease contained two options, enabling the lessee to renew the lease for two five-year periods. Of the total $10,000 cost to acquire the lease, $7,000 was paid for the original 20-year lease term, and the balance of $3,000 was paid for the renewal options. Since the $7,000 cost of acquiring the initial lease is less than 75 percent of the $10,000 cost of the lease, the term of the lease is treated as including the original lease period and the two renewal periods (i.e., a total of 30 years).ⁿ¹⁵

Example 2:

Assume the same facts as in the above example, except that the portion of the total cost ($10,000) paid for the 20-year original lease period is $8,000. Since the $8,000 cost of acquiring the original lease is not less than 75 percent of the $10,000 cost of the lease, the entire $10,000 can be amortized over the 20-year term of the original lease, unless it was reasonably certain that the lease would be renewed.ⁿ¹⁶

[2] Lessor's Costs in Granting Lease Must be Amortized

Like acquisition costs incurred by a lessee, many of the lessor's expenses in procuring a tenant must be amortized ratably over the life of the lease. Some of these expenses include real estate brokerage commissions,ⁿ¹ attorneys' fees,ⁿ² an engineer's survey fees,ⁿ³ title chargesⁿ⁴ court costs,ⁿ⁵ and documentary stamps.ⁿ⁶ Real estate brokerage commissions paid by a lessee-sublessor to procure a sublessee are amortizable over the life of the sublease.ⁿ⁷

The accounting method used by the lessor is irrelevant. Whether the taxpayer is on the accrual basisⁿ⁸ or cash basis,ⁿ⁹ he must amortize the expenses discussed above ratably over the life of the lease.

Planning Note

Lessee's expenses incurred in failed attempt to acquire business lease are currently deductible. As previously noted, a lessee's expenditures in purchasing a leasehold and other costs in procuring a lease are not currently deductible, but must be amortized over the lease term. However, if a taxpayer incurs expenses in an unsuccessful effort to acquire a lease for business purposes, such expenses are currently deductible. Thus, where a taxpayer incurred legal fees and travel and entertainment expenses in an unsuccessful attempt to obtain leases of tracts of land from the Canadian government, the Tax Court held that such costs were ordinary and necessary business expenses and currently deductible.ⁿ¹⁰

Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.07

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.07 Cost of Improvements to the Property

[1] Costs to Lessee

[a] Erecting Buildings and Making Other Improvements Are Capital Investments

A taxpayer who simply leases property upon which a building or other improvement already exists is not entitled to claim a deduction for depreciation of that asset since he has made no capital investment.ⁿ¹ Rather, the taxpayer is restricted to claiming deductions for amortization of his lease acquisition costs.ⁿ²

A lessee's cost of erecting buildings or making other permanent improvements on the lessor's property is a capital investment, and is not currently deductible as a business expense. Instead, such costs must be amortized or depreciated.ⁿ³ A capital investment has been defined as an improvement having a useful life of more than one year.ⁿ⁴

At the outset, a determination must be made as to when the asset was placed in service, since different rules apply depending upon the date.

Prior to 1981: If the useful life of the asset in the lessee's hands is equal to or shorter than the unexpired lease term, then the lessee may deduct the cost of the asset as depreciation over its useful life. If, on the other hand, the estimated useful life in the lessee's hands is longer than the unexpired lease term, then the lessee may deduct the cost as amortization over the unexpired term. (Amortization requires the lessee to claim an annual deduction in an amount equal to the cost of the asset, divided by the number of years remaining in the lease term.)ⁿ⁵

1981-1986: If the asset was placed in service during 1981-1986, and is subject to the Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS) of IRC Section 168, the lessee recovers the cost over the ACRS recovery period applicable to the asset if that period is shorter than the lease term. If, on the other hand, the lease term is shorter than the recovery period, the cost is amortized under the rules for amortizing lease acquisition costs (IRC Section 178).ⁿ⁶

If a lessee places an asset in service prior to 1987, special rules exist pertaining to (1) lease renewals; and (2) leases between related parties.

(1) In determining the lessee's deduction for depreciation or amortization during any tax year, the lease term is treated as including all periods for which the lease may be renewed or extended at the lessee's option, but only if the portion of the lease term (excluding all renewal/extension periods) remaining upon completion of the asset is less than 60 percent of the asset's estimated useful life.

This rule does not apply, however, if the lessee establishes that, as of the end of the tax year, it is more probable that the lease will not be renewed or extended than that it will be renewed or extended. In such a case, the cost of the asset is amortized over the remaining lease term.ⁿ⁷

(2) If the lessor and lessee are "related persons" at any time during the tax year, the asset's cost may not be depreciated or amortized over a period that is shorter than the asset's remaining useful life. Accordingly, even if the lease term is actually shorter than the asset's remaining useful life, the lessee may not use the lease term as the recovery period; he must instead use the remaining useful life.

A lessor and lessee are "related persons" if:

(1) they are members of an affiliated group of corporations which is eligible to file a consolidated return; or

(2) their relationship is among those listed in IRC Section 267(b), regarding the disallowance of loss deductions on transactions between such related taxpayers as, e.g., members of a family; a trust's grantor and fiduciary, etc.ⁿ⁸

After 1986: If the asset was placed in service after 1986 and it is eligible for depreciation under the Accelerated Cost Recovery System, the depreciation deduction is taken under the ACRS rules, regardless of the lease term.ⁿ⁹

[b] Income Realized by Lessor if Lessee Makes Improvements

Unless the lessee's improvements are made in lieu of rent, the lessor does not realize income when the improvements are madeⁿ¹⁰ or when he acquires them upon the termination of the lease.ⁿ¹¹ The enhancement in the value of the property during the term of the lease is neither income nor the payment of rent.

If a lessee makes improvements on real estate which constitute, in whole or in part, a substitute for rent, the improvements are rental income to the lessor. Whether a lessee's improvements result in rental income to the lessor in a particular case depends upon the intention of the parties, which may be indicated either by the terms of the lease or by the surrounding circumstances.ⁿ¹²

Often, a lessee agrees to erect a building on the lessor's unimproved property and, upon completion of the structure, pay rent to the lessor for use of the building during the remainder of the lease term. In such case, the rent is taxable to the lessor.

In addition, a lessor is taxed on any income which he realizes upon termination of the lease if such income is not attributable to the value of the improvements made by the lessee--e.g., a security deposit forfeited by the lessee.ⁿ¹³

Example:

In 1945, the A Corporation leased for a period of 50 years unimproved real property to B Corporation under a lease requiring B Corporation to erect an office building on the premises costing $500,000, in addition to paying A Corporation rent of $10,000 per year beginning at the completion of the improvements. The sum of $100,000 was placed in escrow for the payment of the rent. The building was completed on January 1, 1950. The lease required all of the lessee's improvements to become the absolute property of A Corporation on the termination of the lease by forfeiture or otherwise, and the lessor would become entitled on such termination to any remaining sum in the escrow fund. B Corporation forfeited its lease on January 1, 1955, when the improvements had a value of $100,000. The $100,000 is excluded from gross income. The amount of $50,000 representing the remainder in the escrow fund is forfeited to A Corporation and is included in its gross income.ⁿ¹⁴

As previously noted, the value of buildings erected or other improvements made by a lessee on the lessor's property is excluded from the latter's income, unless such asset serves as a substitute for rent. Similarly, neither the lessor's basis nor his adjusted basis in the property may be increased or decreased due to the asset.ⁿ¹⁵

[c] Availability of Depreciation to Lessor for Improvements Made by Lessee

The lessor is not entitled to a depreciation deduction for a building constructed by the lessee, even though the lessor is required to join in a mortgage which the lessee executes in order to obtain funds for construction.ⁿ¹⁶ However, if the lessor actually contributes toward the cost of the building, and the contribution is made on such terms and conditions as to give the lessor an investment interest in the building, he is entitled to a depreciation deduction.ⁿ¹⁷

[2] Costs to Lessor

[a] Lessor's Improvements to Leased Property Are Not Currently Deductible Expenses

A lessor's capital expenditures, made for the construction of buildings or other improvements in connection with the execution of a lease, do not represent current deductions. Rather, the cost must be recovered over the estimated useful life of the improvement, instead of over the lease term.ⁿ¹ Thus, where a lessor constructed a new building for its incoming tenant, it was held that the lessor had to depreciate the cost over the life of the building.ⁿ² Similarly, where a lessor altered its building by installing tile and plaster partitions for a new tenant, the life of the improvement was controlling.ⁿ³

In the case of ACRS property, the cost of improvements must be recovered over the applicable "recovery period," rather than the lease term.ⁿ⁴

[b] Lessor's Recovery of the Cost of Improvements

[i] Depreciation and ACRS Deductions--In General

In the case of buildings and other real property improvements placed in service before 1981, a lessor is allowed as a depreciation deduction a reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear and tear, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence. The property must be held for the production of income or used in a trade or business.ⁿ⁵ Land is not subject to an allowance for depreciation because it is not subject to exhaustion or wear or tear.ⁿ⁶

In essence, depreciation of property placed in service before 1981 is calculated by assigning the property an expected useful life, and then deducting the property's cost, less its salvage value, over that life through the use of one of several accounting methods.ⁿ⁷ Frequent conflicts between taxpayers and the Service over the expected useful life of property were a catalyst for the creation of the Accelerated Cost Recovery System.

Under the ACRS, the cost of "recovery property" placed in service after 1980 is deducted over a pre-established time period (known as a "recovery period"), rather than the taxpayer's estimated useful life for that property.ⁿ⁸ The property is placed into one of several general categories or classifications, based upon its useful life under the guideline class to which it is assigned by the Service.ⁿ⁹ Deductions allowed for the property are taken in accordance with statutorily prescribed methods.ⁿ¹⁰ At the completion of the specified period--e.g., 27.5 years for residential rental property, using a straight line method--the deductions will total the original basis of the property.ⁿ¹¹ Salvage value is not considered.ⁿ¹²

[ii] ACRS Rules for Real Property Placed in Service After 1986

The cost recovery allowance for real property is determined by using the applicable depreciation method, recovery period and convention.ⁿ¹³ Most depreciable real property falls within the categories of (1) residential rental property or (2) nonresidential real property. The applicable depreciation method for both categories is the straight line method.ⁿ¹⁴ The recovery periods for residential rental property and nonresidential real property are 27.5 years and 39 years, respectively.ⁿ¹⁵

In the case of both residential rental property and nonresidential real property, the applicable convention is the mid-month convention. Thus, real property placed in service or disposed of by a taxpayer during any month is treated as having been placed in service or disposed of in the middle of that month.ⁿ¹⁶

Under an alternative depreciation system, a taxpayer may elect, on a building-by-building basis, a longer, 40-year recovery period for residential rental property or nonresidential real property. This alternative system utilizes the straight line method without regard to salvage value.ⁿ¹⁷

A building or structure is residential rental property for the tax year if 80 percent or more of the gross rental income from it for the tax year is rental income from dwelling units. If any part of such building or structure is occupied by the taxpayer, gross rental income includes the rental value of the portion so occupied. A dwelling unit is a house or apartment used to provide living accommodations in a building or structure, but does not include a unit in a hotel, motel, inn or other establishment if more than half of its units are used on a transient basis.ⁿ¹⁸

Nonresidential real property is IRC Section 1250 property (i.e., depreciable real property) that is neither residential rental property nor property with a class life of less than 27.5 years.ⁿ¹⁹

The cost recovery for any addition to or improvement of property is computed in the same manner in which the deduction for the underlying property would be computed if such underlying property were placed in service at the same time as the addition or improvement. The applicable recovery period for the addition or improvement begins on the later of (1) the date on which the addition or improvement is placed in service; or (2) the date on which the underlying property is placed in service.ⁿ²⁰

Example:

An extra story is added in 1989 to a leased office building which was initially placed in service in 1987. The building is classified as nonresidential real property. The cost of the addition is recovered over 31.5 years, using the straight-line method. This is the same recovery period and method that would apply to the building if it had been placed in service in 1989.

Note that the recovery period for the new story commences to run on the date (in 1989) when the story was placed in service, rather than on the earlier date (in 1987) when the office building itself was placed in service.

[iii] ACRS Rules for Real Property Placed in Service from 1981-1986

Different ACRS rules are in effect for recovery property placed in service from 1981-1986. Generally speaking, under these rules, the capital cost of the property is recovered by either an accelerated or straight line method over predetermined periods generally unrelated to, but shorter than, the property's useful life.ⁿ²¹ "Recovery property" is defined here as tangible property which is subject to the depreciation allowance and is used in a trade or business, or is held for the production of income.ⁿ²²

Several classes of recovery property are distinguished by the number of years over which cost recovery deductions may be taken with respect to the property in each class.ⁿ²³ At the completion of the period, the deductions should equal the original basis of the property. Salvage value is not considered in determining the allowable deductions.ⁿ²⁴

Most real property falls within a class which describes its recovery period. Initially, this was "15-year real property," later extended to "18-year real property," and then finally extended to "19-year real property." In addition, other classes for which real property could qualify included "10-year property" and "low-income housing."ⁿ²⁵

Alternatively, a taxpayer could have elected to recover the cost of recovery property over a period longer than that described above, using a straight line method. Thus, for 15-, 18-, or 19-year real property, the electable periods were 15, 18, 19 (respectively), 35 or 45 years.ⁿ²⁶

The accelerated cost recovery allowance for 15-, 18- or 19-year real property is based on the 15-, 18- or 19-year recovery period, using a method similar to the 175 percent declining balance, and switching to a straight line method in later years to maximize the allowable deduction.ⁿ²⁷

The recovery method for a building is also used for any of the building's components which is IRC Section 1250 property. The recovery period for such component begins on the later of the dates on which the component, or the building, is placed in service.ⁿ²⁸ However, a "substantial improvement" to a building is eligible for a cost recovery method other than the one used for the building itself. In other words, the improvement is treated as a separate building.ⁿ²⁹ The improvement is substantial only if: (1) it was made more than three years after the building was placed in service; and (2) it added to the capital account of the building within a 24-month period an amount equal to, or in excess of, 25 percent of the building's adjusted basis as of the first day of the 24-month period.ⁿ³⁰

Planning Note

Availability of depreciation deduction to assignee of leasehold where lessee-assignor has made improvements to property. Where a lessee erects at his own cost a building on the leased premises, and then assigns his entire interest in the improved realty to a third party for a stipulated sum and for the assignee's agreement to pay all future rents owed to the lessor, the assignee's investment in such interest represents a "capital investment in the building of the same nature as that of the original lessee..." Hence, the sum paid for the assignment is treated as having been paid for the improvements, and the assignee is entitled to recover his investment through depreciation deductions.

It should be noted, however, that where the rental value of the leased land has risen since the execution of the lease, part of the sum paid by the assignee constitutes consideration for the increased rental value and is treated as a leasehold acquisition cost. As such, this part of the sum must be amortized over the remaining period of the lease. The rest of the sum paid by the assignee is deductible as depreciation.ⁿ³¹

§ 23.08 Demolition of Structures

When a structure is demolished, neither the owner nor lessee of such structure is allowed a deduction for (1) any amount expended for the demolition; or (2) any loss sustained because of the demolition.ⁿ¹ Rather, these amounts are chargeable to the capital account with respect to the land on which the demolished structure was located.ⁿ²

If a lessor or lessee of real property demolishes buildings situated thereon pursuant to a lease or an agreement which resulted in a lease, the adjusted basis of the demolished buildings--increased by the net cost of demolition, or decreased by the net proceeds from demolition--is considered to be part of the cost of the lease and is amortized over the lease term.ⁿ³

Planning Note

Demolition of certified historic structure. For demolitions beginning after 1983, costs and losses incurred in the demolition of "certified historic structures" must be added to the basis of the land on which the demolished structures were located, rather than claimed as a current deduction. (Previously, such costs were currently deductible, unless the structure and the property on which it was located were purchased with the intent to demolish the building.) A certified historic structure is a building that is certified by the Secretary of the Interior as having historic significance and that meets certain other requirements.ⁿ⁴

§ 23.09 Lessee's Costs of Repairs, Replacements and Restoration

[1] Maintenance and Repairs

Expenses that the lessee incurs in maintaining and repairing leased premises, either voluntarily or pursuant to his lease, are currently deductible business expenses.ⁿ¹

The issue frequently arises as to whether a particular expenditure by a lessee is a currently deductible expense or an improvement which must be capitalized.ⁿ² The Regulations provide that the cost of incidental repairs which neither materially add to the value of the property nor appreciably prolong its life, but keep it in ordinarily efficient operating condition, may be currently deducted.ⁿ³ Illustratively, such incidental repairs might include caulking a window or door, repairing a leaking faucet, patching small holes and cracks in walls, etc.

As a general rule, if the lessee's expenditure results in the creation of an asset having a useful life which extends beyond one year, such expenditure is not currently deductible.ⁿ⁴ It should be noted, however, that one federal appeals court has held that "in deciding whether particular costs are capital or current... the length of the ensuing benefit is but one factor under consideration."ⁿ⁵ Similarly, the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit has stated that the so-called "one-year rule" is intended to serve as a "mere guidepost," and not as an absolute rule requiring the automatic capitalization of every expenditure providing a benefit enduring for more than one year.ⁿ⁶ Thus, the expense incurred in repairing a broken windowpane, a damaged lock or door, or even a periodic repainting of an entire building, may well be treated as a deductible repair expenditure, even though the benefits endure quite beyond one year.ⁿ⁷

[2] Replacements and Restoration

Where the lease requires the lessee to maintain the premises at an established standard by making replacements, the cost of such replacements is a currently deductible business expense for the lessee, even if a replacement has a useful life of more than one year. However, the replacement must not provide the lessee with an economic benefit beyond that of the premises which he leased.ⁿ¹

For example, in Journal-Tribune Publishing Company v. Commissioner, the lessee-newspaper company was required under its lease to maintain the property at an established level. The court held that the lessee could currently deduct as a business expense the cost of a printing press which it had bought to replace the lessor's worn out press, even though the new press had a useful life of more than a year.ⁿ²

Where the lessee's expenditures for the replacement of furnishings and equipment having a useful life of more than a year are not required under the lease, such expenditures are capital in nature and are not currently deductible.ⁿ³

A lessee's payment to the lessor in satisfaction of the latter's obligation to restore the leased premises to their original state is a currently deductible expense. The payment may either be made at the end of the lease term or earlier.ⁿ⁴ However, a lessee may not claim a deduction based upon the estimated cost of making required restorations at a future time when the lease expires.ⁿ⁵

With regard to the lessor, where the lessee is merely obligated "to keep the property in good repair..." the lessor is nonetheless entitled to deductions for depreciation of his buildings and equipment, including obsolescence.ⁿ⁶ By contrast, no depreciation deductions are allowed to a lessor where his lessee is required to actually replace the property at the expiration of the lease term with other property of "equal value." The deductions are prohibited here because the lessor does not have a wasting asset.ⁿ⁷

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.10

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.10 Lessor's Costs in Managing and Maintaining Rental Property

A taxpayer engaged in the business of dealing in real estate is entitled to a deduction for all ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the tax year in carrying on the business.ⁿ¹ Deductible expenses include those expenditures connected with and pertaining to buying, selling and trading in real estate, renting real estate and collecting rentals from it, and managing and maintaining such property.ⁿ²

Similarly, a taxpayer who owns and invests in rental property, but is not a real estate dealer, is likewise entitled to a deduction for all ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in managing and maintaining the property and collecting rents.ⁿ³ The following are some of the major expenses deductible by lessors:

- (1) maintenance and repairs;ⁿ⁴
- (2) custodial services;ⁿ⁵
- (3) insurance premiums against fire, storm, theft, accident or similar losses;ⁿ⁶
- (4) state and local real property taxes;ⁿ⁷
- (5) mortgage interest;ⁿ⁸
- (6) water rent;ⁿ⁹
- (7) maintaining an office for the management of rental property;ⁿ¹⁰
- (8) legal fees paid to bring suit against a real estate agent to obtain an accounting;ⁿ¹¹
- (9) commissions paid for collecting rent and managing rental property;ⁿ¹² and

(10) legal fees paid in the collection of rent.ⁿ¹³

A taxpayer who uses real property solely as his residence may not deduct the cost of repairs, utilities, water, depreciation and insurance.ⁿ¹⁴ Such expenses are also nondeductible where the property is used by the taxpayer's relatives without the payment of rent.ⁿ¹⁵ It should be noted, however, that state and local real property taxes are deductible regardless of whether the property is used in a trade or business or for the production of income.ⁿ¹⁶ Residential mortgage interest is likewise deductible, subject to limitations on the amount of the underlying mortgage indebtedness and other restrictions.ⁿ¹⁷

The owner of real property who formerly used it as his residence may convert it to rental use and thereafter deduct ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in connection with the management, conservation or maintenance of the property.ⁿ¹⁸ Generally, to claim the deductions, the owner must (1) cease using the property as his residence; and (2) either attempt to rent the propertyⁿ¹⁹ or list it for rent or sale with a broker.ⁿ²⁰ The expenses remain deductible even where the owner is never able to rent or sell the property.ⁿ²¹

Where the owner ceases using the property as his residence and lists it for sale (but not for rent), he is not automatically permitted to deduct depreciation, repairs, maintenance and utilities. Rather, the owner must hold the property until such time as its value exceeds both (1) his investment in the property (i.e., his cost or basis); and (2) the property's value at the time that he ceased using it as his residence. The Tax Court has stated that the placing of the property on the market for immediate sale, at or shortly after the time of its abandonment as a residence, will ordinarily be strong evidence that a taxpayer is not holding the property for post-conversion appreciation in value.ⁿ²²

Where the owner of real property converts his residence into rental property, the basis for depreciation is the lower of (1) the property's fair market value on the date of conversion; or (2) the adjusted basis of the property at that time.ⁿ²³

Planning Note

Taxpayer who abandons residence may not deduct rent paid for alternate abode. Rent paid for temporary living quarters is not deductible, even though the taxpayer incurs this expense in order to lease his own residence at a high rental. The rent paid for the temporary quarters is not an expense incurred in the production of income; rather, it is a nondeductible family living expense.
ⁿ²⁴

Holding cooperative apartment for sale or rent. The owner of a cooperative apartment who vacates the premises and lists it with a broker for sale or rental may deduct maintenance payments which he makes on the cooperative prior to its sale or rental. Such payments are treated as an ordinary and necessary expense incurred in the production of income. ⁿ²⁵

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.11

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.11 Cost of Cancelling, Extending or Renewing Lease

[1] Costs to Lessee

A lessee who pays for the cancellation of his lease may deduct the payment as a current business expense.ⁿ¹ The deduction is taken for the year in which the amount is actually paid or accrued, depending upon the lessee's method of accounting.ⁿ²

However, if the lessee purchases the leased property, no part of the purchase price is looked upon as a deductible cancellation fee, even if part of the price is directly attributable to the lessee's relief from the lease. Rather, the purchase price is an amortizable capital expenditure.ⁿ³

If a lease cancellation occurs, the lessee may deduct any unamortized cost of the lease in the year of cancellation.ⁿ⁴ However, if a lease is cancelled and the lessee executes a new lease of the same premises, any unrecovered cost of the old lease is added to the cost of acquiring the new one. The total is then deducted over the life of the new lease.ⁿ⁵

Where a lessee pays for an extension or renewal of the lease, the payment is, in effect, a lease acquisition cost. The payment, therefore, is not currently deductible; instead, it is amortized over the life of the extended or renewed lease.ⁿ⁶ Similarly, where a lessee obtains a lease modification through the payment of additional "rent" during any part of the lease term, the payments are capital expenditures amortizable over the full term of the lease.ⁿ⁷

As far as the lessor is concerned, payments received to cancel a lease are taxable as ordinary income in the year of receipt.ⁿ⁸ The cancellation payment is not a return of capital to the lessor.ⁿ⁹

While the cancellation payment is itself ordinary income to the lessor, any expenses that the lessor incurs on cancellation (e.g., attorneys' fees, court costs, etc.) may be deducted from the amount received.ⁿ¹⁰

Like cancellation payments, amounts that a lessor receives as consideration for the modification of a lease are a substitute for rental income and includable in gross income.

Example:

A lessor leased a tract of land for a period of 99 years. Shortly thereafter, the lessees assigned their interest in the lease to a third party. The lessor consented to the assignment and received $7,500 from the lessees as consideration for the modification of the lease. The lessor reported $7,500 on his tax return as a long-term capital gain. The Tax Court held that the payment of $7,500 was a substitute for some of the income which the taxpayer might otherwise have received in rent. Hence, it represented ordinary income and not capital gain.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Costs to Lessor

A payment made by a lessor to obtain the cancellation of his tenant's lease constitutes the cost of a property right and is not a currently deductible expense. Generally speaking, the payment must be amortized over the remaining life of the cancelled lease.ⁿ¹

However, if the purpose of cancelling the lease is to enable the lessor to lease the property to a new tenant, the cancellation cost must be amortized over the period of the new lease.ⁿ² In addition, if the lessor seeks a cancellation in order to erect a new building for another tenant, the cancellation payment is part of the cost of the new building and is amortized over the useful life of the structure.ⁿ³ And if the cancellation payment is made in order to sell the property, the amount is added to the lessor's cost of the property.ⁿ⁴

The cancellation payment received by a lessee is taxable in the year of receipt, whether he is on the cash or accrual basis.ⁿ⁵ Amounts received by a lessee for the cancellation of a lease are considered amounts received in exchange for the lease, and thus are subject to capital gain treatment if the lease is a capital asset. This rule applies to leases of both real and personal property.ⁿ⁶ It also applies to a payment made in good faith for a partial cancellation of a lease if the cancellation relates to a severable economic unit, such as a portion of the premises covered by the lease or a reduction in the unexpired term of the lease.ⁿ⁷

Planning Note

Lease cancellation fee paid by lessor to demolish building and erect addition to plant. Where a lessor pays a lease cancellation fee in order to demolish an existing building on the land and erect an addition to his plant, the payment is a capital expenditure. It can neither be deducted as a business expense nor amortized over the remaining life of the lease. However, the Tax Court has expressly left open the question of whether the payment may be allocated to the land or to the plant addition.ⁿ⁸

Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.12

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.12 Lease Agreements Between Related Parties

As previously noted, rentals or other payments made for the purpose of carrying on a trade or business are deductible. The Code does not limit deductions for rental payments to a "reasonable allowance." Nonetheless, the Service and the courts may examine the facts relating to such payments for the purpose of determining their true character, and may disallow deductions claimed as rent in certain circumstances, if the payments are excessive or unreasonable.ⁿ¹

The initial inquiry focuses on whether a lease has been entered into between related parties. The mere existence of a close relationship between lessor and lessee--e.g., one family member paying rent to another--will not automatically preclude a rent deduction.ⁿ² However, where such a relationship does exist, the next question is whether the rent is in excess of what the lessee would have paid had he dealt at arm's length with a stranger.ⁿ³ The objective is to prevent the shifting of income and expenses, purely for tax purposes, to a party who is not entitled to them.

Example:

A taxpayer rented, from his wife, property used in the manufacturing business which he operated as a sole proprietor and for which he paid a fixed rental of $200 per month. During the fifth year of the lease, the taxpayer decided on his own to enter into an agreement with his wife in order to pay an increased rental of 45 percent of his net profits. Accordingly, during the fifth year and for five months of the following year, he paid sums that were ten to 30 times larger than the earlier, fixed rental. The Tax Court held that for the fifth year and the additional five months, the taxpayer was entitled to a total rent deduction of $3,400 ($200 x 17 months). All sums in excess of that amount were not "required" rental payments.ⁿ⁴

As the example illustrates, not only are fixed, periodic payments subject to scrutiny when their amount appears unreasonable; payments based on a percentage of profits or gross receipts may also be examined.ⁿ⁵ In Brown Printing Company v. Commissioner, the lessor and lessee entered into a percentage arrangement which resulted in extremely high rent during the first two years of a ten-year lease. Nonetheless, the rent deduction was not disallowed because the lease provisions were fair at the time the lease was executed.ⁿ⁶

Deductions for rental payments are not completely disallowed when found to be excessive or unreasonable. Rather, the Service will adjust the deduction downward so that it reflects a reasonable rental payment.ⁿ⁷ The deduction will not be disturbed as long as the rent paid is "reasonable and fair... such that unrelated parties dealing at arm's-length would have entered into a similar rental agreement."ⁿ⁸

In determining whether rental payments are "reasonable and fair," the Service and the courts carefully examine the facts and circumstances surrounding the rental to glean the intentions of the parties in agreeing upon the lease and fixing the rent.ⁿ⁹ In addition, the rental cost of comparable property in the general vicinity of the leased premises is given serious consideration. To establish such cost, testimony may be introduced from experts in the real estate business who are familiar with the area surrounding the leased premises.ⁿ¹⁰ Where evidence of the rental cost of comparable property is unavailable, a taxpayer may demonstrate that the rent under his lease is reasonable and fair by comparing it against the costs of ownership, and adding a fair profit percentage.ⁿ¹¹

As in the case of lease agreements between family members, a lease executed by a corporation and its shareholder is subject to close scrutiny. For example, if shareholders lease real estate to their corporation, rental payments may actually be dividends in disguise (known as "constructive dividends"). By cloaking the dividends as rental payments, the corporation obtains a tax deduction; dividend payments, on the other hand, are not deductible. Accordingly, where all or part of the rent paid is actually a constructive dividend, the corporate-lessee's rent deduction is disallowed in an equal amount, and the disallowed payments are treated as nondeductible dividend distributions.

Example 1:

The majority stockholder of a corporation, along with his wife, owned all of the stock of the company, except for certain qualifying shares. He also owned real estate which he purchased for $50,700 and immediately rented to the corporation for $18,000 per year. The Service disallowed a deduction for a portion of the payments made by the corporation and designated as rent. The Tax Court stated that it is entitled to inquire as to what part, if any, of a disallowed amount is a dividend disbursement. It held that $9,600 of the "rent" was a distribution of dividends to the principal shareholder and his wife.ⁿ¹²

Example 2:

An individual purchased all of the stock of a corporation for $150,000. He also bought land and buildings from the company for $18,000 and contemporaneously leased the property back to the company for a 12-year term and at a monthly rental cost of $1,350 (total annual payments: $16,200). The Tax Court held that to the extent that the company's rental deductions exceeded $3,000 in each of the years in issue, they were not allowable.ⁿ¹³

Planning Note

Compile proof that rental payments are reasonable at time lease is executed. When a lessor and lessee are related, the lessee should compile evidence at the very inception of the lease to prove that the rental payments are fair and reasonable. Practically speaking, there are two ways to establish the reasonableness of rental payments. The first way is through the use of an expert who can provide information about the average rental price of comparable property in the general vicinity of the leased premises. (Acquiring a written appraisal of rental value from a real estate agent at the time when the lease is executed is a prudent measure.) The second way is through the use of materials, published by the government or private sector, on the cost of leasing real property in various areas of the country.

Repayment of excessive rent by shareholder to corporation. Where rental payments under a lease between a lessor-shareholder and a lessee-corporation are arguably excessive, the lease should contain a clause requiring the shareholder to repay the corporation any rent for which a deduction is subsequently disallowed. Such a clause will entitle the shareholder to claim a deduction on his own income tax return in the amount of the repayment. This deduction will offset the income which the shareholder reported earlier on his tax return when he received the excessive rent. n14

Rent disallowed as excessive may be treated as compensation paid by the lessee-corporation to the lessor-shareholder. Where a lessor-shareholder provides services to his lessee-corporation, a rental payment which is disallowed as excessive may be recharacterized as compensation paid to the shareholder for services rendered. Assuming the compensation is reasonable, the corporation will be able to retain its deduction of the payment. n15

Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.13

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.13 Renting Out Dwelling Units Used for Personal Purposes

If a taxpayer is engaged in the trade or business of renting dwelling units to others, all ordinary and necessary expenses that are paid or incurred in conducting such business are deductible. All of such expenses for managing, conserving, or maintaining property held for the production of income are also deductible.ⁿ¹ On the other hand, no deduction is generally allowed for personal, living, or family expenses, unless the Code expressly permits the same.ⁿ² Generally speaking, residential mortgage interest, property taxes, and casualty losses are expenses that are expressly deductible, even if personal in nature.ⁿ³ But no deduction is allowed for such items as depreciation, maintenance, insurance and utilities to the extent these items are attributable to personal use.ⁿ⁴

If business expenses attributable to a residence are deductible because it is rented to others, an opportunity exists to convert nondeductible personal expenses into deductible business expenses. This section is concerned with the limitations that are imposed on the deductibility of business expenses that are incurred when a taxpayer rents a dwelling unit to others, if the taxpayer also devotes such property to any personal purpose.

[1] Dwelling Units Subject to Rules

Dwelling units that are subject to the deduction limitation rules include houses, apartments, condominiums, mobile homes, boats or similar property. Hotels, motels, inns and similar establishments are not covered.ⁿ¹

[2] When Neither Rental Income Nor Deductions Are Recognized

If a taxpayer uses a dwelling unit as his residence and the property is rented for less than 15 days during the taxable year, neither income nor expenses attributable to the rental of the property are recognized for federal income tax purposes for that year.ⁿ¹ Accordingly, one need not proceed further in the matter under such circumstances. However, the deduction limitation rules do not apply to those deductions that are allowed regardless of whether they are incurred in connection with the taxpayer's trade or business.ⁿ² Thus, residential mortgage interest, property taxes and casualty losses incurred with respect to the property are still deductible.ⁿ³

[3] Allocation of Rental Expenses--Limitation on Deductions

Deductions are limited for expenses attributable to renting out a dwelling unit if the taxpayer also uses such property for any personal purpose. The extent to which such expenses are deductible depends upon the extent to which the taxpayer also uses the property for personal purposes.

[a] Allocation Between Periods of Rental and Personal Use

If a taxpayer rents out a dwelling unit that he also uses for any personal purpose during the taxable year, such as a vacation home, an allocation of expenses must be made between rental and personal use. The purpose of this allocation is to determine the amount of expenses that are deductible because they are attributable to the rental activity (e.g., maintenance, utilities and depreciation). The allocation is made on the basis of the ratio that the number of days the property is actually rented during the taxable year, at a fair rental, bears to the total number of days during the year that it is used for all purposes. This allocation is required regardless of whether the property is used as the taxpayer's residence.ⁿ¹ However, there is no limitation on deductions for those expenses that are deductible regardless of whether the property is actually rented, such as mortgage interest and property taxes.ⁿ²

[b] Limitation on Deductions Attributable to Rental of Residence

As noted above, if a taxpayer rents out a dwelling unit that he also uses for any personal purpose, expenses attributable to the rental are deductible only to the extent they are allocable to the rental period. However, if the taxpayer rents out property that he also uses as his residence, a further limitation is placed on the deductibility of such expenses. Under such circumstances, the deduction may not exceed the gross income derived from the property's rental, less the amount of otherwise allowable deductions that are incurred with respect to the property regardless of the purpose for which it is used. This includes mortgage interest, taxes, and any casualty losses. Rental expenses in excess of such limitation may be carried over to the next taxable year.ⁿ³ As previously noted, if the taxpayer rents out his residence for less than 15 days during the year, neither income nor expenses attributable to such rental are recognized for federal income tax purposes.

