Daniel Glosband is a partner in Goodwin Procter LLPs Financial Restructuring Practice, www.goodwinprocter.com. He recently represented the lead investors in the confirmed Chapter 11 plan of US Airways and its merger with America West and the fiduciaries for the employee stock plan in the Delta case.

Mr. Glosband is a Vice President of the American College of Bankruptcy and a conferee of the National Bankruptcy Conference, which advises Congress on bankruptcy legislation. He was a draftsman of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and one of two primary draftsmen of Chapter 15 of the United States Bankruptcy Code, Ancillary and Other Cross-Border Cases. He is a contributing author to Collier on Bankruptcy 15th Ed. Revised, Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide and Collier International Business Insolvency Guide.

He is admitted to practice in New York, Massachusetts, the U.S. District Courts in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont and the Southern District of New York, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and the U.S. Supreme Court. He received a J.D. from Cornell University in 1969 and a B.A. from University of Massachusetts in 1966.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

109 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Brown & Cole Stores

2008 Emerging Issues 1525

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Brown & Cole Stores

By Hon. Ralph R. Mabey

December 14, 2007

SUMMARY: New Code section 503(b)(9) gives a seller of goods sold in the ordinary course of business an administrative expense priority for the value of the goods received by a debtor within 20 days before the petition date. The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel, In In re Brown & Coles, has found the language of the statute unambiguous.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Secured Creditors Are Entitled to Administrative Expense Priority under New Section 503(b)(9), and Prepetition Claims May Be Set Off Against Such Administrative Expense Claims

In Brown & Cole Stores, LLC v. Associated Grocers, Inc. (In re Brown & Cole Stores LLP), 375 B.R. 873 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2007), the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Ninth Circuit considered new Bankruptcy Code section 503(b)(9), which gives a seller of goods sold in the ordinary course of business administrative expense priority for the value of goods received by a debtor within 20 days before the bankruptcy petition date. The B.A.P. held (in the teeth of a thoughtful dissent) that administrative expense priority was available to a qualifying vendor under the new provision even if the vendor was fully secured, but that the administrative expense priority claim was subject to setoff against prepetition claims held by the debtor.

The Administrative Priority of Section 503(b)(9) Is Available to Secured Creditors. The debtor, Brown & Cole Stores ("B&C"), operated a grocery store chain in Washington state. 375 B.R. 873, 875. B&C's principal supplier, Associated Grocers, Inc. ("AGI"), held a security interest in a large block of AGI stock owned by B&C to secure various outstanding obligations from B&C to AGI. AGI was, therefore, a secured creditor of B&C.

Among the various claims asserted by AGI against B&C was an administrative expense claim for over $6 million arising under section 503(b)(9), which was added to the Bankruptcy Code by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ("BAPCPA"). 375 B.R. at 875. Separately, B&C claimed that AGI was liable for a large damage claim resulting from AGI's alleged breach of contract. Id. at 876.

B&C opposed AGI's section 503(b)(9) claim, arguing that AGI should not be entitled to administrative expense priority because it was a secured creditor. B&C also argued that it should be permitted to setoff its contract claim against AGI's section 503(b)(9) claim if that claim was allowed.

The B.A.P. majority held that AGI was entitled to administrative expense priority under section 503(b)(9), notwithstanding the fact that it was a secured creditor. Id. at 878. The court first concluded that the plain meaning of the new section did not limit its coverage to unsecured creditors. Id. at 877. B&C argued that the absence of any language regarding secured claims in section 503(b)(9) was evidence that the new section should apply only to unsecured claims. B&C supported this argument by noting that section 503(b)(1)(B)(i), which provides administrative expense priority for certain tax claims, had been amended by BAPCPA specifically to include the words "whether secured or unsecured," addressing a split of authority as to whether that section could be applied to secured claims. Congress's decision not to include the same language in section 503(b)(9), B&C argued, must have been deliberate, such that section 503(b)(9) should apply only to unsecured claims.

The majority rejected B&C's reasoning. The court stood its ground that the statute was unambiguous and noted that, while Congress did indeed omit the word "secured," Congress also omitted the word "unsecured" from section 503(b)(9)-- plainly Congress omitted both limiting words because Congress intended not to limit the section's application to either secured or unsecured claims. 375 B.R. at 878. The court explained that a vendor's right to assert an administrative claim under section 503(b)(9) "is limited in only three ways: (1) the vendor must have provided goods (not services); (2) the debtor must have received the goods within 20 days of the commencement of the case; (3) the goods must have been sold in the ordinary course of the debtor's business." Id. at n.7. The majority determined that the "obvious conclusion" is that any claim falling within the plain language of section 503(b)(9), including a secured claim, is entitled to administrative expense priority. Id. at 878.

The court also dismissed B&C's argument that giving administrative expense priority to a secured creditor would be inequitable to other creditors. The court said:

We can do nothing about B&C's contention that giving priority to a secured creditor may be inequitable to other creditors. First, it is up to Congress to decide which creditors have leverage and which do not. More importantly, if AGI's twenty-day sales claim is fully secured, then payment of it by B&C will free the value of the security for that claim for the benefit of other creditors. If AGI's claim proves to be undersecured or unsecured, then to deny administrative priority would be to ignore the statute, something we cannot do.

375 B.R. at 878.

Judge Jaroslovsky, sitting by designation, dissented from the majority's decision to permit a secured creditor administrative expense priority. First, Judge Jaroslovsky agreed with B&C that Congress's inclusion of the language "whether secured or unsecured" in a neighboring provision indicated its intentional omission of that language from section 503(b)(9). As a result, there was no reason to believe that section 503(b)(9) should be available to secured creditors. Id. at 881.

More cogently, Judge Jaroslovsky explained that the majority's decision implicated "fundamental policy considerations" in chapter 11 cases. Id. Specifically, whereas administrative expense priority claims must be paid in full upon confirmation, secured claims are subject to cramdown pursuant to section 1129(b)(2)(A). Granting a secured creditor administrative expense priority under section 503(b)(9) would effectively grant the secured creditor "veto power over a plan of reorganization when § 1129(b)(2)(A) and sound bankruptcy policy dictate that a secured creditor can be forced to accept a plan which is fair and equitable to it, honors its secured status and pays its secured claim in full over time." 375 B.R. at 881. According to the dissent, the majority opinion reads too restrictively the new Code section by failing to incorporate that section into the greater "statutory scheme" designed to facilitate a debtor's successful reorganization. Id. at 882. As the dissent put it: "I do not see the issue of whether a secured creditor can be entitled to an administrative expense claim being as simple as the plain meaning analysis of the majority." Id.

In response to the concerns expressed in the dissent, the majority conceded that "Congress gave tremendous leverage" to creditors with section 503(b)(9) claims by permitting those claimants to demand full payment as of confirmation. Id. at n.8. But, although this new priority has the potential of "dramatically affecting the outcome" of a chapter 11 reorganization, the majority explained that "[i]t is not our place to reallocate [the] leverage" granted by Congress to section 503(b)(9) claimants. Id. The majority also noted that the dissent's view would have little practical effect, because a secured creditor otherwise entitled to a section 503(b)(9) claim could simply waive its security in order to obtain administrative expense priority and obtain influence over the reorganization process. Id.

Prepetition Claims May Be Setoff Against Section 503(b)(9) Claims. Following its finding that administrative expense priority under section 503(b)(9) was available to secured creditors, the majority determined that B&C could set off its unsecured prepetition contract claim, to the extent it had one, against AGI's section 503(b)(9) claim. The court explained that a "crucial difference" separates section 503(b)(9) from all other subsections of section 503, in that section 503(b)(9) "applies to prepetition debt." 375 B.R. at 879. As a result, the court concluded that claims arising under that section, unlike other administrative expense priority claims, are nevertheless prepetition claims and may be setoff under section 553(a), which provides for the setoff of mutual prepetition debts.

Commentary. The majority's holding that secured creditors are entitled to administrative expense priority under new section 503(b)(9) is likely correct, although perhaps sadly so for many debtors and nonpriority creditors. Although the court's discussion of neighboring section 503(b)(1)(B)(i) was limited to whether the presence of the word "secured" in that provision should give restrictive meaning to its absence in section 503(b)(9), the court may have missed the more obvious, and perhaps more significant aspect of section 503(b)(1)(B)(i): By explicitly amending that section to include secured creditors within the class protected by section 503(b)(1)(B)(i), Congress has opened the administrative expense priority door to secured claims.

Despite the dissent's argument that granting administrative expense priority to some secured creditors alters the balance of power, it is hard to contest the fact that, for better or worse, Congress has deliberately made administrative expense priority available to some secured creditors. The majority's extension of that priority to section 503(b)(9) may have been breaking new ground, but Congress began the sod-busting and signaled its liberality by granting secured creditors administrative expense priority under section 503(b)(1)(B)(i).

The court's unanimous ruling that a prepetition debt may be set off against a section 503(b)(9) administrative claim may actually be the more significant piece of this opinion. As the court noted, administrative expense priority was historically available only to postpetition debt. Congress's recent decision to grant administrative expense priority to prepetition claimants under section 503(b)(9) (as well as under new section 503(b)(1)(A)(ii) relating to back pay) now redefines "administrative expenses" to include some prepetition debts. While this inclusion must ring a sour note for some veteran bankruptcy experts, the court's decision to treat a section 503(b)(9) claim as a prepetition claim for purposes of setoff muffles the sour note somewhat. After all, if section 553 permits setoff on account of a mutual, prepetition debt, and claims under section 503(b)(9) are in fact claims that arose prepetition, why should those claims not be subject to setoff?

Indeed, why shouldn't these new hybrid claims, aside from their payment priority, be treated as prepetition claims for other purposes, such as the applicability of bar date orders?

For further discussion of Bankruptcy Code section 503, see Collier on Bankruptcy, see ch. 503 (Matthew Bender).

To access articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

110 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

In re Bear Stearns High-Grade Structured Credit Strategies Master Fund, Ltd.

2008 Emerging Issues 1527

Glosband on In re Bear Stearns High-Grade Structured Credit Strategies Master Fund, Ltd.

By Daniel Glosband

December 14, 2007

SUMMARY: What country should conduct the bankruptcy of a hedge fund that is registered offshore but that conducts all of its business in the United States? Recent U.S. Bankruptcy cases have answered this question differently. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses Chapter 15s eligibility requirements and the implications of these differing outcomes.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Court Denies Chapter 15 Petition to Recognize Cayman Islands Proceedings of Bear Stearns Hedge Funds

The refusal by a U.S. Bankruptcy Judge to provide assistance to Cayman liquidation proceedings of failed Bear Stearns hedge funds raises the question of what country should conduct the bankruptcy of a hedge fund that is registered offshore but that conducts all of its business in the United States. If funds choose to file bankruptcy in their country of registration, will the United States Bankruptcy Court acquiesce and assist offshore proceeding by staying U.S. litigation and protecting U.S. assets? If the U.S. court demurs, must the funds seek protection in U.S. bankruptcy proceedings?

Recent cases answer the questions differently. The Bear Stearns decision denied the funds' petitions because the Cayman cases did not meet Chapter 15's eligibility requirements; nonetheless, it granted a 30-day stay to permit the filing of U.S. proceedings for the funds. A case involving similarly structured funds, In re SPhinX, arguably misapplied the statute by accepting the eligibility of the Cayman proceedings for U.S. assistance (and then declining to provide any). n1 Ignoring the technical distinctions, it is U.S. 2, Cayman 0.

These rulings do not suggest that Cayman registration is an unsound idea. Cayman commentators say that the "mix of regulatory, tax, speed, efficiency and cost considerations" still support Cayman as a domicile. n2 Instead, the cases reflect a U.S. legislative policy to provide the assistance of its bankruptcy courts only to those foreign bankruptcy proceedings that are premised on a tangible presence of the debtor in the foreign jurisdiction. If the debtor is really a U.S. business with only its technical domicile offshore, then the debtors' bankruptcy should be a U.S. affair.

Adopting this view, Honorable Burton R. Lifland, United States Bankruptcy Judge for the Southern District of New York denied the Chapter 15 petition of two Cayman-registered Bear Stearns hedge funds and found that the Cayman proceedings were not eligible for recognition and relief under Chapter 15 of the United States Bankruptcy Code (Code) (In re Bear Stearns High-Grade Structured Credit Strategies Master Fund, Ltd.).ⁿ³ Chapter 15, Ancillary and Other Cross-Border Cases, was added to the Code in 2005 and implemented the U.S. adaptation of the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency promulgated by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law.ⁿ⁴ Chapter 15 was designed to facilitate cooperation and coordination between U.S. bankruptcy courts and their foreign counterparts, including providing assistance to eligible foreign insolvency proceedings.

Much of Chapter 15 is structured to complement foreign proceedings and to assist foreign representatives of those foreign proceedings that meet specified definitional requirements and that take place in a country where the debtor has either its center of main interests (COMI) or a place of business operations, termed an establishment.ⁿ⁵ Chapter 15 establishes an objective test for recognition of a foreign proceeding and provides two alternative bases on which recognition can be granted: a foreign proceeding in the debtor's COMI will be recognized as a "foreign main proceeding" while a foreign proceeding where the debtor has an establishment will be recognized as a "foreign nonmain proceeding."ⁿ⁶ Relief is broader and more automatic upon recognition of a foreign main proceeding. For example, the U.S. automatic stay applies and the foreign representatives are granted many of the powers of a U.S. bankruptcy trustee. If the debtor has neither its COMI nor an establishment in the country of the foreign proceeding, then U.S. law should not recognize the foreign proceeding; implicitly, says the United States, the bankruptcy should be elsewhere. Judge Lifland endorsed this view of the law, relying in part on the author's previous ABI Journal article criticizing the SPhinx decision (discussed below).

The summer 2007 financial press limned the plunge of the Bear Stearns funds into liquidation. Like a slow motion video of a diving competition, the headlines captured the fall. On June 20, 2007, the funds stepped onto the platform with "Two Big Funds At Bear Stearns Face Shutdown," a bounce followed on June 21 with "Bear Stearns Staves off Collapse of 2 Hedge Funds," the arc down began on June 25 with "Wall Street Fears Bear Stearns Is Tip of an Iceberg" and finally the splash into the pool occurred on August 1 with "Bear Stearns Hedge Funds filed for Bankruptcy."ⁿ⁷ The bankruptcy filing was a two-step, two-country exercise: a winding up proceeding under the Cayman Companies Law in the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands accompanied by a Chapter 15 Petition for Recognition of a Foreign Proceeding.

It is not clear why the Bear Stearns funds chose the Cayman venue. Possible reasons include: (1) the Cayman case would be cheaper without expensive U.S.-style committees; (2) the investigation or litigation involving affiliates would be less likely; and (3) the proceedings would be less transparent and attract less media coverage. Cayman lawyers say that management is not "favoured" to the detriment of creditors and investors and that Cayman courts can handle complex cross-border cases.ⁿ⁸ Regardless of motivation, the Bear Stearns funds filed for liquidation in the Cayman Islands and the Cayman liquidators sought to have the Cayman proceedings recognized as foreign main proceedings or, if denied, as foreign nonmain proceedings. In either case they sought injunctive protection of the funds and their U.S. assets, the right to take discovery and the turnover of U.S. assets to the Cayman liquidators.

The liquidators premised their request for recognition as foreign main proceedings on the funds' Cayman registration and domicile. Chapter 15 contains no definition of center of main interests but contains a presumption that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the debtor's registered office is its COMI. Judge Lifland found abundant evidence to the contrary in the funds' Chapter 15 pleadings: "The Verified Petitions have demonstrated such evidence to the contrary: there are no employees or managers in the Cayman Islands, the investment manager for the Funds is located in New York, the Administrator that runs the back-office operations of the Funds is in the United States along with the Funds' books and records and prior to the commencement of the Foreign Proceeding, all of the Funds' liquid assets were located in United States."ⁿ⁹

The Bear Stearns funds' Chapter 15 petitions asked, in the alternative, for recognition as foreign nonmain proceedings if the Cayman proceedings were not recognized as foreign main proceedings. The same evidence proved that the Bear Stearns funds had no establishment in the Cayman Islands and, consequently, the proceedings were ineligible for recognition as foreign nonmain proceedings. The stimulus for the funds to seek "nonmain" recognition was the SPhinX decision, which has been criticized and which Judge Lifland rejected as incorrect. The SPhinX Funds bought and sold securities in a manner that tracked a hedge fund index. While the SPhinX Funds were established as Cayman Islands entities, their hedge fund business was managed by a Delaware corporation located in New York; trades were executed through Refco Capital Markets, Ltd. in New York; and corporate administration (including net asset value calculation) was conducted by an unrelated entity in New Jersey. Other than gaining tax advantages from their Cayman Islands' domicile, the SPhinX Funds had little to do with the Caymans. There were no employees, no physical offices, no directors or directors meetings, no assets, no securities or commodities trading; only minute books, statutory documents and investor documents necessary to comply with anti-money laundering requirements.

There were two attempts at Chapter 15 recognition made by two sets of Cayman liquidators of SPhinX. Both were for the clear purpose of disrupting a settlement of litigation brought against SPhinX on behalf of Refco to recover allegedly preferential payments made by Refco to Sphinx. The first Cayman liquidation case was dismissed when its provisional liquidators failed to block bankruptcy court approval of the settlement. The second Cayman case and the request for Chapter 15 recognition is the subject of a reported decision by Bankruptcy Judge Robert Drain, also in the Southern District of New York. Judge Drain indicates that, but for the improper purpose of the Chapter 15 filing, he might have recognized the case as a foreign main proceeding because the funds were registered in the Caymans, they had to be wound up somewhere and no one really objected to a Cayman liquidation. However, the Court declined to designate the SPhinX Funds proceedings as foreign main proceedings because they were filed for the improper purpose of obtaining the section 362 automatic stay to block an appeal of the settlement.

En route to this conclusion, the judge decided that he could initially enter an order of recognition without deciding that the proceedings were main or nonmain. This approach ignores the statute and avoids the mandatory eligibility test: does the debtor have its COMI or an establishment in the Cayman Islands? Having "recognized" the Cayman proceedings in the abstract and then declined to consider them foreign main proceedings, the Court defaulted to the position that they are foreign nonmain proceedings. He then declined to grant any relief. Ultimately, the parties were left in the same position as if recognition had been denied due to the ineligibility of the Cayman proceedings. However, the proper interpretation and application of the statute were compromised. The Bankruptcy Court's decision has been affirmed on appeal but on a record where no party presented the eligibility issue to the appellate court. n10

Judge Lifland acknowledged his disagreement with the SPhinX decisions: "I recognize that portions of this holding are at odds with the decisions in SPhinX, both the bankruptcy court's decision and the district court's affirmance. However, neither of those courts addressed the establishment' requirement." n11 In his conclusion, Judge Lifland included an invitation to the parties to commence "full" U.S. proceedings under Chapter 7 or Chapter 11 and left a protective injunction in place for 30 days to permit such a filing. n12

The parties appealed and sought a stay of the injunction predicated on preventing the appeal from being rendered moot and presenting allegedly new facts regarding the funds' activities in the Caymans. Judge Lifland noted that mootness "goes both ways" and expressed displeasure that the funds had directed over $8 million in payments to the Caymans after the Chapter 15 filing and the grant of an injunction that protected those payments from attack by parties in the United States. He referred to the "injunction imbalance" created by removal of monies from the U.S. during the initial injunctive period and also rejected the merits of the "new facts." The stay was granted, however, on the grounds that matters of first impression were involved in the case and on condition that the removed payments be returned and no further monies be removed from the U.S. in order to ensure that there was "evenhanded concern with respect to the injunction."

The next chapter of this serial thriller may emerge from the recently filed and now pending chapter 15 petition of the Basis Yield Alpha Fund. n13 The Basis Yield Chapter 15 petition states that the funds' administration is conducted in the Caymans but that it has over $50 million in the United States. It may be that Basis Yield actually has its COMI or an establishment in the Caymans but the record is currently incomplete. Stay tuned.

For further discussion on Orders Granting Recognition, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1517 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 . In re SPhinX, LTD., 351 B.R. 103 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006), affirmed Krys v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Refco Inc. (In re SPhinX, Ltd.), 371 B.R. 10 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

n2

[2]. Tim Ridley, Chairman of Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, as quoted in "US Ruling Could Impact Hedge Funds" by James Dimond, <http://www.cayCompass.com>, 9/5/07.

n3

[3]. In re Bear Stearns High-Grade Structured Credit Strategies Master Fund, Ltd., 374 B.R. 122 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007).

n4

[4]. The draftsmen of the Model Law and Chapter 15 included Dan Glosband, the author of this article, Professor Jay Westbrook of the University of Texas Law School, Judge Lifland and a consulting group of insolvency professionals, representatives of governmental entities and academics.

n5

[5]. The definition of "foreign proceeding" is in 11 U.S.C. § 101(23), the general definition section of the Bankruptcy Code: " foreign proceeding' means a collective judicial or administrative proceeding in a foreign country, including an interim proceeding, under a law relating to insolvency or adjustment of debt in which proceeding the assets and affairs of the debtor are subject to control or supervision by a foreign court, for the purpose of reorganization or liquidation" The foreign representative must also be a person or body that meets the definitional requirements of 11 U.S.C. § 101(24): "a person or body, including a person or body appointed on an interim basis, authorized in a foreign proceeding to administer the reorganization or the liquidation of the debtor's assets or affairs or to act as a representative of such foreign proceeding" See Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide, ch. 19 (Matthew Bender).

n6

[6]. 11 U.S.C. § 1502. Definitions:

(4) foreign main proceeding' means a foreign proceeding pending in the country where the debtor has the center of its main interests;

(5) foreign nonmain proceeding' means a foreign proceeding, other than a foreign main proceeding, pending in a country where the debtor has an establishment

See Collier on Bankruptcy, P 1502.LH (Matthew Bender).

n7

[7]. Headlines, respectively: 6/20/07 Wall Street Journal; 6/21/07 New York Times; 6/25/07 Wall Street Journal; 8/1/07 Associated Press.

n8

[8]. Ben Mays, Maples & Calder, and Tom Ridley quoted in Dimond article, supra.

n9

[9]. 374 B.R. at 130.

n10 . Krys v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Refco Inc. (In re SPhinX, Ltd.), 371 B.R. 10 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

n11

[11]. 374 B.R. at 131.

n12

[12]. 374 B.R. 133.

n13

[13]. In re Basis Yield Alpha Fund, Case # 07-12762 (Bankruptcy S.D.N.Y. 2007).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Daniel Glosband is a partner in Goodwin Procter LLP's Financial Restructuring Practice, www.goodwinprocter.com. He recently represented the lead investors in the confirmed Chapter 11 plan of US Airways and its merger with America West and the fiduciaries for the employee stock plan in the Delta case.

Mr. Glosband is a Vice President of the American College of Bankruptcy and a conferee of the National Bankruptcy Conference, which advises Congress on bankruptcy legislation. He was a draftsman of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and one of two primary draftsmen of Chapter 15 of the United States Bankruptcy Code, Ancillary and Other Cross-Border Cases. He is a contributing author to Collier on Bankruptcy 15th Ed. Revised, Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide and Collier International Business Insolvency Guide.

He is admitted to practice in New York, Massachusetts, the U.S. District Courts in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont and the Southern District of New York, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and the U.S. Supreme Court. He received a J.D. from Cornell University in 1969 and a B.A. from University of Massachusetts in 1966.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

111 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Duties of a Chapter 7 Trustee Added by BAPCPA

2008 Emerging Issues 1479

Collier on the Duties of a Chapter 7 Trustee Added by BAPCPA

By Collier

December 13, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses when the notice is required and the apparent distinction under subsection 704(a)(10) in the situation when the debtor is the obligor on such an obligation, and the converse situation when the debtor is the obligee.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Added by BAPCPA

Trustee's Duty to Give Notices Regarding Domestic Support Obligations;

§ 704(a)(10)

Bankruptcy Code section 704(a)(10), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n1 requires the trustee to provide certain notices in cases in which there is a claim with respect to the debtor for a domestic support obligation. n2 Although the language of this provision is not entirely clear, it appears from section 704(c) and the legislative history that the requirement only applies when the debtor is the obligor on such an obligation, and not when the debtor is the obligee. Section 524(c) speaks of the holder of a claim and the legislative history speaks of a domestic support claimant, n3 both of which suggest application to a person who has a claim against the debtor. Virtually identical provisions were also added in 2005 to chapters 11, 12 and 13. n4

The obvious purpose of these provisions is to enhance the ability of child support claimants and state child support enforcement agencies to assert their claims in the bankruptcy process and after bankruptcy, in order to compete with the enhanced rights of other creditors under the 2005 amendments.

Notice of Child Support Enforcement Agency Services and Bankruptcy Rights; § 704(c)(1)(A). The trustee is required by section 704(c)(1)(A) to provide to the holder of a domestic support obligation claim written notice that the claimant is entitled to use the services of the state child support enforcement agency established under sections 464 and 466 of the Social Security Act to obtain assistance in collecting support in bankruptcy and afterwards. n5 Such agencies exist in every state, as part of the federal government's effort to facilitate the collection of child support. However, because the definition of domestic support obligation goes beyond child support, n6 such agencies could not assist in the collection of every domestic support obligation. The notice is to include the address and telephone number of the child support enforcement agency.

The notice provided to the domestic support claimant must also include an explanation of the rights of the holder of the claim to payment in chapter 7. n7 Presumably, this would include instructions concerning how to file a timely proof of claim if proofs of claim are to be filed in the case. In the vast majority of chapter 7 cases, no proofs of claim are filed because there are no nonexempt assets to distribute. Although not within the statutory language, which is limited to information about payment of the claim under chapter 7, the notice may also include information about the automatic stay and dischargeability.

Presumably, a form of notice will be drafted by the United States trustee program, which supervises trustees.

Notice to State Child Support Agency; § 704(c)(1)(B). The trustee must also provide written notice to the state child support enforcement agency of the existence of the claim against the debtor, and include in the notice the name, address and telephone number of the holder of the claim. n8 The statute does not say how the trustee is to obtain the telephone number of the claim holder, which is not listed in any papers filed in the case. Although the schedules could perhaps be changed to include this information, many holders of domestic support obligations would probably not appreciate their phone numbers being made available in public records. The trustee could also inquire about the telephone number at the meeting of creditors, although the debtor may not know the number. Presumably, this information is to be sent in case the child support agency wants to become involved in the case, perhaps because the claim has been assigned to it or because it has assisted the claimant in the past.

Notice at Time of Discharge; § 704(c)(1)(C). The trustee is required to send another notice at the time the debtor is granted a discharge. This notice is to be sent to the domestic support obligee and to the state child support enforcement agency. n9 This notice is to inform its recipients of the granting of the discharge, the last known address of the debtor, the last known address of the debtor's employer, and the name of each creditor that holds a claim that is not discharged under section 523(a)(2), (4) or (14A) or that was reaffirmed. n10 Again, the purpose of this notice is presumably to facilitate child support collection, especially in cases in which there exist nondischarged or reaffirmed debts held by creditors that will be competing with the support claimant for the debtor's limited assets and income.

Request for Address of Debtor; § 704(c)(2). Section 704(c)(2)(A), also added in 2005, n11 permits the holder of a domestic support obligation claim or a state child support obligation agency to request the debtor's last known address from a creditor holding a claim that is not discharged under section 523(a)(2), (4) or (14A) or that was reaffirmed. This provision was likely added in recognition that large national creditors often have more sophisticated collection facilities that may give them an advantage in competing with child support creditors. However, to give the provision some meaning, courts may read into it an implication that the creditor must respond to the request.

In the unlikely event that the creditor does respond to the request, the creditor is protected from liability for disclosing the debtor's address, notwithstanding any other provision of law, by section 704(c)(2)(B). Such liability could otherwise be substantial, at least in occasional cases. It is possible for example that a child support creditor may have been the abuser in a domestic violence case, and that the debtor may have been a victim who had fled from the abuser. Although the debtor might have been able to protect her identifying information under section 107(c), n12 the debtor may not have known to seek such protection. The possibility of becoming involved in such situations is likely to discourage creditors from responding to requests for address information.

Duties to Perform Obligations of Employee Benefit Plan; § 704(a)(11)

Section 704(a)(11), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n13 requires the chapter 7 trustee to perform the obligations required of the administrator of an employee benefit plan if the debtor, or an entity designated by the debtor, served as administrator at the time the case was commenced. The provision incorporates the definition of administrator in section 3 of the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). n14

The enactment of section 704(a)(11) was accompanied by a companion amendment to section 1106 providing that if the debtor was serving as a plan administrator at the time the case was commenced, the chapter 11 trustee must continue to perform those obligations. n15 There was no similar amendment with respect to chapter 12 or chapter 13.

These amendments largely resolve confusion in the case law regarding responsibility for plan administration after a bankruptcy case is filed. The court in In re New Center Hospital n16 had held, consistent with the new provisions, that a chapter 11 trustee assumes the duties of a plan administrator. However, an earlier decision, Chambers v. Kaleidoscope, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan & Trust, n17 had held that in a chapter 11 case, even though a trustee had been appointed, the prebankruptcy administrator continued to have fiduciary duties as an administrator because he had not resigned pursuant to ERISA.

Transfer of Patients of a Closing Health Care Business; § 704(a)(12)

Under section 704(a)(12), enacted by the 2005 Code amendments, n18 a chapter 7 trustee has the obligation to use all reasonable efforts to transfer patients n19 from a closing health care business n20 to another appropriate health care business. The new health care business should be in the vicinity of the health care business that is closing, provide substantially similar services, and maintain a reasonable quality of care.

Section 704(a)(12) was part of a package of amendments clarifying that patients of failing health care providers must be protected. n21 These include provisions specifying requirements for the disposal of patient records so that a patient's privacy and the confidentiality of such records are protected. n22 In addition, the amendments added a provision granting administrative expense priority to the actual, necessary costs and expenses of closing a health care business, including the disposal of patient records or transfer of patients, incurred by a trustee, federal agency, or a department or state agency. n23 If warranted, the court is required to order the appointment of an ombudsman to monitor the quality of patient care and to represent the interests of the patients. n24

Duties of United States Trustee in Relation to Section 707(b)(2)

Although section 704, prior to 2005, had been concerned with duties of chapter 7 trustees, the 2005 amendments added a new subsection (b) that sets forth duties of the United States trustee, or Bankruptcy Administrator, if any, n25 in cases of all individual debtors. n26 These duties pertain to the determination of whether a chapter 7 case is an abuse as defined by section 707(b) and, in particular, the presumption of abuse under section 707(b)(2). n27

Statement of Whether Presumption of Abuse Exists; § 704(b)(1). The first duty is to review the materials filed by each individual debtor and, not later than 10 days after the date of the meeting of creditors, file with the court a statement as to whether the case is presumed to be an abuse under section 707(b). n28 The materials to be reviewed would include the schedules and statements filed by the debtor, which would include calculations of current monthly income and, if the debtor's income is over the applicable state median income, calculations regarding the means test presumption of abuse. n29 The materials would also include evidence of payment from employers filed by the debtor and a tax return or tax transcript provided by the debtor to the trustee. n30 Because this duty is given to the United States trustee, it is unclear whether the chapter 7 trustee has any duty to review these documents or whether the United States trustee may or will delegate some of these duties to the chapter 7 trustee.

The statement must be filed by the United States trustee in every case, although the presumption of abuse can only arise in a case in which the debtor's current monthly income is above the state median income threshold in section 707(b)(7). n31 In cases in which the debtor is protected from the presumption of abuse by section 707(b)(7), the United States trustee should file a statement that no presumption of abuse arises.

The statement must be filed within 10 days after the date of the first meeting of creditors. The first meeting of creditors is a term sometimes used in the past to refer to the section 341(a) meeting of creditors. The language is somewhat unclear, but logically it makes sense to read this deadline as running from the conclusion of the meeting of creditors, rather than the first date set for the meeting of creditors, which is specifically referenced in some other Code provisions enacted at the same time. n32 Otherwise, if the debtor is unable to attend the meeting on the first date set, or provide all necessary documents, the United States trustee might not have all of the materials necessary to make an accurate determination.

The court is to provide a copy of the statement filed by the United States trustee to all creditors within five days after it is filed. n33 Presumably, this is to give creditors an opportunity to file their own motions to dismiss under section 707(b)(2), if they are eligible to do so. n34 However, it is likely that most creditors will wait to see if the United States trustee files a motion, thereby saving them the expense.

Duty to File Motion to Dismiss or Statement Why Motion Not Appropriate;

§ 707(b)(2). Within 30 days of filing the statement required by section 704(b)(1), n35 the United States trustee must take one of two actions if the presumption of abuse under section 707(b)(2) exists in the case. n36 The United States trustee must either file a motion to dismiss or convert the case under section 707(b) or file a statement of the reasons why the United States trustee does not consider such a motion appropriate. Such reasons may include, for example, that the United States trustee believes the debtor has demonstrated special circumstances that would rebut the presumption. Alternatively, the amount by which the debtor's income exceeds the presumption amount may be de minimus or the debtor's circumstances may demonstrate a compelling need for relief despite the presumption.

The requirement to file a motion or notice only arises if the debtor's current monthly income n37 exceeds the highest state median family income n38 for a family of the same number or fewer individuals or, in the case of a debtor in a one person household, the state median family income for one earner. However, since the presumption of abuse can only arise with respect to a debtor whose current monthly income exceeds the median income thresholds in section 707(b)(7), this language is unnecessary. To the extent the median income language differs from section 707(b)(7) in not including a $525 per month increment for each member of a family in excess of four members, therefore, the difference is of no consequence.

For a complete discussion of Code section 704, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 704 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2 2. Domestic support obligation is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 211(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n3 3. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess., 62 (2005).

n4 4. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1106(a)(8), (c), 1202(b)(6), (c), 1302(b)(6), (d), all added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1106, ch. 1202 and ch. 1302 (Matthew Bender).

n5 11 U.S.C. § 704(c)(1)(A)(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n7 11 U.S.C. § 704(c)(1)(A)(iii), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8 11 U.S.C. § 704(c)(1)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9 11 U.S.C. § 704(c)(1)(C), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10 11 U.S.C. § 704(c)(1)(C)(i)-(iv), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 219(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12 11 U.S.C. § 107(c), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 234(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 107.04 (Matthew Bender).

n13 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 446(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16) defines administrator.

n15 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(11), 1106(a)(1), as added or amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16 200 B.R. 592 (E.D. Mich. 1996).

n17 650 F. Supp. 359 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

n18 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1105(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n19 Patient is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1101(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n20 Health care business is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1101(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n21 See H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong. 1st Sess., 21 (2005).

n22 11 U.S.C. § 351, enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n23 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(8), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1103 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 503 (Matthew Bender).

n24 11 U.S.C. § 333, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1104(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n25 The Bankruptcy Administrator performs most of the duties of a United States trustee in cases filed in Alabama and North Carolina, where the United States trustee program is not operational. References to the United States trustee in this chapter shall be deemed to include the Bankruptcy Administrators in those states.

n26 11 U.S.C. § 704(b), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n27 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n28 11 U.S.C. § 704(b)(1)(A), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n29 11 U.S.C. §§ 521(a)(1), 707(b)(2)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n30 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1)(iv), (e)(2)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n31 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(7), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, prohibits the use of the presumption of abuse if the debtor's current monthly income is below a certain income threshold; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n32 E.g., 11 U.S.C. § 521(e)(2)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n33 11 U.S.C. § 704(b)(1)(B), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n34 Under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(7), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, creditors may only file a motion to dismiss if the debtor's current monthly income is above a certain income threshold; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n35 See Statement of Whether Presumption of Abuse Exists; § 704(b)(1) supra.

n36 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2), creating a presumption of abuse for certain chapter 7 cases, was added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n37 Current monthly income is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n38 Median family income is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(k) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier On Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

112 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Disclosure Statements in Small Business Cases

2008 Emerging Issues 1480

Collier on Disclosure Statements in Small Business Cases

By Collier

December 13, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the definition of a small business case in section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code and the application of section 1125(f), including the conditional approval of a disclosure statement.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1125(f)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code, as amended in 2005, n1 provides that if the case is a small business case, as that term is defined in section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, n2 the court may determine that the plan itself provides adequate information and that a separate disclosure statement is not necessary. In addition, section 1125(f)(2), also added in 2005, provides that the court may approve a disclosure statement submitted on standard forms approved by the court or adopted under section 2075 of title 28, which is the Rules Enabling Act. n3

Finally, under section 1125(f)(3), the court, subject to final approval after notice and a hearing, may conditionally approve a disclosure statement as the basis for solicitation of votes on a plan. Provided that the conditionally approved disclosure statement is mailed not later than 25 days before the date of the hearing on confirmation of the plan, the court may conduct a combined hearing for final approval of the disclosure statement and confirmation of the plan.

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n4 added subsection (f) to section 1125 to provide special treatment for a small business debtor seeking reorganization under chapter 11. To qualify for the special treatment, which was intended to make the process less expensive and more expeditious, the debtor must have been within the definition of small business debtor and must have elected to be considered a small business debtor. As amended in 2005, however, section 1121(e), n5 dealing with who may file a plan, no longer requires such election by a small business debtor, and subsection (f) of section 1125, also amended in 2005, n6 no longer refers to such election.

Small Business Case Defined

Section 101 of the Code contains a definition of small business case as a case filed under chapter 11 of this title in which the debtor is a small business debtor. n7 And small business debtor is defined in section 101 as:

(A) subject to subparagraph (B), a person engaged in commercial or business activities (including any affiliate of such person that is also a debtor under this title and excluding a person whose primary activity is the business of owning or operating real property or activities incidental thereto) that has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts as of the date of the petition or the date of the order for relief in an amount not more than $2,190,000ⁿ⁸ (excluding debts owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders) for a case in which the United States trustee has not appointed under section 1102(a)(1) a committee of unsecured creditors or where the court has determined that the committee of unsecured creditors is not sufficiently active and representative to provide effective oversight of the debtor; and

(B) [not including] any member of a group of affiliated debtors that has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts in an amount greater than $2,190,000ⁿ⁹ (excluding debt owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders).ⁿ¹⁰

Conditional Approval of Disclosure Statement Permitted

If eligibility exists, section 1125(f) permits the court to conditionally approve a disclosure statement, but the conditional approval is subject to a final approval after notice and hearing. Presumably, section 1125(f) means that the conditional approval does not require notice and a hearing.

Section 1125(f)(1), as revised by the 2005 Act, ⁿ¹¹ allows the court to determine that the plan itself provides adequate information and that a separate disclosure statement is not necessary. Subsection 1125(f)(2) states that the court may approve a disclosure statement on standard forms which it approves or on forms adopted by the Supreme Court. Both these subsections--suggesting that in small business cases the court may approve a plan as a disclosure statement and that standard forms may be used for disclosure statements--indicate a congressional attempt to streamline the small business chapter 11 procedures. ⁿ¹²

Vote Solicitation upon Conditional Approval

On conditional approval, acceptances and rejections may be solicited. But the debtor is required to provide adequate information to those solicited, and the conditionally approved statement is to be mailed no later than 25 days before the date of the hearing on confirmation which may be combined with the hearing on the disclosure statement.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1125, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1125 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 431(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Section 1125(f) was added to the Bankruptcy Code by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

ⁿ²

2. 101 U.S.C. § 101(51C), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 432(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n3

3. The language of section 1125(f)(2), by referring to section 2075 of title 28, appears to require that the Supreme Court promulgate the disclosure statement form. However, Rule 9009 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court under the Rules Enabling Act, delegates the promulgation of Official Forms to the Judicial Conference of the United States. This raises the question whether section 1125(f)(2) would be satisfied if the disclosure statement form is adopted by the Judicial Conference, but not the Supreme Court. This question appears to have been answered, however, by section 433 of the 2005 Act, which directs that within a reasonable time after the Act's effective date the Judicial Conference of the United States shall prescribe official standard form disclosure statements and plans of reorganization for small business debtors, balancing the needs of the court with economy and simplicity for debtors. Therefore, the better view is that that a disclosure statement form approved by the Judicial Conference will satisfy the requirement under section 1125(f)(2) that the form be adopted under section 2075 of title 28.

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

n5

5. Pub L. No. 109-8, § 437 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. Pub L. No. 109-8, § 431(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 101(51C), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 432(a) (2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.51C (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. This dollar amount is subject to adjustment every three years. See 11 U.S.C. § 104(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was

$2,000,000.

n9

9. See note 8 supra.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 101(51D), as added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 432(a) (2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.51D (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. Pub L. No. 109-8, § 431(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12

12. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3017.1 is intended to implement 11 U.S.C. § 1125(f).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

113 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Determining Reasonable Compensation under § 330

2008 Emerging Issues 1481

Collier on Determining Reasonable Compensation under § 330

By Collier

December 13, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the relevant factors to be considered by the bankruptcy court in making a determination as to the reasonableness of such fees, the application of the lodestar analysis to the determination of professional fee awards by bankruptcy courts, and the calculation of compensation for financial advisors and investment bankers.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: A determination by the bankruptcy court that an applicants fees are compensable under Bankruptcy Code section 330 does not constitute a finding as to the necessity or reasonableness of the fees. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has explained that a finding of compensability merely means the services performed were properly charged as legal services, as opposed to administrative or otherwise nonlegal services. n1

Once services are determined to be compensable, the applicant must demonstrate that his work was necessary and reasonable. In Unsecured Creditors Committee v. Puget Sound Plywood, Inc., the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that an attorney has a duty to consider whether the burden of the probable cost of legal services is disproportionately large in relation to the size of the estate and the maximum probable recovery. n2 In In re Cascade Oil Co., n3 the court held that the section 330 of the Bankruptcy Code determination of reasonable compensation involves three stages of inquiry: (1) whether the billed services are compensable; (2) whether the services were actual and necessary; and (3) whether the billed amounts are reasonable considering the nature, extent and value of the services provided.

Compensation authorized pursuant to section 330 is to be reasonable given the nature, the extent and the value of the services rendered. Among the relevant factors to be considered by the court in making a reasonableness determination are:

- . time spent on the services;
- . rates charged for the services;

- . necessity of the services to the administration of the case;
- . benefit of services toward the completion of the case at the time rendered;
- . amount of time spent compared with the complexity of the case;
- . importance and nature of the issues addressed; and
- . reasonableness of compensation based on the customary compensation charged by comparably skilled practitioners in nonbankruptcy cases.

Section 330(a)(3) and (4), compensation may not be awarded for unnecessarily duplicative services, services that were not reasonably likely to benefit the estate or services that were not necessary to the administration of the case.

The only significant departure from prior law under the Bankruptcy Act with respect to the factors involved in determining a reasonable compensation under section 330 is the abandonment of the strict principle of economy of the estate that dictated that professionals were not entitled to compensation at nonbankruptcy rates. n4 In other respects, the criteria are the same and prior case law remains relevant.

It has been recognized that the bankruptcy court need not review the reasonableness of compensation in every case before it, as such a requirement would be an inefficient use of both attorneys and courts time. At least courts in the Seventh Circuit have held that for routine chapter 7 and chapter 13 bankruptcy cases in which the fees do not exceed a certain amount, the court may deem such fees to be reasonable without further review. n5

The Johnson Factors

The leading cases with regard to the factors to be considered in determining a reasonable allowance of compensation are Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., a nonbankruptcy case, n6 and In re First Colonial Corp. of America, a bankruptcy case that adopted the analysis of the Johnson court. n7 The Johnson court listed twelve factors to be considered in determining and awarding reasonable attorneys fees in a Title VII class action. n8 The Johnson interpretation of this reasonableness standard has been relied upon, with certain modifications, by courts determining the reasonableness of compensation under both the Bankruptcy Act and under the Bankruptcy Code. Many courts continue to follow Johnson. n9 A majority of the Johnson criteria are now codified in section 330(a)(3). The Johnson court considered the following twelve factors to be relevant to a determination of the reasonableness of attorneys fees:

1. the time and labor required;
2. the novelty and difficulty of the questions presented by the case;
3. the skill requisite to perform the legal services properly;
4. the preclusion of other employment by the attorney due to acceptance of the case;
5. the customary fee for similar work in the community;
6. whether the fees are fixed or contingent;
7. time pressures imposed by the client or the circumstances;
8. the amount involved and the results obtained as a result of the attorneys services;
9. the experience , reputation and ability of the attorneys;

10. the desirability of the case;
11. the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client; and
12. awards in similar cases.

The Johnson court noted that it was the applicants burden to demonstrate his entitlement to an award for attorneys fees under the above criteria.

Spirit of Economy Factors. The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit applied these factors to a bankruptcy case in In re First Colonial Corp. of America.ⁿ¹⁰ The court explained that, although Johnson involved an award of attorneys fees under Title VII, the twelve Johnson factors were applicable in bankruptcy cases because the guidelines we established there are equally useful whenever the award of reasonable attorneys fees is authorized by statute.ⁿ¹¹ The First Colonial court added the spirit of economy as a key factor to be considered in determining the reasonableness of fees under the Bankruptcy Act. The court explained that the spirit of economy requires that fee awards in bankruptcy cases be at the lower end of reasonableness in view of the fact that attorneys assisting in the administration of a debtors estate are acting as officers of the court and should not be compensated as generously as they might be if privately employed.

Economy Factor Abandoned under the Code. The economy factor was abandoned under the Bankruptcy Code in favor of the new policy that attorneys engaged in bankruptcy cases should receive compensation in parity with that received by attorneys performing services in comparable situations. The legislative history of section 330 reflects this significant shift in policy, observing that notions of economy of the estate in fixing fees are outdated and no longer have a place under bankruptcy law.ⁿ¹² The original Johnson factors, as embraced by First Colonial, remain applicable to the determination of the reasonableness of fees awarded under the Code.

The Lodestar Analysis. In determining the award of reasonable compensation under section 330, courts also have applied a lodestar analysis. Calculating the lodestar rate involves a two-step process, in which courts determine the reasonable number of hours expended and then multiply that number by the appropriate hourly billing rate. The resulting figure is the allowable amount of compensation. In calculating the appropriate number of hours, courts generally do not permit minimum incremental billing time.ⁿ¹³ Once the appropriate lodestar amount is established, the next step is a determination as to whether an enhancement or reduction of the fee is warranted. The lodestar analysis merely is the starting point from which a fee determination is made.ⁿ¹⁴

In making professional fee awards, bankruptcy courts should either expressly apply the lodestar method or expressly determine that the lodestar method is inappropriate under the circumstances.ⁿ¹⁵ Examples of such inappropriate circumstances may include routine chapter 13 cases, which are more susceptible to a flat, fixed rate approach, based on all relevant factors.ⁿ¹⁶

Appropriate Hourly Billing Rate. The lodestar analysis is essentially a formula. One significant variable in that formula is the appropriate hourly billing rate to be applied by the court. This issue is highlighted by large and complex bankruptcy cases involving professionals from various parts of the country with differing billing rates. In these national cases, courts must decide which rate should be used in determining the prevailing market rate.

National or Local Standards. Some courts have held that the community in which the applicant normally practices, rather than the community local to the court, should be used as the model to determine the prevailing market rate.ⁿ¹⁷ At least one court has recognized that limiting rates to those customarily charged locally would be contradictory to the bankruptcy policy of attracting experienced professionals to bankruptcy cases, regardless of where the case is pending.

n18 Other courts have reached a different conclusion, determining that the local rate in the forum should govern. This is particularly true when there is no evidence that qualified professionals based in the local forum were not available to render services in the particular case. n19

Market Driven Approach. Another interpretation has been advanced by the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which has held that section 330 presents a market-driven approach for determining reasonable compensation, when the cost of comparable services is the most important of the various factors applied by a court. In In re Busy Beaver Building Centers, Inc., n20 the court disapproved of an approach that allows a court confronted with undisputed, credible, contrary evidence of market prices in the record to rely solely on its own judgment. The Busy Beaver court explained that reliance on an applicable market rate is tempered by the bankruptcy courts review of the fee application, which it analogized to a sophisticated nonbankruptcy client reviewing the bill of a professional. n21

At least one court has concluded that there is a strong presumption that the lodestar product is reasonable compensation. n22 In addition, in In re Boddy, n23 the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit required the use of the lodestar calculation to determine attorneys fees in bankruptcy cases. The bankruptcy court in Boddy had relied on an earlier opinion that established a maximum attorneys fee of $650 for legal services considered to be normal and customary for a chapter 13 case in the Western District of Kentucky. n24 According to the bankruptcy court, the normal and customary legal services in a chapter 13 case included:

- . drafting and filing the debtors petition, schedules and plan;
- . attending the section 341 meeting of creditors and confirmation hearing;
- . drafting and filing notice and orders for the allowance and barring of claims; and
- . performing other services in furtherance of concluding the administration of the case.

The Sixth Circuit rejected the bankruptcy courts reliance on the established maximum fees as arbitrary and contrary to section 330. The Sixth Circuit held that by awarding a predetermined amount, the bankruptcy court erred in not applying the lodestar.

Some courts have concluded that the lodestar method accurately calculates the correct reasonable compensation without regard to the Johnson factors. n25 In In re East Peoria Hotel Corp., n26 however, the court held that it need not choose between the lodestar approach or the Johnson factors, as the end results would be the same. n27 To the extent that the Johnson factors have been incorporated into section 330 by the 1994 Bankruptcy Reform Act, bankruptcy courts are required to consider such factors in making a determination of reasonable compensation.

Compensation of Financial Advisors. A number of courts have noted the difficulty in assessing the reasonable compensation for financial advisors and investment bankers due to the manner in which they ordinarily bill their time in nonbankruptcy matters. For example, the court in In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., n28 stated that this difficulty is because:

- . the retention applications of investment bankers and financial advisors are shortened versions of presentations made to debtors and committees;
- . fee applications generally do not contain the detail usually found in the applications of attorneys and accountants; and
- . the scope of their services are not familiar to bankruptcy judges.

In addition, the court found that requests for compensation by investment bankers and financial advisors often are difficult to determine because they generally do not bill by the hour and there is a reluctance to maintain time records even in half-hour increments. The bankruptcy court in Drexel Burnham disapproved of the rate structure of the investment bankers and financial advisors retained in chapter 11 cases, stating that a trend has developed with respect to fees charged by such professionals, which the court deemed oligopolistic behavior at best and incestuous fee-setting practices at worst. n29 Based on information furnished regarding the compensation arrangements made by these professionals in other chapter 11 cases, the court found that the vast majority not only seek sizeable monthly retainers regardless of the size of the case, the party represented, or the complexity of the case, but also occasionally ask for indemnification. As a result, the court implemented the following requirements for applications to retain investment bankers and financial advisors:

- . a presentation of the scope and complexity of the assignment, its anticipated duration, expected results, required resources, the extent to which highly specialized skills may be needed and the extent to which such professional has them or may be able to obtain them;

- . the actual retention agreement between the investment banker/financial advisor and the client must be attached to the retention application;

- . the party retaining the professional must describe the process by which the investment banker/financial advisor has been selected; and

- . the application must explain how the investment banker/financial advisor will eliminate, or at least reduce, the duplication or effort among armies of professionals. The Drexel court reasoned that it would be able to measure the results achieved (or lack thereof) only with an advance picture of the job to be accomplished. n30

A number of courts have dealt with issues that arise with respect to the manner in which financial advisors charge for fees and expenses under section 330. For example, in In re Commercial Financial Services, Inc., n31 an official creditors committee consisting of holders of asset-backed securities retained a financial advisor. The financial advisor was retained on terms that provided for a fixed monthly fee. The order authorizing its employment also required the firm to maintain time records. At the conclusion of the case, the firm filed its request for an award of fees and expenses, requesting the monthly fee multiplied by the number of months it had been retained. There was an objection, and the court held that the hourly rates derived from dividing the monthly fee by the numbers of hours spent on specific tasks was unreasonably high, and reduced the award by approximately 50 percent. The court compared the implied hourly rates for the financial advisor to the hourly rates charged by other financial advisors in the case who billed by the hour, and reduced the fees to a level where the hourly rate would be comparable. The financial advisor appealed, arguing that its fees were reasonable because charging a fixed fee per month is common marketplace practice. The court held that the monthly rate did not avoid the requirement that the fee be reasonable. Accordingly, the court held that the bankruptcy court was correct in assessing the reasonableness of the fee by reference to the actual number of hours worked.

In contrast, in Miller Buckfire & Co. LLC v. Citation Corp., n32 the debtor retained a financial advisor on terms that provided for a monthly fee and a restructuring fee. A restructuring took place, and the firm filed its application for fees based on the restructuring fee. The bankruptcy court denied the request and instead applied an hours-based analysis to the allowance of the fee. On appeal, the district court reversed the disallowance, holding that, in assessing the reasonableness of the fees by reference to the hours worked, the bankruptcy court impermissibly rewrote the contract.

Compensation for Litigation of Retention and Compensation Orders. The responsibility for assuring the reasonableness of compensation to those rendering services in connection with bankruptcy cases belongs to the court and to the United States trustee. Section 330(a)(2) expressly provides that the court may, on its own motion or that of a party in interest, award compensation that is less than the amount of compensation that is requested by the professional.

The findings of the court as to the amount of compensation will normally not be disturbed unless they are clearly erroneous, reflect a mistake of law, or result in some injustice or gross inequity. n33

Denial of Compensation for Defending Fee Awards. Professionals may be denied compensation for time spent appealing decisions related to their retention or compensation. For example, in Grant v. George Schumann Tire & Battery Co., n34 the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit denied the request of the trustees attorney for compensation incurred in defending against the debtors appeal of the attorneys fee award. The George Schumann court declined to read section 330 as implying a prevailing party test that would require an award of compensation when the applicant has been successful in his or her appeal. Rather, the court applied the reasonable and necessary language of section 330 to the facts before it. As the sole issue in the appeal for which compensation was sought was attorneys fees, the court found that there was absolutely no benefit to the estate, the creditors, or the debtor and denied the request for compensation. Similarly, in In re Watervliet Paper Co., n35 the court held that the debtors attorneys were not entitled to compensation for their time spent pursuing an appeal of an order of the bankruptcy court that had conditioned the attorneys retention upon a waiver of their prepetition claim against the debtor. In denying compensation for 93 hours incurred in furtherance of the appeal, the court stated that such time did not benefit the estate, but rather, only benefited the law firm. n36

Compensation for Appeal of Fee Award. Other courts, however, have allowed compensation when the appeal of an order denying compensation or retention has been successful. For example, in Nunley v. Jessee, n37 the district court explicitly found that the language of section 330 does not preclude awards of compensation for litigation over fee awards on appeal. The court recognized the rule in other types of civil cases in which attorneys fees are statutorily allowed that litigants who prevail on fee awards initially are entitled to additional fees required to defend such awards. n38 Concluding that there is no reason to treat bankruptcy cases differently from cases arising in other contexts, the district court allowed compensation for fees incurred by debtors attorney in defending a fee award. n39

Similarly, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has held that failure to grant fees for successfully defending challenges to an authorized fee application would dilute fee awards, in violation of section 330(a), and this would reduce the effective compensation of bankruptcy attorneys to levels below the compensation available to attorneys generally. n40

For a complete discussion of Code Section 330, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 330 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, go to the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Unsecured Creditors Comm. v. Puget Sound Plywood, Inc., 924 F.2d 955, 24 C.B.C.2d 1147 (9th Cir. 1991).

n2

2. 924 F.2d 955, 961, 24 C.B.C.2d 1147, 1154 (Absent unusual circumstances, an attorney must scale his or her fee at least to the reasonably expected recovery.). Accord In re Riverside-Linden Inv. Co., 925 F.2d 320, 322, 24 C.B.C.2d 1210, 1212 (9th Cir. 1991) ([W]hen a cost benefit analysis indicates that the only parties who will likely benefit from an investigation of a claim are the trustee and his professionals, investigation is unwarranted.).

n3

3. 126 B.R. 99 (D. Kan. 1991).

n4

4. See In re UNR Indus., Inc., 986 F.2d 207, 208 (7th Cir. 1993); In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 133 B.R. 13, 17 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991) (principles of economy of the estate and conservation prevents retained professionals under the Bankruptcy Act, as officers of the court and public servants, from being awarded compensation at rates equal to those engaged in private employment).

n5

5. See, e.g., In re Kindhart, 167 F.3d 1158 (7th Cir. 1999) (setting the threshold for review in chapter 13 cases at $1000 per case); In re Geraci, 138 F.3d 314 (7th Cir. 1998) (affirming the bankruptcy courts determination that $800 per case is presumptively reasonable in simple no-asset chapter 7 cases).

n6

6. 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974).

n7

7. 544 F.2d 1291, 11 C.B.C. 131 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 904, 97 S. Ct. 1696, 52 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1977).

n8

8. Title VII requires that attorneys fees be reasonable. 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000, et seq.

n9

9. See, e.g., Grant v. George Schumann Tire & Battery Co., 908 F.2d 874, 23 C.B.C.2d 708, 711 (11th Cir. 1990); In re Permian Anchor Servs., Inc., 649 F.2d 763 (10th Cir. 1981); see also In re Malewicki, 142 B.R. 353 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1992); In re Gillett Holdings, Inc., 137 B.R. 475 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992); In re Gold Seal Products Co., 128 B.R. 822 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1991); In re Bicoastal Corp., 121 B.R. 653 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990).

n10

10. 544 F.2d 1291 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 904, 97 S. Ct. 1696, 52 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1977).

n11

11. 544 F.2d 1291, 1299.

n12

12. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,091-2 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,408 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n13

13. See In re Stoecker, 114 B.R. 965 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990) (law firm improperly charged time in minimum .25 hour increments which artificially inflated the number of hours of services rendered and violated bankruptcy rule requiring that actual time expended be detailed); see also In re Wildman, 72 B.R. 700, 708 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1987) (holding that fee application should indicate actual time spent on services and small items should not be uniformly reported as a minimum block of time); In re Sapolin Paints, Inc., 10 C.B.C.2d 833, 38 B.R. 807 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1984) (.2 hour increment too large). Other courts may require shorter minimum increments, such as one tenth of an hour. E.g., In re Seneca Oil Co., 65 B.R. 902, 909 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1986).

n14

14. See In re Public Serv. of N.H., 86 B.R. 7 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1988) (ultimate standard always is whether final fee award is in fact an award of a reasonable fee in the circumstances of the particular case and that regular hourly rates simply do not become ipso facto final fee awards in this court).

n15

15. Chamberlain v. Kula (In re Kula), 38 C.B.C.2d 1709, 213 B.R. 729 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1997) (applying In re Apex Oil Co., 960 F.2d 728, 26 C.B.C.2d 1187 (8th Cir. 1992)).

n16

16. In re Howell, 226 B.R. 279 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998) (citing In re Kula).

n17

17. See, e.g., Zolfo, Cooper & Co. v. Sunbeam-Oster Co., 50 F.3d 253, 33 C.B.C.2d 134 (3d Cir. 1995) (baseline rule is for firms to receive their customary rates); In re Busy Beaver Bldg. Ctrs., Inc., 19 F.3d 833, 30 C.B.C.2d 1264 (3d Cir. 1994) (advocating market approach to determining applicable rate of compensation); In re Robertson Cos., 123 B.R. 616 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1990) (restriction of fees to typical local rates is unduly parochial in light of national and regional law firms working on larger and more complex bankruptcy cases with more than local import); In re Frontier Airlines, Inc., 74 B.R. 973 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1987) (foreign counsel may charge normal hourly billing rates, even if in excess of local billing rates).

n18

18. In re Baldwin United Corp., 10 C.B.C.2d 273, 36 B.R. 401 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1984).

n19

19. See, e.g., In re Grimes, 115 B.R. 639 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1990) (hourly billing rate charged by the debtors out of town attorney reduced to the local hourly rate in which the case was pending based on the lack of size and complexity of the case); In re Property Co. of Am. Joint Venture, 22 C.B.C.2d 688, 110 B.R. 244 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1990) (hourly billing rates charged by the law firm for the chapter 11 trustee reduced to reflect the prevailing community standard); In re Wendys of Mont. Inc., 111 B.R. 314 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1988) (allowing compensation to debtors attorney based on the fees charged by local professionals); In re Global Intl Airways Corp., 38 B.R. 440 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1984) (reducing customary hourly rate charged by out-of-town attorneys in light of lower local rates).

n20

20. 19 F.3d 833, 30 C.B.C.2d 1264 (3d Cir. 1994).

n21

21. 19 F.3d 833, 848, 30 C.B.C.2d 1264, 1279 (3d Cir. 1994).

n22

22. In re The Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc., 133 B.R. 13 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

n23

23. 950 F.2d 334 (6th Cir. 1991).

n24

24. The bankruptcy court relied upon an unreported opinion, In re Robinson, No. 3-88-01023(1)(13) (Bankr. W.D. Ky. Sept. 2, 1988).

n25

25. See In re Cenas Fine Furniture, Inc., 109 B.R. 575 (E.D.N.Y. 1990); In re Great Sweats of Va., Inc., 109 B.R. 696 (E.D. Va. 1989).

n26

26. 145 B.R. 956 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1991).

n27

27. 145 B.R. 956, 962-63 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1991); see also Unsecured Creditors Comm. v. Puget Sound Plywood, Inc., 924 F.2d 955, 960, 24 C.B.C.2d 1147, 1152 (9th Cir. 1991) (although primary method for calculating fees is lodestar it is not exclusive).

n28

28. 133 B.R. 13 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

n29

29. 133 B.R. 13, 25.

n30

30. 133 B.R. 13, 27 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991); see also In re Hillsborough Holdings Corp., 125 B.R. 837, 840 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1991) (in the absence of a time record, it is almost impossible to determine the reasonable value of the services rendered by an investment banker); In re Mortgage & Realty Trust, 123 B.R. 626 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991) (although keeping time records is not the customary practice of financial advisors, they must keep time records indicating the date and description of the services rendered as well as the amount of time spent before they will be compensated).

n31

31. 427 F.3d 804 (10th Cir. 2005).

n32

32. 56 C.B.C.2d 1458, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73860 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 11, 2006).

n33

33. See Cle-Ware Indus., Inc. v. Sokolsky, 493 F.2d 863 (6th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 829, 95 S. Ct. 50, 42 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1974). In re James Anthony & Co., Inc., 531 F.2d 658 (2d Cir. 1976); In re El San Juan Hotel Corp., 12 B.R. 154 (D.P.R. 1981); In re Botelho, 3 C.B.C.2d 739, 8 B.R. 305 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 1981).

n34

34. 908 F.2d 874, 23 C.B.C.2d 708 (11th Cir. 1990).

n35

35. 109 B.R. 733 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1989).

N36

36. See In re DN Assocs., 165 B.R. 344 (Bankr. D. Maine 1994) (denying compensation for successfully defending fee award on appeal but awarding interest on fee award from date awarded).

n37

37. 92 B.R. 152 (W.D. Va. 1988).

n38

38. See In re Nucorp Energy, Inc., 764 F.2d 655, 12 C.B.C.2d 1463 (9th Cir. 1985).

n39

39. See also In re Manoa Fin. Co., 853 F.2d 687, 19 C.B.C.2d 574 (9th Cir. 1988) (dicta in appeal from bankruptcy court denial of fee enhancement); In re U.S. Golf Corp., 639 F.2d 1197 (5th Cir. 1981) (awarding fees on appeal without discussion).

n40

40. Smith v. Edwards & Hale, Ltd., 317 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2002); see also In re Worldwide Direct, 334 B.R. 108 (D. Del. 2005) (allowing a percentage of fees incurred in defending a fee application equal to the percentage of challenged fees that were allowed).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

114 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Time for Assumption or Rejection of Executory Contract

2008 Emerging Issues 1482

Collier on Time for Assumption or Rejection of Executory Contract

By Collier

December 13, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the assumption or rejection of executory contracts or leases by bankruptcy courts in Chapter 7 liquidations and in Chapter 9, 11, 12 or 13 cases, the treatment of nonresidential real property leases in bankruptcy cases that are filed after the effective date of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, and the assumption or rejection of leases for personal property.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 365(d) of the Bankruptcy Code, which is similar in approach to Section 70b of the Bankruptcy Act and former Bankruptcy Rule 607, fixes the time within which the trustee must assume or reject an unexpired lease or executory contract. n1 Because the time is statutory, it may not be extended based on excusable neglect. n2 Except for a plan provision, assumption may be accomplished only by a motion. n3

Chapter 7 Liquidation Case; § 365(d)(1)

In a case under chapter 7, the trustee must decide whether to assume or reject an executory contract or lease within 60 days after the order for relief unless the court, for cause, within the 60-day period grants additional time. When the 60-day period has run, the conduct of the other party may give the trustee grounds to assert a waiver. n4 The request for an extension need not necessarily be on notice to the other party to the contract. Depending upon the circumstances, the request might be general or specific. n5

If the trustee fails to act within the 60-day period, the contract or lease is deemed rejected. If, however, the contract is not scheduled and the trustee does not discover it, the presumption of rejection should not apply. n6 If the 60-day period expires, the court has no power to extend it thereafter. Laches and waiver have been held to create an exception to this rule n7 When a case is converted from another chapter to chapter 7, the 60 days will run from the date of conversion. n8

Chapter 9, 11, 12 or 13 Case; Ordinary Contracts and Leases; § 365(d)(2)

In a case under chapter 9, 11, 12 or 13, unless the contract or lease at issue is subject to a special rule such as the one provided under section 365(d)(4) with respect to a nonresidential real estate lease, n9 the trustee may assume or reject an executory contract or lease at any time before confirmation of the plan. n10 Thus, a trustee may, before assumption and cure of defaults, exercise a lease renewal option that is otherwise exercisable under the lease only if the lease is not in default, because to require assumption first would effectively shorten the trustee's time to assume or reject the lease. n11

Assumption or Rejection in Plan. The plan itself may provide for the assumption or rejection of any executory contract or unexpired lease not previously rejected. n12 This is often a useful means for the debtor to avoid binding itself to contracts or leases before it has formulated a feasible business plan under which it knows whether it will want the benefits and burdens of each agreement. Because of magnitude of claims that may arise from a chapter 7 rejection of a lease that was assumed in the preceding chapter 11 case, assuming liability for future rent under a long-term lease will rarely be in the best interests of the estate. So, the decision to assume a long-term lease usually should be delayed until confirmation. n13

Court May Order Earlier Determination. Sometimes, the other party to the contract will need to know whether the trustee is planning to assume or reject a contract or lease, in order for the other party to take actions either to perform its end of the contract or to mitigate its damages. Section 365(d)(2) provides that the court, on request of a party to a contract or lease, may order the trustee to determine within a specified period of time whether to assume or reject. This is a codification of a case law remedy that had developed under the prior Act. n14

If the other party to the contract seeks an earlier determination of whether the trustee or debtor in possession will assume or reject the contract, the settled rule, which was borrowed from equity receivership practice, is that the trustee or debtor in possession has a reasonable time within which to decide. n15 Reasonableness depends upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case. n16

Effect of Denial of Request for Early Determination. If a request for an order requiring the debtor to assume or reject a contract or lease in a shortened time frame is denied, the request may be renewed at a later point in the case. n17 As the case continues, the equities that may have favored the trustee or debtor in possession early in the case may change, as the other party to the contract is increasingly burdened by the failure to assume or reject the contract.

Effect of Failure to Assume or Reject Before Plan Confirmation. The court must approve the assumption or rejection of an executory contract or lease. n18 This approval may be contained in a court order or as part of the confirmation of a plan. n19 If the trustee or debtor in possession fails either to assume or reject a contract by separate order or in the plan, it appears that the contract would continue in existence. n20 If the contract has not been rejected, however, the other party to the contract will not have a claim in the bankruptcy and will have no hope of recovery if the trustee or debtor in possession liquidates or assigns all of the estate's assets. But, if the trustee or debtor in possession continues operating, arguably the contract passes through the bankruptcy and remains a liability of the reorganized entity. n21 The discharge of section 1141(c) will not assist the debtor since, absent rejection, the other party to the contract will not be a creditor, at least with respect to postpetition damages. However, the debtor may be able to modify or amend the plan to correct an oversight and provide for rejection (or assumption) if the plan has not been substantially consummated. n22 Since a collective bargaining agreement may be rejected in a chapter 11 case only after compliance with the requirements of section 1113, failure to assume or reject such an agreement results in its assumption. n23

Debtor as Lessee of Nonresidential Real Property in Cases Commenced after the Effective Date of the 2005 Act; § 365(d)(4)

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) n24 made substantial changes in the treatment of nonresidential real property leases in bankruptcy cases. The 2005 Act amended section 365(d)(4) to increase the initial period in which the trustee must make an assume or reject decision but limited the ability of the court to extend the period. Although the paragraph was extensively rewritten, much of the language tracks the prior provision, so much of the case law interpreting former section 365(d)(4) will remain applicable.

In cases filed on or after October 17, 2005, the trustee has 120 days after the date of the order for relief, or until the date of the entry of a plan confirmation order, whichever is earlier, to assume a lease of nonresidential real property. If the trustee does not assume within the deadline, the lease shall be deemed rejected, and the trustee shall immediately surrender that nonresidential real property to the lessor. The court may extend the 120-day deadline once for cause, but only before the expiration of the deadline and only for up to 90 days. If the court grants a first extension, then the court may grant a subsequent extension only upon the prior written consent of the landlord in each instance. n25 The wording of these provisions leaves much open to interpretation.

First, the effect of the trustee's failure to act is changed slightly from the pre-amendment language. Under the 2005 Act, the lease shall be deemed rejected; under prior law, the lease is deemed rejected. Although the change seems minor and only stylistic, at least one decision suggests otherwise. In Stumpf v. McGee (In re O'Connor), the plan provided that certain executory contracts are hereby rejected and that certain other executory contracts will be assumed. The court ruled that rejection occurred upon confirmation but that something more than confirmation was required to effect the assumption. n26 Similarly, Congress may have intended by the change in language here that rejection not be automatic, that something more is required. The statute does not specify what that further action might be. The following phrase, and the trustee shall immediately surrender, as well as the use of deemed, suggests that no further action is required to effect rejection.

Second, the extension language has been changed. Previously, the paragraph set the deadline as 60 days after the date of the order for relief, or within such additional time as the court fixes. The new language in subparagraph (B) specifically authorizes the court to extend the period determined under subparagraph (A) for 90 days on the motion of the trustee or lessor for cause. The new language does not by its terms appear to permit an extension shorter or longer than 90 days. n27 It specifies only a 90-day extension, not such additional time, up to 90 days, for example. Also, it refers to the period determined under subparagraph (A). That period is the earlier of 120 days after the date of the order for relief or of entry of a confirmation order. By referring to subparagraph (A), rather than to the 120-day period, as the statute does later in the same clause, a court might conclude that either deadline in subparagraph (A)--120 days after the order for relief or the entry of the confirmation order--may be extended. Such a reading would permit the court to extend the deadline for 90 days after the entry of the confirmation order.

Alternatively, a court might conclude that the period determined under subparagraph (A) is the earlier of the two dates. This reading would be bolstered by the deletion from the beginning of paragraph (4) of the phrase, Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection. Paragraph (1) and (2) fix the time for assumption or rejection deadline at 60 days after the order for relief in a chapter 7 case or plan confirmation in a chapter 11, 12 or 13 case. Deletion of the notwithstanding phrase suggests that new paragraph (4) does not override the plan confirmation deadline for chapter 11, 12 and 13 cases. It creates another problem, however, in that it is now ambiguous whether paragraph (2) or paragraph (4) controls the assumption of nonresidential real property leases. Under the statutory construction maxim that the specific controls the general, it is likely that paragraph (4) will control.

Third, the 2005 Act does not clarify what part of the assumption process must be completed before the deadline, whether it is (at one extreme) entry of a court order approving assumption or (at the other end), a mere decision by the trustee, communicated to the lessor, to assume. If rejection is automatic at the expiration of the period, then the order would be required by then; otherwise the lease would already have been rejected by the time of the entry of the order. On the other hand, if, as noted above, something more than the passage of time is required for rejection, then an assumption or an order approving assumption after the deadline might still be effective. That would be consistent with pre-amendment law, which generally permitted a post-deadline order if the trustee filed a motion to assume before the deadline. n28

The 2005 Act clarifies at least one ambiguity in the prior language. It is now clear that any order extending the initial 120-day period must be entered before the expiration of the deadline. n29 The 2005 Act also clarifies whether more than one extension is permitted. The literal language of the former provision did not appear to permit more than one extension, but the courts generally agreed that multiple extensions were authorized. n30 The amended paragraph expressly permits multiple extensions. The 2005 Act does not specify whether any subsequent extensions (after the first) must be granted before the expiration of the previously extended period. Better practice would be to obtain the subsequent extension order before the expiration of the prior extension, to prevent automatic rejection at the end of the extended period, in case automatic rejection occurs.

The court may grant a subsequent extension only upon prior written consent of the lessor in each instance. n31 Presumably, each instance refers to each extension, rather than to each lessor or lease, and the extension period specified in the prior written consent should limit the extension that the court may grant, even though the statute is not explicit on this point. The statute leaves open the question of when the lessor must consent, that is, prior to what event? The House Committee report suggests that the consent must be received before the trustee may file a motion for an extension. n32

However, such a requirement does not appear in the statute and would not appear practical. The courts should require the landlord's consent before issuing the extension order. Finally, subparagraph (B) permits a subsequent extension. Although the language is in the singular, the singular includes the plural, n33 so more than one subsequent extension is permitted; subject, however, to the landlord's prior written consent in each instance.

Prior law interpreting section 365(d)(4) should continue to apply as to the remainder of the issues that arise in the context of assumption or rejection of a nonresidential real property lease. n34

Debtor as Lessor of Nonresidential Real Estate

Section 365(d)(2), by its terms, applies only to executory contracts and to leases of residential real property or of personal property of the debtor. This coverage excludes leases of nonresidential real property. The exclusion recognizes that leases of nonresidential real property in which the debtor is lessee are dealt with by section 365(d)(4).

Apparently Congress was not thinking about those situations in which the debtor is lessor, since neither paragraph (2) nor (4) of section 365(d) provides a time period for the assumption or rejection of a nonresidential lease by a debtor lessor. n35 Because the special limits of section 365(d)(4) are inapplicable when the debtor is a lessor, the better approach would be to apply the rule of section 365(d)(2) to leases of nonresidential real property under which the debtor is lessor, in recognition of the apparent oversight. n36 Alternatively, a court might look to pre-Code law and afford the trustee or debtor in possession a reasonable time to assume or reject such leases.

Leases of Personal Property; § 365(d)(5)

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 added section 365(d)(5) to the Code. n37 This section requires the trustee in a chapter 11 case to perform timely all the obligations of the debtor, first arising from or after 60 days after the order for relief in a chapter 11 case under an unexpired lease of personal property (other than property leased to an individual for personal, family or household purposes) until the lease is assumed or rejected, unless the court, based upon the equities of the case, orders otherwise. The amendment expressly provides that it overrides section 503(b)(1). n38 This is apparently intended to eliminate an argument over whether accrued rent was actual or necessary and, hence, entitled to an administrative priority.

Comparison with Section 365(d)(3). While in concept similar to section 365(d)(3) and the cases construing section 365(d)(3) are equally applicable here to the extent of the similarities, n39 there are significant differences between section 365(d)(5) and section 365(d)(3). Section 365(d)(5) applies only in chapter 11 cases and applies to obligations arising from or after 60 days after the order for relief rather than from the order for relief, as provided in section 365(d)(3). In addition, under section 365(d)(3), the time to cure defaults, other than those under section 365(b), is limited to 60 days after the order for relief, while section 365(d)(5) permits the court, after notice and a hearing, to order otherwise with respect to the obligations or their timely performance based upon the equities of the case. Thus, section 365(d)(5) is considerably more flexible than section 365(d)(3). As is the case with section 365(d)(3), section 365(d)(5) is silent as to the consequence of noncompliance, leaving the issue to case law development.

Burden of Going Forward. Section 365(d)(5) shifts the burden of proceeding to the trustee. If the trustee fails to satisfy the burden, the obligation to perform will exist, and the rent after the first 60 days will accrue at the rate specified in the lease. Indeed, the principal effect of section 365(d)(5) will be to shift the burden of taking action to the trustee. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 also amended section 363(e) to permit lessors to seek adequate protection. n40

Conversion of Chapter 11 Case to Chapter 7. If the case is converted to chapter 7, section 365(d)(5) will cease to apply. This may lead to a more complex calculation, for in calculating the rent due under a commercial lease of personal property, the first 60 days in chapter 11 would be determined under the actual and necessary standard, the rent for the remainder of the chapter 11 case would be that reserved in the lease unless the court, based upon the equities, had ordered otherwise, and the rent during the first 60 days of the chapter 7 case would be under the actual and necessary standard.

Liability for Use and Occupancy under Unexpired Lease Pending Assumption or Rejection

When the contract is an unexpired lease of residential real property or noncommercial personal property, and the debtor is the lessee, an issue arises as to the obligation for rent under the lease after the inception of the case and until the lease is rejected or assumed. n41 Similarly, when the lease is of commercial personal property, the same issue arises during the first 60 days of a chapter 11 case and cases under other chapters.

Estate Does Not Take Title Until Lease Is Assumed. The general rule is that the estate does not take title to an executory contract or unexpired lease until it is affirmatively assumed, whereupon title relates back to the date of the filing of the bankruptcy petition.

Consequently, except for leases of nonresidential real estate under which the debtor is the lessee or for leases of personal property more than 60 days after the order for relief, it is the settled rule that until assumption or rejection of the debtor's lease, the estate is not liable under the terms of the contract or lease. Nevertheless, the estate is liable for the reasonable value of the use and occupancy of the premises, since this represents a benefit to the estate. n42 Such value may be, but is not necessarily, fixed at the rent reserved in the lease. n43

When Payments Are Required to Be Made Before Assumption or Rejection. If the trustee or debtor in possession is required to make payments before assumption or rejection of the lease, the final application of the payments will await the trustee's or debtor in possession's decision of whether to assume or reject the lease. If the lease is rejected, the payments will represent the charge for the use and occupancy. If the lease is assumed, the trustee or debtor in possession will be required to cure any defaults and perform thereafter. n44 In such a case, the payments will be viewed as having been made on account of rent. The trustee or debtor in possession will then be under obligation to pay the amount of rent reserved for the period extending from the filing date to the time of assumption, and thereafter, and if payments for use and occupation during the period previous to assumption were in a lesser amount than specified in the lease, the balance would have to be made up. n45

When Before Assumption or Rejection Trustee Mistakenly Continues Making Payment. If prior to assumption or rejection the trustee or debtor in possession mistakenly continues to pay rent as such without condition and it is so accepted, and the lease is thereafter rejected, the general rule is that the difference, if any, between the rent reserved and the value of use and occupancy may be recovered, since the lessor dealing with a court officer in a reorganization must be charged with notice of the provisional character of all such transactions. n46 The rule is not inflexible, however, and there may be cases in which individual lessors have so far adjusted their affairs in actual ignorance of the contingent nature of the payments that it would be inequitable to compel them to disgorge. n47

For further discussion of Code section 365, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 365 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com

Return to Text

n1 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.03 (Matthew Bender), text accompanying notes 1 and 2 (debtor in possession in a chapter 11 case and debtor in a chapter 12 or 13 case may assume or reject).

n2 Magnolia Bluff Factory Shops Ltd. v. Federated Food Courts, Inc. (In re Federated Food Courts, Inc.), 222 B.R. 396 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1998). Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006(b)(1) permits an extension, based on excusable neglect, of a time period set by the Bankruptcy Rules.

n3 South Street Seaport Ltd. P'ship v. Burger Boys, Inc. (In re Burger Boys, Inc.), 94 F.3d 755, 763 (2d Cir. 1996); see Fed. R. Bankr. P. 6006(a) (a proceeding to assume or reject a contract or lease is a contested matter).

n4 See, e.g., Larkins v. Sills, 377 F.2d 1 (5th Cir. 1967); Ten-Six Olive, Inc., v. Curby, 208 F.2d 117 (8th Cir. 1953); In re THW Enters., Inc., 19 C.B.C.2d 451, 89 B.R. 351 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1988) (laches and waiver have been held to create an exception to this rule).

n5 See Chapman Inv. Assocs. v. American Healthcare Mgmt., Inc. (In re American Healthcare Mgmt., Inc.), 900 F.2d 827, 832, 22 C.B.C.2d 1740, 1746 (5th Cir. 1990) (when a statute gives a court discretion to extend the time in which a party is required to act, the court has authority to grant such an extension without affording other parties notice or a hearing); Willamette Waterfront, Ltd. v. Victoria Station, Inc. (In re Victoria Station, Inc.), 875 F.2d 1380, 1386, 21 C.B.C.2d 483, 491 (9th Cir. 1989) (order extending time to assume or reject a lease merely preserves status quo, and like orders pursuant to Rule 6(b), [may be] entered in the routine administration of the court); Bethesda-Union Society of Savannah, Inc. v. Austin (In re Austin), 21 C.B.C.2d 244, 102 B.R. 897 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1989)

n6 Texas Western Fin. Corp. v. McCraw Candles, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 445 (N.D. Tex. 1972) (citing Treatise). But see Cheadle v. Appleatchee Riders Ass'n (In re Lovitt), 757 F.2d 1035 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 849, 106 S. Ct. 145, 88 L. Ed. 2d 120 (1985) (statutory presumption of rejection by the trustee's inaction within the 60-day period is a conclusive presumption; that the leases were not scheduled is without consequence).

n7 In re THW Enters., Inc., 19 C.B.C.2d 451, 89 B.R. 351 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1988).

n8 Carrico v. Tompkins (In re Tompkins), 95 B.R. 722 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989).

n9 See Debtor as Lessor of Nonresidential Real Estate infra.

n10 This is consistent with pre-Code law. See In re Grayson-Robinson Stores, Inc., 227 F. Supp. 609 (S.D.N.Y. 1964) (court refused to permit rejection of an executory contract after confirmation).

n11 Coleman Oil Co., Inc. v. Circle K Corp (In re Circle K Corp.), 127 F.3d 904, 38 C.B.C.2d 1445 (9th Cir. 1997).

n12 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(2).

n13 Nostas Assocs. v. Costich (In re Klein Sleep Prods., Inc.), 78 F.3d 18, 29 (2d Cir. 1996).

n14 Texas Importing Co. v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 360 F.2d 582 (5th Cir. 1966); In re Greenpoint Metallic Bed Corp., 113 F.2d 881 (2d Cir. 1940).

n15 Data Link Sys., Inc. v. Whitcomb & Keller Mortgage Co. (In re Whitcomb & Keller Mortgage Co.), 715 F.2d 375, 9 C.B.C.2d 312 (7th Cir. 1983); Theatre Holding Corp. v. Mauro, 681 F.2d 102 (2d Cir. 1982); In re Dunes Casino Hotel, 63 B.R. 939 (D.N.J. 1986); In re Mayer Pollock Steel Corp., 157 B.R. 952 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993).

n16 See, e.g., Theatre Holding Corp. v. Mauro, 681 F.2d 102 (2d Cir. 1982) (when debtor failed to formulate plan a year after commencement of case and lessor was unlikely to obtain compensation for losses suffered, court could shorten time to assume or reject); In re Dunes Casino Hotel, 63 B.R. 939 (D.N.J. 1986) (debtor should be afforded reasonable time to develop reorganization plan); In re Mayer Pollock Steel Corp., 157 B.R. 952 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993) (no relief when the balance of equities favors the debtor); see also In re Flying W. Airways, Inc., 328 F. Supp. 1256 (E.D. Pa. 1971) (court concluded that under the circumstances of the case three months was a reasonable time and compared this to other cases in which considerably longer time was taken).

n17 In re Dunes Casino Hotel, 63 B.R. 939 (D.N.J. 1986).

n18 11 U.S.C. § 365(a); see, e.g., Thinking Machs. Corp. v. Mellon Fin. Servs. Corp. (In re Thinking Machs. Corp.), 67 F.3d 1021 (1st Cir. 1995).

n19 See 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(2); In re Kroh Bros. Dev. Co., 100 B.R. 480 (W.D. Mo. 1989); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1123.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n20 This continuance, however, does not necessarily mean an assumption and does not constitute an estoppel to bar the court from exercising its statutory power. Texas Importing Co. v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 360 F.2d 582 (5th Cir. 1966) (citing Treatise); In re Lake Winnebago Dev. Co., 55 B.R. 1005 (W.D. Mo. 1985).

n21 Stumpf v. McGee (In re O'Connor), 258 F.3d 392 (5th Cir. 2001); In re Hernandez, 287 B.R. 795 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002).

n22 11 U.S.C. § 1127.

n23 Adventure Resources, Inc. v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786 (4th Cir. 1998).

n24 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 404 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n25 11 U.S.C. § 365(d)(4), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 404(a) (2005).

n26 258 F.3d 392 (5th Cir. 2001).

n27 Under a more aggressive reading, it could be argued that Congress did not prohibit an extension of longer than 90 days, as would be the case had the language read, may extend the period only for 90 days. However, such a reading seems unjustified in light of the apparent congressional purpose to limit the number and length of extensions.

n28 See Must Court Approve Assumption by the Deadline? supra.

n29 11 U.S.C. § 365(d)(4)(B); see Timing of Extension supra (courts divided on whether the extension order must be entered before the deadline).

n30 See Multiple Extensions supra.

n31 11 U.S.C. § 365(d)(4)(B)(ii).

n32 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 86 (2005) (Any subsequent extension can only be granted by the judge upon the prior written consent of the lessor either by the lessor's motion for an extension or on motion of the trustee, provided that the trustee has the prior written approval of the lessor.).

n33 11 U.S.C. § 102(7).

n34 See Relationship to Other Provisions, Grounds for Extension of Time to Assume or Reject and Performance Before Assumption or Rejection; § 365(d)(3) supra.

n35 See Oklahoma Plaza Invs., Ltd. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (In re Oklahoma Plaza Invs., Ltd.), 24 C.B.C.2d 1572, 124 B.R. 108 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1991).

n36 See Oklahoma Plaza Invs., Ltd. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (In re Oklahoma Plaza Invs., Ltd.), 24 C.B.C.2d 1572, 124 B.R. 108 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1991) (explaining that the reason a debtor/lessor does not have to assume a lease in a chapter 11 case is that under section 1108 a trustee or debtor in possession is authorized to operate the business of the debtor without court order).

n37 Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 219(b) (1994), redesignated as section 365(d)(5) by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(3)(B) (2005).

n38 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.05 (Matthew Bender).

n39 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.03[3][c] (Matthew Bender).

n40 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.06 (Matthew Bender).

n41 As to the effects of assignment or rejection, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.09 (Matthew Bender).

n42 Philadelphia Co. v. Dipple, 312 U.S. 168, 61 S. Ct. 538, 85 L. Ed. 651 (1941); Palmer v. Palmer, 104 F.2d 161, 163 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 308 U.S. 590, 60 S. Ct. 120, 84 L. Ed. 494 (1939) (the trustee need not pay the rent during the probationary period, and the court will hold off the lessor and force him to be content with the value of the use and occupancy meanwhile, though ordinarily it will fix that at the same amount as the rent); Crook v. Zorn, 100 F.2d 792 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 307 U.S. 630, 59 S. Ct. 833, 83 L. Ed. 1573 (1939); In re Johns, 1 C.B.C.2d 174 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1979) (citing Treatise). But when a trustee does not occupy leased premises, no compensation is due the lessor for waiting a reasonable time for the trustee to determine whether to adopt or reject the lease. In re McCrory Stores Corp., 69 F.2d 517 (2d Cir. 1934). And the collection of rents from a subtenant does not amount to actual or constructive possession of the leased premises or make the trustee liable for use and occupation of premises the trustee never occupied. Id.; In re United Cigar Stores Co. of Am., 69 F.2d 513 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 566, 55 S. Ct. 76, 79 L. Ed. 665 (1934).

n43 Philadelphia Co. v. Dipple, 312 U.S. 168, 61 S. Ct. 538, 85 L. Ed. 651 (1941); Palmer v. Palmer, 104 F.2d 161, 163 (2d Cir. 1939), cert. denied, 308 U.S. 590, 60 S. Ct. 120, 84 L. Ed. 494 (1939); Crook v. Zorn, 100 F.2d 792 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 307 U.S. 630, 59 S. Ct. 833, 83 L. Ed. 1573 (1939).

n44 11 U.S.C. § 365(b).

n45 NLRB v. Bildisco & Bildisco, 465 U.S. 513, 104 S. Ct. 1188, 79 L. Ed. 2d 482, 9 C.B.C.2d 1219 (1984).

n46 Palmer v. Palmer, 104 F.2d 161 (2d Cir. 1939), cert. denied, 308 U.S. 590, 60 S. Ct. 120, 84 L. Ed. 494 (1939).

n47 Id.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

115 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Ehrenberg on the Successful Chapter 11 Sale of the Queen Mary Facility Lease

2008 Emerging Issues 1476

Howard M. Ehrenberg on the Successful Chapter 11 Sale of the Queen Mary Facility Lease

By Howard M. Ehrenberg

December 13, 2007

SUMMARY: A Rapidly Failing Business May Not Survive Legal Resolutions That Do Not Utilize Creative Time-Saving Tactics. Howard M. Ehrenberg, Esq., of SulmeyerKupetz details the steps taken as a chapter 11 trustee to clear the way for the sale of the Queen Mary facility lease in the In re Queen's Seaport Development case.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: A Rapidly Failing Business May Not Survive Legal Resolutions That Do Not Utilize Creative Time-Saving Tactics

In In re Queen's Seaport Development, Inc., Case No. 05-15175-VZ (Bankr. C.D. Cal.), as the chapter 11 trustee, I was faced with an intricate web of time-consuming and interrelated issues and needed to resolve various complex litigation matters before attempting to market the assets of the estate. I was also tasked with securing financial stability for a venture that was failing at a rapidly increasing rate, and I employed inventive solutions to work around time constraints inherent to an asset sale.

Background. Queen's Seaport Development, Inc. ("QSDI") and one of its subtenants, RMS Foundation ("RMS"), operated a $35 million business and generated approximately $8 million per year through its operation of peripheral services such as parking, rent from subtenants and coordination of special events provided to the main attraction, the HMS Queen Mary. Original plans to develop a 45-acre tourist attraction failed, and, when faced with other pressing financial issues, QSDI subsequently filed for chapter 11 protection on March 15, 2005.

QSDI was stalled in the bankruptcy case for over a year and, after accepting an appointment to administer the case, I was immediately charged with resolving four separate and complex litigation matters in addition to foreclosure threats from a secured creditor. Also at issue was a landlord that was determined to terminate the lease and I was faced with resolving complicated business issues with a company that did not have cash reserves and retained no executives to manage its affairs.

Operations. RMS was a subtenant who operated the main attraction provided by QSDI, the Queen Mary facility, hotel and restaurants. RMS employees were at the time responsible for the day-to-day operations of the facility, including maintenance of the property, bookkeeping and coordination of special events.

Consolidation of RMS into the debtor in order to control operations was considered, but abandoned after a forensic analysis determined that transfer of assets from a nonprofit foundation to the debtor would have drastic tax implications and a negative impact on creditors. I requested and was granted an appointment by RMS to serve as its oversight officer, a move that allowed me to review the books and records and investigate allegations of misconduct. See 28 U.S.C § 586; Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 6004.

I instituted a forensic examination of both RMS and QSDI and determined that there were no unjustified transactions that would preclude a continuation of the symbiotic relationship between RMS and QSDI, at least until litigation was resolved and the master lease sold.

I was immediately thrust into the daily operations of QSDI and acted as sub-landlord for RMS, Carnival Cruise Line, and Catalina Express. Duties expanded to operating the parking lot and maintenance of landscaping. Insurance issues and obtaining certified financial statements complicated my efforts to stabilize the facility, but after attracting new tenants such as Laserium, providing a safe, clean environment for special events and continuing a popular Halloween festival, I was able to make the site attractive to potential buyers of the lease.

Litigation. The resolution of pending litigation was critical to clearing the way to a sale of the lease (see 11 U.S.C. § 363(k) and (l)). After analyzing the existing lease between the City of Long Beach (the "City") and QSDI, I determined that a settlement was advisable and I set out to partner with the City to gain an important ally in the process leading to a sale.

The settlement terms provided the City with most of what it was claiming, but limited the priority portion of the claim and subordinated the remaining portion to general unsecured creditors. The approach served three purposes:

- . to resolve the City litigation;
- . to protect the general unsecured creditors; and
- . to "partner" with the City to attract overbids which caused the pricing to be sufficient to pay the City's claim in full.

Another separate litigant was a minority shareholder who claimed "development rights" that would have to be cleared in order to transfer a clean title. I was able to favorably resolve the litigation to the benefit of the estate.

More pressing was a lawsuit by a secured creditor who was blocking efforts to resolve the issues and hindering the marketing of the lease. I was, under powers granted by section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, successful in litigating an automatic stay motion, but the delay was costly to the estate. A large claim was filed by an investor who bought a sub-interest in a debt and was fighting to reclaim funds from the estate. I objected to the claim and it was denied by the court.

An expensive lease payment for a chiller facility located on the property was negotiated to allow an accrual of lease payments in exchange for certain pre-petition payments. The last important settlement was with the lessor of equipment provided to the Queen Mary, which I was able to resolve at a discount over demand to the estate.

Conclusion of Bankruptcy Case. I was then tasked with working closely with the City, the secured creditor and the Unsecured Creditors Committee to prepare for the successful sale of the lease and the eventual conclusion of the bankruptcy case. I was able to involve the parties in the process by offering certain incentives and was able to clear the complex obstacles that prevented a clean sale of assets. For a complete review of the powers of a trustee regarding executory contracts, see Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide, Ch. 68 (Matthew Bender).

It became clear after an appraisal of the property that the sale of the lease was desirable and would effectively provide a substantial dividend to creditors of the estate. I undertook several steps to expedite the process. I contacted several real estate brokers who specialized in the sale of waterfront property and had contacts with potential buyers.

In order to expedite the extensive due diligence for potential buyers, I created a password-protected website into which was made available the thousands of pages of leases, agreements, contracts and other financial information necessary for the review of potential buyers. This innovative approach saved time and estate funds by streamlining the review process.

I then spent months meeting with buyers and presenting them to the City, in an effort to obtain approval of as many bidders as possible to maximize the final sale price. Bid protection was offered to the "stalking horse" bidder to begin the bidding process, but the main goal was to foment active overbidding.

I also instituted a set of incentives to brokers with no commission available upon entry of an offer, but rewarded a 10% commission on overbids. The incentives attracted a sizable number of bidders, among them four overbids and a successful bidder was submitted to the court for approval. The winning bid was $2 million above the opening bid.

The sale of the lease was finalized under 28 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1) and an order was approved by the court in September 2007.

In my role as the chapter 11 trustee, I successfully employed several proactive approaches to resolving expensive and time-consuming issues in the QSDI bankruptcy case. The creative application of existing legal remedies resulted in a reduction of time and expense and provided a substantial benefit to the estate.

For a complete review of the right of a trustee to the use, sale and lease of property, see Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide, Ch. 43 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Howard M. Ehrenberg is a member of SulmeyerKupetz, a Professional Corporation, www.sulmeyerlaw.com. Mr. Ehrenberg is a member of the Chapter 7 Bankruptcy Panel of Trustees, appointed by the Office of the United States Trustee, and a state court receiver. He is certified as a Business Bankruptcy Law Specialist by the American Bankruptcy Board of Certification. Mr. Ehrenberg is an active member of the Los Angeles Bankruptcy Forum, the Financial Lawyers Conference, American Bankruptcy Institute and Council of Certified Bankruptcy Specialists. He is also a member of the Executive Board of the Commercial Law and Bankruptcy Section of the Los Angeles County Bar Association. Currently, he serves on the Advisory Board of Directors for Safety Belt Safe, Inc., a national organization that promotes child car safety, and is a commissioner in the City of Burbank, California. Mr. Ehrenberg received a J.D. from the University of Southern California in 1986.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

116 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of Community Claim Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 1395

Collier on the Definition of Community Claim Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

December 7, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis explains that the issue of whether a creditor holds a community claim is determined by state law, and it analyzes the community property laws of several states. It also discusses the criteria that must be met before an obligation has the status of a community claim and explains how certain of the intricacies of state community property laws are preempted by the Code in favor of creditors.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: The definition of community claim in section 101 and the provisions of section 541(a)(2) regulate the treatment of community property n1 under the Code and the rights and remedies of creditors in those jurisdictions that have enacted community property laws. n2 While section 541(a) governs the types of community property which pass to the estate, n3 the definition of community claim affects the definition of creditor under section 101(10), n4 the parties entitled to receive notice of the entry of an order for relief under section 342, n5 the scope of the discharge granted under section 524(a)(3) n6 and the distribution of community property assets of the estate under section 726(c). n7

As a result of the definition of community claim, creditors holding claims against the debtor or against a nondebtor (typically the debtors spouse or former spouse) are entitled to participate in the bankruptcy case, so long as under applicable state law the creditor could have satisfied the claim from community property assets of the type passing to the bankruptcy estate under section 541(a)(2). By granting the nondebtors creditors the status of community claim holders, section 101 insures that community property passing to the estate will be divided ratably among all creditors who could have satisfied their claims therefrom under state law. n8 This is accomplished through the distribution scheme of section 726(c). n9 As a result, a creditor of the debtor or nondebtor spouse or former spouse who would have been able to satisfy a claim prior to bankruptcy from community assets which would be section 541(a)(2) property of the estate holds a community claim against the debtors estate, and is entitled to participate in the distribution of community property assets which have passed to the debtors estate. This is true whether or not any such section 541(a)(2) property has passed to the estate as of the petition date. n10 Thus, an estate containing community property presents a unique situation under the Code in that its assets will be disbursed to both the creditors of the debtor and to entities who are not creditors of the debtor under state law, but who hold community claims under the Code. n11

General Analysis; Applicability of State Law. There are three criteria which must be met before an obligation has the status of a community claim: (1) it must be a debt owed by one of the spouses; (2) it must be satisfiable from community property under applicable state law; and (3) the community property from which the debt could be satisfied under state law must be included within the assets which would pass to the debtors bankruptcy estate, whether or not such assets exist at the commencement of the case. n12 Thus, under the foregoing tests, whether a creditor holds a community claim will be determined by state law. n13

Under state law, there are two prevailing theories of liability in community property states. In those states that follow the community debt doctrine, the community is considered to have the capacity to incur debts, and is liable for an obligation of a spouse if that spouse was acting as an agent of the marital community. Otherwise, the obligation is classified as a separate debt, which typically results in restrictions on the type or amount of community property from which it can be satisfied, or wholly bars the claim from satisfaction from community property. The alternative theory of liability under state law rejects the community debt doctrine and attributes a liability to the spouse who incurs it. In these states, it is irrelevant (except for marshaling considerations) whether or not the debt was incurred for separate or community purposes. Debts are attributable to a particular spouse and may be satisfied from that spouses separate and community property. n14

Under the Code, certain of the intricacies of state community property laws are preempted in favor of an all or nothing approach. n15 If under any circumstances a creditor may satisfy any portion of its claim from community property of the type described in section 541(a)(2), then that creditor will be accorded the status of a holder of a community claim. n16 Any state law distinction limiting a creditor to only a portion of the community property assets, n17 marshaling provisions requiring separate creditors to first satisfy their claims from noncommunity assets n18 or provisions granting a spouse reimbursement rights, n19 are not recognized. n20 Any attempt to implement the refinements of liability which exist under the laws of the various community property states would have hopelessly complicated an already difficult distribution scheme. n21 In a solvent estate, however, the bankruptcy court should examine the state law scheme to enable it to distribute the surplus assets to the proper spouse. Where a creditor holds a joint and several obligation against both spouses, he or she is accorded only one community claim, for to do otherwise would give the creditor an advantage not enjoyed under state law. In such circumstances, the creditor should participate as a holder of a claim against the debtor to insure access to all assets of the estate. n22

Analysis of Community Claims by Jurisdiction

Alaska. Spouses in Alaska may elect to have some or all of their property treated as community property. n23 Alaska follows the community debt doctrine with regard to any property that is the subject of such an election. Obligations incurred for the benefit of both spouses during marriage may be satisfied from community property and from the separate property of either spouse. n24 Obligations incurred for the benefit of only one spouse, either before or during marriage, may be satisfied from the incurring spouses separate property and from the incurring spouses share of the community property. n25 Support obligations may be satisfied only from community property and the separate property of the obligated spouse. n26 If any community property exists, because all obligations may be satisfied from at least some portion of the community property, all creditors in Alaska will hold community claims against the debtors estate.

Arizona. Arizona adheres to the community debt doctrine. In Arizona, prenuptial debts incurred after September 1, 1973, may be satisfied only from a spouses separate property and from the community property to the extent of that spouses contribution to the community. n27 Prenuptial debts incurred prior to September 1, 1973, are satisfied only from a spouses separate property. n28 Postnuptial separate creditors are also limited to the spouses separate property. n29 On the other hand, community debts are satisfied first from community property, then from the separate property of the contracting spouse. n30 Thus, only two types of creditors in Arizona do not hold community claims: prenuptial creditors whose claims were incurred prior to 1973, and postnuptial separate creditors. All other creditors can reach at least some portion of the community property for the satisfaction of their claims and thus hold community claims under section 101(7).

California. Californias community property system has generally never recognized the doctrine of community and separate debts. n31 Because the community has never been regarded as an entity capable of incurring obligations, debts are attributed to either the husband or the wife. n32 All community property, as well as the separate property of the contracting spouse, is obligated for the contracts of either spouse made before or during marriage. n33 This is consistent with the concept that management and control resides in both spouses. The separate property and earnings during marriage of one spouse are exempt from liability for debts of the other spouse which were contracted before marriage. n34 With respect to tort claims, a distinction is made between torts committed while performing an activity beneficial to the marital community and those committed under other circumstances. In the former instance, the liability must be satisfied first from community property and then from the separate property of the spouse who committed the tort. In the latter, the separate property of the tortfeasor must be exhausted before the community property is liable. n35 However, because the Bankruptcy Code does not recognize such marshaling restrictions, n36 all creditors of either spouse, both contract and tort (except for holders of claims incurred while the spouses are living separate and apart before a legal separation), n37 will hold community claims against the debtors estate and share in the distribution of community assets in the estate. n38 Finally, in circumstances where domestic partner community property has passed to the estate under section 541(a)(2), n39 the term community claim should include the claims of creditors against the nondebtor domestic partner because the domestic partner community property in the estate is property that is liable for the payment of such claims against the nondebtor domestic partner. However, the ability of a creditor of a nondebtor domestic partner to obtain a distribution on account of such claim is less clear. n40

Idaho. Idaho is similar to California in that neither spouses separate property is liable for the obligations of the other unless that spouse consents to such liability in writing; n41 however, no statutory provisions define the rights of creditors against the community assets. Under the former community property law, which granted the husband sole management and control of the community property, the community property was liable for all debts of the husband, whether or not incurred during community activities. n42 Because the wife now possesses equal rights to management and control with the husband, her creditors should also be able to reach both the community property and her separate assets. n43 If this is so, the laws of California and Idaho are very similar, and the treatment of community claims under Idaho community property law should closely parallel the treatment under California community property law.

Louisiana. Louisiana acknowledges separate and community debts, but only for the purpose of reimbursement between the spouses. n44 A creditor holding either a separate or a community debt against a spouse may satisfy that debt from the separate property of the debtor or from the community property. n45 Accordingly, all Louisiana creditors hold community claims under section 101(7) and may share in the distribution of any community property in the estate.

Nevada. In Nevada, prenuptial creditors may reach the debtor spouses separate property and that spouses interest in the community property. n46 It is unsettled whether Nevada follows the community debt doctrine; n47 accordingly, the property from which a postnuptial separate creditor may satisfy his claim remains unresolved. n48 However, it would seem illogical for Nevada law to grant prenuptial creditors (separate by definition) a right to recovery from the community property, but deny that same right to postnuptial separate creditors. In any event, all other creditors of either spouse hold community claims.

New Mexico. In the area of creditors rights, New Mexico distinguishes between community and separate debts n49 by providing an elaborate marshaling scheme which, in the extreme, limits separate creditors to all of a spouses separate property and one-half of the community property. n50 Community creditors may reach the debtors separate property and all of the community property, but may not reach the other spouses separate property unless the other spouse is jointly and severally liable on the claim. n51 Because separate creditors do have some access to the community property, they will hold community claims in New Mexico. Accordingly, all creditors in New Mexico will have the status of community claim holders under the Code. n52 chargeable to community property. n53 Prenuptial debts may be charged against the community property after all postnuptial obligations have been satisfied. n54 Therefore, all creditors will have the status of community claim holders.

Puerto Rico. Under Puerto Rico law, all debts and obligations incurred during the marriage by either spouse are

Texas. Texas, like California, does not adhere to the community debt doctrine. Creditors of a spouse may reach that spouses separate property, the community property under that spouses sole management and control, and the community property under joint management and control, whether or not the debt was incurred in community or separate activities, or before or after marriage. n55 Postnuptial tort creditors may, in addition, reach the community property under the sole management and control of the nondebtor spouse. n56 Thus, all Texas creditors will hold community claims. n57 Postnuptial tort creditors of the debtor will also hold a claim of a nature sufficient to pull additional community property assets into the estate under section 541(a)(2)(B). n58

Washington. Washington distinguishes between community debts and separate debts. n59 Prenuptial contract creditors may reach only the separate property of the debtor and, provided the claim is reduced to judgment within three years of the marriage, the community earnings and accumulations of the debtor. n60 Other separate contract creditors are limited to the separate property of the debtor. n61 Tort creditors of one spouse may reach that spouses separate property and that spouses share of the community property, regardless of whether the tort occurred before or during the marriage. n62 Community creditors may reach all community property as well as the separate property of the contracting spouse. n63 Thus, community creditors will hold community claims under the Code, as will prenuptial contract creditors who reduce their claims to judgment within three years of the marriage and tort creditors of either spouse. All other creditors will not hold community claims in cases filed under the Code where Washington community property law applies.

Wisconsin. In Wisconsin, all creditors have the status of community claim holders, because all creditors have some access under state law to marital property of the type which would pass to the estate under section 541(a)(2). n64 For example, claims which were incurred in the interest of the marriage or the family may be satisfied from the entirety of the marital property, n65 as may a support obligation. n66 Furthermore, even premarital obligations may be satisfied from marital property that would have been available had the marriage not taken place. n67 This includes the wages of the debtor spouse, which constitute marital property n68 and thus pass to the estate under section 541(a)(2); accordingly, claims satisfiable therefrom are community claims. Finally, all other claims are, at a minimum, satisfiable from a spouses interest in marital property. n69 Accordingly, all creditors of either spouse in Wisconsin hold community claims.

For further discussion of the Code chapter 101, see Collier on Bankruptcy, chs. 101 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. The term community property is not defined in the Code, but clearly is used as a term of art referring to that certain means of holding marital property in those states which have adopted a community property system. Johnson v. Fisher (In re Fisher), 67 B.R. 666, 668 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986) (citing Treatise). But see In re Brollier, 30 C.B.C.2d 1337, 165 B.R. 286 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1994). The Brollier decision, arising in a noncommunity property jurisdiction, inappropriately stretches the limits of the plain meaning doctrine.

n2

2. See generally Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.05[2] (Matthew Bender); Ak. Stat. §§ 34.77.01034.77.195; Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 25-21125-215; Cal. Fam. Code §§ 900-1103; Idaho Code §§ 32-90132-912; La. Civ. Code. arts. 23252369; Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 123.010123.250; N.M. Stat. Ann §§ 40-3-6 to 40-3-17; 31 L.P.R.A. § 3661; Tex. Fam. Code Ann. §§ 3.0013.006, 3.1013.104, Tex. Fam. Code 3.2013.203; Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 26.16.030; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 766.001766.97.

n3 3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.13[1][5].

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.10.

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 342.

n6

6. See 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(3).

n7

7. See 11 U.S.C. § 726(c).

n8

8. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 309 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1978); In re Whitus, 240 B.R. 705, 707 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1999). For a discussion of the nature of a community claim when domestic partner community property has passed to the estate, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.07[3][c] and 541.13[5].

n9 9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 726.04726.05.

n10

10. The language whether or not there is any such property at the time of the commencement of the case in section 101(7) will be meaningless in almost all cases. If no community property has passed to the estate, section 726(c) does not direct that sub-estates be established for distribution purposes. Therefore, the distribution would take place under sections 726(a) and (b), thus excluding the other spouses creditors. See Collier on Bankruptcy 726.04726.05. The language is meaningful, however, if voidable transfers retain their separate or community property nature. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 726.05[4]. The language is also meaningful when chapter 13 earnings are included as assets of the estate. In re Whitus, 240 B.R. 705, 707 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1999); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1306.02[3].

n11

11. Grimm v. Grimm (In re Grimm), 18 C.B.C.2d 590, 82 B.R. 989 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1988) (quoting Treatise). The definition of creditor includes an entity that has a community claim. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101(10).

n12 12. FDIC v. Soderling (In re Soderling), 998 F.2d 730, 733 (9th Cir. 1993), quoting A. Pedlar, Community Property and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 11 St. Marys L.J. 349, 351-52 (1979). In addition to the foregoing, there may be instances where the former spouses are no longer married but their community property had not been divided as of the date of the petition. In such instances, creditors of the debtors former spouse would also hold community claims. See McCoy v. Bank of America, (In re McCoy), 22 C.B.C.2d 1343, 111 B.R. 276 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1990).

n13 13. See FDIC v. Soderling (In re Soderling), 998 F.2d 730, 733 (9th Cir. 1993); Case v. Maready (In re Maready), 122 B.R. 378, 381 n.2 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1991); Grimm v. Grimm (In re Grimm), 18 C.B.C.2d 590, 82 B.R. 989 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1988).

n14

14. See generally Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][a][k], 4.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

n15 15. Teel v. Teel (In re Teel), 34 B.R. 762 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1983); In re Ann Arbor Brewing Co., 110 F. Supp. 111, 113-14 (E.D. Mich. 1951); Merlino v. Weinstein (In re Merlino), 62 B.R. 836 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 1986); In re Hendrick, 45 B.R. 976 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1985). See generally U.S. Const. Art. I, § 8, cl 4

(empowering Congress to establish bankruptcy laws); U.S. Const. Art. VI, cl 2 (supremacy clause); Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

n16 16. In re Whitus, 240 B.R. 705, 707 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1999).

n17

17. See, e.g., California, where prenuptial creditors of one spouse may not reach the community property wages of the other spouse, Cal. Fam. Code § 911(a), and New Mexico, where creditors of one spouse may reach one-half of the community property, N.M. Stat. Ann. § 40-3-10 (1994).

n18 18. See, e.g., California, where a tort creditor whose claim is not based upon an act or omission which occurred while the spouse was performing an activity for the benefit of the community must first seek satisfaction from separate property. Cal. Fam. Code § 1000 (West).

n19

19. See La. Civ. Code. arts. 2358 -- 2367. Such reimbursement rights would, of course, be discharged in bankruptcy.

n20

20. In re Whitus, 240 B.R. 705, 707 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1999).

n21

21. See In re Sweitzer, 111 B.R. 792, 800 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1990); Grimm v. Grimm (In re Grimm), 18 C.B.C.2d 590, 82 B.R. 989 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1988). But see Swink v. Sunwest Banks (In re Fingado), 113 B.R. 37, 41-42 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1990), aff'd, 995 F.2d 175 (10th Cir. 1993), wherein the court, in dictum, stated that only one half of the community property would be available for distribution to the holder of a separate debt against the debtor. This statement misinterprets the language of section 101(7), which bestows community claim status upon any claim for which any community property would be liable, and section 726(c)(2)(A) and (D), which distributes all community property in the estate to holders of community claims. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 726.05.

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 726.05.

n23

23. See Ak. Code Ann. §§ 34.77.030, 34.77.090.

n24

24. See Ak. Code Ann. § 34.77.070(k).

n25

25. See Ak. Code Ann. § 34.77.070(j).

n26

26. See Ak. Code Ann. § 34.77.070(b).

n27

27. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][b] (Matthew Bender); Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-215(B).

n28

28. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-215(B); GAF Corp. v. Diamond Carpet Corp., 117 Ariz. 297, 572 P.2d 125 (Ct. App. 1977).

n29

29. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-215(A); Kosac v. Clark (In re Clark), 179 B.R. 898 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1995). Intentional torts that are committed for the benefit of the community constitute community claims under Arizona law. Taylor Freezer Sales v. Oliphant (In re Oliphant), 221 B.R. 506 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1998).

n30

30. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 25-215(D).

n31

31. California Community Property, 4.014.11 (Matthew Bender); Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][c] (Matthew Bender).

n32

32. Grolemund v. Cafferata, 17 Cal.2d 679, 111 P.2d 641, cert. denied, 314 U.S. 612, 62 S. Ct. 87, 86 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1941); Wilson v. Wilson, 33 Cal.2d 107, 110, 199 P.2d 671, 673 (1948).

n33

33. Cal. Fam. Code § 910(a); Robertson v. Willis, 77 Cal. App. 3d 358, 143 Cal. Rptr. 523 (1978). The one exception to this rule arises under Cal. Fam. Code § 910(b) which provides that debts incurred while the spouses are living separate and apart prior to a judgment for dissolution of marriage or a judgment for legal separation may not be satisfied from community property. See McCoy v. Bank of America (In re McCoy), 22 C.B.C.2d 1343, 111 B.R. 276 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1990). As a result, such obligations should be treated in a manner similar to separate debts under Washington law.

n34

34. Cal. Fam. Code § 911(a).

n35

35. Cal. Fam. Code § 1000.

n36

36. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.07[2].

n37

37. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][b] (Matthew Bender). Debts incurred after legal separation may be enforced only against the debtor spouses property, including any community property awarded to the debtor spouse as part of a dissolution of a marriage.

n38

38. FDIC v. Soderling (In re Soderling), 998 F.2d 730 (9th Cir. 1993).

n39

39. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.13[5]. However, if a court holds that domestic partner community property is not section 541(a)(2) property, but rather passes to the estate under section 541(a), then the creditors of the nondebtor domestic partner will not hold community claims. In such circumstance, their entitlement, if any, to share in a distribution of domestic partner community property will be based on the courts willingness and ability to fashion an equitable remedy. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 726.04.

n40

40. See Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13[5] and 726.04.

n41

41. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][d] (Matthew Bender); Idaho Code § 32-912; In re Hicks, 300 B.R. 372, 376 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2003); see also Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co. v. Holley, 111 Idaho 349, 723 P.2d 893 (1986).

n42

42. Williams v. Paxton, 98 Idaho 155, 559 P.2d 1123, affd on reh'g (1977); Gustin v. Byam, 41 Idaho 538, 240 P. 600 (1925); Holt v. Empey, 32 Idaho 106, 110, 178 P. 703, 704 (1919).

n43

43. In re Acequia, Inc., 34 F.3d 800, 31 C.B.C.2d 1197 (9th Cir. 1994); Amato v. United States, 94 F. Supp. 2d 1081 (D. Idaho 1999); In re Martell, 349 B.R. 233 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2005); In re Hicks, 300 B.R. 372, 376 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2003); In re Hegg, 239 B.R. 833 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1999); In re Kido, 142 B.R. 924 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1992); Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co. v. Holley, 111 Idaho 349, 723 P.2d 893 (1986); Crapo, Equal Management of Community Property: Creditors Rights, 13 Idaho L. Rev. 177 (1977).

n44

44. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][e] (Matthew Bender); La. Civ. Code. arts. 2358 -- 2369 (1985).

n45

45. La. Civ. Code art. 2345 (1985); Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Kemp, 766 F. Supp. 511, 517 (E.D. La. 1991).

n46

46. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code 4.03[4][f] (Matthew Bender); Nev. Rev. Stat. § 123.050.

n47

47. In Randono v. Turk, 86 Nev. 123, 466 P.2d 218 (1970), it was held that community property was liable for the separate debts of the husband because he could unilaterally give the property away and because the property was liable for such debts upon his death under former Nev. Rev. Stat. § 123.260 (1973). 86 Nev. 123, 132, 466 P.2d 218, 224. Neither of these bases for finding such liability now exist. Section 123.260 was repealed by the amendments to the community property laws, ch. 393, § 18 [May 10, 1975], Nev. Stat. 562, and neither spouse may make a gift of the community property without the consent of the other, Nev. Rev. Stat. § 123.230(2) (2000). Furthermore, more recent Nevada decisions refer to community debts and separate debts, which suggests that Nevada may follow the community debt doctrine. See Schmanski v. Schmanski, 115 Nev. 247, 984 P.2d 752 (1999); Norwest Fin. v. Lawver, 109 Nev. 242, 849 P.2d 324 (1993). But see Jones v. Swanson, 341 F.3d 723, 738 n.6 (8th Cir. 2003) (citing Randono v. Turk for the proposition that under Nevada law, community property is subject to a spouses debt irrespective of whether both spouses were a party to the action).

n48

48. In Nevada, a prenuptial creditor (one type of separate creditor) may reach a portion of the community property. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 123.050 (2000).

n49

49. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][g] (Matthew Bender); N.M. Stat. Ann. 40-3-9; In re Strickland, 28 C.B.C.2d 1352, 153 B.R. 909 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1993).

n50

50. N.M. Stat. Ann. § 40-3-10.

n51

51. N.M. Stat. Ann. § 40-3-11; In re Victor, 341 B.R. 775, 781 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2006).

n52

52. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.07[2].

n53

53. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code 4.03[4][k] (Matthew Bender); 31 L.P.R.A. § 3661(1) (2001); In re Lopez Melendez, 145 B.R. 740, 742 (D.P.R. 1992); Santiago v. Sepulveda Figueras (In re Sepulveda Figueras), 193 B.R. 118 (Bankr. D.P.R. 1996); In re Lang, 191 B.R. 268 (Bankr. D.P.R. 1995) (citing Treatise).

n54

54. See 31 L.P.R.A. § 3663 (2001).

n55

55. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][h] (Matthew Bender); Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 3.202; In re Rodriguez, 353 B.R. 144 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2006); In re Nahat, 278 B.R.

108 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2002); In re Melenzyer, 140 B.R. 143, 148 n.16 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1992). Separate property of the other spouse is not liable. Texas Com. Bank Natl Assn v. Tripp, 516 S.W.2d 256, 259 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974).

n56

56. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. §§3.202(b), (d).

n57

57. In re Texas Extrusion Corp., 68 B.R. 712 (N.D. Tex. 1986), affd, 836 F.2d 217 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 926, 109 S. Ct. 311, 102 L. Ed. 2d 330 (1988). Accordingly, the claim of the Internal Revenue Service against a nondebtor spouse is a community claim in the debtor spouses case. In re Whitus, 240 B.R. 705, 708 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1999).

n58

58. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.13 and 726.05.

n59

59. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][i] (Matthew Bender); Seattle First Natl Bank v. Marusic (In re Marusic), 27 C.B.C.2d 306, 139 B.R. 727 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 1992).

n60

60. Wash. Rev. Code § 26.16.200. When bankruptcy is within three years of marriage, prenuptial creditors should be accorded the status of a holder of a community claim. See Watters v. Doud, 92 Wash.2d 317, 596 P.2d 280 (1979).

n61

61. Such separate property creditors of the debtor are creditors under section 101(10), but do not hold community claims. In re Merlino, 62 B.R. 836, 838 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 1986).

n62

62. See Haley v. Highland, 142 Wash.2d 135, 12 P.3d 119 (2000); Keene v. Edie, 131 Wash.2d 822, 935 P.2d 588 (1997); deElche v. Jacobsen, 95 Wash.2d 237, 622 P.2d 835 (1980).

n63

63. It is assumed that the former rights of the husbands creditors will now be extended to include creditors of the wife as well. For an informative overview of creditors remedies against community property under the former Washington community property law, see National Bank of Commerce v. Green, 1 Wash. App. 713, 463 P.2d 187 (1969). See also Smyser v. Smyser, 17 Wash.2d 301, 135 P.2d 455, 457 (1943).

n64

64. See Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 4.03[4][j] (Matthew Bender); In re Passmore, 29 C.B.C.2d 523, 156 B.R. 595 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1993); In re Sweitzer, 111 B.R. 792 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1990).

n65 65. Wis. Stat. § 766.55(2)(b). It is the intent of the legislature that marital is a form of community property. Wis. Stat. Ann. § 766.001(2) (1993).

n66

66. Wis. Stat. § 766.55(2)(a).

n67

67. Wis. Stat. § 766.55(2)(c).

n68

68. Wis. Stat. § 766.31(4); In re Pfalzgraf, 236 B.R. 390 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1999); In re Passmore, 29 C.B.C.2d 523, 156 B.R. 595 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1993).

n69 69. Wis. Stat. § 766.55(2)(d); Grimm v. Grimm (In re Grimm), 18 C.B.C.2d 590, 592-94, 82 B.R. 989, 990-92 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1988). Marital property has the same essential characteristics under Wisconsin law as community property under the Code and will be treated in a similar fashion. 18 C.B.C.2d 590, 594 n.3, 82 B.R. 989, 991 n.3; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 766.001(2).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

117 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of Transfer Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 1396

Collier on the Definition of Transfer Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

December 7, 2007

SUMMARY: "Transfer" is broadly defined in the Bankruptcy Code. It includes indirect as well as direct methods of property changing hands. This Emerging Issues Analysis from Collier on Bankruptcy explains how the term "transfer" applies to the transfer of any interest in property, such as the retention of title as a security interest, and discusses the types of property interests that may be transferred, such as leveraged buyout transactions.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Pursuant to section 101(54), the term transfer means

- (A) the creation of a lien;
- (B) the retention of title as a security interest;
- (C) the foreclosure of a debtor's equity of redemption; or
- (D) each mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with
 - (i) property; or
 - (ii) an interest in property. n1

Transfer is broadly defined in the Code. n2 It includes indirect as well as direct methods of property changing hands. It includes conditional as well as absolute methods. And it includes involuntary as well as voluntary methods. However, the legislative history indicates that the term does not include setoffs. n3 The term appears in many Code provisions, including several of the trustee's avoiding powers. n4

Interest in Property. The term transfer applies not simply to the transfer of property in the traditional sense, but to the transfer of any interest in property. A transfer may be of specific limited rights in property, leaving the transferor with some other interest in the same property. The definition gives several examples that make this clear.

The retention of title as a security interest is a transfer, just as the granting of a lien would be a transfer. n5 The definition of transfer was amended in 2005 n6 to clarify this issue by specifically including creation of a lien as an example of a transfer. The legislative history states that this amendment, along with an amendment to section 549(c) responds to a Ninth Circuit decision n7 in which two purchase money lenders (without knowledge that the debtor had recently filed an undisclosed chapter 11 case that was subsequently converted to chapter 7), funded the debtors acquisition of an apartment complex and recorded their purchase-money deed of trust immediately following recordation of the deed to the debtors. n8 The amendment makes clear that the circuit court erred in holding that the creation of a lien was not a transfer.

Similarly, the foreclosure of a debtor's equity of redemption is a separate transfer from the initial transfer of a mortgage lien. At the time of the original mortgage a lien on the property is transferred, but the debtor retains other rights, including the right to possession and the right to remove the lien by paying the underlying debt. When there is foreclosure on the lien, the debtor loses some or all of these rights, which are thus transferred separately from the interests transferred by the original lien, often in several stages.

Thus, in applying the section 101(54) definition of transfer to a tax sale under state law, several distinct transfers may occur: first, when the tax lien attaches to the debtor's property upon the debtor's failure to pay property taxes; second, when the property is sold at a tax sale and the tax sale purchaser acquires a lien as represented by a certificate of purchase; and third, when the tax deed itself is issued to the tax sale purchaser upon perfection of the deed and the expiration of the applicable redemption period. n9 Although state laws regarding foreclosure and tax sales vary, virtually all of them have a number of steps, with a transfer of certain property interests at each step.

Nonbankruptcy law concerning the existence of property interests similarly determines when or if a transfer of such interests takes place. Thus, in In re Frierdich, n10 the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held that a purported transfer of stock to the debtor's spouse in a prenuptial agreement had not been effectuated until well after the agreement, when the steps necessary to transfer stock under Illinois law had been taken.

Types of Property Interests That May Be Transferred. The definition of transfer is not restricted as to the time or the identity of the party making the transfer. n11 The language of section 101(54) is sufficiently broad to encompass a leveraged buyout transaction. n12 A creditors prepetition termination of an executory agreement may constitute a transfer. n13 The Bankruptcy Codes definition of transfer as used when determining whether the elements of a fraudulent transfer are present, is sufficiently broad to include within its scope a transfer that results in modification of form or value of property transferred. n14 A deposit into a bank account may be a transfer under the Code. n15 A forfeiture of an equity interest under a real estate contract constitutes a transfer. n16 Although the Bankruptcy Code does not specifically mention forfeiture of an interest under a land sales contract in the definition of transfer, the definition is broad enough and, particularly in light of its later clarifying amendment, should be interpreted to include such a forfeiture. n17 However, for the debtor to transfer property, the debtor must first have an interest in that property. The Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held, in In re Atchison n18 that under Illinois law, a debtor who disclaimed an inheritance under a will never had a property interest in that inheritance because the disclaimer operated to prevent her from ever acquiring an interest in the property of her fathers estate. The Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit came to the same conclusion, relying on a Missouri statute providing that a disclaimer of inheritance relates back for all purposes to the effective date of the transfer and is not subject to the claims of any creditor of the disclaimant. n19

Time of Transfer by Check. The United States Supreme Court in Barnhill v. Johnson n20 held that for the purposes of payment by ordinary check, a transfer, as defined in section 101, occurred on the date of honor, in the determination as to whether such transfer fell within the 90-day preference period under section 547(b). The debtor had made payment for a bona fide debt; the check was delivered on November 18 and honored by the drawee bank on November 20. The payee contended that the transfer had occurred on November 18, the date of delivery, and that it therefore fell on the ninety-second day before the petition was filed, outside the 90 day preference period. The Court disagreed, finding that when the debtor had directed the drawee bank to honor the check and the bank had done so (on the ninetieth day before filing), the debtor implemented a mode, direct or indirect of disposing of property or an interest in property, and a transfer occurred on that later date as defined by section 101. Until the bank paid the check, the debtors interest in the checking account could have been otherwise disposed of, e.g., by a writ of garnishment. n21 The Court observed that although federal law controlled the definition of a transfer, state law provided, in the absence of controlling federal law, the construction of parting with property or with an interest in property appearing in the section 101 definition of transfer. Under the Uniform Commercial Code, receipt of the check gave the recipient no right in the funds held by the bank on the drawer's account. The Court stressed that, until the moment of honor, the debtor had retained full control over the disposition of the account, the account had remained subject to a variety of actions (such as a lien attachment) by third parties and the debtor had retained the ability to stop payment on the check until the very last moment.

Comparison to Former Bankruptcy Act. The Codes definition of transfer is phrased in broad but simpler language than in Section 1(30) of the former Bankruptcy Act, which enumerated various types of transfers. However, even though the definition in this paragraph is greatly simplified in wording, the impact is just as broad in scope. For example, Section 1(30) of the former Act began with the phrase Transfer shall include the sale and every other and different mode whereas this paragraph begins simply, Transfer means every mode Although the definition in Section 1(30) of the Act used the introductory phrase includes rather than means as it appears now in the Code, the effect is the same. Even though the use of the term includes is generally construed more liberally than means, the word every extinguishes any would-be limiting influence.

The word transfer also had a most comprehensive meaning under the former Act, and even under the former more restricted clause, had been construed to include every method of disposing of or parting with property or its possession. In Pirie v. Chicago, Title & Trust Co., n22 the Court, holding that payment of money was a transfer of property, stated:

Transfer is defined to be not only the sale of property, but every other mode of disposing or parting with property. All technicality and narrowness of meaning is precluded. The word is used in its most comprehensive sense, and is intended to include every means and manner by which property can pass from the ownership and possession of another, and by which the result forbidden by the statute may be accomplished n23

For further discussion of the definition of transfer under the Bankruptcy Code, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 101(54).

n2

2. See, e.g., In re Connor, 733 F.2d 1560 (11th Cir. 1984); Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Lozinski (In re High Strength Steel, Inc.), 269 B.R. 560 (Bankr. D. Del. 2001) (reconciliation of accounts that eliminated debtors claims against insiders was a transfer); In re Lemley Estate Bus. Trust, 65 B.R. 185 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1986) (granting of security interests that attach to after-acquired crops is transfer of interests in property even though there was no actual transfer of title; transfers of possession, custody or control constitute transfers of interests in property); Geekie v. Watson (In re Watson), 15 C.B.C.2d 688, 65 B.R. 9 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1986) (debtors filing of a disclaimer to the proceeds of a life insurance policy constitutes a postpetition transfer of property of the estate).

n3

3. In re Mass. Gas & Electric Light Supply Co., Inc., 200 B.R. 471 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996) (citing 124 Cong. Rec. H11,090 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978) (remarks of Rep. Edwards); 124 Cong. Rec. S17,407 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978) (remarks of Sen. DeConcini)).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. §§ 544, 547, 549.

n5

5. But see In re McConville, 110 F.3d 47, 37 C.B.C.2d 1224 (9th Cir. 1997) (erroneously holding that creation of a lien is not a transfer).

n6

6. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1201(6) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n7

7. In re McConville, 110 F.3d 47, 37 C.B.C.2d 1224 (9th Cir. 1997).

n8

8. H.R. Rep. No.31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 141 (2005).

n9

9. In re McKeever, 25 C.B.C.2d 1260, 132 B.R. 996 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n10

10. 294 F.3d 864 (7th Cir. 2002).

n11

11. Hill v. Hill Dev. Co., Ltd. (In re Hill), 265 B.R. 296 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2001) (withdrawal of partnership wholly owned by debtor from valuable position as general partner in another partnership was a transfer); In re Hill, 29 C.B.C.2d 637, 156 B.R. 998 (Bankr. E.D. Ill. 1993).

n12

12. Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Metro Communications, Inc., 945 F.2d 635, 25 C.B.C.2d 1064 (3d Cir. 1991).

n13

13. In re Metro Water and Coffee Servs., Inc., 29 C.B.C.2d 842, 157 B.R. 742 (W.D.N.Y. 1993).

n14

14. See In re Oliver, 11 C.B.C.2d 972, 44 B.R. 989 (D. Mass. 1984) (a transfer occurred when the debtor and his wife changed their old common law tenancy by the entirety into one governed by a new statute under which the debtor gave up considerable interest in property in favor of his wife); In re Richmond Produce Co., Inc., 151 B.R. 1012 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1993).

n15 15. In re Prescott, 805 F.2d 719 (7th Cir. 1986); see also In re Davidson, 30 C.B.C.2d 1676, 164 B.R. 782 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994) (Congress intended that the deposit of funds into a bank account or the purchase of an annuity constitute transfers for purposes of section 101(54)); In re Clearwater Discount Marine, Inc., 150

B.R. 74 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1993) (bank's application of moneys on deposit in the debtor in possessions account to debt owed prepetition by debtor constituted transfer, for the purpose of determining whether avoidable transfer occurred since the debtor no longer had right to withdraw balance on account after the bank froze and applied balance). But see In re Consolidated Pioneer Mortgage Entities, 211 B.R. 704 (S.D. Cal. 1997) (customers bank deposits into its own unrestricted checking account are not transfers).

n16 16. In re Veritto, 26 C.B.C.2d 75, 131 B.R. 732 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1991).

n17

17. In re Vermillion, 176 B.R. 563 (Bankr. D. Or. 1994); see also First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of Bismarck v. Hulm (In re Hulm), 738 F.2d 323, 11 C.B.C.2d 152 (8th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 990, 105 S. Ct. 398, 83 L. Ed. 2d 331 (1985) (foreclosure sale subject to redemption under a state statute was a transfer of the debtor's interest); In re Messia, 184 B.R. 176 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1995) (chapter 7 debtors prepetition act of declaring homestead exemption according to Massachusetts law was not a transfer that the trustee could avoid, because there was no third party involved in declaration of homestead); Main v. Brim (In re Main), 75 B.R. 322 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1987) (warranty deed given by the chapter 11 debtor in lieu of foreclosure to the holder of a deed of trust was a transfer under the Code); In re Venice Western Motel Ltd., 67 B.R. 777 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1986) (execution of an agreement restructuring a mortgage to increase the interest rate and amount of principal debt was transfer because it reduced the debtor's interest in real property); Bundles v. Baker (In re Bundles), 15 C.B.C.2d 576, 61 B.R. 929 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1986); Verna v. Dorman (In re Verna), 14 C.B.C.2d 170, 58 B.R. 246 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1986) (when a third party purchases property at a foreclosure sale by the foreclosure of a security interest, such action constitutes the transfer of the debtor's equity of redemption).

n18

18. 925 F.2d 209 (7th Cir. 1991).

n19

19. Blackwell v. Lurie (In re Popkin & Stern), 223 F.3d 764 (8th Cir. 2000).

n20

20. 503 U.S. 393, 112 S. Ct. 1386, 118 L. Ed. 2d 39, 26 C.B.C.2d 323 (1992).

n21

21. 503 U.S. 393, 399-400, 112 S. Ct. 1386, 1390, 118 L. Ed. 2d 39, 46-47, 26 C.B.C.2d 323, 328 (1992).

n22

22. 182 U.S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171 (1901).

n23

23. Accord Coder v. Arts, 152 F. 943 (8th Cir. 1907), affd, 213 U.S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772 (1909); Irving Trust Co. v. Kaminsky, 22 F. Supp. 362 (S.D.N.Y. 1937); In re Muir, 212 F. 495 (D. Pa. 1914); see also Britt v. Damson, 334 F.2d 896 (9th Cir. 1964) (citing Treatise as to whether an award by a Washington court in a divorce proceeding of more than one-half of the community property to the debtor's wife was a transfer); Feldman v. Capitol Piece Dye Works, Inc., 185 F. Supp. 426 (S.D.N.Y. 1960), rev'd, 293 F.2d 889 (2d Cir. 1961); Note, 17 Stan. L. Rev. 1158 (1965); Note, 40 Wash. L. Rev. 210 (1965).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

118 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Effect of Fraud on Exemption Rights

2008 Emerging Issues 1377

Collier on the Effect of Fraud on Exemption Rights

By Collier

December 6, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the effect of fraud on exemption rights under the Bankruptcy Code, including topics such as fraudulent conduct precluding the claiming of rights under state exemption laws, the transfer or concealment of property avoided or recovered, the acquisition of property to secure exemptions, and the limitations on exempt homestead interest based on fraudulent conversion.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Varieties of Fraud

Fraud and its effect upon exemptions assume many shapes and forms. Frequently, the alleged fraudulent conduct occurred before the initiation of the case, such as false statements made to obtain credit, acquisition of property by questionable methods, business misleadingly done under an assumed name or the spiriting away of assets beyond hope of later recovery by the trustee. Sometimes the objectionable act arises in the bankruptcy proceeding itself, such as falsely swearing under oath on examination as to assets, placing erroneous value on articles claimed exempt in the schedules or failing to make a full and fair disclosure of all assets. n1 In other instances, the problem is whether an exemption will be allowed out of property that has been transferred or concealed and which has been recovered by the trustee. Often a combination of these various acts occurs, as when a merchant makes false statements to obtain credit, then fraudulently transfers the goods received to a third person, or when property is fraudulently acquired and concealment is attempted but discovered.

Moreover, the statutes governing exemptions frequently limit exemptions according to the type of property or its value. n2 The statutory recognition of exemptions is of little consolation to debtors whose property does not fall neatly into those categories. Even debtors who have property that falls within the exemption categories may also own significant property that does not fall into those categories. In either event, the debtor may be interested in converting property that does not meet the statutory standards for exemption into property that does meet those standards. At some point, the thin line between legitimate exemption planning and fraudulent conveyance may be crossed.

As to most of the actions mentioned, the Code is silent and the court must depend upon state law, if state exemptions have been claimed, to determine whether the conduct warrants denial of the exemptions. n3 However, this general position taken by the Code has been altered to some extent by the enactment of section 522(o) of the Bankruptcy

Code, added by the 2005 Act, n4 which considers as a question of federal law the effect of a fraud on a state homestead exemption. Also, in situations in which there has been avoidance or recovery under the Code of property previously transferred or concealed by the debtor, state law, if applicable, is superseded by the Code. For example, if an exemption is claimed as to recovered property, section 522(g) prevails even if the debtor has opted for the state exemptions. n5 Section 522(g) also limits a debtor's exemptions selected under the federal exemption scheme of section 522(d). In either circumstance, the debtor may not exempt property recovered by the trustee if the debtor had voluntarily transferred the property or if the debtor had concealed the recovered property. n6

The Code is otherwise silent as to the effect of fraud on exemptions, but section 523(a) provides that some types of fraud will be grounds for exceptions to discharge. n7 Additionally, a fraudulent transfer made within one year of the commencement of the case can be grounds for the denial of the debtor's discharge in a chapter 7 proceeding. n8

Fraudulent Conduct as Working a Forfeiture of Exemption Rights

Because a bankruptcy court proceeds on equitable principles and because the laws and decisions of the state creating an exemption are generally controlling when the federal laws are silent, the bankruptcy court must generally apply state law that would preclude a debtor guilty of fraudulent conduct from claiming rights under the state's exemption laws. n9

In many cases, the misconduct may consist of a fraudulent transfer or concealment of property avoided or recovered under section 522 of the Code. When this is so, subsection (g) should govern the allowance of exemptions claimed in the property. But when the property has been or cannot be recovered, the law of the state governing the exemption should control as to whether the conduct is such that exemptions will be denied as to the remaining property. An exception to this general proposition applies to conduct involving the fraudulent conversion within 10 years of the petition date of nonexempt assets into homestead property claimed as exempt under state law, in which federal law should control based on section 522(o), as added by the 2005 Act. n10

In some cases, the debtor may seek to amend the exemption claim to include property not originally listed in the schedule of assets filed at the commencement of the case. Generally, the courts will liberally allow the amendment of the schedules. n11 However, if the court finds that the debtor intentionally omitted the property from the original schedules, the court will deny the debtor the opportunity to amend the exemption claim to include the newly disclosed asset. n12

Transfer or Concealment of Property Avoided or Recovered

When the trustee recovers property fraudulently conveyed or concealed, the debtor may not claim an exemption in the recovered property. Indeed, the transfer need not be fraudulent to defeat the debtor's right to claim an exemption in such property. Section 522(g) provides that the transfer need only be voluntary.

Section 522(g) lists the various sections of the Code under which the trustee may recover transferred property. Thus, the trustee may recover property if a transfer is avoided, n13 or if the property is held by a custodian. n14 And under section 542, the trustee may also recover estate property held by an entity other than a custodian. n15 Additionally, the trustee may order any subordinated lien returned to the estate. n16 Ordinarily, under section 522(g), in such recoveries of property, a claim of exemption would attach. This is not the case, however, when the transfer by the debtor was voluntary. n17 The debtor's voluntary transfer arguably demonstrates that the debtor did not consider it essential to retain the property.

The payment by the debtor to a creditor to obtain the release or dismissal of a garnishment action or similar judicial collection effort clearly is not a voluntary transfer by the debtor. n18 This is not to say, however, that all payments made by debtors to avoid legal action are involuntary transfers. The settlement of a lawsuit through the execution of a note and mortgage to secure the note is a voluntary transfer. n19 On the other hand, granting a security interest in property is usually a voluntary act. Therefore, if the trustee recovers personal property from a creditor (because, perhaps, the creditor failed to perfect its interest in the property), the debtor ordinarily would not be allowed to claim the property as exempt under section 522(g). n20

Acquisition of Property to Secure Exemptions

The legislative history indicates that under section 522, the debtor may convert nonexempt property into exempt property immediately before the commencement of the case. n21 An eleventh hour acquisition of exempt property will not require disallowance of an exemption in the property. n22 Thus, in allowing an exemption in the debtor's interest in property as a tenant by the entirety or joint tenant, section 522(b)(3)(B) provides that such interest that the debtor had immediately before the commencement of the case may be exempted to the extent that such interest is exempt from process under applicable nonbankruptcy law. n23

Despite the Code drafters' generally favorable view of the exercise of a debtor's ability to exempt property from the claims of creditors, the existence of some exemption statutes that protect an unlimited amount of property has caused some problems. For example, a homestead exemption may be unlimited, n24 and insurance policies and other annuities may likewise have no cap on the amount that may be exempt. n25 The lack of any limit on the amount of exemptions in these categories makes the problem particularly acute. It also heightens the interest of creditors, trustees, and courts in evaluating the propriety of those exemption claims. In the end, such exemption provisions appear to have prompted Congress to impose certain limitations on their application as part of the 2005 Act. n26

The combination of a favorable climate and a liberal homestead exemption law has led some debtors to Florida. n27 Simply by relocating, the debtor may avoid both a cold climate and the heat generated by creditors asserting claims against the debtor. The bankruptcy courts faced a number of cases in which the debtor moved to Florida, bought a home with assets that were not exempt and, thereafter, sought bankruptcy relief. n28 Although Florida has opted out of the federal exemptions and the homestead exemption is entirely a creature of state law, some courts have denied the debtor's homestead exemption without reliance on Florida law. Instead, the courts have denied the debtor's exemption because the circumstances of the debtor's creation of the exemption indicated that the creation was accomplished through extrinsic fraud. That is, the debtor did more than simply convert nonexempt property into exempt property. Generally, the additional activity by the debtor includes evidence suggesting that the debtor planned the transaction as a response to particular creditor collection efforts.

In re Coplan n29 exemplifies the issues presented in these cases. The debtors owned and operated a retail appliance store in Wisconsin, but the business experienced financial setbacks. The debtors decided to leave Wisconsin and relocate in Florida to pursue other work there, even though job offers were extended to the debtor in Wisconsin. The debtors moved to Florida and faced an extended period of unemployment or underemployment. When they moved to Florida, the debtors used the proceeds from the sale of their Wisconsin residence to entirely fund the purchase of the new residence for $228,000. The debtors also purchased annuities with other funds. Later, the primary lender to the debtors' former business obtained a judgment on a personal guaranty executed by the debtors. Just slightly more than one year after moving to Florida, the debtors filed a chapter 7 petition.

The court found that the circumstances of the move from Wisconsin to Florida enabled the debtors to increase their available homestead exemption from $40,000 to the unlimited amount permitted in Florida. n30 The court also found that the debtors' assertion that the move was intended to improve their job prospects was not credible. n31 The court characterized the move from Wisconsin as being made for the purpose of obtaining the more generous homestead exemption. n32 The sale of the home was made very quickly and at a price that facilitated the expeditious move to Florida. The debtors moved to Florida without job prospects, having turned down job offers in Wisconsin. All of this proved too much for the court, and the debtors' homestead exemption was denied to the extent that it exceeded $40,000, which would have been exempt had the debtors remained in Wisconsin and claimed the exemption under that state's law. n33

The analytical problem with the cases that deny the debtor's exemption in these matters is that they often reach this conclusion without regard to the state law that governs those exemptions. If the state law creating the exemption does not provide for its denial on these grounds, it is questionable that denial is proper. Other bankruptcy court decisions in Florida had recognized this, n34 and the issue concerning the effect of conversion with fraudulent intent of nonexempt assets into an exempt homestead has now been resolved by the Florida Supreme Court. n35 However, Congress carved out an exception to the relevancy of state law on the effect of such conversion with the enactment of section 522(o), added by the 2005 Act. n36 And even if the exemption is allowed, the very actions that bring the exemption into question may support the denial of the debtor's discharge, the dismissal of the case, or the recovery of the property transferred. n37

This problem is certainly not limited to Florida, and perhaps the most noted cases addressing the issue were decided by the Eighth Circuit in 1989. Hanson v. First National Bank n38 and Norwest Bank v. Tveten n39 were decided on the same day by the same panel of judges. The debtors in Hanson were farmers who had converted approximately $35,000 of nonexempt property into exempt property. The Eighth Circuit held that the lower courts' decisions rejecting a creditor's objection to the exemption were not clearly erroneous in finding that the debtors had no fraudulent intent in effecting the transfers. n40 The debtor in Tveten, however, was a physician who liquidated his nonexempt property and purchased approximately $700,000 worth of exempt annuities and life insurance policies. The Eighth Circuit held that the lower courts' denial of the debtor's discharge in this case also was not clearly erroneous. n41

These two cases could be distinguished on the grounds that Hanson involved an objection to the exemption, while Tveten concerned an objection to the debtor's discharge. This is a distinction without a difference in the cases, because in each case, the court of appeals was evaluating the decision of the courts below that the particular conduct of the debtors either did or did not demonstrate the debtors' fraudulent intent. Thus, the same question was presented in each case. This leaves the impression that the nature of the debtor's employment and the total value of the property in question are the distinguishing factors. In any event, these cases demonstrate the importance of the factual findings in the bankruptcy court. Reversal requires a finding by the appellate court that the lower court's ruling was clearly erroneous, a difficult burden for the appellant to carry.

In some cases, it is much easier to conclude that the actions of the debtor were sufficient to disentitle the debtor to an exemption. In re Smiley n42 provides such an example. The debtor did much more than just convert nonexempt property into exempt property. In fact, the debtor and his counsel affirmatively misled the creditors, thereby delaying their collection efforts and giving the debtor the opportunity to move to another state with a much more extensive homestead exemption. n43 The creditors responded by bringing an involuntary bankruptcy petition against the debtor, objecting to the exemption, and objecting to the debtor's discharge. The creditors were successful on all counts. n44 The exemption was denied under the applicable state law, while the Bankruptcy Code was applied in denying the debtor's discharge.

Even if the applicable state law would protect the debtor's exemption in such a case, however, the debtor's discharge may still be vulnerable. In First Texas Savings Association, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), n45 the debtor engaged in a lengthy and elaborate scheme to liquidate his nonexempt assets and pay down the debt secured by his home. Much of the property was sold for less than its full market value, but the debtor asserted that this was of no consequence because if he had got more for the property he simply would have applied those additional funds to the homestead debt. The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held that Texas law protected the debtor's homestead exemption. n46 It also held, however, that the transfers were fraudulent and supplied the grounds for the denial of the debtor's discharge. n47

These cases demonstrate the tension between the exemption laws and legal provisions addressing fraudulent transfers. n48 Furthermore, the potential for the denial of the debtor's discharge is a powerful incentive to tread carefully in this area. These matters should be decided according to applicable law. That is, the availability of an exemption claimed under state law should be evaluated under those provisions. The determination of a particular state that specific property may be claimed as exempt is entitled to be followed. So too is its law governing the effect of a fraudulent transfer on that exemption claim, except to the extent that the transfer involves a conversion of nonexempt property into homestead property. n49 As Reed demonstrates, a favorable decision on the availability of the exemption does not necessarily end the matter. n50 Attention must be paid to the possibility of an objection to the debtor's discharge as well. n51

Under the former Act, the mere conversion of nonexempt property into exempt property on the eve of bankruptcy was not in itself such fraud as would deprive the bankrupt of the right to exemptions. n52 In some jurisdictions, however, if it could be shown that there was fraudulent intent in the transaction, the exemption might have been refused. n53

The distinction as to whether there was fraudulent intent often depended on the facts of the particular case. For example, an exemption was disallowed when the debtor transferred property in violation of a court order. When, for example, the debtor had been ordered by the judge in a foreclosure proceeding not to dispose of any of his assets pending further hearing in that proceeding, and in violation of the order, the debtor sold his car and put $1,000 of the proceeds in a savings and loan association, exemption was denied. n54

Before the final enactment of the Code, it had been urged that such last minute conversions be disallowed. n55 The abuses that were perceived were what is often referred to as bankruptcy or exemption planning. Such planning involves the last minute acquisition of exempt property, and those who opposed the allowance of exemptions in such property felt that these exemptions were used to defeat the legitimate claims of creditors. Opposition was based on the expectations of creditors that a debtor's assets would be used to pay the debts arising from the credit that had been extended. The sudden conversion of such property that could be used to pay creditors' claims into exempt property was viewed, by many, to be fraudulent as to these creditors.

The Code adopts a position that existed in some jurisdictions under the Act, i.e., the conversion of property into exempt property without more, will not be treated as fraudulent. n56 This position will protect those who have only a small amount of assets. Such debtors would be possibly be left without even a minimal amount of assets after liquidation if their small amount of property was not converted into exempt property. Though some states are liberal in the exemptions that they allow, thus creating the possibility of abuse in bankruptcy planning, it must be remembered that many state laws as well as section 522(d) of the Code exempt only relatively modest amounts of property. The result that would obtain if debtors were not allowed to convert nonexempt property into exempt property would be extremely harsh in those jurisdictions. This is most relevant to the situation in which a state has affirmatively prohibited the availability of the federal exemption alternative n57 (section 522(d)) and the debtor has no choice but to apply the exemptions of an even less generous state statute.

Limitation on Exempt Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o)

Before the 2005 Act, the Code had been largely silent on the effect of fraud on state exemptions. Section 522 continues to adopt the position favorably viewed by the Code drafters that the mere conversion of nonexempt property into exempt property, without fraudulent intent, does not deprive the debtor of exemption rights in the converted property. n58 However, section 522(o), added by the 2005 Act, provides that if the conversion of nonexempt assets into homestead property is done with fraudulent intent, the debtor's claim of exemption may be challenged even though such conversion would not defeat the exemption under state law. n59

Section 522(o) provides that the value of the debtor's interest in certain homestead property that may be exempted shall be reduced to the extent that it is attributable to any property that the debtor could not exempt, and that had been disposed of within 10 years before the filing of the petition with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor. The action that may bring the debtor's exemption claim into question is the conversion through the sale, transfer or other disposition of nonexempt property into exempt homestead property with fraudulent intent. n60 If the property converted within the 10-year lookback period could be exempted under any applicable provision of section 522(b), there shall be no reduction in the debtor's exemptible homestead interest under this provision. n61

To be subject to limitation under section 522(o), the exemption must be claimed on property, similar to that described in section 522(d)(1), within the following categories:

- . real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;
- . a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;
- . a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor; or
- . real or personal property that the debtor or dependent of the debtor claims as a homestead. n62

Section 522(o) applies only when the debtor seeks to exempt an interest in homestead property under section 522(b)(3)(A) (formerly section 522(b)(2)(A)) by claiming exemptions under state law or local law. n63 The provision therefore does not restrict the ability of the debtor to exempt property under section 522(b)(2) by asserting the federal homestead exemption under section 522(d)(1), or to exempt an interest in property under section 522(b)(3)(B) (formerly section 522(b)(2)(B)) held as a tenant by the entirety or by joint tenancy to the extent that interest would have been exempt from process under nonbankruptcy law.

There are two different time periods that apply to the limitation in section 522(o). The first time frame deals with the debtor's intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor, and it is measured at the time of disposition of the nonexempt property. Section 522(o) requires that the disposition must occur within the 10-year period ending on the filing date of the petition.

The second time frame concerns the question of whether the debtor could exempt the converted assets. Although the time of disposition would seem to be the logical choice for determining the converted assets' nonexempt status, given the potential relevancy of this status to the debtor's fraudulent intent, the statute uses a different time frame. The language of section 522(o) requires the court to look at whether the converted property could be exempted if on such date the debtor had held the property so disposed of. n64 Since the phrase on such date must refer to the only other date specified in section 522(o), which is the date of the filing of the petition, it is the petition date that controls in determining whether the converted property could be exempted. Therefore, if the property converted within the 10-year period could be exempted under any applicable provision of section 522(b) at the time the petition is filed, the debtor's exemptible interest in the homestead should not be reduced under this provision.

Actual Intent to Defraud Required. Section 522(o) requires that the disposition of nonexempt assets must be done with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor. In light of Congress' adoption in section 522(o) of the identical intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor language found in section 727(a)(2), courts may look to case law under section 727(a)(2) for guidance in construing the requisite intent under section 522(o). n65 Thus, if interpreted in a similar manner, the debtor's exemptible interest in homestead property should not be reduced absent a specific intent on the part of the debtor to defraud a creditor, and this intent must involve actual rather than constructive intent. n66

Direct evidence of actual intent, however, is rarely exhibited in cases involving fraud. Thus, a party asserting an objection to the debtor's exemption under section 522(o) may attempt to prove actual fraud by relying upon circumstantial evidence, including the existence of any badges of fraud. n67 However, Congress did not expressly incorporate examples of the badges of fraud in section 522(o), as was done by the drafters of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. n68 Courts may nevertheless feel compelled to consider such circumstantial evidence in a manner similar to that under section 727(a)(2). n69

The particularly long 10-year lookback period under section 522(o), as compared to the 1-year period under section 727(a)(2), presents other evidentiary problems relating to the objecting parties' need to prove that the debtor's intent to defraud was contemporaneous with the disposition of nonexempt assets. In addition, it is questionable whether section 522(o) should be applicable if no creditor who may have been affected years earlier by a fraudulent conversion is a creditor of the debtor at the time the petition is filed. In view of the apparent purpose of section 522(o) to protect the ability of the defrauded creditors to recover on their claims, the trustee or other parties in interest should not prevail on an exemption objection under section 522(o) if the claims of the defrauded creditors have been satisfied prior to the bankruptcy proceeding.

Standard of Proof; Preponderance of the Evidence. In Grogan v. Garner, n70 the Supreme Court held that preponderance of the evidence is the appropriate standard of proof for determining exceptions to discharge based on fraud. Because there is nothing in the language of section 522(o) or its legislative history to suggest that Congress intended to require the more exacting clear-and-convincing standard, the preponderance of the evidence standard should apply in proceedings brought under section 522(o). n71 Application of this standard would permit the bankruptcy court to give collateral estoppel effect to elements of claims actually litigated in a prior proceeding that are identical to the elements of an objection under section 522(o).

For a complete discussion of Code section 522, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 522 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. In Bauer v. Iannacone (In re Bauer), 298 B.R. 353 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003), the debtors initially concealed the true value of their home by listing it on their bankruptcy schedules with a value of $80,000. Following the destruction of the property by fire, the debtors sought to amend their schedules to increase the home value to $203,000, and to claim a state homestead exemption of $200,000 in the insurance proceeds. In view of the debtors' bad faith attempt to amend their schedules only after the trustee had determined the true value of the property following the fire, the court disallowed the exemption even though the property could have been properly claimed as exempt. This activity can have even more dire consequences for the debtor than the denial of exemptions. In U.S. v. Allen, 13 F.3d 105 (4th Cir. 1993), the debtor was convicted of bankruptcy fraud, among other things, when he concealed assets and later sought to recover from insurance companies for the losses he suffered through theft of goods that he had not reported in his bankruptcy schedules. The debtor's attorney also may be subject to sanctions. In re Ridner, 102 B.R. 247 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1989) (debtor's attorney sanctioned under Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9011 for advising debtors to place unreasonably low value on personal property being claimed as exempt).

n2

2. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 522(d).

n3

3. In First Texas Sav. Ass'n, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), 700 F.2d 986, 8 C.B.C.2d 370 (5th Cir. 1983), the court of appeals stated that, while the scope of a debtor's claim for a state exemption is to be determined by state law, the Bankruptcy Code establishes separate standards for determining whether the debtor should be denied a discharge. See also In re Clemmer, 184 B.R. 935 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1995) (court applies state law to determine availability of exemption when trustee objects to exemption on the ground that prior to the commencement of the case the debtor had concealed the asset from a judgment creditor).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), adding 11 U.S.C. § 522(o), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see Limitation on Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o) infra.

n5

5. Section 522(g) provides generally that the debtor may not claim as exempt property recovered by the trustee if the debtor either had concealed the property or voluntarily transferred that property. 11 U.S.C. § 522(g). For example, in In re Rollins, 15 C.B.C.2d 1075, 63 B.R. 780 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1986), a debtor had voluntarily transferred insurance proceeds to a creditor. The court held that the debtor was not able to exempt any of the proceeds upon recovery by the trustee under section 547.

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.12[1] (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523 (Matthew Bender). However, exempt property is generally protected by section 522(c) after discharge and will not be subject to execution based on a prepetition claim that was not discharged because of fraud pursuant to section 523(a). This protection does not extend to certain claims for fraud that may be asserted by a federal depository institution's regulatory agency, 11 U.S.C. § 522(c)(3), or those based on a student loan, scholarship or grant obtained by fraud, 11 U.S.C. § 522(c)(4).

n8 8. 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2); see also First Texas Sav. Ass'n, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), 700 F.2d 986 (5th Cir. 1983).

n9

9. See, e.g., Jensen v. Dietz (In re Sholdan), 217 F.3d 1006 (8th Cir. 2000) (debtor may not claim homestead exemption under state law in property transferred with intent to defraud creditors).

n10

10. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see Limitation on Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o) infra.

n11

11. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1009(a) provides that the debtor may amend schedules as a matter of course at any time before the case is closed. See, e.g., Kaelin v. Bassett (In re Kaelin), 308 F.3d 885 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2002); Lucius v. McLemore, 741 F.2d 125 (6th Cir. 1984).

n12

12. See, e.g., In re Yonikus, 996 F.2d 866 (7th Cir. 1993) (court properly denied debtor's amendment to include workers compensation award filed more than six years after the commencement of the case and four months after revocation of the debtor's discharge although the personal injury action was filed just one month prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy case); Wood v. Premier Capital, Inc. (In re Wood), 291 B.R. 219 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2003) (amended exemption claim disallowed because debtor intentionally failed to disclose workers' compensation claim); In re St. Angelo, 189 B.R. 24 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1995) (motion to amend schedules and claim exemption denied when debtor fraudulently attempted to conceal personal injury cause of action).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 550.

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 543.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 542.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 510(c)(2).

n17

17. A deposit in a bank account of funds later recovered by the trustee is a voluntary transfer within the meaning of section 522(g). Redmond v. Tuttle (In re Tuttle), 5 C.B.C.2d 618, 15 B.R. 14 (Bankr. D. Kan.), aff'd, 5 C.B.C.2d 627 (D. Kan. 1981), aff'd, 698 F.2d 414, 8 C.B.C.2d 1183 (10th Cir. 1983). A debtor's satisfaction of a judgment lien does not constitute a voluntary transfer when he has no choice but to satisfy the lien. The debtor may use section 522(g)(1) to avoid this involuntary satisfaction of the lien that would have been avoidable under section 522(f)(1). Washkowiak v. Glenwood Medical Group (In re Washkowiak), 15 C.B.C.2d 206, 62 B.R. 884 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1986). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.12[1] (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. See, e.g., Via v. Colonial Amer. Nat'l Bank (In re Via), 107 B.R. 91 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1989); In re Taylor, 8 B.R. 578 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981).

n19

19. Terry v. Carter (In re Terry), 56 B.R. 538 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1986). Compare Berman v. Forti, 232 B.R. 653 (D. Md. 1999), aff'd, 203 F.3d 820 (4th Cir. 2000) (although debtors voluntarily entered into consent judgment to settle state court litigation, lien arising automatically by operation of law upon filing of judgment by creditor was involuntary).

n20

20. See, e.g., In re Millerburg, 61 B.R. 125 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1986); In re Dipalma, 24 B.R. 385 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1982). Similarly, the payment of an insurance premium as required by the terms of a mortgage is a voluntary transfer for section 522(g) purposes. In re Rollins, 63 B.R. 780 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1986).

n21

21. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 361 (1977), (the conversion of nonexempt property into exempt property is not per se fraudulent).

n22

22. In re Bowyer, 932 F.2d 1100 (5th Cir. 1991) (use of nonexempt savings to pay down home mortgage and increase equity in exempt homestead was permissible prebankruptcy planning); Williams v. Bradley (In re Bradley), 294 B.R. 64 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003) (conversion of nonexempt assets into exempt homestead was not fraudulent under state law). Nonexempt property cannot be changed to exempt property after the commencement of the case. Butz v. Blue (In re Blue), 3 C.B.C.2d 4, 5 B.R. 723 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1980); see also Alexander v. Jensen-Carter (In re Alexander), 236 F.3d 431 (8th Cir. 2001) (in case converted from chapter 13 to chapter 7, debtor's eligibility for homestead exemption determined as of date original chapter 13 petition filed).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(3)(B), formerly § 522(b)(2)(B), as redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 224 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n24

24. See, e.g., Fla. Const. art. 10, § 4; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 60-2301; Tex. Const. art. 16, §§ 50, 51.

n25

25. See, e.g., Minn. Stat. § 550.37(11) (benefits payable by a fraternal benefit association are exempt without limit as to their amount). The Minnesota Supreme Court has held that the unlimited exemption for these assets violates the Minnesota constitution. In re Tveten, 402 N.W.2d 551 (Minn. 1987).

n26

26. See 11 U.S.C. § 522(p), (q), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 308(2), 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.13 (Matthew Bender).

n27

27. Fla. Const. art 10, § 4(a)(1) provides that the debtor's homestead is exempt without any limit as to the value of the property.

n28

28. See, e.g., Crews v. First Colony Life Ins. Co. (In re Barker), 31 C.B.C.2d 483, 168 B.R. 773 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994); Ameritrust Nat'l Bank v. Davidson (In re Davidson), 30 C.B.C.2d 1676, 164 B.R. 782 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1994).

n29

29. 156 B.R. 88 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1993).

n30

30. 156 B.R. 88, 91.

n31

31. 156 B.R. 88, 91.

n32

32. 156 B.R. 88, 91.

n33

33. 156 B.R. 88, 92. This result would be achieved under the 2005 Act without consideration of the debtors' intent, as the debtors would not have been entitled to claim the Florida homestead exemption because their move to Florida occurred within 730 days of their bankruptcy filing. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(3)(A), formerly § 522(b)(2)(A), as amended and redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 224 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.06 (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See, e.g., Crews v. First Colony Ins. Co. (In re Barker), 31 C.B.C.2d 483, 168 B.R. 773 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994).

n35

35. Noting a split of authority among bankruptcy courts on the application of the Florida homestead exemption, the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit in Havoco of Am., Ltd. v. Hill, 197 F.3d 1135 (11th Cir. 1999) certified to the Supreme Court of Florida the question of whether a Florida homestead exemption can be challenged if a home is purchased with nonexempt assets with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. The Florida Supreme Court concluded that conversion of nonexempt assets into an exempt homestead with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors does not defeat the Florida homestead exemption because such a transfer is not one of the three exceptions provided for in the Florida Constitution. See Havoco of Am., Ltd. v. Hill, 790 So.2d 1018 (Fla. 2001). In accordance with the decision of the Florida Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit affirmed the allowance of the debtor's exemption. Havoco of America, Ltd. v. Hill, 255 F.3d 1321 (11th Cir. 2001). The decision in Havoco has been effectively overruled by the enactment of section 522(o), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment of Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005); see Limitation on Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o) infra.

n36

36. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see Limitation on Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o) infra.

n37

37. See, e.g., First Texas Sav. Ass'n, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), 700 F.2d 986, 8 C.B.C.2d 370 (5th Cir. 1983); Crews v. First Colony Life Ins. Co. (In re Barker), 31 C.B.C.2d 483, 488, 168 B.R. 773, 776 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994).

n38

38. 848 F.2d 866 (8th Cir. 1989).

n39

39. 848 F.2d 871 (8th Cir. 1989).

n40

40. 848 F.2d 866, 869.

n41

41. 848 F.2d 871, 875.

n42

42. 864 F.2d 562 (7th Cir. 1989).

n43

43. The debtor moved from Illinois to Kansas and claimed exemptions under the Kansas exemption provisions.

n44

44. 864 F.2d 562, 569.

n45

45. 700 F.2d 986 (5th Cir. 1983).

n46

46. 700 F.2d 986, 990.

n47

47. 700 F.2d 986, 992. If a court finds extraordinary prepetition payments made by a debtor to reduce or extinguish mortgages on an exempt homestead to be fraudulent, a trustee may also seek to recover such payments. The trustee also may seek to recover payments made by the debtor to reduce or extinguish mortgages on an exempt homestead. Since these payments would increase the equity in the residence, the trustee has a ready source of payment of any judgment that might be entered against the debtor in the case. See Shaia v. Meyer (In re Meyer), 206 B.R. 410 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997).

n48

48. See In re Sholdan, 217 F.3d 1006 (8th Cir. 2000) (badges of fraud approach may be used to infer fraudulent intent under Minnesota's Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, which disqualifies debtor from claiming homestead as exempt if assets are transferred to homestead with intent to defraud creditors).

n49

49. See 11 U.S.C. § 522(o), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see also Limitation on Homestead Interest Based on Fraudulent Conversion; § 522(o) infra.

n50

50. First Texas Sav. Ass'n, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), 700 F.2d 986 (5th Cir. 1983).

n51

51. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 727.02 (Matthew Bender), discussing the application of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2).

n52

52. Forsberg v. Security State Bank of Canova, 15 F.2d 499 (8th Cir. 1926); Crawford v. Sternberg, 220 F. 73 (8th Cir. 1915); see also In re Irvin, 120 F. 733 (8th Cir. 1941), aff'g In re Stone, 116 F. 35 (D. Ark. 1941).

n53

53. Fraudulent intent was found in In re Martin, 217 F. Supp. 937 (D. Or. 1963), where the court found that the debtor's conversion of cash into exempt property (a rifle) was done with fraudulent intent and action to retain an asset from the reach of his creditors. Similarly, in In re White, 221 F. Supp. 64 (N.D. Cal. 1963), the court found that the debtors who had acquired goods on credit in the operation of their store without intention to pay for the goods and had then put the proceeds from the sale of the goods into exempt property, did so with fraudulent intent. The exemptions were disallowed in both cases.

n54

54. See Mott v. Groves, 428 F.2d 1208 (9th Cir. 1920).

n55

55. Proposed Bankruptcy Act Revision; Hearings on H.R.31 and H.R.32 Before the Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights of the Committee on the Judiciary, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 1355 (1976) (statement of Hon. Arnold K. Phelps).

n56

56. See Ford v. Poston (In re Ford), 773 F.2d 52, 13 C.B.C.2d 632 (4th Cir. 1985), in which the court of appeals held that extrinsic evidence to indicate a fraudulent purpose is needed for an exemption to be subject to the fraudulent transfer provisions in section 727(a)(2)(A) and that the bankruptcy court's finding of intent to defraud was not clearly erroneous. See also First Texas Sav. Ass'n, Inc. v. Reed (In re Reed), 700 F.2d 986, 8 C.B.C.2d 370 (5th Cir. 1983) (rapid prebankruptcy conversion of nonexempt assets into exempt assets amply supported evidence of fraudulent intent).

n57

57. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n58

58. In re Agnew, 355 B.R. 276 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2006) (citing Treatise); see Acquisition of Property to Secure Exemptions supra.

n59

59. 11 U.S.C. § 522(o), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n60

60. In re Lyons, 355 B.R. 387, 390 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2006) (property was not disposed of by debtor's recording of homestead declaration and therefore section 522(o) was not applicable).

n61

61. In re Mathews, 360 B.R. 732 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2007) (section 522(o) is not applicable because debtor transferred exempt property into other exempt property).

n62

62. This final category is not provided for in section 522(d)(1) and is apparently intended to cover property that may be claimed as a homestead under state law that may not necessarily be used by the debtor as a residence.

n63

63. Although the limitation in section 522(o) more broadly applies for purposes of section 522(b)(3)(A), which would suggest that exemptions claimed under federal nonbankruptcy law would also be affected, homestead property is rarely, if ever, exempted under federal nonbankruptcy law.

n64

64. 11 U.S.C. § 522(o), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 308(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n65

65. See In re Addison, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 972 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. Mar. 30, 2007).

n66

66. In re Agnew, 355 B.R. 276 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2006) (debtor's acquisition of homestead property in exchange for transfer of nonexempt farm assets to mother's trust was done for legitimate estate planning purposes and not with intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 727.02[3][a] (Matthew Bender).

n67

67. See, e.g., Jensen v. Dietz (In re Sholdan), 217 F.3d 1006 (8th Cir. 2000) (badges of fraud approach to infer fraudulent intent used in denying debtor's exemption based on conversion of assets to homestead property with intent to defraud creditors); Murphey v. Crater (In re Crater), 286 B.R. 756, 766 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002) (finding that various badges of fraud must be intentionally indicative of fraudulent intent).

n68

68. Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act § 4.

n69

69. In re Sissom, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1683 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. May 11, 2007) (in applying section 522(o), court found that 11 of 13 badges of fraud under the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act and existing case law were present); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 727.02[3][b] (Matthew Bender). In In re Maronde, 332 B.R. 593, 600 (Bankr. D. Minn. 2005), the court relied upon developed Eighth Circuit case law under section 727(a)(2) and held that the debtor's sale of a nonexempt truck and trailer for the purpose of paying down an equity line of credit on the debtor's home before filing bankruptcy was done with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor, and subject to the limitation in section 522(o). The deciding factor upon which the court relied in inferring fraud was that the debtor had made an earlier failed attempt to pay down the equity line using cash advances on his credit cards.

n70

70. 498 U.S. 279, 111 S. Ct. 654, 112 L. Ed. 2d 755, 24 C.B.C.2d 1 (1991).

n71

71. In re Agnew, 355 B.R. 276 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2006) (objecting party has burden under section 522(o) to establish actual fraud by a preponderance of the evidence).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent

treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

119 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Discharge of Debts in a Chapter 11 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1378

Collier on Discharge of Debts in a Chapter 11 Case

By Collier

December 6, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the discharge of debts in a chapter 11 case, including topics such as discharge of the debts of a debtor that is not an individual, discharge of the debts of an individual debtor, enjoining the collection of nondischargeable debt, discharge in a liquidating chapter 11 case, waiver of discharge, and the reaffirmation of debts.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Discharge of Debts of a Debtor That Is Not an Individual

Nondischargeable Debts. Under the law before the enactment of the 2005 Act, n1 a corporation's discharge in a chapter 11 case was pervasive. n2 All debts, no matter how incurred, were discharged upon confirmation. n3 The 2005 Act added section 1141(d)(6) to the Bankruptcy Code, which makes certain debts owed to governmental units nondischargeable in a corporate (but not an individual or partnership) chapter 11 case. n4

Section 1141(d)(6) covers tax debts, n5 but it also covers other obligations to governmental unit and obligations owing to a private party who brings a successful qui tam action against the debtor.

Fraudulently Incurred Claims. The 2005 Act added an exception to corporate discharge by excepting from a corporation's n6 chapter 11 discharge any debt of a kind specified in paragraph (2)(A) or (2)(B) of section 523(a) that is owed to a domestic governmental unit." n7 Subsections 523(a)(2)(A) and (B) specify any debt to the extent obtained by false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud" or a false financial statement." n8 Thus, a corporation's debt to a domestic governmental unit, if incurred by false pretenses, a false representation or actual fraud or by use of a false financial statement is not dischargeable in a chapter 11 case.

An obvious candidate for a governmental unit's claim of nondischargeability is any government-sponsored loan program, such as a small business loan from or guaranteed by the Small Business Administration. Some other examples also come to mind. A governmental unit may seek nondischargeability of amounts owing under a government contract, if the governmental unit can argue that the debtor misrepresented either its financial condition or other ability to perform under the contract, and the government reasonably relied on the representation in awarding the contract. n9

Defense and other federal government contractors could be particularly affected by this provision. Medicare and Medicaid providers are other possible targets. To enforce this provision, the governmental unit will have to determine whether the debtor engaged in any misrepresentations, either on a financial statement or otherwise, in securing the loan or an extension of the loan, and the governmental unit must file a complaint objecting to dischargeability not later than 60 days following the first date set for the meeting of creditors held pursuant to § 341(a)" or within such later time as the court permits, if the request for a time extension is made before the expiration of the 60-day period. n10

Qui Tam Liabilities. The 2005 Act added another provision in the same section excepting from discharge in a corporate chapter 11 case any debt owed to a person as the result of an action filed under subchapter III of chapter 37 of title 31 or any similar State statute." n11 Subchapter III of chapter 37 of title 31 generally covers claims against the United States government. However, section 3730 permits a civil action, known as a qui tam action, by a private person in the name of the government to recover on behalf of the government any false claim that had been collected from the government. n12 Under section 3730, the person initiating the action is entitled to a portion of any recovery. n13 By the terms of section 1141(d)(6)(A), the portion owed to the private person is excepted from discharge in a corporate chapter 11 case. Because the language excepts from discharge only a debt owed to a person," the portion owed to the government is fully dischargeable as with any other claim. n14 Also nondischargeable are any debts owed to a person" under any similar State statute."

Nondischargeability of Certain Taxes. Following the same policy underlying nondischargeability of fraudulently incurred obligations to governmental units, the 2005 Act made nondischargeable in a corporate chapter 11 case a tax or customs duty with respect to which the debtor (i) made a fraudulent return; or (ii) willfully attempted in any manner to evade or to defeat such tax or such customs duty." n15 Before the 2005 amendments, such taxes were nondischargeable under section 523(a)(1)(C) only in an individual's case, regardless of whether under chapter 7 or chapter 11. n16 The scope of the new corporate provision in chapter 11 should be the same as the scope of section 523(a)(1)(C). Unlike debts that are nondischargeable under section 1141(d)(6)(A), taxes that are nondischargeable under section 1141(d)(6)(B) are not limited to those owed to a domestic governmental unit.

It is unclear the extent to which this change will actually increase the amount of taxes that must be paid in chapter 11 reorganizations. Taxes and customs duties are entitled to priority under section 507(a)(3) (for taxes incurred during the period between the filing of an involuntary petition and the order for relief) or section 507(a)(8) (for prepetition taxes). Because of the breadth of those tax priority provisions, nearly all tax claims are entitled to priority, except those that are stale, n17 and must be paid in full under a chapter 11 plan. n18 Therefore, many of the taxes covered by the nondischargeability provision will still be entitled to priority and paid in full under a chapter 11 plan, so the ultimate economic effect of this change is probably minimal, except as to postpetition, preconfirmation interest, discussed below.

Payment of Nondischargeable Claims under a Plan. A nondischargeable debt must be paid after plan confirmation. Unless provision is made for post-reorganization payment of the claim, the reorganized debtor might not have adequate resources to pay. Even if it does, failure to treat the claim under the plan could result in the creditor's pursuing collection action immediately after reorganization and demanding immediate payment in full. n19 Such a course of action could doom many reorganization plans to failure. Therefore, the plan ought to be able to provide for payment. To do so, the claim would have to be classified separately from other claims of similar type (for example, other general unsecured claims). Section 1122 permits separate classification in chapter 11 cases under certain circumstances, although the case law is decidedly mixed on the permissible circumstances. n20 Courts have permitted separate classification of nondischargeable debts in chapter 13 cases, reasoning that separate classification that facilitates full payment carries out Congress's intent that such claims receive more favorable treatment. n21 This case law should be imported into chapter 11 to permit separate classification. In addition, a plan should be permitted to enjoin a creditor from collecting a nondischargeable debt pending completion of payments under the plan, despite the narrower scope of the discharge injunction, under the rationale of the Supreme Court's Energy Resources decision, n22 so that the reorganized debtor could be protected against post-effective date collection action.

Postpetition Interest on Nondischargeable Debts. Interest continues to accrue during a chapter 11 case on a nondischargeable debt. n23 Therefore, the amount required to be paid after confirmation will include postpetition interest, which is not allowable in the chapter 11 case. n24 For the same reasons that the plan should be able to provide for the postconfirmation payment of the nondischarged claim, the plan be able to provide for the payment of interest, even though the interest claim may be disallowed in the case. Accommodation will need to be made to permit classification of the disallowed claim, probably in the same class as the principal amount of the claim. However, because priority taxes must be paid in full under a plan, they are not classified. n25 If the nondischargeable tax claim is entitled to priority, interest would need to be classified separately. The interest claim would be a general unsecured claim and therefore might be placed in the same class as general unsecured claims against the debtor. However, because it is nondischargeable, separate classification may be appropriate, as for nondischargeable fraud claims, for the same reasons as in chapter 13. n26 If the underlying nondischargeable tax claim is not entitled to priority, then the plan could provide for separate classification of the claim and the interest together, under the same rationale, so as to facilitate payment after confirmation.

Discharge of Debts of an Individual Debtor

Delay of Discharge. An individual may commence a chapter 11 case even if the individual is not engaged in a business. n27

However, unlike for a non-individual debtor, under cases governed by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, n28 an individual debtor does not generally receive a discharge on plan confirmation. Rather, the chapter 11 discharge generally follows the chapter 13 model, under which the debtor receives a discharge only upon completion of all payments under the plan. n29 However, the drafting of the chapter 11 provision differs from the chapter 13 model, leaving some open questions. Section 1141(d)(5)(A) reads only as an exception to the general rule in chapter 11 for non-individual debtors that that confirmation acts as a discharge. It does not expressly require the court to grant the discharge once plan payments are completed, as does section 1328(a). It appears that the drafters intended the same result, that is, that the court would grant a discharge upon completion of payments, but by different and apparently nonmandatory language: until the court grants a discharge on completion of all payments under the plan." It is fair to read this language as parallel with the chapter 13 discharge provision, because the 2005 Act also amended other provisions in chapter 11 for individual debtors to make them parallel to the treatment of individual debtors in chapter 13, such as the requirement that an individual debtor devote all of the debtor's disposable income to payments under a plan, unless the plan provides for payment of all claims in full. n30

In addition, section 1141(d)(5)(A) contains an exception to the exception: the court may order otherwise for cause. The statute is not explicit on whether this permits the court not to grant discharge for cause, but that that would be a strained reading. Such a reading might make sense if the provision required the court to grant a discharge upon completion of payment but allowed the court to order otherwise for cause. However, because the provision generally prohibits the court from granting a discharge upon confirmation until "payment completion but allows the court to order otherwise for cause, the more natural reading is that in the appropriate case, the court may grant a discharge upon confirmation, rather than only upon completion of payments. Such might be the case, for example, for an individual debtor who did not expect to make plan payments primarily from future earnings, consistent with the ordinary chapter 13 model, but rather contemplated a plan more consistent with the ordinary chapter 11 model, such as by distributions of property or, in the unusual case, by the issuance of securities by the debtor's business, perhaps from a new corporation to be formed by the debtor under the plan.

Payment Noncompletion Discharge. Also generally following the chapter 13 model, the new individual chapter 11 discharge permits the court to grant the debtor a discharge if the debtor does not complete payments under the plan, if the value (as of the plan's effective date) actually distributed to creditors under the plan through the time when the court grants the discharge, is at least what creditors would have received in a chapter 7 liquidation case as of the effective date, and modification of the plan under section 1127 is not practicable. n31 As with the discharge after completion of payments, this discharge differs from the chapter 13 model, in that it does not require as a condition to the discharge that the debtor's failure to complete [payments under the plan] is due to circumstances for which the debtor should not justly be held accountable." n32 As such, there is no express statutory standard for the noncompletion discharge other than the court's discretion. It appears, however, that the omission of chapter 13's accountability requirements from the chapter 11 provision should be interpreted to mean that accountability should not enter into the court's determination of whether to grant the noncompletion discharge; the only consideration other than payment of at least liquidation value is whether plan modification is practicable.

Additional Grounds for Denial of Discharge. The 2005 Act also added another provision to limit the discharge of an individual in a chapter 11 case. However, the provision is nongrammatical and therefore difficult to interpret. n33 Section 1141(d)(5)(C) (including the lead-in of paragraph (5)) reads:

(5) In a case in which the debtor is an individual--

.

(C) unless after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge, the court finds that there is no reasonable cause to believe that--

(i) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

(ii) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(B). n34

Following as it does subparagraphs (A) and (B), one could reasonably read subparagraph (C) as an exception, so that a discharge under subparagraph (A) or (B) should not be granted if the conditions specified in subparagraph (C) exist. Such a reading is consistent with the parallel amendments made by the same section of the 2005 Act to the chapter 12 and chapter 13 discharges. n35 In those chapters, the 2005 Act added a provision that expressly prohibits the court from granting a discharge if the conditions specified in subparagraph (C) exist. Although that reading therefore seems the most sensible reading, another factor complicates matters. New section 1141(d)(5) becomes effective under the general effective date provision for cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Subparagraph (C) is effective for cases commenced on or after the date of enactment, April 20, 2005. n36 It therefore applies even before subparagraphs (A) and (B) apply and even before the lead-in language of paragraph (5) applies. More confusing drafting is difficult to imagine. Nevertheless, it appears that the provision should be read in pari materia with the similar provisions added to chapters 12 and 13 by the same section of the 2005 Act.

Subparagraph (C) applies if the court finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that--

(i) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

(ii) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(B). n37

Section 522(q)(1) prohibits an individual debtor from exempting a homestead in excess of $125,000 in value if--

(A) the court determines, after notice and a hearing, that the debtor has been convicted of a felony (as defined in section 3156 of title 18), which under the circumstances, demonstrates that the filing of the case was an abuse of the provisions of this title; or

(B) the debtor owes a debt arising from--

(i) any violation of the Federal securities laws (as defined in section 3(a)(47) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934), any State securities laws, or any regulation or order issued under Federal securities laws or State securities laws;

(ii) fraud, deceit, or manipulation in a fiduciary capacity or in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered under section 12 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or under section 6 of the Securities Act of 1933;

(iii) any civil remedy under section 1964 of title 18; or

(iv) any criminal act, intentional tort, or willful or reckless misconduct that caused serious physical injury or death to another individual in the preceding 5 years. n38

Section 3156 of title 18 defines felony" as an offense punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment in excess of one year." n39 The connection between the conviction of a felony and the concept of the filing of the case as an abuse of the provisions of this title" coupled with the provision's primary function as a limitation on claiming a homestead exemption in a state that provides generous homestead exemptions suggests that section 522(q)(1)(A) should apply if a debtor moves to a high homestead state to protect assets in the face of a possible felony conviction. n40

Section 522(q)(1)(B) applies if the debtor owes one or more of certain kinds of debts, either under the Federal securities laws, as a civil RICO liability, or for physical injury or death. The Federal securities laws referred to in clause (i) are defined as the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77a et seq.), the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.), the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U.S.C. 79a et seq.), the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 (15 U.S.C. 77aaa et seq.), the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.), the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80b et seq.), and the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 (15 U.S.C. 78aaa et seq.). n41 Although the provisions referenced in clause (ii) are part of the Federal securities laws," as defined, clause (ii) seems to go beyond the Federal securities laws to include common debts for fraud, deceit, or manipulation. It appears that the purpose of the clause is to limit the homestead (and by cross-reference here, the discharge) for improper securities-related activities. Therefore, the phrase in a fiduciary capacity or in connection with the purchase or sale of any [registered] security" should be read to modify not just manipulation," but also fraud" and deceit."

The third kind of debt covered is one owing for a civil remedy under section 1964(a) of title 18, which permits a district court to enjoin certain activities or order divestiture of certain investments that violate the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act of 1970 (RICO), or under section 1964(c), which permits an injured person to recover treble damages for a RICO violation.

The fourth kind of debt is one for an act or conduct that caused serious physical injury or death. The provision does not specify what constitutes serious" injury, leaving the application and interpretation to the courts on a case-by-case basis. But the injury or death must have been the result of a criminal act, an intentional tort, or willful or reckless misconduct." Given the Supreme Court's narrow interpretation of willful and malicious injury" in the discharge exception of section 523(a)(6), n42 the better reading here should be comparably narrow.

Taking this all together and returning to section 1141(d)(5)(C), an individual chapter 11 debtor's discharge should be denied in cases of felony conviction coupled with homestead exemption abuse or in cases of liability for certain kinds of debts. The denial is then required if the court finds that there is no reasonable cause to believe that" section

522(q)(1) may be applicable and there is a pending proceeding involving the section 522(q)(1) grounds. Put another way, if the court finds reasonable cause to believe that either condition exists, then the court should deny discharge. Procedurally, the court may make this determination only within 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge."

Under the new chapter 11 provision governing an individual's discharge, the discharge may not be granted until the completion of payments. If the holder of an unsecured claim objects, the plan must provide for payments of the debtor's disposable income over at least five years, unless the plan provides for payment in full of all claims. n43 In the event of payment noncompletion, the discharge may occur earlier. In either event, however, the discharge is not likely to occur before the court has determined whether the debtor may enjoy the benefits of the homestead exemption. Plan confirmation will be difficult without that determination, because the plan must provide nonaccepting creditors at least as much as they would receive upon liquidation. n44 The amount of the debtor's homestead exemption is often critical to determining the amount that would be available to creditors in a chapter 7 liquidation. Therefore, by the time the discharge question arises, the question of the applicability of section 522(q)(1) will have been determined. If it has, it makes little sense to examine, as section 1141(d)(5)(C) requires, whether there is no reasonable cause to believe" that section 522(q)(1) applies. Even if the section 522(q)(1) determination has not been made, the section creates the unusual circumstance of providing for denial of discharge--a fundamental bankruptcy right--based on a court finding of no reasonable cause to believe" the applicability of a provision when the court itself could determine directly whether the provision applies. The better practice would be for the court to do so.

Similarly, section 1141(d)(5)(C) appears to require the court to deny discharge unless there is no reasonable cause to believe" that there is a pending proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony" or liable for a debt" of the specified kinds. Obviously, the introductory no reasonable cause to believe" must apply to the likely outcome of the pending proceeding, not to whether there is a proceeding pending at all, as that question should be a fact that is not subject to dispute. The court could, under the language of the statute, act quickly on the debtor's discharge, before the conclusion of the other proceeding, based simply on the bankruptcy court's determination as to whether there is no reasonable cause to believe that the debtor will be successful in defending the other proceeding. If the bankruptcy court found no such cause, then discharge would be denied, and presumably could not later be granted, even if the debtor were ultimately successful in his or her defense. (And one might wonder whether the bankruptcy court's finding that the debtor's defense was not reasonable would collaterally estop the debtor from pursuing the defense in the other court, a result Congress did not likely intend.) Conversely, if the bankruptcy court found reasonable cause to believe that the debtor would not be convicted or found liable, the court could grant the discharge, which could not then be revoked if the debtor were later convicted or found liable for one of the prohibited debts. Given these possibilities, it would seem the better practice, strictly as a procedural matter, for the bankruptcy court to defer ruling on the discharge until the conclusion of the other proceeding.

Nondischargeable Debts. In general, unlike a corporate debtor, an individual debtor in a chapter 11 case has the same status as an individual debtor in a chapter 7 liquidation case with respect to nondischargeable debts. If a debt is excepted from discharge under section 523, the debtor cannot obtain a discharge of such debt in a chapter 11 case. n45

An individual debtor will be discharged from debts that would be nondischargeable under subsection 523(a)(2), (4) or (6) if the creditor does not request a determination of the dischargeability of such a debt. n46 Bankruptcy Rule 2002(f) requires the clerk of the bankruptcy court or some other person directed by the court to give creditors and indenture trustees notice of the time fixed for filing a complaint to determine the dischargeability of debts under section 523.

Enjoining Collection of Nondischargeable Debt

One question that has arisen is whether a plan may provide for an injunction against collection of a nondischargeable debt when the plan provides for payment in full over time. Some courts have approved injunctions that, in effect, require the creditor to await payment under the plan even though the creditor's claim is nondischargeable. n47

However, such an injunction may harm the creditor with the nondischargeable claim by preventing it from taking action to collect its claim at a time when the debtor has assets from which the claim could be collected. Nevertheless, when the court has sufficient confidence that the debtor's plan is feasible, and performance under the plan requires that creditors participate collectively, it may be appropriate to enjoin individual collection efforts. n48 In the event that the plan fails, the creditor's claim would most likely remain nondischargeable in a subsequent case. n49

Discharge in Liquidating Chapter 11 Case

Confirmation of a plan in the case of a partnership or corporation or completion of payments in the case of an individual does not necessarily entitle the debtor to a discharge. If the chapter 11 plan provides for the liquidation of all or substantially all of the property of the estate and the debtor does not continue in business after consummation of the plan, an individual, partnership or corporation debtor is subject to the limitations of section 727(a). n50 In this respect, section 1141(d)(3) is a corollary provision to section 727(a).

Section 727(a)(1) bars a discharge in a liquidation case if the debtor is not an individual. Thus, a partnership or corporation is not entitled to a discharge if its plan provides for the liquidation of substantially all of its assets and the debtor does not thereafter continue in business. This limitation prevents such debtors from avoiding the operation of section 727(a)(1) through the use of a liquidating plan under chapter 11 instead of a chapter 7 liquidation. Of course, there may be other reasons for a debtor to choose to liquidate in chapter 11 rather than chapter 7, such as the ability to control the liquidation and the possibility of maximizing the value of the assets

In the case of an individual who does not continue in a business and whose property is liquidated in a chapter 11 case, the individual is subject to the limitations of section 727(a). The absolute bar to discharge of section 727(a)(1) is inapplicable, but the other grounds for objecting to discharge continue to apply in a liquidating chapter 11 case. n51 As with corporate and partnership chapter 11 cases, the objective is to prevent an individual from avoiding the grounds for objection to discharge by liquidating in chapter 11 rather than chapter 7.

It should be noted that section 727 is applicable only when substantially all of the debtor's property is to be liquidated pursuant to the plan. If the debtor is reorganizing, the debtor may receive a discharge upon confirmation of the plan even if discharge would be denied in a liquidation. The debtor may also receive a discharge even if the plan contemplates a liquidation upon the debtor's failure to refinance the secured creditor's debt, as long as the probability of refinancing is not so unlikely that liquidation is the only viable option. n52

Waiver of Discharge

The court may approve a waiver of discharge executed after entry of the order for relief in the chapter 11 case. However, the waiver must be in writing. n53

Reaffirmation of Debts

If the debtor seeks to reaffirm a debt, the reaffirmation agreement is subject to the requirements of subsections

524(c), (d) and (k). n54 In general, the reaffirmation agreement must be made prior to the grant of the discharge and must be accompanied by certain disclosures, including a statement advising the debtor that it can be rescinded prior to discharge or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court, whichever is later, and that the debtor is not required to enter into the agreement. The agreement must be filed with the court and accompanied by an attorney's affidavit if the debtor was represented by an attorney in negotiating the reaffirmation, must not be rescinded and, if the debtor was not represented by an attorney, must be approved by the court. n55

Section 524 applies if the debtor seeks to reaffirm a particular debt. The requirements of section 524 do not, however, apply to the terms of the plan proposed by the debtor, which might well provide for the full payment of some or all classes of claims. The terms of the plan are, however, subject to the plan confirmation process under section 1129.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1141, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1141 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), reprinted in App. Pt. 10(a) infra.

n2

2. See George M. Treister et al., Fundamentals of Bankruptcy Law, § 9.06, at 441 (5th ed. 2004, R. Levin ed.).

n3

3. See, e.g., Beard v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 828 F.2d 1029 (4th Cir. 1987) (intentional torts, even if malicious, are dischargeable in a chapter 11 case by confirmation of a corporate debtor's plan of reorganization).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 708, (2005), effective as to cases filed on or after October 17, 2005.

n5

5. Section 708 of the 2005 Act, which added section 1141(d)(6), is entitled No Discharge of Fraudulent Taxes in Chapter 11," but as noted in the text, its effect is much broader.

n6

6. An individual does not receive a chapter 11 discharge from any debts that are non-dischargeable under section 523(a). 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(2) (former and as amended). A partnership does receive a discharge of such debts in chapter 11, and new section 1141(d)(6)(A) does not apply to a partnership debtor.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(6)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 708 (2005).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2); see Cohen v. De La Cruz, 523 U.S. 213, 118 S. Ct. 1212, 140 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1998) (compensatory and punitive damages arising from fraud are nondischargeable).

n9

9. Field v. Mans, 516 U.S. 59, 116 S. Ct. 437, 133 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1995) (creditor must show objectively reasonable reliance).

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 523(c); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4007(c).

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(6)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 708, (2005).

n12

12. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(b).

n13

13. 31 U.S.C. § 3730(d)(1)(3).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 101(41) (person" does not include governmental unit).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(6)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 708 (2005).

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(1)(C), 1141(d)(3)..

n17

17. See 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 705 (2005).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(9), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 710 (2005).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a) (discharge injunction applies only to discharged debts).

n20

20. See Boston Post Road Ltd. P'ship v. FDIC (In re Boston Post Road Ltd. P'ship), 21 F.3d 477, 481, 30 C.B.C.2d 1528 (2d Cir. 1994).

n21

21. See, e.g., In re Freshley, 69 B.R. 96, 98 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1987).

n22

22. United States v. Energy Resources Co., 495 U.S. 545, 110 S. Ct. 2139, 109 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1990).

n23

23. Bruning v. United States, 376 U.S. 358, 361-63, 84 S. Ct. 906, 908-09, 11 L. Ed. 2d 772, 775-76 (1964).

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(2).

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)(1).

n26

26. Cf., e.g., In re Freshley, 69 B.R. 96, 98 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1987).

n27

27. Toibb v. Radloff, 501 U.S. 157, 111 S. Ct. 2197, 115 L. Ed. 2d 145, 24 C.B.C.2d 1179 (1991).

n28

28. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(b) (2005) (except as specified otherwise, applicable only to cases commenced on or after Oct. 17, 2005).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5).

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(15); see id. § 1123(a)(8) (new 2005 Act requirement that individual chapter 11 debtor's plan provide for payment to creditors of a portion of the debtor's future earnings).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5)(B).

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b)(1).

n33

33. See Lamie v. United States Trustee, 540 U.S. 526, 124 S. Ct. 1023, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1024, 50 C.B.C.2d 1299 (2004) (even though provision is nongrammatical, court must interpret according to plain meaning rule).