[4] When Property Is Used for Personal Purposes or as Residence[a] When Property Is Deemed Used for Personal Purposes

As a basic starting point, a taxpayer is deemed to use property for personal purposes on any day if, for any part of that day, it is used:

- (1) for personal purposes by the taxpayer or any other person who has an interest in the property, or any of their respective family members;
- (2) by anyone under an arrangement that lets the taxpayer use another dwelling unit, regardless of whether rental is charged for such other property; or
- (3) by anyone, except for a rental which is fair under all of the facts and circumstances.ⁿ¹

For the purpose of the above rules, "family members" consist only of brothers and sisters (whole or half blood), a spouse, ancestors and lineal descendants.ⁿ² The above rules are subject to certain exceptions in their application, however. A taxpayer is not deemed to use property for personal purposes if he rents it at a fair rental to any person for use as such person's principal residence. Also, the above rules do not apply if the taxpayer rents the dwelling unit under a "shared equity financing agreement" to someone who has an interest in the property.ⁿ³

A shared equity financing agreement is between two or more persons, each of whom has an undivided ownership interest in the property. Under the agreement, one of the co-owners must be entitled to occupy the property for use as a principal residence provided that he pays a fair rental to one or more of the other co-owners. Whether the rental is fair is determined at the time the agreement is entered into and by taking into account the occupant's co-ownership interest.ⁿ⁴

It is clear from the above rules that a taxpayer could be deemed to use a dwelling unit for personal purposes although he never physically occupies the property.

[b] When Property Is Deemed Used as Residence

For purposes of the deduction limitation rules, whether a dwelling unit is considered a taxpayer's residence depends upon the extent to which he uses the property for personal purposes. A dwelling unit is deemed to be a taxpayer's residence for any taxable year if he uses the property for personal purposes during that year for more than the greater of 14 days, or for more than 10 percent of the number of days that the property is rented at a fair rental. However, the property is not considered to be rented at a fair rental for any day for which it is used for personal purposes.ⁿ⁵

Just as in the case where a taxpayer may be deemed to use a dwelling unit for personal purposes, although he may have never physically occupied the same, the property may also be deemed to be the taxpayer's residence without his ever having occupied it, because the determination is made based upon the extent to which it is used for the taxpayer's personal purposes.

[5] Order in Which Deductions Are Made

If a taxpayer rents out a dwelling unit which he also uses for personal purposes, expenditures to obtain tenants for the property, such as realtor's fees and advertising expenses, are deducted from gross rental receipts in order to arrive at gross rental income. Thereafter, rental expenses are deducted in the following order of categories:

- (1) deductions allowable without regard to the rental use of the property, such as mortgage interest and real estate taxes, but only to the extent of gross rental income from the property;
- (2) deductions allowable by reason of the rental use of the property (other than those that would result in an adjustment to the property's basis, such as depreciation), but only to the extent of gross income remaining after the deductions in (1), above; and
- (3) deductions allowable by reason of the rental use of the property that would result in an adjustment to the property's basis, e.g., depreciation, but only to the extent of gross income remaining after the deductions in (1) and (2), above.ⁿ¹

The manner in which all of the above rules are applied may be illustrated by the following example:ⁿ²

Example:

Bob owns a lakeside home which he rents at a fair rental of $25 a day for 90 days during the taxable year. He rents the property to a friend at a discount rental of $15 a day for 10 days, and also uses it for personal purposes on 20 other days during that year. Thus, the home is used for some purpose on 120 days during the taxable year, and the rental allocation fraction may not exceed 90/120. Bob incurred advertising and realtor's fees of $200, mortgage interest of $1,000, real estate taxes of $800, insurance of $400, utilities of $600 and depreciation of $1,500. The allocations and deductions are as follows:

[6] Rental Deductions Where Leased Property Is Not Taxpayer's Residence

If a taxpayer does not use the dwelling unit as a residence, and the rental use is not an activity from which the taxpayer expects to make a profit, the rental expense deduction is limited to rental income and is deductible in the same order described above, just as in the case where the property is used as a residence. If the rental activity results in a profit for three or more years in a period of five consecutive years, it is presumed to be for profit. If the facts reflect that rental of the property is an activity from which the taxpayer expects to make a profit, deductible rental expenses are not limited to rental income derived from the property.ⁿ¹

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.14

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.14 Lease or Sale of Property?

[1] Distinction Between Sale and Lease

A lessee is allowed a deduction for rental payments made for the use or possession, in a trade or business, of property to which he "has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity."ⁿ¹ Thus, if so-called "rental payments" are, in reality, periodic payments toward the purchase price of the leased property, no deduction is allowed.ⁿ² The rationale is that under a conditional sales contract, the lessee-purchaser is gradually taking title to the property; with each payment, his equity interest in the property increases.ⁿ³

For income tax purposes, a "sale" is generally defined as a transfer of property for money or a promise to pay money.ⁿ⁴ The determination of whether a transaction is a sale or a lease is a question of fact to be ascertained from the intent of the parties. That intent finds its primary expression in the written agreement, which must be read in light of the attending facts and circumstances existing at the time the agreement was executed.ⁿ⁵

The following are some of the factors considered by the courts and the Service in determining whether the parties intended the agreement to be a sale or a lease:

- (1) whether legal title passes;ⁿ⁶
- (2) how the parties treat the transaction;ⁿ⁷
- (3) whether an equity was acquired in the property;ⁿ⁸
- (4) whether the contract creates a present obligation of the seller to execute and deliver a deed, and a present obligation of the purchaser to make payments;ⁿ⁹
- (5) whether the right of possession is vested in the purchaser;ⁿ¹⁰

- (6) which party pays the property taxes;n11
- (7) which party bears the risk of loss or damage to the property;n12
- (8) which party receives the profit from the operation and sale of the property;n13
- (9) whether the agreed "rental" payments materially exceed the current fair rental value (a possible indication that the payments include an element other than compensation for use of the property);n14
- (10) whether some portion of the periodic payments is specifically designated as interest or is otherwise readily recognizable as the equivalent of interest;n15
- (11) whether portions of the periodic payments are made specifically applicable to an equity to be acquired by the lessee;n16
- (12) whether the lessee will acquire title upon the payment of a stated amount of "rentals" which he is required to make under the contract;n17 and
- (13) whether the total amount which the lessee is required to pay for a relatively short period of use constitutes an inordinately large proportion of the total sum required to be paid to secure the transfer of title.n18

Example 1:

A husband and wife entered into agreements in the form of a lease and an option to purchase a parcel of land to be used in their farming and ranching business. Under the agreement, they were to pay $10,000 for the first year and $12,000 for the second as "rent," and another $2,000 for the option to purchase the property thereafter for $24,000. A fair and reasonable rental for the property would have ranged from $3,000 to $4,000 per year. Two years before the agreements were executed, the lessor had purchased the land for $40,000. The Service disallowed the deduction of the so-called rental payment on the ground that it did not qualify as a rental expense. The Tax Court upheld the disallowance, noting that the payments were excessive in relation to the current fair rental value of the property, and that the taxpayers intended to and did acquire an equity in the property.n19

Example 2:

A taxpayer entered into a 10-year "lease" agreement under which it promised to pay rent of $160 per month (total: $19,200) for certain real property. The agreement also provided that upon payment of the full $19,500, the lessors would automatically convey the property to the taxpayer. The Court held that amounts paid as "rent" by the taxpayer were not deductible; rather, they were installment payments of the purchase price of $19,500.n20

Example 3:

A textile producer acquired new mill machinery under agreements referred to as leases. Under the agreements, it was required to make fixed monthly payments called rentals, to the manufacturers for about five years. The textile producer could then acquire title to the machinery by payment of a relatively small additional amount. As set forth in the correspondence, the amounts payable in monthly installments were computed to include five or six percent interest on the "principal," and interest tables were attached to the manufacturers' letters. The Tax Court held that the monthly amounts paid were not deductible as rentals because the textile producer thereby acquired an equity interest in the machinery.n21

[2] The Lease-Option

A "lease-option," known also as a "purchase option," is a lease under which the lessee has the right to purchase the leased property at some future time. The lease-option is a common business arrangement which is difficult to classify as either a sale or a rental agreement. Often the rental payments are applicable against the selling price, if and when the option is exercised. The basic question, therefore, is whether a sale is to be recognized before the formal exercise of the option. Depending upon the factual circumstances, the pre-exercise payments may be either sale proceeds or deductible rental payments.

Where a lease agreement provides the lessee with an option to purchase the property in the future, the issue of whether the agreement is a true lease or a conditional sales transaction depends upon the intent of the parties.ⁿ¹ That intent is ascertained from the provisions of the agreement, read in light of the facts and circumstances existing at the time the agreement was executed.ⁿ²

As a general rule, where the lessee has the option to purchase the leased property at a price reduced by rent previously paid, the rent due before exercise of the option is ordinary income to the lessor and a deductible expense to the lessee.ⁿ³ The amount due after exercise of the option is the selling price of the property. The lessor may not defer the reporting of rental income until he ascertains that the option will not be exercised.ⁿ⁴

A number of exceptions to this general rule exist. First, where the option price is relatively small when compared to the total "rental" payments that are required to be made, or where the option price is far less than the anticipated value of the property when the option is exercised, the "rent" is probably part of the selling price.ⁿ⁵

Second, a sale will be recognized where the total rentals, plus any option price, approximates the price for which the property could have been purchased at the time the agreement was executed, plus interest and carrying charges.ⁿ⁶

Third, a sale may be presumed where the rent is payable over a short part of the property's expected useful life, and the lessee may continue to use the property for approximately the remaining useful life through nominal payments, even though the agreement does not expressly pass title.ⁿ⁷

Planning Note

Other tax consequences to parties where lease agreement is found to be sale. Where a so-called "lease" agreement is found to be a sale, the "lessee-buyer" may not deduct his periodic payments as rental expenses, but he may take a depreciation deduction.ⁿ⁸ In addition, the interest component of the periodic payments is deductible.ⁿ⁹

As for the "lessor-seller," he is not required to report the periodic payments which he receives as rental income. Rather, they are considered payments on the sale price of the property to the extent that they do not represent interest or other charges.ⁿ¹⁰ Thus, the lessor-seller must report the interest component as income.ⁿ¹¹ In addition, he must report any gain realized on the sale.ⁿ¹²

Part I. The Tax Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.15

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.15 Sale-Leaseback Transactions

[1] In General

In a sale-leaseback transaction, the initial property owner sells it and then immediately leases it back from the new owner (the "purchaser-lessor"). Ideally, the rent payments are sufficient to pay all liabilities and costs that the new owner incurs in acquiring and owning the property. All such costs, previously paid by the initial owner, are then paid to the new owner in the form of rent. Usually, the lease is made for a long-term, often with renewal options.

A sale-leaseback has important tax and financial advantages for both the seller-lessee and the purchaser-lessor. These advantages may be lost, however, if the Service successfully challenges the substance of the transaction. A principal legal issue in a sale and leaseback transaction, in tax and other areas of law, is whether the transaction, in substance, is a true sale and leaseback or simply a loan or other long-term financing arrangement. Moreover, the advantages of a sale-leaseback to the purchaser-lessor may be disadvantageous to the seller-lessee; conversely, advantageous consequences for the seller-lessee may result in detrimental consequences for the purchaser-lessor.

[2] Financial Advantages and Disadvantages

[a] To Seller-Lessee

From a financing perspective, a sale-leaseback permits the initial owner to obtain funds equal to the market value of the property, in contrast to an alternative mortgage loan which is usually limited to a lower percentage (usually 80 percent or less) of the value. The financing technique is especially valuable in a tight-money market, where funds are not readily available or are subject to high borrowing rates. Also, funds obtained through a sale-leaseback do not carry the restrictions on company activities often imposed by capital financing loan documents.

The seller, as a tenant, may deduct his rental payments, which are often greater than the deductions for depreciation and mortgage interest available to him as an owner. If a substantial portion of the value of property is allocable to the land (which is not depreciable) or to substantially depreciated assets, the deductions as a lessee are even more likely to be greater than those as an owner. However, loss of the depreciation deduction may, in some circumstances, outweigh any advantage from the deductible leaseback rent payments. In such cases, the sale and leaseback arrangement may not be advantageous for the initial owner.

Sale and leaseback arrangements sometimes include option clauses that give the seller-lessee the right to renew the lease or even to buy back the property. These options to renew or purchase should be carefully considered and structured, because they may subject the transaction to challenge by the Service on the ground that the parties are actually financing by mortgage loan rather than completing a bona fide sale.

[b] To Purchaser-Lessor

A major advantage to the purchaser-lessor of a sale-leaseback arrangement is that it may enable him to obtain a long-term tenant who has a special interest in remaining on the property and in making substantial improvements on it.ⁿ¹ The lease often provides for a net rental, which obligates the tenant to pay all carrying charges, such as taxes, insurance, and the like; the purpose is to give the new owner sufficient rental payments to pay the mortgage servicing charges (interest plus amortization) and a fair return on his investment. The entire rental, of course, is deductible by the tenant. The owner, on the other hand, has interest and cost recovery or depreciation deductions to set off against his rental income.

Also, under ideal circumstances, the new owner is able to acquire the property without having to make an equity investment. Moreover, the new owner's equity interest in the property increases as principal payments are made under the mortgage (which are funded by the rental payments).

[3] Tax Consequences

[a] Taxation of Seller-Lessee

In a sale-leaseback, the seller-lessee exchanges deductions of mortgage interest and depreciation for the deduction of rent. In addition, other expenses paid in the case of a net leaseback, such as insurance, taxes, maintenance, and repairs are deductible by the seller as additional rent payments.ⁿ¹ Even if the rent deduction does not exceed the former interest and depreciation deductions, other tax and financial considerations may still make the sale and leaseback desirable. Of course, a careful examination of all these factors is necessary.

The seller-lessee can determine the time of sale, thus timing the realization of gain or loss (the difference between the property's adjusted basis and the amount received).ⁿ² Gain may be realized on an appreciated asset in a year when net operating loss carryover would expire otherwise unused. The gain would thus be sheltered, while the net operating loss carryover would not be lost.

Any gain realized upon the sale is normally long-term in nature if the property has been held for the requisite holding period or if it qualifies as IRC Section 1231 trade or business property.ⁿ³ If, however, the property is subject to depreciation recapture, all or a portion of the gain, i.e., the recaptured amount, is taxed as ordinary income.ⁿ⁴ In that event, the ordinary income treatment may offset any advantages from the sale and leaseback arrangement. It should also be remembered that ordinary income treatment may result, to the extent of the gain, if the sale-leaseback is between related parties.ⁿ⁵ Moreover, if such a transaction between related parties results in a loss, the loss may be disallowed.ⁿ⁶

[b] Taxation of Purchaser-Lessor

The purchaser-lessor in a sale-leaseback reports rent as ordinary income.ⁿ⁷ This amount is offset to a certain extent by the cost recovery or depreciation deduction, which is available to the purchaser for business or income producing property acquired after 1980 (cost recovery) or before 1981 (depreciation).ⁿ⁸ If accelerated depreciation is available in the early years, the purchaser-lessor may not only receive the rent tax-free, but may also shelter some other income as well. Interest on the purchaser's purchase money mortgage is also a deductible offset against rental income.ⁿ⁹ It should be noted, however, that limitations are imposed on investment indebtedness interest.ⁿ¹⁰

[4] Service Challenges; Tax Classification Factors

The tax and financial advantages of a sale and leaseback may be lost in the event of a successful Service challenge of the substance of the transaction. This risk is greatly increased if there is an obvious tax avoidance scheme without a legitimate business purpose. Even in the absence of tax avoidance, the Service has successfully used other avenues of attack to invalidate what the parties intended as a sale and leaseback arrangement. The principal challenges, and the tax factors which the Service and courts have applied in sale-leaseback litigation, are discussed below.

[a] Financing Devices

Although the payments in a sale-leaseback arrangement are in the form of rent rather than principal and interest, a true sale-leaseback transaction contains various characteristics which show that it is not a long-term loan or other financing device in substance. For example, if the purported purchaser-lessor assumes the risk of loss of the property's value, has entered into the transaction for business or income producing purposes, and possesses other meaningful benefits and burdens of ownership, it is more likely that the transaction is in fact a true sale and leaseback, and not a financing device.ⁿ¹

Whether a transaction is a bona fide sale-leaseback or a financing arrangement in the form of a sale-leaseback depends upon the facts of each case. Some of the principal factors examined in deciding the issue include the economic substance of the transaction, business realities, and other tax-independent considerations not used solely for tax avoidance.ⁿ² The same and related factors are used to determine whether the sale-leaseback of equipment and other personal property is a true lease or merely a financing arrangement.ⁿ³

The landmark case dealing with sale-leaseback of real property is Frank Lyon Company v. United States,ⁿ⁴ in which the Supreme Court held that where there is a genuine multi-party transaction with economic substance which is compelled or encouraged by business or regulatory realities, is imbued with tax-independent considerations, and is not shaped solely by tax-avoidance features that have meaningless labels attached, the Service should honor the allocation of rights and duties effectuated by the parties. The purchaser-lessor in Lyon financed the purchase by paying cash and borrowing funds for which there was substantial personal liability. The Court held that the transaction was a bona fide sale-leaseback. Among the many factors the Court cited in support for its holding was the fact that there was a business purpose for the sale-leaseback. This was evidenced by the fact that state and federal regulations prohibited the lessee-bank from borrowing a sufficient amount to finance construction. In addition, investment diversification was the lessor's principal motive. The Court also noted that the depreciation deductions would have been equally available to the lessee-bank had it retained title. The lessee's option to purchase, though fixed, was for a reasonable amount, and the lessor bore the risk that the lessee would not exercise that option if the price was more than the fair market value of the property. The facts indicated that the lessor would realize an overall profit from the transaction independent of tax benefits if the lessee-bank exercised its option to purchase the leased property.ⁿ⁵

In a subsequent case, decided in the Tax Court, the fact that the lessor could not reasonably expect to show a profit from the transaction, without taking into consideration the tax benefits of depreciation, etc., was a significant factor in denying lease treatment to the transaction. Following the guidelines set forth in Lyon, above, the Court found that a financing corporation was organized for the purpose of buying land from a department store chain, constructing a building, and then leasing it back to the chain under a net lease. The lessee was treated as the owner, not the lessor. The Court reached this conclusion because the lessee's status vis-a-vis the property underwent no appreciable change when the sale and leaseback arrangement was made, the lessor made no investment in the project, financing had been obtained using the store's credit with rental payments being made by the lessee directly to the lender under the nonrecourse mortgage, and the corporation's ownership interest was marketed to individuals as a tax shelter. The Court found further that there was no economic foundation for their investment other than as a tax loss.ⁿ⁶

In another case, sale and leaseback status was denied because the transaction lacked economic substance. The interest and principal payments on a purchase money mortgage equaled the monthly rental payments, and the buyer-lessor granted to a related party of the seller-lessee an option to buy back the property at the end of the term for the same price it had sold for at the beginning of the term.ⁿ⁷

The above cases and rulings indicate that the Service is especially likely to recharacterize a transaction as a mortgage loan when the transaction looks like an alternative to conventional mortgage financing and the seller retains substantial control over the property. A purchase option in the leaseback for nominal consideration or for a price against which the rent is credited may cause the transaction to fail as a sale-leaseback. If the Service prevails, the seller would not be entitled to deduct the entire rental payments, but only that portion which would have been interest on the intended mortgage. The seller, not the buyer, would be entitled to the depreciation deduction. The income to the buyer would not include all the rent payments, but rather only that portion deemed to be interest on the hypothetical mortgage.ⁿ⁸

[b] Like-Kind Exchanges

No gain or loss is recognized under IRC Section 1031 where there is an exchange of "like-kind" property held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment.ⁿ⁹ The regulations provide that an ownership in fee and a 30-year lease are properties of "like-kind."ⁿ¹⁰ This provision has caused apparently conflicting decisions as to whether a sale with a leaseback for a period of 30 years or more will result in the recognition of loss to the seller, or rather will be treated as a nontaxable like-kind exchange in which no loss can be recognized. An examination of the cases indicates that the courts look primarily at two related factors when the Service seeks to deny loss to the seller by claiming that the transaction is a like-kind exchange: (1) whether fair market value was paid for the property in cash, without including the leaseback as part of the consideration; and (2) whether fair rental value was paid on the leaseback. If the sale was consummated for a fair market price and the rentals are at fair market value, the sale-leaseback will probably be upheld and the seller-lessee will be able to recognize its loss.ⁿ¹¹

Where the leaseback is for less than 30 years and the selling price represents fair market value, loss (or gain) on the sale is recognized by the Service. In such case, the transaction will not be treated as a like-kind exchange, even if the loss contains options permitting extensions beyond 30 years.ⁿ¹²

Planning Note

Structure sale-leaseback transaction to satisfy Lyon factors. In order to lessen the chances that the Service will challenge a sale-leaseback as a financing arrangement rather than a true sale-leaseback, the parties should make every effort to structure the transaction so that it satisfies all, or at least most, of the factors listed by the Supreme Court in Lyon. If that is done, the Service will probably not try to recharacterize the transaction as a loan or financing device, and the parties will receive the intended tax consequences.

§ 23.27 Introduction; Scope of Coverage

This practice background discusses the practical aspects of negotiating and drafting a lease agreement for commercial real estate. It includes strategies and techniques for negotiation for use by both the landlord and the tenant. There is a practical discussion of drafting leases, from identification of the parties through defaults and termination. This section includes a description of potential problems which the practitioner may encounter, as well as suggestions for avoiding and resolving such problems when they arise. The material should be useful for a variety of commercial leases, including office space, retail space, industrial sites, telecommunications sites, and recreational areas.

Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part II. The Practice Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.28

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.28 Preliminary Considerations and Negotiations

The preliminary negotiations for commercial leases frequently are performed by agents for the landlord and prospective tenant, rather than attorneys. These preliminary negotiations generally include the size of the space, the location of the space, and the basic rental amount; however, there is a great deal more to the lease than these basics. The practitioner should be involved in identifying additional items for negotiation and directing that negotiation either personally or through the agent. Many of the items which are commonly negotiated are set forth in the following sections in the discussions on drafting the contract.

Both the practitioner and the client should be fully aware of where the fiduciary obligation of the broker lies. Although the tenant may ostensibly have a broker "working" for him, if that broker's fee is paid by the landlord, the broker's obligation is to the landlord. The tenant may engage the broker and compensate him or her directly to change that fiduciary obligation.

[1] Finding the Right Space

In selecting space, location is the most important factor. The prospective tenant may need to consider whether the space is near mass transportation, for the convenience of its employees, customers and suppliers. In other situations, the tenant should consider the space's proximity to highways, or the adequacy of access roads and parking. Sometimes the condition of the neighborhood is important to the prospective tenant, or the adequacy of the water supply or other utilities. Because of the importance of telecommunications facilities for the efficient operation of the businesses of most tenants, the ability of the building to accommodate the telecommunication needs of the tenant is important. The tenant must make sure that the space is adequate in size for the conduct of its business, and may need to consider the possibility of future expansion.

Given equally desirable locations, the next consideration is monthly rent. Rent, of course, is negotiable, and many factors enter into the determination of the final dollar figure. The prospective tenant must compare the offered rent at multiple locations carefully, making sure to factor in such variables as how the space is measured, if the rent is based on a per square foot basis, which expenses will be paid directly by the tenant and which will be included in the rent, and what inducements, if any, the landlord is willing to offer to the prospective tenant to rent the space.

[2] Financial Reliability

Both the landlord and the tenant need to be concerned about each other's financial ability. The tenant wants to ensure that the landlord will be able to maintain services, the quality of tenants, and the appearance of the premises during a period of less than full occupancy. The landlord's failure to do so will affect the tenant's business adversely. In retail facilities, customers will stop shopping at dirty or unkempt malls. Professionals will receive comments from patients or clients regarding the condition of the building.

The landlord will want assurances that the tenant can afford to pay for the space and successfully operate its business. A landlord has a very significant investment in the space each time a tenant turns over. There is no rent during vacancy, there will be legal fees during an eviction, and there are advertising and broker's costs. In addition, there is the cost of refurbishing the space for a new tenant. Landlords are also concerned that a facility will get a reputation for housing failing businesses. Such a reputation may become a self-fulfilling prophecy. If the financial reliability of the tenant is questionable, there may be other ways to satisfy the concerns of the landlord such as by security deposits, personal guaranties, letters of credit or other forms of security discussed below.

[a] Bankruptcy

The filing of a petition in bankruptcy by either party can have serious consequences to the other. Under the Bankruptcy Code,ⁿ¹ the debtor's trustee can assume or reject executory contracts and unexpired leases. If the landlord is a debtor, the landlord's trustee may reject an unexpired lease, although the tenant may choose to remain in possession for the remainder of the lease term.ⁿ² If the tenant is a debtor, the tenant's trustee can reject an overmarket lease, and the landlord will have to choose between vacant space and a lower rent. It is often the case that the rent is somewhat over market because of concessions granted in the early years or months of the lease. In any case, in a bankruptcy, the non-filing party, especially the landlord, often loses a great deal of the consideration for which it bargained initially. A financial review can help a party to avoid a lease situation where a bankruptcy is a possibility.

[b] Financial References

Both parties should request three to five financial references. At least one reference should be a bank with whom the party has its business accounts. Another reference should be a vendor who provides supplies to the party's business on a regular basis. The third should be the tenant's existing landlord or an existing tenant of the landlord, respectively. Each party should be directed to contact the references in writing and to give each reference permission to release information.

All financial references should be questioned regarding the apparent ability of the party to pay in a timely fashion. The reference should be asked whether the party routinely pays bills and loans on time, what is the longest period for which the party was overdue, and the reason given for being overdue.

The landlord's reference from another tenant should be questioned regarding the landlord's provision of repairs and services. Were they provided in a timely manner with satisfactory quality labor and materials?

The tenant's reference from another landlord should be questioned regarding timely payment of rent and the condition of the premises. Did the tenant maintain the premises in an appropriate manner? Were tenant-required repairs made in a timely fashion?

It should be remembered that most people provide references that they believe will give favorable reports. If any of the inquiries produce information which leaves doubts about the financial security or ability of either party, further investigation is warranted. It is common for a landlord to require a tenant to provide a complete financial statement prior to execution of a lease. The landlord may request copies of prior years' tax returns. The landlord also may require the right to request additional financial statements in the future. This will afford a measure of continuing protection to the landlord, especially when considering lease renewal.

It would be very unusual for a landlord to be willing to provide a financial statement to a tenant. Often, the landlord owns more than one project. Older projects may be leveraged to acquire and develop new projects, so the financial statement of a particular project may not accurately reflect that project's income and expenses. Landlords are reluctant to share their profit information with a prospective tenant, for obvious reasons. Instead of a landlord's financial statement, a tenant is more likely to obtain provisions in the lease allowing the tenant to perform certain tasks normally required of the landlord if the landlord fails to perform after notice and passage of a specified period. The tenant would have the right to offset its reasonable costs against the rent. This would afford continuing protection to the tenant.

[3] Tenant Inducements

Depending upon the real estate market at a given place and time, the landlord may be willing to offer inducements to prospective tenants. Such possible inducements include rent abatements, construction allowances, lease takeovers, restrictive covenants and equity participation. The type and amount of inducements which the landlord will be willing to offer to any particular tenant will depend not only on the real estate market, but also on the tenant's size and importance to the landlord.

[a] Negotiating Tenant Inducements Generally

[i] Tenant's Perspective

Many factors may make a particular tenant desirable to a particular landlord. For example, if the tenant will be creating new jobs in the space, the tenant may be able to show the landlord that job development tax credits or low-cost loans may be available to the landlord because the tenant would be creating new jobs in the space. Similarly, a tenant may be able to use renovated space in a way which would qualify the landlord for historic tax credits.

In short, in negotiating tenant inducements, a tenant must demonstrate to the landlord that the tenant's value is such that the landlord will quickly recover the cost of whatever special considerations the landlord is asked to grant to the tenant. The tenant should take great care in preparing its presentation to the landlord and should include calculations of the benefits to the landlord. The tenant also can show the landlord incentives which are being offered to him at different sites.

[ii] Landlord's Perspective

In preparing to lease commercial space, the landlord should become fully familiar with the market, including the availability of other space and its location, the amounts of rent being charged, and the incentives being offered to tenants by other landlords. The landlord should know the relative benefits of its site in comparison to others, such as ease of access to highways, parking facilities, storage facilities, and amenities for employees and customers. If the prospective tenant is an anchor tenant, the landlord must ascertain the likelihood of obtaining another key tenant in the near future and the financial consequences of not having a key tenant. Once this information is assembled, the landlord and the tenant can negotiate for special considerations realistically.

[b] Anchor Tenants

In commercial buildings, there is often a key tenant for whom the space was built or who occupies the largest space. In retail space, such a tenant is often referred to as the "anchor" tenant. Hopefully, the anchor tenant will draw retail customers to the location who, once there, will shop in other stores as well. Such an anchor tenant may be a large grocery store, drug store, or department store.

Due to the size and ability of the anchor to draw customers, the key tenant is frequently given special considerations which are not offered to other, smaller tenants. These may include a reduction or elimination of common area charges, or a period with no monthly rent or reduced monthly rent. Such financial concessions are often used to induce a tenant to relocate by compensating for the expense and inconvenience of moving. The key tenant may be given additional construction upgrades which are not offered to other tenants.

In seeking these considerations, the key tenant must be prepared to demonstrate its importance to the landlord. This may be done with traffic studies showing the number of shoppers who visit the tenant's current site or other sites. Where the tenant is not engaged in a retail business, it may be able to convince the landlord that other, similar services will be drawn to the building due to the tenant's presence. For example, a large law office or accounting firm may be able to draw some of its own clients as tenants. A potential industrial park tenant that produces certain raw materials may be able to draw other tenants to the industrial park that use those materials to manufacture various finished products.

[c] Non-anchor Tenants

The landlord is less likely to offer non-anchor tenants special considerations which will result in direct payments by the landlord. Instead, the landlord may offer favorable terms for renewal of the lease, or a month or two of occupancy without the payment of rent.

Sometimes, a landlord may offer to assist with construction expenses, if the tenant uses the landlord's company to perform the work. Before accepting such an offer, the tenant should obtain detailed estimates from other construction contractors to be certain that this is truly a bargain.

Like the anchor tenant, the non-anchor tenant must show its importance to the landlord in order to encourage the landlord to give special incentives. This may be done by showing how the tenant's business complements existing tenants. The tenant may also exert some pressure by showing what incentives are available at other comparable locations.

The tenant must be aware that, unless there is an overabundance of the type of space the tenant is seeking, the landlord may not be willing to negotiate much. The landlord may be concerned that once he or she gives such an incentive to one tenant, all future tenants will seek a similar concession. If there is an abundance of space, the landlord may be more willing to give considerations to get a tenant in place.

[d] Rent Abatement

Rent abatement is a common form of tenant inducement. The landlord will permit the tenant to occupy the premises at a lower rental, or rent free, for a period of time at the beginning of the lease term. Not only does this help to compensate the tenant for the expense of moving, but it can be extremely useful to a tenant who needs time to get a new business operating at its full potential.

Rent abatement provisions can vary. Some such provisions abate only base rent, but others also abate expenses passed on from the landlord to the tenant, such as taxes and utilities; however, most landlords are unwilling to abate their fixed out-of-pocket expenses. The landlord may seek a rent abatement clause that provides that if the tenant defaults under the lease, the tenant will be obligated to reimburse the landlord for the amount of the abatement. The type of rent to be covered by the abatement and the effect of a tenant default are subject to negotiation.

[e] Construction Allowance

Another concession commonly used to induce a tenant to lease space is a construction allowance, sometimes also called a "build-out allowance," a "tenant finish allowance," a "tenant improvement allowance," or a "work letter amount." Such an allowance consists of a credit or a monetary allowance from the landlord to be used in physically preparing the space for the tenant's occupancy.

Before drafting a construction allowance provision, the parties should consider and negotiate the specifics of the allowance carefully. An allowance that sounds substantial actually may be worth very little to the tenant if the allowance will be applied to construction or upgrades in the landlord's building generally rather than to preparing the tenant's space for its specific use. The parties also must agree on requirements for competitive bidding, the use of allowance amounts in excess of the actual amount used for construction, and the tenant's responsibility for removing improvements.

If substantial construction will be necessary, the tenant should employ an architect, engineer or other appropriate design professional early in the negotiation process to determine what work must be done, and whether the necessary work is feasible in this particular space. The design professional also should determine whether the tenant will be required to spend its allowance to remove building standard items and whether the work can be done in compliance with the landlord's construction guidelines.

[f] Lease Takeover

On occasion, a landlord with a very strong desire to induce a potential tenant to move to the landlord's building may agree to take over the tenant's obligations under its current lease. The landlord can offer to pay the current landlord a lump sum to obtain the tenant's release from its current lease, to assume the current lease, or to reimburse the tenant the amount of rent due under the current lease. The parties not only must negotiate which takeover payment method they will use, but also must negotiate when the agreement becomes effective, what the parties rights and obligations are with respect to the old lease, and what effect the tenant's default under the new lease will have on the takeover arrangement.

[g] Equity Participation

Another type of tenant inducement is to give the tenant an equity participation. Under an equity participation agreement, the desirable tenant receives an interest in the landlord's facility based on the future appreciation of the property. In essence, the tenant invests in the landlord's facility instead of immediately obtaining cash incentives such as rent abatement or a construction allowance. Therefore, a tenant who needs cash for improvements or other expenses will not want an equity participation arrangement. The tenant should also consider how the arrangement will affect its tax situation.

A prospective tenant who has been offered equity participation in the landlord's facility must analyze the facility as an investment. Such an analysis should include the projected appreciation in the real estate market, an economic assessment of the landlord's facility, and an evaluation of the facility's potential for appreciation. The tenant also must ascertain whether and how the tenant's profit interest is subordinated to the interests of lenders or others, the tenant's rights and remedies as a limited partner, and the effect of a default by the tenant.

[h] Restrictive Covenant

Another common concession that can be given to induce an anchor tenant to lease space in the landlord's shopping center is a restrictive covenant in the lease, protecting the image of the shopping center and preventing competition. Such covenants may bar the landlord from leasing to competitors of the tenant, give the tenant the right to approve other tenants, and/or allow the tenant to control the quality of goods sold by other tenants.

Current Legal Forms for Real Estate
Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part II. The Practice Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.29

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.29 Drafting the Commercial Lease

The commercial lease should be drafted with a great deal of care. The tenant will be required to operate its business for a considerable period of time under the lease's strictures. The goal should be a clear and concise document, which the parties need to later review only upon the occurrence of unusual events. The document should be functional.

[1] Identification of Parties

The lease must identify the parties by role, i.e., landlord and tenant, as well as by name and business address. Business addresses are important for the delivery of notices, pursuant to other provisions of the lease.

[2] Capacity of the Parties

The lease must identify the capacity in which each signatory executes the lease, that is, as an individual, corporation, partnership, limited liability company, fiduciary, or agent. The capacity of the person executing the lease is important. There are different requirements various entities must fulfill in order to bind a party to the terms of the lease.

[a] Individuals

The attorney should be sure that all individual parties are over the age of majority. Infancy is not a bar to the leasing of real property, but in most states, laws protect minors by allowing them to disaffirm the lease while they are still minors or within a reasonable period after reaching the age of majority. Thus, unless special care is taken under applicable state law, leases signed by those under the age of majority may be voidable. The attorney should also determine that none of the individual parties is incapacitated by a mental disease or defect, which also could render the lease voidable.

[b] Corporations

Corporations are legal persons. A corporation may act only by direction of its board of directors, which evidences its acts by a resolution. Unless the certificate of incorporation or bylaws provides otherwise, a vote of the majority of the board of directors is required to adopt a resolution.

If one of the parties is a corporation, the attorney should obtain a copy of the board of directors' resolution authorizing the lease and a certificate of the secretary of the corporation acknowledging that the resolution was properly adopted, is in full force and effect, and has not been modified or rescinded. The resolution should set forth the basic terms of the lease and identify one or more individuals who are authorized to execute the lease on behalf of the corporation. The resolution also should specify the parameters within which the authorized individuals are entitled to negotiate other or additional terms.