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 330 (2005).

N35

35. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1228(f), 1328(h), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 330 (2005).

n36

36. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(b)(2) (Apr. 20, 2005).

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5)(C).

n38

38. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1).

n39

39. 18 U.S.C. § 3156(3).

n40

40. For a more complete analysis of section 522(q)(1), see ch. 522 supra.

n41

41. Securities Exchange Act of 1934, § 3(a)(47), 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(47).

n42

42. Kawaauhau v. Geiger, 523 U.S. 57, 118 S. Ct. 974, 140 L. Ed. 2d 90, 38 C.B.C.2d 1629 (1998) (willful and malicious injury" covers an intentional tort committed with intent to cause harm).

n43

43. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(15).

n44

44. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(7).

n45

45. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(2); see Fien v. United States (In re Fien), 22 F.3d 631, 633 (5th Cir. 1994) (in the case of individual debtors, Congress consciously opted to place a higher priority on revenue collection than on debtor rehabilitation or ensuring a fresh start'); In re Grynberg, 986 F.2d 367, 369, 28 C.B.C.2d 779, 782-83 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 812, 114 S. Ct. 57, 114 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1993) (Section 523, when read in conjunction with § 1141(d)(2), provides that confirmation of a reorganization plan for an individual debtor will not discharge recent excise taxes whether or not a claim for such tax was filed or allowed.').

n46

46. 11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1). But see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(B), (c)(2).

n47

47. E.g., In re Martin, 150 B.R. 43 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1993); In re Mercado, 24 C.B.C.2d 1895, 124 B.R. 799 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). But see In re Amigoni, 22 C.B.C.2d 468, 109 B.R. 341 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989) (plan may not be confirmed because it interferes with rights of holders of nondischargeable claims).

n48

48. See United States v. Energy Res. Co., 495 U.S. 545, 110 S. Ct. 2139, 109 L. Ed. 2d 580, 22 C.B.C.2d 1093 (1990) (bankruptcy court may order manner of application of payments on tax claims, although payment of the non-trust fund position was not wholly assured).

n49

49. But see 11 U.S.C. § 523(b) (debts that are nondischargeable under section 523(a)(1), (a)(3) or (a)(8) may become dischargeable in subsequent case).

n50

50. See, e.g., Dutcher v. Reorganized Pettibone Corp., 193 B.R. 667 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

n51

51. In re Nickerson, 11 C.B.C.2d 82, 40 B.R. 693 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1984) (although an individual may not obtain a second discharge in a chapter 11 case commenced within six years of a prior chapter 7 case, a reorganization plan may nevertheless be confirmed; the usual discharge afforded by confirmation will be ineffective).

n52

52. In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship, 116 F.3d 790 (5th Cir. 1997).

n53

53. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(4).

n54

54. See ch. 524 supra.

n55

55. 11 U.S.C. § 524(c).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

120 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Who May File a Plan in a Chapter 11 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1320

Collier on Who May File a Plan in a Chapter 11 Case

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1121 of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth who may file a chapter 11 plan and under what conditions and when a plan may be filed. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers section 1121, including topics such as the debtors right to file, the debtors exclusivity period for filing, the right of a party in interest to file a plan, and time periods for small business debtors.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1121 of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth who may file a chapter 11 plan and under what conditions and when a plan may be filed. Subsection (a) provides that the debtor may file a plan at any time during the case. Subsection (b) specifies an exclusive period in which only the debtor may file its plan. Subsection (c) permits any party in interest to file a plan if certain conditions are met. In this regard, subsection (c) defines the circumstances under which the debtor will no longer have the exclusive right to file a plan. Subsection (d) permits the court to increase or decrease for cause the periods within which only the debtor may file a plan. Subsection (e) modifies the specified time limits in the case of a small business debtor as defined in section 101. Section 1121 must be read in conjunction with Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3016 n1 and any applicable local rules.

Debtor's Right to File. Section 1121(a) gives the debtor one of its two basic rights with respect to the filing of a plan. The debtors first right, accorded to no other party, is that it may file a chapter 11 plan at any time during the case. The debtor may file a plan in a voluntary or involuntary case at any time after commencement of the case or entry of the order for relief. The debtor may file a plan with its voluntary petition, or it may file a plan after an involuntary petition has been filed against it and before an order for relief has been entered. The debtor may file a plan after a disclosure statement has been approved for some other plan. It may even file a plan after some other plan has been confirmed and the order of confirmation is on appeal or after confirmation has been denied. Because the rules of construction include the plural within the singular, the debtor may, if it wishes, file more than one plan. n2 The debtor may file its plan even though other parties in interest have filed a plan or plans.

Debtor's Exclusivity Period for Filing. Section 1121(b) provides the debtor with its second basic right with respect to filing a chapter 11 plan. Subsection (b) provides that, until 120 days after the order for relief, only the debtor may file a chapter 11 plan. This period is commonly referred to as the debtor's exclusivity period. This 120-day period may be reduced or extended for cause by order of the court on a motion filed within the period. n3 However, section 1121(d)(2)(A) provides that the court may not extend this 120-day exclusive period beyond a date that is 18 months after the date of the order for relief. n4

Debtors Exclusivity Period for Acceptance. If the debtor files a plan within the 120-day exclusivity period, section 1121(c)(3) provides that exclusivity is extended for an additional sixty days to a maximum of 180 days to allow acceptance by each class of claims or interests that is impaired by the plan. This 180-day period may not be extended by the court beyond a date that is 20 months after the date of the order for relief. n5 During this extended exclusivity period, no other party in interest may file a plan. The extended period may itself be extended by the court for cause. There is disagreement among the bankruptcy courts when the original period is extended, whether the acceptance period must also be extended. n6 The better practice, when moving to extend the exclusivity period, would be to file a simultaneous motion to extend the acceptance period.

Right of a Party in Interest to File a Plan.

Conditions That Must Occur for Party in Interest to File Plan. Subsection 1121(c) provides that any party in interest may file a plan if, and only if, one of the three following conditions has occurred: (1) a chapter 11 trustee has been appointed; (2) the debtor has not filed a plan before 120 days after the date of the order of relief or any extension of that period; or (3) the debtor has not filed a plan that has been accepted by each class of impaired claims and impaired interests before 180 days after the date of the order for relief or any extension of that period. If the debtor obtains the required acceptances within the 180-day period, then competing plans are foreclosed until it can be determined whether the debtor's plan will be confirmed.

Party in Interest Defined. Subsection 1121(c) defines party in interest in the same words as section 1109(b) of the Bankruptcy Code--that is, the term includes but is not limited to the debtor, the trustee, a creditors committee, an equity security holders committee, a creditor, an equity security holder, or any indenture trustee. The term party in interest is fact-specific and must be approached on a case by case basis to determine whether an entity which seeks to file a plan has a sufficient stake in the outcome of the case to require its representation in the plan filing process. n7

The term has been held to include general and limited partners who owned over 99 percent of the debtor, n8 a party who purchased a claim and became a creditor n9 even if it was acquired postpetition for the express purpose of acquiring standing to file a plan, n10 an insurer of the debtor, n11 and a corporation which had managed the debtor's nursing homes and made a substantial financial investment in the debtor. n12

A party in interest has been held not to include an entity interested in purchasing the debtors assets. n13 However, a potential purchaser of the debtors assets was considered a party in interest when a chapter 11 trustee joined in its proposed plan, even after the chapter 11 trustee later withdrew its support. n14 The term party in interest does not include the United States trustee who is barred by section 307 from filing a plan. n15

Filing Plan after Entry of Order Approving a Disclosure Statement. Section 1121(c)(3) may be interpreted to allow the filing of competing plans if the debtor has obtained approval of disclosure for a cramdown plan in which the debtor does not intend to obtain the acceptance of every impaired class. If the debtors disclosure statement indicates that it will not seek acceptances from some impaired classes, the debtors plan by its very nature can not meet the requirement of acceptance by each class of impaired claims and impaired interest in 180 days. Other entities might be able to file plans during the acceptance period of such a cramdown plan. The recommended course of action then is always to seek the votes of all impaired classes, whether or not the plan is a cramdown plan. Even in such a case the court might allow a creditor to file a competing plan. n16

Reduction or Increase of Exclusivity Periods for Cause. Subsection 1121(d) provides that upon the request of a party in interest made within the 120-day period for filing a plan or within the 180-day period for acceptance if a plan is filed, the court for cause, after notice and a hearing, n17 may reduce or increase the 120-day period or the 180-day period. n18 However, under the 2005 amendments to the Code, the 120-day period may not be extended beyond a date that is 18 months after the date of the order for relief, n19 and the 180-day period may not be extended beyond a date that is 20 months after the date of the order for relief. n20 Any request for extension of the 120-day or 180-day period must be made before those periods have expired. n21 Similarly, motions to reduce an extended exclusive period may be made within the extension. Such motions may be made by the debtor, as the debtor is included as a party in interest. The party seeking the change in the statutory time bears the burden of establishing that cause exists. n22

The Determination of Whether Cause Exists Is Fact Specific. The determination of whether cause exists to warrant an extension or reduction of the statutory time periods is fact specific. Cause to extend has been found where the debtor has continually proposed plans and attempted to negotiate with the creditors. n23 Cause has been found not to exist where the debtors case is not complex, n24 where there has been no progress in arranging financing n25 or where an extension would be fruitless. n26 It has been said that the creditors loss of confidence in the capability of debtors management is a factor to consider in determining cause, n27 as is the principal parties acrimonious relations. n28 One court enumerated the following factors to be considered in determining whether cause existed to warrant an extension: (1) the size and complexity of the case; (2) the necessity of sufficient time to negotiate and prepare adequate information; (3) the existence of good faith progress toward reorganization; (4) whether the debtor is paying its debts as they come due; (5) whether the debtor has demonstrated reasonable prospects for filing a viable plan; (6) whether the debtor has made progress in negotiating with creditors; (7) the length of time the case has been pending; (8) whether the debtor is seeking the extension to pressure creditors; and (9) whether unresolved contingencies exist. n29 Another court, after reviewing this enumeration, said that the overriding factor is whether terminating the debtor's exclusivity would facilitate moving the case forward. n30

Time Periods for Small Business Debtors

Debtor 180-Day Exclusive Time Period. Subsection (e) of section 1121 sets forth special rules in small business cases. As amended by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, (the 2005 Act), n31 it provides that in a small business case, n32 the debtor has the exclusive right to file a plan until after 180 days after the date of the order for relief under chapter 11. Although the language of section 1121(e) would seem to require that all plans, whether filed by the debtor or other parties in interest, shall be filed within 300 days of the order for relief, one court has construed the language and legislative history of section 1121(e) to mean that the 300-day deadline for the filing of reorganization plans in small business chapter 11 cases applies only to plans filed by the debtor and that there is no statutory deadline for the filing of such a reorganization plan by any party in interest other than the debtor. n33 Thus, the debtor has a 180-day exclusive period and an additional 120-day nonexclusive period in which to file a plan. Although there appears to be no specific provision for the reduction of the period during which the debtor has the exclusive right to file a plan, only the debtor may file a plan until after the exclusive period, unless the court, for cause, orders otherwise. n34

One-Hundred-Twenty-Day Nonexclusive Time Period for Nondebtor Parties in Interest. After the small business debtor's 180-day exclusive period has expired, nondebtor parties in interest have a 120-day time period in which to file plans whether or not the debtor files a plan within the exclusive period. Therefore, whether or not the debtor files a plan within the 180-day period, a party in interest may file a competing plan after the expiration of the 180-day period so long as the party files its plan before the expiration of 300 days from the order for relief. n35

Under the law as it existed before the 2005 Act, one lower court indicated that if a small business debtor has filed a plan within its 100-day exclusive period, a creditors plan filed after the then 100-day exclusive period will not be treated on the same expedited basis, but will proceed on a time line specified by the court under its section 105(d) powers. n36 The authority for such a ruling seems lacking. No distinction is made in the Code and both plans should be considered together.

Reduced and Extended Time Periods. The exclusive and nonexclusive time periods for filing a plan by a small business debtor may be extended by the court only if the debtor, after providing notice to parties in interest (including the United States trustee), demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a plan within a reasonable time. The new deadline must be imposed at the time the extension is granted, and the court must sign the order granting such extension before the existing deadline has expired. n37

Before the 2005 Act, a party in interest could file a request that either the exclusive or nonexclusive periods for filing a plan be increased or reduced. The 2005 Act does not indicate who may seek extension of the exclusive or permissive periods for filing a plan. The Code now specifies that an extension may be granted for either period if the debtor demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the court will be able to confirm a plan within a reasonable time. Thus, even if a nondebtor party requests an extension, it is the debtor who must carry the burden of proof, a condition that makes it unlikely that a nondebtor party in interest will seek an extension of time.

The provisions added by the 2005 Act, unlike former law, do not specifically provide for a reduction of the exclusive or nonexclusive periods of time for filing a plan. However, under section 1121(e)(1)(B) of the Code, parties in interest, such as creditors, may seek to have the 180-day exclusive period reduced or rendered nonexclusive for cause. There is no provision for reducing the 300-day period for cause.

Failure to File. There are no provisions in the Bankruptcy Code that define the consequences if neither the debtor nor any other party files a plan within the prescribed time. Section 1121(e)(2) provides that the plan and disclosure statement (if any) shall be filed not later than 300 days after the order for relief, and section 1121(e)(3) indicates that that time period may be extended under certain conditions. However, if no party files a plan within the specified or extended time, no relief is available to the debtor in chapter 11. Consequently, cause would exist for conversion or dismissal of the case under section 1112(b)(4) on the ground of failure to propose a plan under section 1121 of this title within any time fixed by the court. n38

Appeal of Orders Relating to Exclusivity. An order extending exclusivity is an interlocutory order and formerly was appealable only with leave of the district court or bankruptcy appellate panel. n39 The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n40 amended 28 U.S.C. § 158(a) to give an immediate right of appeal of orders extending or reducing the time periods contained in section 1121(d). Making such orders appealable to the district court or bankruptcy appellate panel as a matter of right was explained by the House Committee:

This will prevent [sic] n41 those parties who feel they were harmed by an extension, or a failure to extend, to obtain possible recourse in the district court. The Committee intends that the district court carefully consider the circumstances of each case so appealed with a view to encouraging a fair and equitable resolution of the bankruptcy. n42

Appellate review of such order may establish standards on a more uniform basis for bankruptcy courts to follow in permitting or denying extensions of exclusivity periods.

Designation of Plans Required. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3016(a) requires that every proposed plan and modification thereof be dated and in a chapter 11 case, be identified with the name of the entity or entities submitting such plan or modification. The purpose of this requirement is to facilitate the identification of plans in those cases where there are multiple plans and holders of claims and equity interests are required to analyze multiple plans and disclosure statements.

Disclosure Statement Required to Be Filed with Plan. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3016(b) n43 provides that with the plan or within a time fixed by the court, n44 a party filing a plan shall file a disclosure statement pursuant to section 1125 or evidence showing compliance with section 1126(b) relating to compliance with nonbankruptcy law in solicitation of prepetition acceptances or rejections.

For further discussion of Code section 1121, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1121.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 3016.

n2

2. In the case of In re Werth, 8 C.B.C.2d 480, 29 B.R. 220 (D. Colo. 1983), the court permitted the debtor to file multiple plans, noting that only one plan could be confirmed. The court required that the disclosure statement contain a clearly worded provision advising holders of claims to accept one or the other or reject both plans.

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1121.06.

n4

4. This limitation was added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005,

Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 411(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(d)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 411(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. The extension of the 120-day period for filing a chapter 11 plan automatically extends the 180-day period for securing acceptances of the plan. In re Judd, 173 B.R. 941 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1994); In re Ravenna Indus., Inc., 6 C.B.C.2d 1015, 20 B.R. 886 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982); contra In re Trainer's, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 1623, 17 B.R. 246 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1982).

n7

7. In re Chandler Airpark Joint Venture I, 163 B.R. 566 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1992).

n8

8. In re River Bend-Oxford Assocs., 114 B.R. 111 (Bankr. D. Md. 1990).

n9

9. In re Rook Broadcasting of Idaho, Inc., 154 B.R. 970 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1993).

n10

10. In re Comandante Management Co., LLC, 359 B.R. 410, 416-8 (Bankr. D.P.R. 2006); In re First Humanics Corp., 124 B.R. 87 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1991).

n11

11. In re Congoleum Corp. 362 B.R. 198, 201 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2007).

n12

12. In re First Humanics Corp., 124 B.R. 87 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1991).

n13

13. In re Crescent Mfg. Co., 122 B.R. 979 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1990).

n14

14. In re Dakota Rail, Inc., 946 F.2d 82 (8th Cir. 1991), reh'g denied, cert. denied, 503 U.S. 962, 112 S. Ct. 1566, 118 L. Ed. 2d 212, reh'g denied, 504 U.S. 952, 112 S. Ct. 2295, 119 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1992).

n15

15. In re Speece, 159 B.R. 314 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1993).

n16

16. Cf. In re Landmark Park Plaza Ltd. P'ship, 167 B.R. 752 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994) (where the court allowed a creditor to file a competing plan in the post-exclusivity period even though the debtors disclosure statement has been approved).

n17

17. The bankruptcy court must conduct a hearing on the motion to extend time. In re RCN Anlageninvestitionen Frodsgesellschaft II-Kommanditgesellschaft, 118 B.R. 460 (W.D. Mich. 1990).

n18

18. The extension of the 120-day time period for filing a chapter 11 plan automatically extends the 180-day period for securing acceptances of the plan. In re Judd, 173 B.R. 941 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1994); In re Ravenna Indus., Inc., 6 C.B.C.2d 1015 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982). Contra In re Trainer's, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 1623, 1982 Bankr. LEXIS 5012 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1982).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(d)(2)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 411(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(d)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 411(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n21

21. There can be no extension after the period has expired. In re Perkins, 71 B.R. 294, 297 (W.D. Tenn. 1987); In re Cramer, Inc., 105 B.R. 433 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1989); In re Century Inv. Fund VII Ltd. P'ship, 96 B.R. 884 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1989).

n22

22. In re Gibson & Cushman Dredging Corp., 101 B.R. 405 (E.D.N.Y. 1989); In re Washington-St. Tammany Elec. Co-op., Inc., 97 B.R. 852 (E.D. La. 1989); In re Newark Airport/Hotel Ltd Pship, 155 B.R. 93 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1993). When the party seeks to reduce a statutory period, it bears a particularly heavy burden. In re Interco Inc., 137 B.R. 999 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1992).

n23

23. In re Gibson & Cushman Dredging Corp., 101 B.R. 405 (E.D.N.Y. 1989). In In re AmKo Plastics, Inc., 197 B.R. 74 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1996), cause was shown where extensive turnaround efforts were undertaken even though the debtor to date had shown only losses. In In re Homestead Partners, Ltd., 197 B.R. 706, 720 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996), cause was shown where there was substantial progress, the recalcitrance of creditors posed a significant hurdle and there were complicated legal issues.

n24

24. In re Curry Corp., 148 B.R. 754 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1992); In re General Bearing Corp., 136 B.R. 361 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990).

n25

25. In re EUA Power Corp., 130 B.R. 118 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1991).

n26

26. In the case of In re Gagel & Gagel, 24 B.R. 674 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982), there were only two creditors, one who was an insider and could not be counted as an accepting class for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(10) and the other who was opposed to the extension and would be impaired by anything less than full payment.

n27

27. In re All Seasons Indus., Inc., 121 B.R. 1002 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1990).

n28

28. In re Crescent Beach Inn, Inc., 22 B.R. 155 (Bankr. D. Me. 1982).

n29

29. In re Express One Int'l, Inc., 194 B.R. 98, 100 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1996) (finding cause to extend the exclusive period where the debtor had been diligent in its attempts to reorganize and extension was not sought for an indefinite period). The court in American Network Leasing v. Apex Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (In re Apex Pharmaceuticals, Inc.), 203 B.R. 432, 441 (N.D. Ind. 1996), held that during the initial 120-day exclusive period bankruptcy courts have applied a lesser standard in determining whether the burden of showing a reasonable possibility of a successful reorganization within a reasonable time has been satisfied. See also Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus. (In re Hoffinger Indus.), 292 B.R. 639 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003) (affirming a bankruptcy court grant of a third extension of the exclusive periods); In re Adelpia Communications Corp., 352 B.R. 578, 587-90 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006) (conducting a detailed review of each of the nine factors as applied to the facts of the case and granted an extension); In re Central Jersey Airport Servs., LLC, 282 B.R. 176, 184 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2002) (granting a 30-day extension for progress in negotiations); In re Service Merchandise Co., Inc., 256 B.R. 744, 751 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2000).

n30

30. In re Dow Corning Corp., 208 B.R. 661, 670 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1997).

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 437 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 101(51C) defines small business case as a case filed under chapter 11 of this title in which the debtor is a small business debtor. 11 U.S.C. § (51D), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 431(a) (2005), defines small business debtor as: (A) subject to subparagraph (B), a person engaged in commercial or business activities (including any affiliate of such person that is also a debtor under this title and excluding a person whose primary activity is the business of owning or operating real property or activities incidental thereto) that has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts as of the date of the petition or the date of the order for relief in an amount not more than $2,190,000 (excluding debts owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders) for a case in which the United States trustee has not appointed under section 1102(a)(1) a committee of unsecured creditors or where the court has determined that the committee of unsecured creditors is not sufficiently active and representative to provide effective oversight of the debtor; and (B)[not including] any member of a group of affiliated debtors that has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts in an amount greater than $2,190,000 (excluding debt owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders).

n33

33. In re Florida Coastal Airlines, Inc., 361 B.R. 286, 292 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2007)

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(e)(1)(B).

n35

35. But see In re Florida Coastal Airlines, Inc., 361 B.R. 286, 292 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2007).

n36

36. In re Aspen Limousine Serv. Inc., 187 B.R. 989 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1995), aff'd, 193 B.R. 325 (D. Colo. 1996).

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(e)(3).

n38

38. See In re Western Steel & Metals, Inc., 200 B.R. 873, 876 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) (failure to file a plan within the statutory deadline imposed by section 1121(e)(2) constitutes cause for dismissal under section 1112(b)). But see In re Florida Coastal Airlines, Inc., 361 B.R. 286, 292 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2007) (court held that the 300-day deadline for filing small business reorganization plans applied only to the debtor).

n39

39. 28 U.S.C. § 158(a).

n40

40. Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

n41

41. Ed. note: [P]revent should read permit.

n42

42. 140 Cong. Rec. H10,752, H10,764 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994).

n43

43. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 3016.03.

n44

44. For a case in which the court noted the date the debtor anticipated filing its plan and then granted the debtor an extension of time to file its disclosure statement later than that date, see In re Farmland Industries, 286 B.R. 888, 895 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2002).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

121 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Modification of Plan After Confirmation in a Chapter 11 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1321

Collier on Modification of Plan After Confirmation in a Chapter 11 Case

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: In enacting Bankruptcy Code section 1127(b), Congress intended to safeguard the finality of plan confirmation. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers modification of a plan after confirmation in a chapter 11 case, including topics such as postconfirmation plan modification when the debtor is an individual, the definition of substantial consummation, and requirements for the postconfirmation plan to become the plan of reorganization.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Collier on Modification of Plan After Confirmation in a Chapter 11 Case

In enacting Bankruptcy Code section 1127(b), Congress intended to safeguard the finality of plan confirmation. n1 Except for the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, adding subsections (e) and (f) to section 1127 n2 in order to make chapter 13 modification provisions available when individual debtors file under chapter 11, section 1127(b) provides the sole means for modification of the plan of reorganization after it has been confirmed. n3 The equity power of section 105(a) cannot be used to produce a result contrary to the specific provisions of section 1127(b). n4 Postconfirmation modification may be made only by the proponent or by the reorganized debtor, n5 but not by the court n6 and may take place any time after confirmation, but must take place before the plan is substantially consummated. n7 Even though only the plans proponent may file a motion to modify it, if the plan contains provisions that are beyond the courts jurisdiction, such provisions may be stricken on motion of one other than the proponent. n8

Postconfirmation Plan Modification When Debtor Is an Individual. In the case of an individual who is a debtor in a case under chapter 11, postconfirmation modification can be made anytime before the completion of payments under the plan, regardless of whether the plan has been substantially consummated. When the chapter 11 debtor is an individual, the debtor, the trustee, the United States trustee or an unsecured creditor may request the modification of a plan. Because subsections (e) and (f), added in 2005, n9 make section 1127 substantially similar to sections 1229 and 1329 of the Code, it is likely that rules governing the procedure for plan modification similar to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3015(g) will be promulgated and that, until such promulgation, similar rules are likely to be adopted as local court rules.

Postconfirmation Modification Distinguished from Revocation of Confirmation Order. Postconfirmation modification must be distinguished from revocation of the order of confirmation under section 1144 of the Bankruptcy Code, which can be requested by any party in interest but which must be requested before 180 days after the entry of the order of confirmation.

Substantial Consummation Defined. The term, substantial consummation is defined in section 1101(2) n10 to mean:

- (A) transfer of all or substantially all of the property proposed by the plan to be transferred;
- (B) assumption by the debtor or by the successor to the debtor under the plan of the business or of the management of all or substantially all of the property dealt with by the plan; and
- (C) commencement of distribution under the plan. n11

Confirmation of Plan Equivalent to Final Judgment in Ordinary Civil Litigation. It has been said that confirmation of a plan of reorganization is equivalent to a final judgment in ordinary civil litigation. Once that milestone has been reached, further changes should be allowed only for compelling reasons. n12 Modification of a confirmed and substantially consummated plan is forbidden except to the limited extent of 11 U.S.C. § 1127. n13 Some courts have held that section 1127(b) precludes a debtor from filing a second case under chapter 11 because any reorganization plan in the second case is a modification of the confirmed plan in the original case. n14 The better view is that the so-called chapter 22 cases, that is a chapter 11 case followed by a second chapter 11 case by the same debtor, is acceptable n15 because, as one commentator noted, [t]he commencement of a second case may at times represent the best means of maximizing creditor recoveries and perhaps preserving the debtor. n16

Requirements for Postconfirmation Modification Plan to Become Reorganization Plan. Subsection 1127(b) requires that, in order to become the plan of reorganization, the post-confirmation modified plan must meet the requirements of sections 1122 and 1123 of the Code, and must be confirmed by the court under section 1129 of the Code after notice and a hearing n17 and only if the court finds that circumstances warrant the proposed modification. The court may not adopt a modification that materially alters the plan and adversely affects creditors treatment. n18 The requirements for the modification of a plan include notice of the proposed plan modification, notice of the information necessary for the creditors to assess the nature and the impact of the modification, the opportunity of any impaired creditor to object to the modification and a ruling by the bankruptcy court that the plan as modified meets the requirements for confirmation. n19

For further discussion of Code section 1127, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1127.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 Antiquities of Nevada, Inc. v. Bala Cynwyd Corp. (In re Antiquities of Nevada, Inc.), 173 B.R. 926, 928 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1994).

n2 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 321(e) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n3 In re Logan Place Properties, Ltd., 327 B.R. 811, 814 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2005) (section 1127 is the exclusive means by which a plan can be modified); In re Rickel & Assocs., Inc., 260 B.R. 673, 677 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2001) (Section 1127(b) provides the sole means for modifying a confirmed plan.) The court in Lane v. Peterson, 899 F.2d 737 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 823, 111 S. Ct. 74, 112 L. Ed. 2d 48 (1990), held that section 1127(b) does not create a right of action by the debtor against a party who engaged in postpetition transactions that allegedly modified the plan. See also Paul v. Monts, 906 F.2d 1468 (10th Cir. 1990) (recourse must be had to state law and not section 1127 for the breach of an agreement to purchase the debtor's stock which was incorporated in the plan).

n4 In re Rickel & Assocs., Inc., 260 B.R. 673, 678 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2001) (bankruptcy court cannot modify a plan under § 105(a), and produce a result at odds with the specific provisions of § 1127(b)); In re Stevenson, 138 B.R. 964, 967 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1992); In re Charterhouse, Inc., 84 B.R. 147 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1988); see also Doral Ctr. Inc. v. Ionosphere Clubs, Inc. (In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc.), 38 C.B.C.2d 679, 685, 208 B.R. 812, 816 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (the bankruptcy courts approval of an agreement which changed the terms of a lease incorporated in a confirmed plan was a postconsummation modification prohibited by section 1127). But one court allowed the debtor to reopen the case under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b) for the purpose of modifying its plan. See In re Midlands Utility, Inc., 251 B.R. 296 (D.S.C. 2000).

n5 In re Longardner & Assocs., Inc. 855 F.2d 455 (7th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1015, 109 S. Ct. 1130, 103 L. Ed. 2d 191 (1989); In re Auto Dealers Servs., Inc., 89 B.R. 233, 236 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1988) (an entity not a party in interest attempted to propose a plan modification); see also In re Horne, 99 B.R. 132 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1989); In re Cinderella Clothing Indus., Inc., 93 B.R. 373, 378 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988). It has been held that a disbursing agent under a plan could seek to modify the terms of a confirmed plan. In re Castle Indus., Inc., 147 B.R. 941, 945 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1992) (also holding that the provisions of section 1127 must be followed and not the general equity powers of the bankruptcy court under section 105 of the Code). The court in In re Chicago, M., S. P. & P. R. Co., 51 B.R. 1005 (N.D. Ill. 1985), stated that debenture holders were entitled to amend a trustees plan to provide for acceleration of payments. But in In re Charter Co., 97 B.R. 629, 636 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1992), the court would not permit debenture holders to bring an action to modify a plan in order to extend the time to surrender their certificates (but allowed relief on other grounds). The court in Pamaco P'ship Mgmt. v. TMC Terraplan Mgmt., 158 B.R. 61, 65 (W.D. Va. 1993), stated that the former general partners could not seek to modify a plan because they were neither the plan proponent nor the reorganized debtor.

n6 Goodman v. Phillip R. Curtis Enters., Inc., 809 F.2d 228, 16 C.B.C.2d 277 (4th Cir. 1987) (reversing a bankruptcy court which on its own motion had modified a confirmed chapter 11 plan). But in Beal Bank, S.S.B. v. Jack's Marine, Inc., 201 B.R. 376 (E.D. Pa. 1996), a district court said that the bankruptcy judge who extended the payment deadline of a confirmed plan and required the debtor to assign mortgages, was not rewriting the plan but clarifying its ambiguities in the exercise of the court's continuing power to supervise the plan. And in In re A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 86 F.3d 364, 374-75 (4th Cir. 1996), the court found that this provision did not remove the court's inherent power to review attorneys fees.

n7 A chapter 11 plan may not be modified after substantial consummation. Goodman v. Phillip R. Curtis Enters., Inc., 809 F.2d 228, 16 C.B.C.2d 277 (4th Cir. 1987); Enterprise Financial Group, Inc. v. Curtis Mathes Corp., 197 B.R. 40 (E.D. Tex. 1996); In re Rickel & Assocs., Inc., 45 C.B.C.2d 1614, 260 B.R. 673 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2001) (after the plan was substantially consummated, it could not be amended to provide that shareholders receive a distribution).

n8 In re A.J. Mackay Co., 13 C.B.C.2d 95, 50 B.R. 756 (D. Utah 1985); see also United States Brass Corp. v. Travelers Ins. Group, 301 F.3d 296 (5th Cir. 2002) (stating that arbitration cannot be substituted for litigation in a substantially consummated plan); In re Manges, 29 F.3d 1034, 31 C.B.C.2d 1247 (5th Cir. 1994) (setting out a three-pronged test to upset a reorganization plan: was a stay obtained, was there substantial consummation, and would the relief affect the rights of those not before the court); In re Penn Dixie Indus., Inc., 8 C.B.C.2d 1360, 32 B.R. 173 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983) (motion to change the plan is barred by res judicata, particularly when there was ample opportunity to object to confirmation).

n9 Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 321(e) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10 Section 1101(2) of the Code is derived almost verbatim from Section 229(a) of the Bankruptcy Act.

n11 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1101. Determination of substantial consummation turns on the facts of each case and the burden is on the party seeking to modify. In re Antiquities of Nevada, Inc., 32 C.B.C.2d 738, 173 B.R. 926, 928-29 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1994); In re Stevenson, 148 B.R. 592, 597 (D. Idaho 1992); In re Potts, 188 B.R. 575, 579 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1995) (The burden of proof is on the proponent of the modification to prove that the plan has not obtained substantial modification.). A retention of jurisdiction clause in a plan will not provide authority to modify after there has been substantial consummation. In re Davis Broadcasting, Inc., 169 B.R. 229, 234 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 176 B.R. 290, 292 (1994).

n12 In re UNR Indus., Inc., 20 F.3d 766, 30 C.B.C.2d 1547 (7th Cir. 1994).

n13 Holstein v. Brill, 987 F.2d 1268, 1270 (7th Cir. 1993). Confirmation sets the plan in stone unless the proponent chooses to alter it before it is substantially consummated. In re Diamond Mortgage Co. of Ill., 105 B.R. 876, 880 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989). In Gryphon at the Stone Mansion v. U.S. Trustee (In re Gryphon at the Stone Mansion), 204 B.R. 460, 464 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1997), the bankruptcy court sitting en banc held that the allowance of the U.S. trustee's claim for quarterly fees in cases confirmed and substantially consummated before the amendments to 28 U.S.C. § 1930 would constitute an impermissible modification to the confirmed plan.

Contra In re CF & I Fabricators of Utah, Inc., 214 B.R. 16 (D. Utah 1997); In re Munford, Inc., 216 B.R. 913, 918 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1997) (in which case the plan had been confirmed and substantially consummated, but a final decree had not been entered).

n14 In re Roxy Real Estate Co., Inc., 30 C.B.C.2d 570, 170 B.R. 571 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993); In re Miller, 122 B.R. 360, 366-67 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 1990); In re AT of Maine, Inc., 56 B.R. 55 (Bankr. D. Me. 1985); In re Northhampton Corp., 37 B.R. 110, 113 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1984). Contra In re Barrett, 964 F.2d 588, 27 C.B.C.2d 101 (6th Cir. 1992); In re Elmwood Dev. Co., 964 F.2d 508, 511 (5th Cir. 1992) (second filing is acceptable if there has been a material change in debtor's circumstances); In re Jartran, Inc., 886 F.2d 859, 867-69, 21 C.B.C.2d 1141 (7th Cir. 1988) (may file second case for a liquidating plan).

n15 In re Elmwood Dev. Co., 964 F.2d 508, 511 (5th Cir. 1992) (second filing is acceptable if there has been a material change in debtors circumstances); In re Jartran, Inc., 886 F.2d 859, 867-69 (7th Cir. 1988) (may file second case for a liquidating plan); In re Barrett, 964 F.2d 588 (6th Cir. 1992). But see In re Delray Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 212 B.R. 511, 516 (Bankr. D. Md. 1997) (renegotiation of previously agreed upon plan treatment is an impermissible motive for filing a successive case).

n16 Barry L. Zaretsky, Chapter 22 Cases, N.Y.L.J., vol. 206, no. 100, p. 3 (Nov. 21, 1991) (analyzing cases on both sides of the issue).

n17 It was improper to order the material modification of a plan where the debtor never filed a disclosure statement and did not give notice to the affected unsecured creditor. In re Downtown Inv. Club III, 19 C.B.C.2d 639, 89 B.R. 59 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988). Where the plan had been approved by the requisite number of creditors, it was unnecessary to make disclosure to classes of creditors who had rejected the plan. Holywell Corp. v. Bank of N.Y., 59 B.R. 340 (S.D. Fla. 1986), appeal dismissed sub nom. Miami Center Ltd. P'ship v. Bank of N.Y., 820 F.2d 376, reh'g denied, 826 F.2d 1010, vacated on denial of reh'g, 838 F.2d 1547, 18 C.B.C.2d 887, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 823, 109 S. Ct. 69, 102 L. Ed. 2d 46 (1988).

n18 In re Best Prods. Co., 177 B.R. 791 (S.D.N.Y. 1995). If a modification would upset the legitimate expectations of creditors, it may be refused. In re Envirodyne Indus., Inc., 29 F.3d 301 (7th Cir. 1994). The debtors inability to meet the financial performance required under the plan is not grounds for modification. In re Dam Road Mini Storage, 156 B.R. 270, 271 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1993); In re Modern Steel Treating Co., 25 C.B.C.2d 292, 130 B.R. 60, 65 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991). However, it has been found that modification would be warranted where, through no fault of the debtor's, its postconfirmation operations resulted in serious losses rendering the original plan unworkable. In re Gene Dunavant and Son Dairy, 75 B.R. 328 (M.D. Tenn. 1987).

n19 In re FCX, Inc., 853 F.2d 1149 (4th Cir. 1988), cert. denied sub nom. Universal Coops., Inc., v. FCX, Inc., 489 U.S. 1011, 109 S. Ct. 1118, 103 L. Ed. 2d 181 (1989). In re Scotland Guard Servs., Inc., 139 B.R. 264 (Bankr. D.P.R. 1991), finding that there must be an actual hearing on the propriety of the proposed modification.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

122 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Filing of Prepetition Tax Returns in a Chapter 13 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1322

Collier on Filing of Prepetition Tax Returns in a Chapter 13 Case

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 1308, enacted by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, requires chapter 13 debtors to file with appropriate taxing authorities, by the day before the section 341 meeting, all tax returns that the debtor was required to file for all taxable periods ending in the four years before the petition. If the debtor was not required to file a return, or has filed all required returns, no additional return need be filed.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code section 1308, enacted by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n1 requires chapter 13 debtors to file with appropriate taxing authorities, by the day before the section 341 meeting, all tax returns that the debtor was required to file for all taxable periods ending in the four years before the petition. n2 If the debtor was not required to file a return, or has filed all required returns, no additional return need be filed.

If the required returns are not filed by the first date set for the meeting of creditors, the trustee is permitted to hold the meeting open to give the debtor an opportunity to file them. However, the additional time cannot extend beyond 120 days. n3 However, if a return was not past due at the time of the petition, the extension may be to the date on which the return is due under the last automatic extension the debtor could receive, if a request for extension is made and that date is more than 120 days from the date of the meeting. n4 The court may also extend the filing period set by the trustee by 30 days, but not beyond the last extension date to which the debtor is entitled. n5

The primary purpose of section 1308 is to give taxing authorities the information they need in order to file proofs of claim, and a companion amendment to section 502(b)(9) provides that a taxing authority's proof of claim is to be considered timely if it is filed within 60 days after the filing of a tax return under section 1308. n6 Probably, this would include any return the debtor files after the petition date, although section 1308(a) could be read to encompass only returns required for the tax years ending in the four years before the petition.

Requirement to File Prepetition Tax Returns; 11 U.S.C. § 1308(a). Section 1308(a), enacted in 2005, n7 requires the debtor to file with the applicable taxing authorities all tax returns which the debtor was required to file for all taxable periods ending during the four years before the petition is filed. Those debtors who were not required to file returns, because their income was not sufficient under applicable law or for some other reason, will not be required to file returns under this provision. Presumably, section 1308(a) includes only returns that were not already filed, although it does not say so.

As a practical matter, section 1308(a) requires debtors who have not filed all of the required tax returns to pay to have their attorney, accountant or other tax return preparer prepare and file the missing returns, even if they do not owe any taxes. If the debtors attorney assists the debtor in the preparation of the returns, the attorneys fees may be allowed as administrative expenses in the bankruptcy cases under section 330(a)(4)(B), so that they would be paid ahead of other creditors under section 1326(a)(2).ⁿ⁸ Otherwise, the necessary costs of an accountant or other tax return preparer would be allowable as a living expense under section 1325(b).ⁿ⁹

The enforcement mechanism for section 1308(a) is the right of a party in interest or the United States trustee to move for dismissal under section 1307(e), also enacted in 2005,ⁿ¹⁰ if the required returns are not filed.ⁿ¹¹ Generally, a trustee should not move for dismissal unless the trustee believes, after questioning the debtor at the section 341(a) meeting, that returns were required and not filed. A taxing authority is unlikely to move for dismissal unless the debtor has listed an obligation to the taxing authority on the schedule of liabilities. If no such obligation is listed, and the taxing authority is not aware of both the bankruptcy and an unpaid tax in time to file a proof of claim, then no obligation to the taxing authority would be discharged.ⁿ¹² In addition, the filing of returns required by section 1308 is a condition of confirmation of a chapter 13 plan.ⁿ¹³

As discussed below, the chapter 13 trustee and the court may grant additional time, within certain limits, for the debtor to file the required returns.ⁿ¹⁴

Extension of Time Granted by Trustee; 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(1). If the required returns are not filed by the deadline, set in section 1308(a), the chapter 13 trustee has the discretion to hold the creditors meeting open for a reasonable time to afford the debtor a period of up to 120 days to file the returns. If a return was not past due on the petition date, and the debtor timely seeks an automatic extension of time to file the return, the trustee may extend the time for that return until the latest automatic extension date if that is more than 120 days after the meeting. The debtors request for an extension to the taxing authority must comply with applicable nonbankruptcy law. Although the language is not crystal clear, it appears that the rescheduled creditors meeting need not be the same day as the extended deadline for the returns to be filed. The reasonable period of time for rescheduling the meeting does not seem to be governed by the strict deadlines applicable to the maximum extension of time to file the returns.

Ordinarily, the trustee should grant a reasonable extension of time for a debtor to file required tax returns. It is quite common for debtors, who have been facing financial pressures and often other problems such as illness or divorce, to need time to assemble the necessary documents to file a return. The debtors bankruptcy case may have been filed in haste to prevent imminent harm, such as a foreclosure or repossession, before the debtor could assemble these papers.

Extension of Time Granted by Court; 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(2). Whether or not the trustee grants an extension of time, the debtor may move for an extension of time to file returns beyond any time established by trustee, but not more than 30 days after the trustees deadline.ⁿ¹⁵ If a return was not past due on the petition date, and the debtor timely requested an automatic extension, the extended deadline also may not be beyond the latest automatic extension date to which the debtor is entitled.ⁿ¹⁶

The court may only enter such a order after notice and a hearing and before the tolling of any applicable filing period determined under [section 1308(b).] It is not entirely clear what this language means. To toll normally means to take away or to remove, as in the tolling of a statute of limitations. But the filing periods under the subsection are only tolled by a trustees extension or the courts order, and the same sentence talks about extending the time period beyond the time established by the trustee, meaning that the court would be extending the time after the trustee has granted an extension. It would make no sense to seek a court order before a trustee extended the time, when the purpose of the court order is to gain an extension beyond what the trustee has granted. Perhaps the drafters meant that an order must be entered before the expiration of the filing period, but the expiration of a period is almost the opposite of its tolling. In light of this confused language, courts should probably consider any motion that is sought without unreasonable delay.

The court may grant a motion for an extension of time if the debtor demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the failure to file a required return was due to circumstances beyond the debtor's control. Such circumstances could be the inability to get all necessary records, such as W-2 forms, in time or general disarray of records resulting from divorce, poor record-keeping skills, or some other cause. The preponderance of the evidence language seems gratuitous, because that is the normal standard of proof. It should not require the court to hold a hearing if the motion is unopposed.

Definition of Return; 11 U.S.C. § 1308(c). Section 1308(c), also enacted in 2005, n17 defines the term return for purposes of section 1308. The term includes n18 a return prepared pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of section 6020 of the Internal Revenue Code or a similar state or local law, or written stipulation to a judgment or a final order entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal.

Internal Revenue Code section 6020 provides:

(a) Preparation of return by Secretary. If any person shall fail to make a return required by this title or by regulations prescribed thereunder, but shall consent to disclose all information necessary for the preparation thereof, then, and in that case, the Secretary may prepare such return, which, being signed by such person, may be received by the Secretary as the return of such person.

(b) Execution of return by Secretary

(1) Authority of Secretary to execute return. If any person fails to make any return required by any internal revenue law or regulation made thereunder at the time prescribed therefor, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return, the Secretary shall make such return from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise.

(2) Status of returns. Any return so made and subscribed by the Secretary shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

Thus, a return is deemed to have been filed for a tax year if the taxing authority has prepared a return for that tax year. Because in some places sections 1307(e) and 1308 speak of the debtor filing a return, it is unclear whether it is necessary for the debtor to have signed a return prepared by the taxing authority to meet the requirements of section 1308. A holding that the debtors signature is required might be deemed to contradict Internal Revenue Code section 6020(b)(2), which states that an unsigned return prepared by the Internal Revenue Service shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

For further discussion of Code section 1308, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch 1308.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

n1 1. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1308.02.

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(1)(A); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1308.03[1].

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(1)(B); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1308.03[2].

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1308.04.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(9), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(d) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Section 716(e) of Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005) states a sense of Congress that the Judicial Conference of the United States should propose amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure allowing a taxing authority to object to confirmation of a chapter 13 plan up to 60 days after tax returns required under section 1308 are filed and to delay any deadline for objecting to a claim for a tax year for which section 1308 requires a return until after the return has been filed.

n7

7. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1326.02[2][b].

n9

9. Necessary accounting fees are specifically allowed under the Internal Revenue Service Other Necessary Expenses permitted in section 707(b)(2)(A)(ii) and incorporated in section 1325(b)(3).

n10

10. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.04[12].

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 521(j), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 720 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, provides for conversion or dismissal of a case for failure to file postpetition tax returns; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.25.

n12 12. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a), (b). Section 1328(a) was amended to except from discharge certain unscheduled debts by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02.

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(9), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06C.

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1308.03, Collier on Bankruptcy 1308.04 infra.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(2)(A). Section 1308 was added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b)(2)(b).

n17

17. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n18

18. Includes is not limiting. 11 U.S.C. § 102(3).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

123 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Chapter 13 Confirmation Hearing

2008 Emerging Issues 1323

Collier on Chapter 13 Confirmation Hearing

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers chapter 13 confirmation hearings, including topics such as notice, scheduling, and agenda of the confirmation hearing; and objection to the confirmation of a chapter 13 plan under section 1324(a).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview of Bankruptcy Code Section 1324. Section 1324(a) of the Bankruptcy Code states that the court shall hold a hearing on the confirmation of a chapter 13 plan. n1 The Code leaves no doubt that the chapter 13 confirmation hearing must be held and must be before the court. The language of section 1324 represents a distinct departure from the more elastic term, after notice and a hearing, n2 commonly employed throughout the Code. Moreover, the legislative history is unambiguous regarding the compulsory nature of section 1324. n3

An amendment to what is now section 1324(a), enacted in 2005, n4 added the words Except as provided in subsection (b) and to the beginning of the sentence stating that the court shall hold a confirmation hearing, but section 1324(b) does not contain any exception to this mandate. Section 1324(b) simply states when the hearing must be held.

Section 341(c) forbids the court to attend or preside at any meeting of creditors held in a chapter 13 case. n5 The only hearing that the court must conduct in every chapter 13 case in which a plan is confirmed or denied confirmation is the hearing on confirmation required by section 1324. Of course, section 524(d) permits the court to conduct a discharge hearing in every chapter 13 case in which the debtor is granted or denied a discharge, and requires the court to conduct a hearing if the debtor desires to reaffirm a debt and was not represented by an attorney in negotiating the reaffirmation agreement. n6

Any party in interest may object to confirmation of the debtors proposed plan, and objections to confirmation are normally heard and adjudicated at the confirmation hearing. n7

Notice, Scheduling and Agenda of Confirmation Hearing.

Notice of Confirmation Hearing; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(b), (k). The hearing on confirmation of a chapter 13 plan must be held on notice to all parties in interest, including the debtor, all creditors, the United States trustee, and the chapter 13 trustee. n8 Subsections (b) and (k) of Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002 require that no less than 25 days notice be mailed to these parties, advising them of the time fixed for filing objections to confirmation and the date of the confirmation hearing. n9 Typically, the notice of the confirmation hearing is a part of the notice of the meeting of creditors, sent shortly after the petition is filed. n10

Scheduling of Confirmation Hearing; 11 U.S.C. § 1324(b). Prior to the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n11 and beyond the requirement of 25 days notice, neither the Code nor the Bankruptcy Rules specified when the confirmation hearing was to be held. Some courts held the hearing almost immediately after the creditors meeting, in an effort to begin distributions to creditors as quickly as possible. The 1993 amendment to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2003(a) lengthened the time during which a section 341(a) creditors meeting can be held, so courts had more flexibility in coordinating the timing of that meeting with the scheduling of the confirmation hearing. n12 However, early scheduling of the hearing may deprive creditors of an adequate opportunity to assess the case at the creditors' meeting and then file objections to confirmation of the plan. n13

Section 1324(b), enacted in 2005, n14 provides that the confirmation hearing must be held between 20 days and 45 days after the date of the section 341(a) meeting of creditors, unless the court determines it would be in the best interests of creditors and the estate to hold the hearing earlier and there is no objection to an earlier date.

The language of this provision is somewhat unclear, but it should be interpreted as requiring the stated time periods to run from the conclusion of the meeting of creditors, rather than the first date set for the meeting of creditors. When Congress wished a time period to run from the first date set for the meeting of creditors, it so stated. n15 Moreover, interpreting the provision otherwise could result in the confirmation hearing being scheduled before the meeting of creditors is concluded. n16

Similarly, the language of section 1324(b) should be read to require only that the confirmation hearing be commenced within the deadline stated. There will be occasions on which the court cannot finish the hearing on the same day, or a proceeding to determine the amount of a claim must first be resolved, or a person necessary to the hearing is ill, and there is no reason for a rigid rule that would prevent the court from continuing the hearing to a later date. In any event, there are no apparent consequences if the confirmation hearing is not held by the deadline stated in section 1324(b).

For cases filed before the effective date of the 2005 amendments, many courts found it preferable to schedule the confirmation hearing at a later time, after the bar date for the filing of creditors' claims. Such scheduling allowed for an orderly process of filing written objections to confirmation and, if the court desires, answers to those objections. It also allowed the court to know what claims had been filed in the case, information which may be critical to whether the plan meets the confirmation standards of the Code. For example, Code section 1322(a)(2) requires the plan to provide for full payment of priority claims, n17 and it is possible that a large priority claim will not be filed until the last possible date for filing claims. Similarly, the confirmation standards of sections 1325(a)(4), n18 1325(a)(5) n19 and 1325(b) n20 all may require the courts knowledge of the amounts of allowed secured or unsecured claims in the case.

Under the 2005 amendments, courts are not able to schedule the initial confirmation hearing after the claims deadline. However, if a plans confirmation depends on the amount of a particular claim, or of all claims, filed, a court may still continue the confirmation hearing until the necessary information is available, which may not be until the claims bar date has passed.

Section 1324(b) also provides that the court may schedule the confirmation hearing earlier than 20 days after the section 341(a) meeting of creditors if it determines that is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, unless is an objection to the earlier date. This will allow continuation of the practice of some courts of holding the confirmation hearing immediately after, or within a short time after, the meeting of creditors, provided no party objects. There is no limitation on who may object, so the objection may be filed by any party, including a creditor, the trustee or the debtor.

Agenda of Confirmation Hearing. The agenda of the confirmation hearing is not set forth in section 1324, except that the section permits any party in interest to object to confirmation of the plan. The remaining agenda may include taking evidence as to the suitability of the plan for confirmation under section 1325, n21 including the ability of the debtor to comply with the plan, n22 the determination of acceptances and rejections n23 and consideration of preconfirmation modifications filed pursuant to section 1323. n24 Valuation of collateral is often an important issue at the confirmation hearing, n25 but courts vary widely in the procedure to be followed in raising the issue, with some courts requiring a separate proceeding to be filed. n26

However, the court need not take evidence on confirmation issues when there is no objection to confirmation. n27 Indeed, as the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit stated in In re Szostek, n28 while the court and the trustee have some obligation to determine whether a plan complies with the appropriate sections of the Bankruptcy Code prior to confirmation, a creditor that does not object to confirmation may not later complain that the plan should not have been confirmed, because the affirmative obligation to object to the plan rests with the creditor, not the court or the trustee. The court normally has sufficient information from the documents filed in the case to determine whether the plan satisfies the requirements of section 1322(a) n29 and the confirmation standards of subsections 1325(a)(1), (2), (4), (5) and (6) are not mandatory, so that they will not be in issue unless a party objects or the court raises them sua sponte. n30 The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure expressly excuse the court from taking evidence on the remaining standard of good faith if no objection to the plan is timely filed. n31 The court also has the benefit of the views and any recommendation of the chapter 13 trustee, who has an overview of the case and is required to attend the confirmation hearing, n32 although the trustee's views or recommendations are in no way binding on the court. Therefore, unless the court requires the debtor's testimony or there is an objection to confirmation to which it would be relevant, the debtor need not attend the confirmation hearing. n33

Objection to Confirmation; § 1324(a). Section 1324(a) expressly authorizes any party in interest, including any secured or unsecured creditor, to object to the confirmation of a chapter 13 plan. n34 The United States trustee also has standing to be heard regarding confirmation of the plan. n35 Although acceptance of a chapter 13 plan is not required on the part of the holders of allowed unsecured claims, n36 any holder of an allowed unsecured claim may object to the confirmation of the plan on grounds that it fails to comply with one or more of the requirements of section 1325. n37 However, a creditor who does not hold an allowed claim, because, for example, a claim was never filed, generally is not a party in interest with standing to object to confirmation of the plan. n38 Any material way in which the plan is not in compliance with section 1325, n39 any other provision of chapter 13 n40 or any other applicable provision of title 11 n41 is a sufficient basis upon which to object to its confirmation. n42

The right to object to confirmation of the plan is usually a creditors only opportunity to contest the debtors treatment and possible discharge of the creditors claim in chapter 13, because--unlike in chapter 7 and chapter 11--there is no possibility of objecting to discharge at any other time. n43 Although a creditor is entitled to rely upon compliance with the terms stated in the plan, n44 if no objection to that plan is filed after proper notice of the case, the creditor is bound by the terms of the plan and has no right to later challenge its propriety. n45

Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3015(f) provides that an objection to confirmation must be filed and served on the debtor, the trustee and any other entity designated by the court, as well as transmitted to the United States trustee, before confirmation of the plan. n46 Local bankruptcy rules sometimes set more specific deadlines, n47 although arguably a local rule cannot shorten the time period allowed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. n48 The objection gives rise to a contested matter n49 that is to be litigated by the parties directly involved, including the debtor and the objecting creditor or creditors. Generally, the burden of going forward with evidence and the ultimate burden of proof is borne by the party objecting to confirmation, n50 and if that party fails to prosecute the objection, the objection should be dismissed. n51 The objection is usually heard at the hearing on confirmation, but it may also be heard at a separate hearing scheduled prior to the confirmation hearing.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1324, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch 1324.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 1324(a), formerly § 1324, as amended and redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. See 11 U.S.C. § 102(1); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.07[1][a].

n3

3. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 429 (1977).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. §§ 103(a), 341(c). Section 341(c) was amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 413 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.06[1][a][ii] and Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.60[3]. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 341.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 524(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.80[4] and Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 524.

n7

7. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1324.03.

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 1324(a), formerly § 1324, as amended and redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 429 (1977).

n9

9. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(b), (k); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 2002.

n10

10. See Official Form 9I.

n11

11. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12

12. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(a).

n13

13. See In re Robinson, 22 B.R. 497 (W.D. Va. 1982) (scheduling of confirmation hearing on same day as meeting of creditors did not give creditor adequate opportunity to investigate case and object to confirmation).

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n15

15. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16

16. See also 11 U.S.C. § 1308(b), which permits the meeting of creditors to be held open well beyond 45 days after the meeting.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 1322(a)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.03.

n18

18. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(4), providing that confirmation may be denied if unsecured creditors will not receive payments equivalent to present value of what they would have received in chapter 7 case; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.05.

n19

19. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5), providing that confirmation may be denied if each allowed secured claim provided for in plan not afforded rights specified in statute; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[1].

n20

20. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b), requiring, in some cases, all allowed unsecured claims to be paid in full; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.08[3].

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325.01.

n22

22. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(6); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.03[1][1]; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.07; cf. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(b)(2)(B).

n23

23. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1323(c), 1329(b)(1).

n24

24. See 11 U.S.C. § 1323; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1323.01.

n25

25. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 506, 1302(b)(2)(A), 1325(a)(5); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.03[1][k]; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[4].

n26

26. Compare In re Harvey, 213 F.3d 318 (7th Cir. 2000) (valuation as part of confirmation process); and In re Hudson, 260 B.R. 421 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2001) (valuation does not require separate proceeding as long as creditor receives adequate notice, discussing conflicting case law), with Sun Finance Co. v. Howard (In re Howard), 972 F.2d 639 (5th Cir. 1992) (separate proceeding required). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.02[2].

n27

27. In re Hines, 723 F.2d 333, 9 C.B.C.2d 1099 (3d Cir. 1983) (trustees recommendation is sufficient basis for confirming plan); In re Powell, 5 C.B.C.2d 775, 15 B.R. 465 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

n28

28. 886 F.2d 1405, 21 C.B.C.2d 889 (3d Cir. 1989).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 1322(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.02 Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.04.

n30

30 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.01.

n31

31. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3015(f); see 1993 Advisory Committee Notes to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3015 and 3020; Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 3015.

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(b)(2)(B); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.03[1][1]; see also In re Kelsey, 6 B.R. 114, 2 C.B.C.2d 1192 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1980).

n33

33. In re Perskin, 4 C.B.C.2d 294, 9 B.R. 626 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1981).

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 1324(a), formerly § 1324, as redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see In re Andrews, 49 F.3d 1404 (9th Cir. 1995) (trustee had standing to object to plan on grounds that secured creditors were not provided adequate protection); In re Davis, 239 B.R. 573 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1999) (trustee in debtors still-pending chapter 7 case could object to treatment of property chapter 7 trustee claimed as property of chapter 7 estate).

n35

35. 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(3)(C).

n36

36. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(4); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.05.

n37

37. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1324(a), 1325; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.02[1]; see also Benkelman Coop. Equity Exch. v. Koerperich (In re Koerperich), 3 C.B.C.2d 923 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1980).

n38

38. In re Stewart, 12 C.B.C.2d 86, 46 B.R. 73 (Bankr. D. Or. 1985); cf. In re Kressler, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11723 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 9, 2001), aff'd, 40 Fed. Appx. 712, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 14979 (3d Cir. July 25, 2002) (secured creditor could object to plan affecting its lien even though its claim had been disallowed as untimely filed).

n39

39. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.01.

n40

40. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.02[1].

n41

41. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.02[2].

n42

42. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(1).

n43

43. Compare 11 U.S.C. § 1328, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, with 11 U.S.C. §§ 727(c), 1141(d)(3).

n44

44. In re Fawcett, 758 F.2d 588, 12 C.B.C.2d 1011 (11th Cir. 1985).

n45

45. In re Pardee, 193 F.3d 1083 (9th Cir. 1999); In re Andersen, 179 F.3d 1253 (10th Cir. 1999); United States ex rel. I.R.S. v. Norton, 717 F.2d 767, 9 C.B.C.2d 336 (3d Cir. 1983); Lawrence Tractor Co. v. Gregory (In re Gregory), 705 F.2d 1118, 8 C.B.C.2d 605 (9th Cir. 1983); see also 1327.02 infra.

n46

46. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3015(f).

n47

47. See In re Gaona, 290 B.R. 381 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 2003) (objections untimely under local rule that required creditor to obtain hearing date by date section 341 meeting concluded and file objection next day); In re Carbone, 254 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (local rule required objections filed by later of 30 days after first date set for section 341(a) meeting or 30 days from service of modified plan).

n48

48. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9029(a) (local rules must be consistent with Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure); Collier on Bankruptcy, 9029.02; In re Gaona, 290 B.R. 381 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 2003) (local rule detailing procedure and timetable for objections was consistent with Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3015).

n49

49. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3015(f).

n50

50. In re Mendenhall, 54 B.R. 44 (Bankr. W.D. Ark. 1985); Pennsylvania v. Flick (In re Flick), 5 C.B.C.2d 494, 14 B.R. 912, (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981). But see In re Fries, 68 B.R. 676 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) (party raising objection to confirmation under 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b) has burden of going forward with evidence, but debtor has ultimate burden of persuasion on that issue); see also Education Assistance Corp. v. Zellner, 827 F.2d 1222, 17 C.B.C.2d 867 (8th Cir. 1987) (objecting party has at a minimum the burden of producing satisfactory evidence on issue of disposable income).

n51

51. In re Parker, 49 B.R. 61 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985); In re Powell, 5 C.B.C.2d 775, 15 B.R. 465, (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

124 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

New Ch. 13 Discharge Requirements Under Section 1328(f), (g) & (h) of the Code

2008 Emerging Issues 1324

Collier on New Chapter 13 Discharge Requirements Under Section 1328(f), (g) and (h) of the Code

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the new chapter 13 discharge requirements under section 1328(f), (g), and (h) of the Code, including topics such as discharge after prior discharge in a chapter 7, 11, or 12 case; discharge after prior discharge in a chapter 13 case; the requirement that a debtor must complete a personal financial management instructional course; and the delay of discharge because of a possible exemption objection.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1328 of the Bankruptcy Code contains the chapter 13 discharge provisions. The section provides for a discharge after the debtor has fully complied with his or her chapter 13 plan, and also for a hardship discharge in cases in which the debtor cannot complete payments under the plan due to circumstances for which the debtor should not be held accountable.

Section 1328(f), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, prohibits the court from granting a discharge of all debts provided for in the plan or disallowed under section 502 if the debtor has received a prior bankruptcy discharge in a prior bankruptcy case if the case was filed within the time period specified in section 1328(f).

Section 1328(g), also added in 2005, prohibits the court from granting a discharge if the debtor has not completed a personal financial management instructional course as described in section 111.

And section 1328(h), yet another subsection added in 2005, prohibits the court from granting a discharge until after it provides notice and a hearing on the issue of whether section 522(q) may be applicable to the debtor.

Chapter 13 Discharge as Bar to Further Chapter 13 Relief; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f). Prior to the 2005 amendments to Bankruptcy Code section 1328, n1 a chapter 13 discharge, whether granted under section 1328(a) or section 1328(b), constituted no bar to further relief under chapter 13, either by way of a further composition or an extension of debt. n2 Section 1328(f), enacted in 2005, prohibits a chapter 13 discharge in certain circumstances when a prior bankruptcy discharge has been entered.

Discharge after Prior Discharge in Chapter 7, 11 or 12 Case; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(1).

Section 1328(f)(1), enacted in 2005, n3 provides that if the debtor received a discharge in a chapter 7, 11 or 12 case that was filed during the four years prior to the date of the order for relief in a subsequent chapter 13 case, which is the date of the petition, n4 the debtor may not receive a chapter 13 discharge. This provision will preclude a debtor from receiving a discharge in a chapter 13 case filed soon after a chapter 7 case, a practice sometimes referred to as chapter 20 because it adds 13 to 7.

However, it is important to note that section 1328(f) does not prevent a debtor from filing a chapter 13 case after a chapter 7 case; it only prevents such a debtor from receiving a discharge in that chapter 13 case if it is filed within four years of the earlier petition. There may be occasions in which a debtor will find it advantageous to file a chapter 13 case even if a discharge is not available, in order to cure a default through a plan, or simply to seek protection of the bankruptcy court and the automatic stay while paying debts in an orderly fashion through a plan.

Discharge after Prior Discharge in Chapter 13 Case; § 1328(f)(2). Section 1328(f)(2), also added in 2005, n5 prohibits the entry of a discharge in a chapter 13 case filed within two years of the filing of a prior chapter 13 case in which a discharge was granted. This provision should rarely be applicable, because most chapter 13 cases in which discharges are granted last for three to five years. However, it is possible that a hardship discharge under section 1328(b) n6 could be granted to a debtor within two years of the chapter 13 petition in a prior case, or that a debtor completed payments on a plan within two years through a lump sum payment, perhaps obtained through refinancing a home mortgage.

It might be suggested that Congress really intended that the four-year period run from the date of the discharge in the prior case, but such a reading of the subsection does violence to its plain language, which links the time period to the filing of the prior case in each subparagraph. Moreover, because chapter 7 discharges are usually received within four or five months of the filing of the petition, such a reading would lead to a result under which a debtor could receive a discharge sooner after a chapter 7 case than after a chapter 13 case. Under such a reading, the debtor could receive a discharge within less than two and a half years after a chapter 7 case was filed, but typically not until five to seven years after a chapter 13 case was filed. That kind of reading would fly in the face of Congress oft-expresses policy of encouraging chapter 13 rather than chapter 7, punishing only those who successfully completed chapter 13 plans and received a discharge.

Again, it is important to note that section 1328(f)(2) does not preclude filing a chapter 13 case after a prior case in which a discharge was received, but only the receipt of a discharge if the second case is filed within the stated time period after the first case. A debtor may still file a chapter 13 case and utilize the tools in chapter 13 to cure a mortgage, deal with other secured debts, or simply pay debts under a plan with the protection of the automatic stay.

Section 1328(f)(2) also has no applicability if the prior chapter 13 case was dismissed, although other Code provisions may limit the debtor's rights in a subsequent chapter 13 case after a prior case is dismissed. n7

Requirement of Personal Financial Management Course; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(g). Section 1328(g), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n8 requires that before the debtor receives a discharge in chapter 13 the debtor must complete a personal financial management instructional course as described in section 111, n9 also added by those amendments. Probably, the rules will require some evidence to be provided to the court, perhaps through the filing of a certificate of course completion, so the court will know whether a discharge can be granted.

There are two exceptions to the requirement that the debtor take a financial management course prior to receiving a discharge. The debtor need not complete such a course if the United States trustee or Bankruptcy Administrator for the district determines that the approved courses that are available are not sufficient to service the additional individuals who would be required to take the course. n10 This language is peculiar and raises questions about whether the lack availability of courses can be found with respect to a particular group of individuals, such those residing in a particular geographic area or those who speak only certain languages other than English. In any event, such a certification must be reviewed by the United States trustee or Bankruptcy Administrator at least annually. n11

The second exception is for those individuals described in section 109(h)(4), which excuses from the credit counseling requirement individuals who the court finds to be unable to comply with the requirement because of incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a combat zone. n12 The definitions of disabled or incapacitated in section 109(h)(4) are restrictive. Incapacity is defined as impaired by reason of mental illness or mental deficiency so that [the debtor] is incapable of realizing and making rational decisions with respect to financial responsibilities. Disability is defined as so physically impaired as to be unable, after reasonable effort, to be unable to participate in an person, telephone, or Internet briefing By excepting such individuals from the education requirement, section 1328(g)(2) avoids the absurd situation in which a debtor would be required to complete a course even if suffering from Alzheimers Disease or some other disability that would make the course meaningless or even impossible.

Delay of Discharge Because of Possible Exemption Objection under Section 522(q); 11 U.S.C. § 1328(h).

Section 1328(h), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n13 prohibits the granting of a chapter 13 discharge unless there has been notice and an opportunity for a hearing with respect to the issue of whether section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor and whether a proceeding that may implicate section 522(q) is pending. The prohibition is intended to help effectuate section 522(q), which limits a debtors state homestead exemption in certain cases if the debtor has been convicted of a felony that renders the filing of the case an abuse of title 11 or if the debtor owes a debt arising from certain types of acts with respect to securities, a civil remedy under the federal racketeering law (RICO), or a criminal act, intentional tort or willful or reckless conduct causing serious physical injury or death to an individual in the preceding five years. n14

Specifically, under section 1328(h), the entry of a discharge requires the court to first find, after notice and a hearing, that there is no reasonable cause to believe that section 522(q)(1) may be applicable and also that there is no reasonable cause to believe that there is pending a proceeding that would render the debtor subject to section 522(q)(1)(A) or (B). The wording of section 1328(h) suggests that a discharge should be granted unless both limitations exist. In other words, the court must grant a discharge unless it finds that there is a reasonable cause to believe that a proceeding is actually pending and that proceeding could result in a judgment that would be of the type described in section 522(q)(1).

Section 1328(g) will most likely be effectuated by a requirement in the rules that the court provide notice to all parties of an opportunity to claim that grounds exist to delay the debtors discharge pending a proceeding of the type described. If no party requests a delay in the discharge, the requisite finding can be made and the discharge can be granted.

If the court does find that the discharge should be delayed under section 1328(g), that finding should not result in permanent denial of the discharge. The purpose of the delay is to permit a determination regarding whether the homestead exemption should be limited under section 522(q). Once that determination is made, and the nonbankruptcy proceeding is no longer pending, the chapter 13 discharge can be granted.

For further discussion of Code section 1328, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1328.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. In re Ciotta, 2 C.B.C.2d 132, 4 B.R. 253 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n3

3. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 301(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; 11 U.S.C. § 348(a).

n5

5. Pub. L. No. 109-8, (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.03.

n7

7. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 109(g), 362(c)(3)-(4); Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.08 and Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362.

n8

8. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 111; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 111.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(g)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(g)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. §§ 109(h)(4), 1328(g)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.09[4].

n13

13. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 522. It is unclear from which date the five years runs, especially in a chapter 13 case in which the discharge may be five years after the petition.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

125 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Effect of a Full-Compliance Chapter 13 Discharge

2008 Emerging Issues 1325

Collier on Effect of a Full-Compliance Chapter 13 Discharge

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the effect of a full-compliance chapter 13 discharge, including topics such as the extension of a chapter 13 discharge to all debts provided for by the plan; the discharge exception for long-term debts provided for under section 1322(b)(5); the discharge exception for certain taxes; and the discharge exception for debts incurred through fraud.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Discharge

The discharge for full compliance required by Bankruptcy Code section 1328(a) is not superfluous, even in extension plan cases in which all allowed claims are satisfied in full. In many chapter 13 extension plan cases, claims may have been reduced or disallowed in accordance with section 502. n1 A discharge for full compliance under section 1328(a) discharges not only debts n2 provided for by the plan, but also debts disallowed under section 502 n3 unless a claim was disallowed solely because it was not timely filed and the debt is nondischargeable under section 1328(a). n4

As originally enacted in 1978, section 1328(a)(2) excepted from a full-compliance discharge only those debts that were nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5). However, under amendments made in 1990, 1994 and 2005, n5 section 1328(a)(2) now excepts from a full-compliance discharge also debts that are specified in section 507(a)(8)(C) and in paragraphs (1)(B), (1)(C), (2), (3), (4), (5), (8) n6 and (9) n7 of section 523(a). Additionally, paragraph (3) was added to section 1328(a) to except from a full-compliance discharge debts for a criminal fine or restitution included in a sentence on the debtors conviction of a crime n8 and paragraph (4) was added in 2005, n9 also excepting from that discharge debts for restitution or damages awarded in a civil action as a result of willful or malicious injury by the debtor that caused personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual. n10 While these amendments have had the effect of significantly narrowing the full-compliance discharge, those debts listed in section 523(a) that section 1328(a) does not explicitly except from a full-compliance discharge remain dischargeable in a chapter 13 case, notwithstanding their nondischargeability in a chapter 7 case. n11

Discharge of Debts Provided for by the Plan. The chapter 13 discharge extends to all debts provided for by the plan, with but a few limited exceptions. The Code does not specifically define provided for, and some creditors have argued that if a plan does not propose to make payments on a debt it does not provide for that debt. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit properly rejected this argument in Lawrence Tractor Co. v. Gregory (In re Gregory),ⁿ¹² which held that to provide for a claim a plan need only make a provision for it, i.e., deal with it or refer to it. This broad definition of the term provided for was subsequently adopted by the Supreme Court in Rake v. Wade.ⁿ¹³ Even if the plan proposes to pay nothing to unsecured claimants, if those claimants have proper notice and an opportunity to object to confirmation their claims may be discharged under section 1328(a).ⁿ¹⁴

In view of the fact that Congress clearly contemplated chapter 13 plans paying little or nothing on unsecured debts,ⁿ¹⁵ this result is consistent with other portions of the Code. It would be anomalous to hold otherwise, and thereby render nondischargeable in chapter 13 a general unsecured claim that could be discharged with no payment in a chapter 7 case filed by the same debtor, simply because no payment is made on the claim in the chapter 13 case. Nor would it make sense to conclude that a very nominal percentage payment in a chapter 13 case should make the difference between dischargeability or nondischargeability of a debt; such a result would only bring about payments of a few cents to creditors who would otherwise receive nothing, a result that would increase administrative difficulties while providing no real benefit to creditors. Similarly, the fact that a creditor is not paid because it failed to file a claim when given the opportunity to do so has no relevance to the dischargeability of the debt.ⁿ¹⁶ As long as the plan contains some provision describing the treatment of that debt, and no exception to the chapter 13 discharge applies, the debt is discharged.ⁿ¹⁷ For example, in Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare v. Davenport,ⁿ¹⁸ despite the fact that the state creditor never filed a proof of claim in the chapter 13 bankruptcy case,ⁿ¹⁹ that creditors criminal restitution claim was held to be discharged.ⁿ²⁰ However, courts have held that a creditor that is not scheduled and does not have notice of the chapter 13 case in time to file a claim or to participate in the confirmation process has not been provided for by the plan. In In re Hairopoulos,ⁿ²¹ the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit found that the Internal Revenue Service had not been scheduled as a creditor and had never received any notice that the case had been converted to chapter 13 or notice of the confirmation hearing and claims deadline. Because the Internal Revenue Service was justified in believing it had no need to monitor the case after receiving an initial notice of a chapter 7 case with no expected assets, the court held that to discharge the tax debt after the lack of notice would have resulted in a lack of fairness and due process.ⁿ²² In some cases, the failure to schedule a creditor may be remedied, even after confirmation, if the debtor or creditor files a late claim to which no party objects, or if the debtor successfully seeks an enlargement of time to file a claim on behalf of the creditor.ⁿ²³ If a party objects to the new claim, the debtor may be able to resolve the objection by modifying the plan to assure that no party is prejudiced by allowance of the additional claim. The addition of section 523(a)(3) to the list of exceptions to discharge may clarify this issue, as discussed below.ⁿ²⁴

Discharge Exception for Long-Term Debts Provided for under Section 1322(b)(5); 11 U.S.C. §§ 1322(b)(5) and 1328(a)(1). Section 1322(b)(5) permits the debtor to make special provision for curing any default and maintaining payments under the plan on any secured or unsecured claim on which the last contract payment becomes due after the final payment required under the plan.ⁿ²⁵ It would be inequitable to provide for the payment of long-term debts in accordance with an installment payment schedule extending beyond the term of the plan, and still discharge those debts upon completion of payments under the plan. Section 1328(a)(1) excepts from a full-compliance discharge long-term debts provided for in accordance with section 1322(b)(5).ⁿ²⁶ However, a debtⁿ²⁷ is not nondischargeable under this subsection simply because it is a long-term debt that could be cured under section 1322(b)(5); it is nondischargeable only if cure is, in fact, provided for by the plan.ⁿ²⁸

Discharge Exception for Certain Taxes; 11 U.S.C. §§ 507(a)(8)(C), 523(a)(1)(B) & (C) and 1328(a)(2). The 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Codeⁿ²⁹ added to the list of debts nondischargeable under section 1328(a) tax debts specified in section 507(a)(8)(C) and in section 523(a)(1)(B) and (C).

Section 507(a)(8)(C) describes trust fund taxes that the debtor is required to withhold for the benefit of taxing authorities, such as income taxes, Social Security and Medicare taxes withheld from employees' wages, and sales taxes.ⁿ³⁰ This exception will apply primarily to chapter 13 debtors who have operated a business in which they had employees or made sales. It also includes liability of a debtor as a responsible person in a business owned by another, such as a corporation, under section 6672 of the Internal Revenue Code. n31 It does not include the employers share of employment taxes, which is covered by section 507(a)(8)(D). n32

Section 523(a)(1)(B), as amended in 2005, n33 describes taxes with respect to which a return, or equivalent report or notice was not filed or was filed late and within two years before the bankruptcy petition. n34 This addition marks a significant constriction of the chapter 13 discharge. Under the law prior to 2005, taxes for which no returns were filed could be discharged under section 1328(a), with the practical result that taxes that were old enough to no longer be entitled to priority under section 507(a)(8), and thus full payment under section 1322(a)(2), n35 could be eliminated without full payment. Under the amended section 1328(a)(2), such taxes, to the extent they are not paid in the chapter 13 case, will not be discharged.

Section 523(a)(1)(C), describes taxes with respect to which a fraudulent return was filed or the debtor willfully attempted to evade the tax. n36 Such debts, while less common, were also dischargeable prior to 2005.

Discharge Exception for Debts Incurred Through Fraud; 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(2) and 1328(a)(2). Also added in 2005 n37 to the debts nondischargeable under section 1328(a) were debts described in section 523(a)(2), for money, property or services obtained by false pretenses, fraud, or a false financial statement. The voluminous case law regarding this exception to discharge n38 will become applicable. Because section 523(c) requires creditors to bring proceedings raising this exception only in the bankruptcy court, n39 it is expected that Rule 4007 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure will be amended to set a deadline for bringing a proceeding under section 523(a)(2) in chapter 13 cases.

Also, because chapter 5 of the Code is generally applicable in chapter 13 cases, n40 section 523(d) will also apply to proceedings brought under section 523(a)(2) in chapter 13 cases. Debtors who prevail in such proceedings have a right to be awarded costs and reasonable attorneys fees against the creditor if the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, unless special circumstances would make such an award unjust. n41

Discharge Exception for Debts Not Listed or Scheduled by the Debtor; 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(3) and 1328(a)(2). Another exception to discharge added by the 2005 Amendment n42 to section 1328(a)(2) is the exception under section 523(a)(3) for debts not listed or scheduled in time to permit the creditor to timely file a proof of claim or, if the debt is nondischargeable under section 523(a)(2), (4), or (6), in time to file a proceeding to determine dischargeability. n43 The exception does not apply if the creditor had actual knowledge of the case in time to act, and presumably would not apply in chapter 13 with respect to debts nondischargeable under section 523(a)(6) because there is no exception to the section 1328(a) discharge for such debts. n44

Section 523(a)(3) will likely be interpreted in chapter 13 in the same way as it has been interpreted in other chapters. If a creditor would not have received a distribution even if a claim had been filed, as might occur in a plan paying no dividend to general unsecured creditors, the lack of knowledge in time to file a proof of claim would not bar discharge of the claim unless the debt was nondischargeable under section 523(a)(2) or (4) and the creditor did not learn of the case in time to file a dischargeability proceeding. n45

Discharge Exception for Debts Incurred Through Fraud as a Fiduciary; Embezzlement or Larceny; 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(4) and 1328(a)(2). Section 1328(a)(2) was also amended in 2005 n46 to include debts described in section 523(a)(4). These debts are those incurred through fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny. The case law regarding this exception is discussed in Collier on Bankruptcy. n47 Like debts under section 523(a)(2), debts are only nondischargeable in a bankruptcy case if a proceeding is brought in the bankruptcy court. n48 It is expected that Rule 4007 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure will set a deadline, similar to the deadline in other chapters, for initiating such a proceeding.

Discharge Exception for Debts for Domestic Support Obligations; 11 U.S.C.

§§ 523(a)(5) and 1328(a)(2). Debts provided for under the chapter 13 plan that are excepted from a full-compliance discharge under section 1328(a) include debts for domestic support obligationsⁿ⁴⁹ coming within the provisions of section 523(a)(5).ⁿ⁵⁰ It is important to note that this exception does not include debts in the nature of marital property settlements which are not within the scope of section 523(a)(5) but which are nondischargeable under section 523(a)(15).ⁿ⁵¹ That latter provision is applicable in chapter 13 only if the debtor receives a hardship discharge.ⁿ⁵²

Discharge Exception for Debts for Educational Loans; 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(8) and 1328(a)(2). The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 amended section 1328(a)(2) by adding the reference to paragraph (8) of section 523(a).ⁿ⁵³ The effect of this amendment is to exclude from the full-compliance discharge those debts for educational loans that are nondischargeable under section 523(a)(8).ⁿ⁵⁴ Thus, an educational loan within the ambit of that subsection is not discharged in chapter 13 unless repayment of the loan would impose an undue hardship on the debtor and the debtor's dependents.ⁿ⁵⁵ This amendment applies to bankruptcy cases commenced on or after November 5, 1990.ⁿ⁵⁶

Because the undue hardship provisions in section 523(a)(8) are carried over to chapter 13 through the incorporation of that section in section 1328(a)(2), a chapter 13 debtor may seek a determination that the debt should be discharged because payment of the debt would be an undue hardship. The standard for undue hardship should be the same as in chapter 7 and the debtor could thus seek such a determination early in the case based on the facts existing at that time, just as such a determination could be sought early in a chapter 7 case, in order to know whether the debt will be discharged. However, as in chapter 7, the debtor may also seek an undue hardship determination at some later time, such as the time the discharge is granted. A few courts have held that the issue of undue hardship is not ripe until at or near the time of discharge, since before then it is not known that the debtor will receive a discharge.ⁿ⁵⁷ However, there is no such limitation in Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 4007(b), which provides that a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt, other than under section 523(c), may be filed at any time.ⁿ⁵⁸ Moreover, the undue hardship determination would be necessary even if the case were to be converted to chapter 7 or if the debtor received a hardship discharge, since the same exception to discharge would be equally applicable under those circumstances. Ordinarily, the undue hardship determination is sought by an adversary proceeding filed pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7001. However, if a debtors plan provides that the holder of the loan shall be enjoined from collecting on the loan if the plan is completed because repayment would constitute an undue hardship, and a creditor has notice of that plan provision, the confirmation of a chapter 13 plan may also be a method of obtaining a finding of undue hardship.ⁿ⁵⁹ Under a 1999 amendment to Rule 7001, an injunction or other equitable relief need not be sought by an adversary proceeding if a chapter 13 plan provides for that relief. Moreover, a plan may contain any appropriate provision not inconsistent with title 11. Although a few courts have expressed displeasure with attorneys who have included such provisions in chapter 13 plans,ⁿ⁶⁰ these courts fail to recognize that every chapter 13 plan is a proposal by the debtor to which creditors can object, and that creditors must respond to the plan or be bound by their lack of response, just as debtors and other parties must respond to other types of proceedings that affect their rights.ⁿ⁶¹ In making the undue hardship determination in a chapter 13 case, the court should not presume that all funds that were used for plan payments will be available for student loan payments when the case is concluded and plan payments end. The debtor or the debtors dependents may well have been suffering undue hardship in order to make the plan payments, perhaps to save the family's home from foreclosure. Necessary family expenses may have been deferred during the plan period or may have increased since commencement of plan payments. The debtors income may have decreased. The undue hardship determination, whether made at the beginning of the case or at the time of discharge, must be decided based on all of the relevant circumstances at the time of the determination.ⁿ⁶²

Discharge Exception for Debts for Death or Personal Injury Caused by Debtors Operation of Motor Vehicle While Intoxicated; 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(9) and 1328(a)(2).

The Criminal Victims Protection Act of 1990ⁿ⁶³ added to section 1328(a)(2) the reference to section 523(a)(9).

As a result of this amendment, the full-compliance discharge under section 1328(a) does not discharge debts that are nondischargeable under section 523(a)(9); i.e., debts for death or personal injury caused by the debtors operation of a motor vehicle if such operation was unlawful because the debtor was intoxicated from using alcohol, a drug, or another substance. n64

Discharge Exception for Debts for Restitution or Fine Included in Sentence on Debtors Conviction of Crime; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(3). The Criminal Victims Protection Act of 1990 added paragraph (3) to section 1328(a). n65 Paragraph (3) excludes from the full-compliance discharge in chapter 13 cases debts for restitution included in a sentence on the debtors conviction of a crime. n66 This amendment has the effect of limiting the Supreme Courts decision in Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare v. Davenport. n67 When the debt is for restitution included in a sentence on the debtors conviction of a crime, the provisions of paragraph (3) apply, and the Courts decision in Davenport cannot operate to make the debt dischargeable in the chapter 13 case. Thus, Davenport was legislatively overruled but only to the extent that it conflicts with section 1328(a)(3). n68

It is important to note that the amendment does not apply when the restitution order does not result from conviction of a crime. When restitution obligations result from criminal proceedings that did not result in a conviction, such as a pretrial diversion program or an agreement that charges will be dropped on condition of restitution, those obligations remain dischargeable. n69

It is also important to note that the amendment did not alter, and in fact reaffirmed, the Supreme Court's conclusions that criminal restitution obligations are claims that may be provided for in a chapter 13 plan n70 and that the automatic stay bars their enforcement during a chapter 13 case. n71 Therefore, only that portion of a nondischargeable restitution obligation that is still unpaid at the conclusion of the chapter 13 case will remain owing by the debtor due to the amendment to the statute. The debtor may even seek to separately classify the restitution obligation for payment prior to other claims to minimize this remaining debt and, in view of the more harsh enforcement mechanisms available with respect to most restitution debts, should probably be permitted to do so. n72

Section 1328(a)(3) was amended by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n73 which added the words or a criminal fine to the subsection. This amendment renders nondischargeable any criminal fine that was imposed in a sentence upon a debtors conviction of a crime. The exception is thus narrower than the exception to the chapter 7 discharge in section 523(a)(7), which covers all fines and penalties owed to governmental units, n74 in that it is limited only to criminal fines imposed upon conviction of a crime. n75 But it is also broader than that exception to the extent that it does not exclude from the exception fines that are in compensation for actual pecuniary loss.

To determine whether a particular fine is dischargeable under section 1328(a)(3), an examination of applicable criminal law will often be necessary. n76 For example, is a debtor convicted when he or she receives a parking ticket or a traffic ticket and does not contest it? Is the fine considered a sentence as that term is defined under applicable law? Is the offense classified as a crime under state law? Only if the fine is imposed after a conviction of a crime and as part of a sentence is it nondischargeable in chapter 13. Similarly, assessments that are neither restitution nor fines, such as costs, are still dischargeable in chapter 13. Prior case law holding that criminal fines and costs are dischargeable n77 should therefore remain good law to the extent such fines and costs are not within the very specific language of section 1328(a)(3).

Debts for Restitution or Damages Awarded for Willful or Malicious Injury or Death; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(4). Section 1328(a)(4), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n78 makes nondischargeable in the full compliance discharge certain debts for personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual. For a debt to be nondischargeable under this provision it must meet several criteria.

The debt must be for damages or restitution awarded in a civil action. Thus, criminal restitution is not included, though many criminal restitution debts are within the scope of section 1328(a)(3). n79 It is also unclear whether a debt would be nondischargeable if no award had yet been made in a civil action when the bankruptcy petition was filed. If Congress had intended for a debt to be nondischargeable even if not yet awarded, the words awarded in would appear to be surplusage.

In addition, the debt must be a result of willful or malicious injury. This is a lower standard than section 523(a)(6), which requires the debt to be the result of a willful and malicious injury. n80 However, unlike section 523(a)(6), injuries to property are not included. The injury must a personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual. Unlike section 523(a)(6), section 1328(a)(4) need not be asserted during the bankruptcy case. A creditor holding a claim that is nondischargeable under section 1328(a)(4) may litigate the dischargeability of any unpaid portion of that claim after the chapter 13 discharge in a nonbankruptcy court. n81

Discharge Exception for Postpetition Debts Not Provided for by Plan. Debts incurred by the chapter 13 debtor after the commencement of the case and not provided for by the plan are not discharged under section 1328(a). Postpetition debts allowed under sections 502(a) and (b) and 1305(a), (b) and (c) provided for under the plan as permitted by section 1322(b)(6) are discharged under section 1328(a), unless the debt is based on a consumer debt claim under section 1305(a)(2) incurred by the debtor without the prior approval of the chapter 13 trustee, where the obtaining of approval was practicable. n82

Discharge Exception for Postpetition Consumer Debts Incurred without Trustees Approval; 11 U.S.C. § 1328(d). Section 1305(a)(2) permits the filing of a proof of claim based on a consumer debt, arising during the chapter 13 case, that is for property or services necessary for the debtor's performance under the plan. n83 Section 1305(c) requires disallowance of a postpetition consumer debt claim if the holder of the claim knew or should have known that obtaining the approval of the chapter 13 trustee was practicable but was not done before the incurring of the debt. n84 Section 1322(b)(6) permits a chapter 13 plan to propose payment of a claim allowed under section 1305(a)(2). n85 Thus, as a practical matter, no postpetition claim may be discharged unless the holder of the claim and the debtor agree, since the claim may be allowed only if the holder files a claim and the plan will provide for the claim only if the debtor files a plan that does so. n86

Section 1328(d) renders a discharge granted under section 1328 ineffective against a postpetition consumer debt claim incurred without the prior approval of the chapter 13 trustee, where it was practicable to obtain such approval. n87 Section 1328(d) has the effect of denying discharge of a postpetition consumer debt claim disallowed under section 1305(c). n88 Of course, if the party with whom the debtor incurred a postpetition consumer debt knew or should have known that prior approval by the chapter 13 trustee was practicable, and approval was not obtained, the postpetition debt claim is to be disallowed. n89

Debts Made Nondischargeable by Other Statutes. In addition to section 1328 of the Code, Congress has passed other statutes that might render certain debts nondischargeable in chapter 13, even when there has been full compliance with the plan. Two such statutes are sections 254 and 292f(g) of title 42 of the United States Code. These statutes prohibit the discharge in bankruptcy of certain obligations arising from health education programs within five years after the date repayment is to begin, and after that five years permit discharge only if denial of a discharge would be unconscionable. n90 In part because the five-year period in each of these statutes runs to the date of discharge rather than the date of the petition, courts have struggled to reconcile them with chapter 13 in cases when the discharge is beyond the five-year time frame. n91

Congress also has passed other non-Bankruptcy Code provisions relating to discharge. In the National Defense Authorization Act of 1991, n92 certain obligations arising from retention bonuses paid to military officers are made nondischargeable when a bankruptcy discharge is entered less than five years after the termination of the retention agreement. n93 Several other similar provisions limit or prohibit the discharge of other debts incurred through participation in military programs. n94 The five-year period running back from the date of discharge in these statutes presents the same issues as the five year period in the health education provisions, n95 and could mean that in at least some chapter 13 cases, when the discharge is less than five years from the termination of the agreement, a discharge of the obligation would be barred.

In addition, section 656(b) of the Social Security Act n96 provides that a debt owed under state law to a state or a municipality that is in the nature of support and enforceable under Part IVD of the Social Security Act is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. If the release of a debt is the same as a discharge, this provision might encompass some debts not encompassed in section 523(a)(5). However, the same legislation that enacted the 1996 amendment to 42 U.S.C. § 656 also added a new exception to discharge in section 523(a)(18) for the same debts as are described in 42 U.S.C. § 656. Because this exception does not appear in 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a), and because section 523(a)(18) would be completely superfluous if 42 U.S.C. § 656 accomplished the same result for all chapters (Congress presumably would have amended that section if it had intended the exception to apply in chapter 13), it is not altogether clear that 42 U.S.C. § 656, amended by the same section of the same legislation, should be read to create an exception to the chapter 13 full-compliance discharge. Nonetheless, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held, in In re Cervantes, n97 that a support debt owed to a governmental unit is nondischargeable in chapter 13 due to section 656, despite the moderate inconsistency in the statutory scheme.

The inconsistent statutory drafting was corrected, to some extent by the 2005 amendments to section 523(a), which broadened section 523(a)(5) to include all domestic support obligations, as that term was newly defined in section 101, and by the repeal of section 523(a)(18), presumably because it was deemed superfluous. n98

Interest on Nondischargeable Debts. Ordinarily, if a debt is not discharged in a case under any chapter, interest on the debt continues to run and is also nondischargeable. n99 This rule applies in chapter 13 as well, although it can have anomalous results. For example, in Leeper v. Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency, n100 the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held that, even though the debtors had paid 100 percent of a student loan claim in their plan, interest on the loan which accrued during the plan remained to be paid after the discharge. Notwithstanding the fact that such interest could not have been included in the claim itself, due to section 502(b)(2), the court held that the interest could continue to accrue as a personal liability of the debtors. n101

However, if a plan is confirmed that specifically provides that postpetition interest on a nondischargeable debt will be discharged upon completion of the plan, that plan is binding upon the creditor under section 1327(a). n102 Although a valid objection to such a plan would probably be granted, if no objection is made at the time of confirmation, such an objection is waived. n103

A debtor might also choose to propose a plan that paid postpetition interest to a creditor holding a nondischargeable claim. Although a trustee or creditor might object to such a plan, the separate classification of a debt for this preferred treatment would likely be permissible under section 1322(b)(1), especially in the case of priority nondischargeable debts for domestic support obligations, due to the special societal concern with payment of such debts. n104 Alternatively, if the plan were confirmed because no party objected to the provision, the separate classification would also be permitted. n105

Section 1322(b)(10), added by the 2005 amendments, n106 specifically permits a debtor to pay interest on nondischargeable claims if the debtor's plan proposes to pay all allowed claims in full.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1328, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1328.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 11 U.S.C. § 502. Section 502(b)(9) was added by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394, to clarify that latefiled claims are disallowed in chapter 13 cases. See also In re Foster, 4 C.B.C.2d n2 See 11 U.S.C. § 101 (defining debt); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.12[5]; see also 11 U.S.C. §101 (defining claim). But cf. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(c); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.03[3].

763, 11 B.R. 476 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1981).

n3 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.72; see also, e.g., In re Christian, 8 C.B.C.2d 14, 25 B.R. 438 (Bankr. D. N.M. 1982) (disallowed claim for postpetition interest on federal tax claim discharged under 11 U.S.C. § 1328(c)); In re Foster, 4 C.B.C.2d 763, 11 B.R. 476 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1981) (disallowance of claim due to untimely filing under Fed. R. Bankr. P. 13-302(e)(2) results in discharge of debt). But see Doane v. Appalachian Power Co. (In re Doane), 6 C.B.C.2d 1215, 1217, 19 B.R. 1007, 1009 (W.D. Va. 1982) (discharge of debts under chapter 13 only discharges those debts that were included in plan).

n4 See Woods v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (In re Woods), 233 F.3d 324 (5th Cir. 2000) (student loan claim disallowed as untimely was not discharged due to section 1328(a) exception to discharge).

n5 See Criminal Victims Protection Act of 1990, enacted as part of Crime Control Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-647 (1990), and also as separate piece of legislation, Pub. L. No. 101-581 (1990); Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394; Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][h], concerning debts for student loans coming within provisions of section 523(a)(8).

n7 See 1328.02[3][i], concerning debts for death or personal injury caused by debtor's operation of motor vehicle while intoxicated, under section 523(a)(9).

n8 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][j].

n9 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][k].

n11 See Pennsylvania Dep't of Public Welfare v. Davenport, 495 U.S. 552, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1990); In re Burrell, 1 C.B.C.2d 474, 2 B.R. 650 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 2 C.B.C.2d 1019, 6 B.R. 360 (N.D. Cal. 1980) (debts resulting from fraud and embezzlement dischargeable in chapter 13); William Iselin & Co. v. Lewis (In re Lewis), 2 C.B.C.2d 1138, 5 B.R. 575 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980) (claims based upon 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4) & (6) dischargeable in chapter 13); In re Marlow, 1 C.B.C.2d 705, 3 B.R. 305 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1980) (debt resulting from false financial statement dischargeable in chapter 13); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[2].

n12 705 F.2d 1118, 8 C.B.C.2d 605 (9th Cir. 1983).

n13 508 U.S. 464, 473, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 2193, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 434, 28 C.B.C.2d 983, 990 (1993).

n14 508 U.S. 464, 473, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 2193, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 434, 28 C.B.C.2d 983, 990.

n15 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.08.

n16 In re Dixon, 218 B.R. 150 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1998); United States v. Lee, 184 B.R. 257 (W.D. Va. 1995) (responsible person tax penalties based upon prepetition withholding were discharged even though IRS had not yet assessed them on date of petition and did not file timely proof of claim for them); In re Tomlan, 102 B.R. 790 (E.D. Wash. 1989).

n17 See In re Hardy, 56 B.R. 95 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1985) (plan confirmed even though no creditors had filed claims and none would be paid).

n18 495 U.S. 552, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1990).

n19 495 U.S. 552, 557, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2130, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 595, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1069.

n20 495 U.S. 552, 564, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2134, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 599-600, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1074. Davenport was decided before enactment of section 1328(a)(3), which excludes from full-compliance discharge in chapter 13 cases debts for restitution included in sentence on debtor's conviction of crime. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][f].

n21 118 F.3d 1240 (6th Cir. 1997).

n22 See also In re Tipton, 118 B.R. 12 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1990).

n23 See In re Moore, 247 B.R. 677 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 2000).

n24 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][e].

n25 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.09.

n26 A technical amendment to section 1328(a)(1) deleting the words of this title was made by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n27 A technical amendment to section 1328(a)(1) deleting the words of this title was made by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n28 In re Chappell, 984 F.2d 775, 28 C.B.C.2d 431 (7th Cir. 1993); In re Ali, 63 B.R. 591 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1986).

n29 Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n30 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.10[4].

n31 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.10[4][a].

n32 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.10[5].

n33 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n34 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.07[3].

n35 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.03.

n36 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.07[4].

n37 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n38 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.08.

n39 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.03, Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.04.

n40 11 U.S.C. § 103(a).

n41 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.08[8].

n42 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n43 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.09.

n44 Some debts within the scope of section 523(a)(6) are also within the scope of section 1328(a)(4), but there is no requirement that a proceeding be brought during the bankruptcy case under the latter exception. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][k]. However, it remains to be seen whether courts will apply section 523(c) to a debt that is nondischargeable under section 1328(a)(4) where the debt is for willful and malicious injury to a person and, therefore, the debt is of a kind specified in section 523(a)(6).

n45 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.09[3][a].

n46 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n47 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.10.

n48 11 U.S.C. § 523(c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.03, Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.04.

n49 Domestic support obligation is defined in section 101; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

n50 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(5) (as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005); 1328(a)(2); see Norman v. Norman (In re Norman), 4 C.B.C.2d 1573, 13 B.R. 894 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1981); In re Syrus, 4 C.B.C.2d 1172, 12 B.R. 605 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1981); William Iselin & Co. v. Lewis (In re Lewis), 2 C.B.C.2d 1138, 5 B.R. 575 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980); In re Marlow, 1 C.B.C.2d 705, 3 B.R. 305 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1980); In re Haag, 2 C.B.C.2d 144, 3 B.R. 649 (Bankr. D. Or. 1980); Johnson v. Seely (In re Seely), 2 C.B.C.2d 1128, 6 B.R. 309 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1980); In re Burrell, 1 C.B.C.2d 474, 2 B.R. 650 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 2 C.B.C.2d 1019, 6 B.R. 360 (N.D. Cal. 1980). See generally In re McGinnis, 18 B.R. 525 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982); Cleveland Trust Co. v. Keckler (In re Keckler), 3 B.R. 155, 1 C.B.C.2d 574 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1980).

n51 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523.

n52 11 U.S.C. § 1328(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.03[3].

n53 Pub. L. No. 101-508 (1990).

n54 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8) was amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005 to include additional educational loans not previously included under the exception; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.14.

n55 Woods v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (In re Woods), 233 F.3d 324 (5th Cir. 2000).

n56 As originally enacted, the amendment made by Pub. L. No. 101-508 contained a sunset provision. However, that provision was repealed by section 1558 of Pub. L. No. 102-325 (enacted on July 23, 1992).

n57 E.g., In re Raisor, 180 B.R. 163 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1995).

n58 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 4007.03.

n59 In re Andersen, 179 F.3d 1253 (10th Cir. 1999). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.02[1][c].

n60 E.g., In re Hensley, 249 B.R. 318 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 2000) (threatening sanctions if counsel did not delete provision from plan); In re Evans, 242 B.R. 407 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1999) (ordering counsel to show cause why he should not be sanctioned for including provision).

n61 See Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Gardner (In re Gardner), 287 B.R. 822 (D. Kan. 2002) (including undue hardship provisions in a plan is not automatically sanctionable and is not inappropriate if there is a good faith basis for them).

n62 See In re Strauss, 216 B.R. 638 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1998) (applying undue hardship standard in chapter 13 case).

n63 The Criminal Victims Protection Act of 1990 was enacted as part of the Crime Control Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-647 (1990), and also enacted as a separate piece of legislation, Pub. L. No. 101-581 (1990). The identical language exists in Pub. L. No. 101-647 as well as Pub. L. No. 101-581 because the text in Pub. L. No. 101-647 was not excised when it was duplicated in the separate legislation enacted as Pub. L. No. 101-581. Pub. L. No. 101-647 was signed into law on November 29, 1990, and became effective as of the date of enactment; Pub. L. No. 101-581 was signed into law on November 15, 1990 and became effective as of the enactment date.

n64 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(9), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.15.

n65 The Criminal Victims Protection Act of 1990 was enacted as part of the Crime Control Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-647 (1990), and also enacted as a separate piece of legislation, Pub. L. No. 101-581 (1990).

n66 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(3), as added by Pub. L. Nos. 101-647 and 101-581 and amended by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394.

n67 495 U.S. 552, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1990). For discussion of Davenport, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[2][a].

n68 See 136 Cong. Rec. S9663 (daily ed., July 12, 1990).

n69 Cf. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(13) (making nondischargeable all orders of restitution issued under title 18 of U.S. Code, enacted by Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-322 (1994)).

n70 Pennsylvania Dept of Public Welfare v. Davenport, 495 U.S. 552, 558-60, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2130-31, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 596-7, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1070-71 (1990).

n71 495 U.S. 552, 560, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2131-32, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 597-8, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1071-72 (1990).

n72 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.05.

n73 Pub. L. No. 103-394.

n74 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.13.

n75 But see In re Wilson, 252 B.R. 739 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2000) (interpreting conviction of a crime to include plea of guilty followed by deferred adjudication of probation).

n76 See, e.g., Bova v. St. Vincent De Paul Corp. (In re Bova), 276 B.R. 726 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2002) (examining Illinois criminal law to determine that use of enforcement mechanism allowing civil judgment for restitution did not divest the restitution obligation of its identity as part of the criminal sentence).

n77 E.g., Hardenberg v. Virginia, DMV (In re Hardenberg), 42 F.3d 986 (6th Cir. 1994).

n78 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n79 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][j].

n80 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.12.

n81 However, it remains to be seen whether courts will apply section 523(c) to a debt that is nondischargeable under section 1328(a)(4) where the debt is for willful and malicious injury to a person and, therefore, the debt is of a kind specified in section 523(a)(6). If courts hold that section 523(c) applies in those circumstances, section 1328(a)(4) would have to be asserted in the bankruptcy court.

n82 11 U.S.C. § 1328(d); see In re Thornton, 6 C.B.C.2d 1116, 21 B.R. 462 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1982).

n83 11 U.S.C. § 1305(a)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1305.02[2].

n84 11 U.S.C. § 1305(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1305.05.

n85 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(6); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.10.

n86 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1305.03[1].

n87 11 U.S.C. § 1328(d); cf. 11 U.S.C. § 1305(c).

n88 11 U.S.C. § 1305(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1305.05.

n89 In re Thornton, 6 C.B.C.2d 1116, 21 B.R. 462 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1982); 11 U.S.C. § 1305(c); see 1305.05 supra.

n90 See also 42 U.S.C. § 288-5 (National Institutes of Health loan program with similar five-year provisions).

n91 See, e.g., In re Johnson, 787 F.2d 1179, 14 C.B.C.2d 1223 (7th Cir. 1986); In re Cleveland, 89 B.R. 69 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988); United States v. Green (In re Green), 82 B.R. 955 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988); In re Gronski, 15 C.B.C.2d 967, 65 B.R. 932 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986).

n92 Pub. L. No. 101-510 (1990).

n93 Pub. L. No. 101-510 (1990), amending 37 U.S.C. to add §§ 301d(c)(3) and 317(f)(3).

n94 E.g., 37 U.S.C. § 302f (obligation of reserve health specialists who fail to honor military service obligation to refund special bonus pay not dischargeable); 37 U.S.C. § 302g(e) (refund obligations of reservist physicians who receive special pay and terminate service early not dischargeable for five years); 37 U.S.C. §§ 301d(c)(3), 301e(d)(3), 314(d)(4), 317(f)(3), 318(h)(3), 319(f)(3), 321(f)(3), 322(f)(4).

n95 See, e.g., In re Johnson, 787 F.2d 1179, 14 C.B.C.2d 1223 (7th Cir. 1986); United States v. Green (In re Green), 82 B.R. 955 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988); In re Lee, 16 C.B.C.2d 715 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1987); In re Gronski, 15 C.B.C.2d 967, 65 B.R. 932 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986).

n96 42 U.S.C. § 656(b), as amended by the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-193.

n97 219 F.3d 955, 962 (9th Cir. 2000).

n98 11 U.S.C. §§ 101, 523, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n99 Bruning v. United States, 376 U.S. 358, 84 S. Ct. 906, 11 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1964).

n100 49 F.3d 98 (3d Cir. 1995). But see In re Wasson, 152 B.R. 639 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1993).

n101 See also In re Foross, 242 B.R. 692 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1999) (postpetition interest on alimony, maintenance and support claims not discharged by chapter 13 discharge).

n102 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.02.

n103 In re Pardee, 193 F.3d 1083 (9th Cir. 1999).

n104 See In re Pitt, 240 B.R. 908 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1999); 1322.05[2][a] infra; see also In re Jacobson, 231 B.R. 763 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1999) (debtor to pay postpetition interest directly to nondebtor support creditor).

n105 But see In re Blumenschein, 283 B.R. 908 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2002) (when creditor did file claim for postpetition interest and plan did not clearly provide for payment of postpetition interest, such interest was not discharged).

n106 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Former section 1322(b)(10) was redesignated as section 1322(b)(11); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.13A.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

126 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Scope and Application of Chapter 15 of the Code

2008 Emerging Issues 1326

Collier on Scope and Application of Chapter 15 of the Code

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the scope and application of chapter 15 of the Code, including topics such as the purpose of chapter 15, other bankruptcy code provisions related to chapter 15, eligibility to be a debtor, proper venue for an ancillary proceeding, the scope of the application of chapter 15, and the exclusions from the scope of chapter 15.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Chapter 15 was added to the Bankruptcy Code by title VIII of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, (the 2005 Act) n1 to encourage cooperation between the United States and foreign countries with respect to transnational insolvency cases. This new chapter of the Bankruptcy Code incorporates the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency promulgated in 1997 by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL). The Guide to Enactment of the Model Law published by UNCITRAL as an aid to enacting countries provides historical and interpretive guidance to the meaning and purpose of the provisions that are embodied in chapter 15. n2 The Model Law and chapter 15 recognize the increasing incidence of cross-border insolvencies that follow continuing globalization of trade and investment. This increase leads to the concomitant need for domestic insolvency laws to deal predictably with cross-border cases. n3

The most striking impact of the title VIII amendments is the repeal of former section 304, Cases Ancillary to Foreign Proceedings, and its replacement by chapter 15 as the law governing ancillary cases. n4 Chapter 15 and accompanying amendments to the Bankruptcy Code also modify the venue rules for ancillary cases, provide outbound authority for representatives of United States bankruptcy cases to seek relief from foreign courts, address the management of simultaneous foreign and domestic proceedings involving the same debtor and assure fair notice and treatment of foreign creditors of United States debtors. n5

Chapter 15, like the Model Law, seeks to accomplish the primary goals of an ancillary proceeding through a legal regime that reconciles three related concepts: recognition of foreign insolvency proceedings; access to judicial proceedings in the United States by duly appointed foreign representatives of foreign proceedings; and availability of specified relief upon recognition of the foreign proceeding. Relief is designed to protect the interests of the debtor and its creditors in an orderly administration of the bankruptcy estate and to promote fairness for both local and foreign creditors. Chapter 15 then envelops its mechanism for ancillary relief in a broader structure that mandates cooperation with foreign courts and foreign representatives and coordination of multiple proceedings involving a common debtor.

Chapter 15 cases are generally intended to be supplementary to cases brought in the debtors home country. n6 Chapter 15, however, does not prevent commencement of a plenary case under another chapter of title 11 either before or after recognition has been granted to a foreign representative of a foreign proceeding. n7 In fact, upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, a foreign representative is authorized by the statute to commence a plenary case under title 11. n8 If a full case is commenced under another chapter of title 11 (or is already pending when a petition for recognition is filed), the court must follow chapter 15s provisions for cooperation and coordination of the cases. Alternatively, section 305 permits the court, after notice and a hearing, to dismiss or suspend proceedings in a case if a petition for recognition has been granted and the purposes of chapter 15 would be best served by such dismissal or suspension. n9

Chapter 15 is divided into several subchapters that address general provisions, access of foreign representatives and creditors to courts in the United States, recognition of foreign proceedings and relief, cooperation with foreign courts and foreign representatives and coordination of concurrent proceedings. Insofar as possible and as recommended by the Guide, chapter 15 follows the language, section numbering and general structure of the Model Law to promote uniformity in its adoption and application. n10

Purpose of Chapter 15; 11 U.S.C. § 1501(a). Chapter 15 is unique in that it contains a statement of its purpose, nearly replicating the language that begins the Model Law. Section 1501(a) of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the purpose and five objectives of the chapter, namely, (i) to encourage cooperation between courts of the United States (including the United States trustee and appointed fiduciaries) and foreign courts in cross-border insolvency cases, (ii) to provide greater legal certainty for trade and investment, (iii) to promote the fair and efficient administration of cross-border insolvencies that protect the interests of all creditors, the debtor and other interested entities, (iv) to protect and maximize the value of the debtor's assets and (v) to facilitate the rescue of financially troubled businesses with the goal of protecting investment and preserving employment.

More universally, chapter 15 manifests the United States subscription to the purpose of the Model Law, namely, to assist States to equip their insolvency laws with a modern, harmonized and fair framework to address more effectively instances of cross-border insolvency. Those instances include cases where the insolvent debtor has assets in more than one State or where some of the creditors of the debtor are not from the State where the insolvency proceeding is taking place. The Model Law reflects practices in cross-border insolvency matters that are characteristic of modern, efficient insolvency systems. Thus, the States enacting the Model Law (enacting States) would be introducing useful additions and improvements in national insolvency regimes designed to resolve problems arising in cross-border insolvency cases. Both jurisdictions that currently have to deal with numerous cases of cross-border insolvency and jurisdictions that wish to be well prepared for the increasing likelihood of cases of cross-border insolvency will find the Model Law useful. n11

In no small measure, the adoption of the Model Law by the United States is intended to encourage adoption by other countries. n12

Other Bankruptcy Code Provisions Related to Chapter 15. Although chapter 15 is the principal chapter of the Bankruptcy Code that governs the conduct of ancillary cases, several other sections of the Bankruptcy Code and of title 28 of the United States Code directly affect cases under chapter 15. These include section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, which defines the terms foreign proceeding and foreign representative; section 109, which limits the types of debtors eligible for chapter 15; section 305, which permits the court to abstain from a case under another chapter of the Bankruptcy Code in favor of a chapter 15 case; section 306, which provides for limited appearances by foreign representatives in cases under other chapters; section 1334 of title 28, United States Code, which establishes jurisdiction over ancillary cases; section 157(b)(2) of title 28, which makes recognition of foreign proceedings a core proceeding; and section 1410 of title 28, which governs the venue for a chapter 15 proceeding.

Foreign Proceeding Defined under Section 101(23). Section 101(23) of the Bankruptcy Code was amended by the 2005 Actⁿ¹³ to be consistent with the Model Law. Section 101(23) provides that, a foreign proceeding' means a collective judicial or administrative proceeding in a foreign country, including an interim proceeding, under a law relating to insolvency or adjustment of debt in which proceeding the assets and affairs of the debtor are subject to control or supervision by a foreign court, for the purpose of reorganization or liquidation.ⁿ¹⁴ The words under a law relating to insolvency or adjustment of debt emphasize that chapter 15 is available not only to debtors that are technically insolvent or facing liquidation, but also to debtors who are in financial distress and may need to reorganize.ⁿ¹⁵

The collective proceeding requirement is intended to limit access to chapter 15 to proceedings which benefit creditors generally and to exclude proceedings which are for the benefit of a single creditor. For example, a receiver appointed under a debenture which secures a debt to a creditor, to facilitate collection of that debt, would not commence a collective proceeding.ⁿ¹⁶

Foreign Representative Defined under Section 101(24). Foreign representative is defined in section 101(24) of the Bankruptcy Code as a person or body, including a person or body appointed on an interim basis, authorized in a foreign proceeding to administer the reorganization or the liquidation of the debtor's assets or affairs or to act as a representative of such foreign proceeding.ⁿ¹⁷

The interim appointment language was designed to accommodate insolvency systems which have a two stage process for commencement. England and many of the British Commonwealth countries provide for interim or provisional fiduciaries at the outset of a proceeding who almost always become permanent appointees. Other systems have a gap period between an application to commence a proceeding and actual commencement. An interim fiduciary is often appointed to serve during the gap period.ⁿ¹⁸ The United States analogs are the appointment of an interim trustee under section 303(g) prior to entry of an order for relief in an involuntary case or the appointment of an interim trustee under section 701 in a liquidation case.

Eligibility to Be a Debtor; 11 U.S.C. § 109. Section 109 limits who may be a debtor under the Bankruptcy Code. Section 109(a) provides that only a person that resides or has a domicile, a place of business, or property in the United States, or a municipality, may be a debtor under this title. Sections 109(b) through (h) further limit the right to be a debtor in a Bankruptcy Code case by excluding various categories of persons and entities from eligibility.ⁿ¹⁹ Section 1501(c) provides that chapter 15 does not apply to entities identified by exclusion in section 109(b), other than foreign insurance companies.

The 2005 Act, therefore, permits recognition of foreign proceedings involving foreign insurance companies. It would also apply to proceedings involving foreign banks that do not have a branch or agency in the United States (as defined in section 3101 of title 12 of the United States Code).²⁰ Conversely, if the foreign banks activities in the United States would constitute it having a branch or agency, it is ineligible for relief under title 11 and cannot be the subject of either a plenary case or a chapter 15 case.

Abstention; 11 U.S.C. § 305. Section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code ⁿ²¹ provides:

(a) The court, after notice and a hearing, may dismiss a case under this title or may suspend all proceedings in a case under this title, at any time if--

(1) the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by such dismissal or suspension; or

(2) (A) a petition under section 1515 for recognition of a foreign proceeding has been granted; and

(B) the purposes of chapter 15 of this title would be best served by such dismissal or suspension.

(b) A foreign representative may seek dismissal or suspension under subsection (a)(2) of this section.

(c) An order under subsection (a) of this section dismissing a case or suspending all proceedings in a case, or a decision not so to dismiss or suspend, is not reviewable by appeal or otherwise by the court of appeals under section 158(d), 1291, or 1292 of title 28 or by the Supreme Court of the United States under section 1254 of title 28.

The concept of abstention in favor of a foreign proceeding was present in section 305 prior to the 2005 amendment. The language was changed to conform to chapter 15. Section 305 is mirrored by section 1529(4) which offers section 305 as an avenue to cooperation and coordination between multiple proceedings involving a common debtor.

Limited Appearance by a Foreign Representative; 11 U.S.C. § 306. Section 306 of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

An appearance in a bankruptcy court by a foreign representative in connection with a petition or request under section 303 or 305 of this title does not submit such foreign representative to the jurisdiction of any court in the United States for any other purpose, but the bankruptcy court may condition any order under section 303 or 305 of this title on compliance by such foreign representative with the orders of such bankruptcy court. n22

The only change effected by the 2005 Act to section 306 was removal of the reference to former section 304, n23 which was repealed and replaced by chapter 15. n24 Section 1510 now provides an analogous limit on jurisdiction over a foreign representative who files a chapter 15 petition.

Jurisdiction and Procedures; 28 U.S.C. §§ 1334 and 157(b)(2)(P). The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to preside over cases commenced under chapter 15 derives from the general grant in title 28, section 1334 of original and exclusive jurisdiction over cases under title 11 to the United States district court in which a case under title 11 is commenced. Section 1334(c) generally permits the district court to abstain from hearing a proceeding in the interests of justice or in deference to a state court or law. The 2005 Act amended this section to created an exception for chapter 15 cases, n25 requiring a request for recognition of a foreign proceeding to be heard only in the district court. This requirement combined with the venue provisions of section 1410 of title 28 and the court access provisions of section 1509 to make a petition for recognition in the proper district court the single point of entry for a foreign representative to any court in the United States, state or federal. n26

Under section 157(a) of title 28, the district court can refer cases under title 11 and proceedings arising under title 11 or arising in or related to a case under title 11 to the bankruptcy judges for the district. Each district has adopted a rule providing automatic reference. n27 The bankruptcy judges have power to hear and determine cases under title 11 and core proceedings arising in those cases. The 2005 Act adds to the list of core proceedings in section 157 of title 28 (P) recognition of foreign proceedings and other matters under chapter 15 of title 11.

Proper Venue for Ancillary Proceeding; 28 U.S.C. §1410. Section 1410 of title 28, as amended in 2005, n28 provides a hierarchy of choices for determining venue for a chapter 15 case as follows:

(a) A case under chapter 15 of title 11 may be commenced in the district court of the United States for the district

(1) in which the debtor has its principal place of business or principal assets in the United States;

(2) if the debtor does not have a place of business or assets in the United States, in which there is pending against the debtor an action or proceeding in a Federal or State court; or

(3) in a case other than those specified in paragraph (1) or (2), in which venue will be consistent with the interests of justice and convenience of the parties, having regard to the relief sought by the foreign representative. n29

The 2005 venue provision combines with the chapter 15 recognition procedure to create a single entry point for a foreign representative seeking access to any state or federal court in the United States. Before foreign representatives can appear before any state or federal court, other than to file a petition for recognition or collect an account receivable, an order granting recognition must be entered. n30 That order can only enter on a petition filed in the district court for the district determined by 28 U.S.C. § 1410. This structure contrasts with the pre-amendment venue rule which ostensibly required multiple section 304 cases in different venues where litigation was pending or property was located. Also, the prior rules were not exclusive, so that a foreign representative could choose to seek relief under section 304 or to proceed on general principles of comity in a state or federal court. n31

Scope of Application of Chapter 15; 11 U.S.C. § 1501(b). Section 1501(b) of the Bankruptcy Code outlines the types of issues that may arise in cross-border insolvency cases and for which chapter 15 provides solutions. Specifically, chapter 15 applies where

(1) A foreign representative or foreign court seeks assistance in the United States in connection with a pending foreign proceeding;

(2) A United States court or party in interest in a United States proceeding seeks assistance in a foreign court in connection with the United States proceeding;

(3) A foreign proceeding and a United States proceeding are pending concurrently; or

(4) Foreign creditors or other foreign interested persons request the commencement of or participation in a United States proceeding.

Former section 304 addressed only the first situation, relief sought by a foreign representative. The authority of a trustee or debtor in possession to seek assistance in a foreign court was perhaps implicit in sections 704 and 1107 but is now specifically granted and implemented by sections 1526 and 1527. In other countries, trustees were limited to domestic activities and the Model Law would remedy this deficiency. n32 The third situation, concurrent proceedings, has been pragmatically addressed by adoption of cross-border protocols in significant cases and this practice will likely continue under the more formal tutelage of chapter 15. n33 The fourth situation, treatment of foreign parties in United States proceedings, has not been a problem under the Bankruptcy Code, which does not discriminate against foreign parties. Nonetheless, it provides an exemplary statement and conformity to the Model Law. n34

Exclusions from Scope of Chapter 15; 11 U.S.C. § 1501(c). Section 1501(c) of the Bankruptcy Code excludes certain types of entities from the scope of chapter 15.

Prior to the 2005 Act, section 109 did not apply to section 304. Entities not otherwise eligible to be a debtor in a title 11 case were, if they were debtors in a foreign proceeding, eligible for section 304 relief. n35 The Model Law recognized, in Article 1, that countries might wish to designate for exclusion entities which were subject to a special regulatory insolvency regime, such as banks or insurance companies. To adopt this approach in chapter 15, the 2005 Act first amended section 109 to replace the existing bank exclusionary language (a foreign bank engaged in such business in the United States) with more precise terminology suggested by bank regulators (a foreign bank that has a branch or agency in the United States). It then provided that chapter 15 would not apply to an entity which would be ineligible for relief under section 109(b). Consequently, foreign representatives of foreign banks which are subject to foreign proceedings will not be eligible for chapter 15 recognition if the foreign banks have a branch or agency in the United States.

Foreign insurance companies doing business in the United States also were excluded under the initial draft of chapter 15, since section 1501(c) incorporated section 109(b) eligibility and foreign insurance companies were excluded by section 109(b). At the request of the insurance industry, section 1501(c) was modified to except foreign insurance companies from the exclusion, rendering them eligible for chapter 15 recognition. The industry position reflects the common practice of invoking ancillary proceedings in the United States as part of the wind up of multi-national insurers. Insurance regulators can ask the United States court to abstain under Bankruptcy Code section 305 if an ancillary case of a foreign insurance company would interfere with a regulatory winding up under state law.

Section 1501 also excludes individuals who are within the section 109(e) debt limits for chapter 13 eligibility, so long as they are citizens of the United States or permanent residents, and further excludes entities subject to proceedings under the Securities Investor Protection Act and stockbrokers subject to, respectively, subchapters III and IV of chapter 7. n36

Exclusion for Funds Subject to State Insurance Law or Regulation; 11 U.S.C. § 1501(d). Section 1501(d) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that the court cannot grant relief under chapter 15 with respect to deposits, escrows, trust funds or other security required or permitted under state insurance law or regulation for the benefit of claim holders in the United States. This section has the effect of leaving to state regulation any deposit, escrow, trust fund or the like posted by a foreign insurer under state law. At the request of insurance regulators and industry associations, this exclusionary provision had been inserted in earlier versions of bankruptcy reform legislation as an addition to former section 304. With the impending repeal of section 304, the provision was added to chapter 15. n37

For further discussion of Code section 1324, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1501.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 801 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 106 (2005). The text of the Model Law and the Guide to Enactment can be found at www.UNCITRAL.org under UNCITRAL Texts & Status/Insolvency. The full history of the Model Law is recounted in a series of reports of the UNCITRAL colloquia and the sessions of the Working Group on Insolvency Law that led to its adoption. These, in turn, are fully cited in the Guide to Enactment and also can be found on the UNCITRAL website.

n3

3. Guide to Enactment of Model Law, 13; H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 20 (2005).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 801, 802(d)(3) (2005); H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 118 (2005).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1501(b); H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 118 (2005).

n6

6. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 106 (2005).

n7

7. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 301, 302, 303, 1511.

n8

8. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1511.

n9

9. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 106 n.101 (2005).

n10

10. Guide to Enactment of Model Law, 21.

n11

11. Guide to Enactment of Model Law, 1, 2.

n12

12. Legislation based on the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency has been adopted in Eritrea, Japan (2000), Mexico (2000), Poland, Romania (2003), South Africa (2000), Montenegro (2002), British Virgin Islands (2005) and Great Britain (2006). The United Kingdom has adopted legislation enabling the Model law to be adopted by regulation. Enactment is under consideration in Argentina and Pakistan and has been recommended in New Zealand, Australia and Canada. The Spanish Insolvency Act, effective 2004, contains provisions which reflect in part the Model Law. UNCITRAL, Developments in Insolvency Law, Note by Secretariat, U.N. Doc. A/CN. 9/580 (Apr. 14, 2005).

n13

13. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(b) (2005).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 101(23); see 101.23; In re Tri-Continental Exch. Ltd., 349 B.R. 627 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2006).

n15

15. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 118 (2005).

n16

16. Guide to Enactment of Model Law 23.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 101(24), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(b) (2005); In re Tri-Continental Exch. Ltd., 349 B.R. 627 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2006).

n18

18. Guide to Enactment of Model Law, 69.

n19

19. Section 109(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(d)(1) (2005), provides as follows:

(3) (A) a foreign insurance company, engaged in such business in the United States; or

(B) a foreign bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, or credit union, that has a branch or agency (as defined in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978) in the United States.

n20

20. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 118-119 (2005).

n21

21. Section 305(a)(2) was amended by section 802(d)(6) of Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005). See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 305.

n22

22. For a discussion of section 306, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 306.

n23

23. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(d)(5) (2005).

n24

24. Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 801, 802(d)(3) (2005).

n25

25. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(c)(1) (2005).

n26

26. 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) now begins Except with respect to a case under chapter 15 of title 11 .

n27

27. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 3.02[1].

n28

28. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(c)(4) (2005).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 4.03.

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 1509 imposes the recognition requirement and contains the exception for collection of claims which are property of the debtor. See United States v. J.A. Jones Constr. Group, LLC, 333 B.R. 637 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (finding a lack of jurisdiction to honor a stay request by a Canadian receiver because of a failure to obtain an order recognizing the foreign proceeding and entering a temporary stay to enable the receiver to file a chapter 15 petition).

n31

31. Cunard S.S. Co., Ltd. v. Salen Reefer Serv., A.B., 773 F.2d 452 (2d Cir. 1985).

n32

32. Guide to Enactment of Model Law, 26, 27.

n33

33. Examples of cases in which courts have agreed to institute protocols include In re Maxwell

Communication Corp., 93 F.3d 1036, 1053 (2d Cir. 1996); In re Commodore Int'l Ltd., 242 B.R. 243, 260 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999); and Nakash v. Tsur (In re Joseph Nakask), No. 94 B 44840 (S.D.N.Y. May 24, 1996).

n34

34. Model Law art. 13.

n35

35. See, e.g., In re Georg, 844 F. 2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1988) (involving a decedents estate); Agency for Deposit Insurance, Rehabilitation and Liquidation of Banks v. Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York, 310 B.R. 793 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (involving foreign banks with agencies in New York; not excluded from section 304 eligibility but would be excluded from chapter 15 eligibility).

n36

36. The chapter 13 limits are unsecured debt of $307,675 and secured debts of $922,975, subject to periodic inflation adjustments. 11 U.S.C. § 109(e).

n37

37. See H.R. 3150 § 605 (1998).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

127 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Retainer Agreements in Bankruptcy Cases

2008 Emerging Issues 1327

Collier on Retainer Agreements in Bankruptcy Cases

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers retainer agreements in bankruptcy cases, including topics such as prepetition retainer agreements, types of retainer agreements, special retainers, disclosure of retainer, retainers as property of the estate, prepetition and postpetition retainers as property of the estate, retainers held in trust by debtors attorneys, retainers as attorney property, and retainers under state law.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Prepetition Retainer Agreements. Before the commencement of a chapter 11 case, it is common for a debtors professionals to obtain retainer agreements and fees to insure compensation for costs anticipated during the pendency of the case. As noted by one bankruptcy court, [g]iven the proliferation of bankruptcy filings and the increased complexity of the newer Chapter 11 filings it is neither surprising nor unreasonable that such retainers would be required before counsel would undertake the arduous task of guiding a debtor through a complicated reorganization laden with risk. n1

Types of Retainer Agreements. The most common fee arrangements in bankruptcy cases are made pursuant to retainer agreements. Retainers are typically classified as either classic or special. A special retainer can take one of three forms: security, advance payment or evergreen. Some courts also approve postpetition retainers. The nature of a retainer will determine whether these funds are considered property of the debtors estate, which will, in turn, define the professionals rights and interest in such funds. n2

Classic or Earned on Receipt Retainer. A classic or earned on receipt retainer is defined as both a payment to bind the attorney from representing another and as a payment for accepting the case. n3 It is intended to insure the attorneys availability over time on behalf of the client regardless of whether the attorney actually renders services to the client. [A]n essential characteristic of the classic retainer is that it is entirely earned by the attorney upon payment, with the client retaining no interest in the funds. n4

The concept of an earned on receipt retainer in a bankruptcy case has been questioned by a majority of the courts. In In re NBI, Inc., n5 the court determined that a prepetition nonrefundable or earned retainer would frustrate the Codes requirement of court supervision over professional fees. According to the court, earned retainers are per se unreasonable as a matter of bankruptcy law, an anomaly in a Chapter 11 case, n6 and would impermissibly circumvent the explicit and implicit requirements of the Bankruptcy Code and rules pertaining to compensation of professionals, particularly debtors counsel. The Code provides for compensation only for actual and necessary legal services allowed only after such services have been provided. n7 The court, in concluding that earned retainers would nullify the protection afforded to a debtors estate and creditors, ordered that the retainers be held in trust until professional fees were awarded in the chapter 11 case. n8 The minority of courts permitting earned on receipt retainers have considered the following factors in determining whether an earned on receipt retainer is reasonable:

- whether the attorney has particular expertise in the debtors industry;
- whether the attorney has to forbear other employment to take on the debtors case; and
- whether the debtors case will place extraordinary demands on the attorney. n9

Although In re NBI, Inc., was not appealed, the district court in another Colorado case n10 specifically found that the In re NBI, Inc., opinion is limited to the context of chapter 11 proceedings and that, in chapter 7 cases, prepetition payment for services to be rendered postpetition is allowed. Indeed, the Supreme Court in Lamie v. United States Trustee, n11 in declining to approve payment of chapter 7 debtors attorney fees from estate assets, recognized that the debtors attorney in these cases should look to the prepetition retainer.

Special Retainers.

Security Retainer. A security retainer is defined as one held by attorneys to secure payment of fees for future services that the attorneys are expected to render. n12 The funds do not constitute a present payment for future services but, rather, remain the property of the estate until the attorney applies charges for services rendered against the retainer. n13 Any unearned portion of the retainer must be returned to the estate.

Advance Payment and Fixed Fee Retainers. Advance payment and fixed fee retainers are defined as retainers in which the debtor pays for all or a portion of the services to be rendered by the attorney in advance. These kinds of retainers are different from security retainers in that ownership of the retainer is intended to pass to the attorney at the time of payment, in exchange for the commitment to provide the legal services. n14 Advanced payment and fixed fee retainers are also different from classic or earned on receipt retainers because they presume that certain work will be performed by the attorney in exchange for the payment. In the case of an earned on receipt retainer, the attorneys availability is being assured whether or not any services are performed. An example of an advance payment or fixed fee is a flat fee of $2,000 paid to the debtors attorney for all enumerated work to be performed in the bankruptcy case.

In light of the Supreme Courts decision in Lamie v. United States Trustee, n15 chapter 7 debtors attorneys should enumerate or outline in writing the work to be performed for the flat or fixed fee agreed upon prior to the filing of the bankruptcy case. As amended in 2005, n16 section 328(a) now specifically provides for payment of a retainer on a fixed fee basis. A more difficult question arises when the advance and fixed fee retainers are not paid in full prepetition. There have been instances when the debtor paid part of the agreed-upon amount prior to the filing and also agreed to make payments after the filing of the chapter 7 bankruptcy case. The bankruptcy court in In re Griffin addressed the issue and considered decisions of the Seventh and Ninth Circuits reflecting somewhat different conclusions regarding the dischargeability of the installments on the advance and fixed fee retainers that were to be paid postpetition. n17 The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that when the debtor voluntarily filed for chapter 7 bankruptcy protection, the prepetition contract for payment of fees became a prepetition claim against the estate. Any fees unpaid at the time of the filing became subject to the discharge injunction of section 524 and the attorney for the debtor was prohibited from pursuing payment of the unpaid installments. n18 The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, in an earlier decision, had concluded that the portion of the retainer reflecting work done during the bankruptcy is immune from discharge because a claim does not accrue upon agreement but upon performance. The court concluded that each retainer agreement could be considered multiple claims depending on when performance took place. n19 In any event, the better practice would be for debtors attorneys to obtain the entire advance or fixed fee retainers before the bankruptcy case is filed.

Evergreen Retainer. An evergreen retainer, for purposes of a chapter 11 case, provides for the payment of interim fees to professionals from operating cash of the debtor while preserving the prepetition retainer held by the professional to be applied towards the final payment of fees at the conclusion of the debtors case and after approval of a final fee application. n20 By preserving the professionals ability to charge against the retainer at the end of the case, an evergreen retainer has the economic effect of replenishing the retainer funds during the course of the case. Evergreen retainers are common outside bankruptcy cases, and there is no per se rule against their use in bankruptcy cases. n21

The court in In re Benjamins-Arnolds, Inc., n22 examined the propriety of evergreen retainers used in connection with the retention of a debtors law firm and accountants, whereby all interim fee awards would be paid out of the debtors operating income. The court rejected the United States trustees assertion that evergreen retainers were violative of both the Bankruptcy Code and congressional policy because they removed the financial risk necessary to induce the debtors professionals to pursue a swift reorganization. According to the court, the professionals have sufficient financial risk even with evergreen retainers, as they could be compelled to disgorge the retainers if there were insufficient assets to pay all similarly situated or superior administrative expense claimants. Further, the court found that absent the use of evergreen retainers, professionals would require the payment of standard retainers, which would increase the financial burden on the debtors estate.

Postpetition Retainer. In determining whether a postpetition retainer is justified and reasonable in a chapter 11 case, courts consider various factors, including:

- the retainers economic impact on the debtors ongoing business operation and the debtors ability to reorganize;
- the amount and reasonableness of the retainer;
- the reputation of the debtors counsel; and
- the ability of the debtors counsel to disgorge any unjustified portion of a retainer paid. n23

One bankruptcy court has stated that a substantial argument can be made that, under appropriate circumstances professionals employed by a statutory creditors committee may obtain a retainer from the debtors estate. n24

Status of Professional with Secured Retainer as Secured Creditor of the Debtor. With respect to secured retainers, courts generally hold that a professional with such a prepetition retainer is a secured creditor and has a security interest in the retainer, noting that the professionals receiving prepetition retainers to insure payment of fees to be earned in the chapter 11 case (or postpetition retainers authorized by the court) become secured creditors by virtue of a possessory interest in cash. n25 The professionals status as a secured creditor by virtue of the retainer does not disqualify the professional from being retained by the estate as required by section 327 of the Code. n26

Disclosure of Retainer. The Code requires that the debtors attorney disclose the terms of any prepetition retainer agreement to the court. n27 It does not matter that no further compensation will be sought from the estate, that the retainer may be paid by a nondebtor third party n28 or that the retainer is not estate property. n29 The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit recognized in In re Arlan's Dep't Stores, Inc., n30 that [t]he [debtors] law firm is not expected to disregard its own welfare but neither is it expected to ignore its obligation to advise the court [of the retainer arrangement] so that the court might make the determination of propriety [of such an arrangement] based on the circumstances of the case. n31

Retainers as Property of the Estate. A majority of courts hold that prepetition retainers constitute property of the estate under section 541 of the Code. A court, therefore, must authorize application of the retainers to the allowed amount of the professionals awarded compensation before it can be used. n32 These courts suggest that characterizing a prepetition retainer as property of the estate enables the court to supervise the administration of the estate, thus minimizing the difficulties associated with an order requiring disgorgement of the retainer.

One court has held that its disgorgement power was not an adequate substitute for the prior approval of fees for services rendered. Such a position assumes counsel will remain financially responsive to a disgorgement order, on a timely basis. n33 The United States Supreme Court ruling in Lamie v. United States Trustee, n34 appeared to approve the advance payment of the entire fee in a chapter 7 case. These retainers now appear more like flat or fixed fee or earned on receipt retainers.

Prepetition and Postpetition Retainers as Property of the Estate. In In re Bread & Chocolate, Inc., n35 the bankruptcy court held that both prepetition and postpetition retainers were property of the estate and ordered the retainer funds deposited as security for payment of fees and expenses. The court based its holding primarily on the need to protect the other parties in interest and to avoid possible abuses of the system:

A retainer that becomes property of the attorney is allowable only in certain rare circumstances when adequate safeguards are taken and only after a detailed application is filed, an opportunity for objection has been provided and the retainer fee procedure [is], itself, notice to creditors. Crucial to a determination that such a retainer arrangement is appropriate is that the courts control over the funds is undiminished. n36

The court was concerned that if retainers are property of the attorneys, courts would be forced to make complicated inquiries into a law firm's financial condition. In the event the law firm later filed its own bankruptcy case, the debtors estate would be a mere creditor of the law firm for any unearned portion of the retainer and would not be able to recover the retainer under section 541 of the Code. Prepetition retainers that are property of the attorneys would not only frustrate the courts disgorgement powers, particularly in cases where estate assets are insufficient to pay other administrative claims in full, but also may encourage abuse of the system. By treating the retainer as property of the estate, it gave the attorneys incentive to apply for fees promptly, which further enabled the court to maintain control over professional fees.

Retainers Held in Trust by Debtors Attorneys. Many courts find that prepetition retainers are advances against attorney fees and should be held in trust by the debtors attorneys until professional fees and expenses are allowed by the court. n37 For example, in In re Tri-County Water Association, n38 the court stated:

The general rule is that prepetition retainers are held in trust for the debtor, and the debtors equitable interest in this trust constitutes property of the estate. [T]hat portion of the fees incurred after the petition was filed are [sic] property of the estate. Debtors counsel may remove these funds from the retainer account only after court approval preceded by proper notice of the application. n39

Another court held that even a retainer earned in full on receipt was nevertheless property of the estate to be maintained in a special client trust fund account pending court approval of fees and that to allow an attorney for a debtor to draw against a retainer at will and without prior Court approval is a de facto emasculation of § 331. n40

Retainers as Attorney Property. Bankruptcy courts generally do not extend the reach of section 541(a)(1) of the Code to include that portion of a retainer earned prepetition as property of the estate. n41 In In re McDonald Brothers Construction, Inc., n42 the court held that the attorneys for the debtor may treat prepetition retainers as their own property and deduct expenses therefrom without leave of the court and without submission of a detailed fee application. The court found that the possibility that retainer funds might have to be returned does not give the debtor an interest in the transferred funds at the time the case is commenced [but] gives the estate a potential claim against the transferee. Such a claim is no different from a claim to recover assets under fraudulent transfer or preference theories. n43

Retainers under State Law. One court predicated its analysis of whether a retainer is considered property of the attorney or the client using applicable nonbankruptcy law, such as state law. n44 It could then determine whether the retainer constitutes property of the debtors estate. When ownership of the retainer funds was absolutely transferred to the attorney under state law, notwithstanding the possibility for recovery of all or a portion of such funds by the debtors estate, the court concluded that the retainer funds were not property of the estate. If the nature of the retainer is such that ownership of the funds remains with the debtor under state law, then approval is required. In examining the state law property issue, the court concluded that only a security retainer constitutes property of the debtors estate that requires compliance with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code prior to use of such funds by a professional. [B]ecause the debtor continues to hold an interest in security retainers, such a retainer is estate property, which can only be used by debtors counsel upon compliance with the entire fee application process, including court approval. n45

The court in In re Bread & Chocolate, Inc., n46 disagreed with the holding in McDonald and concluded that regardless of whether state law permits the retainers in question, a court must consider issues beyond local law when approving the terms and conditions of employment as required under section 328(a). Instead, the Bread & Chocolate court addressed whether, as a term of employment, the retainer should be treated as property of the estate. It concluded that it was in the best interest of all parties involved that the retainer be deemed to be property of the estate.

In In re Dividend Development Corporation, n47 the court concluded that state law alone cannot determine whether the debtors estate retains an interest in a prepetition retainer. The debtors attorneys argued that the retainers were earned on receipt, which was permissible under state law and, thus, because the funds passed to the attorneys prepetition, they had absolute ownership of the retainers. But the court found that even if a type of retainer is permissible under state law, section 328(a) requires that the court review its reasonableness as a necessary condition to employment of the professional under section 327.

[Section] 328(a) specifically mandates that the bankruptcy judge review the reasonableness of any fee arrangement between a debtor and its counsel as a condition of counsels employment under § 327. Section 328 makes the reasonableness of a claimed earned-on-receipt retainer a question of federal law, rather than state law. Further, the authorization in § 328(a) to modify fees after conclusion of employment, if such terms and conditions prove to have been improvident in light of developments not capable of being anticipated at the time of the fixing of such terms and conditions, clearly anticipates that the court will make a determination as to the reasonableness of a fee arrangement at the beginning of a case. n48

Finding that the attorneys failed to establish adequately the reasonableness of the earned on receipt retainer, the court approved the retainers as advances against the attorneys fees and ordered the funds to be placed in a trust account.

Professionals Use of Retainer Funds. The principle expressed by courts imposing strict conditions upon a professionals use of retainer funds arguably contravenes policies underlying the Code, which sought to remedy past practices which, in effect, forced professionals to finance the debtors bankruptcy case. While there is a debate about whether retainers constitute property of the estate or should be held in trust, a reasoned approach may be to permit professionals to receive a portion of their compensation and reimbursement through the use of a prepetition retainer agreement but subject to subsequent review by the court. n49 Notably, in In re Knudsen Corp., n50 the bankruptcy appellate panel reasoned that sections 330 and 331 of the Code do not absolutely prohibit the transfer of funds to a professional before the court approves any interim compensation. The Knudsen analysis thereby rejected the argument n51 that any preapproval removal of funds pursuant to a retainer arrangement emasculates the policy underlying section 331. n52

Necessity of Fee Application; Retainer. Notwithstanding that receipt of funds pursuant to a retainer arrangement occurred prepetition, professionals in chapter 11 cases may still have to file fee applications with the court detailing the usage of the funds. Some courts do not require a subsequent fee application when the retainer represents a flat fee for services rendered long ago and no further compensation will be sought from the estate. n53 However, other courts require that fee applications be filed, especially when the retainer was obtained to provide security for a portion of the overall costs in the case. n54

For further discussion of Code section 328, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 328.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. In re Chapel Gate Apartments, Ltd., 64 B.R. 569, 572 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1986); see In re Robotics Resources R2, Inc., 117 B.R. 61 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1990).

n2

2. In re Production Assocs., Ltd., 264 B.R. 180, 184 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2001) (discussing different types of retainer agreements).

n3

3. In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989, 998 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n4

4. 114 B.R. 989, 998; see In re Dividend Dev. Corp., 145 B.R. 651 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1992).

n5

5. 25 C.B.C.2d 43, 129 B.R. 212 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991); see also In re Bressman, 214 B.R. 131, 141 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1997); In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715, 720-22 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993); In re Hathaway Ranch P'ship, 116 B.R. 208, 216-17 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1990) (earned on receipt retainer actually an advance payment).

n6

6. 25 C.B.C.2d 43, 55, 129 B.R. 212.

n7

7. 25 C.B.C.2d 43, 55, 129 B.R. 212, 212, 222-23.

n8

8. But see In re Environmental Waste Control, 122 B.R. 341 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1990) (attorney was free to use retainer subject to possible disgorgement, since it was received prior to filing of bankruptcy petition and was not part of debtor's estate).

n9

9. In re Dividend Dev. Corp., 145 B.R. 651, 657 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1992). But see In re Bressman, 214 B.R. 131, 141 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1997); In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715, 720-22 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993); In re Hathaway Ranch P'ship, 116 B.R. 208, 216-17 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1990) (earned on receipt retainer actually an advance payment).

n10

10. Schofield v. United States Trustee (In re Jones), 236 B.R. 38, 40 (D. Colo. 1999).

n11

11. 540 U.S. 526, 124 S. Ct. 1023, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1024 (2004); see also In re Channel Master Holdings, Inc., 309 B.R. 855, 859 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004).

n12

12. In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989, 999 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n13

13. Schofield v. United States Trustee (In re Jones), 42 C.B.C.2d 705, 236 B.R. 38 (D. Colo. 1999) (since section 328 recognizes that prepetition payments may be made to an attorney for services to be rendered postpetition, only that amount which exceeds the reasonable value of the services must be returned to the estate; moreover, there is nothing unlawful or unethical about an agreement to pay debtor's counsel reasonable compensation for services to be performed after the filing of the petition).

n14

14. 114 B.R. 989, 1000; see In re Fulton, 80 B.R. 1009 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1988); In re Chapel Gate Apartments, Ltd., 64 B.R. 569, 573 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1986) (retainer fully earned and nonrefundable upon its payment and receipt, is considered advance payment retainer). But see In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715, 720 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993) (finding that debtor retains an equitable interest).

n15

15. 540 U.S. 526, 124 S. Ct. 1023, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1024 (2004).

n16

16. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1206 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n17

17. 313 B.R. 757, 761-64 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2004).

n18

18. Bethea v. Robert J. Adams & Assocs., 352 F.3d 1125, 1129 (7th Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1043, 124 S. Ct. 2176, 158 L. Ed. 2d 733 (2004).

n19

19. Gordon v. Hines (In re Hines), 147 F.3d 1185, 40 C.B.C.2d 684 (9th Cir. 1998). But see also Hessinger & Assocs. v. United States Trustee (In re Biggar), 110 F.3d 685 (9th Cir. 1997).

n20

20. See In re Benjamin's-Arnolds, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1396, 123 B.R. 839 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1990). But see In re Fitzsimmons Trucking, Inc., 124 B.R. 556, 558 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1991) (declining to approve evergreen retainer noting that, unlike the debtor in Benjamin's-Arnolds, there were sufficient assets to replenish the retainer without adversely affecting reorganization); In re Insilco Technologies, Inc., 291 B.R. 628 (Bankr. D. Del. 2003); see also In re Pan Am. Hosp. Corp., 312 B.R. 706, 711-12 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2004) (approving evergreen retainer).

n21

21. 24 C.B.C.2d 1396, 1398, 123 B.R. 839, 841 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1990).

n22

22. 24 C.B.C.2d 1396, 123 B.R. 839 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1990).

n23

23. See In re Jefferson Bus. Ctr. Assocs., 135 B.R. 676, 680 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992); see also In re Truong, 259 B.R. 264, 267 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2001) (citing factors in In re Knudsen Corp., 84 B.R. 668 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988) and Jefferson factors).

n24

24. See In re 1606 New Hampshire Ave. Assocs., 96 B.R. 406 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1989) (retainer under such circumstances comes from the estate, not the debtor, and thus is not an involuntary extraction of funds from the debtor against its wishes); cf. In re Structurlite Plastics Corp., 19 C.B.C.2d 1308, 1315, 91 B.R. 813, 817 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1988) (because § 328(a) permits a professional employed by a creditors' committee to receive a retainer, it does not necessarily follow that a retainer may be extracted from a debtor against its wishes).

n25

25. In re K & R Mining, Inc., 105 B.R. 394, 397 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1989) (citing In re Burnside Steel Foundry Co., 19 C.B.C.2d 761, 90 B.R. 942 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988)).

n26

26. In re NBI, Inc., 129 B.R. 212, 224 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991); In re K & R Mining, Inc., 105 B.R. 394, 397 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1989); see also In re Martin, 817 F.2d 175 (1st Cir. 1987).

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. § 329(a); see also Neben & Starrett, Inc. v. Chartwell Fin. Corp. (In re Park-Helena Corp.), 63 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1049, 116 S. Ct. 712, 133 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1996) (counsel disqualified for failure to disclose and ordered to disgorge all fees); accord In re Smitty's Truck Stop, Inc., 210 B.R. 844 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1997); In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n28

28. In re Missouri Mining, Inc., 186 B.R. 946, 948-49 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1995) (payment of counsel's retainer by third party must be examined on a case-by-case basis).

n29

29. See In re Crimson Invs., N.V., 22 C.B.C.2d 271, 109 B.R. 397 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1989) (retainer provided to debtor's attorney by third party was property of the debtor's estate, which attorney was required to disclose); In re Independent Engineering Co., 197 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 1999) (counsel, under a court order requiring approval for any compensation, who fails to disclose withdrawal of funds from a security retainer paid by chapter 11 debtor's principal, and who later fails to disclose subsequent draws, is subject to denial of compensation, sanctions, disqualification and disgorgement of fees, despite contention that the retainer is not estate property).

n30

30. 615 F.2d 925 (2d Cir. 1979).

n31

31. 615 F.2d 925, 936.

n32

32. See In re Emco Enters., Inc., 94 B.R. 184 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1988); In re Tri-County Water Ass'n, Inc., 91 B.R. 547 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1988); In re Chicago Lutheran Hosp. Ass'n, 89 B.R. 719 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988); In re Kinderhaus Corp., 58 B.R. 94, 97 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1986) (a retainer, taken prior to the filing of the petition, becomes property of the estate upon the commencement of the case, subject however, to the terms of the trust.). But see In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989, 996 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990) (the Kinderhaus court assume[s] that when services are rendered to the debtor during a bankruptcy, the services must be compensated from the estate. But nothing in the Code so provides).

n33

33. In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715, 723 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993) (questioning the soundness of earned on receipt retainers in a bankruptcy case).

n34

34. 540 U.S. 526, 124 S. Ct. 1023, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1024 (2004).

n35

35. 148 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1992); see also Tyler v. Prudoff (In re Prudoff), 186 B.R. 64, 66-7 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1995).

n36

36. 148 B.R. 81, 82 (quoting In re Knudsen Corp., 84 B.R. 668, 671-72 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988)).

n37

37. See In re Bressman, 214 B.R. 131 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1997); In re Dividend Dev. Corp., 145 B.R. 651 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1992); In re Crimson Invs., N.V., 109 B.R. 397 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1989) (retainer provided to debtor's attorney by third party was property held in trust for the debtor's estate); In re C & P Auto Transp., Inc., 20 C.B.C.2d 1620, 94 B.R. 682 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1988) (prepetition retainers are property of the estate based upon the possibility of a court ordered return of all or a portion of such retainers under section 329(b) of the Bankruptcy Code).

n38

38. 91 B.R. 547 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1988).

n39

39. 91 B.R. 547, 551 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1988) (citations omitted); accord In re Hathaway Ranch P'ship, 23 C.B.C.2d 777, 116 B.R. 208 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1990); In re Indep. Sales Corp., 73 B.R. 772, 774-75 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) ([c]learly, a retainer obtained by the attorney for the debtor prior to filing the petition for relief, as in this case, is held in trust to the extent it is for services to be rendered and for costs to be incurred during the pendency of the case and until allowed by the court.); In re Kinderhaus Corp., 58 B.R. 94, 97 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1986) (prepetition retainer taken by a debtor's attorney for services to be rendered and costs to be incurred during the pendency of a bankruptcy case is held in trust, except to the extent that attorney's fees are allowed by the Court and ordered paid until the case is closed or until the Court orders otherwise); see also Local Bankruptcy Rule 2016.1(b) for the Northern District of Texas, reprinted in Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide Local Rules Pamphlet: Fifth Circuit (Matthew Bender) (professional must deposit retainer funds into a trust account and may not withdraw funds therefrom until a Motion for Distribution of Retainer is filed and approved by the court, after a hearing if an objection is made).

n40

40. In re Chapel Gate Apartments, Ltd., 64 B.R. 569, 573 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1986). But see In re Production Assocs., Ltd., 264 B.R. 180 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2001); In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n41

41. Stewart v. Law Offices of Dennis Olson, 93 B.R. 91 (N.D. Tex. 1988), aff'd, 878 F.2d 1432 (5th Cir. 1989); In re Mondie Forge Co., 154 B.R. 232, 237-8 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1993).

n42

42. 114 B.R. 989, 997 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990); see also In re Production Assocs., Ltd., 264 B.R. 180 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2001).

n43

43. In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n44

44. See In re GoCo Realty Fund I, 151 B.R. 241, 250 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1993) (a prepetition retainer becomes property of the estate only if, under applicable state law, the debtor has an interest in the retainer at the time of filing the bankruptcy case); see also In re D.L.I.C., Inc., 120 B.R. 348 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990) (the determination of whether a prepetition retainer is property of the estate depends upon what interest, if any, the debtor retains in the retainer funds under state law).

n45

45. In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989, 1000; see also In re K & R Mining, Inc., 105 B.R. 394, 397 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1989) (attorney with a prepetition retainer which was an advance payment is a secured creditor with a possessory security interest in the retainer funds). In McDonald Bros., the court stated:

Given their belief that they had been given an advance payment retainer, and in the absence of any facts indicating the contrary, counsel for the debtor in this case had no obligation under the Bankruptcy Code beyond disclosure of their retainer under section 329. Neither approval of a fee application nor leave of court is required for their use of the retainer. Of course, any interested party may challenge counsel's treatment of the retainer. If the retainer should have been held as client funds, counsel would have violated both the automatic stay and their ethical obligations by using the retainer without a fee application. However, in the absence of any challenge to counsel's treatment and of any facts indicating that this treatment was improper, this court will not itself inquire further into the circumstances surrounding the retainer agreement.

114 B.R. 989, 1003; accord In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993) (prepetition retainer, although characterized in agreement as an engagement fee retainer, was really an advance fee retainer and, thus, property of the estate); In re Montgomery Drilling Co., 121 B.R. 32 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1990) (prepetition retainer received on the eve of a bankruptcy filing by the debtor's attorney is a security retainer and property of the estate and not an advance payment).

n46

46. 148 B.R. 81 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1992).

n47

47. 145 B.R. 651 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1992).

n48 48. 145 B.R. 651, 654-55. In re NBI, Inc., 25 C.B.C.2d 43, 57-58, 129 B.R. 212, 224 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991) (Consideration of whether the retainers are or are not property of the estate based on state contract law is largely academic in this case. It is not dispositive of reasonableness under Section 328(a).); see also Schofield v. United States Trustee (In re Jones), 236 B.R. 38 (D. Colo. 1999).

n49

49. See General Elec. Credit Corp. v. Levin & Weintraub (In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp.), 739 F.2d 73, 75, 10 C.B.C.2d 1309, 1312 (2d Cir. 1984).

n50

50. 84 B.R. 668 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988).

n51

51. See In re Chapel Gate Apartments, Ltd., 64 B.R. 569, 573 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1986).

n52

52. See In re Bicoastal Corp., 118 B.R. 855 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990) (ownership of the portion of prepetition retainer earned prepetition passed to law firm at the time the services were rendered; reasonableness of such fees were still subject to scrutiny under section 329); see also In re Production Assocs., Ltd. 264 B.R. 180 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2001); In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n53

53. See In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990); In re Fulton, 80 B.R. 1009 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1988). But see In re Printing Dimensions, Inc., 153 B.R. 715, 720 (Bankr. D. Md. 1993) (finding that debtor retains an equitable interest).

n54

54. See In re Burnside Steel Foundry Co., 19 C.B.C.2d 761, 90 B.R. 942 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

128 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Interim Compensation

2008 Emerging Issues 1329

Collier on Interim Compensation

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 331 of the Bankruptcy Code permits a trustee, an examiner, an attorney or any professional person employed under section 327 or section 1103 to apply to the court for interim compensation and reimbursement for expenses for services rendered before the date of the fee application. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers interim compensation.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 331 of the Bankruptcy Code permits a trustee, an examiner, an attorney or any professional person employed under section 327 or section 1103 to apply to the court for interim compensation and reimbursement for expenses for services rendered before the date of the fee application. Section 331 remove[s] any doubt that officers of the estate may apply for, and the court may approve, compensation and reimbursement during the case, instead of being required to wait until the end of the case, which in some instances, may be years. n1 Although some courts did allow interim compensation in proceedings under the Bankruptcy Act prior to the adoption of the Code, Congress intended that the practice of interim compensation become system-wide as part of the intent to make bankruptcy practice more attractive to qualified professionals. The new practice replaced the former guideline of spirit of economy of administration in bankruptcy cases, in which courts generally awarded bankruptcy attorney fees calculated at rates lower than those employed in other fields. n2

Section 331 is thus designed to assure the continued efficient rendition of professional services to the estate. The section also furthers the policy of the Code that bankruptcy professionals be compensated in parity with professionals rendering comparable services. n3 Otherwise, bankruptcy professionals would be forced to finance the administration of a case while professionals in most nonbankruptcy areas of the law do not suffer an equivalent hardship. n4 Accordingly, even if confirmation of a reorganization plan has been delayed, the professionals may still receive interim compensation, so long as it has not been demonstrated that the professionals were responsible for any delay. n5

Section 331 Not Applicable to Officers of the Debtor. Although section 331 applies to a trustee, an examiner, a debtors attorney n6 and certain other professionals, it is not applicable to officers of the debtor or debtor in possession, n7 and it is not applicable to certain professionals, such as auctioneers and appraisers, who are paid on a per-job basis.

n8

Courts Should Award Interim Compensation When Appropriate. Some bankruptcy courts have noted the permissive language in section 331 and have therefore suggested that a court could simply defer ruling on interim fee applications. n9 However, although section 331 does not contain mandatory language, courts should consider interim fee applications filed under section 331 and grant them when the professional has made an appropriate showing. n10 Otherwise, the intent and purpose of section 331 will not be fulfilled. n11

Thus, if a court determines, based on the appropriate factors, that interim compensation is unwarranted, the court should deny the requested fees under section 331. If the court finds that an award of fees or expenses is appropriate, but further finds that it is likely that there will be insufficient assets to pay all administrative claims, the court may award the appropriate amount but defer all or part of the payment of the compensation sought. n12 In any event, the court should evaluate the application based on appropriate standards. If the court declines to do so, it would be avoiding its responsibility under the statute to determine whether the compensation sought is reasonable and whether payment is appropriate. n13

Discussed below are interim fees in liquidation cases, n14 receipt of payment on allowed interim fees n15 and the ability of the court to revisit interim fees at any time through the allowance of the final fee application. n16

Interim Compensation Periods May Be Less Than 120 Days. Section 331 establishes a schedule for the consideration of applications for interim compensation. Generally, an application for interim compensation and reimbursement of expenses may be made only once every 120 days after an order for relief in a case under the Code. n17 However, section 331 states that the court may permit more frequent applications. The circumstances which would warrant more frequent applications include very large cases where the legal work is extensive and merits more frequent payments. n18 Defining the circumstances under which deviation from the 120-day period is appropriate lies solely within the discretion of the court before whom the case is pending, to be determined on a case-by-case basis. n19

The Knudsen Factors. Courts in certain very large reorganization cases have allowed payment of interim compensation covering periods of less than 120 days (e.g., monthly), reasoning that the complexity of the issues involved and the time required on the part of the attorneys for the debtor in possession in providing services necessary to achieve a successful reorganization of the debtors merit a reduction in the time period. n20 The leading case on monthly payment procedures is United States Trustee v. Knudsen Corp (In re Knudsen Corp.), n21 where the court approved a monthly payment procedure for interim compensation, subject to subsequent court review. The court indicated, however, that such an alternative procedure should be implemented only in rare cases in which the following criteria were met:

- (1) The case is an unusually large one in which an exceptionally large amount of fees accrue each month;
- (2) The court is convinced that waiting an extended period for payment would place an undue hardship on counsel;
- (3) The court is satisfied that counsel can respond to any reassessment; and
- (4) The retainer procedure is, itself, the subject of a noticed hearing prior to any payment thereunder. n22

Expansion of the Knudsen Criteria. Several courts have expanded on the Knudsen criteria. In In re Mariner Post-Acute Network, Inc., n23 the court recognized other relevant factors to be considered, such as cash-flow needs of the debtor in possession, the ability to monitor and control administrative costs, the ability of the debtor to reorganize, the reputation of debtor in possessions counsel and some assurance that any fees subsequently disallowed can be repaid. n24 Although almost all of the cases that allow compensation faster than the statutory 120 days have been large and complex business reorganizations, one court allowed an accountant to receive monthly payment in a small reorganization case, focusing on the hardship to the professional. n25 The size of the professional firm as well as the case size should be taken into account. A single practitioner or a small professional firm will be less able than a larger firm to front the costs of what would look like a small bankruptcy case to the larger firm.

Cases Where Special Compensation Procedures Were Denied. The burden of proof is on the professional to establish to the satisfaction of the bankruptcy court that the terms and conditions proposed for interim compensation, including any special compensation procedures, are reasonable. n26 In certain circumstances, professionals have not met that burden. For example, some courts have distinguished and declined to apply the interim compensation procedure set forth in Knudsen on the basis of the smaller size and relative simplicity of the case, n27 and on the basis that there has been no showing of undue hardship. n28 Those cases have emphasized the statement in Knudsen that it is the rare case that will qualify for special compensation procedures. n29 It has also been held that monthly compensation procedures which might be appropriate for an ongoing business are inappropriate when the debtor goes into a liquidation mode. n30

Payments Can Be Made Monthly with Fee Applications to Follow. There has been disagreement among the courts as to whether Knudsen's special compensation procedure is permissible under the Bankruptcy Code. Knudsen allowed professionals to be paid monthly upon invoices submitted to the debtor in possession, if those invoices were acceptable to the debtor in possession, with interim fee applications to follow on a quarterly basis. n31 Following Knudsen, a number of courts have agreed that similar procedures are appropriate and acceptable. n32 Yet a number of courts have disagreed, holding that there is no provision in section 331 or anywhere else in the Bankruptcy Code to allow payment of fees prior to approval of fee applications, following notice and a hearing. n33

There are good practical reasons for allowing a procedure providing for monthly fee invoices followed by quarterly fee applications. The main reason is to prevent the burden on the professionals and the court and the excessive cost in large cases of dealing with monthly fee applications. As one court with extensive experience in large chapter 11 cases noted, in a large case it can be very difficult to review monthly invoices because there is too much ongoing activity and too narrow a picture is presented. n34 As long as adequate allowance is made to ensure the return of any moneys that might not be eventually allowed, the procedure should benefit a debtor in possessions planning and cash flow, preventing large surprises. In addition, payment on a monthly basis in large cases is necessary to compensate the professionals in those cases on par with how professionals in other, non-bankruptcy cases are being compensated, as Congress intended. n35

There is also a statutory basis that supports allowing special interim compensation procedures. Section 331 does indeed require that interim compensation follow notice and a hearing. However, notice and a hearing means such notice as is appropriate in the particular circumstances. n36 Under the Knudsen procedure, there is a hearing on the establishment of the special procedures on notice to all interested parties. It is very important for professionals seeking interim compensation procedures to obtain the bankruptcy courts approval before instituting that special payment procedure. Self-help will not work. n37 Any party in interest is entitled to appear at that initial hearing and object and seek modification of the procedures, including seeking the right to participate in the interim compensation process. Payment on monthly invoices is allowed only after parties in interest have had an opportunity to review and object to the specific invoices. No invoices are paid prior to court approval if there is any timely objection. n38 Thus, the better view is that the monthly invoicing procedures followed by quarterly fee applications, as established in Knudsen, are permissible in the appropriate circumstance.

Unreported Orders Implementing Procedures for Submission of Monthly Billing Statements. It is not uncommon for bankruptcy courts to enter unpublished orders implementing an administrative procedure for the submission of monthly billing statements to the debtor in possession, the creditors committee(s) and the United States trustee. n39 These parties are provided with an opportunity to review and object to the monthly billing request. If no objection to payment is made, a fixed percentage (e.g., 80 percent of fees and 100 percent of expenses) is paid. Thereafter, the amounts paid on a monthly basis (as well as any amounts requested in the monthly billing statements that may have been subject to an objection that, consequently, were not paid) are subject to court approval pursuant to a subsequent interim fee application. n40

Notice and a Hearing. Section 331 requires notice and a hearing before the court may grant interim compensation. However, section 331 does not specify who is to receive such notice, leaving that particular issue to the bankruptcy rules. n41

Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002 Specifies Notice Requirements. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002(a)(6) requires at least 20 days notice by mail to the debtor, the trustee, all creditors and indenture trustees of hearings on all applications for compensation or reimbursement of expenses, which includes interim compensation, totaling in excess of $1,000. Under Rule 2002(c)(2), the notice must specify the applicant and the amounts requested. Rule 2002(i) provides that the court may direct that the notice given under subdivision (a)(6) be transmitted to the United States trustee and be mailed only to committees elected pursuant to Code section 705 or appointed pursuant to Code section 1102 or their authorized agents and to the creditors and equity security holders who serve on the trustee or debtor in possession and file a request that all notices be mailed to them. Such a request would be made to the court, either by separate motion or in the original administrative procedures motion relating to professional fees; in either event, the request must be made before the service of the notice of the hearing on the interim fee request.

In a chapter 11 case, Rule 2002(j) requires service on the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Internal Revenue Service for the district in which the case is pending and, if the schedules disclose a debt to the United States other than for taxes, to the United States attorney for the district in which the case is pending and to the appropriate department or agency. If a stock interest of the United States is disclosed, notice is to be given to the Secretary of the Treasury. Rule 2002(k) requires service on the United States trustee.

Applications for Interim or Final Compensation; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2016. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2016 relates to applications for either interim or final compensation. Rule 2016(a) requires an entity seeking interim or final compensation for services, or reimbursement of necessary expenses, from the estate to file an application setting forth a detailed statement of (1) the services rendered, time expended and expenses incurred and (2) the amounts requested. The application shall also include, among other things, a statement as to what payments were previously made or promised to the applicant, the source of the payment, whether any compensation previously received has been shared and whether any understanding exists between the applicant and any other entity for the sharing of compensation received or to be received for services rendered in connection with the case.

Service of Notice. The applicant is required to file its fee application, together with supporting documentation, with the court and, generally, serve a copy of it on the trustee (or debtor in possession), the United States trustee and any creditors' or equity committees in a chapter 11 case. The applicant must also serve other parties, such as secured lenders, who may be entitled to such service pursuant to an order of the court governing the submission and service of fee applications in a bankruptcy case. A party seeking interim compensation need not distribute a complete interim fee application to all parties in interest. Instead, the applicant is merely required to send the notice (as opposed to the entire application) pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2002(a)(7).

Court Review Possible Even If No Party in Interest Objects. It is generally accepted that a bankruptcy court has a duty to review fee applications, interim and final, and to reduce or disallow fee requests even if no party in interest, or the United States trustee, objects. n42 However, if the bankruptcy court reduces or disallows a fee application, reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard should be given to the affected professional. n43

For further discussion of Code section 331, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 331.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 330 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 41-42 (1978); U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News pp. 5787, 5827, 5828, 6287; see Leichty v. Neary (In re Strand), 375 F.3d 854 (9th Cir. 2004).

n2

2. In re Child World, Inc., 185 B.R. 14, 16 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995).

n3

3. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 330 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 41-42 (1978).

n4

4. See In re Commercial Fin. Servs., Inc., 41 C.B.C.2d 868, 871, 231 B.R. 351, 354 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1999) (It is clear that Section 331 was intended to alleviate the unwarranted financial burden on professionals that occurs when judicial scrutiny, allowance, and payment of fee applications is withheld until the conclusion of the case, as contemplated by Section 330.); In re International Horizons, Inc., 10 B.R. 895, 897-98 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

n5

5. In re City Mattress, Inc., 174 B.R. 23, 26 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1994) (recognizing that [c]onfirmation of a reorganization plan has never been a precondition for the allowance of legal fees).

n6

6. Although section 331 specifically allows a debtors attorney to receive interim compensation, the 1994 amendments to section 330 eliminated the debtors attorney from the list of entities entitled to final compensation. Section 330(a)(1) still allows compensation for all professionals retained under section 327, which include debtor in possession counsel in chapter 11 cases, and section 330(a)(4) allows compensation to debtor's counsel in individual chapter 12 and 13 cases. Thus, it would not make sense to allow the debtor's attorney to receive interim compensation for services rendered in originally filed or converted chapter 7 cases, as the debtor's attorney cannot receive final compensation. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.05[2].

n7

7. See In re Microwave Prods. of Am., 100 B.R. 379, 382-83 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1989) (holding that because the former president of the debtor in possession had not been retained under either section 327 or section 1103, he was not entitled to interim compensation under section 331; instead he had an administrative claim under section 503 and had to wait until confirmation of the plan for payment).

n8

8. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 330 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 42 (1978); Collier on Bankruptcy, 6005.01.

n9

9. In re Child World, Inc., 185 B.R. 14, 17 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995) (granting interim fee applications, with a holdback); cf. In re Spanjer Bros., Inc., 191 B.R. 738, 747 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996) (interim fee awards are discretionary).

n10

10. See In re ACT Mfg., Inc., 281 B.R. 468, 474 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (The Court, however, has the authority and indeed the responsibility for reviewing and determining whether the fees and expenses, whether paid or unpaid, are reasonable and necessary.); In re Quick Release, Inc., 6 B.R. 713, 716 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1980) (when debtor in possession's counsel rendered necessary services, counsel is entitled to reasonable compensation on an interim basis, even if the reorganization might ultimately prove unsuccessful).

n11

11. In re ACT Mfg., Inc., 281 B.R. 468, 474 n.7 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (recognizing that section 331 ensures that competent and qualified professionals represent parties in the bankruptcy arena without fear that they will be driven to the brink of financial ruin while awaiting payment for their services).

n12

12. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.02[2]. For the circumstances under which a court could require disgorgement of fees already awarded and paid, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.04.

n13

13. See Thermtron Products, Inc. v. Hermansdorfer, 423 U.S. 336, 96 S. Ct. 584, 46 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1976) (a district court could not avoid hearing a case removed from state court simply because of its full docket where the statute allowed for remand to the state court only if the case was removed improvidently and without jurisdiction); see also Things Remembered, Inc. v. Petrarca, 516 U.S. 124, 127-28, 116 S. Ct. 494, 497, 133 L. Ed. 2d 461, 466 (1995) (citing Hermansdorfer for the proposition that a district court remanding a case based on the grounds set forth in the removal statute was acting within its authority under the statute).

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.05.

n15

15. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.02[2].

n16

16. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.03.

n17

17. Thus, in In re T.A.B. Construction, 197 B.R. 821 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1996), the court denied without prejudice an initial interim fee application filed 74 days after the order for relief. In In re Bicoastal Corp., 117 B.R. 700, 702 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990), the court allowed a second interim fee application more than 120 days after the case was filed but less than 120 days after the first application was filed, where the first application was denied in toto.

n18

18. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 330 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. at 41 (1978).

n19

19. In re Commercial Fin. Servs., Inc., 41 C.B.C.2d 868, 871, 231 B.R. 351, 354 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1999).

n20

20. See, e.g., In re Bennett Funding Group, Inc., 213 B.R. 227, 232 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1997); In re Kaiser Steel Corp., 74 B.R. 885 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1987).

n21

21. 84 B.R. 668 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988).

n22

22. 84 B.R. 668, 672.

n23

23. 257 B.R. 723, 731 (Bankr. D. Del. 2000).

n24

24. Id.

n25

25. In re Niover Bagels, Inc., 214 B.R. 291, 294 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1997) (nothing in the language of the Code suggests that the 120-day period can be shortened only in large cases).

n26

26. In re W & W Protection Agency, Inc., 200 B.R. 615, 620 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1996) (citing In re NBI, Inc., 129 B.R. 212, 219 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991)).

n27

27. See, e.g., In re W & W Protection Agency, Inc., 200 B.R. 615, 620-21 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1996); In re Shelly's, Inc., 91 B.R. 803, 807 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1988) (rejecting a special compensation procedure where the case was not unusually large, the debtor had not shown undue hardship and there had been no showing that fees could be returned).

n28

28. In re ICS Cybernetics, Inc., 97 B.R. 736, 738 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1989) (finding that the Knudsen criteria were not met by conclusory statements by creditors' committee counsel about having to wait six months for payment, and implying that a higher standard would have to be met by creditors' committee's, as opposed to debtor's, counsel).

n29

29. In re W & W Protection Agency, Inc., 200 B.R. 615, 620 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1996) (if special procedures were to be authorized in this case, the rare exception would swallow the general rule); see In re Shelly's, Inc., 91 B.R. 803, 806 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1988); In re Knudsen Corp., 84 B.R. 668, 672 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988).

n30

30. In re Braniff, Inc., 117 B.R. 702 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990) (noting that the court can thus better maintain control over administrative expenses and be fair to professionals and other interested parties alike). But see Collier on Bankruptcy, 331.05[1][c] (suggesting that courts should still consider and allow interim compensation procedures in the appropriate liquidation case).

n31

31. In re Knudsen Corp., 84 B.R. 668, 669-70 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988) (viewing the monthly payments like a retainer, allowed under section 328).

n32

32. In re ACT Mfg., Inc., 281 B.R. 468, 478 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (finding compensation particularly appropriate where a secured creditor approves the payments in a debtor in possession financing agreement); In re Mariner Post-Acute Network, Inc., 257 B.R. 723, 731 (Bankr. D. Del. 2000); In re Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 255 B.R. 162 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000); In re The Bennett Funding Group, Inc., 213 B.R. 227, 232 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1997); In re Dandy Lion Inns, 120 B.R. 1015, 1018 (D. Neb. 1990) (reversing and remanding the bankruptcy court's approval of special compensation procedures, but only because the court had not considered whether this was that rare case where special procedures were appropriate).

n33

33. In re Commercial Fin. Servs., Inc., 231 B.R. 351, 356 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1999) (the retainer language of section 328 cannot be used to support payment of fees prior to approval of a fee application, as required by the more specific section 331); In re Genlime Group, L.P., 167 B.R. 453, 455 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1994) (statutory interpretation begins with the language of the statute itself, which requires notice and a hearing); In re Pacific Forest Indus., Inc., 95 B.R. 740, 743 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1989) (suggesting that unpaid fees will provide incentive to properly serve the estate).

n34

34. In re Mariner Post-Acute Network, Inc., 257 B.R. 723, 731 (Bankr. D. Del. 2000).

n35

35. See In re Commercial Consortium of Cal., 135 B.R. 120, 123-4 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991) (pointing out that most attorneys customarily billed clients on a quarterly basis back in 1978 when the Code was adopted, but that computerization has accelerated the billing process and that since 1991 most professionals have billed monthly).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 102(1).

n37

37. In re Tri-State Plant Food Inc., 273 B.R. 250 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 2002), debtor's counsel billed and was paid postpetition, as in the cases cited in this section, but without any prior court approval. After the payment procedure was discovered, counsel cited the Knudsen case to the court in support of what had been done, arguing that the case authorized similar payment procedures. The court noted the split of authority as to whether a payment procedure could be established even with court approval, but held that in any event, a special compensation procedure could be instituted only after notice and a hearing and approval by the court. All unauthorized payments were ordered returned.

n38

38. See General Order M-219 of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York, posted at www.nysb.uscourts.gov/orders/m219.pdf.

n39

39. See In re ACT Mfg., Inc., 281 B.R. 468, 475-78 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (providing a comprehensive review of reported cases dealing with compensation procedures and noting that the case of In re Kaiser Steel Corp., 74 B.R. 885, 892-93 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1987), appears to be the first reported case on their use); In re Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 255 B.R. 162, 165 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2000) (providing an extensive list of courts that have adopted such general orders).

n40

40. General Order M-219 of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York, posted at www.nysb.uscourts.gov/orders/m219.pdf. Other courts have similar orders posted at their Web sites. See also Form No. 10.12-4, motion for an administrative order establishing interim compensation procedures, and Form No. 10.12-5, the order approving such a motion.

n41

41. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(a)(6), (c)(2), (i), (j).

n42

42. In re Busy Beaver Building Centers, Inc., 19 F.3d 833, 840-41 (3d Cir. 1994) (citing Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2017(b)); In re Bonneville Pac. Corp., 147 B.R. 803, 805 (Bankr. D. Utah 1992), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded sub nom. Hansen, Jones & Leta, P.C. v. Segal, 220 B.R. 434 (D. Utah 1998); In re Car Hauler Specialist, Inc., 128 B.R. 325, 326 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1990); In re S.T.N. Enterprises, 70 B.R. 823, 831 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1987).

n43

43. In re Busy Beaver Building Centers, Inc., 19 F.3d 833, 845-46 (3d Cir. 1994); Hansen, Jones & Leta, P.C. v. Segal, 220 B.R. 434, 445 (D. Utah 1998). Contra In re Poseidon Pools of America, 216 B.R. 98, 100-01 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (declining to follow Busy Beaver and pointing out that uncertainties due to poor record keeping will be resolved against the applicant).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

129 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Personal Property Stay Termination

2008 Emerging Issues 1330

Collier on Personal Property Stay Termination

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers personal property stay termination, including topics such as termination of the automatic stay as to personal property under section 362(h)(1)(A) if the debtor fails to timely file a statement of intention required under section 521(a)(2).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code Section 362(h), added by the 2005 Act, provides for the termination of the stay as to certain personal property if the debtor fails to comply in a timely manner with certain requirements in section 521. n1 In the event that the stay is terminated as to personal property under this subsection, that property is also rendered no longer property of the estate. This subsection is applicable only in regard to personal property of the estate or of the debtor that secures a claim or is subject to an unexpired lease. Although section 362(h) is not by its terms limited to cases brought under a specific chapter, when read together with section 521, it is clear that an early stay termination under section 362(h) can occur only in a chapter 7 case in which the debtor is an individual. n2 Similarly, section 362(h) would become inapplicable in a chapter 7 case upon the conversion of the case to chapter 13.

Section 362(h)(1)(A) terminates the automatic stay as to personal property if the debtor fails to timely file a statement of intention required under section 521(a)(2). The stay also may be terminated under this provision if the debtor fails to indicate on the statement an intention to either surrender the personal property, redeem the property pursuant to section 722, enter into a reaffirmation agreement with respect to the secured debt in accordance with section 524(c), or assume an unexpired lease on the property pursuant to section 365(p). Based on the applicable time period for compliance set out in section 521(a)(2), the stay shall not terminate based on the debtor's failure to file a statement of intention any sooner than the date of the meeting of creditors or 30 days after the filing date of the petition, whichever is earlier.

One question that arises is whether the stay is terminated under this subsection if the debtor states an intention to take an action that is not specifically listed in section 362(h)(1)(A), but the intention is consistent with the options listed in section 521(a)(2). For example, with respect to personal property which secures a consumer debt, the debtor may state an intention to claim the secured property as exempt and the lien voidable under section 522(f) or (h), an option that is perfectly permissible under section 521(a)(2), though not listed in section 362(h)(1)(A). Since the stated options in section 362(h)(1)(A) are joined with the word or, the rule of construction found in section 102(5) suggests that the listed options are not exclusive. Moreover, in light of the apparent purpose of section 362(h) to encourage debtor compliance with section 521, there is no reason to conclude that Congress intended to limit the options under section 521(a)(2) with the enactment of section 362(h), and the two subsections should be read together in a manner that gives effect to both.

Based on the interplay between section 362(h) and section 521(a)(2), the stay should not terminate under section 362(h)(1)(A) because the debtor states an intention to perform an option on terms that the secured creditor may not find acceptable. For example, the debtor need not state an intention to reaffirm the entire amount owed on a particular debt, and the stay should continue to apply while the debtor and secured creditor attempt to negotiate the terms of a reaffirmation. Similarly, the debtor may state an intention to redeem at a reasonable redemption amount, not simply at an amount that it is anticipated the secured creditor would agree to.

Additionally, section 362(h)(1)(B) provides that the stay under section 362(a) is terminated if the debtor does not take timely the action specified in the statement of intention, unless the statement specifies an intention to reaffirm the debt on the original contract terms and the creditor refuses to agree to such reaffirmation. The debtor's action is timely, as provided in section 521(a)(2), if taken within 30 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors, or such additional time as fixed by the court within such 30-day period. Any extension of the time for performance of the stated intention as ordered by the court would in turn extend the application of the stay.

The event that triggers stay termination under section 362(h)(1)(B) is the debtors failure to take timely action, and it may not always be clear whether the debtor has acted in a timely manner. For example, if the debtor states an intention to reaffirm, the parties may not conclude negotiations of an agreement, or the court may not schedule or conclude a hearing under section 524(m) on the filed reaffirmation agreement, within the time specified under section 521(a)(2). And if the debtor has timely stated an intention to reaffirm on the original contract terms and has made such an offer to the creditor, the creditor may not respond to the offer within the time specified in section 521(a)(2). Another possible delay in performance could arise if the debtor has stated an intention to redeem and a court hearing is required to determine the redemption amount. Similarly, full performance of the debtors intention to assume a lease within the time permitted under section 521(a)(2) may be complicated by the different set of time periods in section 365 for actions to be taken by the trustee, debtor and the lessee. Moreover, it does not appear that section 362(h) applies to a lease assumption since section 521(a)(2) does not require the debtor to state an intention to assume a lease. Because of the consequences of stay termination, particularly when done automatically without a stay relief proceeding, courts may be reluctant to construe the phrase take timely the action in section 362(h)(1)(B) in a manner that would require complete performance of the stated option within the time specified if extenuating circumstances exist.

Another question arises in relation to the provision that renders section 362(h) inapplicable if the creditor refuses to agree to a reaffirmation on the original contract terms. If a dispute arises under this provision, and the court is called upon to determine whether the reaffirmation offer has been made on the original contract terms, n3 the stay should remain in effect until these issues are determined.

Section 362(h)(2) permits the trustee to file a motion before the expiration of the time specified in section 521(a)(2) seeking to bar the application of section 362(h). n4 If the court determines, after notice and hearing on the motion, that the personal property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, and the court orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest, and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee, section 362(h) does not apply and the stay remains in effect.

Although the stay is terminated automatically without a stay relief proceeding if section 362(h) is applicable, creditors may act at their peril should it later be determined that the debtor had actually performed the stated intention within the applicable time period or the creditor had refused to reaffirm on the original contract terms. Since section 362(j), which requires a court to issue an order on request of a party under section 362(c) confirming that the stay has been terminated, does not apply to a stay termination under section 362(h), there is some question as to the court's authority to issue such an order under section 362(h). In any event, it may be prudent for a secured creditor or lessee of personal property to request an order confirming the stay termination or seek stay relief under section 362(d) if there is any doubt about whether the stay is in force.

For further discussion of Code section 362, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 362(h), added by , Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. In re Schlitzer, 55 C.B.C.2d 120, 332 B.R. 856, 858 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 2005).

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.10.

n4

4. In re Norton, 347 B.R. 291 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2006) (section 362(h) does not expressly state which of the two deadlines in section 521(a)(2) applies; trustee's motion to extend stay deemed timely when filed 51 days after debtor filed petition, though beyond deadline under section 521(a)(2)(A), but 16 days prior to deadline for performance in section 521(a)(2)(B)).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

130 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Exemption for Avoidance of Payments in the Ordinary Course of Business

2008 Emerging Issues 1332

Collier on Exemption for Avoidance of Payments in the Ordinary Course of Business

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the exemption for avoidance of payments in the ordinary course of business, including topics such as the elements of ordinary course payments, transfers made in the ordinary course of the parties respective business or financial affairs, and transfers made according to ordinary business terms.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: As amended in 2005, n1 Bankruptcy Code section 547(c)(2) provides that the trustee may not avoid under section 547 a transfer to the extent that such transfer was in payment of a debt incurred by the debtor in the ordinary court of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee, and such transfer was--

- (A) made in the ordinary court of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee; or
- (B) made according to ordinary business terms[.]

This section is intended to protect recurring, customary credit transactions that are incurred and paid in the ordinary course of business of the debtor and the debtors transferee. n2 The term financial affairs is intended to make it clear that the exception applies to both consumer and business debtors.

The 2005 amendments make it easier to invoke the ordinary course of business defense successfully in a preference action. To qualify for the defense, the defendant no longer needs to prove all three prongs of the defense. As under current law, the defendant must still plead and prove that the suspect transfer was in payment of a debt incurred by the debtor in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee. Under the amendments, the defendant need only plead and prove in addition either that the transfer was made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee or that it was made according to ordinary business terms. Formerly, the defendant was required to prove all three prongs of the defense. Although none of the key statutory terms is defined in the Bankruptcy Code, the case law regarding ordinary course of business has been well developed for some time. These cases survive the enactment of the 2005 amendments, since the language of each prong of the defense remains unchanged.

The limited legislative history indicates that the purpose of this exception is to leave undisturbed normal financial relations because it does not detract from the general policy of the preference section to discourage unusual action by either the debtor or his creditors during the debtor's slide into bankruptcy. n3

As originally enacted, section 547(c)(2) required the transfer to have been made within 45 days after the debt was incurred in order to qualify for the ordinary course of business exception. This requirement provoked considerable litigation regarding the fixing of the time the debt was incurred; in 1984, Congress eliminated the 45-day requirement.

Elements of Ordinary Course Payments. To fall under the ordinary course of business exception, a transferee must show that the underlying debt on which payment was made was incurred by the debtor in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of both parties and, further, that the transfer was either (1) made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of both parties, or (2) made according to ordinary business terms[.] n4

The Code fails to define these phrases, and the courts have developed unique definitions for each of the requirements. The ordinary course of business exception is an affirmative defense, and so the defendant carries the burden of proof on each of the elements. Only if that burden is satisfied with regard to each separate element will the defense be successful. n5

Inter-Relationship of Three Prongs and Emergence of Third Prong as a Separate and Distinct Element. The relationship between subparagraphs (B) and (C) of subsection 547(c)(2) has been tumultuous, but has settled into a pattern in which subparagraph (B) requires an inquiry into whether the transfers were in the ordinary course of business between the debtor and the creditor, and in which subparagraph (C) requires an inquiry into whether the transfers were in the ordinary course for business of members of the relevant industry. The subparagraph (B) inquiry is referred to as the subjective test, and the subparagraph (C) inquiry is referred to as the objective test. During the first decade of the Bankruptcy Code, most courts concentrated solely on the relationship between the debtor and the creditor in determining whether the defendant had satisfied its burden of proof under both subparagraphs (B) and (C). Only in the absence of a history between the parties did these courts look to transactions involving third parties.

As early as 1989, n6 however, courts began interpreting subparagraph (C) as requiring an independent inquiry into whether the payment practice at issue comports with industry standards. At least 10 of the courts of appeals have now adopted this view. This shift in interpretation coincided with the repeal of the 45-day limit, the onslaught of cases in which the defendant sought to use the ordinary course of business defense and the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Union Bank v. Wolas. n7 The march of the circuits to the holding that subparagraph (C) requires an independent analysis of the standard of the industry n8 was based partially upon a principle of statutory construction that [a]n interpretation of § 547(c)(2)(C) which focuses exclusively on the relationship between the creditor and the debtor, would deprive subsection (c)(2)(C) of any independent meaning because (c)(3)(B) already requires that the payment be evaluated in the context of the ongoing relationship between the debtor and the creditor. n9 Under the holdings of these cases, subparagraph (B) requires a subjective inquiry into the ordinariness of the transaction based upon the history between the debtor and the transferee and subparagraph (C) calls for an objective inquiry into whether the payments were ordinary for the relevant industry; courts compare the credit arrangements between other similarly situated debtors and creditors in the industry to see whether the payment practices at issue are consistent with what takes place in the industry. Moreover, some circuits have determined that the relative importance of industry standards depends on the length and breadth of the relationship between the debtor and creditor. n10

The 2005 amendments resolved this issue fully by making the ordinary course of business defense and the ordinary business terms defense alternative defenses rather than conjunctive defenses. n11 Cases decided under former subsections 547(c)(2)(A) (incurred by the debtor in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee) and (c)(2)(B) (in payment of a debt incurred by the debtor in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee) will continue to be valid precedent under the revisions to the ordinary course of business defense. Cases decided under former section 547(c)(2)(C) (made according to ordinary business terms) will be less instructive under the revisions. As the courts struggled to determine the relationship between the ordinary course of business prong of subsection (B) and the ordinary business terms prong of subsection (C), many courts subordinated the importance of ordinary business terms in those cases where the parties had an extensive history. Under the amendments, ordinary business terms prong is a full equal to the ordinary course of business prong, and so long as the defendant satisfies the requirement of section 547(c)(2)(A), the defense will apply if it satisfies either the ordinary course of business standard or the ordinary business terms standard. Thus, those cases decided under the former statute that relegated the ordinary business standard may not be fully applicable after the revisions. They will, however, continue to be important with regard to such issues as defining the applicable industry.

Detailed Analysis of Each of the Three Prongs

Debt Incurred in the Ordinary Course of Business. The underlying debt on which the payment was made must have been incurred in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of both parties.

This first element of section 547(c)(2)--subparagraph (A)--requires the court to examine the debt incurred for which the alleged preferential transfer was payment. This is different from subparagraphs (B) and (C), which require the court to examine the transfers themselves. Subparagraph (A) requires the court to examine the normality of such incurrences in each party's business operations generally. n12

Although this is the most straightforward and least litigated of the three prongs, for a defendant to be successful under the ordinary course of business defense the record must include evidence that satisfies the defendant's burden of proof on the issue. If the transaction from which the debt arose was not ordinary for the debtor or the transferee, then the defense will fail. Most courts assume this requirement is met by inferring from the evidence that there was nothing unusual about the transactions underlying the preferential payment.

As compared with other areas of preference law, there is scant case law on the issue of whether a debt has been incurred in the ordinary course of business between the debtor and the transferee. What case law there is reveals that courts generally are interested in whether the debt was incurred in a typical, arms-length commercial transaction that occurred in the marketplace or, on the other hand, whether it was incurred as an insider arrangement with a closely held entity. n13 If the debt was incurred in the routine operation of the debtor and the creditor, then it can be said to have been incurred in the ordinary course of each party's business. n14 Provided that these criteria are met, either long-term or first-time debt can be debt incurred in the ordinary course of business.

The primary tension in the interpretation of subsection 547(c)(2)(A) is whether it requires that the debt at issue be normal with regard to each party's business operations generally or that such debt be considered ordinary based upon the specific transactional history between the debtor and the defendant. The better reasoned decisions hold that a debt will not be considered incurred in the ordinary course of business if creation of the debt is atypical, fraudulent or not consistent with an arms-length commercial transaction. n15

Yet there is a contrary line of cases holding that, to satisfy subsection 547(c)(2)(A), the transferee must show that the debt at issue was incurred in the ordinary course of business between the debtor and the transferee. These cases narrow their focus to look only at whether the transaction that generated the challenged transfer is consistent with other transactions between the debtor and the creditor, rather than looking at whether the transaction is consistent with the general business operations of both the debtor and the creditor. These courts believe that subparagraph (A) contemplates a subjective test: Was the debt and the transfer ordinary as between the debtor and the creditor? To be subjectively ordinary implies some consistency with other business transactions between the parties. n16

Transfer Made in the Ordinary Course of the Parties Respective Businesses or Financial Affairs (Subjective Test). As noted above, Congress enacted section 547(c)(2) to leave undisturbed normal financial relations, because they do not detract from the general policy of the preference section to discourage unusual action by either the debtor or creditors during the debtor's slide into bankruptcy. n17 Even if the debtor's business transactions were irregular, they may be considered ordinary for purposes of section 547(c)(2) if they were consistent with the course of dealing between the particular parties. n18

There is no precise legal test that can be applied in determining whether payments by the debtor during the 90-day period were made in the ordinary course of business; rather, the court must engage in a peculiarly factual analysis. n19 The controlling factor is whether the transactions between the debtor and the creditor both before and during the ninety-day period were consistent.

The defendant must establish a baseline of dealing so that the court may compare the transfers made during the preference period with the parties prior course of dealings. n20 This baseline of dealing must be fixed at least in part during a time in which debtor's day-to-day operations were ordinary in the layman's sense of the word. Preferably, the material period should extend back into the time before the debtor became financially distressed. n21

Courts have relied upon a number of different factors in determining whether a payment is ordinary for purposes of subparagraph (B). The four factors most commonly cited by courts in making this determination are:

- (1) length of time the parties were engaged in the transaction in issue;
- (2) whether the amount or form of tender differed from past practices;
- (3) whether the debtor or creditor engaged in any unusual collection or payment activities; and
- (4) the circumstances under which the payment was made. n22

Duration of Relationship Between the Parties. If the debtor and the transferee have had a significant number of business dealings with one another, the court will examine those dealings to determine whether the challenged transfer fit within their previous pattern. If the challenged transfer arises from the initial transaction between the debtor and the transferee, then the court may refer solely to the written terms of the transaction to define the ordinary course of business between the parties. n23 A number of courts have held that it is possible for a first-time transaction between the parties during the preference period to qualify as being in the ordinary course. n24

Timing of the Payment(s)/Method of Transfer. The vast majority of ordinary course of business cases deal with payments that are made later than the express written terms require. A payment that is made beyond invoice or contract terms may still be considered in the ordinary course for purposes of subparagraph (B) if late payments were the standard course of dealing between the parties. n25

To determine whether a late payment may still be considered ordinary between the parties, a court will normally compare the degree of lateness of each of the alleged preferences with the pattern of payments before the preference period to see if the alleged preferences fall within that pattern. Areas of contention that arise in this comparison include (1) how far back the court should look in determining the parties' course of dealing prior to the preference period, (2) whether to use an average number of days late or a median number of days late and (3) how great a variance will render a challenged transfer inconsistent with the parties' course of dealing prior to the preference period.

Just as payments that are made after the due date may be considered out of the ordinary course, payments may likewise be out of the ordinary course of business if they are early, that is before the due date, and the defendant does not produce evidence that early payment was the norm between the parties prior to the preference period. n26 Similarly, if the transfer under scrutiny was by wire transfer or cashier's check, the defendant must show that this type of payment falls within the circle of ordinary course transactions between the parties. A sufficient pattern of similar types of payments before the preference period must be shown in order to prevail. n27 The fact that a payment was made by wire transfer or by cashiers check is not a per se indication that the payment was out of the ordinary course of business.

Unusual Collection Efforts or Payment Practices. Payments made in response to unusual debt collection practices by the creditor are outside the scope of ordinary course of business. n28 It seems clear from the legislative history that section 547(c)(2) should protect only those payments that do not result from unusual debt collection or payment practices. Otherwise normal payments, however, should not be deemed outside the ordinary course if they are not made in response to unusual collection efforts. Thus, whenever the bankruptcy court receives evidence of unusual collection efforts, it must consider whether the debtor's payment was in fact, a response to those efforts. n29 In many circumstances, a phone call or two demanding an overdue payment or threatening to delay further deliveries until overdue payments are made may be ordinary between the parties. n30

The court will normally compare the collection activities that preceded each challenged transfer with the pattern of collection activities occurring prior to the preference period to see if the collection activities that preceded the alleged preferences fall within that pattern. In addition the court will examine and compare the relationship between such collection activity and the making of the challenged payment with the pre-preference period relationship between collection activity and payment. The more intense the collection activity during the preference period the greater the likelihood that the activity will take the payment out of the ordinary course of business.