[c] Partnerships

If one of the parties is a partnership, the attorney should obtain proof of the authority of the individual partner to act on behalf of the partnership. Where possible, the preferred practice is to obtain the signatures of all members of the partnership on the lease. If the partnership has too many members or if they are geographically diverse, this may not be possible. One alternative is to obtain a letter of authority from each partner authorizing one or more named individuals to execute the lease on behalf of the partnership, and specifying basic terms of the lease such as rent and term.

If it is not possible to obtain letters of authorization from all of the partners, the attorney must review the partnership agreement and any amendments to determine the scope of authority of the person offering to execute the lease on behalf of the partnership. The attorney should also obtain an affidavit from the person offering to execute the lease acknowledging that the partnership agreement is in full force and effect and has not been modified, and that the person is authorized to execute the lease on behalf of the partnership. Alternatively, the attorney can request an opinion of counsel for the partnership opining that the individual offering to execute the lease has authority to do so and that the individual's act is a valid and enforceable act of the partnership.

[d] Limited Liability Companies

If one of the parties is a limited liability company, because most limited liability companies are structured as and operate similar to partnerships, the attorney should obtain proof of the authority of the individual member to act on behalf of the limited liability company. If there is more than one member, then a letter of authority or resolution should be obtained from all of the members of the limited liability company evidencing the authority of the member signing on behalf of the limited liability company. If that is not possible, the attorney should review the operating agreement for the limited liability company, and any amendments to it, to determine the scope of authority of the member offering to execute the lease on behalf of the limited liability company. The attorney should also obtain an affidavit from the member offering to execute the lease, acknowledging that the limited liability company is in full force and effect and has not been modified, and that the member is authorized to execute the lease on behalf of the limited liability company. Similar to a partnership, alternatively the attorney can request an opinion of counsel for the limited liability company opining that the individual offering to execute the lease has authority to do so and that the individual's act is a valid and enforceable act of the limited liability company.

[e] Fiduciary

If one of the parties is a fiduciary (typically the landlord), the attorney for the other party must obtain proof both of the appointment and of the scope of the fiduciary's authority. Sufficient proof of appointment generally will be a certificate of letters testamentary for an executor, certificate of letters of administration for an administrator, or order of guardianship or conservatorship, or other similar court order. The attorney also should obtain an affidavit acknowledging that the order of appointment has not been rescinded.

The attorney must examine the order or decree appointing the fiduciary and must determine the scope of the fiduciary's authority. In addition, the attorney should examine any will, trust or other document which is related to the appointment.

Finally, the attorney should review the relevant local laws for general powers of fiduciaries.

[f] Power of Attorney

If one of the parties is represented by an attorney-in-fact, the attorney must obtain proof of the validity of the appointment and scope of authority. A certified copy of the power of attorney document, together with an affidavit executed by the attorney-in-fact denying actual knowledge of the termination of his or her power by death, disability, incapacity or revocation by the principal, is sufficient in most states.

Some states have adopted the Uniform Durable Powers of Attorney Act, which contains rules for the effective use of durable powers. Other states, although they have not enacted the Uniform Act, have similar statutes. Some statutes provide forms for power of attorney documents. The attorney should consult the relevant statutes to determine the scope of authority granted in a particular document and whether that power is durable.

Although most states do not require that powers of attorney be acknowledged or recorded, they generally can and should be recorded.

[3] Identification of the Leased Property

The lease should identify the property to be leased in detail. The type of description will depend, in part, on the type of space leased. In all leases, the description should specify the state, county, and municipality. The street address should also be included, if there is one. If the leased premises include an entire building and the surrounding land, the approximate lot size should be included, and a metes-and-bounds description may be advisable. If the leased premises are only part of a building or complex of buildings, the unit number should be included. Where the premises are part of a strip mall or shopping center, it is common practice to include a floor plan as an exhibit to the lease, with the leased unit marked on the floor plan. To avoid disputes, it is important to note in the lease that the floor plan shows the approximate size and location of the leased premises, since the space as built out may differ somewhat from the original floor plans.

If the rent is to be based on the size of the leased premises, it is important to include the exact square footage in the lease. The square footage should be verified by physical measurement, since the "as built" dimensions are often quite different from the floor plan.

In structures where some tenants have entire floors while others have only parts of floors, it is important to set forth whether corridors, elevator shafts, staircases, and restrooms are included in the leased space or in the common areas. Frequently, in such cases, there are two types of common areas, those common to all, and those common to a particular floor. Thus, if a tenant leases part of a floor, the tenant will pay rent for its square footage plus its ratable share of the common space on the floor.

There are no standard definitions for calculating a rentable area. The Building Owners and Managers Association ("BOMA") promulgates a standard method for measuring floor areas in offices, but landlords are free to adapt it to their own needs and do so. In 1996, the BOMA standard was revised to provide a more complete and equitable method of floor measurement. A copy of the new standard is available at BOMA's website at www.BOMA.org.

The lease should identify all structures which are included for the tenant's use. This may include garage space, specified parking spaces, and storage space. These should be identified by an easily recognized system. For example, parking or storage spaces may have company names or number affixed to them. If use of such spaces is exclusive, the tenant should request that the lease provide that the landlord will guaranty such exclusivity by appropriate notification sanctions and lease provisions to other tenants.

[a] Appurtenances

The lease should specify all appurtenances which are included in the lease, at no additional expense. This might include common areas such as parking, restrooms, and kitchen facilities. If there are limitations on the use of such appurtenances, such as the number of vehicles permitted, such limitations should be specified. If there are access easements that are appurtenant to the property, such as roadways or driveways, these should be identified and the lease should specify the right of the tenant to use such easements.

The lease also should specify any appurtenances which are excluded from the lease. For example, in cities where parking is costly, the lease of a structure may not include the lease of parking spaces or garages on the lot. The landlord may lease these separately. Similarly, the lease of a structure on a parcel of land may not include the right to use the grounds or streams located on the same parcel.

[b] Personalty

If personal property is included in the lease, such property should be specifically described. Personal property included in the lease may consist of such items as shelving in storage areas, appliances in kitchen facilities and similar items. Alternatively, personal property included in the lease may be itemized in an accompanying schedule.

The lease should set forth whether personal property is leased "as is," in "working order," in "good working order," or in some other condition. Generally, in a commercial lease, personal property is leased "as is." Typically, such personalty consists of items left from a prior occupant, and the landlord leaves these items as a convenience to the new tenant but takes no responsibility for their condition. The lease will usually specify that the tenant is responsible for repair and replacement of personalty during the term of the lease. The lease should specify the condition in which such personalty or the replacement thereof shall be returned at the end of the lease. If the lease promised "working order" or "good working order" at the commencement of the lease term, it will generally seek the same, with reasonable wear and tear excepted, at the end. If the lease made no promises as to condition of personalty, typically the tenant may return it in the same condition, "as is."

[c] Fixtures

The lease should specify the fixtures which are included in the lease. This would include such items as the heating, ventilating and air-conditioning systems (HVAC), lighting fixtures and built-in cabinets or bookcases, if any.

The lease should indicate whether the fixtures are leased "as is," in "working order," or in "good working order." The lease should also specify which party is responsible for repair of such fixtures during the lease term. Typically, where the lease provides that fixtures are "as is," the tenant will be responsible for repairs. Where the fixtures are in "working order" or "good working order," either party may be designated by the lease for repair responsibility. The designation of a party responsible for repair may also depend on whether the fixture serves more than one tenant. If so, the landlord most likely will be responsible. If not, the tenant is more likely to be designated. It should be noted that where items are leased "as is," it is advisable to inspect the systems before executing the lease. The condition of costly items will impact the amount of rent which the tenant is willing to pay.

The lease should specify the condition in which fixtures are to be left at the end of the lease term. Most often this depends on who had responsibility to repair during the lease term. If the tenant had such responsibility, usually the tenant must leave fixtures in as good condition as at the commencement of the lease, reasonable wear and tear excepted.

[d] Items Supplied by Landlord at Added Cost

In some instances, the landlord may be willing, at an extra cost, to install additional personalty or fixtures which are not in or on the premises. Similarly, the landlord may be willing to supply certain appurtenances such as parking or storage at an additional cost. Some of these items may be on a periodic or as needed basis, such as use of conference rooms or additional parking. Any items to be supplied by the landlord at an added cost should be identified in the lease. The lease should include the cost per unit for such items, the procedure to obtain them, and the conditions for their use. It is important to indicate whether such items are always available or whether they are subject to use by other tenants. It is also important to be careful not to make such provisions cumbersome or onerous. This can be a source of a great deal of conflict between the landlord and the tenant and among other tenants.

[4] Tenant Improvements

It is very rare for one tenant to be able to use the space vacated by another tenant without alterations. At a minimum, fresh paint must be applied; however, in most commercial space, walls must be moved, electrical facilities enhanced, and HVAC systems and plumbing updated. Although most commercial space is constructed to facilitate such alterations, it is still time consuming and costly.

Minimally, landlords will pay for "building standard" items, such as interior doors and carpeting. Landlords also often offer a construction allowance to tenants for the costs of tenants' initial improvements in excess of the building standard as an incentive to execute the lease. The construction allowance is typically calculated as a particular number of dollars per square foot of rentable area. Generally, the landlord "pays" this allowance by reducing the rent for an appropriate number of months.

Alternatively, the landlord may offer to perform specific tasks such as the construction of a particular number of linear feet of walls, including sheetrocking, taping, priming, and painting. If the landlord owns a number of properties, the landlord may have a permanent construction crew. By offering to perform specific tasks, it is likely that the tenant will hire the landlord's crew to perform all of the construction work.

There are several considerations for the tenant in deciding whether to have work done by the landlord's crew. First, is the pricing for the entire job competitive? The tenant will need to obtain several estimates to determine this.

Second, is the landlord's crew sufficiently talented and experienced to perform the required tasks? The tenant should inspect work performed by the landlord's crew for other tenants with uses similar to the tenant's uses. The tenant should keep in mind that the quality of construction work which is acceptable in industrial space may not be acceptable in a professional office.

Finally, the tenant should investigate the type of warranty which is available from the landlord's crew. If there is a problem with the HVAC or plumbing installed during the construction, there is a greater chance of quick response from the landlord than from an outside contractor. The landlord will be motivated to act not only to maintain the reputation of the crew but also to maintain the condition of the building.

The lease provision dealing with tenant improvements will be very long if it describes the construction work in detail. More commonly, the tenant improvement section of the lease is very short and refers to and incorporates the more detailed construction specifics contained in an attached work letter. The work letter must describe in detail the construction work to be done, who will pay for it, the materials to be used, and the procedure and time requirements for preparing plans and completing the work.

[5] Lease Price

[a] Base Rent

The lease must specify the rent to be paid, typically as a total amount for the lease term or as an annual amount. Most often the lease provides that this rent amount must be paid in monthly or quarterly installments. The frequency of installments should be specified, together with the due date and the place of payment of each installment. This rent is often referred to as the base or fixed rent.

Often leases contain a grace period. That is, the rent is due on a particular date, such as the first of each month, but is not considered to be late until a later date, such as the tenth of the month. Where a grace period is included, there is usually a late fee charged for any payment received by the landlord after the expiration of the grace period. Such a late charge is designed to cover the costs incurred by the landlord as a result of the failure to pay the rent on time. Such costs include loss of interest on the funds, administrative costs required to send notices of default and bookkeeping charges.

[b] Additional Rent and Charges

Most commercial leases also have additional rent or charges, designed to compensate the landlord for the inevitable variations in maintenance costs, insurance, real estate taxes, assessments and other running expenses. Such an arrangement is commonly known as a "net lease." Under a net lease, or a provision for the payment of "net rent," the tenant is obligated to pay a fixed sum, or base rent, and, in addition, to bear the cost of most or all operating expenses. This device shifts to the tenant the impact of periodic changes in such costs. The lease should specify precisely the tenant's obligations regarding each specific operating expense.

[i] Water and Sewer Charges and Utilities

If the tenant has separate meters or possession of an entire building, the lease generally requires the tenant to pay water and sewer charges. If there are no separate meters, the lease usually provides that the tenant must pay water and sewer charges in proportion to the tenant's occupancy of the building. Before accepting such a lease condition, the tenant should make certain that there are no tenants in the building who use disproportionate amounts of water. The tenant may wish to request a clause in the lease which obligates the landlord to separately meter such a tenant. Typical tenants who are heavy users of water include restaurants, laboratories, dental offices, exercise studios, and beauty salons.

Utilities such as electricity, natural gas, and telephone generally are separately metered, and each tenant pays its own expenses. In some older buildings or single tenant buildings, the entire building is heated by fuel oil. The cost of the fuel oil is charged pro rata by square footage in multi-unit buildings. In single unit buildings, the tenant pays directly.

[ii] Garbage Disposal

Some commercial leases require tenants to dispose of their own garbage. Others provide refuse service as part of common charges. If tenants must provide their own disposal, a prospective tenant should inquire about the ability to store refuse before pick up. The landlord may provide exterior space for dumpsters. If not, the tenant must store refuse within the tenant's own space or make arrangements for daily removal.

[iii] Property Taxes

The tenant should usually expect to pay its ratable share of real property taxes, because the landlord will not be willing to assume the risk of periodic tax increases while the rent to the tenant remains constant. Some leases provide for payment only of increases in taxes; others provide for payment of all taxes. In multi-user buildings taxed as a single unit, taxes are allocated among the tenants, usually on the basis of relative rent payments or floor space occupancy.

Where the tenant is responsible for taxes, the tenant may wish to obtain the right to contest the assessment of the building and to delay payment of the tax pending the outcome of the protest. Some form of additional security is often provided to protect the landlord while payment is being withheld, or more often the tenant will be required to pay the tax and receive a refund of a portion of it if the contest is successful. Although such a proceeding challenging a tax assessment may be costly to the tenant, where the landlord has a fully leased facility in which tenants pay all taxes, the landlord has no incentive to bring such a proceeding. Some leases may require the landlord to bring a proceeding to challenge a tax assessment at the request of a certain number of tenants, but the landlord usually has the ability to charge back its expenses, including legal fees, as common area charges.

[iv] Janitorial Services

The cost of janitorial services is often included in the base rent. If not, the tenant is typically required to obtain its own janitorial services. Similarly, window washing is often included in base rent. If it is not, in a multi-unit building, the tenant is usually responsible for the interior and the landlord is responsible for the exterior. In a single unit building, there is no customary provision for window washing, and such a provision is subject to negotiation. Many commercial leases make the tenant responsible for the cost of replacing broken windows, and the tenant is frequently required to carry plate glass replacement insurance.

[v] Common Area Charges

In nearly every multi-use facility, the tenants must pay for common area charges. These charges are generally assessed pro rata based on the number of square feet rented by a tenant in relationship to the total of rentable space in the building. Common area charges include the cost of landscaping, mowing, snow removal, parking area maintenance, cleaning of common areas, repairs to common areas, heating, air conditioning and lighting of common areas, pest control, insurance, and the cost of a management fee paid to the entity managing the building and common areas. The term common area charges or "operating expenses" is a term that requires careful definition through a negotiated agreement. Skilled tenants or their counsel will negotiate specific expenses that are to be excluded from the term. Normally, a capital expenditure is not an operating expense. However, through the definition of what is included in "operating expenses," the landlord's capital expenditures are frequently included. Most tenants will resist this and usually the compromise is to include only those capital expenditures that result in better efficiency (result in lower operating costs) and capital expenditures required by new laws or regulations. Tenants will want to define carefully what is a new law or regulation.

Landlords also adjust operating expenses among the tenants when there are vacancies through a lease clause commonly called the "gross-up" clause. The gross-up clause provides the means by which the landlord is able to pass on to tenants the share of operating expenses that would have been paid by whatever tenant would have occupied a vacant space if there are vacancies in the building. Only expenses that vary with occupancy are "grossed-up." These are called variable expenses and they include such costs as utilities, cleaning, repairs and maintenance. Usually gross-up clauses permit the landlord to gross-up variable expenses to what the landlord reasonably calculates they would have been had the building been either 90% or 95% occupied. However, from the point of view of a tenant that is paying operating expenses on the basis of increased from a base year, there should also be a gross-up clause that grosses-up the operating expenses of the base year to what those expenses would be had the building been either 90% or 95% occupied in the base year.

Often times, in shopping center leases, the landlord enters into leases with major or anchor tenants that have the leverage to insist that they will pay no share of operating expenses or a reduced share of operating expenses. In that case, the landlord will want to define the tenants' share of the expenses as rentable area divided by the total rentable area of the shopping center, minus the rentable area of anchor tenants. This seems inherently unfair to the non-anchored tenants, but those non-anchored tenants usually are willing to agree to this because they realize that without the anchor tenants, there could be no shopping center.

[vi] Retail Facilities

Additional charges which may be assessed to a tenant in a retail facility include advertising and mandatory merchants' associations. The landlord often reserves the right to prepare and disseminate advertising for the entire facility in newspapers, on television, on radio, and billboards. Since traffic generated by such advertising is presumed to benefit the tenant, the lease usually requires the tenant to pay for its share; however, the tenant should be very cautious about such provisions. The tenant should insist that its obligation to pay for its share of advertising be limited to a particular number of times per year and to a specified total dollar amount. Often the landlord will delegate the obligation to produce advertising to the merchants' association. The tenant is generally well advised to participate in the merchants' association, which, among other things, often has the authority to demand assessments of the tenant for special promotions at different holidays.

[vii] Expenses Arising from Default or Litigation

Leases commonly provide that the tenant must reimburse the landlord for expenses incurred in protecting the landlord's rights under the lease. Such expenses include expenses incurred in the collection of rent following the tenant's nonpayment and expenses incurred in curing the tenant's defaults, including defaults in the obligation to make repairs or to pay insurance premiums. The tenant may desire a lease provision requiring the landlord to give the tenant notice of such a default and an opportunity to cure it before the tenant becomes bound to reimburse the landlord. Most leases do not require the tenant to pay for expenses incurred by the landlord because of defaults by other tenants.

The lease can also provide that the tenant will pay any legal expenses incurred by the landlord in maintaining legal proceedings for the prosecution or defense of legal actions related to the lease. Some leases provide that if the dispute is between the landlord and the tenant, the landlord only can recover its legal expenses if the final decision is in the landlord's favor. Other leases require the tenant to pay the landlord's legal expenses regardless of the final outcome of the litigation. Many leases also require a defaulting tenant to pay the landlord's expenses in recovering possession from the tenant.

[c] Percentage Rent

Certain leases structure the rent on a percentage of income, receipts or gross sales basis. Such a provision allows the landlord and the tenant to share the risks and benefits of fluctuations in property value or business income.

A percentage rent provision typically involves the payment of a fixed minimum rent and additional rent based upon a percentage of receipts or income from use of the premises in excess of a specified amount. The fixed rental amount generally is lower than the market rate for similar space.

The starting point in formulating the percentage rental provision may be "gross income," "adjusted gross receipts," "net income," or "gross sales." The appropriate basis for such a provision depends upon the nature of the tenant's business. For example, in the case of certain large scale merchandising and service enterprises, the complexities in accounting make it desirable to base the percentage rent on gross receipts.

The percentage rent provision must specify the amounts which the parties intend to include in or exclude from the amount of "gross income," "adjusted gross receipts," "net income," or "gross sales," as the case may be. The parties must consider whether such amounts should include receipts of the tenant's licensees or concessionaires, receipts of other tenant offices or stores resulting from sales at the leased premises, sales to the tenant's employees, returned items, donated items, interest and credit charges, uncollected credit sales, telephone or catalog sales, and off-premises deliveries. Such items as sales tax receipts, vending machine proceeds, and customer charges for delivery or alterations at cost are generally excluded. In view of the development of e-commerce involving sales over the internet, the parties must consider whether sales over the internet should be included. The problem with such sales is that they are not site specific. Therefore, it would be difficult to include them unless the actual goods shipped were from the site of the leased premises.

Note that where "net income" is used as the basis for the percentage rent provision, certain specified expenses can be deducted from gross receipts which cannot be deducted where "gross sales" is used as the basis for the provision. The parties should take particular care in drafting such a provision to avoid defining "net income" as profits. If the parties are sharing profits, they risk being classified as partners.

The collection of percentage rent depends to a large extent upon the records maintained and supplied by the tenant. The lease should specify when and how the tenant must provide the landlord a report. The frequency of reports and the detail of information required will depend upon the circumstances of the transaction. The landlord should reserve the right to review the tenant's books and records to verify the accuracy of the percentage payments.

Typically, such leases also contain a provision allowing the landlord to have the books and records audited by an independent public accounting firm. If the amounts of receipts, income or sales reported by the tenant differ from those determined by the audit by a specified percentage, the tenant must pay the costs of the audit. The tenant should protect itself from the disruption of frequent audits by a provision that allows audits no more than once per year.

[6] Security Deposit and Other Forms of Security

The lease must require the tenant to pay a security deposit. The amount is usually at least equivalent to one month's base rent, but is negotiable based on the tenant's financial statement and references. The lease should specify the exact dollar amount of the security deposit and when the deposit is due. Typically, the security deposit is due either upon execution of the lease or upon acceptance of occupancy.

The lease should set forth the uses which the parties may make of the security deposit. Typically, the landlord will demand assurances that the tenant will not encumber the deposit by further pledging it to another party without the landlord's consent. The lease may also contain provisions barring the tenant from using the deposit in lieu of the final month's rent. In such a case, the lease will provide that the landlord may use the deposit toward the cost of repairing any damage to the premises caused by the tenant. Sometimes the lease will give the landlord the right to apply the deposit toward the cost of cleaning the premises if the tenant did not leave the premises "broom clean." In addition, the lease often provides that the landlord may use the security deposit during the term of the lease to satisfy obligations which the tenant fails to perform, such as the tenant's obligation to pay special assessments or additional fees. The effect of a lease clause providing that the security deposit is to constitute liquidated damages in the event of the tenant's default is dependent upon local law, which may find such provisions to be unenforceable penalties rather than a good faith attempt to anticipate and measure reasonable damages.

The lease should specify the procedure the parties must use to release the security deposit at the end of the lease. Typically, the lease requires the tenant to notify the landlord when the premises are vacant. The landlord and the tenant will then schedule an inspection. If the premises are in satisfactory condition, the security deposit will be returned. Most leases specify the number of days within which the deposit will be returned. That period usually ranges between ten and thirty days. It would be rare for a landlord to deliver a check to a tenant at the inspection or for a tenant to agree to wait more than thirty days.

Leases vary widely on the procedures to be followed if the landlord finds that the premises are not in the expected condition at the end of the lease term. The tenant may request an opportunity to correct the problem within a specified number of days and then to have the landlord reinspect the premises. Alternatively, the landlord and the tenant may agree upon a sum to be deducted from the security deposit to cover the cost of correcting the condition; however, if the parties cannot agree upon such a sum, most leases allow the landlord to summarily use the security deposit. The tenant may wish to negotiate a provision which allows a neutral party, designated in advance, to arbitrate the dispute. The cost of arbitration generally is borne by the losing party. If the arbitrator apportions the deposit, the responsibility for the cost of arbitration can be determined by the arbitrator. Inclusion of such a provision will encourage both parties to be reasonable.

The lease should also state whether interest is to be paid on the security deposit. If so, the lease should specify the interest rate and whether it is compounded. If the interest rate is adjustable, the lease must specify how the rate will be calculated, how the adjustment will be made, and on what basis the adjustment will be made. The lease must also specify which party will be responsible for the income taxes on the interest which may be earned by the security deposit.

Other forms of security that the landlord might consider in lieu of or in addition to a cash security deposit are personal guaranties from another individual or parent or affiliated entity, letters of credit issued by a bank which can be called upon in the event of a default or breach of the lease, or pledges of assets owned by the tenant. Such a pledge might be in the form of marketable, liquid assets of the tenant, or of equipment used by the tenant at the leased premises.

[7] Lease Term; Rule Against Perpetuities

The lease must describe the term of the lease in dates certain wherever possible. This certainty avoids any disagreement over the period of occupancy and the obligation to pay rent.

However, where the leased premises are currently occupied, under construction, or require governmental approvals prior to occupancy, it may not be possible to set a date certain for commencement of the lease. In those cases, the date is typically established as a particular number of days after the occurrence of a triggering event. In cases where the occurrence of the triggering event is within the knowledge of one party, there should be a provision requiring the knowledgeable party to give notice of the occurrence of the event. The term then commences a specified number of days after notice is given. In some jurisdictions, where there is a question as to whether such a provision violates the applicable rule against perpetuities, the term can be made to commence on the earlier of either a specified date of the occurrence of the triggering event.

In general, the rule against perpetuities states that no interest is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than twenty-one (21) years after some life in being at the time of the creation of the interest. Most states follow the common law or some variation of it. A good draftsman of a lease should make sure that the term of the lease is definite enough so that it cannot be interpreted as being perpetual, although most states hold that a tenant's estate for years is a present interest to which the rule against perpetuities does not apply. The same would be true for a covenant in a lease to renew the lease perpetually. Although that may be the case, a good draftsman should not take the risk that the provision in the lease violates the rule against perpetuities.

The termination date is equally important. Like the commencement date, it is preferable to have a date certain. Some leases provide that the term is for a specified number of months or years. Under such a lease, if the commencement was on an unusual date, then the termination also will be. Other leases provide a specified termination date which cannot be extended, even if the lease commences later than originally anticipated. In either situation, the tenant should review the rent structure to be certain that the rental increases follow any changes in the lease term. Thus, if the lease commences later than originally anticipated, the tenant must determine whether increases in rent become correspondingly later in time, or whether the tenant begins to pay the higher rent before the end of the actual year of occupancy. If the tenant is required to pay the increases in rent sooner, the tenant may experience some financial difficulties, since it may have anticipated twelve months at the initial rate rental during which time it could recover its relocation expenses. Instead, the increases may come after only a few months. The parties should take this into consideration when negotiating the lease. The landlord will not be benefitted by a financially distressed tenant.

[a] Delivery of Possession

There are many situations where it is possible that there will be delays in, or even a complete failure to accomplish, delivery of possession of the premises to the tenant. This is especially likely if the leased premises are currently occupied by a tenant who may holdover, or if the premises are under construction. The parties may wish to include a clause in the lease dealing with the consequences of the landlord's failure to deliver possession to the tenant upon the commencement of the lease term. Without such a provision, the tenant may have no recourse against the landlord in the event of a holdover by a prior tenant, and the landlord may be unprotected from liability for damages, deferral of the lease term or cancellation of the lease resulting from the landlord's failure to deliver possession.

The lease can permit an abatement in rent for the period during which the tenant is unable to take possession, with the provision that the lease term will not be extended, and the tenant may not cancel the lease or recover damages. The tenant may prefer a clause that gives the tenant the right to cancel the lease and to recover any rent and security payments if possession is not delivered by a stated date.

[8] Renewal or Extension Rights

If the tenant's business may be affected by location, the tenant should consider negotiating a renewal or extension provision in the lease. Without such a provision, the landlord is under no obligation to continue to lease the space to the tenant upon the termination of the lease, putting the tenant in an extremely vulnerable position in attempting to negotiate a new lease. The landlord, knowing of the tenant's need, may exact a considerably higher rent than the market rent.

The language that should be used in a renewal or extension provision may depend upon the interpretation given to the words "renew" and "extend" under local law. In some states, the extension of a lease is regarded as a continuation of the original lease as if the original lease covered the entire term as extended. On the other hand, such states treat a renewal as involving a new lease for the additional period. In such states, therefore, an extension option may be exercised simply by notice to the landlord, whereas a renewal option requires the execution of a new lease. Other states do not make this distinction, and automatically apply the original lease provisions to the renewal period. Another approach, based on the intention of the parties, is to presume that the parties intend to extend the lease rather than renew it.

A renewal or extension provision should set the conditions, if any, which must be met by the tenant in order to qualify for the right to renew or extend. Generally, such a provision requires that the tenant not be in default under the terms of the lease at the time the tenant gives notice of its intention to renew or extend, and at the time the renewal or extension period commences.

The lease generally requires that the tenant give notice of its intention to renew or extend a particular period of time before the end of the term. Such a provision allows the landlord to begin showing the space to prospective tenants so the landlord may reduce the period of time during which the space will be vacant. Landlords generally seek a notice of renewal or extension period of six months or more. Tenants generally seek a shorter period so as to keep their options open as long as possible. Customarily, the longer the initial lease period is, the longer the period of time before the end of the lease term by which the tenant will be required to give notice of its intention to renew or extend. As an alternative to placing the burden on the tenant to remember to give notice of its intention to renew or extend, the lease can provide for an automatic renewal or extension unless the tenant gives notice of its intention not to renew or extend. A provision also can require the landlord to give the tenant notice that the time has come for the tenant to exercise its option to renew or extend.

The renewal or extension option is only useful as a protection to the tenant where it contains a provision either specifying or limiting the amount of future rent. Without such a provision, the tenant has a rather hollow right. Although the renewal or extension provision may specify the exact amount of the future rent, this is risky for both parties, especially for a long term lease. Unforeseen changes in the economy in general or in the real estate market in particular may result in a windfall to the landlord or to the tenant.

A more market sensitive approach may be to tie the changes in rent to the changes in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) or another index which may be more appropriate to the tenant's business or to the rental rates in the geographic area in which the space is located, but for the tenant's protection having some outside limit or "cap" on the amount of the increase. Where the lease is a long term lease, it is appropriate to use the first year of the lease as the base year. The changes in the index over the lease years are factored in giving the rate for the first year of the renewal or extension term. Where the original term increases were based on negotiation instead of the CPI, it is possible that a decrease in rent may be the result for the renewal or extension period. Frequently, leases provide that there will be no decrease in rent where the CPI or similar index is used.

The lease should specify any additional terms which will be effective for the renewal or extension period or any provisions which will not be included for the renewal or extension period. Often leases will incorporate all terms except the right to renew (or extend) for the renewal (or extension) period. Care should be taken to draft a provision that cannot be construed to continue the right to renew or extend in perpetuity. Additional terms effective only for the renewal or extension period may include the right to increase or decrease the rented space and the right to obtain renovations or modernization of space.

[9] Option to Purchase

The option to purchase generally is not available in a multi-unit building, such as a shopping center or an office complex. A tenant who negotiates an option to purchase can expect to pay additional consideration for that right. Typically, that consideration will be a separately stated dollar amount as opposed to an increased monthly rent.

The option should set a price at which the tenant may purchase the premises. If the price is "fair market value," a mechanism for determining the value should be included. The parties can specify an agreed upon appraiser who will determine fair market value. This method may be difficult. Frequently, the parties will not be able to agree on an appraiser. If the landlord has many properties which the appraiser is called upon to appraise, there may be an unconscious bias toward the landlord. Additionally, the appraiser may not be available at the time the need for the appraisal arises.

The parties may each select an appraiser to perform a determination of value, and the two appraisals can be averaged. This method is quite expensive because both appraisers are performing the same service. In addition, there may be a skewed result if either appraiser is quite high or quite low in their appraisal.

A third method is to provide that each party selects an appraiser, and then the two appraisers jointly select a third appraiser who performs the appraisal. This method has the advantage of keeping the cost at a reasonable level, and also removes the possibility of bias, since neither party will have control over whom the other selects and whom the appraisers ultimately select.

The option should specify the period of time during which it is exercisable. This period may extend for the entire duration of the lease or for some shorter period. Frequently, where such a shorter period is used, the period will be toward the end of the lease term; however, a wise landlord will reserve the last three to six months of the lease to locate a new tenant. Thus, the landlord will want the option period to expire before the end of the lease.

An option should set forth the manner in which the tenant may exercise it. Usually, the tenant must give written notice to the landlord that the tenant is exercising the option. A contract for the sale of the premises is then executed. It is helpful if the terms of the contract of sale are agreed upon when the parties execute the lease containing the option. Often the contract of sale is annexed as an exhibit to the lease. The contract of sale must contain provisions regarding the status of the title, mortgage contingency, if any, and the time frame for closing. There is usually no need for inspections, as the tenant has been occupying the premises and should be aware of the conditions. A mortgage contingency often is not required because the tenant already has investigated its ability to obtain a mortgage before exercising the option.

If the time frame of the option is quite short, it may be necessary to have contingencies in the contract of sale. These would include contingencies for mortgage approval, title and any physical inspections which the tenant did not obtain prior to exercising the option. Such inspections may include radon gas, urea formaldehyde insulation, asbestos, lead wood boring insects, environmental concerns, structural soundness, and any site specific concerns. These provisions should all be negotiated and agreed upon by the time the lease containing the option is executed. Otherwise, the parties may not have an enforceable option agreement, but may only have an agreement to agree. For a more detailed discussion of real estate sales contracts and contract forms, see Vol. 25, Chapter 21, Sales and Exchanges, supra. For a more detailed discussion of environmental contingencies and specific forms relating to them, see Vol. 33, Chapter 25, Environmental Considerations in Real Estate Transactions, infra.

It is important to record a document so as to put the public on notice of the option to purchase rights that were granted to the tenant. This is usually done by including reference to the option in the short form lease which is used to record the rights of the tenant to lease the property. If there is a mortgage, the lender will most likely ask that the option be subordinated to the rights of the lender under the mortgage unless the holder of the option can convince the lender otherwise.

[10] Rights of First Refusal or First Offer to Purchase Leased Premises

The tenant who has a right of first refusal essentially has a latent option to purchase real property that is activated when a third party offers or agrees to purchase the property. The tenant's right to purchase the property for the price and on the terms offered by the third party is superior to the third party's offer or agreement. A right of first refusal is similar to an option in that it grants the tenant the right to purchase the leased premises under certain conditions. It is in these conditions that the two concepts differ most significantly.

An option to purchase gives the tenant the right, within a limited period of time, to decide to purchase the premises. The right of first refusal gives the tenant the right to purchase, if, and only if, the landlord first decides to sell and receives an offer. If the landlord does not decide to entertain offers during the term of the lease, or during the period of the tenant's right as contained in the lease, the tenant has no right to acquire the premises.

Because the right of first refusal is so limited, there is usually no separately stated consideration for the right. The right of first refusal is rarely included in leases for multi-unit facilities, such as shopping centers and office complexes.

The right of first refusal may be drafted in many different ways. Most often, the tenant is offered the right to purchase on the same terms and conditions contained in a purchase offer which is acceptable to the landlord. If the tenant fails to accept the offer, the tenant's right of first refusal is forever extinguished. This method presents several problems for the tenant. First, although the price may be in the range which is acceptable to the tenant, the other terms of the offer may not be acceptable. For example, the mortgage contingency may not include an amount high enough to provide for the tenant's needs. Similarly, the agreement may not provide for contingencies for inspections desired by the tenant. Second, this method would allow an unscrupulous landlord to obtain a collusive offer in order to terminate the right. Such an offer would include an extremely high purchase price or other terms so onerous that no sensible tenant would ever agree to match the offer.

The tenant may attempt to protect itself by a provision which revives the right of first refusal if the transfer of title does not occur. This term should not be objectionable to an honest landlord. In exchange for this term, the tenant could agree to a short period of time in which to match the offer, such as five to ten days.

It is more difficult to fairly protect the tenant from other terms of the offer which may be objectionable. Some minor variations may not be particularly objectionable to the landlord; however, at some point, variations may make the offer of the tenant not nearly as acceptable as the offer of the outside party.

The right of first refusal must contain a requirement that the landlord notify the tenant if an acceptable offer is received.

The right of first refusal must contain a period of time during which the tenant may match the offer. This period should be reasonably short because the outside purchaser may not be willing to wait very long to learn whether he or she will be the purchaser. The landlord must be sure to advise potential purchasers of the right of first refusal, and all purchase offers must be contingent on the tenant's failure to exercise the right of first refusal within the specified time period. Note that an outstanding right of first refusal can make it difficult for the landlord to market and sell the property, since brokers and prospective purchasers know that the tenant may intervene in the transaction and purchase the property.