Transfer Made According to Ordinary Business Terms (Objective/Industry Standard Test). The determination that subparagraph (C) requires proof that the challenged payment satisfies an industry standard raises several questions.

The Industry Standard. Subparagraph (C) establishes a requirement that a creditor prove that the debtor made the challenged transfer in harmony with the range of terms prevailing in some relevant industry's norms. The provision allows the creditor considerable latitude in defining what the relevant industry is; even departures from the relevant industry norms that are not so flagrant as to be unusual remain within subparagraph (C)'s protection. n31

Ordinary business terms refers to the range of terms that encompass the practices in which firms similar in some general way to the creditor in question engage, and only dealings so idiosyncratic as to fall outside that broad range should be deemed extraordinary and therefore outside the scope of subparagraph (C). This does not imply that the creditor must prove the existence of some single uniform set of industry-wide credit terms, a formidable if not insurmountable obstacle given the great variances in billing practices likely to exist within the set of markets or submarkets which one could plausibly argue comprise the relevant industry. n32

Defining the Industry. In order to determine whether the defendant has satisfied its burden of showing that the payments were within industry standards, the court must first define the relevant industry. Most courts appear to begin by looking to the creditor's industry. This is only a portion of the solution, however, since the court must determine how broadly or how narrowly to define the creditor's industry.

The Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit delivered a soliloquy on this complicated question in In re Tolona Pizza Products Corp. n33 Not only is it difficult to identify the industry whose norm shall govern (is it, here, the sale of sausages to maker of pizza? The sale of sausages to anyone? The sale of anything to makers of pizza?), but there can be great variance in billing practices within an industry. n34 Most opinions do not identify precisely the industry within which the transaction is being compared.

In one of the few decisions to identify with specificity the relevant industry for purposes of subparagraph (C), n35 the creditor had provided legal services to Midway Airlines, and the court defined the industry as the domestic airline legal-service industry. The court determined that the fair way to try and define the relevant industry or market is between domestic air carriers and lawyers they hire. The creditor's competitors included other law firms that provided legal services to the debtor. It is conceivable that a single firm might constitute an entire industry, but few courts seem willing to apply that definition.

The Relative Importance of the Industry Standard. In the Third Circuit, the relative importance of compliance with industry standards depends upon the length and depth and breadth of the prepetition relationship between the debtor and the creditor. The likelihood of unfair overreaching by a creditor is reduced if the parties sustained the same relationship for a substantial time period before the debtor's insolvency. n36 The enactment of the 2005 amendments in which the ordinary course of business defense and the ordinary business terms defense were made alternative defenses, rather than conjunctive defenses, overrules these decisions. n37

Proof That Transfer Was Consistent with Industry Standards. Once the court has defined the relevant industry, chosen the industry standard and decided how much weight to give that standard, the court must weigh the evidence to determine whether the defendant has met the standard. Relevant evidence might include the testimony of disinterested experts not employed by the creditor and of an employee of the defendant, and it might include evidence of practices of other members of the industry. n38 Defendants have implored the courts to recognize that the very evidence the court requires (i.e., the payment and collection practices of its competitors) constitutes proprietary information that is difficult to obtain. n39 As in other matters, the weight given to expert witnesses depends both on the credentials of the expert and the quality of the expert's testimony. Courts have given varying weight to testimony of an employee of the creditor depending on the extent of experience of the employee and the quality of the testimony.

Specific Applications

Payments on Long-Term Debts. Before its amendment in 1984, n40 section 547(c)(2) provided that to be excepted from avoidance a transfer in the ordinary course of the debtor's business or financial affairs had to be made not later than 45 days after the debt was incurred. With the elimination of the 45-day rule, Congress extended the protections of section 547(c)(2) beyond payments on short-term trade debt. Resolving a split between the circuits, the Supreme Court, in Union Bank v. Wolas, n41 held that payments on long-term debt, as well as payments on short-term debt, may qualify for the ordinary course of business exception to the trustee's power to avoid preferential transfers. n42

The debtor in Wolas filed a petition for chapter 7 relief seven months after borrowing $7 million from a bank. During the 90-day period preceding the filing, the debtor made two interest payments totalling approximately $100,000 and paid a loan commitment fee of approximately $2,500 to the bank. The trustee sued to recover these payments as preferences under section 547(b). The bankruptcy court found that the loans had been made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of both the bank and the debtor, and that the interest payments and loan commitment fee payment had been made according to ordinary business terms and in the ordinary course of business. The district court affirmed. n43

The Ninth Circuit, relying upon its prior decision in In re CHG International, Inc., n44 reversed the lower court. In CHG International, the Ninth Circuit had concluded that section 547(c)(2) was merely an extension of the protections contained in section 547(c)(1) for contemporaneous exchanges for new value and that, as reflected in the legislative history and underlying policies of the preference provisions of the Bankruptcy Code, Congress did not intent to include long-term debt payments under section 547(c)(2).

In reversing the Ninth Circuit, the Supreme Court held that section 547, on its face, makes no distinction between long-term and short-term debt. Accordingly, the burden of persuading us that Congress intended to create or to preserve a special rule for long-term debt is exceptionally heavy. n45 Finding the legislative history ambiguous, the Court concluded that there was no persuasive evidence of a congressional intent to distinguish between long-term and short-term debt and that the literal reading of section 547(c)(2) must prevail.

Ponzi Schemes. Several courts have denied section 547(c)(2) protection to transfers arising out of Ponzi schemes, n46 reasoning that such schemes are not in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor. n47 However, some courts have indicated a willingness to protect payments to ordinary trade creditors for utilities, supplies, etc., even when the payments are made by a debtor engaged in a Ponzi scheme. n48

Payment Pursuant to Settlement Agreements. Although some courts have held that a payment made pursuant to a forbearance or standstill agreement, or a payment made pursuant to a litigation settlement agreement can never secure the protection of section 547(c)(2), n49 the better rule is that of the Ninth, n50 Second, n51 Third n52 and Eighth n53 Circuits that it is error to hold that payments made pursuant to a debt restructuring agreement can never be made in the ordinary course of business. Rather, such a determination is a question of fact that depends on the nature of industry practice in each particular case.

For further discussion of Code section 547, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. Although the former Bankruptcy Act had no comparable preference exception for ordinary course transfers, many transfers that are currently protected under section 547(c)(2) were similarly protected under the judicially created current expense exception.

n3

3. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 373-74 (1997), reprinted in 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5787, 6329.

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5

5. This point was made by the Utah Supreme Court in a case where unsuccessful ordinary course of business defendants had sued their bankruptcy attorney for failing to include in the record any evidence that supported the ordinary business terms prong of the ordinary course of business. Glencore, Ltd. v. Ince, 972 P.2d 376 (Utah 1998); see also Sigmon v. Butner, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 9376, at *9 (4th Cir. May 15, 2001) (The recipient of [a payment within the preference period] has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that [such] payment falls within § 547(c)(2).").

n6

6. In re Loretto Winery, Ltd., 22 C.B.C.2d 112, 107 B.R. 707 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989).

n7

7. 501 U.S. 151, 112 S. Ct. 527, 116 L. Ed. 2d 514(1991).

n8

8. Gulf City Seafoods, Inc. v. Ludwig Shrimp Co. (In re Gulf City Seafoods Inc.), 296 F.3d 363 (5th Cir. 2002); Arrow Elecs., Inc. v. Justus (In re Kaypro), 218 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2000); United States Trustee v. First Jersey Sec., Inc. (In re First Jersey Sec., Inc.), 180 F.3d 504 (3d Cir. 1999); Miller v. Florida Mining & Materials (In re A.W. & Assocs., Inc.), 136 F.3d 1439 (11th Cir. 1998); Luper v. Columbia Gas (In re Carled, Inc.), 91 F.3d 811 (6th Cir. 1996); Lawson v. Ford Motor Co. (In re Roblin Indus., Inc.), 78 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 1996); In re Midway Airlines, Inc., 69 F.3d 792 (7th Cir. 1995); Advo-System, Inc. v. Maxway Corp., 37 F.3d 1044 (4th Cir. 1994); Unicom Computer Corp. v. IBM (In re Unicom Computer Corp.), 21 F.3d 1116 (9th Cir. 1994); Fiber Lite Corp. v. Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc. (In re Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc.), 18 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1994); Clark v. Balcov Real Estate Finance, Inc. (In re Meridith Hoffman Partners), 12 F.3d 1549 (10th Cir. 1993); Jones v. United Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re U.S.A. Inns), 9 F.3d 680 (8th Cir. 1993); In re Tolona Pizza Prods. Corp., 3 F.3d 1029 (7th Cir. 1993); In re Food Catering & Housing, Inc., 971 F.2d 396 (9th Cir. 1992); In re Fred Hawes Organization, Inc., 957 F.2d 239 (6th Cir. 1992).

n9

9. Miller v. Florida Mining & Materials (In re A.W. & Assocs., Inc.), 136 F.3d 1439, 1442 (11th Cir. 1998). Commentators do not believe it was necessary or wise to impose this objective industry standard. Lawrence Ponoroff & Julie C. Ashby, Desperate Times and Desperate Measures: The Troubled State of the Ordinary Course of Business Defense--and What To Do About It, 72 Wash. L. Rev. 5 (1997); 1 Epstein, Nickels & White, Bankruptcy, § 6-31, at 619.

n10

10. Fiber Lite Corp. v. Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc. (In re Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc.), 18 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1994); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.04[2][a][ii][C].

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(2), as amended by Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409(1) (2005).

n12

12. Speco Corp. v. Canton Drop Forge (In re Speco Corp.), 218 B.R. 390 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1998) (citing In re Youthland, 160 B.R. 311 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1993)).

n13

13. Huffman v. New Jersey Steel Corp. (In re Valley Steel Corp.), 182 B.R. 728 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1995).

n14

14. Youthland, Inc. v. Sunshine Girls (In re Youthland Inc.), 160 B.R. 311 (S.D. Ohio 1993).

n15

15. In re Pioneer Technology, Inc., 107 B.R. 698, 702 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988); Youthland, Inc. v. Sunshine Girls (In re Youthland), 160 B.R. 311 (S.D. Ohio 1993); Huffman v. New Jersey Steel Corp. (In re Valley Steel Corp.), 182 B.R. 728, 735 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1995); In re Jackson, 90 B.R. 793, 794 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1988).

n16

16. Tennessee Valley Steel Corp. v. Central Communications & Elecs., Inc. (In re Tennessee Valley Steel Corp.), 203 B.R. 949 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996).

n17

17. In re Advance Glove Mfg. Co., 761 F.2d 249, 251 (6th Cir. 1985) (quoting S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 88 (1978)).

n18

18. In re Yurika Foods Corp., 888 F.2d 42, 44 (6th Cir. 1989); In re Fulghum Constr. Corp., 872 F.2d 739, 743 (6th Cir. 1989).

n19

19. Lovett v. St. Johnsbury Trucking, 931 F.2d 494, 497 (8th Cir. 1991) (quoting In re Fulghum Constr. Corp., 872 F.2d 739, 743 (6th Cir. 1989)).

n20

20. Cassirer v. Herskowitz (In re Schick), 234 B.R. 337 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999); Ellenberg v. Plaid Enters., Inc. (In re T.B. Home Sewing Enters., Inc.), 173 B.R. 790 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1993); In re Hancock-Nelson Mercantile Co., Inc., 122 B.R. 1006, 1013 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1991).

n21

21. In re Hancock-Nelson Mercantile Co. Inc. 122 B.R. 1006 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1991).

n22

22. Payne v. Clarendon Nat'l Ins. Co. (In re Sunset Sales, Inc.), 220 B.R. 1005 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1998); In re Jerry-Sue Fashions, Inc., 91 B.R. 1006 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1988).

n23

23. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Charleston Forge, Inc. (In re Russell Cave Co., Inc.), 259 B.R. 879 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2001); In re Keller Tool Corp., 151 B.R. 912 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1993).

n24

24. Kleven v. Household Bank FSB, 334 F.3d 638, 643 (7th Cir. 2003) (with regard to a first time transaction, the ordinary course of business may be established by the terms of the parties agreement until that agreement is somehow modified by actual performance; in the absence of modifying behavior, court saw no reason why we should not look to the terms of the parties agreement in order to determine the ordinary course of business); Styler v. Landmark Petroleum, Inc. (In re Peterson Distributing, Inc.), 197 B.R. 919, 927-928 (D. Utah 1996); In re Morren Meat & Poultry Co., Inc., 92 B.R. 737 (W.D. Mich. 1988); Hovis v. Aerospace Solutions, Inc. (In re Air South Airlines, Inc.), 247 B.R. 153, 162 (Bankr. D.S.C. 2000).

n25

25. In re Tolona Pizza Prods. Corp., 3 F.3d 1029, 1032 (7th Cir. 1993).

n26

26. R.M. Taylor, Inc. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau (In re R.M. Taylor, Inc.), 245 B.R. 629 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2000); Cassirer v. Herskowitz (In re Schick), 234 B.R. 337 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999).

n27

27. Central Hardware Co. v. Sherwin-Williams Co. (In re Spirit Holding Co., Inc.), 153 F.3d 902 (8th Cir. 1998); Tomlins v. BRW Paper Co. (In re Tulsa Litho Co.), 229 B.R. 806 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 1999).

n28

28. In re Craig Oil Co., 785 F.2d 1563 (11th Cir. 1986); Ellenberg v. Plaid Enters., Inc. (In re T.B. Home Sewing Enters., Inc.), 173 B.R. 790 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1993).

n29

29. In re Craig Oil Co., 785 F.2d 1563 (11th Cir. 1986).

n30

30. Grant v. Suntrust Bank, N.A. (In re L. Bee Furniture Co.), 203 B.R. 778, 782 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1996).

n31

31. Ganis Credit Corp. v. Anderson (In re Jan Weilert RV, Inc.), 315 F.3d 1192, 1198 (9th Cir. 2003) (Only a transaction that is so unusual or uncommon as to render it an aberration in the relevant industry, falls outside the broad range of terms encompassed by the meaning of ordinary business terms. (citation omitted)); Fiber Lite Corp. v. Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc. (In re Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc.), 18 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1994).

n32

32. In re Tolona Pizza Prods. Corp., 3 F.3d 1029 (7th Cir. 1993).

n33

33. 3 F.3d 1029 (7th Cir. 1993).

n34

34. 3 F.3d 1029, 1033.

n35

35. Solow v. Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak & Stewart (In re Midway Airlines, Inc.), 180 B.R. 1009, 1017 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1995); cf. Jones v. United Sav. & Loan Assn (In re U.S.A. Inns), 9 F.3d 680 (8th Cir. 1993), in which the comparison groups seem to be similarly situated savings and loans with delinquent customers.

n36

36. Fiber Lite Corp. v. Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc. (In re Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc.), 18 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1994).

n37

37. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n38

38. See G.H. Leidenheimer Baking Co., Ltd. v. Sharp & Patton Sausage Co., Inc. v. A.T. Patton Co. v. Sharp (In re SGSM Acquisition Co., LLC), 439 F.3d 233 (5th Cir. 2006) (bankruptcy court did not err in holding that the defendants' witnesses failed to qualify as expert witnesses and thus the only evidence on the objective prong was the testimony of the plaintiff's expert witness).

n39

39. Troisio v. E.B. Eddy Forest Products (In re Global Tissue LLC), 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 14003, at *10 (3d Cir. July 7, 2004) (unpublished) ([I]nformation about competitors trade practices used to establish industry standards may be difficult to obtain, particularly if antitrust concerns prevent the sharing of payment information among firms in a particular industry. Thus, courts must allow some flexibility regarding sources of evidence used to establish the range of practices that will be deemed the industry standard in the section 547(c)(2)(C) analysis.).

n40

40. Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353, 98 Stat. 333 (1984).

n41

41. 502 U.S. 151, 112 S. Ct. 527, 116 L. Ed. 2d 514, 25 C.B.C.2d 1011 (1991).

n42

42. 502 U.S. 151, 162, 112 S. Ct. 527, 533, 116 L. Ed. 2d 514, 525, 25 C.B.C.2d 1011, 1019; see also Arrow Elecs., Inc. v. Justus (In re Kaypro), 218 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2000) (holding that, under appropriate circumstances, payments made pursuant to debt restructuring agreements may be insulated under the section 547(c)(2) exception).

n43

43. In re ZZZZ Best Co., Inc., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17500 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 4, 1989), revd, 921 F.2d 968

(9th Cir. 1990), revd, Union Bank v. Wolas, 502 U.S. 151, 112 S. Ct. 527, 116 L. Ed. 2d 514, 25 C.B.C.2d 1011 (1991).

n44

44. 897 F.2d 1479(9th Cir. 1990).

n45

45. 502 U.S. 151, 156, 112 S. Ct. 527, 530, 116 L. Ed. 2d 514, 521, 25 C.B.C.2d 1011, 1014; see also In re Jeffrey Bigelow Design Group, Inc., 956 F.2d 479, 487-88 (4th Cir. 1992) (debtors payments to its shareholder on line of credit qualified for ordinary course of business exception when debtor made such payments regularly for two years and payments were made according to ordinary business terms).

n46

46. A Ponzi scheme is any sort of fraudulent arrangement that uses later acquired funds or products to pay off previous investors." In re Bullion Reserve of N. Am., 836 F.2d 1214, 1219 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1056, 108 S. Ct. 2824, 100 L. Ed. 2d 925 (1988); see Jobin v. McKay (In re M & L Bus. Mach. Co., Inc.), 84 F.3d 1330, 1340 (10th Cir. 1996) (because investment companies do not ordinarily pay fraudulent profits to early investors, the § 547(c)(2) defense is inapplicable to payments to investors in a Ponzi scheme).

n47

47. See In re Bullion Reserve of N. Am., 836 F.2d 1214, 1219 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1056, 108 S. Ct. 2824, 100 L. Ed. 2d 925 (1988); Grauly v. Brooks (In re Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Delingham & Wong, Inc.), 819 F.2d 214, 16 C.B.C.2d 1394 (9th Cir. 1987); Rafoth v. Bailey (In re Baker & Getty Fin. Servs., Inc.), 88 B.R. 792, 799 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1988); In re W. World Funding, Inc., 54 B.R. 470, 481 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1985); cf. First Fed. of Mich. v. Barrow, 878 F.2d 912, 918 (6th Cir. 1989) (secondary mortgage service agencies fraudulent business manipulations were not made in the ordinary course of business because such practices do not comport with ordinary course of business practices commonly pursued by properly conducted mortgage companies).

n48

48. See Jobin v. McKay (In re M & L Bus. Mach. Co., Inc.), 84 F.3d 1330 (10th Cir. 1996); Merrill v. Abbott (In re Independent Clearing House Co.), 77 B.R. 843, 874 (D. Utah 1987) (We believe that the bankruptcy court read section 547(c)(2) too narrowly. Just because a debtor does not have a legitimate or ordinary business does not mean that transfers he makes in the course of that business may not be made in the ordinary course of business.).

n49

49. American Honda Fin. Corp. v. A. Angelle, Inc. (In re A. Angelle, Inc.), 230 B.R. 287 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1998) (citing Hickey v. Nightingale Roofing, Inc., 83 B.R. 180 (D. Mass 1988); In re Industrial & Mun. Engg, Inc., 127 B.R. 848 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1990)).

n50

50. Arrow Elecs., Inc. v. Justus (In re Kaypro), 218 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2000).

n51

51. Lawson v. Ford Motor Co. (In re Roblin Indus., Inc.), 78 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 1996).

n52

52. J.P.Fyfe, Inc. of Florida v. Bradco Supply Corp., 891 F.2d 66 (3d Cir. 1989).

n53

53. Jones v. United Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re U.S.A. Inns), 9 F.3d 680 (8th Cir. 1993).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

131 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Subordination of Tax Claims

2008 Emerging Issues 1337

Collier on Subordination of Tax Claims

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 724(b) provides a mechanism for subordinating certain tax liens to the payment of certain priority claims. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the subordination of tax claims under the Bankruptcy Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Subordination of Tax Claims; 11 U.S.C. § 724(b). Bankruptcy Code section 724(b) provides a mechanism for subordinating certain tax liens to the payment of certain priority claims. It provides that proceeds of property in which the estate has an interest and that are subject to a lien securing an allowed claim for taxes, other than a lien for ad valorem taxes, will be distributed in accordance with the priority schedule contained in section 724(b). The priority schedule is complicated and is discussed in detail below. n1 Section 724 applies only in chapter 7. There are no comparable provisions in chapter 11, 12 or 13. n2 The impact of sections 724(e) and 724(f) should not be overlooked. Section 724(e) limits subordination under section 724(b) to circumstances where the trustee has exhausted the unencumbered assets of the estate and obtained any recovery to which the trustee is entitled under section 506(c). Section 724(f) provides a limited exception to the exclusion of ad valorem taxes from the scope of section 724(b). n3

Section 724(b) Applies to All Types of Property. Section 724(b) applies to all types of property in which the estate has an interest. n4 Unlike Section 67c(3), its predecessor under the Bankruptcy Act, which applied only to personal property, section 724(b) applies to real property as well. It applies to all property in which the estate has an interest, regardless of whether possession of the property is in the hands of the trustee or in the hands of the lienholder.

Exclusion of Lien for Ad Valorem Taxes. Prior to 2005, section 724(b) extended to property securing any tax lien that was otherwise unavoidable. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 created an exception for ad valorem taxes on real or personal property. The exception is tempered by the provisions of section 724(f), also enacted by the 2005 Act, that provide for the subordination of ad valorem taxes to two categories of priority claims. The first are claims for wages, salaries and commissions that are entitled to priority under section 507(a)(4). The second are claims for contributions to employee benefit plans entitled to priority under section 507(a)(5). n5

The Liens to Which Section 724(b) Applies. Section 724(b) refers to a lien that is not avoidable under this title and that secures an allowed claim for a tax. The most common type of lien falling within the scope of section 724(b) is a lien for real property taxes, and prepetition real property taxes have often been subordinated under section 724(b). n6 Under the amendment to section 724(b) made by the 2005 Act, however, real property taxes are excluded from the scope of section 724(b) unless the provisions of section 724(f) come into effect. One case, decided before the 2005 Act went into effect, held that section 724(b) applies to liens for real property taxes attaching after commencement of the case. n7

In Barstow v. United States (In Re Markair, Inc.), 308 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002), n8 the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that section 724(b) did not apply to a judicial lien held by the Internal Revenue Service, even though the obligation secured by the lien was a tax obligation. The court held that the language of section 724(b) was ambiguous, reviewed section 101(36) defining judicial lien and considered the legislative history and the public policy intended to be effectuated by section 724(b). The court concluded that section 724(b) should not be held applicable to a judicial lien for taxes obtained as part of a settlement in the prior chapter 11 case despite the fact that the underlying debt was an obligation for taxes.

Section 724(b) will not apply if the lien securing the claim for taxes is avoidable under any section of the Bankruptcy Code. If the lien can be avoided under another section of the Code, then the avoided lien would be preserved for the benefit of the estate and the preserved item would not be subject to section 724(b).

One case has held that section 724(b) does not limit the ability of the United States government to offset a tax refund owing to a debtor against a debtors tax obligation owing to the United States. n9 The decision reversed a bankruptcy court ruling to the effect that the right to set off a tax lien should be treated as a lien subject to the effect of section 724(b).

Challenge to Constitutionality of Section 724(b). State taxing authorities have sought to have section 724(b) declared unconstitutional as being a violation of the Tenth Amendment. These states have argued that the statute interferes with a states ability to fulfill its governmental responsibilities. All such challenges have proven unsuccessful. n10

Distribution of Proceeds under Section 724(b). Section 724(b) provides that proceeds received from property subject to a lien securing an allowed claim for taxes are to be distributed in the following order:

First, to the holder of an allowed claim secured by a lien on the property that is senior to the tax lien and that is not itself avoidable under any section of the Bankruptcy Code--section 724(b)(1); n11

Second, to the holders of unsecured priority claims that are senior in priority to the section 507(a)(8) priority for unsecured tax claims (i.e., domestic support obligations, administrative, gap, wage, employee benefit, grain and consumer deposit claims entitled to priority under section 507(a)(1) through 507(a)(7)), but only up to the amount of the tax lien claim and excluding administrative expenses, other than wage claims, incurred in a superseded chapter 11 case--section 724(b)(2); n12

Third, to the holder of the tax lien claim, to the extent that the amount of the tax lien claim exceeds any amount distributed pursuant to the previous paragraph--section 724(b)(3);

Fourth, to the holders of liens on the property that are junior to the lien securing the tax lien claim and that are not avoidable under any section of the Bankruptcy Code--section 724(b)(4);

Fifth, to the holder of the tax lien claim, to the extent the tax lien claim has not been paid under the third paragraph above--section 724(b)(5);

Sixth, to the estate--section 724(b)(6). n13

Exclusion of Chapter 11 Administrative Expenses. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 amended paragraph (2) of section 724(b) to exclude certain claims from the scope of a distribution under section 724(b). The exclusion was accomplished by excepting out administrative expenses incurred during the predecessor chapter 11 case other than claims for wages, salaries or commissions. The exclusion language was unfortunately included in the wrong place in section 724(b)(2). This language was intended to modify the portion of section 507 that grants priority to bankruptcy administrative expenses. That section was formerly numbered as section 507(a)(1) but was renumbered as section 507(a)(2) by the 2005 Act. When this additional exclusion was added to section 724(b), the renumbering was overlooked and the exclusionary language was inserted behind the reference to section 507(a)(1) rather than section 507(a)(2). Nevertheless, it was clearly intended to modify section 507(a)(2) and should be read as such.

The exclusion extends to all administrative expenses in the predecessor chapter 11 case with one exception. The exception is for wages, salaries and commissions arising after the filing of the initial petition and before conversion to chapter 7. The reference to wages, salaries and commissions is not qualified by any time or dollar limitations and so any wages, salaries or commissions arising during the predecessor chapter 11 case will be within the scope of the exception. This stands in contrast to the priority accorded wages, salaries and commissions under section 507(a)(4), which has both a dollar limit ($10,000 per individual) and a time limit (180 days). n14

Example of Order of Priorities for Distribution. The formula described above is best understood by using an example. Assume that the estate owns a piece of property that has been sold for a price yielding $50,000 in net proceeds. The property is not subject to an exemption. The property is encumbered by a first priority tax lien in the amount of $14,000 and a second lien for a mortgage in the amount of $35,000. The aggregate priority claims under section 507(a)(1) through section 507(a)(7) are $13,000 and do not include any unpaid administrative expenses from a superseded chapter 11 case.

Distribution of the $50,000 in proceeds would be made as follows: First, $13,000 would be allocated to the trustee on account of priority claims because the trustee steps into the shoes of the holder of the first tax lien claim under section 724(b)(2). Second, $1,000, the remaining portion of the tax lien claim, would be allocated to the holder of the tax lien under section 724(b)(3). Third, $35,000 would be allocated to the holder of the second lien mortgage under section 724(b)(4). Fourth, $1,000 would be allocated to the holder of the first tax lien under section 724(b)(5) representing the amount that was subordinated to the trustee.

Holder of Tax Lien Essentially Given Junior Lien on Property. As the above example illustrates, the holder of the tax lien is essentially given a junior lien on the property to secure the amount to which it was otherwise entitled but which was paid to the trustee.

The extent of this junior lien is limited by the extent of the sales proceeds. n15 If the sales proceeds are exhausted without payment of the tax lien claim, then the remaining balance of such claim remains unsatisfied and is a general claim against the estate with whatever priority it may be entitled to under other sections of the Bankruptcy Code. In most instances, the claim will be entitled to priority under section 507(a)(8) and paid ahead of general unsecured claims. n16

Section 724(b) Does Not Affect Liens Junior or Senior to Tax Lien. Another significant aspect of section 724(b) is that it has no effect whatsoever on liens that are junior or senior to a tax lien. The effect of section 724(b) is to adjust distributions as between the holder of the tax lien and the trustee without affecting other lienholders. n17

It should also be noted that section 724(b) only benefits claims entitled to priority under sections 507(a)(1) through 507(a)(7). Tax claims entitled to priority under section 507 (a)(8) are not entitled to the benefit of section 724(b) nor are any priority claims that are junior in priority to such claims.

Section 724(b) Should Be Invoked Only When It Would Benefit the Estate. Section 724(b) should be invoked only when doing so will have some benefit to the estate. If the administrative costs of sale exceed the value to the estate of the displaced tax lien, sale by the trustee should not be permitted. n18 For instance, if a tax lien attaching to overencumbered property is in the amount of $2,500, and the aggregate of the trustee's fee and the real estate commission for such sale would exceed $2,500, then the sale should not be permitted and section 724(b) should not be invoked. Neither the occurrence of the sale nor the invocation section 724(b) would provide any benefit to the estate.

When Section 724(b) Can Be Used to Create Value for an Estate in Overencumbered Property. Section 724(b) can in certain instances, however, create value for an estate in property that is overencumbered and that would, absent section 724(b), be abandoned by the trustee. So long as the amount of the avoided tax lien exceeds the administrative costs of carrying and disposing of the property, the property has value to the estate and the trustee is justified in selling the property and avoiding the tax lien. n19 Section 724(b) has also been held relevant in a preference action against the Internal Revenue Service for having levied on property prior to a bankruptcy case. n20 One case used section 724(b) as justification for a trustee to recover from a junior lienholder who, after obtaining relief from the automatic stay but prior to foreclosing, used its own funds to pay off senior real estate taxes. n21 A subsequent, and better reasoned, case reached a contrary result. n22 It held that section 724(b) becomes applicable only upon a sale of property. It does not provide the trustee with an independent right to collect tax payments from either the governmental entity or a secured lender.

Cases Converted from Chapter 11. A few interesting issues arise when section 724 is invoked in a case that has been converted from chapter 11. Under section 726(a), claims are to be paid in accordance with the priorities established in section 507. Under section 726(b), a claim entitled to priority under section 507(a)(2) arising after conversion of the case to chapter 7 is entitled to payment ahead of a similarly situated claim arising during the predecessor chapter 11 case. Section 726(b) also provides that any claims entitled to priority are to be paid pro rata with other claims having the same priority.

Section 724(b), however, precludes distribution of proceeds received from subordination of a tax lien to chapter 11 administrative expenses other than wages, salaries and commissions. The effect of this exclusion is to alter the priority scheme otherwise established by section 507 and section 726(b). The result is that proceeds of subordination of a tax lien may be used to pay wages, salaries, and commissions incurred during chapter 11, but not other chapter 11 administrative expenses of equal priority, and to pay section 507(a)(3) to 507(a)(7) priority claims, but not chapter 11 administrative expenses with a higher priority. While this outcome is inconsistent with the sections 507 and 726(b), it seems mandated by the language of section 724. Similarly, section 724(b) would have the effect of undoing any superpriority administrative claim created in the chapter 11 case with respect to proceeds of the subordination of a tax lien.

Distribution Among Multiple Claims; 11 U.S.C. § 724(c). Section 724(c) provides that if more than one holder of a claim is entitled to distribution under a particular paragraph of section 724(b), then distributions to the holders of such claims will be made in the same order as distribution would be made other than under section 724. ⁿ²³ For example, if there are three senior liens that have priority over a tax lien claim subject to section 724(b), then the proceeds of sale of the underlying property will be disbursed to those three holders in accordance with the priorities existing under applicable law. Similarly, if there are multiple junior liens, the junior lienholders will share in proceeds in accordance with priorities existing under applicable law. Those priorities will generally be established by applicable nonbankruptcy law.

The operation of section 724(c) can become confusing where there are multiple tax liens encumbering the same parcel of property. Section 724(c) refers to claims entitled to distribution under the various paragraphs of section 724(b). Yet the language of each paragraph of section 724(b) refers only to a single tax lien. If there are multiple tax liens, applying section 724(b) literally could lead to results that are inconsistent with the intent of section 724(b). It is thus necessary to invoke the principle behind section 724(c) to ensure that senior tax liens will receive payment ahead of junior tax liens, but that the junior tax liens will receive payment ahead of the estate only to the extent that there are sufficient proceeds from sale of the underlying property.

As with section 724(b), this concept is best illustrated by example. Assume the sale of property of the estate yields $50,000 in net proceeds. The proceeds are subject to a first priority tax lien of $4,000. Next in priority is a mortgage for $25,000 and a tax lien for $30,000. Assume administrative expenses are $3,000. The first proceeds of sale are distributed to the holders of certain claims under section 507 pursuant to section 724(b)(2). The next $1,000 is distributed to the holder of the senior tax lien pursuant to section 724(b)(3). The next $25,000 is distributed to the holder of the mortgage pursuant to section 724(b)(4). Under section 724(b)(4), the remaining proceeds would next be distributed to the holders of junior liens that are not avoidable under the Code. The $30,000 junior lien, if not avoidable, would thus ostensibly be entitled to receive the remaining proceeds. ⁿ²⁴

Yet this result seems inconsistent with section 724(c), which directs that distributions to holders of claims with a similar level of priority be made in the order of priority applicable other than under section 724. A more equitable outcome is to treat both tax liens as being subject to the provisions of section 724(b) and then to allocate distributions to both claims in the priority governing those claims outside of section 724. The result in the above example would be to skip application of section 724(b)(4) and distribute proceeds to both tax lien claims under section 724(b)(5). The senior tax lien would receive the next $3,000, and the holder of the junior tax lien would receive the balance of the proceeds.

Treatment of Certain Statutory Liens; 11 U.S.C. § 724(d). Section 724(d) provides that a statutory lien the priority of which is determined in the same manner as the priority of a tax lien under section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code shall be treated in the same manner under section 724(b) as a tax lien. Section 724(d) does not apply to tax liens since section 724(b) already covers tax liens. ⁿ²⁵ Section 724(d) is intended only to apply to non-tax statutory liens that have a priority determined in the same manner as the priority of tax liens under Internal Revenue Code section 6323.

Priority under I.R.C. Section 6323 Varies Depending on Nature of Property and Competing Third-Party Claim. Internal Revenue Code section 6323 establishes, among other things, the priority of federal tax liens vis-a-vis other liens and third-party interests affecting property subject to a tax lien. The section is detailed and complex and differs from priority provisions typically found in statutory schemes. The manner" of establishing priority under section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code varies considerably depending on the nature of the property involved and the nature of the competing third party claim. It is unlikely that the priority of other liens are established in the same manner as those under section 6323 unless those liens specifically refer to section 6323. The only possible types of liens determining priority in a similar manner are state tax lien statutes that are based on section 6323.

The legislative history gives a single example of a type of lien that is determined in the same manner as a tax lien. ⁿ²⁶ Section 1368(c)(1) of ERISA expressly provides that the priority of the lien established by that section shall be determined in the same manner as under Sec. 6323 of Title 26. n27 Section 1368(c)(2) provides that in a bankruptcy case, the lien under subsection (c)(1) is to be treated in the same manner as a tax owed to the United States.

When Section 724(b) May Be Invoked; 11 U.S.C. § 724(e). Before the enactment of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, there was conflicting case law concerning when section 724(b) could be invoked. Some cases held that section 724(b) should be invoked whenever it was available to the trustee. n28 Other cases held that section 724(b) should be invoked only if there was no other source available to pay priority claims. n29

The 2005 Act resolved this conflict, adding subsection (e), which follows the latter line of case. n30 Section 724(e) provides that a tax lien may not be subordinated under section 724(b) unless the trustee has first exhausted the unencumbered assets of the estate and has recovered any funds available to the trustee under section 506(c). Section 506(c) allows a trustee to surcharge a secured creditors collateral for certain costs of preserving or disposing of such collateral.

The result of section 724(e) is that a subordination under section 724(b) will be a last source of payment for the trustee. An action under section 724(b) should not be maintained by a trustee until such time as the trustee has determined that there is no other source for payment of priority claims encompassed by section 724(b)(2).

Subordination of Ad Valorem Tax Liens; 11 U.S.C. § 724(f). The subordination provided in section 724(b) is not generally applicable to ad valorem tax liens. Section 724(f) contains an exception to this general prohibition. n31 It allows the subordination in section 724 to be invoked to pay two kinds of priority claims. The first are claims for wages, salaries and commissions that are entitled to priority under section 507(a)(4). The second are claims for contributions to employee benefit plans under section 507(a)(5).

In a case where there are sufficient assets to pay all administrative expense claims but not to pay all section 507(a)(4) and 507(a)(5) claims, the impact of section 724(f) is straightforward. Section 724 can be used to subordinate a lien for ad valorem taxes and the proceeds used to pay these two categories of priority claims. But in a case where there are not sufficient assets to pay administrative expense claims, section 724(f) has the effect of altering the priorities otherwise established by section 507. The proceeds obtained from the subordination of the ad valorem tax lien would be used to pay claims with a lower priority than senior claims not being paid in full.

The provisions of section 724(f) are expressly made subject to the limitations in section 724(e). The trustee must first exhaust all other sources of payment of priority claims under sections 507(a)(4) and (5) before seeking to subordinate an ad valorem tax lien under section 724(f).

For further discussion of Code section 724, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 724.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 724.03[3].

n2

2. See In re By-Rite Oil Co., 87 B.R. 905 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1988) (principles established under section 724(b) have no applicability in chapter 11 case); In re Roamer Linen Supply, Inc., 9 C.B.C.2d 218, 30 B.R. 932 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983) (section 724(b) does not apply in a chapter 11 case, even if the chapter 11 is being used as a liquidation vehicle).

n3

3. Subsections (e) and (f) were added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 701 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4

4. In Reitmeyer v. Pa. Dept. of Revenue (In re Pompeo), 195 B.R. 43 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1996) (en banc), the court noted that section 724(b) would extend to a lien on the debtors liquor license.

n5

5. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 701 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. Hargrave v. Township of Pemberton (In re Tabone, Inc.), 32 C.B.C.2d 1239, 175 B.R. 855 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1994); Kocurek v. Arnold (In re Thurman), 163 B.R. 95 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1994); Richardson v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn (In re Stroud Wholesale, Inc.), 37 B.R. 735 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), revd on other grounds, 47 B.R. 999 (E.D.N.C. 1985); Perpetual American Bank, FSB v. District of Columbia (In re Carlisle Court, Inc.), 10 C.B.C.2d 77, 36 B.R. 209 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1983).

n7

7. See Wasden v. Savannah (In re Owens), 208 B.R. 750 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996) (noting that section 724(b) does not distinguish between liens created before or after the petition date).

n8

8. 308 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002).

n9

9. United States v. Morgan (In re Morgan), 196 B.R. 758 (E.D. Ky. 1996).

n10

10. Wurst v. City of New York (In re Packard Properties, Ltd.), 22 C.B.C.2d 1476, 112 B.R. 154 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1990); Flatau v. Jackson (In re Cropper Co., Inc.), 63 B.R. 874 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1986); Forell v. Kent Cnty. Treas. and City of Grand Rapids Treas. (In re Kamstra), 13 C.B.C.2d 266, 51 B.R. 826 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1985); Richardson v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re Stroud Wholesale, Inc.), 37 B.R. 735 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 47 B.R. 999 (E.D.N.C. 1985); see also Flatau v. Jackson (In re Hirsch-Franklin Enters.), 15 C.B.C.2d 672, 63 B.R. 864 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1986) (upholding the subordination under section 726 upon a similar constitutional challenge).

n11

11. Determining whether liens are senior or junior under section 724(b) is to be done with reference to applicable nonbankruptcy law. Pearlstein v. U.S. Small Bus. Admin., 719 F.2d 1169, 9 C.B.C.2d 1134 (D.C. Cir. 1983); In re Soltan, 234 B.R. 260 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1999); Richardson v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re Stroud Wholesale, Inc.), 37 B.R. 735 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 47 B.R. 999 (E.D.N.C. 1985); cf. Bavely v. United States (In re Terwilliger's Catering Plus, Inc.), 911 F.2d 1168, 23 C.B.C.2d 694 (6th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1212, 111 S. Ct. 2815, 115 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1991) (whether purported lien attached to property is a matter to be determined by applicable nonbankruptcy law and section 724 has no effect on that determination); Flatau v. Jackson (In re Cropper Co., Inc.), 63 B.R. 874 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1986) (incorrectly stating that section 724(b) overcomes state law priority determination, although reaching correct result).

n12

12. See In re Grand Slam U.S.A., Inc., 33 C.B.C.2d 834, 178 B.R. 460 (E.D. Mich. 1995) (section 724(b)(2) is a legal proceeding within the meaning of section 363(f)(5)); In re LMS Holding Co., 197 B.R. 915 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1996) (invoking section 724(b) where only beneficiaries are banks that held superpriority claim due to failure of adequate protection).

n13

13. The enactment of section 724(e) by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 basically renders clause (6) of section 724(b) a nullity. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 701 (2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005. If there are excess funds after application of proceeds to obligations covered by the first five clauses of section 724(b), section 724(e) would prohibit the trustee from invoking section 724(b) because the trustee would have another source to pay the priority claims that would have been paid under paragraph (2) of section 724(b).

n14

14. These dollar and time limits were increased from $4,925 and 90 days by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1401 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005).

n15

15. In re Atlas Commercial Floors, Inc., 125 B.R. 185 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1991) (directing payment to displaced tax lien claimant of funds available from sale of property after payment to priority claims of amount equal to amount of tax lien).

n16

16. Milligan v. Davis (In re Milligan), 252 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 2000).

n17

17. Marc Stuart Goldberg, P.C. v. City of New York (In re Navis Realty, Inc.), 193 B.R. 998 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1996); see also In re Spearman, 124 B.R. 620 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1991) (section 724(b) is not intended to affect senior liens and thus debtor could not invoke section 724(b) as basis for avoiding senior judicial lien allegedly impairing debtor's homestead exemption).

n18

18. Oakland County Treas. v. Allard (In re Kerton Indus.), 151 B.R. 101 (E.D. Mich. 1991).

n19

19. See Morgan v. K.C. Machine & Tool Co. (In re K.C. Machine & Tool Co.), 816 F.2d 238, 16 C.B.C.2d

702 (6th Cir. 1987) (the subordination provided for section 724(b) can make otherwise overencumbered property of value to the estate, thus rendering abandonment under section 554 inappropriate); In re Riker Indus., Inc., 122 B.R. 964 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1990) (same); In re Quality Health Care, 215 B.R. 543 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1997) (existence of section 724(b) justified the order requiring turnover of property to the trustee).

n20

20. In Daniel v. United States (In re R & T Roofing Structures & Commercial Framing, Inc.), 11 C.B.C.2d 397, 42 B.R. 908 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1984), the plaintiff used section 724(b) to demonstrate the IRS got more in a liquidation than it would have under chapter 7 because by operation of section 724(b), the proceeds of sale of the asset would be used to pay administrative claims rather than the secured claim of the IRS. Air Florida Sys., Inc. v. United States (In re Air Florida Sys., Inc.), 12 C.B.C.2d 1438, 50 B.R. 653 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1985), reached the same conclusion.

n21

21. Tatge v. American Sec. Bank (In re Forrest Marbury House Assoc. Ltd. P'ship), 26 C.B.C.2d 1270, 137 B.R. 554 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1992). The holding in Tatge is questionable.

n22

22. Wasden v. Savannah (In re Owens), 208 B.R. 750 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

n23

23. See United States v. Darnell (In re Darnell), 834 F.2d 1263, 17 C.B.C.2d 1106 (6th Cir. 1987) (federal and state tax liens both subordinated to payment of administrative expenses; on basis of section 724(c), reversing bankruptcy court determination that funds available for distribution should be split pro rata rather than first to the more senior of the two liens); Pearlstein v. U.S. Small Bus. Admin., 719 F.2d 1169, 9 C.B.C.2d 1134 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (section 724(c) not intended to affect priorities established under applicable nonbankruptcy law; applying District of Columbia law to determine that sales tax lien had priority over Small Business Administration security interest).

n24

24. In re Soltan, 234 B.R. 260 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1999) (such a formula was applied in a matter involving multiple tax liens).

n25

25. See United States v. Rhodney (In re R & W Enterprises), 181 B.R. 624 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 1994) (rejecting argument of trustee that section 724(d) can be invoked to require state real property tax liens to be recorded in the same manner as liens under Internal Revenue Code §6323).

n26

26. The example can be found at H.R. Rep. 95-595 at 382 and S. Rep. 95-989 at 96.

n27

27. 29 U.S.C. § 1368(c)(1).

n28

28. In re Southeast Railroad Contractors, Inc., 235 B.R. 619 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996); In re Packard Properties, Ltd., 22 C.B.C.2d 1476, 112 B.R. 154 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1990).

n29

29. In re Soltan, 234 B.R. 260 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1999); In re Howard Furniture, Inc., 222 B.R. 795 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 1998); In re Dowco Petroleum, Inc., 137 B.R. 207 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1992); In re Granite Lumber, 63 B.R. 466 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1986); see also In re Sherrill, 17 C.B.C.2d 1033, 78 B.R. 804 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1987) (where trustee paid proceeds of sale to secured creditor that could have been retained by the trustee under section 724(b), the trustee cannot thereafter seek recovery for the trustee's expenses from the secured creditor under section 506(c)).

n30

30. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 701 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n31

31. Subsection (f) was added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 701 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

132 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Contracts That Are Not Assumable under Section 365

2008 Emerging Issues 1338

Collier on Contracts That Are Not Assumable under Section 365

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the types of contracts that are not assumable under section 365, including topics such as personal service contracts, assumption by the debtor in possession, agreement by the other party to an otherwise nonassignable contract to accept the trustee's performance, and contracts to make loans or issue securities.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: When an executory contract is based upon the provision of personal services or skills, or upon personal trust or confidence, or otherwise requires the debtor's performance rather than any substitute performance, the trustee has traditionally been unable to assume or assign the rights of the debtor in such contract. n1 Under the Bankruptcy Act, there was the additional question of whether such contracts would be property of the estate. n2 It seems clear that such contracts become property of the estate under section 541 of the Code. However, the trustee may not be able to assume or assign such contracts.

Two questions are of particular importance with respect to this topic: (1) whether a contract involves personal skill, trust or confidence, or is otherwise a type of contract for which substitute performance may not be permitted; n3 and (2) whether a debtor in possession can assume a contract that would not be assumable by a trustee.

Section 365(c)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code precludes the assumption or assignment of an executory contract or lease if applicable nonbankruptcy law would excuse the other party from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession, n4 whether or not the contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties. Thus, if a contract is of a type that could not be assigned under applicable law, it may not be assumed or assigned by the trustee. The applicable law prohibition must be explicit, for example, by making clear that the identity of the contracting party is crucial. n5

Nonassignment Clause Ineffective

If a contract or lease is nonassignable solely because it contains a nonassignment clause, section 365(c) does not prevent the assumption or assignment of the contract or lease. Instead, section 365(c) is directed to contracts that, regardless of their provisions with respect to assignment or performance, would be nonassignable under applicable nonbankruptcy law.

Personal Service Contracts

Under the common law, the duties under a contract to perform personal services could not be assigned. If a party contracted for the services of a particular person, and that person's services were unique and could not equally be performed by another, the contract could not be assigned.

Section 365(c) gives recognition to the common law restriction and provides that the trustee may not assume or assign such a contract, regardless of whether the contract contains a nonassignment clause. In this regard, section 365(c) recognizes that the trustee is not the party who originally undertook the duties under the contract and that applicable nonbankruptcy law would not accept substitute performance by the trustee.

It should be noted that a clause in the contract or lease attesting to a personal relationship will not, by itself, excuse the nondebtor party from accepting performance from the trustee. n6 Instead, section 365(c) is intended to distinguish those contracts that, generically under applicable nonbankruptcy law, would be of a type for which the nondebtor party would be entitled to insist on the debtor's performance. n7

Other Nonassignable Contracts

Section 365(c) covers considerably more contracts than those that would normally be considered personal service contracts. Several appellate decisions have found that the reference to applicable law in section 365(c) includes situations in which state or federal law can be said to bar assignment. n8 For example, in In re West Electronics, Inc., n9 the court held that a government contract could not be assumed by the trustee because a federal statute barred the assignment of such contracts without the permission of the government, and in In re CFLC, Inc. n10 the court held patent licenses nonassignable under federal common law. In In re Nedwick Steel Co., Inc., n11 the court ruled that U.C.C. section 2-210(2), which prohibits assignment where the assignment would increase materially the burden or risk imposed on him by his contract, prohibited assignment under section 365(c)(1)(A) of an exclusive distributorship agreement from the debtor to a competitor of the manufacturer. The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit has held that a partnership agreement that is nonassignable under state law because of the personal relationship among the partners is not assignable under section 365(c)(1)(A). n12

Assumption by Debtor in Possession

A debtor in possession has the rights, and is subject to the limitations, of a trustee. n13 Section 365(c) provides that the trustee [which includes a debtor in possession] may not assume or assign any executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, if applicable law excuses a party, other than the debtor, from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession. Read strictly, section 365(c) would bar not only a third-party trustee, but the debtor in possession itself, from assuming such an executory contract or lease. Under such a strict reading of this provision, if a party would be excused from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession, then the trustee, including a debtor in possession, may not assume the contract or lease even if the debtor, as debtor in possession, would be performing under the contract or lease.

This was the approach taken by the court in In re West Electronics, Inc. n14 In that case, the court barred the debtor in possession from assuming a nonassignable government contract even though the debtor in possession did not wish to assign the contract, but intended to perform the contract itself.

This approach is troubling, as it may prevent a debtor in possession from being able to reorganize under circumstances that do not adversely affect the other party to the contract. n15 The other party contracted for the debtor's performance and the debtor (in its capacity as debtor in possession) proposes to perform the contract after assumption. Of course, the other party is now dealing with a debtor who is in bankruptcy, but this is the same problem faced by other contracting parties. Section 365(e) prevents a party to a contract from terminating the contract merely because the debtor has commenced a bankruptcy case, and section 365(c) should not be interpreted to provide a means around that provision or its underlying policy. Only the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit has reached this conclusion. n16

What the Nonassumption Rule Was Intended to Accomplish. The nonassumption rule of section 365(c) was intended to relieve the nondebtor party to the contract from having to deal with a party other than the debtor in situations in which, under nonbankruptcy law, the nondebtor party would be relieved of any obligation to continue such dealings. The thought was that the nondebtor party contracted for the personal attention of the debtor or for a relationship with the debtor, not a third-party trustee.

Notion of Debtor and Debtor in Possession as Being the Same Entity. To the extent that the contract is dependent on the personal service or attention of the debtor, a debtor in possession, which is typically managed by the same individuals who managed the debtor, is, as a practical matter, the same entity. Similarly, although the debtor in possession may be viewed technically as a different legal entity from the debtor, the primary effect of the bankruptcy filing is to cause a change in ownership of the debtor rather than a change of structure. Thus, from the point of view of the nondebtor party, it is dealing with the same entity whether it is a debtor or a debtor in possession.

In fact, if all of the stock of the debtor in West Electronics had been purchased by a third party, which then took control of the debtor, the government should not have been able to terminate the contract based on an assignment, because the contract itself would not have been assigned. n17 A chapter 11 filing effects such a change of ownership; however, the debtor in possession continues the business of the debtor. Thus, there is little reason to bar the debtor in possession from assuming the contract.

The history of section 365(c) suggests that the provision may have been intended to permit a debtor in possession, as opposed to a third-party trustee, to assume executory contracts even when the contracts are nonassignable. As enacted in the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, the provision barred assumption of an executory contract or lease if applicable law relieved the nondebtor party from accepting performance from or rendering performance to the trustee or an assignee of such contract or lease. In 1984, the provision was amended to replace the reference to the trustee with reference to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession. n18 Apparently through an oversight, the reference to assignee of such contract or lease was retained, although it was difficult to make sense of the final product. Thus, after the 1984 amendment, the provision barred assumption if applicable law excused a party from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession or an assignee of such contract or lease. In 1986, the oversight was corrected by deleting the reference to an assignee of such contract or lease. n19 The provision now bars assumption when applicable law would relieve the other party from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession.

As originally enacted, section 365(c) clearly barred assumption by any type of trustee, presumably including a debtor in possession, if applicable law barred any assignment of the contract. The 1984 amendment, which refers to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession, seems to envision that the debtor in possession could stand in the shoes of the debtor and render or receive performance, but that any other entity, including a bankruptcy trustee, could not do so. Although a literal reading of the amended version may bar assumption by a debtor in possession, there seems to be little reason for the amendment unless there was an intention to permit a debtor in possession to assume otherwise nonassignable contracts.

Further support for treating the debtor in possession as essentially the same entity as the debtor and, therefore, as capable of assuming the otherwise nonassignable contract, can be found in NLRB v. Bildisco & Bildisco.ⁿ²⁰ In that case, the Supreme Court determined that a chapter 11 debtor may reject a collective bargaining agreement as an executory contract. In doing so, the Court rejected arguments over whether the debtor in possession is a successor employer or the alter ego of the debtor for purposes of applying the labor laws. It observed that if the debtor in possession were a new entity, it would be unnecessary to provide for the rejection of executory contracts, since a new entity would not be bound by the old entity's contracts. Thus, the Court stated: For our purposes, it is sensible to view the debtor-in-possession as the same entity which existed before the filing of the bankruptcy petition, but empowered by virtue of the Bankruptcy Code to deal with its contracts and property in a manner it could not have done absent the bankruptcy filing.ⁿ²¹

Similarly, for purposes of determining whether a debtor in possession may assume contracts that would not be assignable under nonbankruptcy law, the debtor in possession may be treated as the same entity as the debtor, entitled to assume the contract.ⁿ²² Only if the debtor in possession sought to assign the contract would the nonbankruptcy limits apply.

One court has taken a similar approach by noting that section 365(c) applies to a trustee, not a debtor in possession.ⁿ²³ Although a debtor in possession is subject to the same limitations and restrictions on a trustee,ⁿ²⁴ a debtor in possession is not the equivalent of a trustee. Because a trustee is an entity other than the debtor in possession, section 365(c)(1) must be read differently when a debtor in possession moves to assume (although not to assign) a contract or lease. Otherwise, the limitation would effectively (and nonsensically) read a debtor in possession may not assign a contract if the counterparty is excused from accepting performance from an entity other than the debtor in possession.

Problems Present When Debtor in Possession Cannot Assume Otherwise Nonassignable Contracts. As a matter of policy, a refusal to permit debtors in possession to assume otherwise nonassignable contracts would present problems for debtors whenever the debtor's business is one in which major contracts are nonassignable under nonbankruptcy law. Such debtors will not, as a practical matter, be able to avail themselves of the benefits of chapter 11 because they will not be able to perform their prebankruptcy contracts without permission from the nondebtor parties to the contracts.

For example, in In re Pioneer Ford Sales,ⁿ²⁵ the debtor held a Ford Motor Company franchise that, under relevant nonbankruptcy law, was nonassignable without Ford's permission. The court properly rejected the debtor's attempt to assign the franchise, finding that subsections (c) and (f) of section 365 barred the assignment. Although the court was not faced with the question of whether the debtor in possession could continue to operate the dealership, under the reasoning of cases such as West Electronics, the debtor in possession could not retain the franchise, and a chapter 11 reorganization would be impossible. While it is understandable that Congress would bar assignments of contracts or leases that are nonassignable under applicable nonbankruptcy law, there appears to be no reason why a debtor should be prevented from continuing its business and reorganizing simply because it cannot assign its franchise to a third party.ⁿ²⁶ Nevertheless, other courts of appeals have followed the West Electronics approach.ⁿ²⁷

Of course, there must be some concern that the debtor in possession, perhaps a less financially sound entity, would be unable to perform under the contract and that, therefore, the nondebtor party should be able to terminate the contract. This concern, however, is addressed by the rules in section 365 that require the debtor in possession to cure prior defaults and provide adequate assurance of future performance before it can assume the executory contract or lease.ⁿ²⁸ If the debtor in possession is in fact in such severe financial distress that it would not be able to perform the contract, that would be a reason to oppose assumption of the contract. If the debtor in possession can meet the burden of providing assurance, there is little reason to prevent performance.

Agreement by Other Party to Accept Trustee's Performance

The other party to an otherwise nonassignable contract may consent to substituted performance, or the contract may provide such consent. In that case, the lease or contract may be assumed or assigned. n29 However, the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit has ruled that a general consent in the contract or lease to assignment to a successor in interest to substantially all of the debtor's assets is not a consent to assumption because assumption and assignment are distinct concepts, and the consent to assignment was therefore inadequate. n30 It is not clear how the court would have ruled on a proposed assignment, in that an assignment in a bankruptcy case first requires assumption. n31

Termination of Nonassignable Contract

Although section 365(e) bars the termination of a contract based on the commencement of a bankruptcy case, an exception in section 365(e)(2)(A) applies to contracts under which the other party is excused from rendering performance to or accepting performance from the trustee or an assignee of the contract. n32 It appears that such contracts may be terminated upon commencement of a case.

Although a party may be authorized to terminate such a contract, the contract is still property of the estate before termination, and any termination is subject to the automatic stay of section 362. n33 Thus, the other party to the contract must obtain relief from the stay before exercising its right to terminate the contract. This requirement enables the court to determine, prior to any such termination, whether the contract is in fact a contract that would be nonassumable under section 365(c). n34

Contracts to Make Loans or Issue Securities

A contract to extend credit is usually said to be personal in nature n35 and hence not subject to assumption or assignment. Nevertheless, section 365(c) contains a specific prohibition against assumption or assignment of a contract to make a loan or extend other debt financing or financial accommodations, n36 to or for the benefit of the debtor, or to issue a security of the debtor. The prohibition is without regard to whether or not applicable law would otherwise excuse the other party from performance and will therefore apply equally to debtors in possession and trustees.

The scope of paragraph (2) is limited, however, and applies only to extensions of credit that are loans, debt financing or financial accommodations, n37 and not to all contracts to extend credit. n38 These terms are strictly construed and do not extend to an ordinary contract to provide goods or services that has incidental financial accommodations or extensions of credit. n39 Situations that do not fit within paragraph (2) must be decided under paragraph (1) with appropriate reference to applicable nonbankruptcy law. The apparent intent was to permit a trustee to assume certain contracts involving extensions of credit, such as contracts to furnish equipment. n40 Paragraph (2) also does not affect postpetition financing; thus, the trustee in a converted case, for example, may enforce a credit originally extended to the debtor in possession. n41 However, the trustee may not enforce a prepetition contract with the debtor to make a loan even if the nondebtor party to the contract consents. n42 To do so would run afoul of the carefully crafted procedures and restrictions on obtaining postpetition credit found in section 364.

For a complete discussion of Code section 365, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 365 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 See In re Miller, 101 F.2d 323 (6th Cir. 1939); Villar & Co., Inc. v. Conde, 30 F.2d 588 (1st Cir. 1929); see also City of Jamestown v. James Cable Partners, L.P. (In re James Cable Partners, L.P.), 27 F.3d 534, 31 C.B.C.2d 1104 (11th Cir. 1994).

n2 See 4A Collier on Bankruptcy, 70.22[3] (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1978).

n3 See City of Jamestown v. James Cable Partners, L.P. (In re James Cable Partners, L.P.), 27 F.3d 534, 31 C.B.C.2d 1104 (11th Cir. 1994).

n4 The Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984), amended section 365(c)(1)(A) by deleting the words the trustee and substituting the following: an entity other than the debtor or debtor in possession. Before the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986), an assignee was listed alternatively to the debtor and debtor in possession, but this legislation deleted such reference.

n5 In re ANC Rental Corp., Inc., 277 B.R. 226 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002); see City of Jamestown v. James Cable Partners, L.P. (In re James Cable Partners, L.P.), 27 F.3d 534, 537 (11th Cir. 1994).

n6 See, e.g., Headquarters Dodge, Inc. v. Leonard, 13 F.3d 674, 684 (3d Cir. 1994); Reiser v. Dayton Country Club Co. (In re Magness), 972 F.2d 689, 27 C.B.C.2d 862 (6th Cir. 1992); Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank v. Thomas B. Hamilton Co. (In re Thomas B. Hamilton Co.), 969 F.2d 1013, 27 C.B.C.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1992) (credit-card merchant agreement may be assumed); In re Pioneer Ford Sales, Inc., 729 F.2d 27, 10 C.B.C.2d 524 (1st Cir. 1984).

n7 Headquarters Dodge, Inc. v. Leonard, 13 F.3d 674, 684 (3d Cir. 1994) ([w]hether a contract is personal in nature depends upon the nature of the subject of the contract, the circumstances of the case and the intent of the parties').

n8 Perlman v. Catapult Entm't, Inc. (In re Catapult Entm't, Inc.), 165 F.3d 747, 41 C.B.C.2d 858 (9th Cir. 1999); Everex Sys., Inc. v. Cadtrak Corp. (In re CFLC, Inc.), 89 F.3d 673 (9th Cir. 1996) (federal patent policy warrants finding that federal law governs assignability of patent licenses; federal common law precludes such assignments); Reiser v. Dayton Country Club Co. (In re Magness), 972 F.2d 689, 27 C.B.C.2d 862 (6th Cir. 1992) (country club membership may not be assigned under applicable law).

n9 852 F.2d 79 (3d Cir. 1988). Contra In re Mirant Corp., 303 B.R. 319 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2003).

n10 89 F.3d 673 (9th Cir. 1996); accord Perlman v. Catapult Entm't, Inc. (In re Catapult Entm't, Inc.), 165 F.3d 747, 41 C.B.C.2d 858 (9th Cir. 1999).

n11 289 B.R. 95 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2003).

n12 Stumpf v. McGee (In re O'Connor), 258 F.3d 392 (5th Cir. 2001).

n13 11 U.S.C. § 1104.

n14 852 F.2d 79 (3d Cir. 1988); accord RCI Tech. Corp. v. Sunterra Corp. (In re Sunterra Corp.), 361 F.3d 257 (4th Cir. 2004); Perlman v. Catapult Entm't, Inc. (In re Catapult Entm't, Inc.), 165 F.3d 747, 41 C.B.C.2d 858 (9th Cir. 1999); City of Jamestown v. James Cable Partners (In re James Cable Partners), 27 F.3d 534, 537 (11th Cir. 1994); In re West Electronics, Inc., 852 F.2d 79 (3d Cir. 1988).

n15 See In re Cardinal Indus., Inc., 116 B.R. 964 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990).

n16 Summit Inv. & Dev. Corp. v. Leroux (In re Leroux), 69 F.3d 608, 34 C.B.C.2d 1351 (1st Cir. 1995).

n17 Institut Pasteur v. Cambridge Biotech Corp., 104 F.3d 489, 37 C.B.C.2d 588 (1st Cir. 1997). Of course, if the contract contained a change of control provision, that provision might prevent assumption of the contract by the new owners. Change of control is not, however, explicitly barred by 41 U.S.C. § 15.

n18 Pub. L. No. 98-353, § 362(a) (1984).

n19 Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 283(e)(1); see In re Hartec Enters., Inc., 117 B.R. 865, 870-71 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1990).

n20 465 U.S. 513, 527-28, 104 S. Ct. 1188, 1197, 79 L. Ed. 2d 482, 496-97, 9 C.B.C.2d 1219, 1229 (1984).

n21 465 U.S. 513, 527-28, 104 S. Ct. 1188, 1197, 79 L. Ed. 2d 482, 496-97, 9 C.B.C.2d 1219, 1229.

n22 See, e.g., Texaco, Inc. v. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co., 136 B.R. 658 (M.D. La. 1992).

n23 In re Footstar, Inc., 323 B.R. 566 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2005).

n24 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a).

n25 729 F.2d 27, 10 C.B.C.2d 524 (1st Cir. 1984); see also Ford Motor Co. v. Claremont Acquisition Corp. (In re Claremont Acquisition Corp.), 186 B.R. 977 (C.D. Cal. 1995).

n26 In re Ontario Locomotive & Indus. Ry. Supplies (U.S.) Inc., 126 B.R. 146 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1991) (United States moved for relief from stay to terminate government contract with debtor. Court found that debtor in possession was the same entity that filed chapter 11 petition, thus not precluding assumption on that ground, and not providing grounds for relief from the stay).

n27 RCI Tech. Corp. v. Sunterra Corp. (In re Sunterra Corp.), 361 F.3d 257 (4th Cir. 2004); Perlman v. Catapult Entm't, Inc. (In re Catapult Entm't, Inc.), 165 F.3d 747, 41 C.B.C.2d 858 (9th Cir. 1999); see City of Jamestown v. James Cable Partners, L.P. (In re James Cable Partners, L.P.), 27 F.3d 534, 537 (11th Cir. 1994) (characterizing section 365(c)(1)(A) as posing a hypothetical question).

n28 11 U.S.C. § 365(b).

n29 11 U.S.C. § 365(c)(1)(B); RCI Tech. Corp. v. Sunterra Corp. (In re Sunterra Corp.), 361 F.3d 257 (4th Cir. 2004); Metropolitan Airports Comm'n v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (In re Midway Airlines, Inc.), 6 F.3d 492, 29 C.B.C.2d 914 (7th Cir. 1993).

n30 RCI Tech. Corp. v. Sunterra Corp. (In re Sunterra Corp.), 361 F.3d 257 (4th Cir. 2004).

n31 11 U.S.C. § 365(f)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.08 (Matthew Bender).

n32 But see Summit Inv. & Dev. Corp. v. Leroux, 69 F.3d 608, 612, 34 C.B.C.2d 1351 (1st Cir. 1995) (although hypothetical approach to construction of nonassignability provisions of § 365(e)(2)(A) and 365(c)(1)(A) is not precluded by the literal statutory language, it is at least as plausible to construe these provisions as requiring an actual showing--prior to any termination of the debtor's postpetition contract rights--that the nondebtor party would not be forced to accept performance under its executory contract from someone other than the debtor party with whom it originally contracted) (emphasis in original).

n33 See, e.g., TransAmerica Commercial Fin. Corp. v. Citibank, N.A. (In re Sun Runner Marine, Inc.), 945 F.2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1991) (flooring agreement is the equivalent of a financial accommodation); Computer Communications, Inc. v. Codex Corp. (In re Computer Communications, Inc.), 824 F.2d 725, 17 C.B.C.2d 556 (9th Cir. 1987). But see Watts v. Pennsylvania Hous. Fin. Co., 876 F.2d 1090, 1095, 21 C.B.C.2d 521, 527-28 (3d Cir. 1989) (the automatic stay is inapplicable to a commitment to provide financing because such a contract is nonassumable in the first instance).

n34 See, e.g., Summit Inv. & Dev. Corp. v. Leroux, 69 F.3d 608, 34 C.B.C.2d 1351 (1st Cir. 1995).

n35 Texas & N.O.R. Co. v. Phillips, 196 F.2d 692 (5th Cir. 1952).

n36 See Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank v. Thomas B. Hamilton Co. (In re Thomas B. Hamilton Co.), 969 F.2d 1013, 27 C.B.C.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1992).

n37 Chase Manhattan Bank v. Iridium Africa Corp., 197 F. Supp. 2d 120 (D. Del. 2002) (Support Agreement that required equity contributions to the debtor was a contract to issue a security of the debtor).

n38 In re New Town Mall, 5 C.B.C.2d 1530, 17 B.R. 326 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1982).

n39 124 Cong. Rec. H11,093 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); see also In re United Airlines, Inc. 368 F.3d 720 (7th Cir. 2004) (credit card processing agreement); American Flint Glass Workers Union v. Anchor Resolution Corp. (In re Anchor Resolution Corp.), 197 F.3d 76 (3d Cir. 1999) (debtor's contract to purchase a business in exchange for its own stock is not a contract to issue a security of the debtor).

n40 On September 28, 1978, Congressman Edwards remarked that, Section 365(c)(2) does not apply to the contract to deliver equipment ." 124 Cong. Rec. H11,093 (Sept. 28, 1978).

n41 See Tully Constr. Co. v. Cannonsburg Envtl. Assocs., Ltd., 72 F.3d 1260, 1265-66 (6th Cir. 1996) (collecting authorities). Likewise, such contracts are not subject to rejection. Id.

n42 TransAmerica Commercial Fin. Corp. v. Citibank, N.A. (In re Sun Runner Marine, Inc.), 945 F.2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1991).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

133 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Disclosures Required of Debt Relief Agencies

2008 Emerging Issues 1340

Collier on Disclosures Required of Debt Relief Agencies

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 527 of the Bankruptcy Code is new with the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. Section 527 imposes several duties on debt relief agencies that provide bankruptcy assistance to assisted persons. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the disclosures required of debt relief agencies under the Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview of Code Section 527

Section 527 of the Bankruptcy Code is new with the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act). n1 The stated intent of Congress in enacting section 527 and related provisions was to strengthen professionalism standards for attorneys and others who assist consumer debtors with their bankruptcy cases. n2 Section 527 imposes several duties on debt relief agencies that provide bankruptcy assistance to assisted persons. First, the section requires a debt relief agency to provide the written notice required under section 342(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. n3 Second, section 527 dictates that a debt relief agency give a written notice advising the assisted person of certain filing and disclosure requirements under the Bankruptcy Code. Third, the section requires a debt relief agency to provide a statement that contains certain information about bankruptcy assistance services from an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer. n4 Fourth, section 527 mandates that a debt relief agency, to the extent permitted by nonbankruptcy law, supply reasonably sufficient information on how to provide all of the information the assisted person is required to provide pursuant to section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code. Finally, the section specifies that a debt relief agency must maintain a copy of the notices required under section 527(a) for two years after the date on which the notice is given to the assisted person.

Assisted Person Defined. An assisted person is defined in the Bankruptcy Code by section 101 as any person whose debts consist primarily of consumer debts and the value of whose non-exempt property is less than $164,250. n5

Bankruptcy Assistance Defined. The term bankruptcy assistance is defined in the Bankruptcy Code by section

101 as any goods or services sold or otherwise provided to an assisted person with the express or implied purpose of providing information, advice, counsel, document preparation, or filing, or attendance at a creditors' meeting or appearing in a case or proceeding on behalf of another or providing legal representation with respect to a case or proceeding under this title. n6

Debt Relief Agency Defined. The term debt relief agency is defined in the Bankruptcy Code by section 101 as any person who provides any bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, or who is a bankruptcy petition preparer under section 110. n7 Section 101 specifically excludes several persons and entities from the definition of debt relief agency. n8

Duty of a Debt Relief Agency to Provide Required Disclosures; § 527(a)

Debt Relief Agency Must Provide to the Assisted Person the Written Notice Required under Section 342(b)(1). Section 527(a)(1) requires a debt relief agency that provides bankruptcy assistance to assisted persons to give the written notice required under section 342(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code. n9 Section 342(b)(1) dictates that the bankruptcy clerk, before the commencement of a bankruptcy case, give an individual consumer debtor a written notice that describes the types of bankruptcy relief available to consumer debtors. The written notice under section 342(b)(1) must also detail the types of services available from consumer credit counseling agencies.

Section 527(a)(1) contains two interpretive ambiguities that need clarification. First, the section requires that the debt relief agency give the written notice required under section 342(b)(1). However, section 342(b)(1) requires the clerk of the bankruptcy court to give such notice in cases involving individual consumer debtors. Therefore, it is unclear whether the debt relief agency has an independent duty to provide the notice in cases involving individual consumer debtors. If the debt relief agency has such a duty, then section 527(a)(1) is duplicative, at least in those cases. Second, a related problem is the section's exclusive cross-reference to section 342(b)(1). It is unclear why section 527(a)(1) does not also cross-reference section 342(b)(2) since section 342(b)(2) contains additional information that is of relevance to all debtors in bankruptcy cases. n10

Debt Relief Agency Must Provide Written Notice Advising the Assisted Person of Certain Filing and Disclosure Requirements. Section 527(a)(2) mandates that, to the extent not covered in the written notice described in section 527(a)(1), a debt relief agency provide written notice advising the assisted person of certain filing and disclosure requirements. This notice must be supplied not later than three business days after the first date on which a debt relief agency first offers to provide any bankruptcy assistance services to an assisted person. This notice must also be clear and conspicuous.

All Required Information Filed with a Petition and Thereafter During a Bankruptcy Case Must Be Complete, Accurate and Truthful. Section 527(a)(2)(A) requires that the written notice described in section 527(a)(2) advise an assisted person that all required information that the assisted person is mandated to provide with a petition and thereafter during a case under the Bankruptcy Code must be complete, accurate and truthful.

All Assets and Liabilities Must Be Completely and Accurately Disclosed and the Replacement Value Must Be Stated in Documents Commencing a Case Where Requested. Section 527(a)(2)(B) requires that the written notice described in section 527(a)(2) advise an assisted person that all assets and liabilities must be completely and accurately disclosed in the documents filed to commence a bankruptcy case. The section also specifies that the notice advise the assisted person that the replacement value of each asset pursuant to section 506 of the Bankruptcy Code must be stated in those documents where requested after reasonable inquiry to establish such value.

The requirement that the notice advise the assisted person that the replacement value must be stated where requested in the documents filed to commence a case is unlikely to have much, if any, practical impact. The reason is that the petition is the document filed to commence a bankruptcy case and the petition does not request the replacement value. Neither do bankruptcy schedules request that the debtor list the replacement value of assets. ⁿ¹¹ Hence, it is unclear how the assisted person would be under an obligation to provide replacement value in the documents filed to commence a case.

Moreover, the reference to the replacement value of each asset pursuant to section 506 of the Bankruptcy Code in the same phrase is problematic and misleading because section 506 defines replacement value only for personal property acquired for personal, family or household use. ⁿ¹² Section 506 does not define replacement value for all assets in bankruptcy. Indeed, the precise meaning of replacement value for other types of assets may vary depending on several factors, including the relevant Code chapter, the type of collateral and applicable case law.

Current Monthly Income, the Amounts Specified in Section 707(b)(2) and Disposable Income in a Chapter 13 Case Must Be Stated. Section 527(a)(2)(C) requires that the written notice described in section 527(a)(2) advise an assisted person that current monthly income, the amounts specified in section 707(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code and disposable income in a chapter 13 case determined in accordance with section 707(b)(2) must be stated after reasonable inquiry. Section 707(b)(2) specifies the amounts relevant to the presumption of abuse under the means-testing provisions of the 2005 Act. ⁿ¹³

What constitutes a reasonable inquiry under subsections 527(a)(2)(B) and (C) is unclear. Since Section 527(a)(2)(C) merely requires the debt relief agency to notify the assisted person of certain enumerated duties (and not to perform those duties itself), the lack of a precise definition is not of immediate concern. However, an understanding of the meaning of the term reasonable inquiry will likely influence the nature of the informal advice or assistance that debt relief agencies give to assisted persons regarding how to comply with applicable duties under the Code. The term could arguably refer to the reasonable inquiry requirement of Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011 and an argument could be advanced that the term should be interpreted in a manner consistent with that Rule.

Information Provided by an Assisted Person During Their Case May Be Audited, and Failure to Provide Such Information May Result in Dismissal or Other Sanctions. Section 527(a)(2)(D) requires that the written notice described in section 527(a)(2) advise an assisted person that information provided by an assisted person during their case may be audited and that failure to provide such information can result in dismissal or other sanctions, including criminal sanctions.

Presumably, the first phrase of section 527(a)(2)(D) (information that the assisted person provides during their case may be audited pursuant to this title) was added to reflect section 603 of the 2005 Act. ⁿ¹⁴ Section 603 establishes a duty on the part of the Attorney General and the Judicial Conference of the United States to promulgate procedures for conducting audits of petitions, schedules and other information filed by debtors pursuant to sections 111, 521 and 1322 of the Bankruptcy Code. ⁿ¹⁵ The audits are to be conducted in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards; however, the section affords gives the Attorney General and the Judicial Conference two years from the date of enactment of the 2005 Act to develop alternative auditing standards. The stated purpose of the audits is to determine the accuracy, veracity, and completeness of petitions, schedules and other information filed by debtors. ⁿ¹⁶

Duty of a Debt Relief Agency to Provide Required Statement; § 527(b)

Formalities of Statement. Section 527(b) dictates that a debt relief agency give to the assisted person a statement that contains certain information about bankruptcy assistance services from an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer.

The statement must be provided at the same time as the notices required under section 527(a)(1). The section also specifies that the statement be clear and conspicuous and that it be in a single document separate from other documents or notices provided to the assisted person.

Section 527(b) is ambiguous and could prove unworkable in many cases. Although the section provides that the statement must be given at the same time as the notices required under section 527(a)(1), section 527(a)(1) itself does not contain a time requirement. Instead, section 527(a)(1) references section 342(b)(1), which requires a bankruptcy clerk to give an individual consumer debtor notice of certain matters before the commencement of the case. Presumably, that is the time referred to in section 527(b), though it is not entirely clear. Moreover, a consumer creditor (who qualifies as an assisted person under section 101(3)) will typically not consult an attorney (who qualifies as a debt relief agency under section 101(12)(A)) until after the commencement of the case. Logically, an attorney for such a creditor cannot be expected to comply with section 527(b).

Substance of Statement. The statement referred to in section 527(b), to the extent applicable, must contain the specific information listed in the section or must be substantially similar. The information relates generally to representation of an assisted person by an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer, including the need for a written contract between the respective parties. The information also covers selected aspects of the bankruptcy process and it advises an assisted person about the types of services that person might need in a bankruptcy case. n17

The content of the information required by section 527(b) may be incorrect as applied to an individual debtor's bankruptcy case. For example, although the section requires that the statement say, You will have to pay a filing fee to the bankruptcy court, the fee requirement will not apply to a debtor who is able to secure a fee waiver.

The content of the information required by section 527(b) might also be misleading. Section 527(b) contains a statement which reads as follows: The following information helps you understand what must be done in a routine bankruptcy case to help you evaluate how much service you need. The information referred to in the statement is exceedingly sparse and is not likely to provide a typical debtor with the requisite data and analysis necessary to determine the degree and extent of professional services that might be necessary in even a routine bankruptcy case. Indeed, section 527(b) might have the unintended consequence of encouraging consumer debtors to utilize the services of petition preparers who engage in the unauthorized practice of law because the section requires that the statement indicate that such petition preparers can help debtors seek bankruptcy relief.

It is also unclear what constitutes a statement that is substantially similar. Of course, some debt relief agencies will adopt the statement verbatim, despite its problems. Over time, however, it is also likely that some debt relief agencies will modify the content of the required statement, thereby creating many different variations. Courts will probably have to police the boundaries of what constitutes a substantially similar statement in order to ensure compliance with the spirit of section 527(b).

Duty of a Debt Relief Agency to Provide Reasonably Sufficient Information on How to Provide Information Required under Section 521; § 527(c)

Section 527(c) obligates a debt relief agency to supply, to the extent permitted by nonbankruptcy law, reasonably sufficient information to an assisted person on how to provide all of the information the assisted person is required to provide pursuant to section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code. n18 Section 521 dictates the general duties of a debtor under the Bankruptcy Code. The agency is excused from this requirement to the extent that the debt relief agency provides the required information itself after reasonably diligent inquiry of the assisted person or others so as to obtain the information in a reasonably accurate fashion for the purpose of including the information on the petition, schedules or statement of financial affairs. The information must be provided at the time required for notice under section 527(a)(1). The information must also be given in a clear and conspicuous writing.

Section 527(c) may be a legal nullity. Under the terms of the section, a debt relief agency is excused from compliance if it provides the information itself after reasonably diligent inquiry of the assisted person. n19 This means that attorneys and many other entities covered by the definition of debt relief agency would be exempt because they routinely provide the relevant information themselves after inquiry for the purpose of completing required documents in a bankruptcy case. Additionally, the section expressly provides that a debt relief agency may give such information only to the extent permitted by nonbankruptcy law. Nonbankruptcy law restricts the ability of petition preparers, for example, to give legal advice, and the information required by section 527(c) plainly constitutes legal advice, much of which is exceedingly complex. For these reasons, it is unclear whether section 527(c) is applicable to any legal actor that the section appears designed to regulate.

Section 527(c) also contains several ambiguities. First, it is unclear what the required time for notice is under section 527(a)(1) because that section does not itself contain a time requirement. Section 527(a)(1) merely refers to a time listed in section 342(b)(1). n20 Additionally, several terms are extremely vague, including, reasonably sufficient information, reasonably diligent inquiry and reasonably accurately. This will invite litigation and will necessitate judicial clarification. Finally, although the section mandates that the information be provided in a clear and conspicuous fashion, it will likely be very difficult, if not impossible, to present some of the information clearly because much of the information required under section 521 consists of complex legal information that is not easily simplified. Given these ambiguities and uncertainties, it is fair to ask whether section 527(b) will result in meaningful protection for consumer debtors.

How to Value Assets at Replacement Value and Determine Current Monthly Income and the Amounts Specified in Section 707(b)(2); How to Determine Disposable Income in a Chapter 13 Case under Section 707(b)(2).

Section 527(c)(1) requires that the information described in section 527(c) include information on how to value assets at replacement value and how to determine currently monthly income. The section also mandates that the debt relief agency provide information on how to determine the amounts specified in section 702(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code. n21 Section 707(b)(2) proscribes standards for means-testing of consumer debtors under the Code. Finally, section 527(c)(1) specifies that the information described in section 527(c) must include information on how to determine disposable income pursuant to section 702(b)(2) of the Code and related calculations.

How to Complete the List of Creditors and Determine the Amount Owed and the Creditor's Address. Section 527(c)(2) dictates that the information described in section 527(c) include information on how to complete the list of creditors. The information must also include information on how to determine what amount is owed and what address for the creditor should be shown.

Compliance with the latter phrase of section 527(c)(2) (and what address for the creditor should be shown) will likely be more difficult in light of another provision that is new with the enactment of the 2005 Act. Section 342 has now been amended to impose more stringent notice requirements on debtors and provide creditors with increased legal protection in the event that such notice is ineffective, as defined by amended section 342. n22

How to Determine What Property Is Exempt and Value Exempt Property at Replacement Value under Section 506. Section 527(c)(2) requires that the information described in section 527(c) include information on how to determine what property is exempt and how to value exempt property at replacement value under section 506 of the Bankruptcy Code. n23

Section 527(c)(2) contains an erroneous legal assertion. The section wrongly states that the valuation of exempt property is governed by section 506 of the Code. In fact, the valuation of exempt property is governed by section 522(a)(2) of the Code and governing law. n24

Duty of a Debt Relief Agency to Maintain a Copy of Notices Required under Section 527(a); § 527(d)

Section 527(d) requires a debt relief agency to maintain a copy of the notices required pursuant to section 527(a) for two years after the date on which the notice is given to the assisted person.

This section is ambiguous because section 527(a) refers to two different notice requirements and section 527(d) fails to make clear which notice is relevant for purposes of triggering the application of the two-year time period in section 527(d). Section 527(a)(1) does not itself contain a time period, but it instead refers to the written notice required under section 342(b)(1). As indicated earlier, section 527(a)(1) raises several difficult issues with respect to timing and applicability. n25 Section 527(a)(2) provides that to the extent not covered in the section 527(a)(1) notice, the debt relief agency must provide written notice of certain matters not later than three (3) days after the first date on which a debt relief agency first offers to provide bankruptcy services to an assisted person. Since section 527(a) makes reference to two different notice mandates, it is unclear which notice starts the running of the two-year time period on section 527(d). An argument could be advanced that the deadline in section 527(a)(2) is preferable because it is relatively easier to calculate.

For a complete discussion of Code section 527, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 527 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 228(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. (2005).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 342(b)(1).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 110.

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 101(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount is $150,000. For adjustment of the dollar amount, see 11 U.S.C. § 104(b); Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 101(4A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.04A (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 101(12A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. 11 U.S. C. § 101(12)(A) excludes officers, directors, employees or agents of a person who provides assistance or of a bankruptcy petition preparer, certain non-profit organizations, creditors of assisted persons to the extent they are assisting in debt restructuring, specified depository institutions, and an author, publisher, distributor, or seller of works subject to copyright protection. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender). For analysis of the definitions and exclusions contained in sections 526, 527 and 528, see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 526.01 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 342(b)(1).

n10

10. Section 342(b)(2) provides that the bankruptcy clerk should give to an individual consumer debtor a written notice containing a statement that a person who knowingly and fraudulent conceals assets or makes a false statement under the Bankruptcy Code shall be subject to penalty and that all information supplied by the debtor is subject to examination by the Attorney General. 11 U.S.C. § 342(b)(2).

n11

11. The replacement value of certain assets might be requested in form chapter 13 plans in some bankruptcy districts.

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. § 506(a)(2).

n13

13. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 603 (2005).

n15

15. Id.

n16

16. Id.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 527(b).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 521.

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 527(c).

n20

20. See Formalities of Statement supra.

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2).

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 342(c), (e)(g); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 342 (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 506.

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 522(a)(2).

n25

25. See Debt Relief Agency Must Provide to the Assisted Person the Written Notice Required under Section 342(b)(1) and Formalities of Statement supra.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

134 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Proper Valuation Standard for Determining Secured Status

2008 Emerging Issues 1343

Collier on the Proper Valuation Standard for Determining Secured Status

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the proper valuation standard for purposes of determining secured status, including topics such as the concept of equivalent value, the value of property disposed of by sale, the Supreme Courts decision in Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, and the value of property retained or used by the debtor or trustee.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Once the court has identified the creditor's interest in the estate's interest in the relevant collateral, the court must then determine the relevant valuation standard to be applied in valuing the creditor's interest. In general, the courts agree that the relevant standard is one of fair market value. By itself, however, this reveals relatively little. In virtually every case, the determination of fair market value will depend on the particular market and means selected to gauge the value of the item in question. n1

It is possible, of course, to sell many items of property through many different markets and means, including private sales, auctions, wholesale transactions, swaps, repurchase agreements, and retail transactions. In this respect, a flea market is no less a market than a stock exchange. Yet the price realized for a particular item may vary tremendously depending on the market in which it is sold, as well as the means through which it is offered for sale. The question becomes: which market and means establish the most appropriate benchmarks for bankruptcy purposes? As section 506(a) instructs, the answer depends in the first instance on (i) the purpose of the valuation, and (ii) the proposed disposition of the collateral. n2 By themselves, however, these directives leave a number of important questions unanswered. If the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, however, section 506(a)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, added in 2005, n3 is more specific, directing that the value of the property shall be determined using the replacement cost method. In addition, section 506(a)(2) directs that value shall be determined without deduction for costs of sale or marketing. Further, section 506(a)(2) prescribes that, if the property was acquired for personal, family or household purposes, replacement cost means the price that a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind taking into account its age and condition at the time the valuation is performed.

Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash

As to more precise general methodology, the Supreme Court's decision in Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash n4 is instructive, if not definitive. In Rash, the debtors proposed a chapter 13 plan in which they sought to retain possession and use of a truck encumbered by a lien in favor of a secured creditor. The dispute centered on the value of the creditor's interest in the truck, which value would then be used to fix the amount of the creditor's secured claim. This was important because, pursuant to section 1325(a)(5), the debtors were required to pay the secured creditor payments under their plan equal to at least the present value of the amount of the creditor's secured claim. Thus, establishing the amount of the secured claim would determine how much the debtors had to pay the secured creditor in order to confirm their plan and keep the vehicle. n5

The debtors argued in favor of the lower foreclosure value standard (e.g., the amount the secured creditor would realize if it repossessed the truck and sold it at public auction), and proposed to make payments of a present value equal to this amount. In contrast, the creditor argued for the higher replacement value approach, namely what it would cost the debtor to replace the vehicle in the open market, thereby providing the secured creditor with a higher total recovery.

Viewing the matter functionally, the Supreme Court concluded that the purpose of the valuation was to determine how much the debtors had to pay the secured creditor in order to confirm their plan in accordance with 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5). Similarly, the Court found that the proposed disposition was the debtors' continued retention and use of the truck in order to generate an income stream. The court of appeals (en banc) had previously sided with the debtor, concluding that the appropriate standard was foreclosure value. The Supreme Court disagreed: Of prime significance, the replacement-value standard accurately gauges the debtor's use of the property. It values the creditor's interest in the collateral in light of the proposed [repayment plan] reality: no foreclosure sale and economic benefit for the debtor derived from the collateral equal to its [replacement] value. The debtor in this case elected to use the collateral to generate an income stream. That actual use, rather than a foreclosure sale that will not take place, is the proper guide under a prescription hinged to the property's disposition or use.' n6

The import of Rash is thus relatively clear: for purposes of determining the amount that must be paid to a secured creditor in the cramdown context, the question of value under section 506(a) turns on the value of the debtor's proposed use of the relevant property under the plan, not the value achievable in a foreclosure scenario that is not proposed, even though the reorganization may ultimately fail and the creditor may foreclose on its collateral as a result. n7 On the other hand, as suggested above, Rash does not purport to resolve every valuation question under section 506(a).

Similarly, although the Court adopted a replacement-value standard to address the issues presented in the case, it did not specify the particulars: Our recognition that the replacement-value standard, not the foreclosure-value standard, governs in cram down cases leaves to the bankruptcy courts, as triers of fact, identification of the best way of ascertaining replacement value on the basis of the evidence presented. Whether replacement value is the equivalent of retail value, wholesale value, or some other value will depend on the type of debtor and the nature of the property. n8

Thus, apart from identifying the purpose of the valuation and the proposed disposition or use, the Court's guidance is largely limited to the direction that, in the chapter 13 cramdown context, the trial court must focus on (i) the type of debtor in question, and (ii) the nature of the relevant property. Presumably, the import of this direction is that the trial court should focus on the price that the particular debtor would pay for the same collateral in a market available to that debtor. n9 At the same time, other than eliminating the foreclosure benchmark, the Court did not speak to the issue of the precise market or means to be utilized, such as whether the replacement value approach is to be determined by what the debtor would have to pay for the truck if the debtor were to purchase a like vehicle at retail from a dealer, or whether the standard may be set by what the debtor might have to pay for the truck if the debtor were to purchase a replacement from a seller advertising in a trade publication.

Moreover, the Court said little about how valuations are to be conducted in contexts other than the one presented in Rash. This leaves open the question of what standard should be employed in situations such as (i) adequate protection requests, (ii) motions for relief from stay, (iii) valuation of collateral for purposes of redemption, (iv) the best interest of creditors test of section 1129(a)(7) and (v) the determination of whether, in the event of plan failure, a plan provides sufficient safeguards to the holder of a secured claim under the fair and equitable test of section 1129(b).

In amending section 506(a) in 2005, n10 Congress confirmed certain aspects of the Court's decision in Rash, and supplied additional rules governing the valuation process with respect to personal property in individual chapter 7 and 13 cases. First, if the property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, directs that the valuation shall be conducted using the replacement cost method. Second, section 506(a)(2) directs that value shall be determined without deduction for costs of sale or marketing, but leaves open the possibility that the value of other items may be deducted, such as those identified by the Court in Rash (warranties and other items that the debtor does not receive). Third, section 506(a)(2) prescribes that, if the property was acquired for personal, family or household purposes, replacement cost means the price that a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind taking into account its age and condition at the time the valuation is performed.

Rash* and the Concept of Equivalent Value. In considering the potential value of Rash in other contexts, it is useful to observe that the Court's analysis is consistent with the Code's general perspective on the treatment of secured claims. As mentioned above, the Code adopts a general equivalent value approach in the sense of requiring the preservation and protection of the value (if not the substance) of the rights bargained for by the secured creditor. Similarly, the Court explained: Tying valuation to the actual disposition or use of the property points away from a foreclosure-value standard when a Chapter 13 debtor, invoking cram down power, retains and uses the property. Under that option, foreclosure is averted by the debtor's choice and over the creditor's objection. From the creditor's perspective as well as the debtor's, surrender and retention are not equivalent acts.

When a debtor surrenders the property, a creditor obtains it immediately, and is free to sell it and reinvest the proceeds. If a debtor keeps the property and continues to use it, the creditor obtains neither the property nor its value and is exposed to double risks: The debtor may again default and the property may deteriorate from extended use. Adjustments in the interest rate and secured creditor demands for more adequate protection, do not fully offset these risks. n11

Although certain aspects of the Court's above-quoted analysis may embrace some debatable assumptions, the analysis nevertheless underscores the general concern that a creditor receive compensation and protection in exchange for the tangible loss of valuable nonbankruptcy rights, such as the present right to foreclose and liquidate its position. n12 What remains to be seen, however, is how this concern may affect the application of section 506(a) in contexts other than cramdown.

Rash* and the Larger Context of Section 506(a). In reflecting on the implications of Rash in the larger context of section 506(a)'s role with respect to other provisions of the Code, it is also useful to consider how the valuation decision may further or impede other general bankruptcy policies, such as the policy of maximizing the value of the debtor's bankruptcy estate. One valid reason for the debtor's continued use of an asset in bankruptcy would be if the asset were worth more in the debtor's hands (both to the debtor and to the secured creditor, and perhaps to other creditors as well) than if transferred to the secured creditor and liquidated at public sale. Another valid consideration is that the debtor should not necessarily be able to use bankruptcy to, in essence, acquire property at less than its market cost, because doing so effectively permits a windfall in the form of a subsidized, below-market acquisition that may have the general effect of encouraging the use of bankruptcy proceedings in violation of the policy of bankruptcy avoidance. The standard articulated in Rash may effectively police both of these objectives by requiring the debtor to pay more for the property than the creditor would generally recover if the property were sold at foreclosure. n13 How much more, however, remains something of an open question. In amending section 506(a) in 2005 n14 to add section 506(a)(2), Congress provided certain answers to some of these open questions with respect to property securing a claim that is personal property in an individual chapter 7 or 13 case. Obviously, however, section 506(a)(2) does not answer all the open questions.

Value of Property Disposed of by Sale

Before addressing the application of section 506(a) in contexts other than the one presented in Rash, it is important to point out that, regardless of the purpose of the valuation, if an actual sale (or equivalent disposition) is to occur, the value of the collateral should be based on the consideration to be received by the estate in connection with the sale, provided that the terms of the sale are fair and were arrived at on an arm's-length basis. n15 Inasmuch as the price and related terms of the sale will indicate the value of the property to be disposed of, valuation should not be a substantial issue in the context of an actual sale unless questions arise such as the allocation of the consideration among the debtor and holders of liens in a portion of the property sold. n16

Of course, even in instances in which the trustee or debtor intends ultimately to sell the collateral, it may be necessary to value the property at some point prior to such time for one or more purposes. Obviously, in such a context, the sales price may not be known and, hence, would not be controlling.

Following the addition of section 506(a)(2) to the Code in 2005, n17 the question arises whether the price received in an actual sale of personal property securing a claim in an individual chapter 7 or 13 case will determine the value of the property for purposes of determining the secured creditor's claim in the bankruptcy case. An actual sale may occur if the secured creditor moves for relief from stay to liquidate the collateral and actually does so, the debtor sells the collateral in a chapter 13 case, or the trustee sells the collateral in a chapter 7 case. Under section 506(a)(2), the creditor's secured claim would be limited to the value of the proceeds of the disposition. For example, suppose the secured creditor holds a claim for $1,000 secured by personal property, and, after obtaining relief from stay, liquidates the collateral for $500 at public auction. Suppose further that the retail value of the collateral is $750. The secured creditor would not be entitled to both the $500 in proceeds from the liquidation and a secured claim of $250 representing the difference between the liquidation value and the retail value on the theory that the retail value of the collateral controls the determination of the creditor's secured claim. The secured creditor can only hold a secured claim with respect to the estate's interest in property securing the claim. Once the collateral is liquidated, the proceeds of the collateral are substituted for the collateral and the value of the proceeds is what determines the value of the creditor's secured claim. If the secured creditor has a deficiency claim under applicable law, this may be asserted as an unsecured claim.

Value of Property Retained or Used by Debtor or Trustee; In General

Once the purpose of the valuation is established, and the proposed use or disposition has been identified correctly, Rash directs that the court must then select the appropriate method of valuation that is consistent with these considerations. This is not always an easy task. Some general rules, however, can be distilled from the cases. Although these rules are summarized briefly here, reference should also be made to the ensuing discussions that examine in greater detail the application of the valuation process under section 506(a) in a number of specific contexts.

Even prior to Rash, many courts recognized that, if the debtor proposes to retain and use collateral under a plan, the collateral should not necessarily be valued on a forced sale basis for purposes of calculating the amount of the creditor's secured claim. n18 Nor should the estimated costs of an unanticipated sale be deducted as part of the calculation. n19 Of course, adjustments to account for certain items may be required in order to match the hypothetical transaction on which the valuation is based with the precise characteristics of the relevant collateral. n20 In addition, deduction of the costs of a sale may be appropriate in certain contexts in which the relevant standard is properly foreclosure value rather than some type of valuation that assumes continued use and possession by the debtor. n21 If the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, requires that the valuation must be conducted using the replacement value method without deduction for costs of sale or marketing. No such restriction, however, applies in the chapter 11 context or with respect to real property or with respect to debtors that are not individuals, and the valuation standard will vary depending on the purposes of the valuation.

To illustrate, for purposes of whether the debtor has any equity in the collateral in the context of a motion for relief from stay, if the debtor's prospects for a successful reorganization appear dim or nonexistent, the value of the creditor's collateral may best be determined on the basis of the value that the holder of the secured claim could obtain for the property upon a commercially reasonable foreclosure. n22 In such a context, the costs of a hypothetical foreclosure may be taken into account and deducted from the value of the secured creditor's claim because these costs would be incurred as part of a hypothetical sale. n23

In contrast, if the debtor's prospects for successful reorganization are good, and there is a strong market for property of the relevant type, some courts have found that the appropriate value under the circumstances is the value of the property to the debtor assuming uninterrupted retention and use. n24 The reasoning is that, although a forced sale might constitute a commercially reasonable disposition, n25 the valuation should reflect the fact that the debtor is likely to retain and use the property, and thus enjoy the use value of the property, perhaps as part of the debtor's business operated as a going concern. n26 Nevertheless, in gauging the debtor's use value, the standard remains one of what the collateral would fetch if sold in a relevant market, even assuming, if appropriate, that it may be sold as part of a going concern. n27 Hence, the age, condition and location of the collateral should all be considered, even though the collateral may be well maintained. n28 Taking these factors into account, the value of the subject property might be characterized in general terms as its fair market value. n29

In the usual instance in which a valuation is necessary, but the nature of the debtor's prospects are not clear, such as in the case of a motion for relief from stay brought on early in the case, it may be appropriate for the court to adjust its valuation approach to reflect this uncertainty. For example, for certain types of matters, if the proceeding arises early in the case and the debtor has a reasonable but unproven prospect of reorganizing, it might not be reasonable to value the creditor's collateral exclusively on a forced sale basis. n30 Rather, the court might adjust the value upward to reflect the potential increase in the collateral's worth as a result of its inclusion as part of a successful going concern, particularly if the debtor's assets would be sold by the creditor as a going concern even if the debtor's reorganization attempt fails. At the same time, however, it must be kept in mind that, during the course of the bankruptcy proceedings and prior to actual confirmation of a plan, the debtor's retention and use of collateral is not strictly to permit reorganization, but, rather, is simply to permit an attempt at reorganization.

In this regard, it is important to recognize that most reorganizations are not successful. n31 Moreover, in some contexts the purpose of the valuation is either dispositive, or weighs more heavily than the debtor's proposed disposition or use of the collateral. Moreover, in determining questions of value, courts should be careful in rendering early valuations to avoid ascribing ambitious positive worth to projections or estimations concerning the debtor's ability to successfully emerge from the reorganization process. On the other hand, if the debtor's prospects for successful reorganization appear reasonably certain, there is no reason why foreclosure value should necessarily control in every context. n32

Of course, the debtor's prospects should be clear by the time the court is asked to confirm the debtor's plan. At that point, for purposes of establishing the amount of the secured creditor's claim, it will usually be unreasonable to reduce the amount of the claim on the ground that the debtor's prospects remain uncertain at the same time that the court is being asked to determine that the plan is feasible. However, as discussed below, in the context of determining whether the creditor's collateral position is properly maintained under the plan (as distinct from determining the amount of the creditor's secured claim), the court should conduct the valuation from the perspective of the creditor's position if the plan does not succeed and the creditor must foreclose. If, however, the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, requires that the valuation must be conducted using the replacement value method without deduction for costs of sale or marketing.

Although the foregoing provides a general discussion of some of the more significant aspects of valuation under section 506(a), it is hardly dispositive. Moreover, close examination of the cases reveals a number of significant conflicts and disagreements. Perhaps this is inevitable: above all else, courts have sought to remain sensitive to relevant issues of context. ⁿ³³ Examination of the cases, however, is useful in distilling the conflicting use of hypothetical sale and hypothetical purchase methodologies. Those methodologies can then be examined in light of specific valuation applications in a number of discrete contexts arising under various sections of the Code.

Inconsistent Judicial Application of Valuation Concepts. Judicial application of the general valuation concepts discussed above have not been consistent, even after allowing for differences in applicable circumstances. For example, courts are frequently called upon to value claims secured by liens on automobiles or mobile homes held by financial institutions in situations in which the debtor proposes to retain and use the subject collateral. In these situations, courts have valued the underlying collateral for purposes of redemption, or in setting the allowed amount of a secured claims for plan purposes based upon (i) published wholesale value, ⁿ³⁴ (ii) the average between wholesale and retail value, as reflective of the open market between private parties, ⁿ³⁵ (iii) retail value, ⁿ³⁶ (iv) retail price, less dealer overhead, commissions and profit, ⁿ³⁷ and (v) the bid market price. ⁿ³⁸

This rather substantial difference in view may be explained, in part, by the fact that the courts have often been faced with the task of deciding the value of an item of property in the absence of adequate evidentiary showings regarding customary asset dispositions and attainable values. Thus, courts have sometimes been forced to make assumptions as to expected conduct and pricing which do not, in fact, comport with business or economic reality. Regardless of the cause, however, the existence of a true divergence in the underlying valuation approach should not be ignored or minimized. ⁿ³⁹ If the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, ⁿ⁴⁰ resolves some of differences of opinion by requiring that the valuation must be conducted using the replacement value method without deduction for costs of sale or marketing. In addition, section 506(a)(2) defines replacement value with respect to property acquired for personal, family or household purposes as the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined.

Hypothetical Sale or Purchase Method; Custom-Made Property. Although, courts frequently differ on precise methodology, valuation under section 506(a) will generally proceed along one of two lines: (i) establishing the price that the creditor would receive upon some form of hypothetical sale of the subject property by the secured creditor, ⁿ⁴¹ or, alternatively, (ii) determining the price to be paid by the debtor upon some form of hypothetical purchase of the subject property. ⁿ⁴² Once the court identifies the nature and characteristics of the hypothetical transaction (sale by the creditor or debtor, or purchase by the debtor), the court may more readily analyze the evidence relating to the value of the subject property, and thus arrive at a reasoned prediction of the price obtainable or payable in such a transaction. If the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, ⁿ⁴³ removes the choice between a purchase or sale method by requiring that the valuation must be conducted using the replacement value purchase method and by defining replacement value with respect to property acquired for personal, family or household purposes as the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined. In cases in which section 506(a)(2) does not apply, however, the choice will remain.

In general, the purchase method may often be easier to apply than the sale method. First, the debtor's intended use is often well-defined, which may not be the case in the foreclosure context. Second, the manner in which the debtor would replace the subject property is generally the same as the manner in which the debtor originally acquired the subject property in the first place, whereas, under a sale approach, the manner of disposition is often unrelated to the manner of acquisition by the debtor. n44 Nevertheless, such is not always the case.

A common problem that has given the courts some difficulty in applying either a sale method or a purchase method arises in the context of custom-made property. If the sale method is selected and there is no potential purchaser, the relevant foreclosure value may be scrap or salvage value, which, if used, would tend to undervalue the collateral. n45 However, if the purchase method is selected, the fact that the property is specialized or custom-made may not be significant, and the inquiry will focus instead on ascertaining the cost of replacement, adjusted to reflect the used condition of the collateral. n46

Disarray of Terms Used to Describe Proper Method; General Standards. As mentioned above, courts agree that the relevant quest under section 506(a) is to determine fair market value. Similarly, courts typically label the kinds of transactions that should be used to demonstrate fair market value as those that are commercially reasonable under the circumstances, n47 meaning those that reveal the market price that would be obtained for the subject property between a willing buyer and a willing seller if the property were disposed of in the most commercially reasonable manner. n48 But in defining more precisely what is meant by fair market value, and in defining the kinds of transactions that are commercially reasonable under the circumstances of particular cases, courts have differed dramatically in the particulars of their approaches. n49 Moreover, just as there are many different ways to determine the value of any particular item of property depending on the market and means selected, there are just as many different terms that can be used to describe the different kinds of valuation procedures that take different markets and means into account. If the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, n50 resolves some of the controversy by directing that the valuation must be conducted using the replacement value method and by defining replacement value with respect to property acquired for personal, family or household purposes as the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined.

For example, in seeking to define fair value in a number of different contexts (whether through the use of a hypothetical sale method or a hypothetical purchase method), courts have made use of such concepts as liquidation value, going concern value, orderly liquidation value, forced sale value, replacement value, best use value" and the like. n51 In addition, depending on how these standards are defined, courts have also recognized that there be numerous ways to establish each of them based on the particular market selected. For example, liquidation value might be established through such means as the published price of an item in a trade journal or newspaper, a collection of recent auction prices, the bid price, or the retail price charged by a dealer less overhead, commissions and profit.

In an effort to lend greater precision to the relevant terminology, some courts have taken specific issue with use of the term liquidation value to mean forced sale value, or to imply that going concern values are not to be realized. n52 These courts correctly point out that any disposition is, in a sense, a liquidation. Moreover, a creditor may realize best use or going concern values upon the liquidation of the collateral. Indeed, if there is a strong market for the subject property, and transactions in this market are generally effected through contractual means without the use of dealers, brokers or other intermediaries who charge commissions or otherwise obtain profits, liquidation value, going concern value, best use value and replacement value may all be the same thing. n53 At other times, however, application of these different standards will yield quite different results.

With respect to clarifying the existing disarray in the terminology, the Supreme Court's decision in Rash offers relatively little assistance. As noted above, the Court adopted a replacement value standard to address the issues presented in the case. However, the Court did not define the replacement value standard (except to distinguish it from a foreclosure value standard), leaving open the question of [w]hether [replacement-value] is the equivalent of retail value, wholesale value, or some other value . n54

Instead, what the Court did was to establish the more general method for determining the proper standard by focusing on the purpose of the valuation and the proposed disposition or use of the relevant property, and a more specific method to be used in the cramdown context for purposes of determining the amount of the secured creditor's claim, namely replacement value. Moreover, the Court clarified that the relevant choice in any given context is between one of (i) a hypothetical purchase standard, meaning the debtor's purchase of like property of the same age or condition using either wholesale, retail or some other value method depending on the circumstances), or (ii) a hypothetical sale standard, meaning the creditor's sale of the collateral through foreclosure, but not some combination of the two. n55 Hence, in searching for fair market value, courts are guided to apply section 506(a) with these principles in mind. In addition, if the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, does provide a definition of replacement value with respect to property acquired for personal, family or household purposes, stating that replacement value with respect to such property means the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined.

Business Practices of Seller. In general, the terms of any hypothetical sale or purchase should reflect the manner in which the seller (whether a third party vendor under a hypothetical purchase approach, or the secured creditor under a hypothetical sale approach) would be expected to dispose of the subject property to a willing buyer. Hence, the attributes of the relevant seller may properly be considered in determining what is the most reasonable disposition of the relevant item by that seller. These include the seller's customary business practices.

For example, assuming that a hypothetical foreclosure sale method is used, the fact that the holder of a claim secured by a lien on an automobile is a financial institution (as opposed to an automobile dealer) may be considered in arriving at the value that the holder could reasonably derive from the collateral upon foreclosure. n56 Other attributes of the holder that may affect the manner in which it would sell the collateral may include the investment of time and money the holder has customarily been willing to devote under comparable circumstances. n57 If, however, the relevant property securing a claim is personal property in an individual case under chapter 7 or 13, section 506(a)(2), added in 2005, n58 directs the use of the replacement value method without deduction for costs of sale or marketing, and with respect to property acquired for personal, family or household purposes, directs that replacement value means the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined. Accordingly, in such contexts, the relevant attributes are those of a retail merchant selling the type of property at issue, at least if such a merchant exists. This would include retail merchants who sell the type of property at issue in any number of markets, including markets such as eBay and Amazon.com.

Effect of Prepetition Repurchase Agreement Price. On the other hand, if the hypothetical sale method is used, consideration of the attributes of the holder of the secured claim should not extend to those arising from the availability to the holder of recourse against third parties with respect to the claim. For example, finance companies and other lenders to buyers of automobiles and other expensive consumer goods often require that the dealer who sold the goods to the debtor must agree to repurchase the goods at a specified price if the buyer defaults and the lender must foreclose. The relevant price is most often designed to prevent the finance company from suffering a loss on repossession, and is thus geared to internal financial considerations rather than extrinsic asset values. Thus, it may exceed the price that could be obtained in an arm's-length transaction, regardless of whether the price is derived through application of a wholesale, retail or other standard.

Following this approach, most courts have disregarded any repurchase agreement price in fixing the amount of a secured claim. n59 At least one court has held, however, that the repurchase agreement must be given effect in order to determine what the holder of the secured claim would obtain upon foreclosure. n60

As between the two approaches, the majority view appears to be correct. Although the value set by the court might not reflect the entirety of the bargained-for position that the secured creditor would have occupied had he been able to foreclose upon the collateral and recover the price under the repurchase agreement, section 506(a) directs that the bankruptcy court must protect the holder of a secured claim only to the extent of the value of its interest in the estate's interest in the subject property and thereby focuses in this respect on the relationship between the creditor and the debtor, not the creditor and other third parties. The court is not directed to afford protection with respect to the creditor's contractual rights against third parties, even though the existence of those rights might have the effect of increasing the value of the collateral for the secured creditor once the creditor has reduced it to possession.

For further discussion of Code section 506, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 506 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See, e.g., United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1193, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (recognizing different ways to establish fair market value and leaving the precise disposition to the trial court), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997).

n2

2. See, e.g., United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 75-76, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992).

n3

3. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4

4. 520 U.S. 953, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 37 C.B.C.2d 744 (1997).

n5

5. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5) (providing that, in order to be confirmed, a chapter 13 plan must provide that the debtor pay the secured creditor the present value of its secured claim, unless the creditor consents to different treatment).

n6

6. Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.6, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.6, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 160 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 751 (1997) (citations omitted).

n7

7. See also United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (When a Chapter 11 debtor or a Chapter 13 debtor intends to retain property subject to a lien, the purpose of a valuation under section 506(a) is not to determine the amount the creditor would receive if it hypothetically had to foreclose and sell the collateral. Neither the foreclosure value nor the costs of repossession are to be considered because no foreclosure is intended. Instead, when the proposed use of the property is continued retention by the debtor, the purpose of the valuation is to determine how much the creditor will receive for the debtor's continued possession.), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992).

n8

8. Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.6, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.6, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 160 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 751 (1997); see also United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1193, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 74-75 (1st Cir. 1995).

n9

9. Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 960 n.2, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1884 n.2, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 37 C.B.C.2d 744 (1997).

n10

10. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11

11. Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 962-63, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1885, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 158, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 749 (1997) (citations omitted).

n12

12. See also United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192-93, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 74, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (discussing link between adequate protection and section 506(a)). See generally United Sav. Ass'n of Tex. v. Timbers of Inwood Forest Assocs., Ltd. (In re Timbers of Inwood Forest Assocs., Ltd.), 484 U.S. 365, 371-72, 108 S. Ct. 626, 98 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1988). As observed by the court in Winthrop Old Farms: [Permitting the debtor to value the collateral on a liquidation basis but retain the property] would allow a reorganizing debtor to reap a windfall by stripping down the lien to liquidation value and quickly selling the collateral at fair market value, thus pocketing equity that would have been completely beyond reach save for the filing of the bankruptcy petition. 50 F.3d at 76, 33 C.B.C.2d at 117.

n13

13. See also United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192-93, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992).

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n15

15. See Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Dobbins, 35 F.3d 860, 870 (4th Cir. 1994); Romley v. Sun Nat'l Bank (In re Two S Corp.), 875 F.2d 240, 244 (9th Cir. 1989) (Evidence of other appraised values is also irrelevant, because the sale price is a better indicator of the asset's value than any estimate of value given prior to sale.); see also Takisaki v. Alpine Group, Inc. (In re Alpine Group, Inc.), 151 B.R. 931, 935 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993) (The offered price is conclusive evidence of the property's value.). Of course, if the terms of an offer by a third party to purchase the subject property have not been accepted by the debtor, such an offer may not be persuasive evidence as to the property's value. See In re Smith, 42 B.R. 198, 200 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1984).

n16

16. See In re Fiberglass Indus., Inc., 74 B.R. 738 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1987).

n17

17. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n18

18. See, e.g., United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192-93, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 75, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (real property, to be retained and used to generate income, valued based on fair market value); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992); Cohen v. Werner (In re Cohen), 13 B.R. 350, 353 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981) (The debtor is not suffering the diminution in her equity that a forced sale would produce; she remains in possession of her home, enjoying the possibility of benefit from future appreciation. Evenhandedness would seem to dictate that the creditor, likewise, escape the penalties of liquidation.). But see In re Maddox, 200 B.R. 546, 548 (D.N.J. 1996) (court applied the wholesale value to motor vehicles used by debtors during the term of the chapter 13 plan). For a discussion of the application of the fair market value standard and the wholesale value standard in chapter 13 cases, see Adjustments for Certain Expenses; Costs and Other Items supra. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

n19

19. Many courts have properly held that hypothetical selling costs should not be deducted from the value of property when determining the value of a creditor's security interest in that property. See Taffi v. United States (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (Hypothetical sales costs are not to be considered because no sale is intended.), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 74, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (real property to be used to generate income in chapter 11 case valued at fair market value, as no foreclosure or other sale planned); Metrobank v. Trimble (In re Trimble), 50 F.3d 530, 531 (8th Cir. 1995); Huntington Nat'l Bank v. Pees (In re McClurkin), 31 F.3d 401, 405, 31 C.B.C.2d 1364, 1369 (6th Cir. 1994); Brown & Co. Sec. Corp. v. Balbus (In re Balbus), 933 F.2d 246, 252, 24 C.B.C.2d 1841, 1848 (4th Cir. 1991) (for purposes of determining whether dollar limits of § 109(e) have been exceeded, costs of hypothetical sale should not be deducted where debtor intends to retain collateral); Beacon Hill Apartments, Ltd. v. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re Beacon Hill Apartments, Ltd.), 118 B.R. 148, 150-52 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

n20

20. See, e.g., Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.6, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.6, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 160 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 751 n.6 (1997).

n21

21. See Butters v. Mountain Side Holdings, Inc. (In re Mountain Side Holdings, Inc.), 142 B.R. 421, 423 (D. Colo. 1992) (Whether value is determined on a forced sale or best use basis, there is still a hypothetical sale.); Coby v. United States (In re Coby), 163 B.R. 835, 837 (D. Nev. 1993); Overholt v. Farm Credit Servs. (In re Overholt), 125 B.R. 202, 215 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990).

n22

22. See In re Demakes Enters., Inc., 27 C.B.C.2d 622, 625-26, 145 B.R. 362, 364-65 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1992); In re Robbins, 119 B.R. 1, 5 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1990); see also H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 339 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 54 (1978); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 361.04 (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. See Butters v. Mountain Side Holdings, Inc. (In re Mountain Side Holdings, Inc.), 142 B.R. 421, 423 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992) (costs of sale of cable system deducted in determining value of creditor's interest under § 506(a)); Coby v. United States (In re Coby), 163 B.R. 835, 837 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1993); Overholt v. Farm Credit Servs. (In re Overholt), 125 B.R. 202, 215 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990).

n24

24. See Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Helionetics, Inc. (In re Helionetics, Inc.), 70 B.R. 433, 438-39 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1987); General Elec. Credit Corp. v. QPL Components Inc. (In re QPL Components Inc.), 20 B.R. 342, 345 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1982); see also S. Rep. No. 98-65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 5-6 (1983). But see In re Claeys, 81 B.R. 985 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987) (valuation of property to be retained based on disposition rather than retention value, thus disregarding income to be generated from government contract).

n25

25. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 356 (1977). But note that the version of subsection (a) ultimately enacted was taken from S. 2266, not H.R. 8200 to which such Report is addressed. Factors militating toward a forced sale might include high carrying costs for the property or that the property is perishable, vacant or inoperable.

n26

26. See Murray v. Lyon (In re Cohn), 16 B.R. 140, 144 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1981) (forced sale value is usually only used when the property is vacant, inoperative, or must otherwise be disposed of quickly and cheaply.); Savloff v. Continental Bank (In re Savloff), 2 C.B.C.2d 56, 59, 4 B.R. 285 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1980) (We conclude that, only in the rarest of circumstances, where other methods of disposition are precluded, should the property be valued at what it would bring at forced sale.); see also United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992).

n27

27. See In re Wabash Valley Power Ass'n, Inc., 77 B.R. 991 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1987), rev'd, 111 B.R. 752 (S.D. Ind. 1990) (in determining going concern value, court must apply willing buyer-willing seller valuation standard); Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Helionetics, Inc. (In re Helionetics, Inc.), 70 B.R. 433, 438-39 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1987).

n28

28. See, e.g., In re Methvin, 11 B.R. 556, 557 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 1981), aff'd, 31 B.R. 569 (S.D. Miss. 1982); Blakey v. Pierce (In re Blakey), 76 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Pa.); In re Damron, 8 B.R. 323 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1980).

n29

29. See United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (determination of fair market value based on stipulated value), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); Coker v. Sovran Equity Mortg. Corp. (In re Coker), 973 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1992) (determination of fair market value based on testimony); Lopez v. Beneficial Mut. Sav. Bank, 75 B.R. 961 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987), aff'd, 82 B.R. 712 (E.D. Pa. 1988); In re Markowitz Bldg. Co., 84 B.R. 484 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1988); cf. In re Foster, 79 B.R. 906 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1987) (valuation based on debtor's proposed use, not speculative best use).

n30

30. Hence, some courts will consider the relevant possibilities and adjust their valuation determinations accordingly. See In re Rankin, 49 B.R. 565 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1985). Thus, it may be appropriate to view the varying bases and manners of valuation as establishing a range of possible values as opposed to a finite set of alternatives. See, e.g., Barash v. Public Fin. Corp., 658 F.2d 504, 512, 4 C.B.C.2d 1548, 1557 (7th Cir. 1981) (in context of automobile valuation, choice not limited to published wholesale or retail); In re Damron, 8 B.R. 323 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1980) (valuation to be a middle ground between distressed sale valuation and retail); see also S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 54 (1978).

n31

31. See Rosenberg Real Estate Equity Fund III v. Air Beds, Inc. (In re Air Beds, Inc.), 19 C.B.C.2d 1380, 1385, 92 B.R. 419, 424 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988) (It is our empirical observation that many more plans of reorganization are contemplated than are proposed; fewer still are confirmed; and even fewer are consummated.). A statistical analysis prepared by the Administrative Office of the United States Courts estimates that a plan is confirmed in only 17 percent of chapter 11 cases. Flynn, Statistical Analysis of Chapter 11, October, 1989.

n32

32. It should be noted that a debtor's mere prospect for reorganization, no matter how glowing, is never sufficient to establish adequate protection. Rather, adequate protection may be afforded as prescribed in section 361.

n33

33. See Barash v. Public Fin. Corp., 658 F.2d 504, 512, 4 C.B.C.2d 1548, 1557 (7th Cir. 1981); General Elec. Credit Corp. v. QPL Components Inc. (In re QPL Components Inc.), 20 B.R. 342, 345 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1982); In re Klein, 4 C.B.C. 2d 412, 414, 10 B.R. 657, 660 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981); see also H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 356 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 68 (1978).

n34

34. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.02[6][e] (Matthew Bender) for a thorough discussion of the valuation issue. For cases in which courts have applied the wholesale value standard, see In re Maddox, 200 B.R. 546, 548 (D.N.J. 1996) (court applied the wholesale value to motor vehicles used by debtors during the term of the chapter 13 plan); see also Valley Nat'l Bank of Ariz. v. Malody (In re Malody), 102 B.R. 745, 749 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989); Grubbs v. National Bank of S.C., 114 B.R. 450, 451 (D.S.C. 1990); In re Kennedy, 177 B.R. 967 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 1995); In re King, 165 B.R. 296, 300 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994); For more background on the statute, see In re Rash, 90 F.3d 1036 (5th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (citing legislative history of the statute, which stated that the debtor should not be required to pay the creditor more than if the creditor were to actually repossess and sell the property), rev'd, Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 37 C.B.C.2d 744 (1997). Congress rejected a proposed amendment to section 506(a) that would have expressly adopted a replacement cost standard for valuation of a secured creditor's claim. For more information on the legislative background of wholesale value and retail value, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.LH (Matthew Bender). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

n35

35. See In re Hoskins, 183 B.R. 166 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1995); In re Myers, 32 C.B.C.2d 1818, 178 B.R. 518 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1995); In re Rowland, 166 B.R. 172, 176 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 1994); In re Carlan, 157 B.R. 324 (Bankr. S.D. Tex 1993).

n36

36. See United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1193, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Metrobank v. Trimble (In re Trimble), 50 F.3d 530 (8th Cir. 1995); In re McClurkin, 31 F.3d 401 (6th Cir. 1994).

n37

37. See McQuinn v. Dial Fin. Co. (In re McQuinn), 6 B.R. 899 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1980).

n38

38. See In re Klein, 4 C.B.C.2d 412, 415, 10 B.R. 657, 659 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981).

n39

39. While the cases cannot be satisfactorily reconciled, it must be remembered that the differences, in virtually all cases, relate to the interpretation of what constitutes fair market value or a commercially reasonable disposition under the circumstances--not as to whether the fair market value or commercially reasonable disposition standard is applicable.

n40

40. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n41

41. See, e.g., In re Frost, 12 C.B.C.2d 990, 47 B.R. 961 (D. Kan. 1985); Memphis Bank & Trust Co. v. Walker, 4 C.B.C.2d 975, 976, 14 B.R. 264 (W.D. Tenn. 1981); Windfeldner v. Rosen (In re Windfeldner), 82 B.R. 367 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988).

n42

42. See, e.g., United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir.

1996) (en banc) (When a Chapter 11 debtor or a Chapter 13 debtor intends to retain property subject to a lien, the purpose of a valuation under section 506(a) is not to determine the amount the creditor would receive if it hypothetically had to foreclose and sell the collateral. Neither the foreclosure value nor the costs of repossession are to be considered because no foreclosure is intended. Instead, when the proposed use of the property is continued retention by the debtor, the purpose of the valuation is to determine how much the creditor will receive for the debtor's continued possession.), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); In re Reynolds, 5 C.B.C.2d 1578, 17 B.R. 489 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Miller (In re Miller), 2 C.B.C.2d 212, 4 B.R. 392 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1980); McQuinn v. Dial Fin. Co. (In re McQuinn), 6 B.R. 899 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1980).

n43

43. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n44

44. See Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 960 n.2, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1884 n.2, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 156 n.2, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 747 (1997).

n45

45. See In re Sampson, 51 B.R. 13, 15, n.4 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1984) (when collateral is household goods, use resale value rather than replacement value).

n46

46. For example, one approach would be to value the property based on the portion of its original cost attributable to its remaining useful life. See Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Anderson (In re Anderson), 17 B.R. 521 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982) (custom-made draperies).

n47

47. See, e.g., In re George Ruggiere Chrysler-Plymouth, 727 F.2d 1017, 1020, 10 C.B.C.2d 220, 223 (7th Cir. 1984) (valuing collateral based upon the creditor's customary and commercially reasonable means of disposition); In re Claeys, 81 B.R. 985, 991-92 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987) (discussing proper measure of valuation as what collateral would bring in a commercially reasonable disposition by the secured creditor); Parr v. First Alabama Bank of Hartselle (In re Parr), 30 B.R. 276, 277 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1983) (to determine value of real property, the Court must determine what the bank would receive from the real estate upon its disposition by customary and commercially reasonable means); see also Smith v. Associates Commercial Corp. (In re Clark Pipe and Supply Co., Inc.), 893 F.2d 693, 698, 22 C.B.C.2d 500, 505 (5th Cir. 1990) (quoting Samson v. Alton Banking & Trust Co. (In re Ebblar Furniture and Appliances, Inc.), 804 F.2d 87, 92, 15 C.B.C.2d 1452, 1457 (7th Cir. 1986) (Easterbrook, J., concurring) (rejecting retail value as determinative of secured creditor's interest, Judge Easterbrook stated that [t]he value of [a secured party's] interest depends on what [it] could do, outside of bankruptcy, to realize on its security [w]hat it could do is seize and sell the inventory)); Heritage Sav. and Loan Ass'n v. Rogers Dev. Corp. (In re Rogers Dev. Corp.), 1 C.B.C.2d 499, 506, 2 B.R. 679, 683 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1980). See generally United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192 (9th Cir. 1996). The manner of disposition that is commercially reasonable for bankruptcy purposes can be determined only after considering the then current circumstances. See Chemical Bank v. American Kitchen Foods, Inc. (In re American Kitchen Foods, Inc.), 2 B.C.D. 715, 722 (Bankr. D. Me. 1976) (Whatever merit commends selection of the most economically realistic collateral valuation standard available in the circumstances of a given arrangement proceeding militates just as persuasively in favor of its consistent enforcement in respect to the same collateral throughout the proceedings. Consistency in collateral valuation ordinarily does not mean that collateral will be assigned the same value throughout the proceedings as at their commencement, but merely that the most commercially reasonable disposition practicable in the circumstances should be the standard universally applicable in all cases and at every phase of each case.). It should be noted that, as used in the bankruptcy valuation context, the meaning of the phrase commercially reasonable is often strikingly different from the meaning of the same term as used under Article Nine of the Uniform Commercial Code.

n48

48. See Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 960 n.2, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1884 n.2, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 156 n.2, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 747 n.2 (1997) (our use of the term replacement value is consistent with the Ninth Circuit's understanding of the meaning of fair-market value; by replacement value, we mean the price a willing buyer in the debtor's trade, business, or situation would pay a willing seller to obtain property of a like age and condition.); United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 74-75, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (discussing concept of commercially reasonable dispositions).

n49

49. See Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 74-75, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (discussing disagreements).

n50

50. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n51

51. See, e.g., United States v. Taffi (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190, 1192-93, 36 C.B.C.2d 1259, 1260 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (noting different methods to determine fair market value), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997); Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc. v. New Bedford Inst. for Sav. (In re Winthrop Old Farm Nurseries, Inc.), 50 F.3d 72, 73, 33 C.B.C.2d 113, 117 (1st Cir. 1995) (mentioning fair market value, liquidation value and going concern value).

n52 52. See In re Claeys, 81 B.R. 985 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987); Murray v. Lyon (In re Cohn), 16 B.R. 140 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1981); Chemical Bank v. American Kitchen Foods, Inc. (In re American Kitchen Foods, Inc.), 2 B.C.D. 715 (Bankr. D. Me. 1976) (chapter XI).

n53

53. See Catholic Credit Union v. Siegler (In re Siegler), 2 C.B.C.2d 912, 914, 5 B.R. 12, 14 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1980).

n54

54. Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.6, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.6, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 160 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 751 (1997).

n55

55. See Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash, 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.5, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.5, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 159 n.5, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 750 n.5 (1997) (rejecting combination approach); see also discussion in Evidentiary Standards and Burden of Proof infra.

n56

56. See In re Kennedy, 177 B.R. 967 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 1995); Grubbs v. National Bank of S.C., 114 B.R. 450, 451 (D.S.C. 1990); In re Owens, 120 B.R. 487, 490 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1990); see also Samson v. Alton Banking & Trust Co. (In re Ebblar Furniture and Appliances, Inc.), 804 F.2d 87, 92, 15 C.B.C.2d 1452, 1457 (7th Cir. 1986) (Easterbrook, J., concurring) ([t]he value of [a secured party's] interest depends on what [it] could do, outside of bankruptcy, to realize on its security [w]hat it could do is seize and sell the inventory).

n57

57. See Catholic Credit Union v. Siegler (In re Siegler), 2 C.B.C.2d 912, 914, 5 B.R. 12, 14 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1980).

n58

58. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 327 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n59

59. See Grubbs v. National Bank of S.C., 114 B.R. 450, 452-53 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1990); In re Reeder, 60 B.R. 312, 314-15 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986); In re Cook, 38 B.R. 870, 875-6 (Bankr. D. Utah 1984); Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Van Nort (In re Van Nort), 9 B.R. 218, 221 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1981) (While a particular item or type of property may have a value to a particular creditor greater than what would be realized in a reasonable commercial disposition such value does not represent collateral value protected by § 1325(a)(5)); Lopez v. Mutual Sav. Bank, 82 B.R. 712 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (disregards FHA regulations applicable to transfers following foreclosure); In re Perskin, 4 C.B.C.2d 294, 304, 9 B.R. 626, 634 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1981) (in context of repurchase agreement between bank creditor and automobile dealer: Any deal which the creditor can strike with a third party may be evidence of value, but it is not positive proof of value.).

n60

60. See In re Stumbo, 7 B.R. 939 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

135 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Requirements for Debt Relief Agencies

2008 Emerging Issues 1344

Collier on Requirements for Debt Relief Agencies

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the requirements for "debt relief agencies," including topics such as the duty of a debt relief agency regarding a written contract with the assisted person, and the definition of an "advertisement of bankruptcy assistance services or of the benefits of bankruptcy directed to the general public."

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview of Code Section 526

Section 526 of the Bankruptcy Code is new with the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act"). n1 The stated intent of Congress in enacting section 526 and related provisions was to strengthen professionalism standards for attorneys and others who assist consumer debtors with their bankruptcy cases. n2 The section places certain restrictions on the activities of debt relief agencies. In addition, section 526 specifies that any waiver by an assisted person of any right or protection under section 526 shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or by any other person, but that such a waiver may be enforced against a debt relief agency. Further, this section voids a contract for bankruptcy assistance between a debt relief agency and an assisted person if the contract is not in compliance with the material requirements of sections 526, 527 or 528. In addition, section 526 renders such contracts unenforceable by any federal or state court or by any other person other than the assisted person.

Section 526 also imposes monetary liability on debt relief agencies under specified circumstances. In addition to other state law remedies, the section authorizes certain state officials to bring enforcement actions to enjoin the violation and recover actual damages, costs and reasonable attorney's fees. The section provides that if a court finds that a person intentionally violated the section or engaged in a clear and persistent pattern or practice of violating the section, the court may enjoin the violation or impose an appropriate civil penalty on the violator.

Section 526 makes clear that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not annul, alter, affect or exempt any person from complying with the law of any state, except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. Section 526 provides that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a state to determine and enforce qualifications for the practice of law in that state. Finally, section 526 specifies that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a federal court to determine and enforce qualifications for the practice of law before that court.

Assisted Person Defined. An assisted person is defined in the Code by section 101 as: any person whose debts consist primarily of consumer debts and the value of whose non-exempt property is less than $164,250. n3

Bankruptcy Assistance Defined. The term bankruptcy assistance is defined in the Code by section 101 as: any goods or services sold or otherwise provided to an assisted person with the express or implied purpose of providing information, advice, counsel, document preparation, or filing, or attendance at a creditors' meeting or appearing in a case or proceeding on behalf of another or providing legal representation with respect to a case or proceeding under this title. n4

Debt Relief Agency Defined. The term debt relief agency is defined in the Code by section 101 as any person who provides any bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, or who is a bankruptcy petition preparer under section 110. n5 Section 101 specifically excludes several persons and entities from the definition of debt relief agency. n6

Central to any application of section 526 is the definition of three terms: assisted person, bankruptcy assistance and debt relief agency. These terms are new with the passage of the 2005 Act. n7 Although the expressed intent of Congress in enacting section 526 and related provisions was to improve the conduct of professionals and others who assist consumer debtors with their bankruptcy cases, n8 each of these definitions contain imprecise language that create problems in application. For example, the definition of assisted person in section 101(3) could be applied to most consumer debtors, even though most consumer debtors do not actually use the services of traditional debt relief agencies. Moreover, section 101(3) does not specify that the assisted person be a debtor in bankruptcy even though sections 526, 527 and 528 are ostensibly designed to protect consumer debtors in bankruptcy cases. Similarly, the definition of bankruptcy assistance broadly encompasses advice or representation that has no connection with a case where the assisted person is the debtor. The term bankruptcy assistance also could cover advice or representation that has no connection with a consumer bankruptcy case.

Additionally, the definition of debt relief agency could apply to many attorneys who represent individual landlords, small businesses, consumer creditors, and non-debtor spouses as creditors in bankruptcy cases. Moreover, because person is defined under the Bankruptcy Code to include partnerships and corporations, n9 a law firm that represents those types of clients could also be construed as a debt relief agency.

Overall, the inexact language in these definitions could sweep more cases into the reach of sections 526, 527 and 528 than Congress probably intended. Policy arguments and legislative history could be advanced in support of a narrow application of these terms.

While the definitions appear overinclusive, the specified exclusions in section 101(12A) contain interpretive ambiguities and other problems. For example, section 101(12A) specifically excludes officers, employees, directors or agents of debt relief agencies or petition preparers. This arguably implies that an attorney employed by a professional corporation (of which the attorney is an officer) that provides bankruptcy assistance can be excluded from the definition of debt relief agency when that same attorney's law firm would qualify. Such an exclusion could result in individual officers of thinly capitalized firms unfairly escaping liability under the section. Moreover, the exclusion for certain nonprofit agencies raises the possibility of strategic manipulation by for-profit debt relief firms masquerading as nonprofit exempt organizations. Such outcomes would seem plainly inconsistent with the apparent consumer protection rationale of these provisions.

Specific Restrictions on Debt Relief Agencies; § 526(a)

Section 526(a) places certain restrictions on the activities of debt relief agencies. Paragraph (1) provides that a debt relief agency shall not fail to perform any service that it informed an assisted person or prospective assisted person that it would provide in connection with a bankruptcy case or proceeding. Paragraph (2) provides that a debt relief agency shall not make any statement, or counsel or advise any assisted person or prospective assisted person to make any statement in a filed document in a bankruptcy case or proceeding, that is untrue and misleading or, upon the exercise of reasonable care, should have been known by the agency to be untrue or misleading. Paragraph (3) makes it unlawful for a debt relief agency to misrepresent to any assisted person or prospective assisted person, directly or indirectly, affirmatively or by material omission, the services the agency will provide, or the benefits and risks of becoming a debtor in a case under the Bankruptcy Code. Paragraph (4) also prohibits debt relief agencies from advising an assisted person or prospective assisted person to incur more debt in contemplation of filing a bankruptcy case or to pay an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer ⁿ¹⁰ for services performed as part of preparing for or representing a debtor in a case under the Code.

Several aspects of section 526(a) merit discussion. First, the definition of the term prospective assisted person is unclear. Although the term is used several times throughout this section, the term is not defined elsewhere in this section or elsewhere in the Bankruptcy Code. It will be left up to the courts to define the meaning of the term. In the meantime, the lack of a definition raises an issue. When does a person cease being a prospective assisted person and become an assisted person? This is an important question because the remedial portions of section 526 appear to apply only to assisted persons and not to prospective assisted persons. ⁿ¹¹ Second, section 526(a) is largely redundant because the law of contract, laws regulating attorney conduct, and common law and statutory prohibitions against fraud already render these activities illegal. It is not clear that the remedial provisions of section 526 contain remedies that would not otherwise be available under existing statutory and common law.

Another problem with section 526(a) is that it contains inconsistent language. For example, section 526(a)(2) uses the phrases untrue and misleading and untrue or misleading in the same sentence with no apparent explanation for the difference in terminology. Additionally, section 526(a) is legally inconsistent with section 526(c)(2). Section 526(a) imposes a form of strict liability on violators, while section 526(c)(2) requires a showing of negligent or intentional misconduct. This leaves open the possibility that an assisted person who could not establish negligence or intentional conduct could be left without a remedy under this section.

Waiver; § 526(b)

Section 526(b) provides that any waiver by an assisted person of any right or protection under section 526 shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or by any other person, but that such a waiver may be enforced against a debt relief agency.

The first phrase of section 526(b) (Any waiver by any assisted person of any protection or right provided under this section shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or any other person.) represents good policy. Fairness and justice dictate that waivers should not be routinely enforced against consumer debtors who could lack the necessary sophistication and bargaining power to intentionally or voluntarily relinquish their rights. However, the second phrase of section 526(b) (but may be enforced against a debt relief agency) arguably rests on a misunderstanding of the basic concept of waiver and of its typical use. Conceptually, a waiver consists of the intentional or voluntary surrender of a known right or protection. In operation, waivers are typically asserted against a debtor in an effort by the other party to secure a legal advantage under circumstances where the other party argues that the debtor has relinquished a right or protection. For this reason, it is difficult to imagine a scenario in which an assisted person would affirmatively seek to enforce a waiver of its rights to protection against a debt relief agency. As a result, the practical impact of the second clause seems minimal.

Liability of Debt Relief Agencies; § 526(c)

Contract for Bankruptcy Assistance Void and Unenforceable. Section 526(c)(1) renders a contract for bankruptcy assistance between a debt relief agency and an assisted person void if the contract is not in compliance with the material requirements of sections 526, 527 and 528. Section 526(c)(1) also provides that such a contract may not be enforced by any federal or state court or by any other person, other than the assisted person.

By its clear terms, section 526 incorporates the material requirements of sections 527 and 528. Section 527 imposes on debt relief agencies certain duties with respect to disclosure and notification. n12 Section 528 governs retainer agreements between debt relief agencies and assisted persons and dictates requirements for selected advertising activities by debt relief agencies. n13 It is not clear what bearing compliance with section 526 or 528 should have on the enforceability of the contract. Neither of those sections governs, directly or indirectly, the contract between the debt relief agency and the assisted person. Subsections 527(a)(1) and (2) are the only sections within these provisions that related directly to the formation of the contract.

Additionally, the meaning of the term material requirements is uncertain in the context of section 526(c)(1). Neither the section nor the Bankruptcy Code defines the term material requirements for purposes of this section. Presumably, the term refers to a requirement that is so substantial and important as to influence the essential validity and enforceability of the contract pursuant to section 526 and related provisions. Courts will have to clarify the meaning of the term under section 526(c)(1).

Section 526(c)(1) creates an anomaly. It provides that a contract not in compliance with sections 526, 527 and 528 is void and cannot be enforced by anyone other than the assisted person. However, it is unclear how a contract that is rendered void by the operation of section 526(c)(1) can be enforced by the assisted person. By its very nature, the contract is null and has no legal force. One possible resolution of this problem would be for the assisted person to seek a declaratory judgment reinstating the legal validity of the contract solely for the purpose of enforcing the contract against the debt relief agency but for no other purpose.

Monetary Liability. Section 526(c)(2) authorizes courts to award to an assisted person (1) the amount of any fees or charges that the debt relief agency received in connection with providing bankruptcy assistance to the assisted person, (2) actual damages and (3) reasonable attorney's fees and costs if the agency is found, after notice and a hearing, to have committed any of the acts or omissions listed in subsection 526(c)(2)(A), (B) or (C).

The import of section 526(c)(2) is additive. It supplements monetary penalties already available under federal and state law, although it must be stressed that the imposition of liability under section 526(c)(2) requires a showing of negligence or intentional conduct. The courts will need to determine what conduct constitutes negligence or intentional acts or omissions under the section.

Intentional or Negligent Failure to Comply with Bankruptcy Code Sections 526, 527 and 528. Section 526(c)(2)(A) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if the agency intentionally or negligently fails to comply with any provision of section 526, 527 or 528 in a case or proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code for an assisted person. Section 526(c)(2)(A), by its clear terms, incorporates sections 527 and 528 of the Code. n14

Provision of Bankruptcy Assistance Where Case or Proceeding Is Dismissed or Converted Due to Intentional or Negligent Failure to File Required Documents. Section 526(c)(2)(B) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if it provides bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in a case or proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code that is dismissed or converted to a case under another chapter of the Code because of the agency's intentional or negligent failure to file any required document. The section specifically includes documents required under section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code. n15

It is important to note that section 526(c)(2)(B) specifically requires a showing of causation. The debt relief agency will not be liable under this section unless the movant can show that the case was converted or dismissed because of the agency's act or omission. If a case is dismissed for a reasons unrelated to its obligations to file required documents, the debt relief agency should not be liable under this section.

The section specifically includes documents required under section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code, but the section does not exclude other required documents. Thus, section 526(c)(2)(B) presumably applies to any other required document under the Bankruptcy Code.

Intentional or Negligent Disregard of Bankruptcy Code or of Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Section 526(c)(2)(C) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if it intentionally or negligently disregards the material requirements of the Bankruptcy Code or the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure that are applicable to the agency.

This section incorporates into section 526 the material requirements of the Bankruptcy Code and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Neither this section nor the Bankruptcy Code defines the term material requirements pursuant to this section. An argument could be advanced that in this context, material requirement means a requirement that is so substantial and important as to influence the essential nature or ultimate outcome of the bankruptcy case. Judicial clarification will be necessary in order to sensibly determine liability under this section.

Enforcement Action by Chief Law Enforcement Officer of a State or Other State Officials or Agencies.

Section 526(c)(3) provides, in addition to other state law remedies, the chief law enforcement officer of a state, or any official or agency designated by a state, who has reason to believe that any person has violated or is violating section 526 may (1) bring an action to enjoin the violation, (2) bring an action on behalf of its residents to recover actual damages of assisted persons arising from the violation, including any liability under section 526(c)(2) and (3) costs of the action and reasonable attorney's fees in the case of a successful action for an injunction or actual damages under subsection 526(c)(3)(A) or (B).

Concurrent Jurisdiction of District Courts. Section 526(c)(4) specifies that district courts of the United States for districts located in the state have concurrent jurisdiction over any action for an injunction or actual damages under section 526(c)(3)(A) or (B).

Intentional Violations. Section 526(c)(5) provides that if a court finds that a person intentionally violated section 526 or engaged in a clear and persistent pattern or practice of violating the section, the court may enjoin the violation or impose an appropriate civil penalty against the violator. The court can take this action on its own motion or on the motion of the United States trustee or the debtor. This section applies notwithstanding any other provision of federal law and is in addition to any other remedy under federal or state law.

Section 526(c)(5) does not preempt any other remedies available under federal and state law because the last phrase specifically states that this section is in addition to remedies available under federal or state law. However, the opening phrase of section 526(c)(5) appears to preempt any other provision of federal law that would preclude a remedy. The ultimate impact of the opening phrase is uncertain because the law of preemption in bankruptcy is complex and controversial. n16 Outcomes in specific cases are difficult to predict.

Relation to Other Laws; § 526(d)

State Law. Section 526(d)(1) makes clear that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall annul, alter, affect or exempt any person subject to those sections from complying with the law of any state, except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. This section invites litigation over several questions. First, what constitutes an inconsistent law under section 526(d)? Second, what degree of inconsistency is required to be shown? Who has the burden of proof on these issues? Finally, if such an inconsistency exists, then to what extent does that inconsistency annul or create exemptions from compliance with sections 526, 527 and 528? All of these issues await judicial interpretation.

State or Federal Authority or Ability to Determine and Enforce Qualifications for the Practice of Law.

Section 526(d)(2)(A) provides that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a state, subdivision or instrumentality to determine and enforce the qualifications for the practice of law under the laws of that state. Section 526(d)(2)(B) provides that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall be deemed to limit or curtail the ability of a federal court to determine and enforce the qualifications for the practice of law before that court.

Section 526(d) expressly incorporates sections 527 and 528 of the Bankruptcy Code.ⁿ¹⁷ Although section 526(d) is intended to mitigate conflicts between its provisions and state regulations regarding the practice of law, such conflicts are inevitable and will need to be adjudicated by courts. For example, state regulations on lawyer advertising may be affected and even preempted, by section 528(a)(3), section 528(a)(4), and section 528(b) all of which mandate the use of certain statements and descriptions in specified advertisements of bankruptcy assistance services directed to the general public.

Additionally, these sections may affect state regulation of the unauthorized practice of law by bankruptcy petition preparers.

For a complete discussion of Code section 526, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 526 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 227(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ⁿ²

2. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (2005).

ⁿ³

3. 11 U.S.C. § 101(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount is $150,000. For adjustment of the dollar amount, see 11 U.S.C. § 104(b); Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 101(4A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.04A (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 101(12A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 101(12A) excludes officers, directors, employees or agents of a person who provides assistance or of a bankruptcy petition preparer, certain non-profit organizations, creditors of assisted persons to the extent they are assisting in debt restructuring, specified depository institutions, and an author, publisher, distributor, or seller of works subject to copyright protection. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1226(a)(1)(3) (2005).

n8

8. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (2005).

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 101(41).

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 110.

n11

11. See 11 U.S.C. § 526(b)(c).

n12

12. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 527 (Matthew Bender).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 528 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, chs. 527 and 528 (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 521; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. See Sherwood Partners, Inc. v. Lycos, Inc., 394 F.3d 1198, 1203 (9th Cir. 2005) (holding that a preference action brought under state law by an assignee for the benefit of creditors is preempted by the Bankruptcy Code); see also Pacific Gas & Elec. v. California Dep't of Toxic Substances Control, 350 F.3d 932, 949, 51 C.B.C.2d 445 (9th Cir. 2003) (holding that in specifying that all chapter 11 plans must provide adequate means for their implementation notwithstanding any otherwise applicable nonbankruptcy law, Congress expressly preempted other nonbankruptcy law, but only to the extent that the nonbankruptcy law in question was one relating to financial condition).

n17

17. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 527 and ch. 528 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

136 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Restrictions on Debt Relief Agencies

2008 Emerging Issues 1345

Collier on Restrictions on Debt Relief Agencies

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 526 of the Bankruptcy Code is new with the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. The section places certain restrictions on the activities of debt relief agencies. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the restrictions on "debt relief agencies," including topics such as the definition of a "debt relief agency," waiver under section 526(b), and liability of debt relief agencies.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview of Code Section 526

Section 526 of the Bankruptcy Code is new with the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act"). n1 The stated intent of Congress in enacting section 526 and related provisions was to strengthen professionalism standards for attorneys and others who assist consumer debtors with their bankruptcy cases. n2 The section places certain restrictions on the activities of debt relief agencies. In addition, section 526 specifies that any waiver by an assisted person of any right or protection under section 526 shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or by any other person, but that such a waiver may be enforced against a debt relief agency. Further, this section voids a contract for bankruptcy assistance between a debt relief agency and an assisted person if the contract is not in compliance with the material requirements of sections 526, 527 or 528. In addition, section 526 renders such contracts unenforceable by any federal or state court or by any other person other than the assisted person.

Section 526 also imposes monetary liability on debt relief agencies under specified circumstances. In addition to other state law remedies, the section authorizes certain state officials to bring enforcement actions to enjoin the violation and recover actual damages, costs and reasonable attorney's fees. The section provides that if a court finds that a person intentionally violated the section or engaged in a clear and persistent pattern or practice of violating the section, the court may enjoin the violation or impose an appropriate civil penalty on the violator.

Section 526 makes clear that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not annul, alter, affect or exempt any person from complying with the law of any state, except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. Section 526 provides that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a state to determine and enforce qualifications for the practice of law in that state.

Finally, section 526 specifies that section 526, 527 or 528 shall not be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a federal court to determine and enforce qualifications for the practice of law before that court.

Assisted Person Defined. An assisted person is defined in the Code by section 101 as: any person whose debts consist primarily of consumer debts and the value of whose non-exempt property is less than $164,250. n3

Bankruptcy Assistance Defined. The term bankruptcy assistance is defined in the Code by section 101 as: any goods or services sold or otherwise provided to an assisted person with the express or implied purpose of providing information, advice, counsel, document preparation, or filing, or attendance at a creditors' meeting or appearing in a case or proceeding on behalf of another or providing legal representation with respect to a case or proceeding under this title. n4

Debt Relief Agency Defined. The term debt relief agency is defined in the Code by section 101 as any person who provides any bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, or who is a bankruptcy petition preparer under section 110. n5 Section 101 specifically excludes several persons and entities from the definition of debt relief agency. n6

Central to any application of section 526 is the definition of three terms: assisted person, bankruptcy assistance and debt relief agency. These terms are new with the passage of the 2005 Act. n7 Although the expressed intent of Congress in enacting section 526 and related provisions was to improve the conduct of professionals and others who assist consumer debtors with their bankruptcy cases, n8 each of these definitions contain imprecise language that create problems in application. For example, the definition of assisted person in section 101(3) could be applied to most consumer debtors, even though most consumer debtors do not actually use the services of traditional debt relief agencies. Moreover, section 101(3) does not specify that the assisted person be a debtor in bankruptcy even though sections 526, 527 and 528 are ostensibly designed to protect consumer debtors in bankruptcy cases. Similarly, the definition of bankruptcy assistance broadly encompasses advice or representation that has no connection with a case where the assisted person is the debtor. The term bankruptcy assistance also could cover advice or representation that has no connection with a consumer bankruptcy case.

Additionally, the definition of debt relief agency could apply to many attorneys who represent individual landlords, small businesses, consumer creditors, and non-debtor spouses as creditors in bankruptcy cases. Moreover, because person is defined under the Bankruptcy Code to include partnerships and corporations, n9 a law firm that represents those types of clients could also be construed as a debt relief agency.

Overall, the inexact language in these definitions could sweep more cases into the reach of sections 526, 527 and 528 than Congress probably intended. Policy arguments and legislative history could be advanced in support of a narrow application of these terms.

While the definitions appear overinclusive, the specified exclusions in section 101(12A) contain interpretive ambiguities and other problems. For example, section 101(12A) specifically excludes officers, employees, directors or agents of debt relief agencies or petition preparers. This arguably implies that an attorney employed by a professional corporation (of which the attorney is an officer) that provides bankruptcy assistance can be excluded from the definition of debt relief agency when that same attorney's law firm would qualify. Such an exclusion could result in individual officers of thinly capitalized firms unfairly escaping liability under the section. Moreover, the exclusion for certain nonprofit agencies raises the possibility of strategic manipulation by for-profit debt relief firms masquerading as nonprofit exempt organizations. Such outcomes would seem plainly inconsistent with the apparent consumer protection rationale of these provisions.

Specific Restrictions on Debt Relief Agencies; § 526(a)

Section 526(a) places certain restrictions on the activities of debt relief agencies. Paragraph (1) provides that a debt relief agency shall not fail to perform any service that it informed an assisted person or prospective assisted person that it would provide in connection with a bankruptcy case or proceeding. Paragraph (2) provides that a debt relief agency shall not make any statement, or counsel or advise any assisted person or prospective assisted person to make any statement in a filed document in a bankruptcy case or proceeding, that is untrue and misleading or, upon the exercise of reasonable care, should have been known by the agency to be untrue or misleading. Paragraph (3) makes it unlawful for a debt relief agency to misrepresent to any assisted person or prospective assisted person, directly or indirectly, affirmatively or by material omission, the services the agency will provide, or the benefits and risks of becoming a debtor in a case under the Bankruptcy Code. Paragraph (4) also prohibits debt relief agencies from advising an assisted person or prospective assisted person to incur more debt in contemplation of filing a bankruptcy case or to pay an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer ⁿ¹⁰ for services performed as part of preparing for or representing a debtor in a case under the Code.

Several aspects of section 526(a) merit discussion. First, the definition of the term prospective assisted person is unclear. Although the term is used several times throughout this section, the term is not defined elsewhere in this section or elsewhere in the Bankruptcy Code. It will be left up to the courts to define the meaning of the term. In the meantime, the lack of a definition raises an issue. When does a person cease being a prospective assisted person and become an assisted person? This is an important question because the remedial portions of section 526 appear to apply only to assisted persons and not to prospective assisted persons. ⁿ¹¹ Second, section 526(a) is largely redundant because the law of contract, laws regulating attorney conduct, and common law and statutory prohibitions against fraud already render these activities illegal. It is not clear that the remedial provisions of section 526 contain remedies that would not otherwise be available under existing statutory and common law.

Another problem with section 526(a) is that it contains inconsistent language. For example, section 526(a)(2) uses the phrases untrue and misleading and untrue or misleading in the same sentence with no apparent explanation for the difference in terminology. Additionally, section 526(a) is legally inconsistent with section 526(c)(2). Section 526(a) imposes a form of strict liability on violators, while section 526(c)(2) requires a showing of negligent or intentional misconduct. This leaves open the possibility that an assisted person who could not establish negligence or intentional conduct could be left without a remedy under this section.

Waiver; § 526(b)

Section 526(b) provides that any waiver by an assisted person of any right or protection under section 526 shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or by any other person, but that such a waiver may be enforced against a debt relief agency.

The first phrase of section 526(b) (Any waiver by any assisted person of any protection or right provided under this section shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any federal or state court or any other person.) represents good policy. Fairness and justice dictate that waivers should not be routinely enforced against consumer debtors who could lack the necessary sophistication and bargaining power to intentionally or voluntarily relinquish their rights. However, the second phrase of section 526(b) (but may be enforced against a debt relief agency) arguably rests on a misunderstanding of the basic concept of waiver and of its typical use. Conceptually, a waiver consists of the intentional or voluntary surrender of a known right or protection. In operation, waivers are typically asserted against a debtor in an effort by the other party to secure a legal advantage under circumstances where the other party argues that the debtor has relinquished a right or protection. For this reason, it is difficult to imagine a scenario in which an assisted person would affirmatively seek to enforce a waiver of its rights to protection against a debt relief agency. As a result, the practical impact of the second clause seems minimal.

Liability of Debt Relief Agencies; § 526(c)

Contract for Bankruptcy Assistance Void and Unenforceable. Section 526(c)(1) renders a contract for bankruptcy assistance between a debt relief agency and an assisted person void if the contract is not in compliance with the material requirements of sections 526, 527 and 528. Section 526(c)(1) also provides that such a contract may not be enforced by any federal or state court or by any other person, other than the assisted person.

By its clear terms, section 526 incorporates the material requirements of sections 527 and 528. Section 527 imposes on debt relief agencies certain duties with respect to disclosure and notification. n12 Section 528 governs retainer agreements between debt relief agencies and assisted persons and dictates requirements for selected advertising activities by debt relief agencies. n13 It is not clear what bearing compliance with section 526 or 528 should have on the enforceability of the contract. Neither of those sections governs, directly or indirectly, the contract between the debt relief agency and the assisted person. Subsections 527(a)(1) and (2) are the only sections within these provisions that related directly to the formation of the contract.

Additionally, the meaning of the term material requirements is uncertain in the context of section 526(c)(1). Neither the section nor the Bankruptcy Code defines the term material requirements for purposes of this section. Presumably, the term refers to a requirement that is so substantial and important as to influence the essential validity and enforceability of the contract pursuant to section 526 and related provisions. Courts will have to clarify the meaning of the term under section 526(c)(1).

Section 526(c)(1) creates an anomaly. It provides that a contract not in compliance with sections 526, 527 and 528 is void and cannot be enforced by anyone other than the assisted person. However, it is unclear how a contract that is rendered void by the operation of section 526(c)(1) can be enforced by the assisted person. By its very nature, the contract is null and has no legal force. One possible resolution of this problem would be for the assisted person to seek a declaratory judgment reinstating the legal validity of the contract solely for the purpose of enforcing the contract against the debt relief agency but for no other purpose.

Monetary Liability. Section 526(c)(2) authorizes courts to award to an assisted person (1) the amount of any fees or charges that the debt relief agency received in connection with providing bankruptcy assistance to the assisted person, (2) actual damages and (3) reasonable attorney's fees and costs if the agency is found, after notice and a hearing, to have committed any of the acts or omissions listed in subsection 526(c)(2)(A), (B) or (C).

The import of section 526(c)(2) is additive. It supplements monetary penalties already available under federal and state law, although it must be stressed that the imposition of liability under section 526(c)(2) requires a showing of negligence or intentional conduct. The courts will need to determine what conduct constitutes negligence or intentional acts or omissions under the section.

Intentional or Negligent Failure to Comply with Bankruptcy Code Sections 526, 527 and 528. Section 526(c)(2)(A) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if the agency intentionally or negligently fails to comply with any provision of section 526, 527 or 528 in a case or proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code for an assisted person. Section 526(c)(2)(A), by its clear terms, incorporates sections 527 and 528 of the Code. n14

Provision of Bankruptcy Assistance Where Case or Proceeding Is Dismissed or Converted Due to Intentional or Negligent Failure to File Required Documents. Section 526(c)(2)(B) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if it provides bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in a case or proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code that is dismissed or converted to a case under another chapter of the Code because of the agency's intentional or negligent failure to file any required document. The section specifically includes documents required under section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code. n15

It is important to note that section 526(c)(2)(B) specifically requires a showing of causation. The debt relief agency will not be liable under this section unless the movant can show that the case was converted or dismissed because of the agency's act or omission. If a case is dismissed for a reasons unrelated to its obligations to file required documents, the debt relief agency should not be liable under this section.

The section specifically includes documents required under section 521 of the Bankruptcy Code, but the section does not exclude other required documents. Thus, section 526(c)(2)(B) presumably applies to any other required document under the Bankruptcy Code.

Intentional or Negligent Disregard of Bankruptcy Code or of Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Section 526(c)(2)(C) imposes liability on a debt relief agency if it intentionally or negligently disregards the material requirements of the Bankruptcy Code or the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure that are applicable to the agency.

This section incorporates into section 526 the material requirements of the Bankruptcy Code and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Neither this section nor the Bankruptcy Code defines the term material requirements pursuant to this section. An argument could be advanced that in this context, material requirement means a requirement that is so substantial and important as to influence the essential nature or ultimate outcome of the bankruptcy case. Judicial clarification will be necessary in order to sensibly determine liability under this section.

Enforcement Action by Chief Law Enforcement Officer of a State or Other State Officials or Agencies.

Section 526(c)(3) provides, in addition to other state law remedies, the chief law enforcement officer of a state, or any official or agency designated by a state, who has reason to believe that any person has violated or is violating section 526 may (1) bring an action to enjoin the violation, (2) bring an action on behalf of its residents to recover actual damages of assisted persons arising from the violation, including any liability under section 526(c)(2) and (3) costs of the action and reasonable attorney's fees in the case of a successful action for an injunction or actual damages under subsection 526(c)(3)(A) or (B).

Concurrent Jurisdiction of District Courts. Section 526(c)(4) specifies that district courts of the United States for districts located in the state have concurrent jurisdiction over any action for an injunction or actual damages under section 526(c)(3)(A) or (B).

Intentional Violations. Section 526(c)(5) provides that if a court finds that a person intentionally violated section 526 or engaged in a clear and persistent pattern or practice of violating the section, the court may enjoin the violation or impose an appropriate civil penalty against the violator. The court can take this action on its own motion or on the motion of the United States trustee or the debtor. This section applies notwithstanding any other provision of federal law and is in addition to any other remedy under federal or state law.

Section 526(c)(5) does not preempt any other remedies available under federal and state law because the last phrase specifically states that this section is in addition to remedies available under federal or state law. However, the opening phrase of section 526(c)(5) appears to preempt any other provision of federal law that would preclude a remedy. The ultimate impact of the opening phrase is uncertain because the law of preemption in bankruptcy is complex and controversial. n16 Outcomes in specific cases are difficult to predict.

Relation to Other Laws; § 526(d)

State Law. Section 526(d)(1) makes clear that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall annul, alter, affect or exempt any person subject to those sections from complying with the law of any state, except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. This section invites litigation over several questions. First, what constitutes an inconsistent law under section 526(d)? Second, what degree of inconsistency is required to be shown? Who has the burden of proof on these issues? Finally, if such an inconsistency exists, then to what extent does that inconsistency annul or create exemptions from compliance with sections 526, 527 and 528? All of these issues await judicial interpretation.

State or Federal Authority or Ability to Determine and Enforce Qualifications for the Practice of Law.

Section 526(d)(2)(A) provides that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall be deemed to limit or curtail the authority or ability of a state, subdivision or instrumentality to determine and enforce the qualifications for the practice of law under the laws of that state. Section 526(d)(2)(B) provides that no provision of section 526, 527 or 528 shall be deemed to limit or curtail the ability of a federal court to determine and enforce the qualifications for the practice of law before that court.

Section 526(d) expressly incorporates sections 527 and 528 of the Bankruptcy Code. n17 Although section 526(d) is intended to mitigate conflicts between its provisions and state regulations regarding the practice of law, such conflicts are inevitable and will need to be adjudicated by courts. For example, state regulations on lawyer advertising may be affected and even preempted, by section 528(a)(3), section 528(a)(4), and section 528(b) all of which mandate the use of certain statements and descriptions in specified advertisements of bankruptcy assistance services directed to the general public.

Additionally, these sections may affect state regulation of the unauthorized practice of law by bankruptcy petition preparers.

For a complete discussion of Code section 526, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 526 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 227(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (2005).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 101(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount is $150,000. For adjustment of the dollar amount, see 11 U.S.C. § 104(b); Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 101(4A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.04A (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 101(12A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 226(a)(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 101(12A) excludes officers, directors, employees or agents of a person who provides assistance or of a bankruptcy petition preparer, certain non-profit organizations, creditors of assisted persons to the extent they are assisting in debt restructuring, specified depository institutions, and an author, publisher, distributor, or seller of works subject to copyright protection. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12A (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1226(a)(1)(3) (2005).

n8

8. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (2005).

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 101(41).

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 110.

n11

11. See 11 U.S.C. § 526(b)(c).

n12

12. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 527 (Matthew Bender).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 528 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, chs. 527 and 528 (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 521; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. See Sherwood Partners, Inc. v. Lycos, Inc., 394 F.3d 1198, 1203 (9th Cir. 2005) (holding that a preference action brought under state law by an assignee for the benefit of creditors is preempted by the Bankruptcy Code); see also Pacific Gas & Elec. v. California Dep't of Toxic Substances Control, 350 F.3d 932, 949, 51 C.B.C.2d 445 (9th Cir. 2003) (holding that in specifying that all chapter 11 plans must provide adequate means for their implementation notwithstanding any otherwise applicable nonbankruptcy law, Congress expressly preempted other nonbankruptcy law, but only to the extent that the nonbankruptcy law in question was one relating to financial condition).

n17

17. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 527 and ch. 528 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

137 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Attorney Certifications under Section 707

2008 Emerging Issues 1347

Collier on Attorney Certifications under Section 707

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section(b)(4)(C) & (D) of the Bankruptcy Code addresses the signature of an attorney on a court document as certification that the attorney has reasonably investigated the facts and is acting in good faith. This Emerging Issues Analysis elaborates on the requirement of "reasonable investigation," and the fact that it applies to all motions and pleadings filed in chapter 7 cases but does not apply to schedules or statements.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Certification Concerning Petition, Pleading or Motion. Section 707(b)(4)(C) of the Bankruptcy Code, added in 2005, n1 provides that the signature of an attorney on a petition, pleading, or written motion is a certification that the attorney has performed a reasonable investigation into the circumstances giving rise to petition, pleading, or written motion; has determined that it is well grounded in fact; and has determined that it is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; and does not constitute an abuse under paragraph (707)(b)(1). This provision applies to all attorneys, not just those representing debtors, and is applicable to all motions and pleadings filed in chapter 7 cases. n2 For example, it would apply to frivolous motions for relief from the automatic stay filed in chapter 7 cases, and would require a reasonable investigation by the attorney of amounts asserted in such motions. On the other hand, the certification does not apply to schedules or statements.

The language of this provision, except for the reference to abuse under section 707(b)(1), is quite similar to the former language of Rule 9011 and it is not clear that it adds anything to current Rule 9011. One difference is the use of the phrase reasonable investigation rather than reasonable inquiry. However, the pre-existing text of both the Moore's Federal Practice discussion of Rule 11 and this treatise's discussion of Rule 9011 use the words inquiry and investigation interchangeably. n3 In discussing the duty to investigate, Moore states: An attorney may rely on objectively reasonable representations of his or her client. n4 It elaborates that [a]ll available documents that are relevant to the case should be examined. n5 This would certainly include all documents in the possession of the client, but does not appear to require an attorney to obtain documents that are not easily accessible. In view of the similarities to Rule 9011, it is unlikely that courts will draw a distinction between this certification and Rule 9011. They will, at most, use it as additional ammunition to sanction bad conduct that would have been punishable in any event.

This provision also provides that an attorney signing a petition certifies that the attorney has determined it is not an abuse under section 707(b)(1). Based on its placement in the context of the attorney's good faith determination with respect to other Rule 9011-like conclusions, courts are likely to interpret this to mean a good faith determination after reasonable inquiry under the circumstances. The provision does not say the attorney certifies that the petition is not an abuse, but only that the attorney determined that it was not an abuse. In any event, no specific remedies are provided for violations of this provision, which presumably means Rule 9011 and its standards would apply as they do to any other paper filed with the court.

Certification Concerning Schedules. Section 707(b)(4)(D) provides that the signature of the attorney for the debtor on the petition also certifies that the attorney has no knowledge, after an inquiry, that the schedules are incorrect. This is a relatively low standard that every debtor should meet; a violation requires actual knowledge, not just a belief or suspicion, that the schedules are inaccurate. It requires an inquiry, which should be no greater than for other pleadings, perhaps less, since it does not use the word reasonable.

Arguably, this more specific, and less stringent, standard for schedules overrides any other standard that now exists in the rules, especially since it was not clear whether Rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure previously applied due to the exclusion of schedules and statements in Rule 9011(a).

Moreover, another provision of the 2005 legislation, expresses a sense of Congress that Rule 9011 should be amended to provide that all papers (including schedules) submitted by debtors or attorneys for debtors be submitted only after reasonable inquiry to verify that information is well-grounded in fact and warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for extension, modification or reversal of existing law. n6 This sense of Congress also adds to the arguments that the certifications under current Rule 9011 do not apply to the schedules.

As a practical matter, as with the other new standards, courts are unlikely to look to the nuances of the difference in language between section 707(b)(4)(D) and Rule 9011. They will simply continue to penalize those they believe to be engaged in seriously deficient conduct.

For further discussion of Code section 707, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2 2. 11 U.S.C. § 103(b).

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 9011.04[2] (Matthew Bender); 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.11[2] (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

n4

4. 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.11[2] (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 2 Moore's Federal Practice, § 11.11[2] (3d ed. Matthew Bender) (emphasis added).

n6

6. Pub. L. 109-8, § 319 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

138 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Election of Ch 11 Trustee

2008 Emerging Issues 1348

Collier on Election of Ch 11 Trustee

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1104(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that after the appointment of a trustee by the court, the creditors may elect the trustee except in railroad reorganization cases. This Emerging Issues Analysis explains who may request an election of a trustee; the time within which a request must be made; the notice required; and the voting process.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1104(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that after the court orders the appointment of a trustee, the creditors may elect the trustee except in railroad reorganization cases. n1 This provision was added to section 1104 by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n2 which also redesignated former subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d). Before the amendment, appointment by the United States trustee was the sole means of selecting a trustee.

Under the former Bankruptcy Act, creditors did not elect trustees in reorganization cases, but they did elect members of the creditors' committee. These elections often turned into contests between attorneys interested in placing their own candidates on the committee so that the attorney could be retained as counsel. This was one of the more abused aspects of the Bankruptcy Act. It would be unfortunate if creditors or their attorneys sought similar control over trustee elections primarily to obtain retentions.

Election of a trustee is available upon the request of a party in interest made to the United States trustee. This request must be made within 30 days after the court orders the appointment of a trustee. If no party in interest requests the election of a trustee, then the United States trustee must appoint a trustee if it has not already done so.

Who May Request an Election of a Trustee. A request for a meeting of creditors to elect a trustee must be in writing, filed with the court, and transmitted to the United States trustee. n3 The clerk (or another person directed by the court) is required to give 20 days' notice of the meeting to the debtor, all creditors, and indenture trustees. n4 The Rules do not, however, require notice of the meeting to equity security holders. n5 Once the request is made, the United States trustee must convene and preside at the meeting. n6 At the meeting, the election is conducted the same as an election for a trustee under chapter 7. n7

The request for meeting of creditors may be made by a party in interest. That term is not defined. It should include a creditor, whether holding a secured or unsecured claim, and a committee of creditors. Because equity security holders are not required to be given notice of the election meeting and are not entitled to vote at the meeting, it does not seem that an equity security holder or a committee of equity security holders should be included as parties in interest for the purposes of requesting an election under section 1104(b). They do not have a direct interest in the manner of selection of a trustee, even though they have a serious interest in whether the court should order a trustee under section 1104(a).

Under section 307, the United States trustee may raise and may appear and be heard on any issue in the case. Section 105(a) authorizes the bankruptcy court to raise certain matters without request of a party in interest. Nevertheless, it would seem that these provisions do not permit the request for a meeting of creditors to be made by either the United States trustee or the court. The provision for election of a trustee was added to section 1104 to enable creditors to take control of a significant event in the case. If creditors do not choose to do so, then the United States trustee will appoint the trustee. A request by either the United States trustee or the court does not necessarily contribute to creditor control where no creditor has an interest in requesting an election.

Moreover, the court's action in requesting the election of a trustee does not fit squarely within the language of section 105 because, literally, no issue is raised by requesting an election. There is no dispute; all that section 1104(b) requires is a timely request; no one, neither the court nor the United States trustee, need decide any question of fact or issue of law. Also, the court's action is not necessary to enforce or implement any order of the court; the court has ordered the appointment of a trustee but the appointment can be carried out by the United States trustee pursuant to section 1104(d).

Time Within Which a Request Must Be Made. The request for an election must be made not later than 30 days after the court orders the appointment of a trustee under section 1104(a). The 30-day period should be considered as running from the effective date of the court order, since that is the first date on which a trustee might be appointed.

There is no provision in section 1104(b) for shortening or extending the 30-day period. This suggests that the 30-day period should be considered unalterable. In view of the ease with which a party in interest may request an election, there would seem to be little reason to extend the period during which a request may be made.

However, shortening of the 30-day period would seem contrary to the policy of the subsection to permit creditors a reasonable opportunity to request the election of a trustee, even though one can imagine circumstances in which the parties might prefer a shortening. Because the possibility of an election request exists until the end of the period, it seems that the United States trustee could await the end of the 30-day period before making an appointment. Waiting might interfere with the conduct of the case. If an appointment were not made, the case could be rudderless. If an appointment were made during that period, the appointee could not be assured that she would remain the trustee, because there could still be a request for an election. Thus, even in cases in which there is an immediate need for the appointment of a trustee, the 30-day period during which an election may be requested should not prevent appointment of an interim trustee to protect the estate, and the statute did not expressly prevent it.

To address the potential problem of an appointment followed by an election request, the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 amended section 1104(b) to deal with the situation in which the United States trustee had appointed a trustee under subsection (d) during the 30-day period in which a creditor makes an election request, thus validating the practice under which the United States trustee appoints a trustee during that period. n8 Section 1104(b)(2)(B) provides that if creditors elect a trustee under subsection (b)(1), the service of a trustee appointed under subsection (d) terminates. Although the statute does not specify, it would not make sense for the service to terminate until the elected trustee has been approved by the court and qualifies under section 322. Otherwise, there could be a gap in service, which could be lengthy if there is a problem with either approval or qualification. The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, which make explicit what the statute implies--the appointment of a trustee during the 30-day period--also deals with this issue. Rule Rule 2007.1(b)(1), which deals with appointment of a trustee and the request for a meeting of creditors for an election, provides: Pending court approval of the person elected, any person appointed by the United States trustee under § 1104(d) and approved in accordance with subdivision (c) of this rule shall serve as trustee. n9

This procedure under Rule 2007.1 for service pending an election is analogous to section 701 and section 702 of the Code, which provide for the appointment of an interim trustee at the beginning of a chapter 7 case, pending the opportunity of creditors to elect a trustee at the meeting of creditors. n10 If creditors do not elect a trustee at the meeting of creditors, the appointed trustee becomes the permanent trustee in the case. n11 The same procedure should apply in a chapter 11 case in which a party in interest requests a meeting of creditors to elect a trustee but no trustee is elected. In that event, the provision of section 1104(d), which requires the United States trustee to appoint a trustee, will apply. If the United States trustee has already appointed a trustee during the 30-day period, the appointed trustee will remain as the permanent trustee.

This procedure may, however, give an advantage to the trustee appointed by the United States trustee. If the United States trustee acts quickly, as should be the case where the order to appoint was prompted by fraud, dishonesty, or gross mismanagement, that trustee will have been in office for at least 20 to 60 days before the meeting of creditors is actually held. n12 It may be disadvantageous to creditors to elect a different trustee if the appointed trustee has been doing an adequate job, because of the transition time and costs. At the same time, the United States trustee will have reason to appoint as trustee someone who will find support among the creditors requesting the election. They are the creditors most likely to be the most active. Displacement of that trustee by their candidate could be disruptive to the conduct of the case. The United States trustee is required to consult with parties in interest before making the appointment. n13 The consultation will provide the United States trustee with an opportunity to consider the creditors' candidate and thereby facilitate the transition from the debtor's management to the trustee. In this way, the Code continues its policy of encouraging consultation and cooperation among parties in interest in the case.

Notice of Meeting for Election of Trustee. If an election is requested, notice of a meeting of creditors for the purpose of electing a trustee must be given at least 20 days before the meeting. n14 As with the notice of the meeting of creditors under section 341, notice must be given to all creditors, by mail, by the clerk, or by some other person as the court directs.

Who May Vote. Section Section 1104(b), in referring to section 702 for the manner in which the election is to be conducted, would seem to incorporate the section 702(a) list of who may vote for a trustee. Under section 702(a), the parties holding the following kinds of claims may vote for a trustee: (1) an unsecured claim that is undisputed, fixed, liquidated, and timely filed under section 501 and under Bankruptcy Rule 3002, Rule 3003, Rule 3004 or Rule 3005; n15 (2) a claim tardily filed, if the holder did not have notice or knowledge of the case in time to file timely and proof is filed in time to permit payment; (3) other tardily filed claims; and (4) claims for fines, penalties, forfeitures, or multiple, exemplary or punitive damages if the fine, penalty, etc. arose before the order for relief (rather than commencement of the case). n16

Under this provision, then, only unsecured creditors are allowed to vote for a trustee. If a secured creditor has a deficiency in its collateral, to the extent of the deficiency it would be unsecured and, therefore, entitled to vote that amount. The holder of a contingent claim is not an eligible voter. The same is true of one who holds a claim that has not been liquidated. n17

Under section 702(a)(2), to be eligible to vote, the creditor must not hold a material adverse interest to the interest of creditors entitled to distribution. An exception permits the creditor to hold an equity interest in the debtor if it is not substantial in relation to its holding as a creditor. Section 702(a)(3) prohibits an insider n18 from voting for a trustee.

Manner of Election. Section 1104(b) provides that the election of a chapter 11 trustee should be conducted in the same manner as a chapter 7 trustee election. However, some of the provisions governing chapter 7 elections appear to be inconsistent with the structure of the chapter 11 election. It will, therefore, be necessary for the United States trustee overseeing a chapter 11 election, or a court resolving any disputed election, to evaluate each requirement for the chapter 7 election, and to modify, interpret or, if necessary, disregard those requirements that are inconsistent with the chapter 11 procedure.

For example, section 702(b) provides for the election to occur at the section 341 meeting of creditors. This reflects the fact that a trustee is appointed or elected in all chapter 7 cases, and the appointment or election occurs early in the case. In chapter 11, the debtor remains in possession unless and until the court orders the appointment of a trustee. Such an order may be entered long after the commencement of the case and well after the conclusion of the section 341 meeting of creditors. Thus, unlike chapter 7, there is no relationship between the section 341 meeting and appointment of a trustee in a chapter 11 case. Accordingly, it seems unlikely that a court in a chapter 11 case would require that the election occur at the section 341 meeting.

Of course, a court could reach a result consistent with the statute by continuing the creditors' meeting indefinitely. In view of the fact that a chapter 11 trustee is ordered in few chapter 11 cases, however, this seems to be an inefficient and artificial means of reconciling irreconcilable statutory provisions. The better approach would be to recognize that when section 1104(b) requires the United States trustee to convene a meeting of creditors after election of a trustee has been requested, the meeting is analogous to a section 341 meeting and satisfies the requirement of section 702(b).

Section 702(b) also provides for an election only on the request of creditors that hold 20 percent in amount of eligible claims. Although section 1104(b) provides for an election upon the request of a party in interest, the 20 percent requirement should apply to a chapter 11 election. Section 1104(b) provides only that upon request by a party in interest, the United States trustee must convene a meeting of creditors for the purpose of electing a trustee. It provides that the election should be conducted under the procedures in section 702. This should be viewed as suggesting that once the meeting is convened, which is analogous to the meeting of creditors under section 344, the section 702 procedures, including the 20 percent requirement, govern the election.

Under section 702(b), creditors may elect one disinterested person to serve as trustee. The limitation to one person is in harmony with section 1104(d), as is the requirement that the elected trustee be disinterested. When appointment of a trustee is to be made by the United States trustee, only one person may be appointed and that person must be disinterested.

The Vote. Section 702(c) provides that a trustee may be elected only if creditors holding at least 20 percent in amount of eligible claims vote and only if the candidate receives the votes of creditors holding a majority of the amount of claims held by the creditors voting in the election. Thus, in an election under section 1104(b), it will be necessary first that creditors holding 20 percent of the total amount of the kinds of unsecured claims listed in subsection (a)(1) actually vote and, second, that the candidate receive the votes of creditors holding at least a majority in amount of the claims that are actually voted by creditors at the meeting. n19 If creditors holding 20 percent of the total amount of claims do not vote at the meeting, a trustee cannot be elected. Nevertheless, even if at least 20 percent are actually voted, the candidate cannot be elected unless the candidate receives at least a majority in amount of the claims voted.

Rule Rule 2007.1(b)(2) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure regulates the use of proxies in an election of a trustee under section 1104(b). Rule 2007.1(b)(2) incorporates by reference Rule 2006, which governs the use of proxies when voting is permitted in a case under chapter 7. In addition, Rule 2007.1(b)(2) authorizes a committee of creditors appointed under section 1102 to solicit proxies. In chapter 7 cases, there are no committees appointed under the Code. Thus, Rule 2006 does not authorize a committee to solicit proxies in a chapter 7 case. Rule 2007.1(b)(2) provides the express authorization for election of a trustee under chapter 11.

A party who obtains a proxy should use Official Form 11A or 11B. These are forms for general and special powers of attorney. They contain language with respect to voting at a creditors' meeting.

Section 1104(b)(2) requires that if an eligible, disinterested person is elected at the meeting, the United States trustee must file a report with the court certifying the election n20 and provides that the report be treated effectively as a United States trustee selection and appointment of that person under subsection (d). n21 Rule 2007.1(b) provides the procedure for filing the report as well as for filing a report of any dispute concerning the election. n22 Under the Rule, if the election is undisputed, the United States trustee files with the court a report of the election and an application for approval of the appointment, which includes a statement setting forth the person's connections with parties in interest and a verified statement from the person describing any such connections, in order to demonstrate that the person is disinterested. In an undisputed election, the report constitutes the appointment of the elected person, subject to court approval.

If any dispute arises out of a trustee election, the court must resolve it. n23 In the event of a dispute, the United States trustee files a report describing the dispute without an application for approval of the appointment. The report is to be accompanied by the candidates' verified statements of disinterestedness. The court will not, however, resolve the dispute, and any trustee appointed by the United States trustee prior to the election remain the trustee, unless, within 10 days after the filing of the report, a party in interest, by motion, requests the court to hear and resolve the disputed election. n24 Once the court resolves the dispute and approves the successful candidate, the United States trustee's report constitutes the appointment of the elected person to serve, as of the date of entry of the court's order.

Court Approval of Elected Trustee. Section 1104(b)(2)(B)(i) provides that upon the filing of the United States trustee's report of the election results, the elected trustee shall be considered to have been selected and appointed for purposes of this section. n25 This provision resolves questions over whether court approval under subsection (d) was required of an elected trustee. Because of uncertainty of this issue before the 2005 amendments, Rule 2007.1(c) expressly provides for court approval of the elected trustee.

Section 321, which prescribes requirements for eligibility to serve as a trustee, is applicable to all trustees, including a trustee elected under section 1104(b). Under section 321, if an individual is to serve as trustee, the individual must be competent to perform the duties of a trustee. If the trustee is a corporation, it must be authorized by its charter or bylaws to act as trustee. Section 321(b) also provides that in no case may an examiner serve as trustee. Consequently, creditors may not elect an examiner as trustee.

This provision also resolves other potential questions. Under section 546(a), the statute of limitations for certain avoiding powers runs from the first appointment of a trustee under specified sections, including section 1104. By treating the filing of the report as an appointment, the provision makes clear when the statute begins to run, assuming that the United States trustee has not previously appointed a trustee under section 1104(d), pending the election. Under section 1121(c)(1), the debtor's exclusive right to file a plan ends upon a trustee's appointment. Under prior law, it was unclear whether this provision applied upon the election of a trustee and if so, when. Section 1104(b)(2)(B)(i) now makes clear that in the case of an elected trustee, the debtor's exclusive right terminates upon the filing of the report. If, after the filing of the report, the court disapproves the elected trustee, the application of these provisions will be the same as if a trustee appointed by the United States trustee under subsection (d) had been disapproved.

For further discussion of Code section 1104, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1104 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. In railroad reorganization cases, pursuant to section 1163, the United States trustee appoints one trustee from a list of five recommendations made by the Secretary of Transportation. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1163 (Matthew Bender).

n2

2. Pub. L. No. 103-394.

n3

3. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2007.1(b)(1).

n4

4. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(a)(1).

n5

5. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(d).

n6

6. Fed.R. Bankr. P. 2007.1(b)(2).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b), Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2007.1(b).

n8

8. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 416 (2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005. Id. § 1501(b).

n9

9. Fed.R. Bankr. P. 2007.1(b).

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. §§ 701, 702.

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 702(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 702.05 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. The minimum required notice of the meeting is 20 days, Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(a)(1), and creditors have up to 30 days in which to request the meeting, 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b). Adding some additional time for scheduling the meeting and preparing and mailing the notices, the trustee could be in office for up to 60 days before the election meeting is actually held.

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(d).

n14

14. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(a)(1).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 726(a)(2).

N16

16. Section 301 provides that the filing of a voluntary petition commencing a case under the Bankruptcy Code constitutes an order for relief. When the case is commenced by an involuntary petition, the date of the order for relief is the entry of the court order (section 303(h)).

The references to holders of claims under sections 752(a) and 766(h)(i) are not significant for section 1104(b) purposes. These refer to claims held by customers of stockbroker-debtors and commodity broker-debtors who undergo liquidation pursuant to subchapter III or IV, respectively, of chapter 7. Such debtors are not eligible for chapter 11 relief, 11 U.S.C. § 109(d). Thus, section 1104(b) is not applicable to them.

n17

17. See discussion of eligible voters at Collier on Bankruptcy, 702.01 (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. Insider is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101(41).

n19

19. In re Poage, 92 B.R. 659, 664 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1988) (Voting is done by the amount of the claim, not by heads.) (chapter 7 case).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b)(2)(A).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b)(2)(B)(i).

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 2007.1 (Matthew Bender) for a full description of the procedure for resolving contested chapter 11 trustee elections.

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b)(2)(C).

n24

24. This procedure may be inconsistent to some degree with section 1104(b)(2)(C), which requires the court to resolve any election dispute.

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(b)(2)(B)(i), added by Pub. L. 109-8, § 416 (2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005. Id. § 1501(b).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

139 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Limitations on State Homestead Exemption Claims

2008 Emerging Issues 1349

Collier on Limitations on State Homestead Exemption Claims

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: In order to prevent abuse by some debtors, section 522 of the Bankruptcy Code added two subsections that limit the use of state homestead exemptions. This Emerging Issues Analysis explains the monetary limit when the property was acquired within 1,215 days prior to the filing of the bankruptcy case.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: The Scope of Subsections 522(p) and (q)

In response to actual and perceived abuse by some debtors of state exemption statutes that protect an unlimited amount of homestead property, Congress added two new subsections to section 522 of the Bankruptcy Code that prevent the debtor from taking full advantage of state homestead exemptions under certain circumstances. These provisions impose a monetary limit of $136,875ⁿ¹ on the amount of the debtor's interest in homestead property that may be exempted to the extent that there has been an acquisition of a homestead interest within a period of 1,215 days before the commencement of the case (section 522(p)) or the commission of certain bad acts by the debtor (section 522(q)).ⁿ²

The provisions contained in subsections 522(p) and (q) affect only homestead property of the kind similar to that described in section 522(d)(1). The property must fall within the following categories:

- . real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;
- . a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;
- . a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor; or
- . real or personal property that the debtor or dependent of the debtor claims as a homestead.ⁿ³

Section 522(p) and (q) apply only when the debtor seeks to exempt an interest in homestead property under section

522(b)(3)(A) (formerly section 522(b)(2)(A)) by claiming exemptions under state law or local law. n4 The provision therefore does not restrict the ability of the debtor to exempt property under section 522(b)(2) by asserting the federal homestead exemption under section 522(d)(1), or to exempt an interest in property under section 522(b)(3)(B) (formerly section 522(b)(2)(B)) held as a tenant by the entirety or by joint tenancy to the extent that interest would have been exempt from process under nonbankruptcy law. n5

Among the three homestead limitations added by the 2005 Act, subsections 522(p) and (q) use language different from that found in subsection (o) n6 in describing when the limitations apply. Subsections (p) and (q), unlike subsection (o), state that the provisions apply only as a result of electing under subsection (b)(3)(A) to exempt property under State or local law. n7 Thus, in order to give meaning to the plain words of the phrase as a result of electing, the court in In re McNabb n8 held that subsections (p) and (q) are applicable only in states that have not opted out of the federal exemption scheme, because non-opt-out states are the only states in which an election is available.

A possible explanation for the electing language, not considered by the McNabb court, is that Congress intended the homestead limitations to apply when the debtor elects to exempt homestead property under section 522(b)(3)(A), but not when the debtor elects to exempt homestead property under section 522(b)(3)(B) that is held as a tenant by the entirety or by joint tenancy, if that interest is exempt from process under nonbankruptcy law. The existence of section 522(b)(3)(B) points to another form of election available to debtors. Moreover, the exemption under section 522(b)(3)(B) is available to debtors in all states to the extent recognized by state law, even in opt-out states, and would therefore suggest a reason why Congress may have included the electing language.

Other courts have refused to follow McNabb, and have largely done so by finding that the McNabb construction of the statutory language is contrary to the apparent legislative intent of subsections 522(p) and (q). n9 Citing references in the legislative history suggesting that the intent of Congress was to restrict the mansion loophole, these courts have held that the homestead limitations in subsections 522(p) and (q) should be construed as applying to debtors in all states, even opt-out states. n10

If subsection (p) or (q) is applicable, the debtor's exemptible interest in homestead property or the interest acquired n11 may not exceed the amount of $136,875. n12

Homestead Cap on Interest Acquired During 1,215-Day Period Before Filing

Although Congress did not completely foreclose the type of eleventh hour acquisition of exempt property that was generally viewed with favor by the drafters of the 1978 Code, n13 in 2005 it did enact section 522(p)(1) n14 as a limitation on the debtor's exemption rights in homestead property. The debtor may not exempt any amount of interest that was acquired in homestead property during the 1,215-day period before the filing of the petition that exceeds the amount of $136,875. n15

The dollar limit imposed by section 522(p)(1) does not apply to any amount of interest of the debtor in homestead property that was transferred from a debtor's previous principal residence to the debtor's current principal residence, provided that the debtor's previous residence was acquired before the 1,215-day period and both the previous and current residences are located in the same state. n16 In addition, the limitation does not apply to an interest claimed as exempt in a principal residence of a family farmer. n17

In In re Wayrynen, n18 the question was presented whether the protection in section 522(p)(2)(B) for an interest transferred from the debtor's previous principal residence should apply only to the debtor's most recent previous residence. The debtor's first home, purchased prior to the 1,215-day prepetition period, was subsequently sold by the debtor to purchase a second home 966 days before the petition was filed. Immediately prior to filing bankruptcy, the debtor sold this second home and purchased the residence he sought to exempt in his bankruptcy case. All of the homes were located in Florida. The trustee argued that the debtor had nonexempt equity based on the then $125,000 cap in section 522(p) because the debtor's current and previous homes were both purchased within 1,215 days of the petition, and that section 522(p)(2)(B) did not apply because the first home could not be considered the debtor's previous principal residence. The court disagreed and construed the phrase to include an interest transferred from a previous residence acquired before the 1,215-day period, even if that residence is not the most immediate prior residence. It found that the safe harbor in section 522(p)(2)(B) was intended to protect individuals such as the debtor who simply have benefited [from] the general appreciation of property values attributable to previous intra-state transactions. n19

The statutory language leaves some uncertainty as to the exact meaning of the phrase interest that was acquired. In view of the apparent purpose of section 522(p)(1), to discourage the more egregious examples of pre-bankruptcy exemption planning in which some debtors have purchased mansions in states having unlimited homestead exemption laws in contemplation of filing bankruptcy, n20 the phrase should be construed as applying to the actual purchase or acquisition of an ownership or fee interest in the homestead property. Under this view, section 522(p)(1) should not apply to the accumulation of equity in the debtor's homestead resulting from an appreciation in value of the property during the 1,215-day period. n21 Similarly, this provision should not prevent the debtor from claiming as exempt any increase in the debtor's homestead equity by more than $136,875 attributable to the application of mortgage payments made during the lookback period. However, if the debtor converts nonexempt assets for the purpose of paying down a mortgage, with an intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor, such a transfer may give rise to an objection to the debtor's homestead exemption under section 522(o), n22 but should not fall within the purview of section 522(p)(1).

In addition, by referring to any amount of interest that was acquired, section 522(p) is applicable only if the debtor has acquired an ownership interest in the property that is quantifiable. This is consistent with the subsection's imposition of a monetary limit, since it would be impossible to determine whether the amount of interest exceeds the dollar limit, or whether the rollover provision in section 522(p)(2)(B) applies, if the ownership interest acquired by the debtor was not a measurable, monetary amount. Thus, the limitation under section 522(p) is not triggered when the debtor declares a homestead exemption on previously acquired property or otherwise changes the classification of property to a homestead within the 1,215-day period, even if homestead property is treated as a separate ownership interest under state law. n23

Since the allowable homestead exemption in most states is less than $136,875, section 522(p) should have little effect in the vast majority of bankruptcy filings. Nevertheless, the combination of the 730-day domiciliary requirement in section 522(b)(3)(A) and the homestead limit in section 522(p)(1) may prove to have a deterrent effect on debtors considering a move to states with unlimited or substantial homestead exemptions before filing bankruptcy.

Homestead Cap Based on Certain Criminal or Unlawful Conduct

Felony Conviction. The debtor may not exempt any amount of interest in homestead property that exceeds $136,875 n24 if the debtor has been convicted of certain criminal conduct. Under section 522(q)(1)(A), added by the 2005 Act, the monetary cap applies if the court determines that the debtor has been convicted of a felony (as defined in 18 U.S.C. § 3156), n25 which under the circumstances, demonstrates that the filing of the case was an abuse of the provisions of the Code. n26

Although the statutory language is less than clear, the objecting party will need to establish some connection between the felony conviction and the bankruptcy proceeding such that the bankruptcy filing would be deemed an abuse. This might be shown with proof that the debtor is attempting to discharge civil liability owing to victims of the crime, or that the bankruptcy filing may in some manner impede the debtor's obligation to pay restitution related to the felony conviction.

The 2005 Act does not specify who has standing to invoke section 522(q)(1)(A), but presumably it would include any party in interest who may file an objection to the debtor's exemption claim. n27 However, a creditor or other party having no relation to the felony conviction may face the difficult task of proving that the bankruptcy filing was an abuse, particularly if no victim of the criminal act has objected to the debtor's exemption claim. In fact, a crime victim may oppose an objection to the debtor's homestead exemption under this provision, preferring instead to pursue the nondischargeability of any claim the victim may have against the debtor. n28

Liability on Certain Debts. The $136,875 dollar limit on the debtor's exemptible homestead interest may also be invoked under section 522(q)(1)(B) if the court determines that the debtor owes a debt arising from certain wrongful conduct. n29 The debt must arise from one of the following categories:

- . any violation of state or federal securities laws (as defined in section 3(a)(47) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934), n30 or any regulation or order issued under state or federal securities laws;

- . fraud, deceit or manipulation in a fiduciary capacity or in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered under section 12 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or under section 6 of the Securities Act of 1933;

- . any civil remedy under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act; n31 or

- . any criminal act, intentional tort or willful or reckless misconduct that caused serious physical injury or death to another individual in the preceding five years.

As under section 522(q)(1)(A), the statute leaves unanswered questions relating to requisite showing by the objecting party in order to prevail under section 522(q)(1)(B). At a minimum, the objecting party has the burden of proving that the debtor is liable on one of the listed debts. For debts that have not been reduced to judgment in a prior proceeding, or in which no findings from a prior proceeding may be given collateral estoppel effect, the objecting party will need to prove all of the elements that would establish liability on the debt.