The right of first refusal must contain a method by which the tenant signifies its willingness to purchase the premises on the same terms and conditions contained in the offer of the outside purchaser. The tenant, after accepting the offer, must proceed to satisfy all contingencies including title, and thereafter, the tenant must be prepared to close. Failure by the tenant to close upon satisfaction of all contingencies, will make the tenant liable for breach of contract.

Another possible contract provision, similar to a right of first refusal, is a right of first offer. The landlord who gives a tenant a right of first offer is obligated to offer to sell the subject property to the tenant before offering to sell the property to any third parties. The tenant's right to purchase is activated when the landlord offers the property to the tenant at a price and upon terms chosen by the landlord, rather than when the landlord receives an offer from a third party. The tenant may accept the landlord's terms for the sale, or, if not, the landlord may offer the property to third parties at the same price and upon the same terms. An outstanding right of first offer generally does not impair the landlord's ability to market and sell the property, since the tenant must elect whether or not to purchase the property upon the terms offered before any real estate brokers and prospective purchasers become involved.

For the same reasons stated above, the tenant should have the right of first refusal or right of first offer included in the short form lease which is recorded. In that way, the right granted to the tenant becomes constructively known to anyone dealing with the property.

[11] Future Expansion or Contraction of Space

Provisions can be contained in a lease allowing the tenant to increase or decrease space during the lease term. The tenant, anticipating future growth, may desire an option to lease adjoining or nearby space during the term. Often in such situations, the lease will give the tenant the right of first refusal or a right of first offer for the desired space as it becomes available. Such a provision will give the tenant a right to lease the desired space that is superior to the right of any third party. This right is similar to the rights of first refusal and first offer discussed above in relation to the purchase of leased property by the tenant. As in a sale situation, the tenant has no obligation to lease the additional space if and when it becomes available. Another method for giving the tenant the ability to expand its space in the future is to restrict surrounding tenants to short-term leases of adjoining space, and/or make the lease rights of such neighboring tenants subject to the landlord's right to relocate them if the principal tenant seeks to expand.

If the tenant plans to eliminate or move certain operations in the future, the lease can grant the tenant the right to abandon part of the premises while the tenant continues to occupy the remainder. A provision permitting the tenant to decrease space may specify the space to be abandoned, and the time period within which the option to abandon must be exercised or else forfeited. The lease also should include a formula or other method for rent adjustment.

[12] Right to Assign or Sublease

Most leases include provisions controlling the tenant's right to assign the lease and to sublet the leased property. At a minimum, such provisions delineate the procedures to be followed by the tenant and certain basic protections for the landlord. On the other hand, such provisions can severely limit assignment and subletting rights in the tenant.

The most liberal assignment and subletting provisions merely require that the tenant give the landlord adequate notice of the assignment or sublet arrangement. If the landlord desires to retain more control over assignment and subletting of the premises, the lease should require the landlord's written consent as a prerequisite to any assignment or sublease.

From the landlord's point of view, this clause should make clear that in the event of an assignment the tenant is not released from its obligations under the lease (unless the landlord agrees at the time to grant such a release). From the tenant's point of view, the tenant should try to negotiate a clause whereby if the new assignee has a net worth equal to or greater than the tenant, that a release would be granted. In addition, the tenant frequently will ask for the right to assign or sublet without the consent of the landlord, to an entity affiliated with the tenant, or a successor to the tenant by merger or other reorganization, or by acquisition of substantially all of the tenant's assets. The landlord will usually agree to such a clause provided that the landlord is given adequate notice of the name, address, and identification of such assignee.

[13] Repairs and Maintenance

The lease must allocate responsibility for repair and maintenance between the landlord and the tenant. There must be clear guidelines defining the immediate obligations of the parties, since the curing of a defective physical condition often cannot await a protracted dispute as to responsibility. General statements, such as a provision requiring the tenant to keep the premises in "good repair," may or may not be construed to include structural repairs or the replacement of worn out items.

Absent a lease provision to the contrary, a landlord generally has no duty to repair or maintain leased premises, except with respect to concealed defects existing at the beginning of the term. As a practical matter, the parties rarely desire to make the tenant responsible for all maintenance and repair. The landlord is likely to want some amount of control over its building, while at the same time the tenant probably wants to handle the day-to-day responsibility for maintaining its space as it desires.

In a typical commercial lease, the tenant is responsible for "nonstructural" repairs, while the landlord is responsible for "structural" repairs. The term "structural" usually refers to the following systems: heating, ventilating, air conditioning (HVAC), roofing, load-bearing members, plumbing, foundation, and exterior walls. The definition of "structural" may be varied by agreement. For example in some multi-unit facilities, such as strip shopping malls, the HVAC system is installed by the tenant, and the tenant bears the responsibility for the system. This also may be true of plumbing.

The reason for the repair dichotomy is that landlords have a strong interest in the structural items because they are of particular importance to the integrity and value of the building. The nonstructural items are far less costly to repair. By making nonstructural items the tenant's responsibility, the landlord is also encouraging the tenant to take good care of those items on a day-to-day basis.

Most leases contain a provision requiring the tenant to notify the landlord promptly when a structural repair will be required. In addition, the landlord must reserve rights of access to repair structural items and to perform emergency repairs on nonstructural items where the items in need of repair could cause additional damage. Such an emergency repair of a nonstructural item may be charged to the tenant under the terms of many leases.

In addition to being responsible for structural repairs, some landlords prefer to be responsible for ordinary repairs to the premises. Clearly, the landlord will factor such responsibility into the rental structure of the lease, or will require the tenant to reimburse the landlord for the cost of performing such repairs.

The landlord may wish to perform nonstructural repairs for many reasons. First, the landlord may be concerned that the tenant will not perform the repairs promptly. Items which are highly visible to visitors to the premises will detract from the value of the building and its desirability to future tenants. Second, the landlord may be concerned about the quality of workmanship. In a first class building, poor quality workmanship will have the same effect as failure to repair. Third, the landlord may be concerned that the tenant or its agents may not have the knowledge or skill needed to perform a repair to a complicated system properly. In addition, the landlord may be concerned about the effect that the repair work will have on other tenants. Noise, dust and carelessly placed supplies and equipment will not be popular with other tenants who are trying to carry on their businesses. If the landlord can control the repairs, the landlord can also maintain the quality and atmosphere of its buildings.

[14] Other Obligations of Tenant

The lease should contain a description of the additional obligations assumed by the tenant. These include obligations concerning the condition of the premises, insurance, use of the property and other obligations which are specific to the particular parties or premises.

[a] Condition of the Premises

The reasonable tenant will have examined the premises on a few occasions prior to the negotiation and execution of the lease. The tenant will know what is needed to put the premises into the condition which the tenant will need for use. From that framework, the parties can negotiate the terms of the lease. Although certain provisions may be described as "typical," the provisions are always subject to negotiation. One caveat should be noted. Landlords who own and lease considerable amounts of commercial space may be less likely to negotiate provisions unless they have a large amount of vacant space.

The tenant will be asked to maintain the premises in good condition. This will require the tenant to clean and paint as is necessary, and to prevent employees and invitees from damaging the premises. The provision of cleaning and janitorial service is generally subject to negotiation. In office complexes with many tenants, cleaning is often included in the lease price. In single use retail and industrial spaces, cleaning is more often not included in the lease price. Unless the tenant has someone on staff to handle these responsibilities, the tenant should carefully investigate the cost of cleaning services before accepting this term.

Lawn care and snow removal are generally included in the lease price of multi-unit buildings. In shopping centers, these are a component of the common area charges. In single user buildings, this is subject to negotiation. Both the landlord and the tenant will have concerns about these items. The landlord will want to be sure that the persons performing the job are competent so that expensive landscaping is not ruined. The tenant will want the grounds maintained for both aesthetic and safety reasons. The parties should carefully investigate the costs. Where the landlord has an outdoor maintenance staff, this may be cost effective and will satisfy both aesthetic and safety concerns.

[b] Alterations

Alterations are changes in the layout of the building which are required to make the space useful to the tenant. Alterations include initial tenant improvements at the beginning of the lease. In addition, they include any physical changes required during the term of the lease to accommodate growth or other business changes.

After the initial tenant improvements, alterations, if the lease permits them, are typically performed at the tenant's expense, since they are generated by the tenant's needs. However, the lease should provide that alterations may be made only with the landlord's prior written approval, to prevent the tenant from making alterations in such a way that the landlord will have difficulty renting the space in the future or the premises will be permanently damaged. Part of the approval process may be a condition that the tenant restore the premises to its prior configuration at the lease end. The tenant will ask for the right to make nonstructural alterations without the prior consent of the landlord.

If alterations are permitted by the lease, the lease should include a provision controlling the possibility that the property could become encumbered by liens for materials and services furnished to the tenant. Several different methods are available to protect the landlord from such encumbrances, including the following requirements: (a) the landlord's approval of all work in excess of a specified amount; (b) a bond for the completion of the work free of encumbrances; (c) waivers of liens of materialmen, architects, contractors and others; (d) the deposit of security by the tenant; and (e) the landlord's right to discharge liens which are on record for more than a specified period and to add the cost of such discharge to the rent. The lease also should require the tenant to obtain all necessary permits from governmental authorities before construction begins, and to perform all work in compliance with all applicable laws, building and zoning codes.

[c] Decorations

The term "decorations" usually refers to amenities or fixtures added by the tenant for its own pleasure. These may include wallpaper, window treatments, crown moldings, closets, and built-in bookshelves. Many leases provide that such amenities become part of the demised premises and must be left behind at the conclusion of the term. In addition, many leases give the landlord the option of requiring the tenant to remove decorations. Typically, the landlord will want the tenant to remove decorations that may be dangerous or decorations that one would not expect future tenants to use or which would be costly to remove.

Some leases contain an exception for trade fixtures. That is, where the decoration is an item used by the tenant in its trade or business, the item may be removed without compensating the landlord.

The removal of or failure to remove a decoration may result in the cost thereof being charged to the tenant. Similarly, if the removal of an item causes damage, the tenant is responsible for the cost of the repair.

[15] Insurance

Both the landlord and the tenant should be insured for both liability and casualty losses. Each may be liable for an injury to person or property which occurs on or about the premises, since each has an interest in the premises.

The policy limits for liability insurance, in large part, depend on the location of the property. In metropolitan areas it is common to require liability policy limits in multiple millions. In less populated areas, required liability insurance limits of more than a million dollars are less common.

Property damage or casualty limit requirements will vary depending upon the type of tenancy, type of building, and the potential for injury. These limits are subject to negotiation; however, both parties must be sure that sufficient insurance is obtained. Failure to do so can result in a tremendous financial disaster for all involved.

Most leases require that the tenant provide proof of the required insurance coverage before taking possession of the premises. Such proof can be a duplicate original insurance policy or a certificate of insurance. The certificate will show the policy limits, premises insured, the named insured and the loss payee, if any.

The liability insurance obtained by the tenant must cover any injury which occurs on or about the premises or arises out of the tenant's use of the premises. In a multi-unit facility, the landlord must carry liability insurance for injuries occurring in the common areas. In shopping centers and facilities with similar rent structures, this cost is charged back to the tenants as part of the common area charges.

The casualty insurance obtained by the tenant must protect against damage to the space and to the tenant's personalty. The landlord may require the tenant in a single use structure to insure the entire structure. In a multi-unit facility, the landlord may charge the casualty insurance on the structure back to the tenant as part of common area charges, or by a separate charge.

Most leases contain a provision requiring the tenant to obtain a provision in its policy of insurance notifying the landlord of a cancellation of the insurance a particular number of days before the effective date of cancellation, usually between ten and thirty days. The purpose of such a provision is to allow the landlord the opportunity to obtain other coverage while taking the necessary legal steps to enforce the tenant's obligation to maintain coverage.

Landlords frequently require that tenants name them as "additional insureds." The effect of this requirement is to create an obligation on the part of the tenant's insurance company to the landlord.

Landlords also frequently require a hold harmless provision. This requires the tenant to indemnify the landlord for any claim (including defense costs) which arises out of the tenant's use of the premises, or resulting from any default or breach of the lease by the tenant. The tenant's counsel should review any hold harmless provision carefully to be sure that the tenant's insurance will cover the liability being assumed. In addition, the tenant's counsel should be certain that the tenant is not assuming liability for any injury caused by the landlord.

The parties also may desire to include a provision in the lease denying subrogation rights in order to prevent insurance companies, as primary obligors, from shifting the burden of casualty loss to a negligent or indemnifying landlord or tenant. One method of precluding the shifting of risk from the insurance company is to include both the landlord and the tenant in the same insurance policy, since the insurer has no right of subrogation against its own insured. Another method is for each party to release the other from liability, thereby foreclosing the insurer's subrogation rights. The operation of such a release clause may be conditioned upon the issuance by the insurer of a waiver of subrogation rights. The most comprehensive type of clause denying subrogation rights provides for a mutual release of all liabilities to the extent of insurance coverage, conditioned upon an appropriate arrangement with the insurance company, and including an undertaking by the parties to make such an arrangement wherever possible.

[16] Limitations on Use of the Leased Premises

The parties may negotiate a number of limitations on the use of the leased premises. Such use limitations can protect the landlord and the value of the premises, they can protect the tenant and its business, or they can protect other tenants and their businesses.

[a] Commercial Use

Most leases contain a provision describing the tenant's intended use of the premises. Where a specific business use is contemplated, the lease usually permits activities which are allied to the main enterprise. The specification of a particular use in the lease does not constitute a representation on the landlord's part that the use is permitted under applicable laws and regulations. If a permit, license or other government approval is necessary, the tenant should make sure that its lease obligations are contingent upon obtaining the necessary governmental permission.

Many leases also contain provisions prohibiting uses which are hazardous or which could increase the insurance rates, impair the landlord's title, or adversely affect the value of the property. Additionally, it is common to prohibit uses which violate the certificate of occupancy, breach governmental laws or regulations, constitute a nuisance, or are disreputable, bawdy, or illegal. In some jurisdictions, unless the landlord intends to limit the tenant's use of the premises to a specific purpose, it may be sufficient to allow the tenant to use the premises for "any lawful purpose" if local laws and regulations impose adequate limitations on the tenant's activities.

The landlord will want to be certain that any new tenant's use of the premises is in harmony with other uses in the facility. The landlord does not wish to have a tenant whose legitimate use of the space is so noxious as to drive out other valuable tenants. For example, the landlord may not wish to have a food vendor or hair salon in the same building with professional offices, because the odors produced may not be conducive to the existing tenancies. Similarly, an off-track betting parlor may not be appropriate in a building which also houses a day care center.

[i] Noncompetition Provisions and Radius Restrictions

A tenant has no right to prevent the landlord or other tenants from engaging in competing businesses unless the lease specifically provides for such a right. Such a provision is sometimes called a "noncompetition" or "exclusive use" provision. An exclusive use provision restricts the landlord from allowing a use by another tenant in the landlord's facility similar to the use specified in the lease. For example, a lease of a toy store in a shopping center may contain a restriction against leasing to another toy store within the center.

There are three basic types of exclusive use provisions. The first method is to restrict the landlord from entering into a lease with another tenant for a specified use. The second method is to include in the lease a covenant by the landlord not to permit the particular use in a store or other space in the landlord's facility. In the third method, the landlord grants the tenant the exclusive right to the particular use in the landlord's facility. The choice of exclusive use provision appropriate in a particular lease depends upon the facts and circumstances of the transaction, as well as local law.

In addition, the landlord may have obligations to existing tenants not to accept tenants who will compete directly for business. Often the landlord will ask a potential retail tenant to provide a list of its product lines or suppliers before executing the lease. The landlord may require that certain product lines not be carried, and a list of those prohibited product lines may be annexed to the lease.

Other variations on noncompetition clauses are the "approval clause" and the "no discounter clause." These provisions are most often found in the leases of anchor tenants in shopping centers. The approval clause grants the tenant the right to approve other tenants in the landlord's facility. The no discounter clause allows the tenant to control the quality of the goods sold by other tenants. Both types of lease provisions are designed to protect the image and financial security of the shopping center.

Some leases also have prohibitions on tenants operating a similar business within a particular distance of the landlord's facility. Such a provision is commonly known as a "radius restriction." The landlord does not want the tenant competing with itself for business, particularly where the landlord receives a percentage of income as part of the rent. Radius restrictions are often used in conjunction with percentage rent arrangements, especially in shopping center leases. Instead of an outright ban against the tenant's operation of a similar store within a given distance from the landlord's facility, the lease can accomplish a similar purpose by including the income or sales of any store operated by the tenant within a specified radius in the computation of the tenant's income or sales for the determination of percentage rent. A radius restriction also can be used to prevent the landlord from leasing other premises within a certain area to a competitor of the tenant.

The parties must draft a noncompetition provision or radius restriction carefully to avoid having the clause invalidated as a violation of antitrust laws or an unlawful restraint of trade. Such provisions must have a bona fide business purpose. The scope and effect of the restriction may not be unreasonably broad. Therefore, the lease provision must be reasonable in terms of the length of time that it is effective, the geographical distance covered by the provision, and the particular purpose of the clause. The practitioner should consult applicable federal and local law, as various jurisdictions treat such provisions differently. Ultimately, the validity of a particular restriction depends upon the facts and circumstances of the transaction.

[b] Limitations on the Use of Substances on the Premises

Either the landlord or the tenant may desire a provision in the lease limiting the use of certain substances on the premises. With more attention being focused on the dangers of particular substances which are commonly used, this part of the lease may be subject to a great deal of negotiation.

The parties may be concerned about the use of pesticides and insecticides in the structures and on the grounds.

Wherever garbage is stored and disposed of, there is potential for vermin. Pesticides seem to be the only effective treatment; however, these can have a harmful effect on humans in the building as well.

Similarly, cleaning agents can have noxious odors and harmful effects even when properly used. When not properly used, they can be deadly. For example, the mixing of toilet bowl cleaner and chlorine bleach can create deadly gas.

Certain businesses may use or create hazardous substances as part of their ordinary business activities. The parties should discuss and agree upon procedures for storage and disposal of such substances. Under federal law,ⁿ¹ both the user and owner of real property can be liable for the clean up of toxic and other hazardous substances which are released onto the property.

Where the tenant is using hazardous substances, the landlord may require that the tenant keep a record of all substances which have been used, produced or disposed of on or from the premises. The landlord should reserve the right to review the records and audit for compliance.

The landlord may require a hold harmless provision to protect the landlord from claims by other tenants or injury to persons and property arising out of the use of hazardous substances. The landlord should be certain that the tenant has the financial ability to protect the landlord. Moreover, the landlord may want additional security in the form of a letter of credit or indemnity bond.

[c] Use of Natural Resources

If premises contain natural resources, the parties must negotiate the extent to which the tenant, its invitees and employees may use the natural resources. This issue has a variety of aspects.

[i] Exterior Open Space

Where the premises have exterior green space, the tenant may wish to establish recreational areas for its employees, such as a picnic area or trails for exercise. This may increase the value of the landlord's property on re-rental, but it may cause wildlife to relocate, which may decrease its ultimate value. The landlord may wish to designate particular areas for use or set other protective limitations on recreational use.

[ii] Water Sources

If the premises contain water sources, an industrial tenant may wish to utilize the water sources in lieu of municipal water. This could save the tenant a considerable amount of money over the course of the lease. It also has the potential to do a great deal of harm to the premises, which may reduce its value and for which the landlord could be liable under various federal and state laws. If the tenant is to be allowed to use such water sources, there must be very strict guidelines included in the lease. These guidelines should specify the volume of water to be drawn per day, the site from which it may be drawn, the method to be used to measure the volume, and the records which will be kept. The landlord should have access to those records and the right to audit them. The lease should also specify how the water is to be released after use, including the location of release, volume per day, purity, temperature, and record keeping requirements. Again, the landlord should have the right to audit records. In case the tenant violates any provisions relating to the use of water, the landlord should retain the right to terminate the tenant's use of the water summarily.

The lease should provide that the tenant must hold the landlord harmless for any loss which occurs as a result of the tenant's violation of the lease provisions or any law relating to water use and discharge. The landlord should review the tenant's finances to be sure that the tenant has the capacity to indemnify.

[iii] Energy Sources

If the premises contain energy sources, such as natural gas, the tenant may request the right to utilize such energy sources. The tenant will be able to realize a considerable savings over commercial sources; however, such energy sources are nonrenewable. Therefore, the tenant should pay the landlord additional consideration for the use of the resources.

The landlord may wish to limit the volume of use. Provision for measurement and record keeping should be included. The equipment needed to exploit the energy sources may be extensive and unsightly, so the landlord may wish to designate sites for construction and location of such equipment. The landlord also may wish to require natural screening of the site with trees and shrubbery to protect the aesthetic value of the property.

The lease should require removal of the equipment, at the landlord's option, upon the termination of the lease. In addition, restoration of the site to its former condition should be required to maintain property values.

If the development of the energy source is hazardous, additional insurance requirements should be set forth in the lease. In addition, the landlord should require a hold harmless agreement to indemnify the landlord from any loss (including defense costs) for injury to person or property which arises out of or in the course of the exploration, development or use of the energy source by the tenant. The landlord should review the tenant's finances to be sure that the tenant can indemnify if a loss occurs which is not covered by insurance.

[iv] Harvesting Resources

Some tenants are engaged in businesses that use other resources, such as shale or timber, which may be found on the landlord's premises. Shale is a non-renewable resource. Timber, is renewable, although many years are required to return a forest to its former condition. The tenant will be using these resources strictly to enhance its profit, so the landlord should receive a part of this profit. Generally, the landlord's share of profits is in the form of royalties based on the volume which the tenant harvests.

The lease should provide a method for determining volume and a requirement for record keeping. The landlord should reserve the right to inspect and audit the records, and may wish to include a penalty provision in the event that the records are inaccurate or deceptive. The landlord should require the royalties be paid within a particular period after the resource is harvested, and interest should be paid after that period expires.

The lease should also provide for appropriate reclamation of the land at the conclusion of the harvesting activities. The landlord may wish to require the tenant to purchase a bond to cover the cost of reclamation. Alternatively, the landlord can require that a certain amount of money per ton or thousand board feet be placed in an escrow account to help defray the cost of reclamation. In addition, where appropriate, natural screening of the area should be required.

Most harvesting activities are more hazardous than the ordinary tenancy, so the landlord should require additional insurance. Additionally, the landlord should negotiate a hold harmless provision, requiring the tenant to indemnify the landlord for any loss (including defense costs) for injury to person or property which arises out of or in the course of the harvesting and reclamation activities. The landlord should review the tenant's finances to be sure that the tenant has the ability to indemnify in the event that there is insufficient insurance coverage.

The lease should require the tenant to obtain all necessary governmental approvals for the activities. A copy of any permits should be provided to the landlord, and the tenant should be required to notify the landlord immediately if any permit is revoked or not renewed. Such revocation or non-renewal is an indication that the tenant may not have abided by all governmental requirements. The landlord should thoroughly investigate such a situation, and should have the ability to terminate the lease if the investigation shows that the tenant has not complied with all laws. Alternatively, the landlord can extend to the tenant a period of time within which to correct the deficiencies. If the tenant fails to correct, then the landlord can terminate the lease. If the tenant does correct the deficiencies, the landlord is in a better position since the landlord has a rent paying tenant instead of a vacancy with deficiencies which the landlord must correct. Whether to terminate the lease or allow the tenant time to correct the deficiencies depends on the nature of the deficiencies and the character of the tenant. If the deficiencies are items which may worsen instead of improving over time, such as pollution, the landlord may be better off terminating the tenancy before the tenant has an opportunity to release further pollutants. If, however, the deficiencies are in the nature of the operations, such as OSHA² violations, rather than in the condition of the premises, the landlord can be comfortable in extending time in which to correct the deficiencies. In either event, the landlord should monitor the situation closely to protect itself from liability or irreversible injury to the premises.

[v] Recreational Use of Vacant Land

Owners of tracts of real property which are idle may be asked to lease the property for recreational use. Often the proposed tenant will be a hunting, biking or ski club. The club offers to pay rent for exclusive use of the premises by its members. The rent will help offset the landlord's cost of taxes and insurance, and in some cases, may exceed those expenses.

The landlord will want to be sure that the attributes of the land are not damaged by the tenant's use. To prevent such damage, the landlord can place limits on the use, such as prohibiting the use of timber for firewood, requiring sanitation facilities at various locations, or requiring that all refuse be carried off the premises for disposal. The landlord may wish to place a limit on the number of persons using the premises per day or per season, or to expressly prohibit certain activities such as hunting or snowmobiling. The landlord should reserve the right to terminate the lease if the land is suffering deterioration from the tenant's use.

If the landlord permits the tenant to construct warming huts, shelters or lodges, the lease should require the landlord's approval of all plans and locations. The lease also should provide for maintenance of the structures and casualty insurance, and should specify whether the structures can or must be removed at the end of the term.

Many leases of recreational land provide that the tenant must provide for security for the premises. In addition, the landlord will require a hold harmless provision and personal injury liability insurance to protect the landlord from any claim by a person who may be injured while using the premises.

[17] Termination of the Lease

[a] Condition of the Premises

The parties must set forth the condition in which the premises are to be returned to the landlord at the termination of the tenancy. This agreed upon condition should apply whether the termination is voluntary, at the end of the term of the lease, or involuntary by eviction.

An appropriate lease provision regarding the condition of the premises upon the termination of the lease will depend, in part, on whether the tenant is responsible for repairs. If the tenant is responsible, the lease may provide that the tenant will leave the premises in as good condition as it was in at the beginning of the lease, reasonable wear and tear excepted. In such a case, the tenant need not repaint, but all walls should be intact, all doors and windows should function, ceiling tiles should be in place, and floor coverings should be in place.

If the tenant is not responsible for repairs during the term of the lease, the lease will generally specify that the premises are to be returned "broom clean." The term "broom clean" means exactly that, that the tenant has removed its property and swept the premises. The tenant need not clean the windows and carpets professionally. In most cases, the landlord will have a substantial amount of work to do to ready the premises for a new tenant, including moving walls, installing new floor coverings and freshly painting the premises. Cleaning beyond broom clean would be a waste.

There may be certain instances where the landlord wants the premises professionally cleaned. This typically is the case in a single user structure, where walls cannot be moved, such as a building of historic significance. In that case, the lease should carefully specify the exact measures which the tenant is to take before surrendering possession. If the tenant fails to take such measures, the landlord may offset its expenses in fulfilling the tenant's obligations against the security deposit.

[b] Removal of Personalty

The removal of personalty is always a difficult issue. Where the personalty becomes built into the space, its removal may cause damage to the premises and may also be costly. However, the personalty may not enhance the space for use by a different tenant. In fact, it may inhibit future tenants from renting the space.

To avoid problems, the landlord should reserve the right to review and approve all alterations in advance of installation. With each alteration, the parties should agree on how it is to be installed, whether it will be removed at the end of the lease and who will be responsible for repair of any damage caused by removal. If the tenant fails to remove any item which was designated for removal, the landlord may offset the cost of removal, disposal and repair against the tenant's security deposit.

An alternative approach is to allow the tenant to make the alterations during the lease. Upon termination of the lease, the landlord is given a particular number of days in which to determine which, if any, items the landlord wishes to have removed. The tenant has a specified number of days thereafter to remove the items. If the tenant fails to remove the items, the landlord can remove them and offset the cost against the security deposit.

The latter scheme has the advantage of more flexibility for the landlord. By the end of the lease the landlord may have a new tenant. If the new tenant wants the fixtures, the parties are saved the trouble and expense of removal; however, if items which at the beginning of the lease seemed to be enhancements are now, at the end of the lease, in poor condition, the landlord can require their removal. Although this may be an awkward system for the old tenant, who must focus attention on the old site while trying to get settled in a new location, this system does have an advantage, since the old tenant will not be required to remove items that the new tenant wants anyway.

[c] Trade Fixtures

Trade fixtures are those items installed by the tenant for specific use in the tenant's business. Trade fixtures may include such things as walk-in freezers for a restaurant, the bar in a tavern, or hydraulic chairs in a dental office. Since the tenant cannot operate its business without these items, the tenant should always reserve the right to remove them.

Similarly, since another tenant is unlikely to need these items, the landlord should require their removal and the repair of any damage caused by such removal. If the tenant fails to remove and repair, the landlord may offset its expenses in doing so against the security deposit.

[d] Return of Keys

The return of keys is particularly important in a multi-unit building with common areas. A former tenant's failure to return keys may require the landlord to change locks and provide new keys to all tenants. This can be a very costly process. In buildings which use security codes rather than keys, this is not quite as expensive an issue.

Technically, a tenant does not surrender possession until it has delivered the keys to the landlord. The landlord is entitled to rent until the keys are delivered or until the landlord changes the lock or security keys.

The landlord should reserve the right to charge its costs in changing the locks and supplying new keys against the security deposit.

[e] Prompt Vacation of the Premises

Vacating the premises is never an easy chore for the tenant, who often has a great deal of inventory, equipment, files and other items to move. In addition, the tenant has to cope with the interruption of its business. Many people find moving distasteful and put it off as long as possible. If the landlord is receiving rent and has no other tenant waiting, this may not pose a problem; however, if the landlord has a new tenant waiting for the space, delays in the existing tenant's vacation of the premises can cause the landlord to lose the new tenant.

At the commencement of the lease, no one can be sure what the situation will be at the end of the lease. Therefore, to encourage the timely departure of the tenant, many leases provide a penalty for holding over. The penalty is often an increase in the rent of a hundred percent or more. Such a penalty, in addition to encouraging the departure of the existing tenant, can provide the landlord with the ability to offer the new tenant a decrease in rent for a period to make up for the inconvenience of being unable to take occupancy on time. Most leases relieve the landlord of any liability to the new tenant for failure to deliver the premises in a timely manner; however, a financial incentive is a practical way to smooth a rough start to the new tenancy.

[18] Quiet Enjoyment

Quiet enjoyment is an ancient concept that, in essence, provides that the landlord will ensure that the tenant's use and occupation of the leased premises will not be interrupted so long as the tenant fulfills its obligations. This is similar to the rights of quiet enjoyment contained in a warranty deed, except that the deed refers to the extended rights of a fee owner, while the lease encompasses the lesser rights of use and occupation of a tenant. A general covenant of quiet enjoyment rarely gives the tenant any rights in addition to those which are implied in every lease by law.

The covenant of quiet enjoyment in a lease sometimes is used to limit the scope of the covenants implied by law. For example, the lease may provide that the right to quiet enjoyment is predicated upon the tenant's performance of all of the terms of the lease. The covenant also may be limited by making the tenant's rights subordinate to existing mortgages, ground leases, and other superior liens.

[19] Contingencies

After the tenant locates an acceptable space and negotiates the basics of rental amount, term and tenant improvements, there still may be a number of issues which concern the tenant. These issues cannot be readily resolved by a bare inspection by the tenant, but instead, inspection and testing by a professional or knowledgeable individual is required. If the issues are of such importance that the tenant will relinquish otherwise desirable space if the issues cannot be satisfactorily resolved, then such issues may be handled by means of contingencies to the lease.

Lease contingencies provide that if a certain item of concern is found on the premises or an issue cannot be resolved favorably within a specified period, the tenant may terminate the lease without further obligation. The tenant must watch the time frames carefully. The landlord is under no obligation to extend the contingencies. If the tenant fails to terminate the lease within the specified period, the tenant becomes obligated to fulfill the terms of the lease regardless of the resolution of the issue.

Often, where the issue is the condition of the structure, the tenant will want the space even in the face of a negative inspection report. The landlord and the tenant often can negotiate an addendum or amendment to the lease which allows the tenant to correct the problem with an agreed upon abatement or reduction in the rent. Alternatively, the landlord can agree to remedy the problem with no change in rent. If the landlord is not agreeable to either alternative, the tenant must either accept the space subject to the problem or terminate the lease and seek new space.

Contingencies often concern healthy or environmental issues regarding the leased space, such as radon, asbestos, lead or urea formaldehyde insulation. Contingencies may concern the capacity of the facilities appurtenant to the space, such as a well or septic system, or the ability to use the space under various governmental restrictions. All of these issues impact on the tenant's use of the premises and none can be resolved without further investigation. For a more detailed discussion of environmental contingencies and specific forms relating to them, see Vol. 33, Chapter 25, Environmental Considerations in Real Estate Transactions, infra.

[a] Septic System

In many areas not served by a municipal sewerage system, commercial structures are served by septic systems. Depending on the nature of the use, some septic systems are as complicated as small municipal sewerage systems. Where the tenant's proposed use contemplates the use and discharge of significant amounts of water, it will be necessary to determine the capacity of the septic system. This can be done by an engineer, who will review the design of the system, the soils and the proposed output to determine the capacity.

If the system cannot handle the expected output, the tenant has several options. The tenant can terminate the lease, negotiate with the landlord for an expansion of the system by landlord, or offer to pay to expand the system with a reduction in the annual rent to help offset the cost of the system. The tenant also can investigate the cost of attachment to the municipal system.

If attachment to the municipal system is a possibility, the tenant must determine whether the amount of water the tenant intends to discharge is acceptable to the municipality. Certain large users may require permits to discharge. In addition, the tenant must determine the cost to attach. Since such attachment is a permanent improvement, the tenant should negotiate with the landlord as to who will pay the cost of attachment. Where the septic system is functioning adequately otherwise, the landlord may be reluctant to pay a large portion of the cost; however, where the landlord has no other prospective tenants, the landlord may be willing to pay a larger portion of the attachment cost.

Even a tenant who does not contemplate extraordinary output must still be concerned that the septic system is in good working order so that the tenant's business operations will not be interrupted. This can be determined by means of a dye test. A dye is introduced into a toilet on the premises, flushed into the system, and observed to be sure that it flows properly. If the system is not functioning properly, the cause must be determined. There may be a blockage or there may be a need for additional drain field.

If the system is not functioning, the tenant may terminate the lease or ask the landlord to make the necessary repairs. The landlord should be willing to make the repairs, since the value of the building will be enhanced thereby. In addition, if the building is a multi-user facility, it is likely that existing tenants' leases will require such repairs. Normally, the repair of a septic system, as part of the plumbing system, is considered a structural repair to be performed by the landlord.

[b] Well Water

In areas not served by municipal water systems, commercial buildings may be served by a well. Three issues always arise in connection with well water: purity, quantity, and quality.

[i] Water Purity

Well water should be free of harmful bacteria.ⁿ¹ Well water purity can be tested by a laboratory analysis of water drawn from a tap on the premises. The laboratory will test for the presence of bacteria, particularly Coliform and E.Coli.

Both bacteria can cause illness in humans. If the analysis shows the presence of bacteria, the well may be treated with chlorine or other disinfectant and retested. If the well remains contaminated, the source of the contamination must be located and abated. Frequently, the source is a septic system which is too close to the well.

If testing determines that there are problems with the purity of well water, the tenant may terminate the lease or ask the landlord to make the necessary repairs. Generally, because a well is part of the plumbing system, the work necessary to protect the purity of the well is considered a structural repair. In a multi-user building, the landlord probably is obligated under existing leases to perform such work.

[ii] Water Quantity

The next issue is the quantity of well water available. Where the sole use of water in a commercial building is for sinks and toilets, the sufficiency of the quantity of water available may be determined by a simple test similar to that required in a home. Where additional water is needed for production, showers or washing machines, the amount needed may be difficult to predict. The flow quantity may be determined by a simple test that consists of measuring the number of gallons produced per minute as water flows from a faucet.

If the flow is not sufficient, several techniques may be used to enhance the amount of water available for use. First, a holding tank may be attached to the well. This may be filled so that at peak use, water may be drawn from the holding tank in addition to the well. The tank is slowly refilled from the well during nonpeak times. This is not an extremely costly method.

If a holding tank will not solve the problem, sometimes the well can be deepened. This solution has potential problems. It may not produce the desired increased flow. In addition, the process of deepening may tap into veins of water or minerals which may affect the quality of the well water.