In response to an objection to a homestead exemption under section 522(q)(1)(B), the debtor may argue that the debt in question is not of the type described in section 522(q)(1)(B). The debtor may also present evidence establishing any defenses to owing the debt. This will effectively require the bankruptcy court to conduct a trial or hearing on liability in such situations as if the matter were being heard in the first instance in the bankruptcy court. However, the bankruptcy court may prefer to abstain and permit the court in which the proceeding is pending to determine the underlying debt. In such case, the entry of the debtor's discharge may be delayed until resolution of the criminal or civil proceeding. n32

In contrast with the express language in section 522(q)(1)(A) requiring a prior criminal conviction, the homestead limitation in section 522(q)(1)(A) for a debt arising from a criminal act does not refer to a conviction. This suggests that the limitation may apply even if the debtor has not been convicted of a crime, though the objecting party will need to establish that the act giving rise to the debt constitutes a crime under applicable nonbankruptcy law. n33

Procedure for Challenging Exemption. The court's determination as to whether the debtor's exemption may be limited to $136,875 shall be made after notice and a hearing. n34 As in the case of other grounds for objections to exemption claims, a party in interest may seek to invoke section 522(q)(1) by timely filing an objection to the debtor's exemption in accordance with the procedure contained in Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 4003(b)(c). n35

No Application When Homestead Reasonably Necessary for Support. Section 522(q)(2) provides that the monetary limit contained in section 522(q)(1) shall not apply to the extent that the amount of the challenged interest in homestead property is reasonably necessary for the support of the debtor and any dependent of the debtor. n36 This would permit the court to deny application of the cap on the debtor's exemptible homestead interest based on the reasonably necessary test found in other subsections of section 522, n37 and other sections of the Code. n38

A determination of whether the affected homestead interest is reasonably necessary would require the court to consider factors such as the debtor's (and dependent's) age, health, earning capacity, present and future financial needs and ability, other assets, future financial obligations such as alimony and child support, and any special needs of the debtor and dependents. n39 In the context of the debtor's potential loss of homestead property if the monetary cap were to be applied, courts may also wish to consider other matters such as any potential obstacles the debtor and the debtor's dependents may have in finding suitable and affordable replacement housing, the length of time the debtor has lived in the community, the costs of relocation, the safety of the debtor's current neighborhood, and the impact relocation would have on the debtor's future income and the education of the debtor's children.

Homestead Limitations Causing Discharge Delay. Sections 727(a)(12), 1141(d)(5)(C), 1228(f) and 1328(h), added as part of the 2005 Act, n40 provide that the entry of the debtor's discharge may be delayed pending the outcome of criminal and civil proceedings against the debtor referenced in section 522(q)(1). These provisions are not intended to provide grounds for the denial of a discharge, but simply provide a procedural mechanism for delaying the entry of discharge until the events that could trigger a potential exemption objection under section 522(q) are determined. n41 After notice and hearing held not more than 10 days before the date the discharge would otherwise enter, the debtor's discharge shall not be granted if the court finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that (1) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable, and (2) a proceeding is pending in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt described in section 522(q)(1)(B).

As to the first requirement, the debtor's discharge should not be delayed if the debtor is not claiming homestead property as exempt or has not claimed as exempt an interest in homestead property in excess of $136,875 under a state exemption, or the debtor is claiming homestead property as exempt under section 522(b)(2) or (b)(3)(B). n42 In addition, the debtor's discharge may not be delayed if the potential felony conviction did not cause the debtor's bankruptcy filing to be abusive as required by section 522(q)(1)(A), the debt alleged to be owed is not of the type described in section 522(q)(1)(B), or the limitation under section 522(q)(1)(B) is not applicable because the homestead property is reasonably necessary for the support of the debtor and any dependent of the debtor.

As to the second requirement, the statutory language suggests that the court must have reasonable cause to believe that one of the identified types of proceedings is pending against the debtor and that the debtor may be found guilty or liable in such proceeding. The debtor therefore should have the right to be heard on any claims or defenses asserted in the proceeding that would establish that the debtor may not be criminally culpable or liable on the debt. However, for practical reasons related to the possibility that the debtor may make self-incriminating statements, it is not likely this would occur if a criminal proceeding is pending.

Application of Homestead Cap in Joint Cases

If the limitations in subsection 522(p) or (q) are applicable, a debtor may not exempt any amount of interest that exceeds in the aggregate $136,875 in value in homestead property. Congress choice of the word aggregate in referring to the debtor's interest, consistent with its use in other subsections of section 522, n43 suggests that the dollar limit is to be applied to the combined interests of the debtor in the various forms of property listed in section 522(p)(1)(A) through (D). It is not intended to impose an overall $136,875 cap on the interests both debtors in a joint case may exempt in property under a state homestead exemption. This construction of the statutory language is consistent with the absence in the 2005 Act of any express or implied limitation on section 522(m), which provides that section 522 applies separately with respect to each debtor in a joint case. n44 Thus, to the extent that state law permits the doubling of a state homestead exemption by joint debtors, subsection 522(p) or (q), if applicable, would not preclude debtors in a joint case from exempting their total interest up to $273,750 in homestead property, provided that such an exemption is available. n45

For a complete discussion of Code section 522, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 522 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. This dollar amount applies in cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the limit is $125,000.

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p)(q), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n3

3. This final category is not provided for in section 522(d)(1) and is apparently intended to cover property that may be claimed as a homestead under state law even if not used by the debtor as a residence.

n4

4. Although the limitation in section 522(o) more broadly applies for purposes of section 522(b)(3)(A), which would suggest that exemptions claimed under federal nonbankruptcy law would also be affected, homestead property is rarely, if ever, exempted under federal nonbankruptcy law.

n5

5. In re Buonopane, 359 B.R. 346 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2007) (entireties property claimed as exempt under section 522(b)(3)(B) is not subject to dollar limit in section 522(p)); In re Jacobs, 342 B.R. 114 (Bankr. D.D.C. 2006) (debtor's claim of exemption under section 522(d) not is subject to section 522(q)).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.08[5] (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p), (q), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n8

8. 326 B.R. 785 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2005).

n9

9. See In re Landahl, 338 B.R. 920 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006); In re Kane, 336 B.R. 477 (Bankr. D. Nev. 2006) (relying upon the court's authority to reform a statute when confronted with a scrivener's error, court concluded that Congress should be saved from its apparent drafting error by effectively striking the electing language from the statute); In re Wayrynen, 332 B.R. 479 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2005); In re Kaplan, 331 B.R. 483, 486 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2005) (court found that although the McNabb construction of the statutory language is supportable based on the language as drafted, it should be rejected because of clear legislative intent to the contrary).

n10

10. E.g., In re Kaplan, 331 B.R. 483, 488 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2005) (citing H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, at 1516 (2005) ([t]he bill also restricts the so-called mansion loophole).

n11

11. It should be noted that the limitation in section 522(p) applies only to the interest that was acquired. For example, if the debtor acquired within 1,215 days prepetition a vacant lot valued at $200,000 adjacent to his or her existing $500,000 residence, and both the lot and residence would otherwise be exempt under an unlimited state homestead exemption, the debtor would be permitted an exemption of $625,000 if the cap in section 522(p)(1) were applicable.

n12

12. See note 1 supra.

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.08[4] (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n15

15. This dollar amount applies in cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the limit is $125,000.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment; see In re Summers, 344 B.R. 108 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2006).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p)(2)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n18

18. 332 B.R. 479 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2005).

n19

19. 332 B.R. 479, 486.

n20

20. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, at 1516 (2005).

n21

21. In re Chouinard, 358 B.R. 814, 815 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006) (Passive market appreciation is not an interest that a debtor acquires during the 1,215-day period.); In re Sainlar, 344 B.R. 669 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006); In re Blair, 334 B.R. 374, 376 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2005) ([O]ne does not actually acquire equity in a home. One acquires title to a home.).

n22

22. See, e.g., In re Maronde, 332 B.R. 593 (Bankr. D. Minn. 2005).

n23

23. In re Rogers, 354 B.R. 792 (N.D. Tex. 2006) (debtor did not acquire an amount of interest by reclassifying, as a homestead real property she had inherited 11 years before filing bankruptcy); In re Lyons, 355 B.R. 387, 390 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2006) (debtor's recording of homestead declaration amounted to a classification of property under state law and was not the acquisition of a quantifiable property interest). But see In re Greene, 346 B.R. 835 (Bankr. D. Nev. 2006).

n24

24. This dollar amount applies in cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the limit is $125,000.

n25

25. The term felony is defined as an offense punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of more than one year. 18 U.S.C. § 3156.

n26

26. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p)(1)(A). Subsection (q) was added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), and applies to cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n27

27. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4003(b).

n28

28. The crime victim may actually prefer that the debtor retain the homestead after the bankruptcy proceeding is concluded. See, e.g., Drenttel v. Jensen-Carter (In re Drenttel), 403 F.3d 611, 615 (8th Cir. 2005) (preservation of homestead exemption may serve long-term interests of creditors as obligations are more likely to be fulfilled by those whose connections with the community are stabilized by a protected interest in a relatively permanent place of abode than by those not so anchored).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n30

30. The term securities laws means the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.), the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. § 78a et seq.), the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U.S.C. § 79 et seq.), the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 (15 U.S.C. § 77aaa et seq.), the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq.), the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80b-1 et seq.) and the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 (15 U.S.C. § 78aaa et seq.). See 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(47).

n31

31. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964 et seq.

n32

32. See Homestead Limitations Causing Discharge Delay infra.

n33

33. See In re Larson, 340 B.R. 444 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2006) (homestead exemption may be reduced based on debt arising from negligent operation of motor vehicle, even though charge against the debtor was continued without a conviction, because debtor's admission of guilt in criminal proceeding was equivalent of a guilty plea under state law).

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 322(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment. Section 522(a)(1) defines dependent as including the debtor's spouse, whether or not actually dependent. Ordinarily this definition is not relevant to the application of state exemption laws. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.03[1] (Matthew Bender). However, the use of the word dependent in section 522(q)(2) requires that the definition be applied in considering the application of the cap on a state homestead exemption.

n37

37. E.g., 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(10)(11).

n38

38. E.g., 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(2)(A).

n39

39. See, e.g., In re Mann, 201 B.R. 910 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1996); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.09[10][a] (Matthew Bender).

n40

40. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005). These provisions are effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, the date of enactment.

n41

41. These provisions were enacted by section 330 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), which is entitled: Delay of Discharge During Pendency of Certain Proceedings. Presumably, Congress added these provisions because the operation of section 522(c) upon the entry of the debtor's discharge, before a section 522(q) exemption objection is resolved, would potentially prevent any subsequent limitation on the debtor's exemption.

n42

42. See In re Jacobs, 342 B.R.114 (Bankr. D.D.C. 2006) (delay of discharge provision in section 727(a)(12) is not applicable because debtor claimed exemptions under section 522(d)).

n43

43. E.g., 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(6) (The debtor's aggregate interest, not to exceed $1,500 in value, in any implements, professional books, or tools of the trade of the debtor or the trade of a dependent of the debtor.).

n44

44. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.04[5] and [6] (Matthew Bender).

n45

45. See In re Rasmussen, 349 B.R. 747 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

140 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Avoidance of Setoffs

2008 Emerging Issues 1350

Collier on Avoidance of Setoffs

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Though setoffs made within 90 days of a bankruptcy filing are generally not avoidable, there are exceptions to this rule. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses covering the indirect avoidance provisions of Bankruptcy Code § 553, it also addresses § 553(b), which permits direct avoidance to the extent that the pre-petition setoff improved the creditors position. It gives several examples of how a creditors improved status is determined.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Two general avoidance issues arise in the context of setoffs under section 553 of the Bankruptcy Code. The first is the extent to which a prepetition setoff may constitute a preference or fraudulent transfer under section 547, section 544 or section 548. The second involves the circumstances under which the special rules of section 553(b) apply to avoid setoffs.

Setoffs as Avoidable Preferences or Fraudulent Transfers

In general, a prepetition setoff is not avoidable as a preference under section 547, ⁿ¹ or as a fraudulent transfer under section 548 or 544. ⁿ² There are two exceptions to this general rule. A prepetition setoff may be avoidable as a preference or fraudulent transfer if the setoff was invalid under applicable nonbankruptcy law and thus not a setoff. Similarly, a prepetition setoff may be invalid if the setoff does not qualify under the provisions of section 553(a)(2)(B) or 553(a)(3). A prepetition setoff is not avoidable as a preference or fraudulent transfer, however, under section 553(a)(1). ⁿ³

Setoffs as Transfers. At a minimum, a preference under section 547(b) requires a prepetition transfer of an interest of the debtor in property. ⁿ⁴ Similarly, the fraudulent transfer provisions of section 548(a) ⁿ⁵ and the strong arm provisions of section 544(b) likewise require a transfer that occurred before the commencement of the debtor's case. ⁿ⁶ The term transfer is defined in Code section 101, ⁿ⁷ and the definition intentionally omits setoffs. The legislative history to section 101 explains the omission in clear terms: Inclusion of setoff is deleted. The effect is that a setoff is not subject to being set aside as a preferential transfer but will be subject to special rules. Similarly, section 553 provides that this title, i.e., title 11, does not affect setoff rights. Thus, setoff cannot be a preference or a fraudulent transfer. n8

Invalidity under Applicable Nonbankruptcy Law. Although a valid prepetition setoff cannot be a transfer, a prepetition setoff that was not valid under applicable nonbankruptcy law at the time it was taken may be subject to avoidance as a preference or fraudulent conveyance. For example, if the creditor and debtor each owed the other a mutual, prepetition obligation, but applicable nonbankruptcy law did not permit a setoff of their respective debts, or the setoff was procedurally invalid for some reason at the time it was ostensibly taken, the benefit obtained by the creditor may be subject to preferential attack on the ground that the transfer in question was not, in fact, a legitimate setoff. However, the failed setoff might not be subject to attack as a preference if it might still be taken if done properly after the commencement of the debtor's case. n9

Similarly, if it turns out that the creditor actually owed nothing to the debtor under applicable nonbankruptcy law, but nonetheless extinguished its debt to the debtor by seizing the debtor's property under the guise of a setoff, then the obligation to the debtor might be recoverable as a fraudulent transfer. n10 In each of these instances, application of either the preference provisions of section 547, or the fraudulent transfer provisions of section 548 or 544, depends on the threshold determination that the transfer in question was not a genuine setoff under relevant nonbankruptcy law and therefore not subject to the limitations on the Code's definition of transfer set forth in section 101.

Retroactive Invalidity under Section 553. A related issue is whether a prepetition setoff can be avoided as a preference or fraudulent transfer, not because the setoff was invalid under applicable nonbankruptcy law, but because the setoff does not qualify under the requirements of section 553(a). For example, a relevant claim and debt might not be mutual under the Code's definition, even though they might be mutual under applicable state law. Similarly, the creditor's claim might be of the type that is subject to disallowance under some provision of the Code, and, thus, if the setoff had not been taken, it would be prohibited under section 553(a)(1). Finally, the setoff might not satisfy the requirements of subsection 553(a)(2) or (a)(3).

Except for the provisions of subsections 553(a)(2)(B) and (a)(3), the requirements of section 553(a) do not apply retroactively to affect prepetition setoffs. Thus, an otherwise valid prepetition setoff is not invalid, and thereby subject to avoidance, on the ground that it was not mutual within the meaning of the Code, n11 or because the creditor's claim might have been disallowed under some provision of the Code if the claim had been presented for allowance in the debtor's bankruptcy proceedings. n12

Disallowance; § 553(a)(1). Section 553(a)(1) is not an avoidance provision. If the setoff in question has already taken place before the commencement of the debtor's case, section 553(a)(1) does not apply retroactively to avoid the claim or otherwise subject the setoff to attack as a preference. The reason for this conclusion is straightforward. If an otherwise valid prepetition setoff has been taken, the creditor's prepetition claim is extinguished to the extent of the setoff. Thus, there is no claim to disallow in the subsequent bankruptcy proceedings.

The case of Durham v. SMI Industries Corp. n13 illustrates this principle. Durham involved a prepetition setoff between two metals dealers. The trustee in the chapter 7 case of one of the dealers argued that the prepetition setoff was invalid because the creditor's claim was subject to disallowance under Bankruptcy Code section 502(d) on the ground that the creditor had not satisfied a previous preference judgment. n14 The Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit disagreed, concluding that, because the setoff had been valid under applicable law, the corresponding debts had been canceled to the extent of the setoff. n15 Thus, there was no claim to be disallowed in the debtor's bankruptcy proceedings, and, thus, section 553(a)(1) had no application.

Sections 553(a)(2) and 553(a)(3). Unlike section 553(a)(1), sections 553(a)(2) and 553(a)(3) do reach back to affect certain prepetition transactions. n16 Under section 553(a)(2)(B), a setoff with respect to a claim that was transferred within the 90-day period before the debtor's bankruptcy case and while the debtor was insolvent does not qualify as a legitimate setoff. Thus, if a setoff of this kind occurred, it may be subject to attack as a preference. The same analysis applies with respect to section 553(a)(3). n17

Application of sections 553(a)(2)(B) and 553(a)(3) to prepetition setoffs finds general support in the legislative history. n18 If sections 553(a)(2)(B) and 553(a)(3) did not apply to prepetition setoffs, then creditors would have a clear incentive to arrange and take the setoffs that these sections prohibit as quickly as possible to avoid the prohibition, a result demonstrably at odds with the intention of the drafters of the Code.

Direct Avoidance under Section 553(b)

Unlike sections 553(a)(2)(B) and 553(a)(3), which only indirectly operate to avoid certain prepetition setoffs in tandem with section 547(b), section 553(b) is a direct avoidance provision. Section 553(b) provides that a trustee may recover from any creditor the amount of a prepetition setoff to the extent that the setoff permitted the creditor to recover more than the creditor would have recovered if the setoff had occurred at certain benchmark points in time. Section 522(h) provides the debtor with the right to utilize the trustee's power under section 553(b) to recover exemptible property if the trustee fails to do so. n19 The purpose of section 553(b) is to discourage creditors from taking setoffs against debts owed to insolvent debtors under circumstances where a creditor might be sorely tempted to take a setoff because of an improved setoff opportunity. By providing for the recovery of the amount of the improvement, section 553(b) ostensibly eliminates the temptation to seize the moment. n20

For example, suppose a bank holds a claim against the debtor in the amount of $100,000. Suppose 90 days before bankruptcy, the debtor had on deposit with the bank the sum of $50,000. Suppose 30 days before bankruptcy, the debtor deposits an additional $50,000, bringing the total amount of the debtor's deposit with the bank to $100,000. If the debtor is experiencing financial difficulty and has defaulted on its obligation to the bank, the bank might be tempted to take a setoff at the moment the debtor's deposit balance is at its highest. However, such an offset might well plunge the debtor into financial ruin. The purpose of section 553(b) is to remove the bank's temptation to take the setoff by providing for the recovery in bankruptcy of an amount equal to the value of the improvement in the bank's position.

Calculation of Avoidable Improvement in Debtor's Position. The initial benchmark used in calculating any improvement in the creditor's position under section 553(b) is the point in time that is 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case. The relevant calculation of any avoidable improvement proceeds in four stages.

First, section 553(b) requires the calculation of the creditor's setoff position 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's case. This is done by comparing the creditor's claim with the creditor's debt, and determining the extent to which the creditor's claim exceeds the amount of the debt. The amount by which the creditor's claim exceeds the amount of the debt is called the insufficiency. n21

Second, if there was no insufficiency on the 90th day, section 553(b) requires the court to determine whether there was an insufficiency on any day after the initial 90-day point in time (but before the commencement of the debtor's case). This determination is also accomplished by comparing the creditor's claim with the creditor's debt. n22

Third, in order to calculate any subsequent improvement in the creditor's setoff position, section 553(b) sets the initial reference date as the later to occur of (a) any insufficiency existing on the 90th day and (b) any insufficiency existing on the first day during the 90 days preceding the petition date (including the 90th day) on which there was an insufficiency. Thus, if there is an insufficiency on the 90th day, and an insufficiency on any other day during the 90-day period, the point of reference would be set on the 90th day. n23

Fourth, section 553(b) requires a comparison between the creditor's setoff position at the initial reference point (as calculated in the preceding paragraph) and the day on which any setoff was actually taken. Section 553(b) permits the trustee to recover any improvement in the creditor's position measured by any decrease in the creditor's insufficiency on the date of setoff. n24

Examples Illustrating the Basic Operation of Section 553(b). Because the mechanics of section 553(b) are somewhat cumbersome in their application, it is useful to illustrate the basic operation of the section with the following six examples.

Example 1: Suppose a bank had a claim against a debtor for $15,000. At 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the debtor had $10,000 on deposit with the bank. The insufficiency" at 90 days was thus $5,000. At 30 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the debtor deposited $4,000 into the account, increasing the balance to $14,000 on deposit and reducing the insufficiency to $1,000. The bank took a setoff against the entire deposit on the 30th day. Because the insufficiency at the time of setoff ($1,000) was less than the insufficiency at 90 days prior to filing ($5,000), the bank improved its position (by $4,000). The trustee may recover the improvement ($4,000), but the bank may keep $10,000 from its setoff ($14,000 less the $4,000 recovered by the trustee).

Example 2: Suppose a bank had a claim against a debtor for $15,000. At 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the debtor had $10,000 on deposit. The insufficiency at 90 days was thus $5,000. At 89 days before the petition date, the debtor withdrew $2,000, leaving $8,000 on deposit and increasing the insufficiency to $7,000. At 30 days before the petition date, the debtor deposited $6,000, leaving a balance of $14,000 on deposit. Thus, at 30 days, the insufficiency was $1,000. The bank offset the $14,000 deposit against its $15,000 claim on the 30th day. In calculating any recoverable improvement, section 553(b) requires use of the later of the insufficiency at 90 days before the petition date and the first date during the 90 days in which there was any insufficiency. Thus, in this example, section 553(b) requires use of the insufficiency at 90 days ($5,000). It does not matter that the amount of the insufficiency increased the next day. Compare the insufficiency at 90 days ($5,000) to the insufficiency on the actual date of setoff ($1,000). The difference ($4,000) is the improvement in position. Therefore, the trustee can recover $4,000 and the bank may keep $10,000 ($14,000 on deposit on the date of setoff less the $4,000 recoverable by the trustee).

Example 3: Suppose a bank had a claim against a debtor for $15,000. At 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the debtor had $10,000 on deposit with the bank. The insufficiency at 90 days was thus $5,000. On the 89th day, the debtor deposited $5,000, resulting in a balance of $15,000 and an insufficiency of zero. At 30 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the bank offset the entire deposit against its claim. In calculating any recoverable improvement, section 553(b) requires use of the later of the insufficiency at 90 days before the petition date and the first date on which there was any insufficiency during the 90 day period, in this case the insufficiency on the 90th day was $5,000. Because the insufficiency at the time of setoff (zero) was less than the insufficiency at 90 days prior to filing ($5,000), the bank improved its position (by $5,000). The trustee may recover the improvement ($5,000), but the bank may keep $10,000 from its setoff ($15,000 less the $5,000 recovered by the trustee). n25

Example 4: Suppose that, at 90 days before filing a bankruptcy petition, the debtor owed $10,000 to a bank and had $10,000 on deposit with the bank. At all times during the 90-day period, the deposit account's balance fluctuated between $10,000 and $15,000. Since there never was any insufficiency, the bank had no improvement in position. On any day during the 90-day period, the bank was entitled to offset $10,000 to cover the entire amount owed to it, with no portion subject to recovery.

Example 5: Suppose that, at 90 days prior to petition, the debtor owed a bank $100,000 and had $100,000 on deposit. Thus, the insufficiency at 90 days was zero. At 50 days prior to the petition date, the debtor borrowed $20,000 more, leaving a debt of $120,000. The debtor also withdrew $10,000 from the deposit account, leaving $90,000 on deposit. The insufficiency at 50 days was therefore $30,000. By the time the bank took a setoff on the 30th day, the debtor had paid down the loan to $40,000, and had $40,000 on deposit. Thus, the insufficiency on the date of setoff was zero. The bank improved its position by $30,000. In calculating the amount of any recoverable improvement in this example, section 553(b) requires use of the difference between the first insufficiency within the 90 day period ($30,000 on day 50) and the insufficiency on date of setoff (zero). The trustee may therefore recover $30,000 and the bank may retain $10,000.

Example 6: Suppose that, at 90 days before the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case, the debtor opened a deposit account for $2,000 and took out a loan for $12,000 to be repaid in three monthly installments of $4,000 each. The insufficiency at 90 days was thus $10,000. At 60 days before the petition date, the debtor paid $4,000 on the loan, reducing the debt owed to the bank to $8,000. At 30 days before the petition date, the debtor was able to pay only $3,000 on the loan, reducing the debt owed to the bank to $5,000. The $2,000 was still on deposit, so the insufficiency at 30 days is $3,000. The bank declared the debtor to be in default, accelerated the debt and offset the $2,000 in the deposit account. The improvement in position was $7,000, but the trustee cannot recover the entire improvement when the amount of the improvement is greater than the amount actually offset. The trustee may only recover $2,000.

Applicability to Postpetition Exercise of Right. An interesting issue that has generated a split of authority among the courts is whether section 553(b) applies with respect to setoffs that were not taken prepetition but that are preserved under the provisions of section 553(a). n26 The literal language of section 553(b) suggests that its provisions apply only with respect to setoffs that were actually taken within the 90 days preceding the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case. n27 On the other hand, some courts have construed section 553(b) as applicable to the right of setoff, whether it was exercised prepetition or not. n28

The better result is to limit section 553(b) to setoffs actually taken prepetition. In addition to remaining true to the language of the text, that result is consistent with the underlying purpose of section 553, which is to encourage creditors not to take setoffs by generally preserving their setoff rights. Limiting section 553(b) to its express language serves this fundamental purpose, whereas extending it to creditors who have refrained from exercising their setoff rights does not.

Contingent, Unmatured or Unliquidated Obligations. An important question under section 553(b) arises in calculating the amount of any insufficiency in cases involving prepetition setoffs against contingent, unmatured or unliquidated claims and debts. The question arises because the contingent, unmatured or unliquidated status of a claim or debt may make it more difficult to determine the amount of the claim or debt and, consequently, may make it more difficult to calculate any relevant insufficiency under the section. n29

The case of Lee v. Schweiker n30 illustrates this point. There, the creditor (the Social Security Administration) owed the debtor monthly Social Security benefits of $406.20. The debtor, on the other hand, owed the creditor $746.50, representing an overpayment of prior benefits. Within the 90 days preceding the debtor's bankruptcy case, the creditor took three monthly offsets of $102 each against the debtor's three monthly benefit checks, for a total offset of $306. The debtor sought to recover the $306 amount under section 553(b).

In denying recovery, the court reasoned that the creditor's debt included all of the monthly benefits that the creditor owed to the debtor during the 90-day period, for a total of $1,218.60. The court determined this amount to be the creditor's debt, notwithstanding that this obligation was entirely contingent and unmatured 90 days prior to the date the debtor commenced her case. n31 In contrast, the creditor held a fixed claim against the debtor for $746.50, representing the previous overpayments to the debtor. Because the amount of the debt always exceeded the amount of the claim, the court determined that there was no insufficiency and, thus, the debtor could not recover the setoffs under section 553.

Additional Rules of Application. In applying the provisions of section 553(b), four additional principles bear mention. First, courts have held that application of section 553(b) is not susceptible to equitable manipulation. As stated by one court, the language is specific, its application is mathematical, and we do not view it to be susceptible to equitable treatment. n32

Second, if the creditor is otherwise secured, it may have a complete defense to the trustee's action under section 553(b). The reason is that, if the creditor's other security is of a sufficient value, any insufficiency may be covered by other property of the estate subject to the creditor's lien, resulting in no overall net improvement to the creditor. n33

Third, the improvement in position test does not apply to setoffs of the kind treated in section 362(b)(6) (certain commodity contracts, forward contracts or security contracts); section 362(b)(7) (certain repurchase agreements); section 362(b)(14) (swap agreements); section 365(h) (time share interest purchasers or lessees remaining in possession); section 546(h) (return of unsold goods); and section 365(i)(2) (setoffs by purchaser of real property or time share interest against damages caused by the nonperformance of the debtor occurring after trustee's rejection of contract). These specific types of setoffs are explicitly carved out from the operation of section 553(b).

Finally, it should be noted that the court may award post-judgment interest under section 553(b). Interest on the judgment generally accrues from the date of the commencement of the action to recover the setoff. n34

Avoidable Postpetition Setoffs

As noted previously, a setoff taken in violation of the automatic stay is generally void. n35 In addition, certain unauthorized transactions may be avoided pursuant to the provisions of Bankruptcy Code section 549(a)(2)(B). n36 Conceivably, an unauthorized postpetition setoff might be undone either as a violation of the automatic stay, or pursuant to the provisions of section 549.

Application of section 549 to unauthorized setoffs, however, raises an interesting issue. Like section 547, section 549(a) specifically applies to avoid unauthorized transfers. As noted previously, Congress intended to exclude setoffs from the definition of transfer under the Code, at least in the context of preferences. n37 Applied to section 549, this omission conceivably disables the statute. The better view, however, may be that if a postpetition setoff is not authorized by the Code, it is not a legitimate setoff, and therefore qualifies as a transfer. n38

For a complete discussion of code section 553, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 553 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 547(b); see Braniff Airways, Inc. v. Exxon Co., U.S.A., 814 F.2d 1030, 1034, 16 C.B.C.2d 1447, 1451 (5th Cir. 1987); see also In re Carnell Constr. Corp., 424 F.2d 296, 299 (3d Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Masterson v. Valley Nat'l Bank, 400 U.S. 828, 91 S. Ct. 56, 27 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1970).

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b) and 548.

n3

3. See Durham v. SMI Indus. Corp., 882 F.2d 881, 882-83 (4th Cir. 1989).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 547(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 548(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 548 (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 544(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 544 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n8

8. Although fraudulent transfers are not specifically mentioned in the legislative history, there is little reason to believe that Congress intended a different understanding of transfer to apply in the fraudulent conveyance context. See 124 Cong. Rec. H11,090 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,407 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978); Eckles v. Petco Inc. (In re Balducci Oil Co.), 33 B.R. 847, 852 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983) (11 U.S.C. § 553(b), the insufficiency test, contains the special rules and is, in essence, a miniature preference provision akin to section 547(c)(5)); see also New York County Nat'l Bank v. Massey, 192 U.S. 138, 147, 24 S. Ct. 199, 48 L. Ed. 380 (1904) (creation of debt by deposit does not operate to enlarge scope of statute defining preferences so as to prevent setoff in cases coming within terms of predecessor to 11 U.S.C. § 553).

n9

9. See Durham v. SMI Indus. Corp., 882 F.2d 881, 882 (4th Cir. 1989) (only if setoff is invalid and no right of setoff exists in bankruptcy is 11 U.S.C. § 547 applied); 11 U.S.C. § 547(b)(5).

n10

10. See Setoffs as Transfers supra.

n11

11. See generally K Town, Inc. v. Metropolitan Bank & Trust Co. (In re K Town, Inc.), 171 B.R. 313, 319 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

n12

12. See Durham v. SMI Indus. Corp., 882 F.2d 881, 883 (4th Cir. 1989).

n13

13. 882 F.2d 881 (4th Cir. 1989).

n14

14. 882 F.2d 881, 882-83 (4th Cir. 1989); see 11 U.S.C. § 502(d) (providing for the disallowance of the claim of a creditor that has failed to satisfy a preference judgment).

n15

15. 882 F.2d 881, 883 (4th Cir. 1989).

n16

16. See Wooten v. Vicksburg Refining, Inc. (In re Hill Petroleum Co.), 95 B.R. 404, 411 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1988) (section 553(a)(2)(B) would apply to avoid setoff taken one day before commencement of debtor's case).

with respect to transferred claim).

n17

17. See Katz v. First Nat'l Bank of Glen Head, 568 F.2d 964, 971, 14 C.B.C. 432, 439-40 (2d Cir. 1977) (deposit intentionally made by debtor to be available to be offset against debtor's obligations to the bank is impermissible preference), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1069, 98 S. Ct. 1250, 55 L. Ed. 2d 771 (1978); Cusick v. Second Nat'l Bank, 115 F.2d 150, 152 n.4 (D.C. Cir. 1940).

n18

18. The relevant legislative history provides:

Different treatment of setoff that occurs prepetition and postpetition may generate problems for insolvent debtor. [sic] If the restrictions placed on postpetition setoff are greater than those placed on prepetition setoff, there is an incentive for creditors with a right of setoff, especially banks, to offset during a period of financial difficulty of the debtor, rather than continuing to carry the debtor in the hopes that matters will improve. Thus, whatever limitations are adopted for postpetition setoff, it is important to apply them to prepetition setoff as well. If they are not applied equally, a creditor may attempt to avoid the postpetition limitations by offsetting prepetition, perhaps precipitating the bankruptcy of the debtor.

H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 186 (1978).

n19 19. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 522.12 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. See Lee v. Schweiker, 739 F.2d 870, 877, 11 C.B.C.2d 834, 842 (3rd Cir. 1984) (explaining that concern of Congress was that creditors, primarily banks, that had mutual accounts with debtor would foresee approach of bankruptcy and scramble to secure better position for themselves by decreasing insufficiency, to detriment of other creditors); H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong. 2d Sess. at 195 (1978), (citing example of where debtor has $5,000 on deposit ninety days before the petition is filed, and $8,000 on deposit on the day the petition is filed); see also In re Bakersfield Westar Ambulance, Inc., 123 F.3d 1243, 1245 (9th Cir. 1997) (discussing purpose of section 553(b)); In re Turner, 96 F.3d 465, 467-68 (10th Cir. 1996).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 553(b)(2) (defining the term insufficiency). For example, using a bank for illustration purposes, suppose that 90 days before the debtor filed for bankruptcy relief the debtor owed $100,000 to the bank on a loan, and had on deposit with the bank the sum of $100,000. Under 11 U.S.C. § 553(b), the bank possessed a right of setoff equal to $100,000 on the 90th day before the debtor filed for bankruptcy relief. There is no insufficiency because the amount of the claim does not exceed the amount of the debt.

n22

22. Continuing the hypothetical in the preceding note, suppose the debtor withdrew $50,000 from its account with the bank 75 days before filing for bankruptcy relief, leaving a deposit balance of $50,000. The 75-day point would mark the first point in time that there was an insufficiency. Prior to the 75-day point, the amount of the bank's claim ($100,000) equaled the amount of the bank's debt to the debtor ($100,000), and, thus, there was no insufficiency. However, after the withdrawal on the 75th day, the bank's claim against the debtor ($100,000) exceeded the bank's debt to the debtor ($50,000) by $50,000.

n23

23. In the hypothetical discussed in the preceding notes, there was no insufficiency on the 90th day. The first day on which there was an insufficiency was the 75th day. Thus, in the hypothetical, the initial reference point for determining any improvement in the bank's setoff position under section 553(b) would be the bank's setoff position on the 75th day.

n24

24. Continuing the hypothetical discussed in the three preceding notes, suppose the debtor deposited $30,000 into its account with the bank 50 days prior to filing for bankruptcy relief, resulting in a balance in its account of $80,000. Suppose further that the bank offset the $80,000 account balance against its $100,000 claim on that same day. By taking the setoff on the 50th day before bankruptcy, the bank took advantage of a $30,000 improvement in its position from the 75th day. Because of this improvement, section 553(b) would permit the trustee to recover $30,000 from the bank.

n25

25. When no insufficiency exists on the date of setoff, 11 U.S.C. § 553(b) still applies. See Braniff Airways, Inc. v. Exxon Co. U.S.A., 814 F.2d 1030, 1040 n.12, 16 C.B.C.2d 1447, 1459 (5th Cir. 1987) (while it could be argued that section 553(b) does not apply under these circumstances, court declined to adopt such position); see also Passamano, Setoff in Bankruptcy: An Overview of the Mechanics, 105 Banking L.J. 349 (1993).

n26

26. Compare Heckathorn Constr. Co. v. Bass Mechanical Contractors, Inc. (In re Bass Mechanical Contractors, Inc.), 88 B.R. 201, 204 (Bankr. W.D. Ark. 1988) (This court is reluctant to extend § 553(b) to allow an improvement in position test for pre-petition rights exercised post-petition.), with Braniff Airways, Inc. v. Exxon Co., U.S.A., 814 F.2d 1030, 1041 n.13, 16 C.B.C.2d 1447, 1460 (5th Cir. 1987) (If Exxon wants to rely on a pre-petition right to setoff pursuant to section 553, it must comply with both sections 553(a) and 553(b).), and Tavormina v. ITT Commercial Fin. Corp. (In re Aquasport, Inc.), 115 B.R. 720, 722 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1990), aff'd, 155 B.R. 245 (S.D. Fla. 1992), aff'd without op., 985 F.2d 579 (11th Cir. 1993) (According to established precedent, this court can weigh the improvement of position test even in a post-petition setoff situation, and appears bound to do so where no relief from the automatic stay has been requested by the creditor.).

n27

27. The section states that it applies if a creditor offsets a mutual debt owing to the debtor against a claim against the debtor on or within 90 days before the date of the filing of the petition. 11 U.S.C. § 553(b); see Sandoz v. Conoco, Inc. (In re Delta Energy Resources, Inc.), 67 B.R. 8, 11 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1986); Exxon Corp. v. Compton Corp. (In re Compton Corp.), 6 C.B.C.2d 1326, 1329, 22 B.R. 276, 278 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1982).

n28

28. See Braniff Airways, Inc. v. Exxon Co. USA, 814 F.2d 1030, 1040 n.11, 16 C.B.C.2d 1447, 1459 (5th Cir. 1987); see also Durham v. SMI Indus. Corp., 882 F.2d 881, 884 (4th Cir. 1989).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 553.03[1][d] and [f] (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. 739 F.2d 870, 11 C.B.C.2d 834 (3d Cir. 1984).

n31

31. The obligation was contingent on the debtor's surviving to the end of each month. Only if that occurred would the debtor be entitled to any benefit. See Lee v. Schweiker, 739 F.2d 870, 877, 11 C.B.C.2d 834, 842 (3d Cir. 1984); see also In re Anes, 195 F.3d 177, 183 (3d Cir. 1999).

n32

32. Assiante v. Davisville Credit Union (In re Assiante), 28 B.R. 903, 905 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1983).

n33

33. See Quinn v. Montrose State Bank (In re Intermountain Porta Storage, Inc.), 74 B.R. 1011, 1017 (D. Colo. 1987); Moody & Newton, Inc. v. Sun Bank/Suncoast, N.A. (In re Moody & Newton, Inc.), 64 B.R. 211, 212 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1986).

n34

34. See Smith v. Mark Twain Nat'l Bank, 805 F. 2d 278, 291-92, 15 C.B.C.2d 1160, 1176 (8th Cir. 1986).

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 553.06[1][b] (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 549(a)(2)(B); see ch. 549 supra.

n37

37. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 553.09[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n38

38. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 553.09[1][a] (Matthew Bender); see also Brook v. Republic Bank (In re Clearwater Discount Marine, Inc.), 150 B.R. 74, 75-76 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1993); Putney v. Barnett Bank (In re W & T Enter. Inc.), 84 B.R. 838, 839-40 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1988).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

141 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Non-Ordinary-Course Use, Sale or Lease of Property

2008 Emerging Issues 1351

Collier on Non-Ordinary-Course Use, Sale or Lease of Property

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Though trustees and debtors in possession have the right to seek approval to use, sell or lease property of the estate outside the ordinary course of business, specific steps must be taken to obtain approval for same. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses Bankruptcy Code § 363, covering the mandatory notice and opportunity for a hearing, objections which can be made to proposed sales and the standard for their approval.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 363(c) authorizes the trustee, debtor in possession or chapter 13 debtor engaged in business n1 to use, sell or lease property of the estate in the ordinary course of business n2 without the need for notice or a hearing, if the continued operation of the business was authorized n3 and the court does not order otherwise. This provision is of particular importance in chapter 11 reorganization cases and in chapter 12 or 13 cases involving businesses, wherein the continued operation is essential to the preservation of the going concern value of the business. It can also be of importance in a chapter 7 case in which the trustee needs to complete performance under particular contracts or to take other ordinary business actions that will be necessary to maximize the value of the assets to be liquidated.

The absence of a notice and hearing requirement applies to entities with an interest in the property, such as a lien, as well as to general unsecured creditors. Under this provision, therefore, the trustee or debtor in possession may continue to use, sell, or lease property in the ordinary course of business even if the property is subject to a security interest or other encumbrance. n4 Of course, the trustee must provide adequate protection if requested by an entity with an interest in the property.

Ordinary Course of Business

In order for the trustee or debtor in possession to use, sell or lease property of the estate without the need for prior notice and a hearing, the proposed use, sale, or lease must be in the ordinary course of business. If the action is not in the ordinary course of business, it may be avoidable under section 549, which permits avoidance of postpetition transfers of property that were not authorized under section 363 or by the court. n5 Thus, in any case in which the parties are unsure about whether their transaction is in the ordinary course of business, it is advisable to comply with the notice and hearing requirement of section 363(b) rather than to rely on the ordinary course of business authorization under section 363(c).

Courts have developed two commonly used tests for determining whether a transaction is in the ordinary course of business: (1) horizontal dimension test; and (2) vertical dimension (also known as the reasonable expectations) test. n6

Horizontal Dimension Test. The horizontal dimension test looks to similarly situated businesses and determines whether the transaction at issue is one that would normally be entered into by similar businesses. n7 In effect, this test is aimed at determining whether the transaction is abnormal or unusual, in which case it is probably not in the ordinary course of business, or whether it is a reasonably common type of transaction. n8 Significantly, a transaction may be considered reasonably common even if it does not occur frequently, provided that it is an ordinary type of transaction within the business and the industry. n9

Vertical Dimension Test. The vertical dimension test reviews the transaction from the perspective of creditors, asking whether the transaction is one that creditors would reasonably expect the debtor or trustee to enter into. n10 This test measures the types of risks that creditors impliedly agreed to when they extended credit to the debtor and determines whether the transaction at issue is within the range of risks reasonably expected by creditors. n11 Under this test, even a transaction that might be ordinary for similar businesses might not be ordinary for the debtor's business. n12 For example, it might be unusual for a relatively small business to undertake a particularly large transaction, even if other larger businesses in the same industry might do so as a matter of course. On the other hand, transactions of a type that the debtor commonly engaged in, or which the debtor might have reasonably been expected to engage in prepetition, are likely to be within the ordinary course of business after the commencement of a case, whether or not common in the debtor's industry.

Limitation on Trustee's Right to Use, Sell or Lease Property

There are at least four other significant limitations on the trustee's rights to use, sell or lease property in the ordinary course of business. First, while the business of the debtor is presumed to operate postpetition in chapter 11, n13 chapter 12 n14 and chapter 13, n15 the court may tailor the trustee's rights and powers to the needs of the case. In chapter 7 cases, where operation is the exception, the order authorizing continued operation of the business may limit the right of the trustee to sell, use or lease property. n16 Secondly, in chapter 11 cases, the trustee is subject to certain rights of secured parties with interests in aircraft or rolling stock. n17 Third, the trustee may not use, sell, or lease in any manner inconsistent with any relief from the automatic stay that the court has granted to a party with an interest in the property. n18 Fourth, the court may impose restrictions on use, sale, or lease as necessary to provide adequate protection of a party's interest in property of the estate. n19 The final and most important exception is when the property is cash collateral. Recognizing that cash and cash equivalents are easily dissipated, the Code places strict limitations on a trustee's ability to use such property.

Cash Collateral; Definition; § 363(a)

Section 363(a) defines cash collateral as cash, negotiable instruments, documents of title, securities, deposit accounts, or other cash equivalents whenever acquired in which the estate and an entity other than the estate have an interest. The term security is defined in section 101 to include a variety of investment claims or interests, including stocks, bonds, notes, and interests in limited partnerships. Because securities are included in the definition of cash collateral, a trustee is subject to the rules with respect to cash collateral when seeking to use or sell these investment vehicles. n20 Under this provision, cash and cash equivalents subject to a security interest or to other interests are cash collateral. Cash collateral also includes proceeds, products, offspring, rents, or profits of property in which the entity has a security interest. n21 Cash collateral does not include non-cash assets that can be converted to cash, no matter how easily. n22 In addition, resolving a split among courts as to the proper treatment, n23 the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n24 amended section 363(a) to include fees, charges, accounts or other payments for the use or occupancy of rooms and other public facilities in hotels, motels, or other lodging properties.

After-Acquired Property. If collateral that is not cash collateral is converted to cash or cash equivalents during the case, and if the resulting cash or cash equivalents become collateral under applicable nonbankruptcy law and section 552, the collateral becomes cash collateral subject to the provisions of section 363(c). n25 Although section 552(a) abrogates after-acquired property clauses in security agreements, after-acquired property is subject to a prepetition security interest if the agreement covers such property and the property is proceeds, products, offspring, rents or profits of property subject to the prepetition agreement or hotel revenues generated by such property, unless the court orders otherwise. Thus, for example, the trustee may sell inventory or collect accounts in the ordinary course of business without court approval, since these are not cash collateral, but the cash proceeds will be cash collateral, even if acquired by the trustee after the commencement of the case, because the cash is proceeds of the inventory or receivables, unless the court orders otherwise under section 552(b). n26 Property that the debtor acquires postpetition that is not proceeds, product, offspring, rents or profit of property of the estate is not cash collateral even when deposited with the creditor. n27

The language of section 363(a) is intentionally broad to deal with situations in which an entity has an interest, other than a security interest, in the cash or cash equivalents. n28 To illustrate, a bank with a right of setoff is treated as the holder of a secured claim under section 506(a) n29 notwithstanding that it does not have a security interest. n30 Under section 363(a), the deposit account that is subject to the setoff right is considered cash collateral.

Hotel Revenues: After-Acquired Revenues. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n31 amended section 363(a) to include fees, charges, accounts or other payments for the use or occupancy of rooms and other public facilities in hotels, motels, or other lodging properties in the definition of cash collateral. A parallel amendment was made to section 552(b) to recognize interests in after acquired hotel revenues. n32

Before the 1994 amendments, a majority of bankruptcy courts had held the view that hotel revenues were accounts, rather than rents or profits; thus, a creditor's interest therein did not carry forward to revenues generated postpetition. n33 The trend among the appellate courts, however, was to classify hotel revenues as rents or profits. n34 Authority was further split on the issue whether state or federal law governed classification of hotel revenues as rents, proceeds, profits or the like. The majority followed Butner v. United States n35 for the proposition that state law defines a party's interest in property. n36 In In re Tollman-Hundley Dalton, L.P., n37 however, the court held that federal law defined the nature of the property interest. The court concluded that section 552(b) was intended to cover, as a matter of federal law, a wide range of derivative interests; therefore, hotel revenues, however characterized under state law, fell within the broad definition of rents. The 1994 amendments to sections 363(a) and 552(b) clarified that after-acquired hotel revenues could be subjected to a prepetition security interest and are cash collateral for purposes of section 363.

Significantly, however, the 1994 amendments did not resolve the question whether these revenues are rents or accounts. This issue is of some importance in terms of the proper perfection device. n38 If the revenues are rents, an interest in them must be perfected under real estate law. If they are accounts, the interest must be perfected under the Uniform Commercial Code. Because this issue is unresolved, a careful lender will perfect an interest in hotel revenues under both systems, filing in the real estate records and in the U.C.C. records.

Perfection of Interest in Hotel Revenues. Section 552(b) was also amended to delete the requirement that the right to rents and hotel revenues depends on applicable nonbankruptcy law. n39 This requirement led to considerable litigation n40 about whether applicable nonbankruptcy law might require seizure of the property, or appointment of a receiver, in order to perfect an interest in the revenue from the property. The revision was intended to clarify that lenders may have a valid interest in rents and hotel revenues notwithstanding their failure to have fully perfected under state law. n41 Nevertheless, because the interest remains subject to the trustee's avoidance powers, including the trustee's status as a judicial lien creditor and a bona fide purchaser of real property, the interest will need to be properly recorded in order to be effective against the trustee.

Perfection of Interest in Rents. A creditor taking a mortgage on real estate will often also take an interest in the rents generated by the real estate. Although pursuant to section 552(a) security interests generally do not extend to property acquired after the commencement of a bankruptcy case, section 552(b) provides that an interest in rents may continue.

Before the 1994 amendments, however, the interest continued only if it was perfected under applicable nonbankruptcy law. Courts disagreed about whether this required simply recordation in the real estate records, or whether a lender might have to gain control over the rents, such as by the appointment of a receiver. n42

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 amended section 552(b) to delete the reference to applicable nonbankruptcy law, clarifying that absolute perfection is not required. n43 The intent is to provide that lenders may have a valid interest in rents notwithstanding their failure to have fully perfected as to the rents under state law. n44 Nevertheless, recordation is still required as to the mortgage, since the lender's right to the rents remains subject to the trustee's avoidance powers, which include the power to avoid interests that are ineffective against a bona fide purchaser. n45

Absolute Assignments of Rents. In some states, an assignment of rents may be considered absolute, with title to the rents passing to the assignee and the assignor retaining no interest in the rents. n46 Under such an arrangement, the estate may have no interest in the rents. This would preclude the treatment of the rents as cash collateral under section 363. n47 Where the debtor retains an interest in the rents, however, they may be cash collateral and subject to use, even if in the secured creditor's possession. n48 When the lender has received a purported absolute assignment of rents, careful review of the intent and practices of the parties and of applicable nonbankruptcy law will be appropriate to determine whether the assignment is truly absolute or is absolute only in form. n49

Use of Cash Collateral; § 363(c)(2)

Section 363(c)(2) provides that the trustee or debtor in possession may not use, sell or lease cash collateral without either (1) the consent of the creditor with an interest in the collateral or (2) court authorization, granted after notice and a hearing. n50 In the absence of the creditor's consent, n51 the trustee may use cash collateral only with the approval of the court which will normally require adequate protection for the holder of the adverse interest. n52

The requirements of notice and a hearing, and of court authorization, before cash collateral may be used, sold or leased may at first blush appear to be particularly onerous to a debtor in possession faced with a genuine emergency. However, often a secured party will consent to limited use of the cash collateral in order to preserve the value of its interest in other collateral. Payment of expenses of preserving non-cash collateral, payroll expenses to keep the business operating and other immediate cash needs may be as important to a secured party early in a case as it is to the debtor in possession.

Sometimes a secured party will seek, in conjunction with an agreement to authorize the debtor in possession to use cash collateral, an agreement cross-collateralizing its prepetition debt with postpetition collateral. In addition, the secured party may seek administrative priority for its entire claim as the price of agreeing to the debtor in possession's use of cash collateral. In general, such use of cross-collateralization or administrative priority is questionable at best. n53 Although the secured party is entitled to protection of its interest in the cash collateral, it is not entitled to improve its position with respect to any unsecured claim that it holds. Such an improvement would be at the expense of other unsecured creditors and would violate the underlying bankruptcy notion of equality of treatment among similarly situated creditors.

Even in the absence of the secured party's consent, the court has ample power to act quickly on a request to use cash collateral. The term notice and a hearing means appropriate notice and perhaps no hearing at all, unless there is an objection. n54 When a hearing is required it may in some cases be prompt and somewhat informal. For example, in the case of a genuine emergency, such as an impending payroll, the notice may be telephonic and the hearing, if necessary, may be quite informal.

Section 363(c)(3) provides that the hearing shall be scheduled in accordance with the needs of the debtor and that the court shall act promptly on any request for authorization to use cash collateral. n55 This supports the notion that the court can quickly grant authority to use cash collateral for pressing needs.

Procedure for Hearing on Use of Cash Collateral. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 4001(b) governs the procedure to be followed in seeking authorization to use cash collateral. Rule Rule 4001(b) provides that a motion for authority to use cash collateral is made as a contested matter under Rule 9014. Notice of the motion and of the time and place of the preliminary and final hearing must be given to all entities that have an interest in the cash collateral, to any committee appointed under the Code or, if no committee has been appointed, to the holders of the 20 largest unsecured claims, Bankruptcy Rule 1007(d) excluding insiders, who will be included in the list filed by the debtor under), and to such other entities as the court may direct. The Advisory Committee Note to Rule 4001(b) offers guidance as to what should be set forth in the notice, which includes the name and address of the parties with an interest in the cash collateral, a proposed budget and the nature of the adequate protection which is to be offered. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n56 amended Bankruptcy Rule 7004 to require that service of process on a bank in an adversary proceeding or a contested matter be by certified mail addressed to an officer of the bank except in limited circumstances. This should not preclude telephonic notice in emergencies, but will apply to situations in which a contested matter is initiated by service by mail under Rule 7004. n57

While section 363(c)(3) and Rule 4001 recognize that a hearing for authority to use cash collateral may be a preliminary or a final hearing, when a hearing is held on short notice in an emergency situation, the hurried nature of the hearing suggests the wisdom of having a later final hearing for which the participants will have had more preparation time. In this regard, Rule 4001(b) provides that a final hearing may be held on no less than 15 days' notice. Prior to the final hearing, if the trustee needs authority to use cash collateral, authority may be granted at a preliminary hearing. However, the rule provides that the court may authorize the use of only that cash collateral as may be necessary to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the estate. At the final hearing, cash collateral usage that has been authorized or consented to may be further adjusted or conditioned. Although generally an order authorizing use of property is automatically stayed for 10 days, an order authorizing use of cash collateral is excepted from the rule. n58

Segregation of Cash Collateral. Section 363(c)(4) provides that a trustee is required to segregate and account for any cash collateral in the trustee's possession, custody or control. In the absence of authorization to use cash collateral, the trustee is responsible for maintaining the collateral for the protection of the creditor with an interest in the collateral. Segregation of cash collateral is also important to secured creditors in view of the requirement of nonbankruptcy law that a creditor be able to identify cash proceeds in order to maintain an interest in the proceeds. n59

This requirement will, in most circumstances, apply to cash collateral on hand at the time of filing and cash generated during the case through the accumulation of after-acquired cash, such as rents or hotel revenues or from the use, sale or lease of non-cash collateral and payments for inventory or receivables. n60 When the trustee has previously been authorized to use cash collateral, a common component of the adequate protection afforded the affected entity is an appropriate accounting.

Purpose of Cash Collateral Rules. The protection offered by the cash collateral provisions does not implement any nonbankruptcy law limitations inherent to cash collateral, ⁿ¹ but rather is intended to recognize the unique nature of cash collateral, and the risk to the entity with an interest in such collateral, arising from the dissipation or consumption of the collateral in a rehabilitative effort in bankruptcy. ⁿ² The protection applies whether or not there has been a default that would limit the trustee's use of such collateral.

Chapter 13 Cases. Section 1303 grants a chapter 13 debtor the right of a trustee, pursuant to section 363(b), to use, sell or lease property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. This requires notice and a hearing prior to such use, sale or lease and, pursuant to section 363(e), provision of adequate protection of an interest held by another entity, upon request by that entity. In addition, section 1304 grants a business debtor the power of a trustee, pursuant to section 363(c), to use, sell or lease, in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate. This latter authorization is subject to the limitations on the use of cash collateral found in section 363(c)(2).

A question that has arisen is whether a chapter 13 debtor who is not engaged in business may be authorized to use cash collateral out of the ordinary course of business. In general, courts have found that although the cash collateral rules are found in section 363(c), which is referred to only in conjunction with the use of property by chapter 13 business debtors, a nonbusiness debtor may use cash collateral, with the consent of the secured party or with court approval after furnishing adequate protection. ⁿ³ This approach recognizes that section 363(b) authorizes the use of any property of the estate, including cash collateral, after notice and a hearing. Thus, for example, a debtor whose automobile is destroyed and who receives an insurance recovery may obtain authorization to acquire a different vehicle with the insurance proceeds, even though the proceeds are cash collateral. The security interest would, of course, attach to the newly acquired vehicle.

Although it appears that the chapter 13 debtor should be entitled to use the cash collateral after notice and a hearing, and section 102 provides that the term after notice and a hearing does not mandate a hearing if none is requested, the better approach is for a court to review any such transaction even in the absence of an objection, and to approve or disapprove the use of cash collateral out of the ordinary course of business, based on whether the secured party is adequately protected. The cash collateral rules developed because cash is so easily dissipated. This danger is no less apparent when property is used out of the ordinary course of business than it is when property is used in the ordinary course. Thus, court approval should be obtained before the debtor uses cash collateral even if the use is not in the ordinary course of business.

For a complete discussion of Code section 363, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 363 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1107 (chapter 11), 1304 (chapter 13); see also 11 U.S.C. §§ 1203, 1204 (chapter 12).

ⁿ²

2. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 344 (1977) [hereinafter House Report]; S. Rep. No. 989, 95th

Cong., 2d Sess. 55 (1978) [hereinafter Senate Report]; see Burlington Northern R.R. Co. v. Dant & Russell, Inc. (In re Dant & Russell, Inc.), 853 F.2d 700, 20 C.B.C.2d 369 (9th Cir. 1988) (discussion of what constitutes the ordinary course of business).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 721, which concerns the authorization to operate the business in a chapter 7 case, provides: The court may authorize the trustee to operate the business of the debtor for a limited period, if such operation is in the best interest of the estate and consistent with the orderly liquidation of the estate. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 721 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 1108, which pertains to the authorization to operate the business in a chapter 11 case, states: Unless the court, on request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, orders otherwise, the trustee may operate the debtor's business. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1108 (Matthew Bender). Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a), a debtor in possession in a chapter 11 case has the rights, powers and duties of a trustee. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1107 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See 11 U.S.C. § 363(f)(1) (sale may be free and clear of such other interest if applicable nonbankruptcy law permits sale of such property free and clear of such interest); Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.06[2] (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. Rajala v. Langer (In re Lodge Am., Inc.), 239 B.R. 580 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1999) (repayment of unauthorized loan wasn't in the ordinary course, even though loan proceeds were used to pay ordinary course expenses).

n6

6. See, e.g., In re Roth Am., Inc., 975 F.2d 949 (3d Cir. 1992); In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988).

n7

7. See In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988).

n8

8. See id.; see also Johnston v. First Street Cos., Inc., 56 B.R. 31 (D. Minn. 1985).

n9

9. In re Roth Am., Inc., 975 F.2d 949 (3d Cir. 1992); In re Johns-Manville Corp., 60 B.R. 612, 618 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 801 F.2d 60 (2d Cir. 1986).

n10

10. See In re Watford, 159 B.R. 597 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

n11

11. See In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988); In re James A. Phillips, Inc., 29 B.R. 391 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).

n12

12. Johnston v. First Street Cos., Inc., 56 B.R. 31 (D. Minn. 1985).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1108; see also Amdura Nat'l Distrib. Co. v. Amdura Corp. (In re Amdura Corp.), 75 F.3d 1447 (10th Cir. 1996).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1203, 1204.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1304.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 721 (authorization to operate business for limited period when it is in the best interests of the estate and consistent with an orderly liquidation of the estate).

n17

17. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1110, 1168; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1110.01 et seq. and 1168.01 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 363(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.04 (Matthew Bender).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 363(e); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.05 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. See, e.g., In re Weisberg, 193 B.R. 916 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996).

n21

21. It has also been held that cash collateral includes fees charged for self storage units, Wattson Pacific Ventures v. Valley Fed. Savs. Loan (In re Safeguard Self-Storage Trust), 2 F.3d 967, 29 C.B.C.2d 997 (9th Cir. 1993), cash dividends paid on stock pledged as collateral, FDIC v. Hastie (In re Hastie), 2 F.3d 1042 (10th Cir. 1993), and funds received from the collection of accounts, In re Bumper Sales, Inc., 907 F.2d 1430, 23 C.B.C.2d 498 (4th Cir. 1990).

n22

22. Agency Servs., Inc. v. Keck Mahin & Cate (In re Keck Mahin & Cate), 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5056 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 1999) (unearned insurance premium).

n23

23. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994); see also Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Tollman-Hundley Dalton, L.P., 74 F.3d 1120, 1124 (11th Cir. 1996) (under pre-1994 law, federal, not state, law controlled scope of rents, profits, product, offspring and proceeds, and under federal law hotel revenues constitute rents within meaning of section 552(b) because section 552(b) was intended to cover a wide range of derivative property; in support of this view, court looked to the 1994 amendments).

n24

24. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214 (1994).

n25

25. S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 55 (1978).

n26

26. Unsecured Creditors Committee v. Marepcon Fin. Corp. (In re Bumper Sales, Inc.), 907 F.2d 1430, 23 C.B.C.2d 498 (4th Cir. 1990); In re Kerner Printing Co., 178 B.R. 363 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995).

n27

27. Agricultural Fed. Credit Union v. Harris (In re Harris), 260 B.R. 753 (Bankr. D. Md. 2001) (credit union share account deposit).

n28

28. See, e.g., National Bank of Ga. v. Air Atlanta, Inc. (In re Air Atlantic, Inc.), 74 B.R. 426 (Bankr. N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 81 B.R. 724 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.02 (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. See In re Quality Interiors, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1823, 127 B.R. 391 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1991).

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214(a) (1994).

n32

32. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214(b) (1994).

n33

33. See, e.g., In re Punta Gorda Assocs., 137 B.R. 535 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1992); In re Shore Haven Motor Inn, Inc., 124 B.R. 617 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1991); In re GGVXX Ltd., 130 B.R. 322 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991); In re Investment Hotel Props., Ltd., 109 B.R. 990 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

n34

34. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994); Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994) (federal law determines meaning of proceeds, products, profits, rents, offspring or product, and hotel room revenues and receipts constitute profits; state law determines perfection in such interests); S.F. Drake Assocs. v. Security Pacific Nat'l Bank (In re S.F. Drake Hotel Assocs.), 147 B.R. 538 (N.D. Cal. 1992); see also In re Churchill Props. VIII Ltd. P'ship, 164 B.R. 607 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994) (postpetition hotel revenues constitute rents); In re Miami Center Assocs. Ltd., 144 B.R. 937 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1992) (postpetition hotel revenues constitute profits). But see In re HRC Joint Venture, 175 B.R. 948 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994), in which the court held that payments received from a hotel operator under a management agreement which entitled the operator to receive the hotel revenues and obligated the operator to make payments to the owner were not room revenues, but were merely remittances under the agreement between the debtor in possession hotel owner and the hotel operator. As such, the mortgagee's interest could not attach to the remittances to which the debtor in possession became entitled after commencement of the chapter 11 case because the remittances were after acquired property under section 552(a) and the mortgagee's interest was not protected by section 552(b).

n35

35. 440 U.S. 48, 99 S. Ct. 914, 59 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1979).

n36

36. See, e.g., Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994) (under California law hotel revenues constitute rents within the scope of section 552(b)); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994) (same outcome under Louisiana law).

n37

37. 74 F.3d 1120 (11th Cir. 1996); see also Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994) (federal law determines meaning of proceeds, products, profits, rents, offspring or product and hotel room revenues and receipts constitute profits; state law determines perfection in such interests).

n38

38. See Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994).

n39

39. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214 (1994).

n40

40. See, e.g., In re Bellevue Place Assocs., 173 B.R. 1009 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

n41

41. Section-by-Section Description of H.R. 5116, 140 Cong. Rec. H10,764 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994).

n42

42. Compare In re Wheaton Oaks Office Partners Ltd. P'ship, 27 F.3d 1234, 31 C.B.C.2d 840 (7th Cir. 1994) (Illinois law requires recordation of mortgage to perfect assignment of rents), Vienna Park Props. v. United Postal Sav. Ass'n (In re Vienna Park Props.), 976 F.2d 106 (2d Cir. 1992) (under Virginia law creditor need not have taken any steps to enforce security interest), and In re Baltic Assocs., L.P., 170 B.R. 568 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (under Delaware law interest in rents is perfected upon recordation of executed security agreements), with Casbeer v. State Fed. Savs. & Loan of Lubbock (In re Casbeer), 793 F.2d 1436 (5th Cir. 1986) (under Texas law, assignment is not effective until mortgagee obtains possession of the property, impounds rents, secures appoint of receiver or takes similar action), and In re Turtle Creek, Ltd., 194 B.R. 267 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1996) (mortgagee must take additional steps such as foreclosure, sequestration of rents [appointment of a receiver to collect rent], or some similar action in order to perfect a lien in rents generated by a mortgagor's property in Alabama.), and In re Concord Mill Ltd. P'ship, 136 B.R. 896 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1992) (notice to tenants plus entry or attempted entry if thwarted by debtor).

n43

43. See Lyons v. Federal Savs. Bank (In re Lyons), 193 B.R. 637, 649 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996).

n44

44. 140 Cong. Rec. H10,764 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994) (section-by-section analysis of H.R. 5116).

n45

45. See, e.g., Scottsdale Medical Pavilion v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. in Rehabilitation (In re Scottsdale Medical Pavilion), 159 B.R. 295 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993), aff'd, 52 F.3d 244 (9th Cir. 1995).

n46

46. See Commercial Bank v. Mountain View Village, Inc., 5 F.3d 34, 29 C.B.C.2d 1241 (3d Cir. 1993) (Pennsylvania); First Fidelity Bank, N.A. v. Jason Realty, L.P. (In re Jason Realty, L.P.), 59 F.3d 423 (3d Cir. 1995) (New Jersey); Wolters Village, Ltd. v. Village Props., Ltd. (In re Village Props., Ltd.), 723 F.2d 441 (5th Cir. 1984) (absolute assignment of rents transfer title to rents; Texas courts reluctant to construe assignments as absolute).

n47

47. See In re Villamont-Oxford Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 230 B.R. 445 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998).

n48

48. In re Dupell, 235 B.R. 783 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999).

n49

49. See, e.g., Condor One, Inc. v. Turtle Creek, Ltd. (In re Turtle Creek, Ltd.), 194 B.R. 267 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1996) (close reading of assignment required); In re Dacey, 80 B.R. 206 (D. Nev. 1987).

n50

50. In re Cross Baking Co., Inc., 818 F.2d 1027, 17 C.B.C.2d 236 (1st Cir. 1987).

n51

51. Freightliner Mkt. Dev. Corp. v. Silver Wheel Freightlines, Inc., 823 F.2d 362, 368-69 (9th Cir. 1987) (implied consent is not sufficient).

n52

52. In re Goode, 235 B.R. 584 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1999) (debtor's need for funds could not substitute for adequate protection).

n53

53. See, e.g., In re Willingham Investments, Inc., 203 B.R. 75 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1996); see also In re Saybrook Mfg. Co., Inc., 963 F.2d 1490, 27 C.B.C.2d 277 (11th Cir. 1992) (refusing to permit cross-collateralization of prepetition debt with unencumbered estate property in the context of debtor in possession financing).

n54

54. 11 U.S.C. § 102.

n55

55. Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, 964 F.2d 797 (8th Cir. 1992) (authority given ex parte to use cash collateral when necessary for debtor to maintain operations); Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. v. Center Wholesale, Inc. (In re Center Wholesale, Inc.), 759 F.2d 1440, 1449 & n.21, 12 C.B.C.2d 1107, 1118 & n.21 (9th Cir. 1985); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Plaza Family P'ship (In re Plaza Family P'ship), 95 B.R. 166 (E.D. Cal. 1989) (cash collateral hearing on seven days notice not an abuse of discretion).

n56

56. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 114 (1994).

n57

57. Notice by certified mail is also not required when the institution has appeared by its attorney, in which case the attorney may be served by first class mail.

n58

58. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 6004(g).

n59

59. See U.C.C. § 9-306(2) (1995) (provides, in part, that a security interest continues in any identifiable proceeds including collections received by the debtor. (emphasis supplied)); see also In re Patio & Porch Sys., Inc., 194 B.R. 569 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996).

n60

60. Scottsdale Medical Pavilion v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. in Rehabilitation (In re Scottsdale Medical Pavilion), 159 B.R. 295 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993), aff'd, 52 F.3d 244 (9th Cir. 1995) (rents collected prepetition are cash collateral and subject to the use limitations of section 363).

n61

61. See Reconstruction Fin. Corp. v. Kaplan, 185 F.2d 791 (1st Cir. 1950). Section 552(a) limits the effect of after-acquired property clauses in bankruptcy, but section 552(b) validates, unless inequitable, the secured creditor's right to proceeds to the extent provided by contract and applicable law. In re J. Catton Farms, Inc., 779 F.2d 1242 (7th Cir. 1985); Section 9-315(d)(3) of the Uniform Commercial Code limits the security interest of a secured creditor in second generation proceeds acquired with cash proceeds to proceeds of a type as to which the security interest attaches and the secured creditor has already perfected its security interest or perfects within 20 days after it attaches.

n62

62. Freightliner Mkt. Dev. Corp. v. Silver Wheel Freightlines, Inc., 823 F.2d 362, 368 (9th Cir. 1987).

n63

63. See, e.g., In re Carey, 202 B.R. 796 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1996); Woods v. John Fox Oldsmobile (In re Woods), 97 B.R. 850 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1989).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

142 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Notice Requirements of Section 342

2008 Emerging Issues 1352

Collier on Notice Requirements of Section 342

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 342 of the Bankruptcy Code provides several avenues for creditors to designate where notices in a bankruptcy action are to be sent to them. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the methods to designate an address, the time that such designation becomes effective, and the conditions in which notice to a creditor, while not sent to the address specified by it, is still deemed effective.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Notice from Clerk That Presumption of Abuse Exists. Section 342(d) added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n1 requires the clerk to give notice to all creditors in a chapter 7 case in which the debtor is an individual if the presumption of abuse arises in the case. The notice is to be given within ten days after the filing of the petition. n2 This language is somewhat redundant, because the presumption of abuse can only arise in a chapter 7 case and only in a case of an individual debtor. n3

Presumably, the clerk will determine whether a presumption of abuse arises from the debtor's statement of whether a presumption of abuse exists, which is required to be provided as part of calculations in the debtor's schedules filed with the clerk under section 521. n4 If the clerk is not informed by the debtor's filings that a presumption of abuse arises, the clerk need not give any notice. Certainly, the clerk is in no position to do calculations under the complicated means test in individual cases.

The notice under section 342(d) is only one of several notices creditors may receive concerning the presumption of abuse. The United States trustee, after reviewing all materials filed by the debtor in each individual chapter 7 case, must within 10 days after the meeting of creditors file with the court a statement of whether the presumption of abuse arises. n5 The court must then, within five days after receiving the statement, provide a copy of it to all creditors. n6 Within thirty days after filing this statement, if the presumption of abuse exists, the United States trustee must either file a motion to dismiss the case or file another statement that indicates why such a motion is not being filed. n7 Creditors, or at least those who receive electronic notices of each document filed, will receive notice of this statement as well.

Creditor Request for Address to Be Used in Particular Case. New section 342(e) allows a creditor to file with the court and serve on the debtor notice of an address that it wants used for notices in a particular case. n8 Any notice provided by the court or the debtor more than five days after such an address request is filed and served must use the requested address. n9 Section 342(e) is clear that the creditor's address request must be both filed and served on the debtor to be operative.

This provision appears to override the more general address provision discussed above, n10 though it does not expressly so state. Because the drafters of the bill were focused on notices by the debtor or the court to creditors in consumer cases, they failed to include in this provision notices from other parties, such as the trustee, United States trustee or other creditors. Apparently, these parties, and participants in chapter 9, 11, and 12 cases, to which the provision does not apply, do not have to follow the dictates of this subsection. In any event, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002(g) already afforded creditors the right to designate an address for notices in a particular case n11 and, with the advent of electronic filing and noticing, most notices will soon be electronic and available to any creditor.

Creditor Request for Address to Be Used for All Cases in Designated Courts. Section 342(f)(1), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n12 gives creditors the right to file a notice in any bankruptcy court designating an address to be used for all chapter 7 and chapter 13 cases in all courts or in particular designated courts. Beginning no later than 30 days after such a notice is filed, all notices to the creditor that are required to be provide by the designated courts in such cases must be provided at the address in the notice filed under section 342(f), unless a notice has been filed under section 342(e) requesting a different address to be used in a particular case. n13 It appears that the address filed under section 342(e) prevails over the address filed under section 342(f) even if the latter address is filed subsequent to the former address.

This provision may require some adjustments by the bankruptcy clerks' offices and by the judiciary's Bankruptcy Noticing Center. The Bankruptcy Noticing Center already uses some form of address matching software, but that software may or may not be able to accommodate creditors' requests if those requests demand that different addresses be used for different courts.

The advent of electronic notices has greatly diminished the significance of these provisions. Not only are electronic notices provided by the court, but also many creditors subscribe to private vendors who provide notice virtually immediately when their customers file bankruptcy cases, probably the most important event of which creditors receive notice. Indeed, nothing in section 342(f) would preclude a creditor from providing an address for electronic notices in all cases, at least if the courts are equipped to fulfill that request; the section speaks of notices provided, not mailed.

Effective Notice. The import of the notice provisions added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code is dictated by section 342(g), also added by those amendments. n14 Subsection (g)(1) states that notice provided to a creditor other than in accordance with section 342 is not effective notice unless brought to attention of the creditor.

The first question raised by this provision is when it should be applicable. Many notices given by a debtor, especially early in the case, do not come within the ambit of section 342(c) because they are not notices that are required by the Code, rules, court order, or other applicable laws. For example, notice from a debtor to a creditor that a case has been filed, intended to prevent an imminent foreclosure or repossession, is not required by any rule or Code provision. Presumably, then, it is in accordance with section 342 because the section simply does not set any particular requirements for such notice unless a creditor has requested a particular address for that particular case under section 342(e), which is unlikely to have happened in the first few days a case is pending. Read any other way, section 342 would not provide any way for such notice to a creditor to be given in accordance with section 342, since the section simply does not apply to such notices. It is almost inconceivable that courts would adopt a reading that makes it impossible for debtors to effectively notify creditors about the automatic stay. So for purposes of a debtor immediately notifying creditors of the automatic stay, the provision regarding the address at which a creditor requests correspondence and the other provisions of section 342 are irrelevant.

Brought to the attention also is not defined, except by exclusion. Under section 342(g)(1), n15 if a creditor has established reasonable procedures to deliver notices to a responsible person or department, then notice is not considered brought to the attention of such creditor until it reaches that person or department. This provision will give debtor's fertile ground for discovery into a creditor's reasonable procedures, including whether the creditor has given an address to the Bankruptcy Noticing Center for notices, whether it uses BANKO (an online service that notifies creditors of bankruptcy filings) to check on filings, and what mechanisms are in place to transmit timely notices to appropriate departments. If a debtor gives reasonable notice, a creditor should have procedures that transmit it almost instantly. It is hard to imagine how a creditor that does not have a procedure for immediate transmission of notices received by its attorneys, collection staff, repossession agents, and collection agents could be deemed to have reasonable procedures. And presumably, by negative implication, if such reasonable procedures do not exist, any actual notice given to a creditor should be deemed brought to the creditor's attention. So, in the end, any reasonable notice should be sufficient to be effective notice for purposes of section 342(g). Thus, the only effect of section 342(g) is to give creditors who have developed reasonable procedures protection in cases in which unreasonable notice is given, such as handing notice of the bankruptcy case to a sales employee in an unrelated facility.

In any event, the only apparent relevance of lack of effective notice is that no monetary penalty for violation of the section 362 automatic stayⁿ¹⁶ or the section 542ⁿ¹⁷ and section 543ⁿ¹⁸ turnover requirements can be imposed on a creditor who has not received effective notice. Section 342 does not affect the discharge of debts or violations of the discharge injunction. Nor does it preclude other remedies against the creditor, or remedies against other entities, such as a creditor's attorney. Thus, amended section 342 is likely to have little practical effect.

For a complete discussion of Code section 342, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 342 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ⁿ²

2. 11 U.S.C. § 342(d), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ⁿ³

3. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 and ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 704(b)(1), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 704 (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. Id.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 704(b)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 704 (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 342(e), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9

9. Id.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 342(c)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 342.05 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002(g); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2002.08 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 342(f)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 342(g), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 342(g)(1), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 362, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 542; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 542 (Matthew Bender).

n18

5. 11 U.S.C. § 543; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 543 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy

(Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

143 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Continuing Validity of Security Interests in Proceeds etc.

2008 Emerging Issues 1364

Collier on Continuing Validity of Security Interests in Proceeds etc.

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the continuing validity of security interests in proceeds, products, offspring or profits, including topics such as the distinction between after-acquired property and proceeds; the limitation or elimination of prepetition security interest in proceeds based on equities of the case; and the rights asserted as a result of an avoidance action.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Modern security agreements typically cover proceeds, products, offspring or profits generated by collateral. Under the Uniform Commercial Code, sections 9-203 and 9-315, the security interest in proceeds is automatic and need not be specified in the agreement or financing statement.

Subsection (b)(1) of section 552 of the Bankruptcy Code recognizes this fact and creates an exception to the general rule of section 552(a), n1 providing that, when a prepetition security agreement covering prepetition property extends to proceeds, products, offspring or profits of that collateral, the terms of the security agreement and applicable nonbankruptcy law will be enforced against proceeds, products, offspring or profits, acquired after the date of the filing of the petition, except to any extent that the court, after notice and a hearing and based on the equities of the case, orders otherwise. n2 It must be emphasized that subsection (b)(1) creates an exception for proceeds, products, offspring or profits generated by prepetition collateral, and not for after-acquired property obtained by the debtor or the estate postpetition. n3 Applicable nonbankruptcy law will normally be Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code.

It is most common for courts, when applying section 552(b)(1), to determine issues respecting the nature and definition of proceeds, although some courts have also dealt with the definition and nature of products, offspring and profits. n4

Distinction Between After-Acquired Property and Proceeds

The distinction between after-acquired property and proceeds is not always clear. Courts have formulated several tests for distinguishing them. To distinguish the concepts of after-acquired property and proceeds, some courts have invoked Local Loan Co. v. Hunt,ⁿ⁵ which forbade the creation of an enforceable lien upon a subject not existent when the bankruptcy became effective or even arising from, or connected with, preexisting property, but brought into being solely as the fruit of the subsequent labor of the bankrupt.ⁿ⁶ Other courts, taking their cue from Local Loan, emphasize the fresh start or rehabilitative policy underlying section 552.ⁿ⁷

The reference to nonbankruptcy law in section 552(b)(1) has also been used by courts to distinguish the concepts of after-acquired property and proceeds. These courts have employed the familiar but no less amorphous terminology of the Uniform Commercial Code, which authorizes after-acquired property clauses in section 9-204 and defines proceeds in section 9-102.ⁿ⁸ Finally, some courts apply a broad definition of proceeds, relying primarily on the following legislative history to section 552: The term proceeds is not limited to the technical definition of that term in the U.C.C., but covers any property into which property subject to the security interest is converted.ⁿ⁹

Section 552(b) is intended to cover after-acquired property that is directly attributable to prepetition collateral, without addition of estate resources. Under all the tests, there have been variations on the themes of receipt, vesting, generation, conversion and substitution, intended to pinpoint the timing and manner of acquisition of the collateral prepetition and its transmutation into proceeds postpetition.ⁿ¹⁰ For example, it is well established that a creditor's prepetition security interest in a debtor's crops or in rents, income, and profits from a debtor's farmland does not encompass proceeds generated by a crop planted postpetition.ⁿ¹¹ On the other hand, some courts have held that milk produced postpetition by livestock collateralizing a prepetition lien is a product of the livestock that should not be considered to be after-acquired property.ⁿ¹² Other courts have held that second generation proceeds, such as inventory purchased with proceeds of prepetition inventory and accounts, qualify as proceeds under section 552(b)(1) if they are perfected and traceable to the original collateral.ⁿ¹³ This may turn on applicable nonbankruptcy law definitions of proceeds.ⁿ¹⁴

Section 9-315 of the Uniform Commercial Code pertains to a secured creditor's right to proceeds upon the debtor's disposition of underlying collateral. In applying section 9-315 to debtors who have filed petitions under the Bankruptcy Code, the courts have struggled with the application of section 9-315(c), which gives rise to automatic perfection of proceeds.ⁿ¹⁵

Extent of Security Interest in Proceeds; Security Agreement and Applicable Nonbankruptcy Law

Section 552(b)(1) specifies that a prepetition security interest extends to after-acquired proceeds, products, offspring or profits to the extent provided by such security agreement and by applicable nonbankruptcy law.ⁿ¹⁶ Applicable nonbankruptcy law includes case law as well as statutory law. Although state law is generally applicable under section 552(b), the United States Supreme Court has interpreted nonbankruptcy law to include federal as well as state law.ⁿ¹⁷

The extent of the security interest is generally expressed in the security agreement, although if applicable nonbankruptcy law expressly creates a security interest in proceeds, it should not matter that the security agreement fails to contain such an express provision because the law should be considered to be part of the agreement.ⁿ¹⁸

Limitation or Elimination of Prepetition Security Interest in Proceeds Based on Equities of Case

Notwithstanding the application of section 552(b)(1), the continued validity of a security interest in proceeds, products, offspring or profits of prepetition collateral under section 552(b)(1) can be limited or eliminated if ordered by the court based on the equities of the case.

Equity Exception: Protection of Interests of Secured and Unsecured Creditors. This equity exception permits the court to preserve valid security interests in proceeds and the like but, at the same time, allows the court to protect the interests of unsecured creditors. n19 If a creditor's collateral is processed and sold or proceeds are otherwise collected, either the creditor or the trustee (or the debtor in possession) may request that the court determine whether the creditor's interest in proceeds should be limited based on the equities of the case. Depending upon the court's evaluation of these equities, profit or loss may be given to the estate or to the secured party, or apportioned between them.

Another example would be when the estate puts effort into selling inventory, proceeds of which go to the secured party. Equity might require that a portion of the proceeds be used to compensate the estate for the sales effort. n20

Professionals have resorted to so-called carve out agreements or arguments for court-ordered carve outs in order to fund the costs and fees associated with representing estates in bankruptcy. These arrangements, which are designed to give professional fees priority over liens and priority claims, often rely upon Code sections 552, 506(c) and the like for statutory support. Absent consent or demonstrable benefit to the secured creditor, however, the hoped for carve out may be difficult to obtain. n21

Equity Exception: Consideration of Trustee's Use of Estate Funds to Complete Inventory. Under the equity exception in section 552(b)(1), the secured party should not receive a windfall benefit when the trustee uses assets of the estate--for example, to finish uncompleted inventory (which is proceeds of collateral acquired by the debtor prepetition) subject to a prepetition security interest. n22

The trustee may recover from the inventory or its proceeds whatever amounts, after notice and a hearing, the court deems equitable under the circumstances of the case. n23 Additionally, the trustee may recover from inventory or proceeds the reasonable, necessary costs of preserving or disposing of the collateral under section 506(c) to the extent the secured party is benefitted, whether such costs arose prepetition or postpetition. n24 Section 506(c) applies by its express terms, even if the value of the collateral has declined through use or market fluctuations, and even if the creditor is not fully secured. n25

Section 552(b)(1) does not limit the estate's recovery to costs recoverable under section 506(c). Section 552(b)(1) applies to proceeds of prepetition collateral. Section 506(c) applies to pre- or postpetition collateral or proceeds. Section 552(b)(1), unlike section 506(c), is not limited to reasonable, necessary costs and expenses of preserving, or disposing of property, which costs or expenses benefit the holder of the secured claim.

Equity Exception: Partially Secured Creditors. If the creditor is partially secured prior to the investment of free assets by the estate, it is possible that all of the profit should inure to the benefit of the estate to prevent the creditor from benefitting ahead of other creditors holding unsecured claims. n26 Section 506(a) does not specify the time at which collateral is to be valued to determine the amount of an allowed secured claim. On the other hand, if the creditor is fully secured, some portion of the profit may be allocated to pay the creditor's postpetition interest and attorney's fees under section 506(b), unless equity requires the profit to inure to the benefit of unsecured creditors before the secured party recovers interest or costs.

Equity Exception: Consideration of Improvement or Decline in Proceeds Value. A court applying section 552(b)(1) may give more or less weight to some or all of these factors, but its decision must be made according to the equities of the case. In addition to a trustee or debtor in possession's use of estate funds to complete inventory or preserve or dispose of collateral, the court's equity analysis may include considerations of any improvement or decline in value of the proceeds and whether this improvement or decline is caused by any party or is the result of impersonal forces, such as the vagaries of nature or fluctuations in the market, or the efficiencies or inefficiencies of the administration of the estate. n27

Effect of Other Code Sections; § 552(b)(1)

Although subsection 552(b)(1) preserves a secured party's prepetition security interest in postpetition proceeds, products, offspring or profits of that security interest, the subsection is explicitly subject to other sections of title 11.

Trustee's Use of Proceeds under Section 363 and Surcharge under Section 506(c). For example, the trustee or debtor in possession may use, sell or lease proceeds, products, offspring or profits under section 363. n28 Section 552(b)(1) is also subject to section 506(c), under which the trustee or debtor in possession may recover from the collateral the reasonable, necessary costs and expenses of preserving, or disposing of, such property to the extent of any benefit to the secured party. This is so even if the trustee's use of collateral results in a diminution in value of the collateral.

Trustee as Hypothetical Lien Creditor under Section 544. Section 552(b)(1) is also subject to section 544, n29 governing the trustee's hypothetical lien creditor and bona fide purchaser status. If the trustee may use the avoiding powers under subsections 544(a) or (b) to avoid the secured party's security interest, the secured party's lien will not extend to proceeds under section 552(b). n30 For example, if a secured party has an unperfected security interest in collateral that is subject to the rights of a judicial lien creditor under applicable nonbankruptcy law, the trustee can exercise rights as a hypothetical judicial lien creditor to avoid the security interest under section 544(a). n31 Some courts have suggested that a party seeking the protection of section 552(b)(1) must prove that its security interest is not avoidable. n32

Statutory Lien Avoided under Section 545. Section 552(b)(1) is also subject to section 545, n33 which sets forth the trustee's power to avoid certain statutory liens. On rare occasions, a secured party's collateral will be subject to the trustee's avoiding power under section 545. Of course, a security interest is not itself a statutory lien. But there may be a statutory lien avoidable under section 545 that encumbers the collateral and is prior to the security interest. If so, the avoided statutory lien is automatically preserved for the benefit of the estate ahead of the security interest both as to the collateral and as to proceeds.

For example, a landlord may have a rent lien against personal property of a debtor under state law. Suppose also that the rent lien is superior to any prior or subsequent security interest of a secured party in such personal property. If the debtor files a bankruptcy petition and sells the personal property free and clear of liens, the secured party's claim to proceeds under section 552(b) is subject to the rights of the trustee under section 545. The trustee will assert section 545(3) to avoid the rent lien and the rent lien is automatically preserved for the benefit of the estate under section 551.

Relationship of Section 552(b)(1) to Sections 547 and 548; Rights Asserted as a Result of Avoidance Action. Section 552(b)(1) is also subject to section 547, n34 regarding preferences, and section 548, n35 regarding fraudulent transfers. If the security interest is avoided, the secured party will not have rights in proceeds, products, offspring or profits under section 552(b)(1). In this situation, the avoided transfer is automatically preserved for the estate and can be asserted against proceeds for the benefit of the estate as against junior lienors. n36

Yet, assuming that a creditor has a valid, unavoidable prepetition security interest, the interplay between section 552 and sections 544, 547 and 548 of the Bankruptcy Code arises when the creditor asserts a right under its security interest to any property recovered by the debtor in possession or the trustee as a result of an avoidance action.

Some courts have ruled that, where the creditor has an independent right to recover the property in question, the creditor may claim an interest in that same property if and when it is recovered by the trustee pursuant to an avoiding power under the Bankruptcy Code. n37 Under this reasoning, monies recovered as the result of a fraudulent transfer action sometimes are found to be proceeds of the creditor's independent right to follow such monies when they are traceable into the hands of the transferee. n38

Other courts have distinguished these rulings when the avoiding action arises under the preference statute. According to these courts, preference recoveries are not proceeds of the creditor's collateral within the meaning of section 552(b)(1), because the right to recover a preference, unlike a chose in action for fraudulent transfer, occurs only in bankruptcy and is vested, with few exceptions, in a trustee. n39

Once bankruptcy ensues, however, since all recoveries under the avoiding powers are property of the estate, n40 administered almost exclusively by the trustee for the benefit of the estate as a whole rather than for any creditor individually, n41 it is difficult to see how such recoveries can be other than after-acquired property within the meaning of section 552(a), rather than proceeds of prepetition collateral under section 552(b)(1). This is true for fraudulent transfers as well as preferences, and no persuasive distinction seems possible along these lines. Prebankruptcy state law preferences exist, and may be asserted postbankruptcy under section 544(b) of the Code. And the assertion by a trustee of state fraudulent transfer law under section 544(b) allows for an expanded recovery under the rule of Moore v. Bay, as well as section 550, underscoring the fact that the recoveries that are property of the estate under section 541(a)(3) are peculiarly postpetition in nature. Indeed, a creditor may not sue to recover a state law fraudulent transfer once a case in bankruptcy is commenced, because this would be taking a chose in action from the estate, thereby violating the automatic stay. n42 On the whole, therefore, the more persuasively reasoned opinions do not permit creditors to share in recoveries obtained by bankruptcy trustees or estate representatives pursuant to the avoiding powers, even where such creditors may have independent, traceable rights to those funds. n43

For a complete discussion of Code section 552, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 552 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. In re Bering Trader, Inc., 944 F.2d 500, 502 (9th Cir. 1991) (characterizing exception as narrow).

n2

2. Subsection (b)(1) was created by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394. This subsection is identical to former section 552(b) except that all references to rent were deleted from it. Treatment of a creditor's interest in rent and similar revenues generated from a debtor's prepetition property is separately governed by subsection (b)(2) of section 552. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 552.03 (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. See 124 Cong. Rec. H11,09711,098 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,414 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978) (Proceeds coverage, but not after acquired property clauses, are valid under title 11); see also Wolinsky v. Vermont Fed.

Bank (In re Vermont Knitting Co.), 22 C.B.C.2d 1576, 111 B.R. 464 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1990); First Nat'l Bank of Lafayette v. Texas Tri-Collar, Inc. (In re Texas Tri-Collar, Inc.), 8 C.B.C.2d 970, 29 B.R. 724 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1983) (equitable grounds did not justify allowing prepetition lien to attach to accounts receivable generated postpetition; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 552.01 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See, e.g., In re Mintz, 192 B.R. 313, 319 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996) (defining proceeds by reference to the U.C.C. and also defining and analyzing product and profits).

n5

5. 292 U.S. 234, 54 S. Ct. 695, 78 L. Ed. 1230 (1934).

n6

6. 292 U.S. 234, 243, 54 S. Ct. 695, 698-699, 78 L. Ed. 1230, 1235; see In re Soto, 667 F.2d 235, 237, 5 C.B.C.2d 1277 (1st Cir. 1981). Cf. Johnson v. Cottonport Bank, 259 B.R. 125 (W.D. La. 2000) (debtor's monthly per capita distributions as member of Indian tribe remain subject postpetition to prepetition security interest of bank notwithstanding section 552(a).

n7

7. See Smoker v. Hill & Assocs., Inc., 204 B.R. 966 (N.D. Ind. 1997); In re Rumker, 184 B.R. 621 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1995); cf. In re Lawrence, 41 B.R. 36, 38 (Bankr. D. Minn.), aff'd, 56 B.R. 727 (D. Minn. 1984).

n8

8. See, e.g., In re Bumper Sales, Inc., 907 F.2d 1430, 23 C.B.C.2d 498 (4th Cir. 1990); Smith v. Dairymen, Inc., 790 F.2d 1107 (4th Cir. 1986); In re Mintz, 192 B.R. 313, 319 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996); In re Wiegmann, 20 C.B.C.2d 1472, 95 B.R. 90 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1989).

n9

9. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 376-77 (1977); see Bradt v. Woodlawn Autoworkers, F.C.U., 757 F.2d 512 (2d Cir. 1985); Breuer v. State Bank of Young Am. (In re Kohls), 94 B.R. 1006 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1987); In re Jackels, 55 B.R. 67 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1985); In re Lawrence, 41 B.R. 36, 37 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1984), aff'd, 56 B.R. 727 (D. Minn. 1984); In re Sunberg, 35 B.R. 777 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1983), aff'd, 729 F.2d 561 (8th Cir. 1984). But cf. American Bankers Ins. Co. v. Maness, 101 F.3d 358, 364 (4th Cir. 1996) (applying state law to determine that liability insurance bought postpetition was not proceeds of prepetition home destroyed by fire after commencement of case for purposes of section 541(a)(6), and noting that legislative history of proceeds language in section 541(a)(6), like congressional comments on meaning of the term proceeds in section 552, is vague and isolated, quoting Unsecured Creditors Comm. v. Marepcon Fin. Corp. (In re Bumper Sales, Inc.), 907 F.2d 1430, 1437 (4th Cir. 1990)). But compare FarmPro Servs., Inc. v. Brown (In re FarmPro Servs., Inc.), 276 B.R. 620 (D.N.D. 2002) (crop disaster benefits as proceeds under section 541(a)(6) and by implication under section 552(b)(1)).

n10

10. See, e.g., In re Wabash Valley Power Ass'n, Inc., 72 F.3d 1305, 1322, 34 C.B.C.2d 877, 896 (7th Cir. 1995) (dictum concluding that blanket lien on power generation assets and attendant rights did not capture postpetition income as collateral); First Nat'l Bank v. Willis (In re Jones), 908 F.2d 859, 23 C.B.C.2d 763 (11th Cir. 1990) (debtor's postpetition contributions to whole life policy not subject to prepetition lien on policy); Brandt v. Fleet Capital Corp. (In re TMCI Elec.), 279 B.R. 552 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2000) (tax refund is after-acquired property rather than proceeds because debtor's rights vested at end of tax year, which was postpetition); In re Megamarket of Lexington, Inc., 207 B.R. 527 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 1997); American President Lines, Ltd. v. Lykes Bros. S.S. Co. (In re Lykes Bros. S.S. Co.), 216 B.R. 856, 863-64 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1996) (steamship charter line payments generated postpetition are not proceeds under security agreement arising prepetition); Englander v. First Union Nat'l Bank of Fla., 202 B.R. 326 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1995); In re Pigeon, 49 B.R. 657, 660 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1985); In re Fowler, 41 B.R. 962 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 1984).

n11

11. See In re Olsen, 87 B.R. 148 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1988); Bird v. Plains State Bank, 86 B.R. 660 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1988); In re Smith, 72 B.R. 344 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987), aff'd, 119 B.R. 558 (S.D. Ohio 1989); In re Wallman, 71 B.R. 125 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1987); In re Stallings, 290 B.R. 777, 780-84 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2003), the bankruptcy court ruled that a United States program created to compensate farmers for crop losses due to BLM herbicides was not property of the estate under section 541(a), where the debtor farmer's entitlement to program participation arose after the filing of a chapter 12 petition. The bankruptcy court applied the same analysis as under section 552, holding that the program entitlement was neither prepetition property nor converted from prepetition property and, hence, must be after-acquired property and not proceeds for purposes of a lender's prepetition crop lien under section 552, even though the herbicide losses (for which program payments were forthcoming) were suffered in relation to prepetition farming. The bankruptcy court noted that the government payment was not something Debtors acquired, or became entitled to acquire, upon or in exchange for the sale or disposition of their [prepetition] crops, and that, although the record was less than clear, [i]n effect the government payment was intended by Congress to partially reimburse them for crops not produced because of the [herbicide] problem. In light of this reasoning, the payment, according to the bankruptcy court, was after-acquired property, rather than proceeds. But cf. FDIC v. Coones (In re Coones), 954 F.2d 596, 601 (10th Cir. 1992), vacated and remanded, 506 U.S. 802; 113 S. Ct. 31, 121 L. Ed. 2d 4 (1992), reaffirmed on remand, 996 F.2d 250 (10th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1041, 114 S. Ct. 684, 126 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1994).

n12

12. See Smith v. Dairymen, Inc., 790 F.2d 1107 (4th Cir. 1986); In re Wiegmann, 20 C.B.C.2d 1472, 95 B.R. 90 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1989). But see In re Flowers, 78 B.R. 774 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1986) (milk is not product of livestock); In re Jackels, 55 B.R. 67 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1985). See also In re Thacker, 291 B.R. 831 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 2003) (creditor with prepetition lien on seed gets benefit of section 552(b)(1) on postpetition crop deemed proceeds of that seed).

n13

13. FDIC v. Coones (In re Coones), 954 F.2d 596, 601 (10th Cir. 1992), vacated and remanded, 506 U.S. 802, 113 S. Ct. 31, 121 L. Ed. 2d 4 (1992), reaffirmed on remand, 996 F.2d 250 (10th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1041, 114 S. Ct. 684, 126 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1994); In re Bumper Sales, Inc., 907 F.2d 1430, 1439, 23 C.B.C.2d 498, 509-10 (4th Cir. 1990); In re Package Design & Supply Co., 217 B.R. 422 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1998) (analyzing circumstances under which secured creditor may see its collateral roll out from under lien by operation of section 552).

n14

14. See Distinction Between After-Acquired Property and Proceeds supra (discussion of the tests used by the courts to distinguish proceeds and after-acquired property).

n15

15. See, e.g., Cadle Co. v. Schlichtmann, 267 F.3d 14 (1st Cir. 2001) (bank's security interest in law firm's contingent fee contract continues in escrowed funds that are proceeds of such contract, notwithstanding dissolution of firm, transfer of contract to partner, bankruptcy of partner and postbankruptcy services of debtor attorney in order to confirm settlement that vested funds); In re Bumper Sales, Inc., 907 F.2d 1430, 1438, 23 C.B.C.2d 498, 508 (4th Cir. 1990) (U.C.C. § 9-306 is per se inapplicable after petition 1983); cf. Solfanelli v. CoreStates Bank N.A., 203 F.3d 197, 203 (3d Cir. 2000) (stay lifted allowed execution against collateral, but, since postpetition funds were not proceeds of collateral under section 552(b)(1), levy against them by bank violated stay).