Another solution is to establish a new well. This is a fairly costly technique depending on the geology of the area, and a second well does not always have the desired results. It may not produce any additional water, and the quality of the water may not be acceptable.

Hydrofracturing may be tried. Hydrofracturing is a process designed to break up veins or pockets of water and make them more available to access by the well. The process includes pumping gas into the ground as well as blasting. This technique has inherent dangers associated with blasting, can be quite costly, and is not guaranteed to produce the desired results. If the landlord decides to try hydrofracturing, a thorough investigation of the qualifications of the hydrofracturer should be undertaken.

The lease contingency should provide that the tenant may terminate the lease if the water quantity is insufficient. Alternatively, the tenant may ask the landlord to undertake one or more of the above-described techniques to enhance flow. With the possible exception of the holding tank, the nature of the techniques to increase water flow are such that the landlord would not want the tenant to undertake them on the landlord's property. Furthermore, if the landlord has other tenants in the property, the landlord may be obligated under those leases to remediate well water quantity problems as structural repairs.

[iii] Water Quality

The final water issue is quality. Water which is clear of bacteria nevertheless may contain substances which make it unpalatable. Some of these substances are not considered harmful, but they may be noxious or unpleasant, such as sulphur or iron, which have a characteristic unpleasant smell. Others may be quite harmful, such as lead or methane gas.

Laboratory tests are available to determine the content of the water. Where a particular substance exceeds acceptable levels (either by industry standards or personal preference), a water conditioning system can be installed. Such a system can be installed for the entire building or at a particular site on a system to improve drinking water. Alternatively, a bottled water service may be used.

The tenant is likely to find that the landlord will not be willing to bear the cost of the installation and maintenance of a water conditioning system unless the substances affecting the water quality are dangerous, such as methane gas. Matters of personal preference will not be costs of the landlord.

[c] Asbestos²

Asbestos is a naturally occurring crystalline substance. In the past, it was used in construction for its insulating and flame retardant properties. In older structures, it can be found as insulation on pipes and boilers, as well as in floor and ceiling tiles.

Asbestos is now considered to be a carcinogen.³ It is associated with lung cancer and other lung disorders, such as asbestosis. If the tiny asbestos fibers are released into the air, they are inhaled, and they may cause health problems over time. Asbestos has been classified as a "hazardous air pollutant" under the Clean Air Act.⁴

Asbestos is friable and should be treated. Since the mid-1980s, there has been a movement to remove or encapsulate asbestos in all structures. Encapsulation involves applying layers of encapsulating material to the surface of the asbestos to seal the fibers inside.

Work with asbestos is dangerous and costly. Asbestos workers must be certified to handle asbestos and must wear protective gear. Work areas must be sealed with outerspace-like airlock doorways, and negative air pressure must be maintained to prevent contamination of other areas. Air quality monitoring must take place to be sure that the fibers have been successfully removed.

Removal projects of particular size require notice to the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, as well as the appropriate state agencies. Projects must be performed by licensed asbestos handlers.

The presence of asbestos can be determined by microscopic examination of the suspected material. A certified asbestos handler can report whether the condition of the asbestos requires its removal. If an inspection of the premises reveals the existence of asbestos, the tenant may terminate the lease. Alternatively, the tenant may negotiate with the landlord regarding the removal or encapsulation of the asbestos. Both parties should be concerned about the presence of asbestos. Either party may be subject to claims by the tenant's employees and invitees for injury caused by exposure to friable asbestos. If the parties contemplate major renovations to the premises prior to occupancy by the tenant, the removal costs could be included as part of the tenant improvements. The exact allocation of the cost should be agreed upon by the parties.

Where very minor amounts of tenant improvements are contemplated, the negotiations become more difficult because the cost of asbestos removal may dramatically increase the costs of such improvements. The landlord will be in a difficult position. Once the landlord is aware of the existence of asbestos, the landlord may be obligated ethically to reveal that fact to other prospective tenants. Removal of the asbestos may increase the value of the building. Consequently, the landlord may be willing to agree to a reduction of rent to help offset the tenant's cost of asbestos removal where the tenant agrees to do so as part of the initial tenant improvements. If the tenant asks the landlord to remove the asbestos, the landlord will not grant an adjustment in rental. The landlord probably will need to absorb the entire cost of asbestos removal, unless the space is uniquely suited to the tenant's needs and no similar space is readily available to the tenant. In such a situation, the tenant may be willing to assist in the removal of asbestos to ensure the availability of the space.

[d] Urea Formaldehyde Insulation⁵

During the energy crisis of the 1970s and 1980s, many owners of existing buildings sought inexpensive ways to insulate those buildings. One method of insulation was to drill holes in the exterior siding of structures and blow foam into the space between the exterior siding and the interior walls. The foam would harden into insulation. The holes in the siding were capped.

Some of the foam contained urea formaldehyde. As the foam lies in between the walls, vapors from the formaldehyde may be released. Ill effects have been reported by the occupants of such structures. Some residential mortgage lenders require certification that real property which serves as the collateral for the loan does not contain urea formaldehyde insulation.

The existence of urea formaldehyde insulation can be determined by records, if any, maintained by landlord or by a laboratory test of a sample of the insulation. If the insulation is determined to contain urea formaldehyde, the usual method of removal is to remove the exterior siding, remove the hardened foam, reinsulate, and replace the siding. This is fairly labor intensive, and therefore, fairly costly.

If urea formaldehyde insulation is found, the tenant may terminate the lease or attempt to negotiate with the landlord regarding removal. Due to the cost involved, the landlord is not likely to agree to pay for the removal unless there is a demonstrable health hazard for which the landlord may be liable. This is quite difficult to show. Furthermore, for the same reason, the landlord is unlikely to agree to reduce the rent and allow the tenant to effect the removal. In addition, the landlord is unlikely to trust the appearance of the exterior of the building to the tenant. A careless job could significantly reduce the value of the building. The tenant may wish to consider a different site.

Lead is often found in structures built before 1978 in the paint and/or in water pipes. Lead is very dangerous, especially to young children and pregnant women. It can cause death, damage to the brain and nervous system, behavior and learning problems, reproductive problems, high blood pressure, slowed growth, hearing problems, and many other health problems in children and adults. Lead is introduced into the body in a variety of ways. It leaches into the drinking water from pipes. It may be breathed into the body as dust from old paint, and small children often eat paint chips. Lead is extremely difficult to remove from the body.⁷

Federal law requires that individuals receive certain information about lead before renting, buying or renovating pre-1978 housing.⁸ In nonresidential situations, the tenant may still require various lead inspections and testing, the extent and nature of which will depend to some extent upon the nature of the tenant's use of the premises, including whether children will be present on the site.

The presence of lead pipes can usually be determined by visual inspection. The dangers of lead water pipes can only be eliminated by removal and replacement of the pipes. The cost of this will depend on the number of pipes and the ease of access to them.

Lead paint problems can be determined by visual inspection of paint condition and location, surface dust tests, spectrography or chemical tests of samples. Lead paint can be handled in three ways: removal of the surface containing the paint, encapsulation (i.e., by sheetrocking over the surface), or by sanding the surface. Removal is the most permanent and most expensive method, and it causes the least amount of lead dust. Encapsulation may not be permanent and is moderately expensive. As the seams age, lead dust may escape. Encapsulation may not be performed by painting alone. Sanding is not recommended, as it produces high quantities of lead dust; however, sanding is a lower cost alternative and deemed permanent.

In drafting lease contingencies, the attorney should draft separate contingencies for lead pipes and lead paint respectively. If the tenant's use will expose employees or customers to the water coming through the lead pipes, the pipe contingency should allow the tenant to terminate the lease if any lead water pipes exist. Alternatively, the tenant may negotiate with the landlord regarding the removal of lead pipes.

A lead paint contingency should be included in the lease of any structure or part of a structure built before 1978, especially if the structure is a residence and the anticipated tenant has small children. A commercial property lease should contain a contingency that at least provides for testing for lead dust, which is harmful to people of any age.

The lead paint contingency should specify the method of testing and analysis to be used and should require that multiple samples be taken in each room, as well as soil samples from outdoors. The contingency should provide for repair of the sampled areas. It also should specify the qualifications and credentials of the party performing the sampling and analysis. It is important to be sure that the inspector is qualified and has received training in sampling and spectrography techniques.

The tenant may choose to terminate the lease if any lead paint or dust is found, or if the soil around the premises is found to be contaminated with lead. Given the cost of treating a lead paint problem, this may be the best choice if the tenant expects children to be present on the premises. Alternatively, the tenant may negotiate with the landlord regarding the treatment of a lead paint problem; however, in a commercial property lease situation, the landlord is not likely to agree to pay for such treatment unless there is a demonstrable health hazard for which the landlord may be liable. This will depend upon where the lead is found and how the property will be used. The willingness of the landlord to treat a lead paint problem will also depend upon how the particular problem should be treated and how expensive that treatment will be. If the parties contemplate major renovations to the premises prior to occupancy by the tenant, the lead paint treatment costs could be included as part of the renovation and construction, which frequently includes surface and sheetrock work anyway.

[f] Radonⁿ⁹

Radon is a colorless, odorless gas which occurs naturally. It is radioactive, and has been linked to a high incidence of lung cancer if found indoors in high concentrations. Radon enters structures in three ways. It may be contained in the building materials, it may seep into basements from underground pockets, or it may be contained in water that enters the structure. Radon is only dangerous in enclosed areas.ⁿ¹⁰

The presence of radon may be discovered through the use of a radon test kit. Several types are available, some of which are more accurate than others. Depending on the size of the space to be tested, more than one radon test kit may be needed. Alternatively, a radon testing company can be hired to test. The radon testing companies are usually more accurate than the test kits, so if a borderline result is achieved using a test kit, the landlord and tenant may wish to retest with a more sophisticated test. Most tests require the maintenance of closed door conditions. That is, the windows in the structure must remain closed and the number of times the doors are opened should be limited. This may be quite difficult in commercial space with multiple tenants.

The test kits are analyzed by a laboratory. The results are usually expressed in terms of pico curies of radon per liter of air. The United States Environmental Protection Agency has established a level of four pico curies per liter as the level above which remediation is suggested.

Various methods of remediation are available, depending on the source of the radon, radon level, and type of construction. Some involve ventilation of the basement area to remove radon. More complicated methods involve sealing the area to prevent entry of the radon or suctioning air from under the basement. Some methods are very inexpensive, while others are quite costly and may create other problems, such as increased heating costs. Radon remediation is a subject of great controversy, because the exposure takes a long time to cause an ill effect.

The landlord's attitude will have a strong effect on whether the landlord is willing to undertake remediation. The higher the level of radon, the more important remediation becomes. Since remediation affects the building as a whole and may require structural alterations, any remediation should be undertaken by the landlord. If the landlord is unwilling to effect remediation and the level of radon is high, the tenant should seek other space.

It may be helpful for the clients and attorneys to become familiar with current literature on radon. The United States Environmental Protection Agency publishes several pamphlets on radon.ⁿ¹¹ They may be useful in making an informed determination as to what radon level is high enough to require a prudent tenant to seek remediation or cancellation of the lease.

[g] Exterior Environmental Hazards

The events of the Love Canalⁿ¹² area near Buffalo, New York, alerted the entire nation to the problems of hazardous wastes and the fact that they may be found in many locations. Hazardous wastes are associated with a variety of health problems. The tenant may want to be aware of any potential hazardous waste problems on or near the premises to be leased.

The tenant can obtain a phase one environmental site assessment from a qualified company. Most of such companies take a multiple discipline approach to the environmental site assessment. The purpose of the assessment is to determine whether there is any evidence that the site in question or a nearby site suffers an adverse environmental impact due to releases of hazardous substances in, on or around the subject premises.

The assessment reviews the history of uses on the site by examining records in the office of the county clerk, local health department, municipality and police department. In addition, atlases, zoning maps and aerial photographs are obtained and studied. The Federal Environmental Protection Agency Superfund list and the State of New York mini-superfund lists will be searched to determine whether this site or a nearby site is listed. If any of the uses of the site may have involved the use of hazardous substances, further investigation is done, including interviews with former workers and a review of company records, if possible.

If this further investigation reveals a likelihood of use of hazardous substances, a recommendation will be made to take soil and water samples for laboratory testing. This is a phase two environmental site assessment. If the results of this test show no hazardous substances, the assessment is complete. However, the assessment report will be subject to caveats because of the leaching nature of some hazardous substances. That is, some substances may migrate through ground water. A site which is clean now may later be contaminated from a nearby site.

If the assessment shows evidence of pollution, the tenant should consider another site. CERCLAⁿ¹³ provides for strict liability for "owners and operators" of polluted sites for the cost of clean up of hazardous materials. The tenant should not risk becoming involved in future litigation in which it may be required to prove that it was not an owner or operator within the meaning of the law.ⁿ¹⁴ Furthermore, the tenant may not wish to subject itself, its employees, customers, or clients to the potential health risks associated with a polluted site.

If the landlord effects remediation of the site, the tenant may again consider the site; however, considering the cost and time involved, it is likely that the tenant will have found a suitable site long before the subject site is ready for use.

For a more detailed discussion of environmental assessments and specific forms relating to them, see Vol. 33, Chapter 25, Environmental Considerations in Real Estate Transactions, infra.

[h] Governmental Approvals

There are a variety of governmental approvals which may be required before the tenant takes occupancy of and uses the subject premises. These may be in the nature of zoning or planning approvals. They may be operational approvals such as emissions permits or waste disposal approval. If the tenant cannot obtain the needed permit, it cannot operate its business on the site. The lease, however favorable, is useless.

Governmental approvals can take a considerable period of time to obtain. The tenant and its counsel should be certain that the contingency contains enough time to obtain the approvals required. Otherwise, the tenant may find itself in the difficult situation of not having the required approvals when the contingency is about to expire and the landlord will not extend it. The tenant will then be forced to choose between losing a favorable lease or possibly being burdened with a useless lease.

There are three common types of lease provisions the parties can use to handle the need for governmental approval. The lease can be made contingent upon the tenant obtaining the required approval. Alternatively, the lease can obligate the landlord to obtain the approval and can provide that the tenant has no obligation under the lease if the landlord does not do so. Finally, the lease can place the entire burden on the tenant by requiring it to file for the approval, and also requiring it to pay rent for the term of the lease whether it obtains the approval or not.

[i] Zoning and Planning

Many local governments have enacted zoning and planning laws to establish and regulate the types of activities which are permissible in various areas. The laws vary widely from municipality to municipality in their requirements. Some laws are quite strict and require a site review for each new tenant, regardless of whether the use is the same as a prior tenant. Some require a building permit for the installation of a display cabinet.

It is extremely important to determine whether zoning or planning approval will be needed for a new tenant and the extent of such approval. The landlord, as part of the contingency, should be required to actively support the tenant's application for approval.

The tenant should make its application for zoning or planning approval immediately. If any negative response is expected from neighboring sites, the tenant should attempt to learn the basis of the objections. The tenant and the landlord may wish to offer appeasements to such objectors in advance. This may include limits on hours of operations, screening of parking, loading and refuse storage areas, and similar concessions designed to make the tenant a more palatable neighbor. Where such problems are handled before the public hearing, there is a much greater chance of obtaining the needed approval.

If the tenant is unable to obtain the zoning or planning approval, the tenant may consider resubmitting its application with a revised plan based on the objections of the zoning or planning officials. Usually, this will require an extension of the contingency. If the tenant is a desirable tenant, the landlord will usually grant an extension. Otherwise, the landlord must begin the search and approval process over again.

If the tenant is unable to obtain the approvals, the tenant must terminate the lease and locate another site.

[i] Business Operations Permits

Local law may require the tenant to obtain business operation permits. The need for such permits depends on the type of business in which the tenant is engaged. For example, if the tenant has a smoke stack, the tenant may be required to obtain a permit from the Environmental Protection Agency. Similarly, if the tenant's operations require the discharge of large amounts of water into a waterway or a sewerage system, it may need a discharge permit. If the tenant was previously operating at another site, it may need to meet higher standards at a new site, as it may lose the benefit of a grandfathering provision.

The tenant's proposed business operations should be thoroughly reviewed so that all necessary permits will be included in the contingency and obtained.

[ii] Waste Disposal

Under the Resource Conservation Recovery Act (RCRA),ⁿ¹⁵ solid waste disposal is no longer something to be taken for granted. Many municipalities will no longer collect refuse from commercial sources, so commercial tenants must locate private haulers who will collect the refuse. The cost of such haulers can be quite significant, especially for certain types of waste, such as medical wastes.

The tenant may wish to make the lease contingent upon the tenant's ability to obtain a refuse removal contract for a stated number of years, at a stated price or within a range of prices, which cannot be terminated without cause and which contains limits on increases in prices during the period. If the tenant cannot obtain such a contract, it may terminate the lease. To protect itself, the landlord may wish to reserve the right to obtain such a contract for the tenant. If the landlord does obtain such a contract, the contingency will be deemed satisfied.

[iii] Signs

Some municipalities are extremely sensitive about signs. Many limit the size and number of signs which a tenant may display on the exterior of a building. Signs not only advertise and identify a business location, but, for the operation of certain types of businesses, may be required by local laws. Without the sign, the business cannot legally operate.

Similarly, some municipalities limit the locations of signs. Certain property may be so physically situated that a sign in a legal place is not visible.

If the tenant includes a contingency for sign approval, the tenant should include the number of signs, minimum acceptable size, and location. If the tenant is unable to obtain all of its sign requirements, the tenant can terminate the lease. As with other municipal approvals, the contingency should require the landlord to actively support the tenant's application. Where the tenant is able to negotiate signage which is less than the tenant requested, but acceptable to it, the tenant may waive the benefits of the contingency.

[20] Compliance with Governmental Regulations

The lease should allocate responsibility between the landlord and the tenant for any changes or alterations necessary to conform to governmental laws and regulations. Sometimes this responsibility is contained in the clauses regarding repairs or permitted uses, and sometimes it is contained in a separate clause.

A lease clause regarding compliance with governmental regulations should specify the parties' respective obligations to make structural changes and to comply with future enactments not within the original contemplation of the parties. The tenant may desire that the lease grant it the right to contest the validity or applicability of a governmental regulation. Such a provision should specify whether and under what circumstances the tenant may delay compliance with the regulation, and whether the tenant is required to post security for the landlord's protection.

[a] Americans with Disabilities Act

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)ⁿ¹ prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability by public accommodations. Among other things, the law requires places of public accommodation and commercial facilities to be designed, constructed and altered in compliance with accessibility standards contained in federal regulations.ⁿ² Depending upon the circumstances of the lease, the landlord and the tenant of premises which meet the statutory definition of a "public accommodation" and/or a "commercial facility" will desire to provide in the lease for compliance with ADA requirements. Such a provision may ensure one party that the other party has complied with applicable governmental regulations, or it may allocate between the parties the responsibility for compliance.

[21] Defaults

[a] Default by the Tenant

Under most leases, the tenant's failure to fulfill any obligation set forth in the lease constitutes a default. The lease will expire or the landlord will be entitled to terminate the lease upon the occurrence of a default. The most common default is the failure to pay rent in a timely manner.

Default provisions usually enumerate the events of default, describe the procedures by which the lease may expire or be terminated upon such default, and establish the measure of damages recoverable by the landlord. Lease provisions regarding default must take into consideration the law of the locality involved. Jurisdictional variations pose distinctive drafting alternatives and problems.

Many leases contain provisions which allow the tenant to cure a default. The landlord is required to give the tenant written notice of the nature of the default, and the tenant is given a specified period in which to cure that default. The cure period may be quite short when the default is the failure to pay rent or involves some activity which is dangerous to person or property. The period generally is longer for less serious defaults. If the default is not timely cured, the landlord may begin to follow the procedures required under the lease to terminate the lease and regain possession of the premises. In addition, or in the alternative, the landlord may seek damages if the default involves harm to the property.

[i] Rent and Damages After Default

The default provisions of a lease should preserve the tenant's liability for rent payments beyond the date of the premature termination of the lease resulting from the default. Otherwise, the tenant's obligation to pay rent would end with the early termination of the lease.

There are two standard types of provisions which can be used to govern the tenant's liability for rent payments after a termination following a default. Commonly, the tenant is required to make payments over what would have been the remaining term of the lease, when such payments would have become due, in the amount of the rent which would have been due less any rent realized upon the reletting of the premises. Expenses for restoration of the property, acquisition of new tenants, and other consequences of the lease termination are taken into account.

Alternatively, the lease can accelerate the time when damages are payable so that the landlord can recover damages without waiting. Such a lease clause generally provides that the landlord is entitled to damages calculated as of the early termination date which become payable immediately thereafter. Such damages usually consist of the present value of the remaining rental payments which would have been payable absent the default, less the present rental value of the property, plus the costs of re-rental. If the premises have been relet, the amount of the new rental generally is prima facie evidence of present rental value.

[ii] Summary Eviction

Summary eviction is a legal proceeding which generally is authorized by statute as well as by the lease. Summary eviction procedures are governed by statute, and vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. All summary eviction procedures are designed to restore the landlord to possession of the leased premises promptly following a breach by the tenant, while at the same time giving the tenant an opportunity to assert defenses before being evicted.

Although summary eviction procedures vary widely, every summary eviction statute provides specific procedures which the landlord must follow exactly to evict the tenant. Usually, the landlord must demand possession before commencing a proceeding in court. Sometimes the statute only permits summary eviction for a default in the payment of rent. In some states, a proceeding to evict the tenant summarily can be combined with a claim for rent.

Evicting a tenant can be a costly undertaking. There is the cost of legal fees for drawing the papers and appearing in court. There can be officers' fees for service of legal papers and maintaining the peace. There are the moving company fees and storage fees. In addition, there is lost rent and perhaps damage to the premises. This is the reason that security deposits are substantial and why most leases provide that the landlord is entitled to its legal fees on an eviction.

Although the judgment in some states may grant the landlord the rent, legal fees (if applicable), and filing fees, may not be collectible. If the tenant cannot pay its rent, the tenant is unlikely to have assets from which these expenses can be collected.

[iii] Reletting the Premises

In many jurisdictions, leases providing for the survival of the tenant's liability upon a reletting of the premises by the landlord are strictly construed against the landlord. In order to prevent the reletting from terminating the defaulting tenant's obligations, most leases expressly provide that the landlord can relet the premises. The lease should specify all rights reserved to the landlord, including the rights to determine whether or not to relet, to grant concessions, and to rent for a shorter or longer period than the original term.

The lease should provide that all expenses of the reletting, including tenant improvements, advertising, brokerage fees and other similar items, are chargeable to the tenant. In addition, most leases provide that the landlord may relet at a lower rent and charge the difference to the tenant, together with the rent for the months when the property was vacant. Again, if the tenant could not pay its rent, the chances of collecting these sums are very small.

In some jurisdictions by law, and often by lease provision, the landlord is under a duty to mitigate its damages. Therefore, the landlord must make good faith efforts to rent the property. If the landlord does not do this, it may not claim its lost rent from the tenant.

[iv] Self-help

Some jurisdictions permit the landlord to use self-help to regain possession of commercial premises. This remedy must be specifically authorized in the lease, in a provision setting forth the specific defaults on the part of the tenant that will trigger the landlord's right to use the remedy. The lease provision also must set forth the period within which the tenant can cure the breach, and the requirements the landlord must follow to give the tenant notice of the breach. If the landlord becomes entitled to use self-help, the landlord may enter the leased premises, remove the tenant's personalty and trade fixtures, and take possession of the premises.

The practitioner should consult the law of the applicable jurisdiction before drafting a self-help remedy provision. Many states do not permit self-help repossession by the landlord, and some states impose punitive damages or criminal liability on a landlord who attempts to use self-help to repossess the premises.

[b] Default by the Landlord

Just as the lease must delineate the landlord's rights upon the tenant's default in its obligations under the lease, so should the lease provide for the possibility that the landlord might default in its obligations. Such a default by the landlord can adversely affect the tenant's interest in the leased property. For example, if the landlord defaults in paying real estate taxes or in meeting obligations under a mortgage, the entire tenancy may be at risk.

To protect the tenant's leasehold and right to possession of the premises, the tenant may desire a provision in the lease granting it the right to cure defaults by the landlord. Such a provision usually allows the tenant to pay overdue amounts, make repairs, or otherwise cure the landlord's default, and to apply such expenditures against future rentals. The tenant also may be given the right to maintain a separate action against the landlord for reimbursement. Additionally, the lease may give the tenant an option to terminate the lease if the landlord is guilty of recurring defaults.

[22] Damage by Fire or Other Casualty

Damage to leased premises by fire, storm or other such event is a rare occurrence, fortunately. However, all leases should make a provision for such an event.

[a] Responsibility for Repair and Abatement of Rent

In negotiating such provisions, the parties should bear in mind the types of damage which may occur, structural and nonstructural, and the extent of the damage, extensive or minor. In addition, the parties should consider the type of use which the tenant makes of the premises. It may take far less damage to render space unsuitable for a professional office than for a warehouse.

Typically, the party who is responsible for the ordinary repair of an item is responsible for carrying the insurance on that item and effecting the repair of the item following damage by fire or other casualty. Thus, if the landlord is responsible for structural repairs, the landlord would rebuild the structure while the tenant would repair the nonstructural items. Care should be taken in defining each category of items.

Typically, if the premises are rendered unfit for use, the rent abates until repairs are made. The lease should attempt to describe what conditions will make the premises unfit for use. Clearly, this is a difficult task since no one can readily predict the exact type of damage which a casualty will cause. It may be better to attempt to define unfit in terms of activities which cannot be carried on in the premises after a casualty occurs.

Obviously, there is a great deal of opportunity for reasonable minds to differ on both the issue of whether a particular item is the landlord's or the tenant's responsibility, and the issue of whether the premises are usable. It is important to include a method for dispute resolution which is easy to use, inexpensive and provides a rapid result. The parties may consider the use of an independent adjuster as an arbitrator. The procedures should be informal and binding without further appeal, unless fraud is involved.

[b] Notice

The lease should provide that the tenant is required to give notice to the landlord of the occurrence of any casualty, regardless of size. The landlord wants the right to inspect the damage. In addition, the landlord's agents may need to inspect the damage for the purpose of preparing and filing any insurance claims.

[c] Termination of the Lease

Most leases contain a provision which allows the landlord to terminate the lease if the landlord determines not to reconstruct the premises following a casualty loss. For the tenant's protection, such provisions usually require the landlord to give notice of its decision within a particular period. The tenant should try to keep this period as short as possible as the tenant will be unable to make definite plans for the future until this issue is resolved.

The tenant should try to negotiate a similar right to terminate the lease after a casualty. This is especially so if the damage is severe. The tenant will have little control over the length of time required for repairs. It may take many, many months to complete adjustment and repairs. If the tenant is a retail business, there may be no customers left if the tenant is out of business for several months. If the tenant is a professional office, moving to temporary quarters and back is extremely unappealing. The loss of productivity and the cost can be prohibitive.

[23] Eminent Domain

A large variety of governmental and public service corporations have the ability to condemn property under eminent domain laws for public purposes. Typically, small strips of land are taken to widen roadways, to install water and sewer mains and to place telephone, electric, gas and cable television facilities. Occasionally, an entire parcel is taken for a special purpose.

[a] Ownership of Compensation

The entity which takes property by eminent domain must pay fair value to the owner. Most leases provide that any compensation for taking of the fee belongs solely to the landlord; however, this does not prohibit the tenant from seeking an award for loss of the value of the lease from the condemning entity. Sometimes the lease itself provides that any condemnation award will be shared by both the landlord and the tenant. The lease can also provide that the tenant is entitled to recover the unamortized cost of its improvements.

In the absence of any provision, the tenant is entitled to share in the condemnation award to the extent that the award is attributable to the present value of the leasehold estate; that is, the rental value of the premises less the rent reserved for the unexpired term. The tenant also is entitled to compensation for the loss of its fixtures. The balance of any award is then payable to the landlord.

[b] Termination of Lease or Abatement of Rent

Where the land taken is small and does not affect the tenant's use or enjoyment of the premises, there is typically no right to terminate the lease or right to an abatement of rent. However, the lease must make provision to govern the possible situation that a taking does affect the tenant. Such provisions generally are similar to those that govern a casualty loss.

Much depends on the amount lost and the tenant's need for the space which was lost. A tenant operating a warehouse may be willing to do with less space provided that the tenant has a proportionate decrease in rent; however, a professional office may not be able to function where it loses offices of its professional staff.

Clearly, the effect of an unknown taking is difficult to predict when negotiating a lease. The tenant should insist on the right to terminate the lease or receive a reduction of rent if a portion of its space is taken, including parking. Many leases, however, leave termination of the lease or reduction of the rent to the discretion of the landlord.

A variety of criteria can be used in the lease to determine when a partial taking will result in termination of the lease. One possibility is a test based on the percentage of space expropriated. Some leases allow reductions or termination only if all or a "substantial" portion is taken. "Substantial" is a term over which reasonable minds can differ. Where such a provision is used, a dispute resolution mechanism should be included similar to that used in a casualty loss situation. Instead of an adjuster, however, an appraiser or real estate broker, agreed upon in advance, may act as the arbitrator. It should be remembered that the purpose is to achieve a fast and fair result, not necessarily the same result which one would reach in a court of law. The parties cannot wait the years it would take for a court to reach a decision.

[c] Restoration Expenses

The lease should also provide for the possibility that there will be expenses necessary to restore the premises to its previous use following a condemnation of a part of the premises, and that these expenses may exceed the amount of the condemnation award. Frequently, the lease authorizes the tenant to restore the premises and obligates the landlord to apply all or a portion of the condemnation award to defray the tenant's cost. Some leases provide that the landlord is not required to make such reimbursement until the landlord has received an architect's or an engineer's statement as to necessary expenditures.

[24] Other Provisions of the Lease

[a] Ability to Show Space

Most leases provide that the landlord may show the tenant's space during the last six months of the lease to prospective tenants and purchasers. The tenant may wish to limit this right to times when the tenant or its agent is present. This is especially true where the tenant has expensive or delicate equipment or confidential documents to protect.

The landlord also may request the ability to show the tenant's space throughout the lease to prospective tenants. This often occurs where the tenant has done a particularly nice job of design and construction on unusual space. The landlord wants to show the space to demonstrate the uses which can be made of the space. The tenant should be certain to keep limits on the showings so that they will not disrupt its business. In addition, the tenant may wish to have someone representing it at showings to protect against loss or damage of personalty or invasion of confidential documents.

[b] Hours of Operation

Some leases provide required hours of operation, especially leases for retail facilities. The tenant should be certain that the hours are reasonable and compatible with its business. The tenant should also be sure that the hours are not subject to change without its approval.

Where the rental amount includes percentage rent based upon the tenant's income, the hours and days during which the tenant is open for business will affect its income, and consequently the landlord's income as well. To ensure the maximum rent, the landlord may desire a provision requiring the tenant to stay open on specified days and during specified hours. Additionally, the lease can provide that the tenant's failure to conduct the business continuously will constitute a breach on the part of the tenant. Alternatively, the lease may provide that if the continuous operation of the tenant's business has been interrupted for a cause within the tenant's control, the amount of income, receipts or sales used to measure the percentage rent will be determined by reference to the corresponding period for the previous year or some other relevant standard.

Sometimes leases for office complexes limit access to the building during certain hours as a security precaution. The tenant should be certain that these hours are compatible with its business. In addition, the tenant should request a procedure for after hours access where needed. Frequently this is achieved by giving special identification passes for those who will use the premises after hours.

Where the landlord provides janitorial services, the tenant may request that these services be provided after the close of normal or agreed upon business hours. It can be very disruptive to the operation of the tenant's business to have the janitorial staff vacuuming while business is proceeding.

[c] Signs

As discussed above, many municipalities have sign permit requirements. Many leases contain sign provisions as well. Such provisions may direct the placement, size, quality and style of the sign. Other provisions may prohibit particular types of signs, such as temporary, paper "sale" signs. The purpose of such provisions is to maintain uniformity and quality. The landlord will be particularly interested in the tenant's signs where the amount of the landlord's rent is based on a percentage of the tenant's sales or income, since signs will have a direct effect on the amount of business done by the tenant. Leases almost always require the tenant to pay for and maintain signs in good condition.

[d] Real Estate Broker Commissions

A real estate broker or salesperson may be entitled to a commission if a lease results from the broker's efforts. Most often, the landlord engages the broker and is responsible for the commission, but occasionally a tenant will engage a broker to locate suitable space and the tenant is responsible for the commission.

The law defining when a broker's commission is earned varies from state to state. Sometimes the commission claim is based on informal negotiations or dealings. To protect itself from unexpected brokerage claims, the landlord may seek a representation in the lease by the tenant that no broker was involved in the transaction, and indemnification in the event that a claim for commissions is made. This is frequently based on the economic reality that the amount of rent may reflect whether or not the landlord is to pay a real estate commission.

[e] Miscellaneous Clauses

The miscellaneous clauses are often referred to as "boilerplate" clauses. Although the terms may be fairly standard, they are very important. Care should be taken to include them in the agreement.

[i] Non-waiver

This clause provides that the failure of either party to demand performance of some obligation by the other party does not waive the right to require performance at a later date. This becomes important where the landlord has looked the other way at a particular practice of the tenant, such as paying the rent a few days late or not maintaining particular hours of operation. If this becomes a problem because the situation is getting worse or because other tenants, based on this tenant's behavior, begin to do the same, the landlord does not lose its ability to enforce its rights. The landlord may demand late charges or it may give notice of default and demand that the tenant cure. The clause also protects the tenant if the landlord has been lax in performing an obligation.

[ii] Notice

Most leases provide for a number of situations where notice must be given by one party to another. In some jurisdictions, the law provides for procedures, including personal delivery, to fulfill notice requirements, unless a more convenient method is permitted under the lease. Many leases require that notice be in writing and be served by either registered or certified mail. Some leases provide for alternative methods of giving notice, such as personal service or ordinary mail. The lease should also set forth the time when service is deemed to have been made.

The notice clause should specify the person and the address to which the notice is sent, together with a procedure for change. Provided that the party follows the procedures set forth therein, that party has fulfilled its obligations to give notice. No party is responsible for a new address unless the procedures are followed. This protects against a claim that a party had or should have had knowledge of a new address.

[iii] Illegality

This clause provides that if any portion of the lease is found to be illegal, that portion will be deemed excised and the balance of the lease will remain in full force and effect. This protects the tenant from an unscrupulous landlord who might purposefully insert an illegal clause in order to be able to cancel the lease at a later date to force the tenant into a higher rent or to take a better offer.

This clause also prevents the parties from having to renegotiate the entire lease if a portion is eliminated. The parties may not be in the same bargaining positions as they were at the beginning of the lease, and there may be an unfair result if the lease is subject to complete renegotiation.

[iv] Entire Agreement

This clause acknowledges that the contract contains the entire terms of the agreement between the parties. There are no oral understandings, representations, warranties, promises or agreements which have not been included in the lease.

The entire agreement clause protects both parties from any claim based on an alleged oral statement. Clearly, the terms of an oral agreement may be difficult to prove or disprove. This clause eliminates that need. If a provision is important, reduce it to writing and include it in the lease. If it is not so included, it is not enforceable.

[v] Governing Law

Traditionally, the law of the situs applies to real estate transactions, including commercial leases. Since a lease is a contract as well as a conveyance of real property, it is possible that contractual provisions may be governed by some other law than the law of the situs.

The parties may include a provision in the lease designating which state's law will apply to the lease. The landlord and the tenant may be residents of a state other than the designated state. If the designated state is the state where the property is located, such a lease provision usually will be honored. If the designated state is not the state where the property is located, the provision may not be given effect with respect to the resolution of property rights; however, if the chosen jurisdiction has some relationship to the transaction, the designated state's law will govern contractual rights.

[vi] Subordination to Any Mortgages

A lease constitutes an encumbrance on property. Where it is executed prior in time to a mortgage, the lease is not subject to the terms of the mortgage. That is, in the event of a foreclosure, the mortgagee could not terminate the rights of the tenant, so the sale of the premises would be subject to the lease.

Most lenders will not lend money to a landlord unless the mortgage securing the loan is the first encumbrance on the premises. Therefore, landlords will require a clause by which the tenant acknowledges that its lease is subordinate and subject to any mortgage now or later encumbering the subject property. In addition, the clause will generally provide that the tenant will execute any documents reasonably required by the lender or its counsel as further proof of the subordinated status of the lease. The tenant should make their agreement to this clause contingent on the tenant being able to receive a nondisturbance agreement from the lender which in essence will state that the lender will honor the rights of the tenant under the lease in the event of a foreclosure, provided the tenant is not in default under the terms of the lease at the time of such foreclosure. With respect to mortgages already in effect at the time the lease is executed, the tenant should attempt to negotiate a provision in the lease that makes the lease contingent on the landlord obtaining such a nondisturbance agreement from its existing lender for the protection of the tenant in the event of a foreclosure.

[vii] Dispute Resolution Mechanism

In previous sections concerning casualty losses and eminent domain, a short form dispute resolution mechanism was suggested to expedite matters. In those sections, the concern was for speed and practicality of result, rather than reaching the legally correct result. For other disputes, reaching the legally correct result is important.

The court system is extremely crowded. It often takes several years to reach a conclusion. This may be longer than the term of the lease. An alternative dispute resolution mechanism may produce the desired results within a reasonable period of time. Alternatives may include arbitration before a specified panel or through a specified organization, arbitration before a court appointed arbitrator, or mediation through a specified organization. The agreement should provide that the result achieved is final, binding and not subject to appeal. In addition, the agreement should provide that the prevailing party may enter a judgment based on the decision received. Failure to do this may allow the matter to be relitigated through the court system. The purpose of the dispute resolution mechanism will have been defeated and will have actually cost more time and money because of having had two proceedings.

If the parties decide to use an arbitration clause, the parties must decide what disputes will be subject to arbitration because it may not be appropriate for all disputes under the lease to be subject to arbitration. The landlord, for example, will not want the arbitration clause to cover the basic obligation of the tenant to pay rent to the landlord. Most frequently, the clause would be used in the lease context to resolve a dispute for such things as responsibility for repairs required to be made. A good arbitration clause will spell out the types of disputes to be covered by arbitration, will state which body will handle the arbitration such as the American Arbitration Association, may state whether a panel of one or three arbitrators is to be selected, and will include the place where the arbitration will occur. If the lease includes a choice of law clause that state's laws would govern the arbitration proceeding. If the drafter uses the American Arbitration Association, it should keep in mind that the American Arbitration Association has specialized rules for arbitration and those rules should be specified. In the lease context, those rules would be the commercial arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association. Finally, to be fully effective, the clause should state that a judgment on the award rendered by the arbitrator or arbitrators may be entered in any court having jurisdiction thereof, and thereby be enforceable through the courts.

Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part II. The Practice Background

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.30

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.30 Execution

The lease must be executed by both the landlord and the tenant. Where either party signs other than in his or her individual capacity, that capacity must be noted.

A corporate party may execute through an officer duly authorized by its board of directors. A partnership may execute through a partner duly authorized by the partners.

The lease also should be dated. Any changes on the face of the lease should be initialed by all parties and dated to indicate the parties' knowledge of that change.

Most states do not require a lease to be witnessed. Acknowledgment of the execution of the lease may be required. Where a lease has been acknowledged, it does not need authentication when entered into evidence in a trial. The form of the acknowledgment should be the same as the form used to entitle a deed to be recorded.

§ 23.31 Recording

A lease may be recorded so as to serve as notice of its existence; however, commercial leases are often too lengthy to be recorded. In lieu of recording the entire lease, a memorandum of lease may be recorded. The memorandum should contain a recital of the basic terms of the lease, including a description of the property subject to the lease, the term of the lease, the monthly or annual rental, any renewal rights, and any terms of particular importance such as options to purchase or a right of first refusal to purchase the leased property.

§ 23.32 Rules and Regulations

Rules and regulations usually are written in a separate document which is included by reference in the lease. These rules and regulations are more detailed and more specific than the general use restrictions often included in the lease. These detailed rules and regulations may be attached to the lease and initialed or signed by the tenant.

By keeping the rules and regulations separate from the lease, the landlord possesses the flexibility to amend the rules and regulations as circumstances change. For example, if local regulations are enacted restricting utility use or other services, the rules and regulations can be amended accordingly. The lease generally provides that the rules and regulations can be amended unilaterally by the landlord, and that any amendments will be delivered to the tenant or posted in a designated location. It would be far more difficult for the landlord to amend the lease in such a situation.

The exact nature of lease provisions relating to rules and regulations depends upon the objectives of the parties. If the landlord seeks flexibility, the lease can simply provide that the tenant's use of the premises is subject to the landlord's rules and regulations as they exist at the time the lease is executed and as subsequently amended.

Current Legal Forms for Real Estate
Chapter 23 REAL ESTATE LEASES
Part III. Drafting Guidelines

31-23 Current Legal Forms for Real Estate § 23.45

AUTHOR: by Thomas G. Belden

§ 23.45 Overview of Drafting Guidelines

The drafting of a commercial lease is usually undertaken by the landlord's attorney because frequently the client will ask his or her attorney to prepare a form lease which can be used for the particular building for more than one transaction with respect to that building, either because it is a multi-tenant building or because sooner or later the term of the lease will expire and a new lease will have to be negotiated for the next tenant. Notwithstanding the fact that there may be a form lease drafted by the landlord's attorney, the tenant and the tenant's attorney will want to negotiate the various provisions in the lease which will, of course, be drafted in the favor of the landlord if it is a form lease prepared by the landlord and the landlord's attorney. Even if the tenant does not have any changes it desires to be made to the lease, which would be highly unusual, the form lease will still have to be tailored to the particular transaction.

Usually the terms of the transaction are obtained from a letter of intent from the tenant or the tenant's broker, submitted to the landlord and the landlord's broker for consideration. Once the letter of intent has been negotiated and is accepted by the landlord, it will be given to the landlord's attorney so that the attorney can incorporate the terms of the letter of intent into the form lease. One exception where the tenant may have its own form lease is where the tenant is a national chain or is large enough to be considered an anchor tenant in the multi-tenant property. Under those circumstances, the tenant usually has the bargaining power to dictate that its form of lease be used, at least at the start of the negotiations.

Form leases done for landlords will vary depending on the type of building that is being leased. For example, if the building is a single use building as opposed to a multi-tenant building or multi-tenant shopping center, the landlord's attorney will not have to worry about passing on various costs such as common area operating expenses to the tenants, and will not have to worry about how those costs are to be allocated among the tenants. If there is just a single user utilizing the entire building, then there is a much greater likelihood that the lease will be a net-net-net lease in which the primary expenses of repairs, insurance and real estate taxes are passed on in their entirety to the single tenant user. In addition, because there is only one tenant using the entire building and the area outside the building, the costs of maintaining the common areas and other areas outside of the building are paid for 100% by the single tenant user.

In contrast, in a multi-tenant building the various expenses are passed on to the multiple tenants using the building by a formula that usually relates to the fraction of the space in the building that the tenant is leasing. For example, if the tenant is leasing only 10% of the space then only 10% of the costs will be passed on to that particular tenant. Because there are multiple tenants, no one tenant can be responsible for maintaining the common areas. Under the circumstances, usually the landlord will take care of the common areas and pass those charges on among various tenants by a formula that relates to the amount of space the particular tenant leases in the building to the total rental square feet in the building.

The tenant's counsel should review the draft prepared by the landlord's counsel. The primary concern of the tenant's counsel, apart from verifying the economic terms of the lease to make sure that those economic terms are accurate and consistent with the letter of intent, is to make sure the various clauses in the lease are fair to the tenant and not totally one sided in favor of the landlord.

A sample of a commercial lease for a multi-tenant building follows. Comments are set forth opposite noteworthy provisions in the indenture of lease.

Within sixty (60) days after the close of each comparison year thereafter, Lessor shall notify Lessee in writing of said operating expenses, together with a statement certifying the accuracy thereof, and notify Lessee of Lessee's proportion of any increase over the base year thereof. During the next fifteen (15) days following receipt of such notice, Lessee shall be entitled to reasonably examine Lessor's books and records regarding such operating expenses. In the event that such notice reflects an increase in said operating expenses during the comparison year over the base year amount, within thirty (30) days following receipt of said notice, Lessee shall pay to Lessor Lessee's proportion thereof. The estimated adjusted base rental shall be paid in monthly installments equivalent to one-twelfth (1/12) of the amount of the adjustment for the prior comparison year; provided, however, that the first monthly payment made after the estimated adjusted base rental for the succeeding comparison year is computed shall include the monthly adjustment for the months which have elapsed in the comparison year then in effect prior to the said first monthly payment. If, as finally determined, Lessee's share shall be greater than or less than the aggregate of all installments so paid on account to the Lessor for a comparison year, then Lessee shall pay to Lessor the amount of such underpayment, or the Lessor shall credit Lessee for the amount of such overpayment against the next installments of base rental due hereunder, or if none, shall promptly refund the overpayment to Lessee. The statement in this lease of the nature of Lessee's business does not constitute a representation by Lessor that such business is lawful or otherwise permitted by law at the Demised Premises. Lessee shall not use or occupy, or permit the use or occupancy of, the Demised Premises, or any part thereof, in any unlawful manner or for any illegal purpose or in such a manner as to constitute a nuisance or violate the terms and conditions of any certificate of occupancy or equivalent use permit applicable to the Demised Premises, or for any purpose or in a manner likely to cause structural injury, and shall not use or occupy or permit the use or occupancy of the Demised Premises for other than purposes of the nature and to the extent permitted by the laws, rules, regulations, and ordinances of the applicable governmental authorities and their agencies, including without limitation, environmental laws and regulations. Lessee shall likewise comply with any applicable regulation or order of the applicable Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters, or other body having similar functions, or of any liability or fire insurance company by which the Demised Premises may be insured, with respect to Lessee's use and occupancy of the Demised Premises. Lessee shall not knowingly permit any article to be brought upon, or any act to be done upon or about the Demised Premises that

7. Utilities. The Lessee shall pay for all heat, electric current, water, gas and other utilities furnished to or used by Lessee in or upon the Demised Premises, together with all taxes, levies or other charges on such utilities and governmental charges based on utility consumption. Such payment shall be made directly to the department furnishing the same unless such utilities are submetered or are not separately metered or assessed. If such utilities are not separately metered or assessed, (or are only partly separately metered or assessed) and are used in common with the other tenants in the Building, Lessee will pay to Lessor an apportionment of such charges for utilities used in common based on the proportion of square feet in the Demised Premises served by such utility to the total square feet in the building served by such utility. If such utilities are submetered by a re-registering meter or otherwise, Lessee shall pay Lessor for such utilities at the same rates that Lessee would be charged by the utility company if billed directly by the utility company. Lessee shall pay said bills received from Lessor within ten (10) days of receipt thereof. Notwithstanding the above, Lessor will pay the utility company for water used solely for sanitary purposes and sewer charges applicable thereto, subject to the terms of subparagraph 4. A.(1)(iii), above. (n19) COMMENT

Lessor shall not be liable to anyone for cessation of any services, including but not limited to public utility services, heating and air conditioning, due to inability to obtain fuel, electricity, service or supplies from the sources from which they are usually obtained, due to failures in the equipment used to provide such services, governmental rationing of such utilities, or for any other reason beyond the control of the Lessor. Any such interruption of any of the above services shall never be deemed an eviction or disturbance of the Lessee's use of the Demised Premises or any part thereof, or render the Lessor liable to the Lessee for damages, or relieve the Lessee from performance of the Lessee's obligations under this lease. 8. Repairs.

A. Repairs by Lessee and Surrender. Throughout the term of this lease, Lessee will keep and maintain the interior of the Demised Premises and any fixtures, facilities or equipment therein in a good state of repair, including, without limitation, all servicing, repairs and replacements required to the wiring, plumbing, sewage system, and heating and air cooling installations, ordinary wear and tear, damage by fire, casualty, invasion, acts of war, insurrection and the like, the elements and Acts of God, excepted. Lessee shall also keep, maintain and repair all exterior doors and window frames. Lessee will be liable for replacement of all broken glass of the same size and quality as that broken and will keep the entire Demised Premises in a clean, safe and healthy condition according to the applicable governmental ordinances and the direction of the proper public officers. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 16, Lessor shall repair any damage to the interior of said building caused by a casualty covered by Lessor's fire and extended coverage insurance policy and Lessee shall have no liability with respect thereto provided that the waiver of subrogation provided in Paragraph 14 is applicable. All work set forth in this paragraph, and all other work to be performed by the Lessor under the terms of this lease, shall be done during ordinary working hours. If any such work is, at the request of Lessee, to be done at hours other than ordinary working hours, Lessee shall pay any extra cost occurring because of such request. (n22) COMMENT

9. _____ [A.] Alterations. Lessee shall make no alterations in, or additions or improvements to, said Demised Premises (structural or otherwise) without the written consent of Lessor first had and obtained, which consent will not be unreasonably withheld. Notwithstanding the aforesaid Lessee shall not be permitted to make any alterations or improvements to the Demised Premises or building in which the Demised Premises are located which would cause to be applicable to the Demised Premises or building the accessibility or other requirements of the ADA, or the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder from time to time. In the event any permitted alterations, additions or improvements in or to said Demised Premises are made by Lessee, the Lessee covenants and agrees that Lessee will make all such alterations, additions or improvements in or to said Demised Premises at Lessee's own expense. If Lessee, its agents and employees, makes any alterations or improvements (whether or not authorized by Lessor), which cause the accessibility or other requirements of the ADA to be applicable to the Demised Premises or building in which the Demised Premises are located, Lessee agrees at Lessee's expense to pay for any modifications to the Demised Premises or building imposed by the ADA, or the rules and regulations issued thereunder. Any such permitted alterations, additions or improvements which are begun by Lessee shall be completed by Lessee. Lessee shall, in making any such alterations, additions or improvements, and/or in using and/or occupying the Demised Premises, comply with all applicable laws and ordinances pertaining to such work and/or such use or occupancy. Any additions, alterations or improvements made by Lessee shall become and remain a part of the Demised Premises, and be and remain the property of Lessor upon the termination of this lease or Lessee's occupancy of the Demised Premises. Notwithstanding the above, the Lessor may, by giving written notice to the Lessee, require Lessee to restore the Demised Premises to the same condition they were in at the commencement of this lease. Lessee shall indemnify and save harmless Lessor from and against all expenses, liens, claims or damages to either property or person which may or might arise by reason of such repairs, alterations, improvements or additions. In any event, Lessee shall have the right to remove all Lessee's trade fixtures, furnishings and other personal property in the Demised Premises which have been placed there by Lessee even though the same be attached to said Demised Premises, provided that the removal of such annexation shall be effected before the expiration of said term, and all damage caused to said Demised Premises by such removal shall be repaired by Lessee on or before the expiration of said term. 10. Eminent Domain.

A. If neither party so elects to terminate, this lease shall continue in full force and effect except that the rent shall be equitably reduced and Lessor, at Lessor's expense, shall promptly proceed to restore the Demised Premises to a condition as nearly equivalent as feasible to their condition prior to said taking. (n25) COMMENT

B. If the amount of property or the type of estate taken shall not substantially interfere with the conduct of Lessee's business, this lease shall not terminate and Lessor shall be entitled to the entire amount of the award as the owner of all interests in the real estate without deduction for any estate or interest of Lessee in said real estate. Lessor, at Lessor's expense, shall promptly proceed to restore the Demised Premises to substantially their same condition prior to such partial taking, and a proportionate allowance shall be made to Lessee for the rent corresponding to the time during which, and to the part of the Demised Premises of which, Lessee shall be so deprived on account of such taking and restoration. (n26) COMMENT

Notwithstanding the above, if said taking shall occur during the last _____ year[s] of the term of the lease, either Lessor or Lessee may elect to terminate this lease by written notice to the other within thirty (30) days from the date possession is taken by said authority, effective as of the date possession is taken. If neither party so elects, this lease shall continue in full force and effect except that the rent shall be equitably reduced and Lessor, at Lessor's expense, shall promptly proceed to restore the Demised Premises to a condition as nearly equivalent as possible to their condition prior to said taking. C. Lessee shall, however, have the right to pursue, at Lessee's expense by separate claim against the taking authority, any rights Lessee might have as Lessee for Lessee's cost of moving or relocating any trade fixtures, equipment, or other personal property that Lessee placed upon the Demised Premises, or for the recovery of any other provable damages to Lessee's business, provided that such claim shall not result in a reduction of Lessor's award. (n32) COMMENT

B. Upon the termination of this lease, or upon the termination of Lessee's right to possession without termination of this lease:

(1) Lessee shall surrender possession and vacate the Demised Premises immediately, and Lessor may enter into and repossess said Demised Premises, with or without process of law, and remove all persons and property therefrom in the same manner and with the same right as if this lease had not been made, and for the purpose of such entry and repossession Lessee waives any notice provided by law or otherwise to be given in connection therewith; and

(2) Lessor may remove from the Demised Premises any and all property found therein, and such repossession shall not release Lessee from Lessee's obligation to pay the rents herein provided.

C. In the event of termination of this lease as provided in this Paragraph 11, Lessor, in addition to any and all rights and remedies allowed by law and equity, shall upon such termination be entitled to recover damages in the amount equal to the then present value of the rent reserved in this lease for the entire residue of the stated term hereof less the then present worth of the fair rental value of the Demised Premises for the residue of the term hereof as then in effect, plus the costs incurred, including reasonable legal expenses, to terminate this lease and Lessee's possession of the Demised Premises. Lessor may make repairs, alterations, replacements, and/or decorations in or to the Demised Premises to the extent reasonably necessary and advisable for the purpose of reletting the Demised Premises, and in the making of such repairs, alterations, additions, replacements and/or decorations shall not operate or be construed to release Lessee from liability hereunder; and Lessee shall upon demand pay the cost thereof, together with Lessor's expense of reletting (including reasonable legal expenses and brokerage commissions). If the rents collected by Lessor upon any such reletting are not sufficient to pay monthly the full amount of the rent reserved herein, together with the cost of such repairs, alterations, additions, replacements, decorations and expenses, Lessee shall pay to Lessor the amount of each monthly deficiency upon demand, and if the rent so collected from any such reletting is more than sufficient to pay the full amount of the rent reserved herein, together with such costs and expenses of Lessor, Lessor shall, at least every twelve (12) months after such eviction, account for any surplus to Lessee. Lessee shall pay to Lessor, upon demand, any and all expenses incurred in such removal and all storage charges against such property, so long as the same shall be in Lessor's possession or under Lessor's control. Lessor's right to be compensated for damages in the bankruptcy proceeding, however, shall survive. (n36) COMMENT

B. Chapter 11. If a petition for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code is filed by or against Lessee, or a proceeding that is filed by or against Lessee under any other chapter of the Bankruptcy Code is converted to a Chapter 11 proceeding and Lessee as debtor in possession fails to assume this lease within sixty (60) days from the date of filing of the petition or the conversion, or within such additional time period as the Bankruptcy Court may allow, debtor in possession will be deemed to have rejected this lease.

C. Assumption of Lease. Assumption of this lease must satisfy, in Lessor's business judgment, all of the following conditions which Lessor and Lessee acknowledge to be commercially reasonable:

(1) The Trustee or the debtor-in-possession has cured or has provided to Lessor adequate assurance, as defined hereinbelow that:

(a) The Trustee will cure all monetary defaults under this lease within ten (10) days from the date of the assumption; and

(b) The Trustee will cure all non-monetary defaults under this lease within thirty (30) days from the date of the assumption.

(2) The Trustee or the debtor-in-possession has compensated Lessor, or has provided to Lessor adequate assurance as defined hereinbelow, that within ten (10) days from the date of the assumption Lessor will be compensated for any pecuniary loss it incurred arising from the default of Lessee, Trustee, or the debtor-in-possession.

(3) The Trustee or the debtor-in-possession has provided Lessor with adequate assurance of future performance, as defined hereinbelow, of each of Lessee's obligations under the lease; provided, however, that:

(a) The Trustee or debtor-in-possession will also deposit with Lessor, as security for the timely payment of rent, an amount equal to three months base rental and other monetary charges accruing under this lease.

(b) If required by the terms of this lease, the Trustee or the debtor-in-possession will also pay in advance, on each day the base rental is payable, one-twelfth (1/12) of Lessee's annual obligation for operating expenses and real estate taxes and assessments.

(4) Lessor has determined that the assumption of this lease will not:

(a) Breach any provision in any other lease, mortgage, financing agreement, or other agreement by which Lessor is bound relating to the Building; or

(b) Disrupt, in Lessor's judgment, the lessee mix of the Building or any other attempt by Lessor to provide a specific variety of tenants in the Building that, in Lessor's judgment, would be most beneficial to all of the tenants of the Building and would enhance the image, reputation and profitability of the Building.

(5) For purposes of this subparagraph 12.C., "adequate assurance" means that:

(a) The Trustee or the debtor-in-possession has, and will continue to have, sufficient assets to assure Lessor that Trustee or the debtor-in-possession will have sufficient funds to fulfill Lessee's obligations under the lease and to keep the Demised Premises properly staffed with sufficient employees to conduct a fully operational, actively promoted business on the Demised Premises; and

(b) An order will have been entered segregating sufficient cash payable to Lessor and/or a valid and perfected first lien and security interest will have been granted on the property of the estate that is acceptable for value and kind to Lessor, to secure to Lessor the obligation of the Trustee or debtor-in- possession to cure the monetary or non-monetary defaults under this lease within the time period set forth above.

(c) If the Trustee or the debtor-in-possession has assumed the lease under the terms of subparagraphs 12.A. or 12.B., above, and elects to assign Lessee's interest under this lease or the estate created by that interest to another person, that interest or estate may be assigned only if Lessor acknowledges in writing that the intended assignee has provided adequate assurance of future performance, as defined hereinbelow, of all of the terms, covenants and conditions of this lease to be performed by Lessee.

(d) For the purposes of this Paragraph 12.C., "adequate assurance of future performance" means that Lessor has ascertained that each of the following conditions has been satisfied:

(i) The assignee has submitted a current financial statement, audited by a certified public accountant, that shows a net worth and working capital in amounts determined by Lessor to be sufficient or to assure future performance by the assignee of Lessee's obligations under this lease;

(ii) If requested by Lessor, the assignee will obtain guarantees in form and substance satisfactory to Lessor, from one or more persons who satisfy Lessor's standards of creditworthiness;

(iii) Lessor has obtained all consents or waivers from any third party required under any lease, mortgage, financing agreement, or other agreement by which Lessor is bound to permit the assignment;

(iv) When, pursuant to the Bankruptcy Code, the Trustee or the debtor-in-possession is obligated to pay reasonable use and occupancy charges for the use of all or a portion of the Demised Premises, the charge will be no less than base rental and additional rent and other monetary obligations of the Lessee included in this lease.

13. A. Lessor's Right to Perform Lessee's Covenants. In addition to, but without limitation or qualification of, any other right or remedy of the Lessor herein provided, if the Lessee shall default in the performance of any covenant, condition or stipulation contained in this lease except defaults pertaining to the payment of rent or additional rent, the Lessor may, after thirty (30) days' written notice to the Lessee, or if such default cannot reasonably be corrected within such 30-day period, then if Lessee shall not within such period have commenced in good faith to correct such default, or with or without notice if, in the Lessor's reasonable opinion, an emergency exists, perform the same for the account and at the expense of the Lessee, and the amount of any payments made or other expenses incurred by the Lessor for such purpose shall be forthwith repaid by the Lessee with interest thereon at the rate of 8 percent per annum. Should the Lessee, pursuant to this subparagraph 13. A. or any other provision of this lease, become obligated to reimburse or otherwise pay Lessor any one or more sums of money in addition to the fixed rent, the amount thereof shall be deemed additional rent and may, at the option of Lessor, be added to any subsequent installment of the basic rent due and payable under the lease, in which event the Lessor shall have the remedies for default in the payment thereof provided in Paragraph 11 hereof. The provisions of this subparagraph 13. A. shall survive the termination of this lease. Nothing in this subparagraph 13. A. shall in any manner increase Lessor's liability to Lessee or to any others. The rights granted to Lessor under this subparagraph 13. A. shall be permissive only and shall not be construed as requiring Lessor to perform any such condition or covenant or to correct any such default. (n37) COMMENT

B. Lessor's Access to Demised Premises. Lessor reserves the right to enter the Demised Premises during the normal business hours of Lessee only, or at any time in case of an emergency, for the purpose of examining, repairing and protecting the Demised Premises, or for the purpose of showing the premises to a prospective purchaser or mortgagee, and also during the last six (6) months of the term of this lease for the purpose of exhibiting the Demised Premises to prospective tenants and putting up the usual notice "to rent" or "for sale," which notice shall not be removed or hidden by Lessee. The rights granted to Lessor pursuant to this subparagraph 13. B. shall not require Lessor to make any repairs to the Demised Premises other than those herein specifically agreed to be made by Lessor nor otherwise extend any of Lessor's other obligations. (n38) COMMENT

14. Insurance. Lessor covenants and agrees that at all times after the commencement of the term hereof, Lessor shall obtain and keep in force adequate insurance for fire and lightning, with extended coverage and vandalism and malicious mischief endorsement on the building of the Demised Premises. Lessee shall obtain and keep in force, during the term of this lease, insurance to cover the physical loss of Lessee's personal property in said premises in amounts sufficient to cover Lessee's interest. Lessee hereby expressly waives any right of recovery against the Lessor for any and all liability and expense for loss, damage or destruction of the Lessee's property resulting from perils ordinarily covered by standard fire insurance policies with extended coverage and vandalism and malicious mischief endorsements, notwithstanding that the damage may be due to the negligent acts or omissions of Lessor, Lessor's agents or employees. Lessor hereby expressly waives any right of recovery against the Lessee for loss, damage or destruction of Lessor's property resulting from perils ordinarily covered by standard fire insurance policies with extended coverage and vandalism and malicious mischief endorsements, notwithstanding that the damage may be due to the negligent acts or omissions of Lessee, Lessee's agents or employees. Each of Lessor and Lessee shall place Lessor's and Lessee's respective insurance with companies that will agree to acknowledge, by endorsement to the policies of the insured if necessary, that the insurance will not be invalidated should the insured waive in writing prior to a loss any or all right of recovery against any party for loss occurring to the property described therein.

Lessee agrees to carry public liability and property damage insurance with respect to the Demised Premises in insurance companies licensed to do business in the State of Ohio and having limits of not less than Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000) for injury to one person in any one accident, and not less than One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) for injury to all persons in any one accident, and not less than Three Hundred Thousand Dollars ($300,000) for damages caused to all properties in any one accident. Lessee will furnish to Lessor a certificate evidencing such insurance. The insurance policies shall designate specifically that Lessor is named as an additional insured thereunder. (n39) COMMENT

Lessor and Lessee hereby waive all rights of recovery and causes of action against the other, the other's agents and employees, and all persons claiming through or under the other, relating to loss of business, business interruption or loss of rentals resulting from any damage or destruction to the Demised Premises or any of Lessee's property contained therein, notwithstanding that any such damage or destruction may be due to the negligence of Lessor or Lessee, their respective agents or employees, as the case may be. (n40) COMMENT

15. Indemnity.

A. Lessee agrees that no representations or warranties, either express or implied, have been made with reference to the condition of the Demised Premises or their fitness for the use of any purpose whatsoever, and that Lessor shall not be liable for any use to which the Demised Premises are put or any damage either to person or property because of any injury, loss of life, loss or damage to or total destruction of merchandise or property resulting from such use. Lessee agrees that Lessee will at all times save and keep Lessor and the Demised Premises free and harmless from and against any and all liens placed or permitted to be placed thereon by Lessee, or by any other person claiming by, through, from or under Lessee, and from and against any and all loss, cost, damage, suits, fines, penalties, liability or expense, including attorney's fees, occasioned (i) by the act or neglect of Lessee, or any of Lessee's agents or employees, or those claiming or holding under Lessee, (ii) by the breach, violation or nonperformance of any covenant, condition or agreement in this lease by Lessee or any of Lessee's agents or employees or those claiming or holding under Lessee, or (iii) arising out of an accident causing death or injury to any person whomsoever, or damage to any property whatsoever resulting from any use of the Demised Premises by Lessee or any person holding under Lessee or Lessee's employees, licensees or invitees. (n41) COMMENT

16. Destruction of Demised Premises.

A. Except as provided in subparagraph 16. B., below, if the Demised Premises, or any part thereof, shall be destroyed or damaged at any time during the term of the lease then in effect, and such destruction or damage may reasonably be repaired within one hundred twenty (120) days from the happening of such destruction or damage, Lessee shall not be entitled to surrender possession of the Demised Premises, or any part thereof, nor shall Lessee's liability to pay rent under this lease cease; but in case of any such destruction or damage, Lessor shall at Lessor's expense repair the same with all reasonable speed and shall complete such repairs within one hundred twenty (120) days from the happening of such destruction or damage, subject to delays beyond Lessor's reasonable control. In the event that any destruction or damage cannot reasonably be repaired within one hundred twenty (120) days from the happening of such destruction or damage, either Lessor or Lessee shall have the right to terminate this lease by giving written notice to the other within thirty (30) days from the happening of such destruction or damage, in the absence of which notice Lessor shall at Lessor's expense repair the same with all reasonable speed. (n42) COMMENT

B. If the Demised Premises, or any part thereof, shall be destroyed or damaged by fire or other casualty at any time during the last _____ year[s] of the term of the lease and the same can be reasonably repaired or restored within sixty (60) days following such occurrence, this lease shall not terminate; but in case of any such damage or destruction, Lessor shall at Lessor's expense repair the same with all reasonable speed and shall complete such repair within sixty (60) days from the happening of such damage or destruction, subject to delays beyond Lessor's reasonable control. In the event that any such damage or destruction cannot reasonably be repaired within sixty (60) days following such occurrence, the Lessee or the Lessor may elect to terminate this lease by written notice to the other within thirty (30) days following such damage or destruction, in the absence of which notice Lessor shall at Lessor's expense repair the same with all reasonable speed.

C. If any damage or destruction to the Demised Premises or the repair or rebuilding thereof shall render the Demised Premises untenantable in whole or in part, Lessee shall be allowed a proportionate reduction or abatement of the rent and additional rent payable hereunder corresponding to the time and space of which Lessee shall be deprived (giving due consideration to the reasonable use of the remaining portion of the Demised Premises) from the date of the occurrence of such damage or destruction until the date Lessor completes the repair or restoration thereof. (n43) COMMENT

This clause makes it clear that the Lessee will not have to pay its base rent during the time the Lessee cannot use all or part of the Demised Premises, but only to the extent of the portion of the Demised Premises that cannot be used.

*[D. For the purposes of subparagraph 16. B., above, the phrase "term of the lease" shall mean the next renewal term of this lease if Lessee, at any time prior to the expiration of fifteen (15) days after the occurrence of said destruction or damage, shall have exercised Lessee's  _____ [next] option to extend the term pursuant to the provisions of Paragraph 4., above.] (n44) COMMENT

17. Loss or Damage to Lessee's Property. All trade fixtures, equipment, inventory and all other personal property belonging to Lessee, Lessee's agents, or Lessee's guests, located in or about the Demised Premises shall be at the sole risk of Lessee, and Lessor shall not be liable for the theft or misappropriation, nor for any damage or injury thereto, nor for any damage or injury to Lessee, or any of Lessee's officers, agents, employees, licensees or guests, or to other persons or to any property caused by fire, explosion, wind, water, rain, snow, frost, steam, gas, electricity, any Acts of God, heat or cold, dampness, falling plaster and/or ceilings, sewers or sewage odors, noise, leaks from any part of said building or by the bursting or leaking of pipes, plumbing, electrical wiring and equipment and fixtures of all kinds, or by any act or neglect of any other tenant or of any person; provided, however, subject to the provisions of Paragraph 14., Lessor shall not be relieved of liability for the negligence, intentional wrongful acts or omissions of Lessor, Lessor's

agents and employees. (n45) COMMENT

18. Assignment and Subletting. Lessee shall not be permitted to mortgage, pledge or encumber this lease. Lessee may sublet all or any part of the Demised Premises and may assign this lease or any interest Lessee may have hereunder, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, by operation of law or otherwise, provided that: (n46) COMMENT

(1) the signed written consent of the Lessor to any such subletting or assignment shall first be obtained (which consent Lessor will not unreasonably withhold or delay); and

(2) in the event of any such permitted assignment or subletting, Lessee shall remain liable as Lessee for the performance of all of the conditions and covenants on the part of Lessee to be performed under this lease, unless Lessor shall otherwise expressly consent in writing.

The right on the part of Lessee to assign this lease under any of the foregoing provisions of this Paragraph 18 shall be upon the express condition that such assignment shall be in writing, executed by Lessee and the assignee, that in such writing the assignee shall, in consideration of such assignment, agree to assume, perform and be bound by all of the terms, obligations and conditions on the part of Lessee to be performed under this lease, and that a duplicate executed counterpart of such instrument of assignment and assumption shall be delivered to Lessor within ten (10) days after the execution thereof. [For purposes of this lease, the sale or transfer of a majority of the common stock of Lessee, or of a majority of the beneficial or equitable interests of the owners of a noncorporate Lessee, shall be considered an assignment of the lease subject to the provisions of this paragraph.]

19. Liability.

*[A. Limitation of Lessor's Liability. The term "Lessor," as used in this lease so far as covenants or obligations on the part of Lessor are concerned, shall be limited to mean and include only the owner or owners at the time in question of the fee of the Demised Premises. In the event of any transfer or transfers of title to such fee, the Lessor herein named (and in case of any subsequent transfers or conveyances, the then grantor) shall be freed and relieved from and after the date of such transfer and conveyance of all liability with respect to performance of any covenants or obligations on the part of Lessor contained in this lease thereafter to be performed. Without further agreement, the transferee of such title shall be deemed to have assumed and agreed to observe and perform any and all obligations of the Lessor hereunder during the transferee's ownership of the Demised Premises. Lessor may transfer Lessor's interest in the Demised Premises without the consent of Lessee, and such transfer or subsequent transfer shall not be deemed a violation on Lessor's part of any of the terms and conditions of this lease.] (n47) COMMENT

[B. No Personal Liability. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in this lease, it is expressly understood and agreed, such understanding and agreement being a significant and material inducement to the execution of this lease by Lessor, that (i) there shall be absolutely no personal liability of whatever nature imposed upon Lessor or Lessor's heirs, personal representatives, successors and assigns, [or upon any partner of Lessor, general or limited] with respect to any terms, covenants or conditions of this lease; (ii) in the event that Lessor shall commit a default or breach of any of the terms, covenants or conditions hereof and Lessee shall obtain a judgment against Lessor for such default or breach, Lessee's sole exclusive remedy for the enforcement and collection of such judgment shall be the institution of foreclosure or other appropriate execution proceedings solely against the land on Exhibit A and improvements thereon and (iii) regardless of whether or not the proceedings described in "(ii)" immediately above shall result in a complete satisfaction of Lessee's judgment, in no event (whether by proceedings at law, in equity, administrative proceedings or otherwise) shall any deficiency or other personal judgment be rendered or enforced against Lessor or Lessor's heirs, personal representatives, successors or assigns, [or upon any partner of Lessor, general or limited.] (n48) COMMENT

20. Mortgage Subordination. The Lessee understands that Lessor may have or hereafter desire to place a mortgage upon all or part of the land described herein and the building constructed thereon. It is further understood that the mortgagee of said mortgage may require that the within lease be subordinated to said mortgage, in which event Lessee agrees to execute any document required by such mortgagee to evidence such subordination; provided, however, that the mortgagee of any such mortgage shall covenant in writing that the Lessee's leasehold interest hereunder shall not be foreclosed in any action brought under such mortgage or in the event of a sale of the Demised Premises as a result of said action if at the time of bringing an action to foreclose or at the time of said sale the Lessee is not in default in the payment of rental or in the performance of any other obligation under this lease, with due allowance to be given for the payment of any past due rental or for the correction of any other default by Lessee within the period of time permitted after any notice is given or required to be given by the terms of this lease. It is further understood that the mortgagee of said mortgage may require that the Lessee agree to attorn to any purchaser of the property in the event that the same should be sold through foreclosure proceedings, and that the Lessee agrees to waive any and all rights to treat any such foreclosure proceedings as a breach of the lease by Lessor, in which event Lessee agrees to execute any document required by such mortgagee to evidence such agreements. (n49) COMMENT

21. Estoppel Certificate by Lessee. Lessee will execute, acknowledge and deliver to Lessor, promptly upon request, a certificate certifying that (a) this lease is unmodified and in full force and effect (or, if there have been modifications, that the lease is in full force and effect, as modified, and stating the modifications), (b) the dates, if any, to which basic rent, additional rent and other sums payable hereunder have been paid, and (c) no notice has been received by Lessee of any default which has not been cured, except as to defaults specified in said certificate, it being intended that any such certificate may be relied upon by any prospective purchaser or mortgagee of the property or any part thereof. (n50) COMMENT

22. Common Areas. "Common areas" and "common facilities," as used in the within lease, include, without limitation, all of the parking areas, approaches, entrances, driveways, sidewalks and service areas and landscaping located on the parcel of real estate described on Exhibit A, and all public or semi-public parts of the building in which the Demised Premises are located, including, without limitation, halls, exits, stairs, lavatories, doors or windows. Lessor shall operate, manage, equip, repair, replace and maintain the common areas and facilities for their intended purposes in such manner as Lessor shall, in Lessor's sole discretion, determine; provided, however, Lessor agrees to keep said common areas and facilities clean and to remove snow and ice from the parking areas and driveways as promptly as possible. Lessor reserves the right to change the location, size, elevation or nature of the common areas and common facilities. Lessor may, from time to time, make reasonable rules and regulations for the use of said common areas and common facilities which regulations shall be promulgated when established. (n51) COMMENT

The Lessee, Lessee's agents, employees and invitees, shall have the right to use said common areas and common facilities jointly with Lessor, Lessor's agents and employees, and other tenants (except such service areas as may be designated by Lessor for the exclusive use of a particular tenant or tenants) of the above-described building, their agents, employees and invitees. All of such use of any of the common areas and common facilities shall be such as will not unreasonably obstruct or interfere with the joint use thereof, and shall be in compliance with all applicable laws, rules and regulations. (n52) COMMENT

23. Signs. Lessee shall have the right to erect and maintain upon the Demised Premises, at Lessee's expense, all signs necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the business of Lessee which are not in violation of any governmental rule or regulation; provided, however, that Lessee shall not have the right to erect or maintain in or upon the Demised Premises any sign, the erection, maintenance or removal of which will operate to decrease the value of the Demised Premises, without the Lessor's prior consent in writing. Installation of any and all exterior signs on the Demised Premises, including the building and the roof, shall be subject to the prior written approval of Lessor as to design, size and location, it being understood that the Demised Premises are part of an integrated and uniform building, and that control of exterior signs by Lessor is essential in order to maintain uniformity and aesthetic value in said building. (n53) COMMENT

Lessee shall maintain said signs in good condition and repair at all times, and shall save Lessor harmless from injury to person or property arising from the erection or maintenance of said signs. Any signs placed in or upon the Demised Premises, upon the written request of Lessor, shall be removed by Lessee at Lessee's expense upon the expiration or sooner termination of this lease, and all damage caused by the removal of such signs shall be fully repaired at the cost and expense of Lessee. (n54) COMMENT

24. Covenant Against Waste. Lessee agrees that Lessee will not commit waste in or upon the Demised Premises or any portion thereof. (n55) COMMENT

25. Quiet Enjoyment. The Lessor covenants that Lessor has lawful title to the above-described real property and the right to make this lease for the term aforesaid and, conditioned upon the prompt performance and observance by the Lessee, Lessee's agents and employees of all of the terms, covenants and conditions hereof required to be performed or observed by Lessee, Lessee's agents and employees, Lessee shall at all times during the term of this lease have the peaceable and quiet enjoyment of the Demised Premises. (n56) COMMENT

26. Withholding Premises. Should Lessee withhold from Lessor possession of the Demised Premises after the expiration or termination of this lease, whether by lapse of time or otherwise, such withholding shall constitute only a month-to-month tenancy. (n57) COMMENT

27. Effect of Demand. Any demand for rent upon the Lessee after the same shall have become due and payable, or for the performance or observance of any covenant or condition of this lease after the same is required to be performed or observed under the provisions hereof, shall have the same effect as though made at the time and place such rent became due or such obligation should have been performed or observed, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

28. Effect of Waiver. No waiver of any condition or covenant of this lease or of the breach of any condition or covenant shall be taken to constitute a waiver of any subsequent breach of such condition or covenant, or to justify or authorize the nonobservance on any other occasion of the same or any other condition or covenant thereof. The acceptance of rent by the Lessor at any time when the Lessee is in default of any covenant or condition shall not be construed as a waiver of such default or of the Lessor's rights under Paragraph 11, above, on account of such default, nor shall the payment of rent by the Lessee at any time when Lessor is in default under any covenant or condition hereof be construed as a waiver of such default, nor shall any waiver or indulgence granted by the Lessor or Lessee be taken as an estoppel against the party granting the same. (n58) COMMENT

29. Notices. Whenever Lessor or Lessee shall make any demand or serve any notice which is required to be in writing under the terms of this lease upon the other, the same shall be in writing and shall be sufficiently given if sent, postage prepaid, by United States registered or certified mail, addressed to Lessee at _____, _____, _____, and addressed to Lessor at _____, _____, _____, or at such other address as Lessor or Lessee may theretofore by written notice to the other have designated for the service of such notice. The captions of the various provisions of this lease are for convenience only and in no way define, limit or describe the scope or intent of this lease or the provisions which they precede or in any other manner affect this lease.

31. Short-Form Lease. This lease shall not be recorded, but the parties agree to execute a skeleton lease incorporating the terms of this lease and including a legal description of the property upon which the Demised Premises is situated, at the request of Lessee or Lessor. The same shall be duly executed in form suitable for recording, and any costs incurred in connection therewith shall be at the expense of the party requesting same. (n60) COMMENT

32. Successors and Assigns. This lease and the covenants and conditions herein contained shall inure to the benefit of and be binding upon Lessor, Lessor's heirs, legal representatives, or successors and assigns, and shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of Lessee, Lessee's heirs, legal representatives, or successors and those assignees of Lessee who become assignees in accordance with and as permitted by the terms of Paragraph 18., above.

33. Severability. In case any one or more of the provisions contained herein shall for any reason be held to be invalid, illegal or unenforceable in any respect, such invalidity, illegality or unenforceability shall not affect any other provision of this lease, but this lease shall be construed as if such invalid, illegal or unenforceable provisions had not been contained herein. Lessor also represents and warrants to Lessee that the Premises, the Building, and the project shall be constructed to contain no fireproofing or other insulating materials which contain asbestos. Lessor hereby agrees to indemnify, defend and hold Lessee, and its officers, employees and agents harmless from any claim or liability relative to (1) injury, loss, accident or damage to any person or property, or (2) from any direct loss or damage, including, with respect to the items described in (1) or (2) any judgments, penalties, fines, costs, attorneys, consulting or expert fees, site investigation or clean up costs, to the extent arising from: (n63) COMMENT

(i) The clean-up of any hazardous materials and resulting liability therefrom in, on, under or about the Building which existed prior to the date of this Lease or are subsequently brought into the Building by Lessor or Lessor's employees, agents, contractors or licensees; and

Lessor shall bear all costs of compliance with any such present or future laws, codes, ordinances, rules and regulations as applicable to the Building as a whole, and such costs shall not be included in the additional rent payable by Lessee under this Lease or otherwise imposed on Lessee after the commencement date. After the commencement date, if there are any changes in said laws as they may affect just Lessee's Premises, Lessee shall be responsible for causing the Premises to be in compliance with such laws. FOOTNOTES:

(n1) COMMENT (n1) This is a form of Lease for a multi-tenant building. It is a type of net-net-net Lease in that increases in certain costs over a base year are passed on pro rata among the tenants of the building.

The name of the Lessor needs to be properly identified as the titleholder of the property to be leased, so that a valid leasehold is conveyed. The Lessee must be properly identified because that is the person or entity that the Lessor will look to for the rent and other obligations imposed on the Lessee.

Because a lease is a conveyance of a leasehold estate, the estate must be properly and adequately described so that it can be leased. The Lessee will need to verify the square footage in the Demised Premises to make sure the base rent that is required to be paid is accurate because usually it will be based on the amount of rentable square feet in the Demised Premises.

(n2) COMMENT (n2) This clause spells out whether the Lessor has any obligations to prepare the space, or whether it is being taken "as is." If the latter, the Lessee needs to inspect the Demised Premises prior to signing the Lease.

(n3) COMMENT(n3) This clause is necessary especially if the building is older and the Lessor may need to make renovations to it. The Lessee may want to modify the clause to provide that any such work will not unreasonably interfere with Lessee's use of the space.

(n4) COMMENT(n4) The commencement of the Lease term and its expiration date need to be spelled out to define the duration of the initial lease term. The commencement date can be a certain date unless the space needs to be built out by the Lessor for the Lessee's use, in which case the commencement date needs to be tied to substantial completion of the work. The Lessee needs to be concerned about how substantial completion is verified (perhaps by the issuance of a Certificate of Occupancy) and by putting some kind of time limit for completion of the space. The Lessee should try to negotiate an outside date for completion, which if not met would allow Lessee to terminate the Lease.

(n5) COMMENT(n5) The base rent may be fixed for the initial term or could be adjusted periodically by means of a formula, by fixed increases, or by any number of other methods. Some Lessors will agree to start the rent at a lower rate to make it easier for the Lessee to pay, then step it up in later years. If the rent is not timely paid, the Lessor needs some kind of financial cost imposed on the Lessee to encourage timely payment, so this clause requires interest to be paid on the amount that is overdue. The other way to provide such an incentive is to charge a "late fee" equal to a percentage of the overdue amount, such as two percent (2%).

(n6) COMMENT(n6) In this Lease, the base rent is set at a certain rate by the Lessor knowing that the Lessor will receive a certain return on Lessor's investment given the costs of operating and owning the building. Those primary costs are for real estate taxes, the cost to insure the property, and the cost to operate the property. Those "costs" must be defined in the Lease. If those costs go up over a "base year" as defined in the Lease (usually the year the Lease is executed), then the Lessor has the right to charge the Lessee its pro rata share of the increases. These charges are sometimes referred to as escalation charges, because they are measured against a base year.

(n7) COMMENT(n7) The Lessee should try to narrowly define these costs, especially those for operating costs, so that the Lessor cannot pass on costs not typically considered "operating" costs, such as capital expenditures for major building components.

(n8) COMMENT(n8) The Lessor will typically add on a percentage to these costs to cover certain administrative and overhead costs incurred to keep track of such costs. If Lessor hires a management company for such purpose then the cost of the management fee will be included in lieu of the 15% administrative and overhead fee.

(n9) COMMENT(n9) This paragraph spells out the formula for computing the Lessee's pro rata share. The Lessee should verify the square footages used to compute the percentage.

(n10) COMMENT(n10) This paragraph spells out the mechanics for billing the Lessee for its share of the increase in real estate taxes and assessments, and insurance costs, and the time Lessee has to pay the increase in such costs.

(n11) COMMENT(n11) This clause spells out the mechanics for billing the increases in operating expenses, and the time for payment. It also allows the Lessee to examine Lessor's books and records to verify such costs.

(n12) COMMENT(n12) This clause provides a mechanism for the Lessee to contest the amount of the escalation charges billed to the Lessee. If the contest is not resolved, this clause requires for it to be determined by binding arbitration through the American Arbitration Association.

(n13) COMMENT(n13) Because Lessee is being charged these various expenses, this clause gives the Lessee the right to contest these various charges with the governmental authority or agency imposing the charges. The Lessor agrees to cooperate with the Lessee but the Lessee agrees to indemnify Lessor from any costs related to such contest. Any refund or portion thereof relating to a payment made by Lessee shall be paid to Lessee.

(n14) COMMENT(n14) The Lessor may or may not want a security deposit from the Lessee, depending upon the credit of the Lessee. Usually the security deposit is one month or more of the base monthly rent depending on the credit of the Lessee and the amount of money Lessor is paying to prepare the space. Other forms of security might be personal guaranties or guaranties from a parent or affiliated company of the Lessee, or letters of credit backing payment of the base rent or several installments of the base rent.

(n15) COMMENT(n15) The Lessee will try to obtain options to renew because they are to the Lessee's advantage to have them. The Lessor may or may not agree to give the Lessee an option to renew. If the Lessor does, then the Lessor must decide at what adjustment in base rent. This clause provides for an adjustment based on changes in the cost of living measured by the Consumer Price Index. The Lessee may prefer a fixed increase because it will give the Lessee more certainty about its costs, or Lessee may want to negotiate a cap on the increase computed by use of the Consumer Price Index because of the uncertainty of that Index.

(n16) COMMENT(n16) This clause allows the Lessor to bill the Lessee on a monthly basis for an estimate of what the escalation charges will be. At the end of the calendar year, after the actual charges are known, there will be an adjustment made if the estimates are different than the actual charges.

(n17) COMMENT(n17) The precise use of the Demised Premises by the Lessee should be defined so that Lessor has some control over the use of the Lessor's property. In certain retail properties, it may be important to limit the use because the Lessor may have granted other tenants in the Building the right to a certain exclusive use that other lessees cannot do.

If the Lessee decides to make alterations to the Demised Premises and if the space is not compliant with the regulations issued under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 ("ADA"), those alterations may trigger the requirement that the Demised Premises be made compliant. This clause requires the Lessee to be responsible for meeting such requirements, at Lessee's expense.

(n18) COMMENT(n18) This clause requires the Lessee to comply with all applicable laws that would affect the Lessee's use of the Demised Premises, including all environmental laws and the ADA as discussed above. The Lessee should ascertain whether the Building and the Demised Premises are compliant prior to signing the Lease, so the Lessee can either negotiate with the Lessor to require the Lessor to pay for the cost of such compliance, or know the amount of costs Lessee will be facing if it moves into the space.

(n19) COMMENT(n19) This clause requires the Lessee to pay for the utilities it uses. It is preferable to the Lessee that there be separate meters to measure such use so that the Lessee has no argument about whether the Lessee is paying for more than it is using. However, if separate meters are not possible, this clause covers that circumstance.

(n20) COMMENT(n20) This clause states that Lessor is not responsible for interruption of utilities, and such interruption will not allow Lessee to cease paying rent during the interruption. The Lessee may want to negotiate for some abatement of its base rent if Lessee cannot use the Demised Premises because of the interruption, at least if the interruption lasts longer than two or three days. The Lessor may agree to such a compromise if it carries rental interruption insurance to cover such abatement of rent.

(n21) COMMENT(n21) This clause is always one of contention between Lessor and Lessee. In this clause, the Lessee is responsible for all interior repairs and replacements. The next paragraph states that Lessor is responsible for the building exterior and structural repairs and replacements. Lessee may, by negotiation, try to limit its responsibility just to repairs in the interior of its space, but not replacements.

(n22) COMMENT(n22) Lessor's responsibility for repairs is conditioned upon (i) notice from Lessee that it is required, and (ii) the repair not being due to the fault or negligence of the Lessee, its agents and employees. However, if the latter, and if the repair is covered by the insurance carried by Lessor, then Lessor will be responsible for the repair by use of the insurance proceeds, without payment from Lessee, as long as the insurance company does not pay Lessor and then by means of a subrogation claim go after the Lessee for reimbursement.

(n23) COMMENT(n23) This clause requires the Lessee to obtain Lessor's written consent to any alterations, structural or otherwise. The Lessee should try to limit the consent requirement to just structural alterations.

This requirement that Lessee may have to restore the Demised Premises to their prior condition is usually objectionable to most tenants. Lessee should try to have it eliminated based on the rationale that it improved the Demised Premises and such improvements may be usable again for future tenants at the Demised Premises.

(n24) COMMENT(n24) In many instances the Lessor will agree to improve or buildout the Demised Premises for Lessee's use in order to provide an incentive for Lessee to lease the Demised Premises. The Lessor may have, as part of its financing with its lender, a reserve of funds specified just for tenant improvements. The clause should describe what Lessor has agreed to construct.

(n25) COMMENT(n25) This clause states what happens in the event there is a taking by eminent domain of all or a substantial portion of the Demised Premises or the common areas. This clause is fair to the Lessee because if the Lessee cannot use the space the Lease is terminated, at Lessee's option. If the Lease does continue, the base rent is equitably reduced because of the taking.

(n26) COMMENT(n26) If the taking by eminent domain does not substantially interfere with Lessee's business, the Lease does not terminate but Lessee's base rent is reduced in proportion to the amount of space taken, until the remaining space is restored.

(n27) COMMENT(n27) The parties may want to make it easier to terminate if the taking occurs during the last year or two of the Lease.

(n28) COMMENT(n28) As is typical in most multi-tenant buildings, this clause makes it clear that the Lessee cannot make a claim against the taking authority for any portion of the value of the real estate, including a value attributable to the value of the leasehold. That right belongs to Lessor. Lessee may make a separate claim for other damages it may have incurred relating to its business and costs to relocate its fixtures. However, if the Lessee is making substantial improvements to the space the Lessee may negotiate a right to a portion of the award granted to Lessor to reimburse Lessee for all or part of its investment based on the argument that the value of the property has gone up because of the improvements made by Lessee. Very often that may not be true, but Lessor may agree to a compromise whereby an amortization schedule is set up for the tenant improvements possibly related to the term of the Lease, with the Lessee entitled to receive the unamortized cost of the improvements at the time the condemnation occurs if prior to the end of the term of the Lease.

(n29) COMMENT(n29) This clause may be used if the Lessee is granted an option or options to renew the Lease. It is tied back to the provisions of subparagraph 10.B.

(n30) COMMENT(n30) This clause spells out the events which are considered defaults on the part of the Lessee which would result in a termination of the Lease, or at least the termination of Lessee's right to possession. These are drastic remedies but reasonable because for most of the events of default, Lessee is given written notice and a grace period within which to cure the default.

(n31) COMMENT(n31) These last two events of default do not have a grace period within which to correct them because of the nature of those defaults.

(n32) COMMENT(n32) Lessor has two choices if there is a default, to terminate the Lease and possession, or to just terminate the possession of Lessee but not terminate the Lease. In this latter event, the rent shall continue to accrue unless and until the space can be re-rented.

(n33) COMMENT(n33) This clause gives the Lessor an alternative to sue for damages in one lump sum for the value of the Lease instead of keeping the Lease in effect and suing the Lessee as rents accrue. The value of the Lease, as determined by this clause, may have some value if rents have gone down since the Lease was executed.

(n34) COMMENT(n34) This clause spells out the obligation of the Lessor to re-rent the space if the Lease is not terminated. It also spells out what the Lessor may do, and charge the Lessee for, in order to re-rent the space.

(n35) COMMENT(n35) This clause allows Lessor to remove Lessee's personal property if not removed by Lessor.

(n36) COMMENT(n36) Most bankruptcy clauses in leases formerly stated that if Lessee should become bankrupt, that Lessor could terminate the Lease. Such clauses are not enforceable under federal bankruptcy laws which essentially state that the bankruptcy court will make the decision as to whether an executory lease will be kept in effect. This clause attempts to follow more closely the bankruptcy laws.

(n37) COMMENT(n37) This clause gives the Lessor a self-help tool to remedy a default of the Lessee, assuming the Lessor does not want to take the more drastic step of declaring the Lessee in default under Paragraph 11 of this Lease. The Lessee should consider attempting to negotiate a similar clause giving the Lessee the right to cure defaults on the part of the Lessor if the Lessor does not cure the default within a specified period of time, such as 30 days, after receipt of notice from the Lessee.

(n38) COMMENT(n38) This clause is to allow Lessor the right of access to the Demised Premises under certain conditions, subject to certain limitations.

(n39) COMMENT(n39) Under this Lease, Lessor is required to insure the building in which the Demised Premises are located, but Lessee must insure its personal property located at the Demised Premises. In addition, as stated below, Lessee must carry public liability insurance for the protection of both Lessee and Lessor. This clause also contains a mutual waiver of liability clause, the effect of which is to require each of Lessor and Lessee to look to their insurance company for recovery even if the damage to the property of Lessor or Lessee was due to the acts or neglect of the other. The insurance company is asked to agree to such waiver of liability by agreeing as part of the policy to waive its subrogation rights. Lessee is required to name Lessor as an additional insured party on its liability policy. In that way, the insurance company will also defend Lessor if the Lessor is sued on a liability claim by a third party.

(n40) COMMENT(n40) This clause also provides for a waiver of liability with respect to business interruption and rental interruption claims.

(n41) COMMENT(n41) This clause indemnifies the Lessor from certain matters listed in this clause relating to Lessee's acts, breaches or negligence. Lessee should try to negotiate a similar clause for Lessee's benefit, namely an indemnification from Lessor for the acts or omissions of Lessor, its agents and employees.

(n42) COMMENT(n42) This clause is similar to the eminent domain clause except that in this case the cause of the loss of use of the Demised Premises is damage by fire or casualty. If the damage can be repaired and restored within 120 days, the Lessee cannot terminate the Lease. The Lessee may want to negotiate to shorten that time period if the Lessee believes that it cannot be out of business for that long of a period. If the damage or destruction occurs during the last year or two of the Lease, the parties may believe that the period of time to determine whether to rebuild and keep the Lease in effect should be shortened to 60 days as in this clause.

(n43) COMMENT(n43) This clause is similar to the eminent domain clause except that in this case the cause of the loss of use of the Demised Premises is damage by fire or casualty. If the damage can be repaired and restored within 120 days, the Lessee cannot terminate the Lease. The Lessee may want to negotiate to shorten that time period if the Lessee believes that it cannot be out of business for that long of a period. If the damage or destruction occurs during the last year or two of the Lease, the parties may believe that the period of time to determine whether to rebuild and keep the Lease in effect should be shortened to 60 days as in this clause.

(n44) COMMENT(n44) This clause is useful if the Lessee has been granted options to renew the Lease. It ties back to subparagraph 16.B.

(n45) COMMENT(n45) This clause states that the Lessor is not responsible for damage to Lessee's property, unless due to Lessor's negligence, and then only if the damage is not covered by insurance for which a waiver of subrogation endorsement is in place. That endorsement states that the insurance company will not pay the insured party and then exercise its right to bring a claim for reimbursement against the other party to the Lease, by reason of its subrogation rights.

(n46) COMMENT(n46) This clause limiting the right to assign or sublet the Demised Premises allows the Lessor to control who uses the space in its building. The Lessee can ask to assign or sublease only with the prior consent of Lessor, not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed. Some leases may spell out more specifically the grounds or criteria which must be considered by the Lessor. There are many variations to this clause, but this one is fair to both parties. The Lessee may also negotiate the right to assign to certain pre-approved entities or persons, or to affiliated entities or successor entities, such as successors by merger, reorganization or acquisition of substantially all of the assets of Lessee.

(n47) COMMENT(n47) This clause is important to the Lessor because if there is a transfer of the property, provided the new owner assumes the obligations of the Lessor under the Lease, the Lessor is released from future obligations accruing after the transfer of title. Without this clause, the Lessor would remain liable.

(n48) COMMENT(n48) This clause should be used if the Lessor is an individual or general partnership subject to personal liability. It protects such a Lessor from personal liability the same as would be available to the shareholders of a corporation or the members of a limited liability company.

(n49) COMMENT(n49) This clause is important to the mortgage lender of the Lessor who wants to make sure its mortgage is superior to the rights of the Lessee under the Lease, in particular if the lender ever needs to foreclose its mortgage because of a default on its loan. The Lessee can agree to this clause but only if it is given a nondisturbance clause from the lender that protects the Lessee's rights under the Lease as long as the Lessee is not in default under the Lease. If there already is a mortgage in place, the Lessee should ask for a nondisturbance agreement from the lender as a contingency for proceeding with the Lease.

(n50) COMMENT(n50) Estoppel certificates are needed by the Lessor if the Lessor is financing or refinancing by means of a loan secured by a mortgage, or if the Lessor is selling the property to a new purchaser. In either event, the Lessor's mortgage lender or prospective purchaser will want to know the status of the leases affecting the property. The estoppel certificate is used to verify the status of the leases.

(n51) COMMENT(n51) This clause defines the common areas and spells out the Lessor's maintenance obligations related to those areas, for which Lessee will pay a pro rata share if those expenses increase over a base year.

(n52) COMMENT(n52) This paragraph states Lessee's right to use the common areas as a common right with the other tenants, but also reserves to Lessor the right to make changes to the common areas. The Lessee needs to make sure that common areas such as parking areas are adequate for Lessee's business needs. Lessee may desire to negotiate for exclusive use of certain common areas, such as parking spaces or docks.

(n53) COMMENT(n53) This clause is important to the Lessee because it identifies its business location. However, the Lessor needs to protect the aesthetics of its property, so the Lessor needs to control the signs at the property.

(n54) COMMENT(n54) The Lessee has maintenance obligations for its signs, and must remove them at the end of the Lease.

(n55) COMMENT(n55) This is a common clause in any lease, for Lessor's protection. Even if not set forth in the Lease, it is a common law requirement under most state common law, imposed on the Lessee.

(n56) COMMENT(n56) This clause protects the Lessee from adverse title claims made against the Lessor which could interfere with the rights of Lessee under the Lease. The burden is upon Lessor to protect against such occurrences.

(n57) COMMENT(n57) This clause makes clear that a holdover does not imply any renewal of the Lease term, but merely a month-to-month tenancy which can be terminated at the end of a month. Some holdover clauses contain a provision for an increase in the base rent to discourage a holdover.

(n58) COMMENT(n58) This clause protects the Lessor from a claim by the Lessee that the Lessor has waived its rights if the Lessor previously failed to enforce a provision in the Lease.

(n59) COMMENT(n59) The parties may desire to explicitly authorize notices by facsimile, electronic transmission or by personal delivery through a recognized national courier.

(n60) COMMENT(n60) It is advisable for the Lessee to record its rights under the Lease to protect those rights from third parties dealing with the property, such as lenders and purchasers, because the recording provides constructive notice to them which applies whether or not they have actual notice. However, the Lessor (and the Lessee) will not want the economic terms of the Lease made known, just the property rights, so a short form lease should be required. The state statute will spell out the requirements that must be met to record the short form, and should be consulted.

(n61) COMMENT(n61) This clause could protect the Lease if one particular clause is ruled illegal or unenforceable.

(n62) COMMENT(n62) The parties may wish to add this clause as an indemnity from each party to the other if the representation is breached and some other party makes a claim for a commission.

(n63) COMMENT(n63) This clause and the next clause are important for the protection of the Lessee. The Lessee will not want to lease part of a property having environmental problems for several reasons, including the risk to its employees if the environmental condition imposes a health risk, the financial burden imposed on the Lessor to pay for a potential clean-up, and interference with the use of the property that could occur from the work required to remediate the property. These representations and requirement for an indemnification from the Lessor are one way for the Lessee to protect itself. The other way is for the Lessee to do its own due diligence regarding the property prior to signing the Lease, including obtaining of an environmental report done by professional environmental engineers.

(n64) COMMENT(n64) The Lessee should also be concerned about compliance of the Building with the ADA because this could be a significant cost if not in compliance. In this clause, the financial burden of compliance is imposed on the Lessor with respect to matters relating to laws in effect at the time the Lease commences. Thereafter, Lessee agrees to be responsible if the compliance requirement is due to a change in the law, and affects just the Lessee's Demised Premises as opposed to the Building as a whole.

(n65) COMMENT(n65) This clause is important to the Lessor in particular because it prevents the Lessee from raising issues not covered in the Lease. If there are other contemporaneous documents relating to the Lease, such as a Guaranty from an entity related to the Lessee, reference to that document should be made in this paragraph.

FORM 23.01 Option for ground lease

COMMENT

An option to lease a parcel of land often represents the first step in the development of a commercial project. Generally, it is during the option period that the developer will prepare feasibility studies, environmental reports, surveys and preliminary plans and specifications, and obtain preliminary cost estimates, commitments for financing, and indications of interest from major tenants.

Lease annexed to option:

This form follows the better practice of having the complete lease agreed upon in advance and annexed to the option as an exhibit. Occasionally, counsel may find an option to lease which contains specific provisions as to the rental and the term of lease and, ostensibly, the other provisions are covered by a clause to the effect that "the lease will also provide for such other terms and conditions as are generally contained in leases of the same nature." However, the developer soon finds that he is unable to obtain anything more than preliminary indications of interest from lenders and prospective tenants, due to the absence of a definitive lease. It is at this point, when considerable time and money may already have been expended, that the developer may discover there can be an honest difference of opinion as to what the "other provisions" of the lease should be and he may find that he must renegotiate what he had assumed to be agreed upon.

FORM

For and in consideration of $500, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and other valuable consideration, Stone Centers, Inc. (the "Optionors"), grants to Castle Co., a Florida corporation, its successors or assigns (the "Optionee"),

An Option to lease the following described property, together with all the buildings and improvements thereon and all rights and appurtenances thereunto appertaining, more particularly described as follows:

[Insert legal description from title policy]

On the following terms and conditions:

1. Lease appended; conflicting provisions. The parties shall use the Lease form, marked Exhibit A attached to and made a part of this Option, as the Lease to be executed at closing. However, the terms and conditions provided below shall be incorporated in the Lease. If there is any conflict between the provisions of the Lease form and those of this Option, the latter provisions shall prevail.

2. Notice; exercise; termination. The Optionee must give written notice to the Optionors of its election to lease the premises described below not later than 6 p.m., [date]. If the Optionee fails to give such notice, this Option shall terminate.

3. Suitability studies. The Optionors will permit the Optionee, at any time after this option agreement is executed and either before or after its exercise, to make engineering studies, including soil tests and borings and estimated cost of grading, and environmental studies including a Phase I environmental report, on the premises to determine the suitability of the premises for the Optionee's proposed use.

4. Zoning contingency. If the premises are not zoned so as to permit their proposed use by the Optionee for the construction and operation of an office building, the Optionors shall, at their expense, secure the necessary zoning as soon as possible. If proceedings to obtain a change in zoning have been commenced but not completed by the date specified as the last date for exercising this Option, the time for giving notice of election to lease hereunder shall be extended to a date two weeks after the Optionee has received notice from the Optionors that they have obtained the proper zoning variance or exception, but in no event shall the option expire later than [date]. If the zoning change is finally denied, this Option shall terminate and the Optionors shall return to the Optionee all monies paid to them.

5. Delivery of possession. Possession will be given upon delivery and execution of the Lease, and Optionors will cause any tenants in possession to vacate the premises prior to such time.

6. Taxes. Real estate taxes, whether or not then due or payable, shall be prorated to the date of closing. The Optionors will pay all assessments or installments thereof which become due prior to the execution and delivery of the Lease.

7. Water; sewers. This option is conditioned upon the Optionee being able to obtain an 8' Water Service to the Property to sustain a Sprinkler System and Permits to hook up to the Public Sewer System.

8. Title policy; closing. The Optionee shall have 30 days after the giving of notice of its election to lease the subject premises in which to secure a leasehold policy of title insurance. At such time the parties will proceed with the closing and the payment of the first rental.

9. Notices. Notice given hereunder must be in writing, and may be served personally, by mail or by a nationally recognized overnight courier. The time of service shall be the date of actual delivery to the address personally or the time of deposit in the mail, postage prepaid, directed to the last known address of the party to be served. Notice shall be directed to the Optionors at the office of _____ and to the Optionee at _____ or such other address as they may hereafter designate.

10. Binding effect. The provisions of this Option shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of both parties and their respective heirs, assigns, executors, administrators, and successors.

11. Non-waiver. No delay or failure by either party to exercise any right under this Option, and no partial or single exercise of that right, shall constitute a waiver of that or any other right, unless otherwise expressly provided herein.

12. Headings. Headings in this Option are for convenience only and shall not be used to interpret or construe its provisions.

13. Governing law. This Option shall be construed in accordance with and governed by the laws of the State of Florida.

14. Counterparts. This Option may be executed in two or more counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

15. Time of essence. Time is expressly declared to be of the essence of this Option.

16. Entire agreement. This Option supersedes all agreements previously made between the parties relating to its subject matter. There are no other understandings or agreements between them.

In witness whereof the parties have signed this Option on this [date].

FORM 23.02 Commercial lease--tenant oriented clauses--retail use

COMMENT

The form of lease illustrated here is a commercial lease for retail use by the tenant. It contains many clauses which benefit or protect the tenant's interests. Several of these clauses may be useful in other types of forms of leases on behalf of the tenant. For example, the tenant, who is required to pay real estate taxes (§§ 3.2, 29.1(1)), is permitted to contest the amount of tax (§ 6.1), and is expressly entitled to any refund (§ 6.2). The tenant is permitted to provide the required insurance coverage under blanket policies, which may also cover other tenant locations (§ 9.2). In addition, the landlord agrees to mitigate damages in the event of an eviction of the tenant. This may obligate the landlord to relet the premises, and thereby possibly reduce the tenant's liability for a deficiency in rent. The tenant's obligation for a rent deficiency is limited to basic rent, and specifically excludes the percentage rent under this lease (§ 24.2). Because of the widespread use of selling over the internet, the percentage rental clause must cover whether sales over the internet are included in the definition of gross sales from the leased premises. Because internet sales typically do not involve any contact with the leased premises, and the goods purchased are not located at the premises, internet sales are not included as part of gross sales (§ 3.5).

Future changes by tenant:

This lease contains several clauses which allow the tenant to surrender the premises or to move to another location. These provisions are aimed at allowing flexibility in future business planning. For example, the lessee is expressly permitted to assign or sublet the premises to a business which will use the property for the same purpose as the tenant (§ 12.1). A strongly pro-tenant clause in this lease allows the tenant to terminate the lease if, after a specified period, the use is uneconomical (§ 19.1). However, if the lease is terminated on this basis during the initial term, the tenant must offer to purchase the property from the landlord for a specified price (§ 12.2). During the initial term, however, the tenant is permitted to change locations, in effect, by exchanging property at another location with the landlord for the leased property (§ 20.1). These clauses give the tenant much future planning leeway. Future planning is anticipated by the required, but unspecified, operating hours, which cannot be less than those of similar businesses in the area, but may be as long as 24 hours per day (§ 11.2).

Purchase options:

This lease gives the tenant the opportunity to purchase the leased property from the landlord. The lease contains a purchase option (§ 17.1), and a right of first refusal (§ 18.1). On the last day of the initial term or any extended term, the lessee can purchase the property for its fair market value, if prior notice is given (§ 17.1). Fair market value, if disputed, is to be determined by appraisers (§ 29.1(i)). The right of first refusal permits the tenant the option to purchase on substantially the same terms as a bona fide offer (§ 18.1).

Lessee may extend the term for up to two consecutive periods of five years each ("Extended Terms"). The term shall automatically be extended for each Extended Term unless Lessee shall notify Lessor of its intention to terminate this Lease at least three months prior to the expiration of the then existing term.

Article 3 Rent, Percentage Rent

3.1. Rent. Lessee shall pay the minimum rent and percentage rent to Lessor, during the term of this Lease, in the amounts and at the times prescribed below in lawful money of the United States of America, at Lessor's address for notice hereunder or otherwise as Lessor may designate.

3.2. Impositions. Lessee will also pay all Impositions and all charges for utility, communications, and other services rendered or used on or about the Property during the term, before any interest or penalty may be added; and will furnish to Lessor, upon request, satisfactory proof evidencing such payment. If Lessee may legally pay any Imposition or other charge in installments and elects to do so, it shall only be liable for those installments coming due within the term. Lessor shall be responsible for all installments becoming due after the expiration of this Lease.

3.3. Basic rent. Lessee covenants and agrees to pay Lessor, as rent for the Property during the Basic Term, the minimum rent of:

--Dollars per annum (herein the "Basic Rent"), in equal monthly payments, in arrears, on the fifteenth business day of each month (herein the "Rent Payment Dates"), each in the sum of --Dollars, commencing on the fifteenth day of the month next succeeding the Commencement Date. However, on the Commencement Date Lessee shall pay to Lessor a sum equal to one month's Basic Rent, to be applied against the final payment of Basic Rent due thereunder.

3.4. Percentage rent. In addition to the payment of the Basic Rent, Lessee shall pay to Lessor monthly in the manner, upon the conditions, and at the times hereinafter set forth, during the Basic Term of this Lease and each Extended Term additional rent. The additional rent shall equal 5 percent of the annual "gross sales," as hereinafter defined, from all business conducted on the Property by or under Lessee during the term of this Lease, less (a) the monthly installment of the Basic Rent, (b) the aggregate amount of all general real estate taxes and special assessments on the Property paid by Lessee and (c) the aggregate amount of all premiums paid by Lessee in connection with insurance maintained pursuant to Article 9. Amounts deducted from the sum representing 5% of gross sales pursuant to (b) and (c) above may be deducted either in the Lease Year in which such amounts are paid by Lessee or in which they accrue according to Lessee's election.

3.5. Gross sales. The term "gross sales" as used herein shall (subject to the exceptions and authorized deductions hereinafter set forth) mean the gross amount received for everything sold upon or from the Property, either for cash or credit, with the full amount of credit sales being reported as gross sales in the month in which said credit sales are made. The term "gross sales" as used herein shall not include the following: (i) commissions or location rentals received from vending machines or coin operated devices, provided they only constitute an incidental portion of Lessee's business; (ii) the amount of sales or excise taxes collected from customers; (iii) receipts from the sales of meals to the restaurant's employees on the Property, in the course of their employment, provided such sales are registered and recorded separately from other sales; (iv) any service charge made, collected and turned over to employees in lieu of tips or gratuities from patrons; (v) the proceeds of the sale of any franchise or joint venture interest in the restaurant on the Property, and all fees, charges or rentals charged to or received from any such franchisee or joint venturer; (vi) the proceeds of the sale of any of Lessee's trade fixtures or restaurant equipment used on the Property; (vii) the value of any promotional meals; (viii) service charges or commissions paid to any issuer of credit cards accepted by Lessee in lieu of cash; (ix) sales and/or exchanges made to or with other restaurants owned or controlled by Guarantor; and (x) sales made over the internet, unless the goods purchased are purchased directly from the Property.

3.6. Statement. On each Rent Payment Date, Lessee shall pay to Lessor any additional rent due hereunder, and shall concurrently therewith submit to lessor a statement of Lessee's gross sales during the preceding month. The statement shall be certified to be correct by a representative of Lessee or Guarantor.

3.7. Annual adjustment. Within 30 days after the close of each Lease Year, Lessee shall pay to Lessor any additional rent due hereunder, and shall concurrently submit to Lessor a statement of Lessee's gross sales during the preceding Lease Year. The statement shall be certified to be correct by a Representative of Lessee or Guarantor. If the aggregate percentage rent paid to Lessor exceeds the amount actually payable by Lessee, the excess amount shall be credited against rent thereafter becoming due.

3.8. Audit. Lessor may, by giving written demand within 60 days after the end of each Lease Year, and at Lessor's sole expense, have Lessee's records of gross sales for the period inspected at the Lessee's offices by an impartial, reputable licensed accountant of Lessor's choice. If such audit discloses an error of 5% or more in Lessee's monthly statements of gross sales, as adjusted, Lessee shall bear the costs of inspection. Lessor's failure to make written demand shall constitute a waiver of its rights for that Lease Year. Lessor shall be deemed to have accepted each annual statement as correct unless, within 30 days of receipt thereof, it notifies Lessee of any objection.

3.9. Business records. Lessee shall, at all times during the terms, keep in a manner consistent with good accounting practice accurate and complete records of all business transactions made in, on, or from the Property.

3.10. Confidence. Lessor shall hold in confidence all sales figures and other financial data or information relating to Lessee's operations obtained from Lessee or upon inspection and audit of Lessee's books and records.

3.11. No representations. Lessee makes no representation or warranty to Lessor as to the gross sales to be made from the Property.

Article 4 Compliance with Requirements Including Environmental 4.1. Lessee will promptly procure, maintain and comply with all permits, licenses and other authorizations required for the use of the Property as a restaurant and for the lawful operation, maintenance, and repair of the Property or any part thereof. Lessee will not do any act or thing which constitutes a public or private nuisance. Lessor will join, if necessary, in the application for any permit or authorization with respect to any Legal Requirements. In connection with its use of the Property, Lessee shall comply with all applicable governmental laws, rules and regulations, federal, state and local, including those relating to environmental matters.

Article 5 Covenant against Liens

5.1. Liens of Lessee. If because of any act or omission of Lessee, any mechanic's lien or other lien, charge, or order for the payment of money is filed against any portion of the Property, Lessee shall, at its expense, cause the lien or liens to be discharged of record or bonded within 90 days after it receives written notice from Lessor of their filing, unless Lessee contests their validity in accordance with Section 6.1.

5.2. Removal of liens. If Lessee fails to cause the liens to be discharged of record or bonded within the required 90-day period (unless it contests their validity as provided above) or to satisfy them within 60 days after any final (nonappealable) judgment in favor of the lien holders, Lessor may cause the liens to be discharged. All payments by Lessor to have liens discharged shall constitute additional Basic Rent payable to it by Lessee.

5.3. Liens of Lessor. If, because of any act or omission of Lessor, any lien, charge, or order for the payment of money is filed against the Property, Lessor shall, at its expense, cause the lien or liens to be discharged of record or bonded within 90 days after it receives written notice from Lessee of their filing. In that event, Lessor shall indemnify and save harmless Lessee against and from all costs, liabilities, suits, penalties, claims, and demands. If Lessor fails to cause the liens to be discharged or bonded within the required 90-day period, or if before that period expires Lessee's quiet enjoyment of the Property is affected or threatened as a result thereof, Lessee may cause the liens to be discharged. All payments by Lessee may be deducted from subsequent installments of rent payable under this Lease.

Article 6 Permitted Contests

6.1. Contest proceedings. Lessee may contest by appropriate proceedings, the amount, validity, or application of any Imposition, Legal Requirement, or any lien arising therefrom, provided that: (a) such proceedings suspend the collection thereof; (b) no part of the Property or of any rent would be subject to loss, sale, or forfeiture before determination of any contest; (c) Lessor would not be subject to any criminal liability for failure to pay; (d) such proceedings do not affect the payment of rent hereunder or prevent Lessee from using the Property for its intended purposes; and (f) Lessee notifies Lessor of any such proceedings at which the amount in contest exceeds $25,000 within 20 days after the commencement thereof, and describes such proceedings in reasonable detail. Lessee will conduct all such contests in good faith and with due diligence and will, promptly after the determination of such contest, pay and discharge all amounts determined to be payable therein.

6.2. Refunds. All refunds or rebates of Impositions paid by Lessee shall belong to Lessee. All refunds received by Lessor shall be deemed trust funds and as such shall be received by it in trust and paid to Lessee forthwith. Lessor shall, at Lessee's request, sign all receipts which may be necessary to secure the payment of any refund or rebate, and shall pay over to Lessee all refunds or rebates received by it.

Article 7 Maintenance, Alterations, and Additions

7.1. Maintenance. Lessee shall keep the Property in good order and condition (except for ordinary wear and tear or damage caused by casualty or a Taking) and shall make all repairs and take all other action necessary or appropriate to keep and maintain the Property in good order and condition. Lessor will not be liable for any labor, services, or materials furnished or to be furnished to Lessee, or to anyone holding the Property or any part thereof through or under Lessee. No mechanics' or other liens for any such labor or materials shall attach to or affect the interest of Lessor in and to the Property.

7.2. Alterations and additions. If there is no continuing Event of Default, Lessee may make additions or improvements to or alterations of the Property. All maintenance and repair, and each such addition, improvement, or alteration (i) must not, individually or in the aggregate, substantially lessen the Fair Market Value of the Property or materially affect the Property's usefulness in Lessee's business, (ii) shall be completed expeditiously in a good and workmanlike manner, and in compliance with all Legal Requirements (including without limitation, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 ("ADA") and all regulations issued thereunder) and all Insurance Requirements, and (iii) shall become part of the Property and subject to this Lease.

7.3. Replacements. Lessee may install or place or reinstall or replace upon and, if there is no continuing Event of Default, remove from the Property any trade fixtures, signs, machinery, and equipment. Such trade fixtures, signs, machinery, and equipment shall not become the property of Lessor. However, replacements of Lessor's trade fixtures, machinery, and equipment shall be its property.

Article 8 Indemnification

8.1. Lessee hereby indemnifies, and shall protect and hold Lessor harmless from and against all liabilities, losses, claims, demands, costs, expenses, and judgments of any nature arising, or alleged to arise, from or in connection with the following: (a) any injury to, or the death of, any person or loss or damage to property on or about the Property or any adjoining property arising from or connected with the Lessee's use of the Property during the term; (b) performance of any labor or services or the furnishing of any materials or other property in respect of the Property or any part thereof by or at the Lessee's request of Lessee; (c) any contest permitted by Article 6. Lessee will resist and defend any action, suit or proceeding brought against Lessor by reason of any such occurrence by counsel designated by Lessee.

Article 9 Insurance

9.1. Insurance coverage. Lessee will maintain with insurers authorized to do business in the state in which the Property is located and which are well rated by any recognized national rating organization:

(a) fire insurance and insurance with respect to risks from time to time included under the standard extended coverage endorsement, including vandalism and malicious mischief, in amounts sufficient to prevent Lessor and Lessee from becoming co-insurers of any loss, but in any event not less than the then Full Insurable Value of the Property as determined from time to time (but not less often than once every three years) by the insurer or insurers;

(b) comprehensive general public liability insurance against claims for bodily injury, death, or property damage arising out of the use or occupancy of the Property by Lessee, in a combined single limit amount of not less than $300,000.

9.2. Policy terms and conditions. All insurance policies that Lessee must maintain under this Article shall name it and Lessor as the insured parties, as their respective interests may appear. The policies may be carried under blanket policies maintained by Lessee if they comply with the provisions of this subsection. The fire policies may provide for the same deductible amounts, not to exceed $25,000, that Lessee customarily provides for in its insurance for similar properties owned or leased by it. The policies shall provide for a reserved amount with respect to the Property so as to assure that the amount of insurance required by section 9.1(a) will be available notwithstanding any losses with respect to other property covered by such blanket policies. All policies of insurance that Lessee must maintain under Section 9.1(a) shall: (i) bear a standard first mortgagee endorsement in favor of any holder or holders of a first mortgage lien or security interest in the Property with loss payable to the holder or holders for application as provided in Article 10; (ii) provide for the benefit of the holder or holders, that ten days' prior written notice of cancellation, termination, modification, or lapse of coverage shall be given; and (iii) not contain a provision relieving the insurer thereunder of liability for any loss by reason of the existence of other insurance policies covering the Property against the perils involved, regardless of collectibility.

9.3. Insurance certificate. Lessee shall deliver to Lessor, promptly after this Lease commences, insurers' certificates evidencing all insurance that Lessee must maintain under this Lease, and, within 30 days before any such insurance expires, other certificates evidencing its renewal.

9.4. Waiver of claim. If and so long as the insurance that Lessee must maintain under Section 9.1 is in full force and effect, Lessor waives, releases, and discharges Lessee from all claims or demands that Lessor may have or subsequently acquire arising out of damage or destruction of the Property occasioned by fire or extended coverage risks, whether the claim or demand arises because of the negligence of Lessee, its agents, or otherwise. Lessor shall look to the insurance coverage only in the event of such loss.

Article 10 Condemnation and Casualty

10.1. Condemnation or insurance awards. Lessee hereby assigns to Lessor any award or payment on account of any damage, destruction, or Taking which is payable in connection with the Property. However, Lessee shall be entitled to that portion of the net award representing payment for its leasehold interest, trade fixtures, moving expenses, business interruption, or loss of profits. All amounts paid pursuant to an agreement with a condemning authority in connection with any Taking shall be deemed to constitute an award on account of such Taking. Lessee agrees that this Lease shall control the rights of both parties in any such award, and any contrary provision of any present or future law is hereby waived.

10.2. Notice. If there is any damage to or destruction of the Property or if any proceedings or negotiations are instituted which do or may result in a Taking, each party will promptly give notice thereof to the other, describing its nature and extent.

10.3. Lessee restoration. Subject to subsection 10.5, if the cost of Restoration is less than $25,000, Lessee will promptly commence and complete Restoration of the Property and Lessor shall cause the Net Award to be made available to Lessee for such purpose.

10.4. Substantial restoration. Subject to subsection 10.5, if the cost of Restoration exceeds $25,000 and can be completed within 180 days after the occurrence, Lessor will promptly commence and complete Restoration of the Property in accordance with plans and specifications to be prepared by Lessee within 20 days after the occurrence reflecting the requisite nature and scope of the Restoration improvements. Lessee shall prepare such final plans and specifications and submit copies of them to Lessor within 20 days from the date it receives notice under subsection 10.2. The final plans and specifications shall be deemed approved by Lessor unless it notifies Lessee, within five days after receipt, of any reasonable objections to them, and specifies the nature of the objections. Lessor shall not unreasonably withhold approval of the final plans and specifications. If within ten days after Lessee receives Lessor's objections the parties are unable to agree upon the final plans and specifications, either party may terminate the Lease by giving ten days' prior written notice to the other.

10.4.1. Ownership of plans. Lessor acknowledges that the said plans and specifications are the sole property of Lessee and Guarantor, that the architectural design of Lessee's restaurant building is unique and that such plans and specifications will be furnished to Lessor in confidence. Lessor agrees not to knowingly permit or suffer any person to utilize same for any purpose other than the Restoration improvements.

10.4.2. Contractor bids, contracts. Within ten days after Lessor has approved or is deemed to have approved the final plans and specifications, Lessee, on Lessor's behalf, shall solicit and obtain a bid from a reputable and responsible contractor for the construction and completion of the Restoration improvements. A qualified, reputable, and bondable contractor designated by Lessor shall be allowed to submit a bid to Lessee, provided that Lessor submits the name of the contractor to Lessee within 30 days after the notice of occurrence, as foresaid. Within five days after receipt of bid(s), Lessee, on Lessor's behalf, shall designate the contractor who has submitted the acceptable bid to construct the Restoration improvements and shall forward to Lessor the general construction contract to be executed by Lessor on Lessee's approved contract form. Lessor agrees that no contractor shall be deemed any agent of Lessee and that Lessee assumes no obligations with respect to the manner or quality of construction or any other matter relating to the construction, and that Lessee shall have the right to insist upon compliance by Lessor with all terms and provisions hereof.

10.4.3. Construction extras. Lessee may require the Lessor to amend the construction contract to include Extras, provided however, that their aggregate cost shall not exceed the Net Award.

10.4.4. Completion date. Lessor shall diligently proceed with the construction of the Restoration improvements and shall complete them within 180 days after the occurrence, but this date shall be extended for all delays in construction resulting from causes beyond Lessor's reasonable control. However, if for any reason, including causes beyond Lessor's reasonable control, construction is not completed within one year from the date of occurrence, Lessee may terminate this Lease. Lessee's right to terminate is in addition to any other remedies provided herein or by law.

10.4.5. Work standards and completion. Lessor shall cause the general contractor to construct the Restoration improvements in a good workmanlike manner and in compliance with plans and specifications and all Legal Requirements. Lessor shall furnish to Lessee satisfactory evidence of completion in the form of (1) a certificate of occupancy (where appropriate) issued by the appropriate governmental authority, if available, and (2) Lessor's certificate of completion.

10.4.6. Lessee inspection and work. During the course of construction, Lessee or its representatives may enter upon the Property at all reasonable times for the purpose of inspecting the construction to determine that the work is being completed in accordance with the plans and specifications. When construction is substantially completed, Lessee may enter the Property for the purpose of installing improvements, fixtures, and other equipment, upon the condition that Lessee does not unreasonably interfere with completion of construction of the Restoration improvements.

10.4.7. Clean-up. Lessor shall deliver the Property to Lessee on the completion of Restoration in broom clean condition, free and clear of all debris, rubbish, and discarded building materials.

10.4.8. Construction bonds. Before commencement of construction of Restoration improvements, Lessor shall cause its contractor to procure performance and payment bonds issued by a duly qualified corporate surety in the full amount of the construction contract, naming Lessor as the Obligee. The bonds shall be: (a) conditioned upon the full and complete and faithful performance of the terms and conditions and of the work to be performed under the contract, and (b) further conditioned upon payment in full of the claims of all persons performing labor upon, or furnishing materials to be used in, or furnishing appliances, equipment or power contributing to such work. The bonds shall meet the statutory requirements of the governing jurisdiction of the work site, be recordable in form, and be in the form and written by the companies that Lessee reasonably approves. If any contractor defaults under a construction contract and Lessor receives sums under the bonds, Lessor shall hold the sums in trust to be applied to the cost of completion of Restoration improvements.

10.5. Termination events. This Lease shall terminate as of the date of the occurrence or Taking if any of the following termination events occur: (a) Restoration cannot be completed within 180 days after the occurrence; (b) the damage, destruction, or Taking occurs during the last five years of the Basic Term or during any Extended term; or (c) within 30 days after a Taking, Lessee determines in good faith and notifies Lessor that, as a result thereof, the Property no longer is suitable for use as a restaurant. In that event, the Basic Rent, Percentage Rent, and other payments to be made by Lessee shall be apportioned as of the date of the occurrence or Taking.

10.6. Lessor's failure to restore. If Lessor does not commence Restoration within 30 days after the occurrence, or does not prosecute the Restoration with due diligence, Lessee, upon ten days notice to Lessor, may either (i) commence and complete Restoration at Lessor's expense, in which event Lessor shall make the Net Award available to Lessee for such purpose, or (ii) terminate this Lease. If the Award is not adequate to complete Restoration, Lessor shall promptly pay the deficiency to Lessee.

10.7. Rent abatement. Upon damage or destruction to the Property or upon its Taking which does not result in termination under subsection 10.5, the Basic Rent, Percentage Rent, and all other payments to be made by Lessee hereunder shall abate as of the date of the occurrence. In the case of partial damage, destruction or Taking which does not cause Lessee to discontinue use of the Property as a restaurant, the above payments shall be equitably apportioned.

10.8. Restoration trust funds. If damage or destruction to the Property or the Taking thereof does not result in termination under subsection 10.5, the Net Award shall be paid to the Depository to be held in trust for Restoration.

10.9. Arbitration. If Lessor and Lessee are unable to agree upon the period required to complete Restoration or upon its cost, such matters shall be determined as follows: Each party shall appoint an arbiter. If the two arbiters cannot agree upon the disputed matter, it shall be determined by a third arbiter selected by them. If the two arbiters cannot agree upon a third arbiter, he shall be appointed by a federal district court judge, acting in a nonjudicial capacity, for the district in which the Property is located.

10.10. Application of award. If there is no continuing Event of Default and unless this Lease has been terminated under Section 10.5, the Net Award shall be applied as follows: (a) any Net Award received by Lessor as compensation for a Taking of temporary use or occupancy during the term of this Lease shall be paid over immediately to Lessee; (b) any portion of the Net Award allocable to a period after the expiration or earlier termination of this Lease shall become the property of Lessor and shall be paid to it; and (c) any portion of the Net Award which is received for damage to or destruction of the Property shall be paid to the Depository and applied as provided in subsections 10.3, 10.4, or 10.6.

Article 11 Use, Operation of Business

11.1. Use. Lessee shall use the Property only for the operation of a restaurant and for no other purpose without Lessor's prior written consent. However, at Lessor's option, Lessee may use the property for any legally permissible use which proves to be economically feasible, to be determined by Lessee within its good faith discretion.

11.2. Operation. During the term, Lessee shall operate a restaurant upon the Property not less than the hours similar businesses are open for business in the immediate area of the Property and may operate on a 24 hour per day, seven day per week basis if permitted by Legal Requirements. However, temporary discontinuance of business due to strikes, lockouts, fire, casualty, remodeling, Legal Requirements, or other causes beyond Lessee's control shall not be deemed a breach of this section 11.2.

Article 12 Assignment, Subletting

12.1. Assignment and sublease. Lessee may not mortgage, pledge, or otherwise encumber its interest in this Lease or in any sublease of the Property. Lessee may assign this Lease or sublet the Property to any person whose business is to operate a restaurant, provided that the sublease or assignment is expressly subject to the provisions of this Lease, and that the sublease or assignment does not affect or reduce Lessee's obligations hereunder, which shall continue in full effect as the obligations of a principal and not as a guarantor or surety, to the same extent as though no assignment or sublease had been made.

12.2. Performance. Any act required to be performed by Lessee under this Lease may be performed by its sublessees or assignees. Their performance shall be deemed to be that of Lessee and shall be acceptable as its act by Lessor.

Article 13 Right to Cure Defaults

13.1. Lessor defaults. If Lessor fails to pay any liens or encumbrances affecting the Property and to which this Lease may be subordinate when any of them become due or otherwise fails to perform any of its covenants or agreements under this Lease, and the failure or default continues for 30 days after Lessee gives notice to Lessor (notwithstanding any delay or forbearance in giving notice), Lessee may pay the lien or encumbrance and cure the default. Lessee may further make all necessary payments in connection therewith, including, but not limited to, the payment of reasonable attorney's fees, costs, and charges of or in connection with any pending legal action. Lessor shall immediately pay Lessee all amounts paid by Lessee, including interest thereon at the maximum legal rate, or, if no such rate is established, at 15 percent per annum. All sums charged to Lessor by Lessee hereunder shall be Lessor's indebtedness to Lessee, payable on demand. If all Lessor's indebtedness is not fully paid within 30 days after demand, Lessee may (i) deduct such amount from rent subsequently becoming due hereunder, (ii) terminate this Lease by giving 30 days notice to Lessor (unless Lessor cures the default), or (iii) extend this Lease on the same covenants and conditions as herein provided until the indebtedness is fully paid by application to rents.

13.2. Lessee defaults. If Lessee fails to make or perform any required payment or act, Lessor may do so for Lessee's account. Lessee shall pay to Lessor on demand all amounts so paid by Lessor and all incidental costs and expenses (including attorney's fees and expenses) incurred in connection with the payment or performance, including interest thereon at the maximum legal rate, or, if no such rate is established, at 15 percent per annum from the date the payment is made or the costs and expenses are incurred.

Article 14 Subordination and Nondisturbance

14.1. This Lease and all rights of Lessee hereunder are and shall be subject and subordinate to the lien of any and all mortgages, or consolidated mortgage or mortgages, which may now or hereafter affect the Property, or any part thereof, and to all renewals, modifications, consolidations, replacements, and extensions thereof, subject to the following conditions. Any mortgage placed upon the Property shall provide that so long as there is not outstanding a continuing Event of Default by Lessee in any term, condition, covenant, or agreement of this Lease, (i) the leasehold estate of Lessee created hereby and Lessee's peaceful and quiet possession of the Property shall be undisturbed by any foreclosure of the mortgage, (ii) the Net Award will be made available for Restoration, and (iii) the lien will be released if Lessee purchases the Property pursuant to Article 17 and pays the purchase price to the mortgagee to the extent that a balance is due on the mortgage.

Article 15 Lessee's Trade Fixtures and Equipment

15.1. All trade fixtures, signs, equipment, furniture, or other personal property of whatever kind and nature kept or installed on the Property by Lessee shall not become the property of Lessor or a part of the realty no matter how affixed to the Property and may be removed by Lessee at any time and from time to time during the entire term of this Lease. Upon request of Lessee or its assignees or any subtenant, Lessor shall execute and deliver any real estate consent or waiver forms submitted by any vendors, lessors, chattel mortgagees, or holders or owners of any trade fixtures, signs, equipment, furniture, or other personal property of any kind and description kept or installed on the Property setting forth that Lessor waives, in favor of the vendor, lessor, chattel mortgagee, or any holder or owner, any Superior lien, claim, interest or other right therein. Lessor shall further acknowledge that property covered by the consent or waiver forms is personal property and is not to become a part of the realty no matter how affixed thereto, and that such property may be removed from the Property by the vendor, lessor, chattel mortgagee, owner, or holder at any time upon default in the terms of such chattel mortgage or other similar documents, free and clear of any claim or lien of Lessor.

Article 16 Surrender

16.1. Upon the expiration or earlier termination of this Lease, Lessee shall surrender the Property to Lessor in good order and condition, except for ordinary wear and tear, existing Legal Requirements, and the results of any damage, destruction, or Taking. Lessee shall remove from the Property on or prior to the expiration or earlier termination all of its property situated thereon and shall repair any damage caused by the removal. Property not so removed shall become the property of Lessor.

Article 17 Purchase Option

17.1. Lessee may purchase the Property on the last day of the Basic Term or of any Extended Term at a price equal to the Fair Market Value of the Property as of the date of purchase. Lessee shall give notice of the exercise of the option within 180 days prior to the expiration of the effective term. On the date of such purchase, Lessor shall convey marketable title to the Property to Lessee against payment of the purchase price therefor in accordance with Article 21.

Article 18 Right of First Refusal

18.1. If at any time during any term of this Lease, Lessor receives and is willing to accept a bona fide offer from a third party to purchase the Property, other than an offer to purchase it at any sale incidental to the exercise of a remedy provided for in a mortgage or other security instrument creating a lien on the Property, or if Lessor offers to sell the Property to a third party, Lessor shall, if there is no continuing Event of Default, promptly transmit to Lessee its offer to sell the Property to Lessee upon terms and conditions substantially similar to those offered by or to the third party, together with a true copy of such original offer. If Lessee does not accept such offer within 30 days after it is made, Lessor may, within 180 days after the 30-day period expires, sell the interest to a third party upon terms and conditions substantially similar to those offered to Lessee. If Lessee accepts such offer by notice to Lessor within the time permitted, the offer and acceptance shall constitute a contract for the sale by Lessor and the purchase by Lessee of the Property at a closing to be held within 30 days following the receipt by Lessor of Lessee's notice of acceptance. On the date of such purchase, Lessor shall convey marketable title to the Property to Lessee against payment of the purchase price therefor in accordance with Article 21.

Article 19 Termination for Uneconomic Use

19.1. Termination option. If, at any time two years or more after this lease commences, the Leased Property is no longer economic or suitable for Lessee's continued use and occupancy, Lessee may give notice to Lessor of its intention to terminate the lease. The notice shall specify that it is being given under this Article 19, and shall contain the following: (a) the termination date, which shall be the Payment Date as set forth below first occurring at least 180 days after notice is given; (b) Lessee's certification that its board of directors has made a determination that the Leased Property is no longer economic or suitable for Lessee's continued use and occupancy and that Lessee has discontinued or will discontinue its use on or before the termination date, and, after that date, Lessee will discontinue the use of the Leased Property in its ordinary course of business for a period of at least three years; and (c) if the termination date occurs during the Basic Term, Lessee's irrevocable offer to purchase the Leased Property on that date at a purchase price previously determined in accordance with Section 19.2. If Lessor rejects the offer by giving notice to Lessee not later than 30 days before the termination date, or if that date occurs during an Extended Term, this lease shall terminate on the termination date. Unless Lessor has rejected the offer provided in the preceding sentence, Lessor shall be conclusively presumed to have accepted it and, on the termination date Lessor shall transfer, and Lessee shall purchase, the Leased Property in accordance with Article 21.

19.2. Purchase prices. The payment dates and purchase prices, referred to above, are as follows:

Payment Date	Purchase Price
[date]	$1,130,000
[date]	$1,143,000
[date]	$1,157,300
[date]	$1,173,000
[date]	$1,190,000

Article 20 Substitution of a New Lease

20.1. If, at any time during the Basic Term, the Leased Property is no longer economic or suitable for Lessee's continued use and occupancy, Lessee may give notice to Lessor of its intention to terminate the lease. The notice shall specify that it is being given under this Article 20, and shall contain the following: (a) the termination date, which shall be the Payment Date first occurring at least 180 days after notice is given; (b) Lessee's certification that its board of directors has made a determination that the Leased Property is no longer economic or suitable for Lessee's continued use and occupancy and that Lessee will discontinue its use on or before the termination date for a period of at least three years; and (c) a description, in reasonable detail, of the new property that Lessee intends to convey or assign to Lessor as the purchase price for the Leased Property payable under this Article 20. The new property shall consist of a fee interest in improved real property. However, if the Leased Property is subject to a Ground Lease, the new property may consist of a fee interest in improved real property or, with Lessor's consent, a leasehold interest created by a ground lease and its assignment. The term of the ground lease, including renewals, shall expire not earlier than 15 years after the expiration date of the lease referred to in the following sentence as that lease may be extended under its terms, and the ground lease shall otherwise be satisfactory to Lessor. Upon the date specified for termination of this Lease, Lessee shall convey or assign to Lessor a parcel of property which shall be unencumbered by any lien or charge and suitable for use in Lessee's business as a restaurant. Lessee shall then enter into a lease of the property with Lessor, provided the following conditions are met: (A) the Fair Market Value of the property is not less than the greater of (i) the Fair Market Value of the Leased Property, as determined by a member of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, not more than 60 days before the termination date, or (ii) the purchase price of the Leased Property at the purchase date which would be payable upon a purchase under Article 19; (B) the new lease (i) provides for payments of basic rent on each Payment Date that are not less than the Basic Rent payable under this Lease, (ii) provides for a term ending on a date not earlier than the Termination Date, (iii) provides for purchase prices for the property that are not less than the respective purchase prices that would be payable upon a purchase of the Leased Property by Lessee under this Lease, (iv) has substantially the same other terms and provisions as this Lease, and (v) is guaranteed by the Guarantor on the same terms and conditions as set forth in the Guaranty; and (C) all of the documents and proceedings relating to the conveyance or assignment and new lease and its substitution, including the terms and provisions of the new lease, are reasonably satisfactory in form and substance to Lessor. Lessee shall pay all costs, charges, and expenses incident to the conveyance or assignment of the property and the lease thereof and any mortgage thereof by Lessor and any assignment of the lease thereof, including attorney's fees and expenses, recording fees, the costs of appraisals, title insurance premiums covering title insurance for Lessor and for the mortgagee under such mortgage, and all applicable taxes which may be incurred or imposed by reason of such transactions. On the termination date, Lessor shall transfer to Lessee, and Lessee shall purchase from Lessor, the Leased Property in accordance with Article 21.

Article 21 Procedure for Purchase

21.1. Marketable title, liens. Upon the purchase by Lessee of the Property under this Lease, Lessor shall transfer marketable title to Lessee. Title shall, however, be subject to all liens, encumbrances, charges, exceptions, and restrictions affecting the Property as of the Commencement Date (excluding any monetary liens or encumbrances) and those attaching thereto on or after such date (a) which shall be or have been expressly consented to in writing by Lessee, or (b) for the discharge of which Lessee is responsible under this Lease, and subject to all Legal Requirements, but free of all liens which secure amounts or obligations which Lessee is not obligated to pay or discharge under this Lease.

21.2. Settlement. Upon the date fixed for any such purchase, Lessee shall pay to Lessor at its address for notices hereunder or otherwise as the Lessor may designate, the purchase price specified herein, by certified or official bank check payable to the order of Lessor or its designee, and Lessor shall deliver to Lessee an appropriate instrument or instruments of transfer of the interest in the Property. Upon completion of the purchase, this Lease and all obligations hereunder shall terminate, except for actual or contingent obligations and liabilities which arose on or prior to the purchase date.

Article 22 Short Form Lease

22.1. Recordable form. The parties will, simultaneously with the execution of this Lease, execute counterparts of an instrument, in recordable form, which, when completed to include a metes and bounds description of the Property and the Commencement Date and Termination Date of this Lease, will constitute a short form of lease. Lessor authorizes and appoints Lessee as its attorney-in-fact to complete the document when the omitted data is available and thereupon to record it.

22.2. Nondisclosure of rent. Lessor shall not record this Lease or any short form lease or other document which sets forth the rent to be paid by Lessee. Any such recording or attempted recording by Lessor shall constitute a breach of this Lease.

Article 23 Certificates

23.1. Either party shall, without charge, at any time within ten days after the other's written request, from time to time, certify by written instrument duly executed and acknowledged to any actual or proposed mortgagee or purchaser, or any other Person specified in the request, as to the following: (a) whether this Lease has been supplemented or amended, and if so, the substance and manner of such supplement or amendment; (b) the validity and force and effect of this Lease, in accordance with its tenor as then constituted; (c) the existence of any default thereunder; (d) the existence of any offsets, counterclaims, or defenses thereto by the other party; (e) the commencement and expiration dates of the term of this Lease; and (f) all other matters that may reasonably be so requested. Any such certificate may be relied upon by the party requesting it and any other Person to whom it may be exhibited or delivered. The contents of the certificate shall be binding on the party executing it.

Article 24 Events of Default, Remedies

24.1. Default. Any of the following occurrences, conditions, or acts shall constitute an "Event of Default" under this Lease:

(a) if Lessee:

(i) defaults in making payment when due of any Basic Rent or Percentage Rent, and the default continues for 30 days after Lessor gives written notice to Lessee specifying the default and demanding that it be cured, or

(ii) defaults in the observance or performance of any other provision of this Lease, and the default continues for 60 days after Lessor gives written notice to Lessee specifying the default and demanding that it be cured. However, if the default cannot be cured by the payment of money and cannot with due diligence be wholly cured within the 60-day period, Lessee may have any longer period that is necessary to cure the default, so long as Lessee proceeds promptly to cure it within that period, prosecutes the cure to completion with due diligence, and advises Lessor from time to time, upon Lessor's request, of the actions that Lessee is taking and the progress being made;

(b) if the Property is abandoned by Lessee for a period of 45 consecutive days;

(c) if Lessee or the Guarantor files a petition in bankruptcy, for reorganization or for an arrangement under the Bankruptcy law or any similar federal or state law, is adjudicated a bankrupt or becomes insolvent, is unable to meet Lessee's obligations as they become due, or takes any corporate action in furtherance of any of the foregoing;

(d) if a petition or answer is filed proposing the adjudication of Lessee or the Guarantor, if any, as a bankrupt or the reorganization of Lessee or the Guarantor under the Bankruptcy law or any similar federal or state law, and (i) Lessee or the Guarantor consents to the filing thereof, or (ii) the petition or answer is not discharged or denied within 60 days after its filing;

(e) if a receiver, trustee, or liquidator (or other similar official) of Lessee or the Guarantor, of all or substantially all of their respective businesses or assets, or of the estate or interest of Lessee in the Property is appointed and is not discharged within 60 days thereafter or if Lessee or the Guarantor consents to or acquiesces in the appointment; or

(f) if Lessee's estate or interest in the Property is levied upon or attached in any proceeding and the process is not vacated or discharged within 60 days after the levy or attachment, unless the levy or attachment is being contested under Article 6.