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1) (emphasis added). One bankruptcy court looked to the definition of proceeds under California's version of the Uniform Commercial Code, finding that rental income from equipment collateral did not qualify for purposes of the section 552(b) exception. See Perris Valley Rentals, Inc. v. Textron Fin. Corp. (In re Rebel Rents, Inc.), 307 B.R. 171 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2004). Another bankruptcy court examined federal telecommunications law to validate a security interest in a broadcast license, awarding the proceeds of sale to a prepetition secured creditor. See Wells Fargo Foothill, Inc. v. Kepler (In re Media Props.), 311 B.R.

244 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 2004).

n17

17. Patterson v. Shumate, 504 U.S. 753, 112 S. Ct. 2242, 119 L. Ed. 2d 519, 26 C.B.C.2d 1119 (1992).

n18

18. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 377 (1977). (Extends to as used [in section 552(b)] would include an automatically arising security interest in proceeds, as permitted under the 1972 version of the Uniform Commercial Code.); see also U.C.C. §§ 9-203(3), 9-315(c); In re Keneco Fin. Group, Inc., 131 B.R. 90 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n19

19. See In re Colonial Realty Inv. Co., 516 F.2d 154, 159-160 (1st Cir. 1975) (court carefully considered what expenses rental income should be used for, in effort to find a middle ground, going beyond the use of rental income for the immediate and direct benefit of several creditors, but not approaching a treatment as general assets, which serves the rehabilitative goal of Chapter XII while respecting the property rights of the secured creditors). According to one court, the equities exception of section 552(b)(1) applies mainly to further the rehabilitative purposes of chapter 11, where the secured party is oversecured, and in order to prevent a windfall improvement in value to the secured party as a result of the use of unencumbered estate assets. See In re Tower Air, Inc., 268 B.R. 404, 408 (Bankr. D. Del. 2001). The equities exception is not a general grant of equitable discretion that may be used to protect secured creditors from their own mistakes, for example, by giving them a retroactive replacement lien. See, e.g., In re Three Partners, Inc., 199 B.R. 230, 239 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1995) (citing New Hampshire Bus. Dev. Corp. v. Cross Baking Co. (In re Cross Baking Co.), 818 F.2d 1027 (1st Cir. 1987)). Indeed, according to one court, this clause was inserted by Congress for the protection of unsecured creditors and may not be invoked by a second party with a collateral position at issue. See In re Ledis, 259 B.R. 472, 479-80 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2001).

n20

20. See, e.g., In re Patio & Porch Sys., Inc. 194 B.R. 569, 575 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996), and cases cited therein.

n21

21. See, e.g., In re Hotel Syracuse, Inc., 275 B.R. 679 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 2002). See generally James S. Cole, The Carve Out from Liens and Priorities Guarantee Payment of Professional Fees in Chapter 11, 1993 Det. C.L. Rev. 1499 (1993); Richard B. Levin, Almost All You Ever Wanted to Know About Carve Out, 76 Am.

Bankr. L.J. 445 (2002); cf. Gold Coast Asset Acquisition, L.P. v. 1441 Veteran St. Co. (In re 1441 Veteran St. Co.), 144 F.3d 1288, 1292 (9th Cir. 1998).

n22

22. See In re First Nat'l Bank v. Willis (In re Jones), 908 F.2d 859, 23 C.B.C.2d 763 (11th Cir. 1990) (although equity exception not mentioned, creditor's security interest in debtor's life insurance policy did not extend to increase in cash surrender value of policy that was attributable to postpetition premium payments).

n23

23. See 124 Cong. Rec. H11,09711,098 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,414 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978). (This provision allows the court to consider the equities in each case. In the course of such consideration the court may evaluate any expenditures by the estate relating to proceeds and any related improvement in position of the secured party.). The equities language in section 552(b), as enacted, superseded different, arguably narrower, proposals in the House and Senate bills. See, e.g., S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 91; see also J. Catton Farms, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago (In re J. Catton Farms, Inc.), 779 F.2d 1242 (7th Cir. 1985); In re Village Props., Ltd., 723 F.2d 441, 444, 10 C.B.C.2d 224, 26 C.B.C.2d 224 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, Wolters Village, Ltd. v. Village Props., Ltd., 466 U.S. 974, 104 S. Ct. 2350, 80 L. Ed. 2d 823 (1984); In re Patio & Porch Sys., Inc. 194 B.R. 569, 575 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996) (section 506(c) permits a broad range of surcharges, including surcharge against postpetition security interests).

n24

24. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 506 (Matthew Bender).

n25

25. In re Sequential Info. Sys., 4 C.C.H. Sec. Trans. Guide [1969-73 Transfer Binder] 51,479 (S.D.N.Y. 1970); De Gayner Homes, Inc., 1 B.C.D. 532 at 533 (W.D. Wis. 1975); see also In re Kahl Iron Foundry, Inc., 21 B.R. 372 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1982).

N26

26. One court has discussed, at some length, the potential effect of value added by unsecured creditors and the possibility of such value diluting the liens of fully secured or partially secured creditors. In re Package Design & Supply Co., 39 C.B.C.2d 931, 217 B.R. 422 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1998). See also In re Cafeteria Operators, L.P., 299 B.R. 400 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2003).

n27

27. In re Package Design & Supply Co., 39 C.B.C.2d 931, 217 B.R. 422 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1998) (discussing the effect of value, added by debtor or unsecured creditors, on secured lender's asserted security in postpetition proceeds); Wood v. LA Bank (In re Wood), 35 C.B.C.2d 275, 190 B.R. 788 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1996) (finding security interest did not attach to increase in value of collateral where value derived solely from debtor's effort). For examples of the manner in which courts have applied the equities formula of section 552(b), see, e.g., United Virginia Bank v. Slab Fork Coal Co., 784 F.2d 1188, 14 C.B.C.2d 471 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 477 U.S. 905, 106 S. Ct. 3275, 91 L. Ed. 2d 565 (1986); J. Catton Farms v. First Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 779 F.2d 1242 (7th Cir. 1985).

n28

28. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,09711,098 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,414 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 544 (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. See, e.g., Ohio Cas. Group of Ins. Cos. v. Professional Ins. Mgmt. (In re Professional Ins. Mgmt.), 130 F.3d 1122, 1128-31 (3d Cir. 1997).

n31

31. See, e.g., In re Hartman, 102 B.R. 90 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1989); Cohen v. Spinelli (In re Simonelli), 33 B.R. 777 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1983).

n32

32. See, e.g., In re Bennett Funding Group Inc., 203 B.R. 30 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd in part, rev'd and remanded in part, In re Bennett Funding Group, Inc., 255 B.R. 616 (N.D.N.Y. 2000) (secured creditor must establish that it holds validly perfected security interest); In re Lykes Bros. S.S. Co., 216 B.R. 856 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1996) (to avail itself of section 552(b)(1), secured party must prove that statutory exception under section 544 does not apply).

n33

33. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 545 (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547 (Matthew Bender).

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 548 (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 551.01 (Matthew Bender).

n37

37. These rulings are summarized in Barber v. McCord Auto Supply, Inc. (In re Pearson Indus., Inc.), 178 B.R. 753, 764 (C.D. Ill. 1995). For examples of approaches taken by courts following these rulings, see, e.g., Angeles Real Estate Co. v. Kerxton (In re Constr. Gen., Inc.), 737 F.2d 416 (4th Cir. 1984); Mellon Bank (East) N.A. v. Glick (In re Integrated Testing Prod. Corp.), 69 B.R. 901 (D.N.J. 1987); Hennessy v. Kennedy (In re Sun Island Foods), 125 B.R. 615 (Bankr. D. Haw. 1991).

n38

38. See, e.g., Claussen Concrete Co. v. Walker (In re Lively), 74 B.R. 238 (S.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd without op., 851 F.2d 363 (11th Cir. 1988); John Hancock Life Ins. Co. v. Jankowski (In re Hospitality Inv. Corp.), 49 C.B.C.2d 413, 283 B.R. 451 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2002).

n39

39. See, e.g., Mellon Bank (East) N.A. v. Glick (In re Integrated Testing Prods. Corp.), 69 B.R. 901 (D.N.J. 1987); Matson v. Grease Monkey Int'l, Inc. (In re Bev, Inc.), 237 B.R. 311, 316 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998).

(implying this result); Hennessey v. Kennedy (In re Sun Island Foods), 125 B.R. 615 (Bankr. D. Haw. 1991). But see In re Hospitality Inv. Corp., 283 B.R. 451 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2002) (monies recovered by trustee under section 547 were subject to creditor's prepetition security interest); In re Ellingsen MacLean Oil Co., 98 B.R. 284 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1989) (same).

n40

40. 11 U.S.C. § 541(3)(4).

n41

41. See, e.g., In re Mako, Inc., 985 F.2d 1052, 1056 (10th Cir. 1993); Delgado Oil Co. v. Torres, 785 F.2d 857, 861-62 (10th Cir. 1986). Where a representative of the estate performs this office, rather than a trustee, the representative still must serve the estate generally rather than a creditor selectively. See, e.g., In re Sweetwater, 884 F.2d 1323, 1328 (10th Cir. 1989); cf. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Union Planters Bank N.A., 530 U.S. 1, 120 S. Ct. 1942, 147 L. Ed. 2d 1, 43 C.B.C.2d 861 (2000) (standing of trustee under section 506(c)).

n42

42. See, e.g., In re MortgageAmerica Corp., 714 F.2d 1266, 1277-78 (5th Cir. 1986).

n43

43. See, e.g., In re First Capital Mortgage Loan Corp., 917 F.2d 424, 428 (10th Cir. 1990) (en banc); cf. Frank v. Michigan ex rel. Michigan Unemployment Agency, 263 B.R. 538 (E.D. Mich. 2000) (state statutory lien does not attach to preference recovery); Frank v. Michigan ex rel. Mich. Unemployment Agency, 261 B.R. 909 (E.D. Mich. 1999) (same); In re Southeast R.R. Contractors, Inc., 235 B.R. 619 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996) (tax lien and preference recovery).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

144 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Prohibition on Sharing Compensation

2008 Emerging Issues 1365

Collier on the Prohibition on Sharing Compensation

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the prohibition against sharing compensation, including topics such as the parties included in the prohibition, procedure under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2016, the case-by-case basis on which improper fee sharing is decided, and the role of professionals in bankruptcy administration.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: The prohibition against a professional sharing compensation has two components. A person receiving compensation or reimbursement pursuant to Bankruptcy Code subsection 503(b)(2) or (b)(4) may neither share nor agree to share that compensation with another person, nor may he or she share or agree to share in any compensation received by another person under subsection 503(b)(2) or (b)(4). n1

While the legislative history of section 504 is sparse, stating only that the section prohibits the sharing of compensation or fee splitting among attorneys, other professionals or trustees, n2 there can be no doubt that section 504(a) of the Bankruptcy Code is intended to be mandatory and preemptory. The section illustrates a congressional intent to preserve the integrity of the bankruptcy process so that professionals engaged in bankruptcy cases attend to their duty as officers of the bankruptcy court, rather than treat their interest in bankruptcy cases as matters of traffic. n3

Parties Included in Prohibition

The prohibition against fee sharing operates by defining those persons who are subject to it. There are two categories of persons who may not share, or agree to share, their fees: those who are compensated pursuant to section 503(b)(2) and those who are compensated pursuant to section 503(b)(4). Section 503(b)(2) allows the administrative expenses for compensation under section 330(a), which provides for the compensation of a trustee, examiner or the trustee's (or debtor in possession's) and committee's professionals employed under section 327 or section 1103, as well as reimbursement of their expenses. n4 Section 503(b)(4) allows administrative expenses for the reasonable compensation for legal or accounting services rendered to a person whose expense is allowed under section 503(b)(3), a provision generally allowing expenses for creditors making substantial contributions to the estate, and the expenses of committee members. n5

No Fee Sharing with Subcontractors

By prohibiting fee sharing without regard to whether services have been provided, section 504 also ensures that professionals whose retention should be reviewed and determined by the bankruptcy court under section 327 cannot avoid that review by subcontracting with a retained professional to assist in providing services. Indeed, there is overlap in the application of sections 327 and 330, requiring court approval of the compensation paid to professionals retained in a bankruptcy case, and section 504. n6 A professional cannot be compensated under section 330 for amounts the professional has paid to a subcontractor rendering professional services unless retention of the subcontractor has also been approved by the court. n7 Likewise, the professional whose compensation is approved under section 330(a) cannot recoup the cost of a subcontractor providing professional services without violating section 504. n8

Relation to Allowance of Fees under Section 330

Although there is overlap, sections 504 and 330 are not identical. Section 330 requires a bankruptcy court, when awarding compensation, to take into consideration whether fees paid to an attorney in the year preceding the filing were reasonable. If the fees are not reasonable, the court can order that they be disgorged or reduce the compensation paid from the estate. n9 This power to review compensation arrangements for prior periods does not exist under section 504. To the contrary, by referencing subsections 503(b)(2) and (4), section 504 is explicitly limited to compensation paid from the estate. Courts have occasionally blurred the distinction between section 329 and section 330, on the one hand, and 504 on the other, by borrowing the power under section 329 to review compensation received by debtor's counsel in the year preceding the commencement of a case to prohibit all fee sharing for the same one-year period, or by reaching the same result without discussion. n10 There are sufficient means under the Code for voiding transfers made before the commencement of a case to recover an excessive payment made in the year before the filing without expanding the scope of section 504. In addition, fee sharing arrangements are always subject to state ethical rules; the proscription of section 504 (as well as the limitations on compensation under sections 329 and 330) are in addition to and not in substitution for state ethical obligations. n11

Treatment of Nonprofessionals

Generally, the persons who are restricted by section 504 are professionals. The prohibition is nevertheless not expressly limited to professionals and includes those who are reimbursed for expenses under section 330(a). To the extent a professional has hired a nonprofessional to assist in rendering the professional's services, professionals may be prohibited from fee sharing with the nonprofessionals. A more reasoned approach, though, recognizes that if the retention of the nonprofessional would not have required court approval under section 327 and the sharing is for services actually provided by the nonprofessional, expanding the prohibition to the nonprofessional would not accomplish any of the purposes of section 504. Thus, an attorney may not share fees with a paralegal completing a debtor's schedules but may share with a paralegal assisting in the preparation of the schedules under the attorney's supervision. n12 Services rendered by a professional may even be excluded from the fee sharing prohibition if the services themselves were not professional in nature. n13

Procedure under Rule 2016

Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2016, Compensation for Services Rendered and Reimbursement of Expenses, provides that any entity seeking interim or final compensation for services, or reimbursement of necessary expenses, from the estate must:

- . file an application giving a detailed statement of (1) the services rendered, time expended and expenses incurred, and (2) the amounts requested;

- . include a statement as to what payments have been made or promised to the applicant for services rendered or to be rendered in any capacity whatsoever in connection with the case;

- . identify the source of the compensation so paid or promised;

- . reveal whether any compensation previously received has been shared; and

- . reveal whether an agreement or understanding exists between the applicant and any other entity for the sharing of compensation received or to be received for services rendered in or in connection with the case and the particulars of any sharing of compensation or agreement or understanding.

In addition, pursuant to Rule 2016(b), every attorney for a debtor, whether or not the attorney applies for compensation, shall file and transmit to the United States trustee within 15 days after the order for relief, or at another time as the court may direct, the statement required by section 329 of the Code, including whether the attorney has shared or agreed to share the compensation with any other entity. The statement shall include the particulars of any such sharing or agreement to share by the attorney, but the details of any agreement for sharing of compensation with a member or regular associate of the attorney's law firm are not required. In addition, Rule 2016(b) imposes a continuing duty to supplement the Rule 2016(b) statement within 15 days after any payment or agreement not previously disclosed.

Professionals and Ethics: Interpretation by the Courts

Although many jurisdictions do not prohibit fee splitting among attorneys, section 504 of the Bankruptcy Code expressly does so. Thus, although attorneys, under varying rules, ⁿ¹⁴ are generally permitted, in limited circumstances, to share fees with attorneys outside their firms, they may not do so if they seek reimbursement or compensation under subsection 503(b)(2) or (b)(4) of the Code. In order to obtain such reimbursement, attorneys not in the same firm but who represent a single entity would thus be required to separately obtain court approval of their retention and fees.

However, the fact that the bankruptcy court approves retention of each attorney does not obviate application of the state-imposed requirements for fee sharing. Thus, the attorney should consider whether the state-imposed requirements for fee sharing must also be met. ⁿ¹⁵

Section 504(a) applies the general prohibition against fee splitting, imposed upon attorneys by various ethics rules, to virtually all professional persons who seek compensation in bankruptcy cases. ⁿ¹⁶ In this manner, the Bankruptcy Code extends the protections of the duty of loyalty to the client and the rules precluding conflicts of interest to non-lawyers as well as lawyers. Accordingly, counsel seeking to obtain approval for the retention of nonlawyer professionals (e.g., auctioneers, accountants) should advise those professionals that they should not enter into fee-splitting agreements.

Neither of the exceptions to the prohibition in section 504(b) permits fee sharing with a nonlawyer professional. An attorney would also be prohibited by such fee sharing by either Model Rule 5.4(a) or DR 3-102(a).

Improper Fee Sharing Decided on Case-by-Case Basis

For the most part, the facts supporting a determination of improper sharing of compensation in cases construing section 504 are straightforward. For example, in In re Codesco Inc.,ⁿ¹⁷ the debtor's appraiser retained, without court approval, an outside consultant who was to be paid from the compensation the appraiser would receive from the debtor. The Codesco court concluded that this agreement violated section 504. Similarly, in In re Anderson,ⁿ¹⁸ the debtor employed an attorney who, in turn, hired his son with whom he did not practice. The attorney paid his son a $10,000 retainer. The son's separate employment to assist in various lawsuits, however, was not authorized by the court at that time. The court upheld the bankruptcy court's partial denial of the son's fee application due to his failure to be employed.ⁿ¹⁹ The court also held in the alternative that even if the retainer was paid from the father's funds rather than from funds of the estate, payment of the retainer violated the section prohibition against sharing compensation.

In the context of consumer bankruptcy, fee sharing can arise in a variety of ways. The most common problem involves payment of referral fees to attorneys or non-attorneys who generate business for the bankruptcy attorney.ⁿ²⁰ The evils of fee sharing were vividly illustrated in In re Soulisak,ⁿ²¹ a case in which the bankruptcy court reviewed an arrangement between a debt counseling firm, which was a one-man shop run by a disbarred attorney, and a lawyer operating as a sole practitioner. The counseling firm would offer financial and legal counseling to clients for a fixed fee. The principal of the counseling firm then contracted with the lawyer to provide the legal services and agreed to share the fee. Clients did not meet with the attorney until the section 341 meeting, and the disbarred lawyer performed all work, including legal work, prior to that meeting. The United States trustee noticed that this arrangement between the same professionals appeared in four separate cases and asked the bankruptcy court to review the arrangement on behalf of each of the estates. The court was troubled by every aspect of the arrangement. The court noted that the individual providing the financial counseling had already been required to disgorge fees in six other bankruptcy cases in a neighboring jurisdiction and had entered into a consent decree agreeing not to appear before the other bankruptcy court and his license had been suspended. He had already been disbarred in yet another jurisdiction for completely different misconduct. The bankruptcy court underscored the cumulative effect of local ethical rules and section 504, and found that both professionals had violated the state ethical rules for the unauthorized practice of law and impermissible fee sharing and had violated section 504 as well. Both professionals were required to disgorge all fees from all four cases.

The court in *In re Willman*ⁿ²² noted another example of malfeasance in the consumer bankruptcy context--the bankruptcy petition for a no-asset case under chapter 7. The firm included work of an attorney in its services. It charged the debtor $950, but only reported fees totaling $125 to the court. Besides finding that the tax advisors filed a misleading disclosure of compensation under Code section 110(h)(1), the court also held that the fee-sharing arrangement violated section 504.

Fee Sharing May Be Allowed

In other cases, the issue of improper sharing of compensation is not so clear-cut. In In re Warner,ⁿ²³ the government objected to an award of attorney's fees that included reimbursement for a payment to an outside attorney. The debtor's attorney explained that in the course of representing the debtor it was necessary to subpoena a material witness in another state, which required the retention of an attorney licensed to practice in that state in order to obtain the subpoena. The Warner court overruled the government's objection, concluding that the arrangement to pay the outside attorney was merely a payment for a necessary service. The court noted that if the subpoena could have been obtained and served by a non-attorney, section 504 would not be applicable and that the need to retain an attorney for the matter did not change the nature of the payment.ⁿ²⁴

Similarly, in In re Statewide Pools, Inc.,ⁿ²⁵ the trustee sought to employ special counsel for the limited purpose of collecting certain of the debtor's accounts receivables and prosecuting a lawsuit. The application to employ the special counsel proposed that special counsel would pay a former officer of the debtor on an hourly basis for assistance in collecting some of the debtor's accounts receivable. The Statewide court found that special counsel's proposal to compensate the former officer did not constitute an impermissible fee-splitting arrangement. The fact that the former officer would not receive any payments directly from the estate and would not receive a predetermined percentage of the special counsel's fees was determinative. Notably, the court did not consider the former officer a professional whose employment would have to be approved by the court.

Compensation Disallowed or Disgorged upon Finding of Improper Fee Sharing

Generally, a finding of improper sharing of compensation results in a denial or disgorgement of compensation. The predecessor to section 504, Section 62d of the Bankruptcy Act, provided that the court shall withhold all compensation if the court concluded that an attorney improperly shared or agreed to share compensation. Former Rule 219, the predecessor to Rule 2016, also provided that, if a person violated the rule's proscription against sharing compensation, the court may deny him compensation, or may enter such other order as may be appropriate. Neither section 504 nor Rule 2016 provides for withholding compensation. The bankruptcy court in In re Matis,ⁿ²⁶ after finding a violation of section 504(a), looked to former Rule 219 as support for the denial of compensation. Recognizing that neither the current rule nor the current Code section specifically provides the court with a remedy as did the predecessor provisions, the Matis court opined that there is no reason to conclude that the Court does not still retain such discretion to deny compensation.ⁿ²⁷ The Matis court found further support for this conclusion in Code section 329(b), which authorizes the court to order the return of compensation.

Other courts have likewise either denied compensation or required disgorgement for fee sharing in violation of section 504 or for failure to disclose sharing arrangements under Rule 2016.ⁿ²⁸ Nor can professionals avoid this penalty by seeking authority to be retained nunc pro tunc,ⁿ²⁹ although retention of the second professional, if approved by the court, will avoid impermissible fee sharing going forward.ⁿ³⁰

Related Statutory Provisions

An understanding of several other Bankruptcy Code sections is helpful to a complete understanding of section 504. First, a professional must be employed with court approval in order to be compensated by the estate. Section 327 prescribes the basis for employment and Rule 2014 prescribes the procedure. The compensation requested by the professional must be authorized by the court. Section 330 covers the compensation of officers of the court. Section 503, which is explicitly referenced in section 504, makes reasonable compensation for professional services an administrative expense. Finally, 18 U.S.C. § 155 is the criminal counterpart to section 504. Section 155 provides for criminal penalties for fee-fixing agreements that contemplate payment from the estate.ⁿ³¹

11 U.S.C. § 503. Section 503 of the Code prescribes the standards for the allowance of administrative expense status, a status which confers a priority in distribution under section 507(a)(1) of the Code.ⁿ³² Section 503(b)(2), to which section 504(a) refers, provides that administrative expense status is an entitlement to those awarded compensation and reimbursement by section 330(a) of the Code.

11 U.S.C. § 330. Section 330(a) authorizes compensation to a trustee, an examiner or a professional person employed under section 327 or section 1103 or to the debtor's attorney.ⁿ³³ It follows from the language of section 503(b)(2) and section 330(a) that the term person, as used in section 504(a), includes the trustee, an examiner, or an attorney, accountant or other professional person. Section 330(a) sets forth the standards for court awards of reasonable compensation to professionals in bankruptcy cases. The various factors contained in section 330(a) may include the time spent on the services, the rates charged for such services, the benefit to the estate and the necessity of such services, and the customary compensation paid in nonbankruptcy cases. The intent was to help foster greater uniformity in the application for and processing and approval of fee applications.

11 U.S.C. § 327. The provisions of section 327, which allow the employment of professionals by the trustee, also relate to the application of section 504. n34

The reference in section 330(a) to employment of a professional person under section 1103 of the Code refers to the authority conferred by the latter section for the selection by a creditors' committee of one or more attorneys, accountants or other agents to represent or to perform services for that committee. n35

Reading section 503(b)(2) with sections 330 and 327 makes it clear that the section 504(a) prohibition against sharing or agreeing to share compensation or reimbursement is applicable to all persons receiving compensation, including the statutory compensation of a trustee entitled to administrative expense status. The same holds true with regard to persons entitled to administrative status pursuant to section 503(b)(4)--attorneys and accountants--for professional services rendered to entities described by section 503(b)(3). Section 503(b)(4) refers to: reasonable compensation for professional services rendered by an attorney or an accountant of an entity whose expense is allowable under paragraph (3) of this subsection, based on the time, the nature, the extent, and the value of such services, and the cost of comparable services other than in a case under this title, and reimbursement for actual, necessary expenses incurred by such attorney or accountant.

18 U.S.C. § 155. Section 155 of title 18 of the United States Code provides criminal penalties for fee-fixing agreements under which compensation is to be paid from assets of the estate. The penalties for violation of the statute are a monetary fine, imprisonment or both. The statute does not, however, authorize a forfeiture of reasonable compensation, actually earned, for services performed. n36 The provision, which was originally enacted in 1937, states as follows:

Whoever, being a party in interest, whether as a debtor, creditor, receiver, trustee or representative of any of them, or attorney for any such party in interest, in any receivership or case under title 11 in any United States court or under its supervision, knowingly and fraudulently enters into any agreement, express or implied, with another such party in interest or attorney for another party in interest, for the purpose of fixing the fees or other compensation to be paid to any party in interest or to any attorney for any party in interest for services rendered in connection therewith, from the assets of the estate, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

The language of the statute does not manifest an intent to create a civil action for damages, and the legislative history of the section does not demonstrate that the creation of such a civil action was contemplated. n37 The purpose of section 155 has been described as to keep the fees under the control of the court to prevent trustees, creditors and others, and their counsel, from playing fast and loose with other people's money in courts of bankruptcy. n38

The Role of Professionals in Bankruptcy Administration

A brace of decisions emanating from the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in late 1979 and into the mid 1980s is instructive. Although they interpret and apply predecessor Section 62 of the 1898 Act and Rule 219 in light of then newly enacted section 504, they reveal the view the courts adopted regarding the role of the attorney in the administration of a bankruptcy case and the standards to which the attorney would be held in the discharge of such duties. It is noteworthy that virtually all of the cases that address section 504 and its statutory and common law predecessors discuss the role of the attorneys in the context of their professional ethics, rather than merely addressing the scope of the statute or other rule, thereby highlighting the importance of these considerations in the bankruptcy context. As in all circumstances regarding fees and applications to retain, attorneys must strictly consider their ethical obligations because the Bankruptcy Code imposes upon the court a duty to scrutinize the actions of professionals who appear, file claims or provide services in the bankruptcy context. n39

Matter of Arlan's Department Stores Inc. The first of these opinions is Matter of Arlan's Department Stores, Inc. n40 Recognizing that counsel for the debtor is an officer of the court and is bound by fiduciary standards, n41 and noting that the debtor's counsel had flatly denied being a court-appointed officer or fiduciary, the Arlan's court stated that counsel's position is untenable and it is indeed shocking that experienced bankruptcy attorneys would consider their relationship to the court or the estate of the debtor in such a light. n42 The court's emphasis on the role and fiduciary responsibilities of attorneys in a bankruptcy case remains applicable to the present law, particularly in light of the more restrictive prohibition set forth in section 504. The words of then-Judge Cardozo, as quoted by the Arlan's court, are especially apropos: Many forms of conduct permissible in a workaday world for those acting at arm's length, are forbidden to those bound by fiduciary ties. n43

Matter of Futuronics Corporation. The second case was Matter of Futuronics Corporation. n44 The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York stated at the outset of its opinion that attorneys are officers of the court and must conduct themselves accordingly. It further recognized that, as professionals, attorneys are to be held to a higher standard in the discharge of their duties, especially where an attorney is counsel to a debtor and acts as a fiduciary. These standards of conduct were emphasized by the Futuronics court in light of the fact that, in the context of a bankruptcy case, it is necessary for the court to depend upon the integrity of the debtor's counsel in the handling and administration of the debtor's assets.

The debtor's counsel in Futuronics had retained special counsel to prosecute certain claims involving government contracts. Although the bankruptcy court subsequently permitted the retention of special counsel, it rejected a proposed retention order calling for special counsel to pay to the debtor's counsel one-third of all fees special counsel received. Four years later, a statement of services rendered by special counsel, submitted at the direction of the court, revealed that special counsel had paid to debtor's counsel fees in excess of $60,000. The fees paid had never been revealed to the court, despite numerous hearings, conferences and questions of the court with regard to the fee arrangement between debtor's counsel and special counsel. Based on the conduct of debtor's counsel and special counsel, which the district court described as totally unprofessional and in breach of their respective duties as fiduciaries and officers of the court, n45 the district court ordered the attorneys to pay to the debtor all fees collected to date with interest and denied them any further compensation.

Despite the fact that the Futuronics court applied the former law with regard to impermissible fee sharing, the commentary of the district court in denying all compensation remains an important consideration with regard to attorneys acting in bankruptcy cases. In light of the circumstances surrounding the case, it is not surprising that Congress incorporated a mandatory tone in section 504(a), recognizing a strong public policy against fee splitting and the dangers likely to result therefrom. In affirming the decision, the court of appeals opined that given the egregiousness of the conduct here, it was an abuse of discretion [on the part of the bankruptcy court] to permit the appellants to retain any of the fees they had received, let alone to allow any further compensation. n46

Matter of Consolidated Bancshares. The relationship between the fiduciary duties of attorneys and compensation in bankruptcy cases was also discussed in Matter of Consolidated Bancshares, n47 in which the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit recognized the tendency of attorneys to enter into a conspiracy of silence with regard to contesting each other's fee applications. The Consolidated Bancshares court, citing the opinion of the Second Circuit in Arlan's, emphasized that such a failure to contest fee applications is a violation of their duties as fiduciaries not only to their specific clients but to the interests of the debtor's estate. n48

For a complete discussion of Code section 504, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 504 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See In re Matis, 73 B.R. 228 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1987); In re Maller Restaurant Corp., 14 C.B.C.2d 320, 57 B.R. 72 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1985).

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 356 (1977); S. Rep. No 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 67 (1978).

n3

3. This statement paraphrases an expression of concern over the abuses in bankruptcy proceeding made by Lord Eldon in 1801, as Lord Chancellor: Instead of solicitors attending to their duty as ministers of the court, for they are so, commissions of bankruptcy are treated as matters of traffic . This quotation is discussed in Matter of Arlan's Department Stores, Inc., 615 F.2d 925, 943-44 (2d Cir. 1979) (quoting In re Drake, 7 F. Cas. 1046 (D.N.J. 1876)).

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.01 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.10 (Matthew Bender). For a discussion as to whether committee members should be reimbursed for payment of their professionals, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.11[6] (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 504.07 (Matthew Bender) for discussion of these and other related statutory provisions.

n7

7. See In re United Companies Financial Corp., 241 B.R. 521 (Bankr. D. Del. 1999) (restructuring subsidiary of retained accounting firm should have been retained separately; cannot avoid section 327 through subcontracting arrangement).

n8

8. See Quesada v. United States Trustee, 222 B.R. 193 (D.P.R. 1998) (contract lawyers whose services were billed out by counsel at attorney rates were not paraprofessionals; counsel may not share compensation with them); In re Grenoble Apartments, II, 152 B.R. 608 (D.S.D. 1993) (counsel retained by debtor could not be compensated for services rendered by his son, whose legal practice was separate from his father's); In re Maller Restaurant Corp., 57 B.R. 72 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1985) (law firm could not share fees with former associate who left to start own firm but continued to provide services); In re The Liberal Market Inc., 24 B.R. 653 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982) (amount paid from debtor's counsel to co-counsel from retainer not allowed, impermissible fee sharing). But see In re Worldwide Direct, Inc., 316 B.R. 637 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004) (contract lawyers operating under firm supervision are essentially associates within exception to section 504(a), but amount reimbursable from estate is cost to firm).

n9

9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 329.01 and 330.01 (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. See In re Soulisak, 227 B.R. 77 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998) (discussing section 504 and state ethical rules without distinguishing between pre- and postpetition periods); In re Matis, 73 B.R. 228 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1987) (applying section 504 to fee sharing arrangement in year prior to commencement of case).

n11

11. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 8 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. Compare In re Tarasiak, 280 B.R. 791 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (paralegal functioning as professional cannot share in fees), with In re Van Dyke, 296 B.R. 591 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2003) (paralegal working under attorney's supervision not professional and may share in fees). See also In re Artra Group, Inc., 308 B.R. 858 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2003) (denying application to retain expert witness because approval was not required, court advised that attorney could seek reimbursement of expenses for expert witness).

n13

13. See United States v. Miller, Cassidy, Larocca & Levin (In re Warner), 141 B.R. 762 (M.D. Fla. 1992) (retained counsel could be compensated for cost of local counsel when local rules required attorney to perform the administrative task of serving subpoena). But see Quesada v. United States Trustee, 222 B.R. 193 (D.P.R. 1998) (services provided by attorneys billed out at attorney levels could not be treated as paralegal services).

n14

14. See Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct, Rule 1.5(e) (1983); Model Code of Prof'l Responsibility, DR 2-107 (1980). Some jurisdictions impose lesser and/or greater standards for fee sharing than the Model Code or Rules. See, e.g., California Rule 2-200(A) (permitting more circumstances of fee splitting, but requiring greater client participation). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 8.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. For example, Model Rule 1.5(e) requires that any division be in proportion to the services performed or that each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation; that the client is advised and does not object to the involvement of all the attorneys; and the total fee is reasonable. DR 2-107 is somewhat more restrictive in that it also requires that the client consent after full disclosure that a division will be made, and that the division of fee be in proportion to the services and each attorney assumes responsibility for the representation.

n16

16. See, e.g., In re Soulisak, 227 B.R. 77, 82 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998) (fee sharing between debt clinic and attorney violated section 504 and Va. Code of Prof. Resp. DR 3-102).

n17

17. 15 B.R. 351 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1981).

n18

18. 936 F.2d 199 (5th Cir. 1991).

n19

19. The Anderson court held that the bankruptcy court had acted within its discretion in awarding the son a portion of the fees he had requested, based on the benefit of his services to the estate. Although the son was not approved as an attorney for the debtor at the time the retainer was paid, the debtor's application to employ the son was granted nunc pro tunc four years later.

n20

20. Note that under new section 504(c), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 326 (2005), fee sharing with certain public service attorney referral programs is no longer be prohibited. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 504.04 (Matthew Bender). Subsection (c) applies in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501.

n21

21. 227 B.R. 77 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998).

n22

22. 1997 Bankr. LEXIS 2056 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. Dec. 18, 1997).

n23

23. United States v. Miller, Cassidy, Larroca & Lewin (In re Warner), 141 B.R. 762 (M.D. Fla. 1992).

n24

24. Compare the result in Warner with that in In re Larsen, 190 B.R. 713 (Bankr. D. Me. 1996), in which reimbursement of $250 payment to an outside attorney was denied as a violation of Bankruptcy Rule 2016(a). The difference between these two cases is that the outside attorney in Larsen made a court appearance on behalf of the debtors, while the outside attorney in Warner merely performed an administrative service.

n25

25. 79 B.R. 312 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987).

n26

26. 73 B.R. 228 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1987).

n27

27. 73 B.R. 228, 234.

n28

28. See Quesada v. United States Trustee, 222 B.R. 193, 198 (D.P.R. 1998) (court denied compensation to chapter 7 trustee who shared fees with temporary associates, holding that trustee's failure to disclose retention of associates violated Rule 2016); In re ACandS, Inc., 297 B.R. 395 (Bankr. D. Del. 2003) (professional who, among other things, failed to disclose that most of services were rendered by its subsidiary required to disgorge $2.4 million in fees); In re Cupboards, Inc., 190 B.R. 969, 971 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1996) (court required forfeiture of actual compensation of debtor's attorney who violated Rule 2016 by under-reporting and sharing fees with unauthorized advisor).

n29

29. See, e.g., Lemonedes v. Balaber-Strauss (In re Coin Phones, Inc.), 226 B.R. 131 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (nunc pro tunc not authorized and separate retention not appropriate when held self out as subcontractor for another firm); In re ACandS, Inc., 297 B.R. 395 (Bankr. D. Del. 2003) (no extraordinary circumstances warranting nunc pro tunc approval of retention of professional). But see In re Grenoble Apartments, II, 152 B.R. 608 (D.S.D. 1993) (United States trustee was not opposed to curing violation through nunc pro tunc application; remanded).

n30

30. See In re United Companies Financial Corp., 241 B.R. 521 (Bankr. D. Del. 1999) (no compensation will be allowed for affiliate until it is retained).

n31

31. For a discussion of bankruptcy crimes, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 7 (Matthew Bender).

n32

32. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.05 (Matthew Bender).

n33

33. For a discussion of section 330 of the Code, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.03 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See 11 U.S.C. § 327(a), (b).

n35

35. For a discussion of the creditors' committee authorized by section 1102 and the committee's selection of professional persons to assist it, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1103.03 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. Zweifel, Tuohy & Crager v. Trans-State Oil Co., 99 F.2d 650 (5th Cir. 1938).

n37

37. See Ateser v. Bopp, 29 F.3d 630 (table), 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 18014 (9th Cir. 1994).

n38

38. Lutheran Hosps. & Homes Soc'y of Am. v. Ducey, 422 F.2d 200 (9th Cir. 1970) (citing In re Trans-State Oil Co., 24 F. Supp. 454 (S.D. Tex. 1938)).

n39

39. For a discussion of codes and rules of conduct applicable to professional appearing in bankruptcy courts, see generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 8 (Matthew Bender).

n40

40. 615 F.2d 925 (2d Cir. 1979).

n41

41. 615 F.2d 925, 932 (citing Brown v. Gerdes, 321 U.S. 178, 182, 64 S. Ct. 487, 88 L. Ed. 659 (1944); Finn v. Childs Co., 181 F.2d 431, 441 (2d Cir. 1950) (in all cases persons who seek compensation for services or reimbursement are held to fiduciary standards)).

n42

42. 615 F.2d 925, 932 (citing Brown v. Gerdes, 321 U.S. 178, 182, 64 S. Ct. 487, 88 L. Ed. 659 (1944)); Finn v. Childs Co., 181 F.2d 431, 441 (2d Cir. 1950)).

n43

43. 615 F.2d 925, 933 (quoting Meinhard v. Salmon, 249 N.Y. 458, 464, 164 N.E. 545, 546 (1928)).

n44

44. 23 C.B.C. 542, 5 B.R. 489 (S.D.N.Y. 1980), aff'd, 655 F.2d 463, 24 C.B.C.2d 1277 (2d Cir. 1981).

n45

45. 5 B.R. 489, 499.

n46

46. 655 F.2d 463, 24 C.B.C. 417 (2d Cir. 1981).

n47

47. 785 F.2d 1249 (5th Cir. 1986).

n48

48. 785 F.2d 1249, 1255.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

145 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Standing and Authority to Pursue Preference Recoveries

2008 Emerging Issues 1334

Collier on Standing and Authority to Pursue Preference Recoveries

By Collier

December 5, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers standing and authority to pursue preference recoveries, including the authority to pursue the avoidance of transfers in the trustee under Bankruptcy Code section 547; examiners appointed in chapter 11 proceedings; postconfirmation appointed representatives; secured lenders and other purported assignees; and the ability of creditors committees and other parties in interest to pursue preference actions.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Trustees. Under its literal terms, Bankruptcy Code section 547 vests the authority to pursue the avoidance of preferential transfers in "the trustee." n1 The bestowal of such authority upon the trustee is consistent with the Code's general recognition of the trustee as the "representative" of the bankruptcy estate n2 and the entity possessing the capacity to sue on behalf of the bankruptcy estate. n3

Whereas the appointment of a trustee occurs automatically in a chapter 7, chapter 12 or chapter 13 case, a trustee will be appointed in a chapter 9 or chapter 11 case only if the bankruptcy court finds sufficient cause. n4 Ordinarily, a trustee assumes the authority to bring preference actions immediately upon being appointed or, if elected, upon being elected. A trustee appointed in a chapter 12 proceeding, however, is generally not recognized as having standing to bring preference actions unless and until the bankruptcy court divests the chapter 12 debtor(s) of such power. n5

Although the power to initiate preference actions is ordinarily reserved for the trustee, in certain circumstances, other parties may also possess or obtain authority to bring such actions.

Debtors

Chapter 7 Debtors. Because they do not function as representatives of the bankruptcy estate, chapter 7 debtors generally lack standing to pursue the avoidance and recovery of preferential transfers. Under the provisions of section 522(h), however, individual chapter 7 debtors are entitled to avoid certain types of "preferential transfers" in order to protect their exemption rights in the property so transferred if the trustee does not seek to avoid those transfers. n6 The exercise of this power is generally restricted to instances in which the debtor did not voluntarily transfer or conceal the property at issue. n7

Chapter 9 Debtors. The preference provisions set forth in section 547 are made applicable to chapter 9 proceedings pursuant to section 901(a). The power to bring preference actions in a chapter 9 proceeding is bestowed in the first instance upon the chapter 9 debtor. n8 In the event, however, that a chapter 9 debtor improperly fails or refuses to pursue a preference claim, the bankruptcy court may—upon the request of a creditor—appoint a trustee solely for the purpose of bringing such a claim. n9

Chapter 11 Debtors

Preconfirmation. In its capacity as a debtor in possession, a chapter 11 debtor may seek to avoid and recover preferential transfers. Specifically, section 1107 places a debtor in possession in the shoes of the trustee, with the same essential powers and duties of the trustee (except investigative duties), including the power to initiate and prosecute preference actions. n10

In the event a trustee is appointed in a chapter 11 proceeding, the chapter 11 debtor is stripped of its status as a debtor in possession and, thus, loses the authority to pursue the recovery of preferential transfers. n11 Instead, such authority resides in the chapter 11 trustee.

Similarly, a chapter 11 debtor may be divested of the general power to pursue preference actions if the bankruptcy court appoints an examiner and bestows upon the individual or entity so appointed the exclusive right to bring and prosecute such actions. n12

Postconfirmation. Under Bankruptcy Code section 1123(b)(3)(B), a chapter 11 plan may provide for the postconfirmation retention and enforcement of various causes of action existing in favor of the debtor or the bankruptcy estate, including preference claims. n13 Section 1123(b)(3)(B) further provides that such postconfirmation actions may be pursued by a debtor, a trustee or a "representative of the estate appointed for such purpose."

Courts have differed on the issue of how specific and detailed the language in a chapter 11 plan and accompanying disclosure statement must be in order to effectively preserve the right to bring postconfirmation preference actions. Some courts maintain that such language must specifically and unequivocally reserve such claims. n14 Under this standard, a reorganized debtor or other postconfirmation representative may be barred under res judicata principles from initiating a postconfirmation preference action against a party whose potential preference liability was not expressly disclosed as part of the chapter 11 plan and accompanying disclosure statement. n15

Most courts, however, do not insist that potential preference defendants be individually identified as part of a chapter 11 plan and disclosure statement in order for preference claims to be effectively preserved postconfirmation. Instead, such claims will be treated as having been sufficiently preserved so long as the chapter 11 plan expressly preserves the general right to bring preference actions after the plan is confirmed. n16 This more liberal approach is often justified on the basis that in many chapter 11 proceedings (particularly, those in which the debtor is seeking to reorganize on a "fast-track"), confirmation may occur before the chapter 11 debtor in possession or its professionals have had a sufficient opportunity to analyze potential preference claims. n17 In such situations, it would be impractical to insist that potential preference defendants be individually identified prior to confirmation. n18

Even courts adopting the latter approach, however, may find that preference claims have not been effectively preserved under section 1123(b)(3)(B) if it is evident that the chapter 11 plan provisions relied upon by the plaintiff in bringing the postconfirmation action were not designed to preserve such claims but, rather, were intended to address other or related issues. n19

Chapter 12 Debtors. Although a trustee is automatically appointed in a chapter 12 proceeding, a chapter 12 debtor normally continues as a "debtor in possession" and, as such, is given authority to pursue preference and other avoidance actions. n20 Under the provisions of section 1204(a), however, a bankruptcy court may divest a chapter 12 debtor of its debtor in possession status, whereupon the chapter 12 debtor's authority to initiate and prosecute preference and other avoidance actions may be reassigned to the chapter 12 trustee. n21

Chapter 13 Debtors. There is a clear split in the case law as to whether a chapter 13 debtor has authority to bring a preference action outside the context of section 522(h). One line of cases—generally professing to employ a "holistic approach" to statutory construction—maintains that a chapter 13 debtor possesses standing to pursue such claims. n22 The other line of cases—typically advocating a "plain meaning" construction—holds that such standing does not exist. n23

Examiners Appointed in Chapter 11 Proceedings. Some courts maintain that an examiner appointed under the provisions of section 1106(b) may be authorized to initiate and prosecute preference and other avoidance actions on behalf of the bankruptcy estate. n24 Other courts, however, hold that section 1106(b) does not contemplate or permit such powers to be bestowed upon an examiner and that the exercise of such powers would be incompatible with the proper role and function of an examiner. n25

Postconfirmation Appointed Representative. Under the provisions of section 1123(b)(3)(B), a chapter 11 plan may provide for the appointment of a third-party "representative of the estate" to pursue the postconfirmation enforcement and collection of claims belonging to the debtor or the estate, including preference claims. Traditionally, courts have applied a two-prong test to determine whether a third party has authority to pursue a claim or action as a postconfirmation representative under section 1123(b)(3)(B): (1) the third party must have been "appointed"; and (2) the third party must qualify as a "representative of the estate." n26

The first prong of the test will be satisfied so long as the confirmed plan (and possibly a document executed in conjunction with the confirmed plan) clearly identifies or designates the third party as an entity who will be entitled to pursue claims and actions postconfirmation. n27 In the event that the provisions of a chapter 11 plan regarding such an appointment are vague or otherwise unclear, the third party will not be regarded as having been properly appointed under section 1123(b)(3)(B) and, thus, will lack standing to pursue claims or actions postconfirmation. n28

Appearing to overlap to some extent with section 550(a)'s requirement that preference and other avoidance action be pursued "for the benefit of the estate," application of the second prong of the above-referenced test is generally recognized as entailing a "case-by-case analysis" of "whether a successful recovery by the appointed representative would benefit the debtor's estate and, particularly, the debtor's unsecured creditors." n29 Notwithstanding the stress the latter language seems to place on the interests of the debtor's unsecured creditors, it is generally not considered necessary that the amounts recovered by a postconfirmation representative be distributed directly (either in whole or in part) to unsecured creditors. Instead, a third party can still qualify as an appropriate "representative of the estate" for purposes of section 1123(b)(3)(B) provided the estate and its unsecured creditors derive some form of either direct or indirect benefit from the third party's postconfirmation exercise and enforcement of the claims reserved under the chapter 11 plan.

Thus, for instance, courts have found a third party granted avoidance powers under chapter 11 plan may be a proper "representative of the estate" under section 1123(b)(3)(B) even though any amounts recovered by the third party were earmarked exclusively for the payment of administrative expense claims. n30 Similarly, a successor entity formed pursuant to a chapter 11 plan may qualify as a "representative of the estate" for purposes of section 1123(b)(3)(B) if creditors of the estate receive equity interests, for the creditors will presumably benefit from the successor entity's successful pursuit of avoidance recoveries by the resulting impact such recoveries have on the successor entity's net worth. n31

Indeed, some courts have even held that a third party may provide sufficient benefit to the estate to qualify as a "representative of the estate" under section 1123(b)(3)(B) by providing some form of up-front consideration to the estate. n32 Under these authorities, it would appear that a chapter 11 estate could use the provisions of section 1123(b)(3)(B) to engage in an outright sale of its avoidance powers to a third party who has no prior involvement with or relation to the debtor or the bankruptcy proceeding.

Secured Lenders and Other Purported Assignees. Outside the context of section 1123(b)(3)(B), a number of courts have rejected the notion that the estate's right to initiate and prosecute preference claims can be validly transferred or assigned to a third party. n33 Thus, preference actions initiated by such third parties have been dismissed for lack of standing even in circumstances where it appeared that the bankruptcy court had previously approved the purported assignment of the preference claims to the third party. n34

Adopting a more permissive position, other courts-while not necessarily allowing for an outright assignment of the right to bring preference actions-have permitted a trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession to pledge the proceeds of preference actions to a postpetition lender or other secured party. n35 Often, in such situations, the resulting preference recoveries will ultimately end up exclusively in the pocket of the secured creditor. Nevertheless, courts approving such arrangements have been able to find that the preference actions still generate a sufficient benefit to the estate for purposes of section 550(a). n36

Departing from other circuits and embracing a position that appears difficult at best to reconcile with the literal language of the Bankruptcy Code, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has held that a trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession may make an outright assignment of its right to bring and prosecute preference claims. Specifically, in Duckor Spradling & Metzger v. Baum Trust (In re P.R.T.C., Inc.), n37 the court upheld the validity of a chapter 7 trustee's proposed assignment of certain preference and related avoidance actions to the bankruptcy estate's largest creditor. Under the terms of the assignment, the assignee obtained "sole discretion to pursue, not pursue, settle, compromise or collect upon" the assigned claims. In addition to not having any difficulty with the fact that the assigned actions would be prosecuted in the name of and at the sole discretion of the assignee (rather than a representative of the bankruptcy estate), the Court in P.R.T.C. also did not regard the assignment as violating section 550(a)'s requirement that the avoidance action be prosecuted "for the benefit of the estate," for the assignee in the case had expressly agreed to remit 50 percent of any net recoveries back to the bankruptcy estate. n38

Although not appearing to go quite as far as the Ninth Circuit in P.R.T.C., a growing number of courts have approved so-called "joint prosecution agreements" or similar types of arrangements. n39 Typically, under such an arrangement, a trustee (or chapter 11 debtor in possession) facing an administratively insolvent estate agrees to relinquish some (but not necessarily complete) control over the prosecution of preference or other avoidance actions to a creditor or other third party, who-in exchange for agreeing to fund the prosecution of the avoidance actions-is effectively assigned a portion (or, possibly, all) of the anticipated recoveries resulting from the actions. n40

To avoid potential standing challenges, the third party under such an arrangement will often bring the avoidance action either in the name of the estate or jointly in the name of itself and the trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession. n41 Again, because the third party typically agrees to share a portion of the net recoveries with the estate, those courts approving such arrangements are able to conclude that the arrangements do not run afoul of section 550(a)'s requirement that avoidance actions be prosecuted for the benefit of the estate. n42

In most (if not all) of the foregoing cases, the third party and the trustee (or debtor in possession) will agree to divide up the net preference recoveries in a manner that does not give the third party any more than it would otherwise be entitled to receive under the Code's priority scheme. n43 On the contrary, the third party—who is often a superpriority administrative claimant or a secured creditor that has been granted a lien on avoidance action recoveries—will agree to sacrifice its priority over a portion of the avoidance action recoveries in order to provide the trustee (or debtor in possession) with sufficient economic incentive not to abandon the avoidance actions or otherwise allow them to remain unprosecuted. n44

At least one court has found statutory support in the provisions of section 503(b)(3)(B) for the practice of permitting joint prosecution arrangements that provide for a creditor to receive compensation and reimbursement of its expenses from the estate for recovering property that has been transferred by the debtor. n45

Ability of Creditors' Committees and Other Parties in Interest to Pursue Preference Actions Derivatively on Behalf of the Estate. In Hartford Underwriters Insurance Co. v. Union Planters Bank, N.A., n46 the Supreme Court expressly declined to opine on "the practice of some courts of allowing creditors or creditors' committees a derivative right to bring avoidance actions when the trustee refuses to do so." n47 As suggested in the Hartford Underwriters decision, most lower courts today recognize the concept of derivative standing and, in accordance therewith, will allow a creditors' committee or other party in interest to initiate and prosecute a preference or other avoidance action on behalf of the estate, that is, provided such parties obtain prior approval from the bankruptcy court to do so. n48 Generally, such approval requires a showing that the trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession is either unwilling or unable to bring the action n49 or has otherwise agreed to allow the action to be initiated and prosecuted by the third party seeking derivative standing. n50

Conceptually, the notion of derivative standing can be distinguished from the joint prosecution arrangements referenced above in that under the latter arrangements, there is ordinarily an agreement in advance as to how the avoidance action recoveries will be allocated among the respective parties, whereas in the case of derivative standing, the net recoveries simply flow into the estate and are subject to distribution in accordance with the Bankruptcy Code's priority scheme and the terms of a confirmed plan.

Although the concept of derivative standing is not expressly provided for or addressed in the Code, some authorities and commentators have found statutory support for derivative standing in Code sections 503(b)(1)(B) (providing for the award of compensation and reimbursement to a creditor who successfully recovers property transferred or concealed by the debtor), 1103(c)(5) (authorizing an official committee to "perform such other services as are in the interest of those represented") and 1109(b) (permitting a party in interest to appear and be heard on any issue arising in a chapter 11 proceeding). n51

While the statutory foundations for derivative standing may remain subject to debate, it is clear that derivative standing provides a very prudent and practical means of contending with the fact that trustees and debtors in possession often lack sufficient incentive or resources to pursue significant preference and other avoidance recoveries.

Ability of Preference Defendants to Implead Third Parties. Under the provisions of section 550(a), the potential parties against whom a bankruptcy trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession may seek to impose preference liability include (1) the initial transferee of the allegedly preferential transfer, (2) the entity for whose benefit the transfer was made and (3) immediate and mediate transferees of the initial transferee. n52 Which of the foregoing parties are ultimately pursued for such liability is a matter of discretion left to the bankruptcy trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession. n53

Neither section 550 nor any other provision of the Code creates an independent right in favor of a defendant named in a preference action to seek contribution, reimbursement or contribution from any of the other parties potentially liable under section 550. n54 Thus, for instance, a mediate transferee cannot seek contribution or indemnity under section 550(a) against an initial transferee and/or the party whose benefit the initial transfer was made.

Preference defendants, however, may have an independent basis under nonbankruptcy law (e.g., state contract law) to seek contribution, reimbursement or indemnification against a third party. Rule 14 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure—the procedural rule governing the impleading of third parties in federal civil actions—is expressly incorporated and made applicable to adversary proceedings (including preference actions) pursuant to Rule 7014 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.ⁿ⁵⁵ Notwithstanding the applicability of this procedural rule, most bankruptcy courts maintain that they do not have jurisdiction over third-party claims asserted by preference defendants.ⁿ⁵⁶

Pursuit of Preference Claims Against Creditors Whose Claims Have Already Been Allowed or Resolved. A line of decisions emanating from the District of Delaware holds that in the event a bankruptcy court enters an order or approves a stipulation resolving a dispute as to the allowed amount of a creditor's claim, the bankruptcy estate is thereafter precluded by the provisions of section 502(d) from attempting to obtain a preference recovery against the creditor.ⁿ⁵⁷ Specifically, these courts construe the provisions of section 502(d) as preventing bankruptcy trustees and debtors in possession from effectively "sandbagging" a creditor "by, first, objecting to and obtaining a stipulated order allowing the claim in a reduced amount and, after the claim objection is resolved, commencing an adversary proceeding alleging that the creditor received an avoidable preference."ⁿ⁵⁸ Thus, these courts maintain that "a voidable transfer, such a preference, must be determined as part of the claims process and not at a later time."ⁿ⁵⁹

A growing majority of courts including fellow bankruptcy courts in the District of Delaware, have rejected the foregoing line of cases.ⁿ⁶⁰ Courts falling into this latter camp correctly recognize that section 502(d) was not intended to shield allegedly unsuspecting creditors from unanticipated preference actions but, instead, to provide the bankruptcy estate with a means of withholding distribution to those creditors who refuse to relinquish preferences and other voidable transfers to the estate.ⁿ⁶¹

For further discussion of Code section 547, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. 11 U.S.C. §§ 547(b), 550(a).

ⁿ²

2. 11 U.S.C. § 323(a).

ⁿ³

3. 11 U.S.C. § 323(b).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. §§ 926(a), 1104.

n5

5. Hoeger v. Teigen (In re Teigen), 123 B.R. 887, 888 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1991) ("until the Chapter 12 Trustee triggers a Court order authorizing the Trustee, as opposed to the Debtor-in-Possession, to bring this avoidance proceeding, the Chapter 12 Trustee has no standing as a Plaintiff in this cause"). Although the roles of a chapter 12 trustee and a chapter 13 trustee are often analogized to one another, in contrast to a chapter 12 trustee, it is generally agreed that a chapter 13 trustee has standing to pursue the avoidance of preferential transfers immediately upon being appointed. See, e.g., Ryker v. Current (In re Ryker), 315 B.R. 664, 670 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2004) ("a Chapter 13 trustee is empowered to use all of the avoidance powers found in Chapter 5"); Wood v. Mize (In re Wood), 301 B.R. 558, 562 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2003) (only the chapter 13 trustee has standing in a chapter 13 proceeding to pursue the avoidance of preferential transfers); Ledford v. Avco Finance (In re Durham), 56 B.R. 145, 147 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1985). But see McRoberts v. S.I.V.I. (In re Bequette), 184 B.R. 327, 334-35 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1995) (chapter 13 trustee lacked constitutional standing to bring avoidance action); Russo v. Ciaverella (In re Ciaverella), 28 B.R. 823, 827-828 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983) (chapter 13 trustee cannot bring avoidance action over the objection of a chapter 13 debtor).

n6 6. See Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. 522.12[2]--[3].

n7

7. Id.

n8

8. See 11 U.S.C. § 902(5) (providing that in the context of a chapter 9 proceeding the term "trustee" shall generally be construed to mean the debtor).

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 926(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 926.02.

n10

10. See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 404; see also Yellowhouse Mach. Co. v. Mack (In re Hughes), 704 F.2d 820 (5th Cir. 1983) (debtor in possession may avoid preferential transfer even though debtor's misdeeds caused circumstances leading to avoidance); Herman Cantor Corp. v. Central Fidelity Bank (In re Herman Cantor Corp.), 15 B.R. 747, 749 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1981) ("A debtor-in-possession enjoys the trustee's right to avoid a preferential transfer of the debtor's property."). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1107.

n11

11. Rooney v. Thorson (In re Dawnwood Properties/78), 209 F.3d 114, 116 (2d Cir. 2000).

n12

12. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.11[3].

n13

13. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, 1123.02[3].

n14

14. See, e.g., Harstad v. First American Bank (In re Harstad), 155 B.R. 500, 509 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1993) aff'd, Harstad v. First American Bank, 39 F.3d 898 (8th Cir. 1994) ("A plan of reorganization must specifically and unequivocally retain preference actions.").

n15

15. Southtrust Bank N.A. v. WCI Outdoor Products (In re Huntsville Small Engines), 228 B.R. 9, 14 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1998) (postconfirmation preference action barred by doctrine of res judicata because "debtor's disclosure statement and plan .. did not specifically reference any potential cause of action against the defendant and merely contained a general retention clause"); Mickey's Enters., Inc. v. Saturday Sales, Inc. (In re Mickey's Enters., Inc.), 165 B.R. 188, 194 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1994) ("disclosure statement must give those creditors holding allowed claims who are entitled to participate (vote and object) in the confirmation process adequate notice of and information regarding the claims that the debtor as reorganized will be bringing against them under the plan").

n16

16. See, e.g., Kmart Corp. v. Intercraft Co. (In re Kmart Corp.), 310 B.R. 107, 119-26 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2004); Ringel Valuation Servs. v. Shamrock Foods Co. (In re Arizona Fast Foods, LLC), 299 B.R. 589, 595-96 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2003); Cohen v. TIC Financial Sys. (In re Ampace Corp.), 279 B.R. 145, 156-162 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002).

n17

17. Ringel Valuation Servs. v. Shamrock Foods Co. (In re Arizona Fast Foods, LLC), 299 B.R. 589 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2003); Cohen v. TIC Financial Sys. (In re Ampace Corp.), 279 B.R. 145, 159 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002) ("In most of the large Chapter 11 cases in this Court, the plan of reorganization and/or liquidation is often confirmed before the debtor and/or a trustee has undertaken a detailed investigation of the potential preference actions.").

n18

18. Elk Horn Coal Co., LLC v. Conveyor Mfg. & Supply, Inc. (In re Pen Holdings, Inc.), 316 B.R. 495, 504 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 2004) ("It is not practicable, especially in larger cases, for the debtor to identify by name in the plan or disclosure statement every entity that may have received a preferential payment."); Peltz v. Worldnet Corp. (In re USN Communications, Inc.), 280 B.R. 573, 591 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002) ("it is both impractical and unnecessary for a Disclosure Statement and/or Plan to list each and every possible defendant against a debtor or its representative may bring an avoidance action").

n19

19. Kmart Corp. v. Intercraft Co. (In re Kmart Corp.), 310 B.R. 107, 124 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2004) ("[a]ttempts to manufacture an 1123(b)(3) reservation by resorting to other plan provisions, such as those relating to reservation of jurisdiction or appointment of an estate representative, are vulnerable to failure").

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 1203.

n21

21. Hoeger v. Teigen (In re Teigen), 123 B.R. 887, 888 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1991) ("until the Chapter 12 Trustee triggers a Court order authorizing the Trustee, as opposed to the Debtor-in-Possession, to bring this avoidance proceeding, the Chapter 12 Trustee has no standing as a Plaintiff in this cause").

n22

22. See, e.g., Houston v. Eiler (In re Cohen), 305 B.R. 886, 895 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004); Thacker v. United Cos. Lending Corp. (In re Thacker), 256 B.R. 724 (W.D. Ky. 2000); In re Freeman, 72 B.R. 850 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1987); In re Ottaviano, 68 B.R. 238 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1986); In re Einoder, 55 B.R. 319 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1985).

n23

23. See, e.g., LaBarge v. Benda (In re Merrifield), 214 B.R. 362 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1997); Ryker v. Current (In re Ryker), 315 B.R. 664 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2004); In re Binghi, 299 B.R. 300 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003); Kildow v. EMC Mortg. Corp. (In re Kildow), 232 B.R. 686 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1999).

n24

24. See, e.g., Williamson v. Roppollo, 114 B.R. 127, 129 (W.D. La. 1990); Franklin-Lee Homes, Inc. v. First Union Bank of North Carolina, N.A. (In re Franklin-Lee Homes, Inc.), 102 B.R. 477, 480-81 (E.D.N.C. 1989); NBD Park Ridge Bank v. SRJ Enters., Inc. (In re SRJ Enters.), 151 B.R. 189, 195 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993) (the "broad grant of authority" under section 1106(b) "may include allowing the examiner the discretion to avoid a preference"); In re Carnegie Int'l Corp., 51 B.R. 252, 256 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1984).

n25

25. Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp. v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548, 577 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1002, 124 S. Ct. 530, 157 L. Ed. 2d 406 (2004) (pursuit of avoidance action does not comport with examiner's proper role in a chapter 11 proceeding); Official Comm. of Asbestos Personal Injury Claimants v. Sealed Air Corp. (In re W.R. Grace & Co.), 285 B.R. 148, 156 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002) ("the basic job of an examiner is to examine, not to act as a protagonist in the proceedings").

n26

26. See McFarland v. Leyh (In re Texas General Petroleum Corp.), 52 F.3d 1330, 1335 (5th Cir. 1995); Citicorp Acceptance Co., Inc. v. Robison (In re Sweetwater), 884 F.2d 1323, 1326-27 (10th Cir. 1989); AFD Fund v. Transmed Foods, Inc. (In re AmeriServe Food Distrib., Inc.), 315 B.R. 24, 31 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004); Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Maxwell Newspapers, Inc. v. MacMillan, Inc. (In re Maxwell Newspapers, Inc.), 189 B.R. 282, 287 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995); Winston & Strawn v. Kelly (In re Churchfield Mgmt. & Investment Corp.), 122 B.R. 76, 81 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n27

27. See, e.g., McFarland v. Leyh (In re Texas Gen. Petroleum Corp.), 52 F.3d 1330, 1335 (5th Cir. 1995) ("The bankruptcy court's approval of a plan that clearly appoints a [third-party] satisfies the first element."); Norberg v. Sanchez (In re Chase & Sanborn Corp.), 813 F.2d 1177, 1180, n.1 (11th Cir. 1987) ("Although the [bankruptcy] court did not formally and specifically appoint the [third party representative] to enforce [avoidance] claims, the reorganization plan approved by the [bankruptcy] court recognized that the [third party representative] would have the responsibility of pursuing such claim of the debtor [and, thus,] .. was sufficient, under the Bankruptcy Code, to confer on the [third party representative] standing to assert this claim."); Kroh Brothers Development Co. v. United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, N.A. (In re Kroh Brothers Development Co.), 100 B.R. 487, 497 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1989), appeal denied, In re Kroh Brothers Development Co., 101 B.R. 1000 (W.D. Mo. 1989) (chapter 11 plan's appointment of postconfirmation representative pursuant to section 1123(b)(3)(B) does not require any "magic words").

n28

28. See, e.g., Retail Marketing v. King (In re Mako, Inc.), 985 F.2d 1052, 1055 (10th Cir. 1993) (postconfirmation avoidance action brought by third party claiming to have been appointed under section 1123(b)(3)(B) dismissed for lacking of standing because "the provision of the plan purporting to confer authority on [the third party] to initiate avoidance actions after confirmation of the plan is vague")

n29

29. McFarland v. Leyh (In re Texas Gen. Petroleum Corp.), 52 F.3d 1330, 1335 (5th Cir. 1995); Retail Marketing v. King (In re Mako, Inc.), 985 F.2d 1052, 1054 (10th Cir. 1993); see also Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Maxwell Newspapers, Inc. v. MacMillan, Inc. (In re Maxwell Newspapers, Inc.), 189 B.R. 282, 287 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995) ("The primary consideration in determining whether the [third party] is a representative of the estate' is the benefit bestowed upon the estate as a result of the transfer, in particular the benefit to the unsecured creditors."); Winston & Strawn v. Kelly (In re Churchfield Mgmt. & Investment Corp.), 122 B.R. 76, 82 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990) (same).

n30

30. Citicorp Acceptance Co., Inc. v. Robison (In re Sweetwater), 884 F.2d 1323, 1329-1330 (10th Cir. 1989); see also Kroh Brothers Development Co. v. United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, N.A. (In re Kroh Brothers Development Co.), 100 B.R. 487, 500 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1989) (right retained by the estate to receive 50% of the net recoveries was sufficient benefit to qualify third party as "representative of the estate" for purposes of section 1123(b)(3)(B)).

n31

31. See, e.g., Temex Energy, Inc. v. Hastie & Kirschner (In re Amarex, Inc.), 96 B.R. 330, 334-335 (W.D. Okla. 1989); DuVoisin v. East Tennessee Equity, Ltd. (In re Southern Indus. Banking Corp.), 59 B.R. 638, 641

n.4 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1986).

n32 32. Burlington Motor Carriers Inc. v. Comdata Network, Inc. (In re Burlington Motor Holdings, Inc.), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 805 (D. Del. Jan. 18, 2002) (purchaser of assets of the estate-including, the estate's avoidance powers-provided sufficient benefit to the estate by paying purchase price to debtor and assuming certain administrative expense and priority claim obligations); Burlington Motor Carriers Inc. v. MCI Telecommunications (In re Burlington Motor Holdings, Inc.), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 804 (D. Del. Jan. 18, 2002) (same); All Star Int'l Trucks, Inc. v. Burlington Motor Carriers, Inc. (In re Burlington Motor Holdings, Inc.), 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 718 (D. Del. Jan. 17, 2002) (same); Winston & Strawn v. Kelly (In re Churchfield Mgmt. & Investment Corp.), 122 B.R. 76, 82 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990) (up-front consideration paid by third party to bankruptcy estate in exchange for, inter alia, right to pursue avoidance action conferred sufficient benefit upon the estate to qualify third party as "representative of the estate"); see also Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Maxwell Newspapers, Inc. v. MacMillan, Inc. (In re Maxwell Newspapers, Inc.), 189 B.R. 282, 286-288 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995) (wherein a group of creditors was found to qualify as "representatives of the estate" for purposes of section 1123(b)(3)(B) when they agreed as part of a chapter 11 plan to waive their claims against the estate in exchange for obtaining the right to exercise and enforce certain of the estate's avoidance powers following the confirmation of the debtor's plan).

n33

33. Syndicate Exchange Corp. v. Duffy (In re Pro Greens, Inc.), 297 B.R. 850, 855-56 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2003); Met-Al, Inc. v. Gabor (In re Metal Brokers Int'l Inc.), 225 B.R. 920, 922-23 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1998); Fleet Nat'l Bank v. Doorcrafters (In re North Atlantic Millwork Corp.), 155 B.R. 271, 281 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1993); Consolidated Pet Foods, Inc. v. Millard Refrigerated Servs., Inc. (In re S & D Foods Inc.), 110 B.R. 34, 36 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

n34

34. Syndicate Exchange Corp. v. Duffy (In re Pro Greens, Inc.), 297 B.R. 850, 852 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2003); Fleet Nat'l Bank v. Doorcrafters (In re North Atlantic Millwork Corp.), 155 B.R. 271, 275-76 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1993); Consolidated Pet Foods, Inc. v. Millard Refrigerated Servs., Inc. (In re S & D Foods Inc.), 110 B.R. 34, 35 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

n35

35. In re Qualitech Steel Corp., 276 F.3d 245 (7th Cir. 2001) (court upheld chapter 11 debtor's pledge of preference recoveries to secured creditors as form of adequate protection); Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Travellers Int'l AG (In re Trans World Airlines, Inc.), 163 B.R. 964, 968-973 (Bankr. D. Del. 1994) (court refused to dismiss preference action on basis that the proceeds of any recovery had been pledged to secure a postpetition loan). But see Congress Credit Corp. v. AJC Int'l, 186 B.R. 555 (D.P.R. 1995) (preference action brought by chapter 7 trustee would be dismissed because secured creditor had claim to any proceeds resulting from action). A prepetition security interest in a debtor's existing and after-acquired property ordinarily does not extend to the proceeds of preference and other avoidance actions because of the operation of section 552(b). See In re Integrated Testing Products Corp., 69 B.R. 901, 904-905 (D.N.J. 1987); In re Tek-Aids Indus. Inc., 145 B.R. 253, 256 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1992); In re Ludford Fruit Products Inc., 99 B.R. 18, 24-25 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1989). See generally 552.02[5][d] infra.

n36

36. Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Dick Corp., 351 F.3d 290, 293 (7th Cir. 2003) (notwithstanding the fact that preference recoveries would be paid exclusively to a group of secured creditors, the estate received sufficient "ex ante" benefit for purposes of section 550(a) by virtue of the fact that the pledge of the preference recoveries provided the secured creditor group with "adequate protection" and, thereby, enabled the debtor to continue operating in the short-run and attempt a reorganization); Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Travellers Int'l AG (In re Trans World Airlines, Inc.), 163 B.R. 964, 972 (Bankr. D. Del. 1994) (although recoveries were pledged to postpetition lender, pursuit of preference claim would still benefit the estate for purposes of section 550(a) as recoveries reduce the outstanding balance of the postpetition lender's debt); cf. Silverman Consulting, Inc. v. Hitachi Power Tools, U.S.A., Ltd. (In re Payless Cashways, Inc.), 290 B.R. 689, 697 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2003) (even though preference recoveries might be used exclusively to pay administrative expense claims, pursuit of preference action still provided sufficient benefit for purpose of section 550(a) as section 550(a) requires benefit to the "estate" not "unsecured creditors").

n37

37. 177 F.3d 774, 780-84 (9th Cir. 1999) (relying, in part, upon the Ninth Circuit's earlier decision in Briggs v. Kent (In re Professional Investment Properties of America), 955 F.2d 623 (9th Cir. 1992)).

n38 38. 177 F.3d 774, 782.

n39

39. See Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Dick Corp., 351 F.3d 290 (7th Cir. 2003); Glinka v. Federal Plastics Mfg. (In re Housecraft Indus. USA, Inc.), 310 F.3d 64 (2d Cir. 2002); Gonzales v. Nabisco Div. of Kraft Foods, Inc. (In re Furr's), 294 B.R. 763 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2003).

n40

40. See, e.g., Glinka v. Federal Plastics Mfg. (In re Housecraft Indus. USA, Inc.), 310 F.3d 64, 67 (2d Cir. 2002) (court approved joint prosecution agreement between chapter 7 trustee and the debtor's primary secured lender under which (a) the secured lender agreed to fund the litigation; (b) the trustee agreed not compromise or settle any claim without the secured lender's express consent; and (c) any amounts recovered would be used first to reimburse the secured lender for its fees and expenses, with the next $15,000 being paid to the trustee and the remaining balance being split with 80% going to the secured lender and 20% going to the trustee); Qualitech Steel Holdings v. GE Supply Co. (In re Qualitech Steel Corp.), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9427 (S.D. Ind. May 9, 2003), rev'd on other grounds, Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Dick Corp., 351 F.3d 290 (7th Cir. 2003) (describing joint prosecution arrangement ultimately upheld by the Seventh Circuit); Gonzales v. Nabisco Div. of Kraft Foods, Inc. (In re Furrs), 294 B.R. 763 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2003) (approving joint prosecution arrangement between chapter 7 trustee and secured lenders under which secured lenders agreed to fund trustee's litigation of avoidance action in exchange for trustee's agreement that two-thirds of any recoveries would be paid to secured lenders and that if the trustee sought to obtain court approval of a proposed settlement over the secured lender's objection, the trustee would not be entitled to the "business judgment" presumption that is ordinarily afforded in such situations).

n41

41. See, e.g., Glinka v. Federal Plastics Mfg. (In re Housecraft Indus. USA, Inc.), 310 F.3d 64, 70-71 (2d Cir. 2002) (avoidance actions filed jointly by trustee and secured creditor); Qualitech Steel Holdings v. GE Supply Co. (In re Qualitech Steel Corp.), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9427, at *5 (S.D. Ind. May 9, 2003) (secured creditors authorized to commence and prosecute adversary proceedings in the name of the debtors).

n42

42. Glinka v. Federal Plastics Mfg. (In re Housecraft Indus. USA, Inc.), 310 F.3d 64, 71-72 (2d Cir. 2002); Gonzales v. Nabisco Div. of Kraft Foods, Inc. (In re Furrs), 294 B.R. 763, 776-77 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2003).

n43

43. See, e.g., Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Dick Corp., 351 F.3d 290, 293-94 (7th Cir. 2003) (noting that unsecured creditors were not prejudiced by fact that preference recoveries would be paid to secured creditors since unsecured creditors and equity were out of the money from the outset); Gonzales v. Nabisco Div. of Kraft Foods, Inc. (In re Furrs), 294 B.R. 763, 774 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2003) (payment of 80% of preference recoveries to secured creditors did not prejudice other creditors and/or administrative expense claimants as secured creditors had $2.3 million superpriority claim that had to be paid before there would be any distribution to these other parties); Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Travellers Int'l AG (In re Trans World Airlines, Inc.), 163 B.R. 964, 972 (Bankr. D. Del. 1994) (payment of preference recoveries to postpetition lender did not prejudice other creditors as postpetition lender's claim had priority over other creditors).

n44

44. See, e.g., Glinka v. Federal Plastics Mfg. (In re Housecraft Indus. USA, Inc.), 310 F.3d 64, 67 (2d Cir. 2002) (in addition to funding avoidance litigation, secured creditor agrees to pay to the bankruptcy estate the first $15,000 of net recoveries and 20% of any net recoveries beyond initial $15,000); Gonzales v. Nabisco Div. of Kraft Foods, Inc. (In re Furrs), 294 B.R. 763, 767 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2003) (in addition to funding avoidance litigation, secured lenders agree to pay chapter 7 trustee the first 3% of any recoveries as a commission and one-third of the remaining balance of any recoveries).

n45

45. In re Godon, Inc., 275 B.R. 555, 560-561 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2002) (court relied upon section 503(b)(3)(B) to approve proposed arrangement under which secured creditor and trustee agreed to jointly pursue avoidance actions, with secured creditor receiving approximately 90% of any amounts recovered and the trustee receiving the other 10% and secured creditor having discretion to initiate and settle preference actions subject only to trustee's right to object to a proposed settlement on the basis that it is not "fair and equitable"). But see NBD Park Ridge Bank v. SRJ Enters., Inc. (In re SRJ Enters., Inc.), 151 B.R. 189, 193 n.1 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993) ("§ 503(b)(3)(B) does not confer standing").

n46

46. 530 U.S. 1, 120 S. Ct. 1942, 147 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2000).

n47

47. 530 U.S. 1, 13 n.5, 120 S. Ct. 1942, 1951 n.5, 147 L. Ed. 2d 1, 11 n.5.

n48

48. Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp. v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548 (3d Cir.) (en banc), cert. dismissed, 540 U.S. 1002, 124 S. Ct. 530, 157 L. Ed. 2d 406 (2003); Commodore Int'l Ltd. v. Gould (In re Commodore Int'l Ltd.), 262 F.3d 96, 99-110 (2d Cir. 2001); Canadian Pac. Forest Prods. v. J.D. Irving, Ltd. (In re Gibson Group, Inc.), 66 F.3d 1436, 1438 (6th Cir. 1995). But see United Phosphorus, Ltd. v. Fox (In re Fox), 305 B.R. 912 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2004) (concluding that Court's reasoning in Hartford Underwriters mandates that concept of derivative standing be rejected).

n49

49. Nangle v. Lauer (In re Lauer), 98 F.3d 378, 388 (8th Cir. 1996); Canadian Pac. Forest Prods. v. J.D. Irving, Ltd. (In re Gibson Group, Inc.), 66 F.3d 1436, 1446 (6th Cir. 1995) (setting forth detailed steps that must be followed before creditor or creditors' committee can obtain derivative standing to bring avoidance action on behalf of the estate); Official Unsecured Creditors Committee of Suffola, Inc. v. U.S. National Bank (In re Suffola, Inc.), 2 F.3d 977, 979 n.1 (9th Cir. 1993) (committee may obtain derivative standing to bring preference action when trustee or chapter 11 debtor in possession unjustifiably fails to do so); Unsecured Creditors Committee of Debtor STN Enters., Inc. v. Noyes (In re STN Enters., Inc.), 779 F.2d 901, 904 (2d Cir. 1985) (same).

n50

50. Commodore Int'l Ltd. v. Gould (In re Commodore Int'l Ltd.), 262 F.3d 96, 991-100 (2d Cir. 2001) (debtor in possession may stipulate to creditors' committee's prosecution of avoidance action derivatively on behalf of the estate); Coral Petroleum, Inc. v. Banque Paribas-London, 797 F.2d 1351, 1362-1363 (5th Cir. 1986) (chapter 11 debtor may stipulate to unsecured creditors committee's derivative standing to bring preference action).

n51

51. See, e.g., Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp. v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548, 559-566 (3d Cir. 2003); A. Lepene & S. Gordon, The Case for Derivative Standing in Chapter 11: "It's the Plain Meaning, Stupid", 11 Am. Bankr. Inst. L. Rev. 313 (Winter 2003).

n52

52. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 550.

n53

53. See, e.g., Gibbons v. First Fidelity Bank, N.A. (In re Princeton-New York Investors, Inc.), 255 B.R. 376, 384 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2000) (a trustee "is entitled to recover from any combination of [potential defendants], as long as there is no double recovery"); Miller v. T.C. Sheet Metal Control Board Trust Fund (In re Curran V. Neilsen Co.), 1995 Bankr. LEXIS 1713, at *6 n.1 (Bankr. D. Minn. Nov. 29, 1995) ("§ 550 effectively gives the trustee the discretion to determine who recovery may be had from and therefore permits the trustee to pursue the deep pockets."); Marlow v. United States (In re Julien Co.), 136 B.R. 760, 765 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1991).

n54

54. Cassirer v. Sterling Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of New York (In re Schick), 223 B.R. 661, 663 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998); Mayka v. Dollar Bank (In re Biggs, Inc.), 159 B.R. 737, 747 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1993).

n55

55. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 7014.

n56

56. See, e.g., Buchanan v. Berman, Roberts & Kelly (In re Spaulding & Co.), 131 B.R. 84, 89 (D.N.D. 1990); Adams v. Prudential Securities, Inc. (In re Foundation for New Era Philanthropy), 201 B.R. 382, 391 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996); Rouse v. Pinegar Chevrolet, Inc. (In re Chambers), 125 B.R. 788, 793-794 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1991); Borreson v. Peterson (In re John Peterson Motors, Inc.), 56 B.R. 588, 596 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1986). But see Joseph v. Wilcox & Gibbs, Inc. (In re Wilcox & Gibbs, Inc.), 314 B.R. 541, 545 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004); Burns v. First Citizen Bank & Trust Co. (In re Rainbow Security Inc.), 173 B.R. 508, 512 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1994).

n57

57. Caliolo v. Saginaw Bay Plastics, Inc. (In re Cambridge Indus. Holdings, Inc.), 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 1200 (Bankr. D. Del. Sept. 25, 2003); Caliolo v. Azdel, Inc. (In re Cambridge Indus. Holdings, Inc.), 50 C.B.C.2d 731, 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 794 (Bankr. D. Del. July 18, 2003); Caliolo v. TKA Fabco Corp. (In re Cambridge Indus. Holdings, Inc.), 50 C.B.C.2d 866, 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 577 (Bankr. D. Del. Apr. 2, 2003); LaRoche Indus., Inc. v. Gen. Am. Transp. Corp. (In re LaRoche Indus., Inc.), 284 B.R. 406 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002).

n58

58. Caliolo v. TKA Fabco Corp. (In re Cambridge Indus. Holdings, Inc.), 50 C.B.C.2d 866, 2003 Bankr. LEXIS 577, *6 (Bankr. D. Del. Apr. 2, 2003).

n59

59. LaRoche Indus., Inc. v. Gen. Am. Transp. Corp. (In re LaRoche Indus., Inc.), 284 B.R. 406, 408-09 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002).

n60

60. AFD Fund v. Transmed Foods, Inc. (In re AmeriServe Food Distrib., Inc.), 315 B.R. 24, 34 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004); In re Polaroid Corp., 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 841 (Bankr. D. Del. June 22, 2004); In re TWA Inc. Post Confirmation Estate, 305 B.R. 221, 226-227 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004); Rhythms NetConnections Inc. v. Cisco Sys. (In re Rhythms Netconnections Inc.), 300 B.R. 404, 408 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003); Peltz v. Gulfcoast Workstation

Group (In re Bridge Information Sys., Inc.), 293 B.R. 479, 487-88 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 2003).

n61

61. See, e.g., AFD Fund v. Transmed Foods, Inc. (In re AmeriServe Food Distrib., Inc.), 315 B.R. 24, 34 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004) ("Section 502(d) addresses the allowability of a creditor's proof of claim where the creditor has received a voidable transfer, not the debtor's ability to commence a preference action where the debtor fails to object to the creditor's claim."); Rhythms NetConnections Inc. v. Cisco Sys. (In re Rhythms Netconnections Inc.), 300 B.R. 404, 409 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003) ("Section 502(d) is intended to coerce creditors to comply with judicial orders"); Peltz v. Gulfcoast Workstation Group (In re Bridge Information Sys., Inc.), 293 B.R. 479, 488 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 2003) ("the better position is that §502(d) is in essence an affirmative defense to a creditor's claim against the estate").

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

146 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Obtaining Credit on a Superpriority or Secured Basis

2008 Emerging Issues 1290

Collier on Obtaining Credit on a Superpriority or Secured Basis

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses topics such as non-exclusive alternatives, terms of the loan, the procedure for obtaining credit under 364(c), and the application of nonbankruptcy law filing or recording requirements to liens authorized under 364.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: If credit cannot be obtained by the offering of a simple administrative priority, n1 the trustee or debtor in possession may, with court approval after notice and a hearing, offer greater protection and incentives to lenders. Under section 364(c) of the Bankruptcy Code, the trustee or debtor in possession may obtain credit or incur debt with: (1) a superpriority over any or all administrative expenses; (2) security in the form of a lien on free assets; or (3) security in the form of a junior lien on assets that are already encumbered.

Non-Exclusive Alternatives

The alternatives set forth in section 364(c) are not exclusive. The trustee (or debtor in possession) may offer more than one of the protections. However, when a lender extends credit only under section 364(c)(2) and the collateral proves insufficient, it has been held that the creditor cannot fall back on section 364(c)(1) to claim a superpriority over administrative expense claimants. n2 Moreover, the trustee need not exhaust one alternative before the next alternative becomes available. n3 The trustee is free to pick from the various alternatives or any combination thereof as the needs of the case may dictate. However, the trustee should not be offering greater protection than is necessary to enable the trustee to borrow on reasonable business terms. n4

Some courts apply a three-part test to assess requests under section 364(c), requiring a showing that (1) the debtor cannot obtain credit unencumbered or without superpriority status, (2) the credit transactions are necessary to preserve assets of the estate and (3) the terms of the credit agreements are fair, reasonable and adequate. n5

Terms of Loan

The power of the court to authorize the incurring of indebtedness with a priority over existing indebtedness, even indebtedness entitled to its own priority, is well recognized. Similarly, the authorization of borrowing with and without security has long been permitted. n6 Section 364(c) permits the court to authorize such borrowing.

Superpriority Borrowing. The court may authorize borrowing with a priority over any or all administrative expenses. The order should state that the priority given is over all administrative claims and section 507(b) claims. When such borrowing is authorized, the extent of the priority must be dealt with specifically in the court order and in the notice of the hearing, in order to provide appropriate protection to other priority claimants. n7 Borrowing under section 364(c)(1), of course, remains subordinate to both preexisting secured claims and any efforts to charge secured lenders' collateral under section 506(c). n8

Secured Borrowing. The court may authorize borrowing secured by a lien on otherwise unencumbered property, or a junior lien on property already encumbered. With respect to such secured borrowing, the power under section 364(c) is limited to situations in which the status of existing liens and property rights are not affected by the proposed borrowing. n9 Thus, the trustee may grant a security interest on unencumbered property or may grant a junior lien on encumbered property. Section 364(c) does not authorize the granting of liens senior to liens or interests already existing on the property. However, section 364(c) does authorize the grant of a junior lien on property notwithstanding a restriction on the granting of such liens contained in the terms of the senior loan agreement.

If the court authorizes secured borrowing, the lender should thereafter be entitled, upon appropriate request, to adequate protection of its interest under section 362 n10 and section 363, n11 and to receive notice of, and adequate protection with respect to, subsequent credit extensions under subsection (c) or (d). n12 In particular, once a lien has been authorized under section 364(c), future extensions of credit cannot be afforded an equal or senior lien priority without compliance with the more stringent standards of section 364(d) n13 requiring, among other things, adequate protection of the interest of the holder of the lien on the property of the estate on which such senior or equal lien is proposed to be granted. n14

The priority and lien afforded to the lender may in the appropriate case be subject to surcharge under section 506(c) n15 for expenditures by the estate which directly benefit the secured lender. n16

Cross-Collateralization. When an existing prepetition lender is willing to extend financing to the trustee or debtor in possession, issues may arise concerning whether the terms of the financing are fair to the estate. The most common problem arises when the lender attempts to take a security interest in previously unencumbered property of the estate to secure not only the postpetition extension of credit, as contemplated by section 364(c), but also to secure previously unsecured prepetition claims against the debtor. This practice is often called cross-collateralization.

While several cases have implicitly upheld cross-collateralization, n17 they have typically relied on section 364(e), holding the appeal moot without actually reaching the merits of the transaction. n18 The first appellate court to address the issue of cross-collateralization on the merits rejected its use under the Code. In Shapiro v. Saybrook Manufacturing Co. (In re Saybrook Manufacturing Co.), n19 the court rejected both the mootness argument and the cross-collateralization. The court rejected the mootness argument notwithstanding that the objecting creditor had failed to obtain a stay pending appeal. n20 The court found that considering cross-collateralization as authorized for purposes of section 364(e) would put the cart before the horse, because to qualify for the safe harbor of section 364(e), the lien priority must be authorized under section 364(c). n21

With respect to the cross-collateralization, the court concluded that the practice was inconsistent with the Code for two reasons. First, the Code does not expressly sanction cross-collateralization as an acceptable means of postpetition financing. In fact, subsections (c) and (d) of section 364 both speak in terms of future or new credit. n22 Second, the court found that cross-collateralization was beyond the court's equitable powers because it conflicted with the explicit priority scheme set forth in the Code. n23

A more recent decision from the Seventh Circuit, however, might support cross-collateralization in extraordinary circumstances, by analogy to the treatment of so-called critical vendors. n24 Cross-collateralization involves the use of property of the estate to pay a prepetition obligation that is at least arguably unsecured before plan confirmation in a chapter 11 case or before an interim distribution in a chapter 7 case. A similar situation arises when a chapter 11 debtor in possession seeks court authority to pay critical vendors in the early stages of a reorganization effort. The debtor in possession seeks authority to use property of the estate to pay a prepetition general unsecured claim to induce the vendor to continue to do business with the estate, arguing that the vendor's products are critical to the success of the reorganization and that the vendor will not ship unless its prepetition claim is paid. The Seventh Circuit, in dictum, indicated that such payments may be authorized in extraordinary circumstances where the debtor in possession could show that the vendor would not ship without payment of the prepetition debt and that, overall, the estate and therefore creditors in general would be better off with the reduction in cash resulting from the payment offset by the increase in the value of the estate by continued, uninterrupted operation. n25 A similar logic could presumably be applied to cross-collateralization under section 364, if the debtor in possession could show that the lender was the only source of funds to keep the business going, that doing so would enhance the recoveries of general unsecured creditors who would be sacrificing the estate's unencumbered assets in the short term for the longer term gain, and that the lender would not provide postpetition financing otherwise. However, in this situation, the debtor in possession would also have to show that the use of the lender's cash collateral under section 363(c)(2) would not suffice.

Economic Terms. In any extension of debt financing under section 364, traditional issues such as borrowing conditions, interest rates, loan fees, covenants and remedies upon default will have to be negotiated. n26 Often the debtor in possession will be able to obtain only onerous terms, which the bankruptcy court must balance against the debtor in possession's apparent lack of alternatives. n27

On the other hand, a prepetition secured lender is often at risk if the debtor in possession is not able to obtain financing and must cease operations. Typically, a creditor's collateral will liquidate for more if sold as part of a going concern business. So a prepetition lender who is providing postpetition financing to protect its collateral position has an incentive to make sure that it does not demand too much, lest the bankruptcy court not approve the postpetition financing and cause the business to close and the collateral value to be lost. Although the debtor in possession may not have sufficient leverage to push back too hard, the bankruptcy court, in its role as final arbiter of whether the financing should be approved, often acts as the last and perhaps most effective negotiator against the secured lender. It is an awkward position for a judge who is supposed to resolve disputes and not become involved in the administration of the business of the estate, but it perhaps has become essential given the nature of the process.

A lender to a debtor in possession, no less than a lender to an ordinary borrower, seeks as much protection as the circumstances will allow. In lending to a debtor in possession, a lender may also seek protections specific to the chapter 11 context. The protections for which a debtor in possession lender may negotiate are limited not only by the market but also by what a bankruptcy court will approve under section 364. For example, a lender might seek control over the chapter 11 plan that a debtor may file. In one case, the court permitted a loan term that required the debtor to file a plan acceptable to two-thirds in amount and a majority in number of the debtor's prepetition secured lenders by a specified date, finding that the term was not an impermissible lock-up agreement or vote solicitation, because the only consequence of noncompliance was to permit the lenders to stop funding under the loan agreement, not to require filing or confirmation of a particular plan. n28 In another case, the lender provided a line of credit to four affiliated debtors for which each would be jointly and severally liable, but giving each debtor claims against the others, subordinated to the lender's claims, to the extent that a debtor made payments to the lender in excess of the funds that it received. The court permitted the lending arrangement, overruling an objection that it amounted to a de facto substantive consolidation of the four estates, because the claims over against the other debtors preserved the indicia of separateness. n29

In addition, because of the nature of bankruptcy cases, the parties may give substantial attention to so-called carve outs for professional fees, employees and trade creditors. n30 This is because secured or superpriority financing may result in a situation in which no assets are available to satisfy even first priority administrative claims. If the secured or superpriority lender does not consent to a carve out for certain administrative claims, the claimants will be subordinate to the lender with respect to the lender's collateral.

The trustee may recover from the lender for the benefit of the estate and all administrative claimants the costs and expenses incurred in preserving the lender's collateral for the benefit of the lender. n31 But any other administrative expense claimant may not recover from the lender directly, in its own name, no matter what benefit it may have provided to the lender or the collateral. n32 If the trustee is unwilling to pursue the lender, however, a claimant might seek court authority to sue on behalf of the estate, n33 but not to recover only for itself. These economic issues must be considered on a case-by-case basis; although courts must be concerned with provisions that create disguised priorities for certain administrative claimants or which effectively divest the court of jurisdiction upon default. n34

Roll-Over of Prepetition Debt. With apparently increasing frequency, postpetition working capital lenders under all subsections of section 364 demand that the debtor satisfy prepetition secured indebtedness to avoid the need for contentious adequate protection or priming litigation. When the debtor's prepetition lender is acting as the postpetition lender, the elimination of prepetition debt--termed a roll-over--often attracts intense scrutiny from the court and the United States trustee. n35

Roll-overs come in two basic forms. First, a gradual roll-over occurs when a prepetition lender agrees to advance postpetition funds with the agreement that proceeds of prepetition accounts receivables will be applied to reduce the prepetition loan. Alternatively, a postpetition lender can simply lend enough postpetition to pay off the prepetition loan, whether owing to the postpetition lender or a different lender, immediately converting all of the lender's prepetition debt to postpetition debt.

Neither approach should be controversial from the technical perspective of the priority or satisfaction of liens if the prepetition lender is fully secured on the petition date, although the postpetition lender often bargains for substantial procedural protections that are not available to protect its prepetition liens. These protections can sometimes shift the dynamics of a chapter reorganization dramatically, because of the increased rights that the holder of an administrative claim may have over the holder of a prepetition secured claim. For example, the holder of a prepetition claim risks cramdown treatment under a chapter 11 plan, that is, confirmation of a plan without the holder's consent. n36 By contrast, administrative claims must be paid in cash in full upon confirmation, n37 giving the postpetition lender greater leverage and control over the case.

The value of the debtor's assets is often unclear on the petition date, and parties may therefore assume that the lender is attempting to improve upon its undersecured position. While the debtor could seek a provision requiring a roll-back of any debt that is ultimately found to be undersecured, the debtor often has limited bargaining power on the eve of bankruptcy. The creditors' committee may want to argue for this type of protection before entry of the final financing order. If the potential benefits to the lender from the roll-over are relatively modest, however, the parties will have to weigh the costs of the roll-over against the costs of providing adequate protection if an alternative lender is utilized.

Concession of Validity of Prepetition Liens. Another point of contention in postpetition lending agreements are clauses waiving the debtor in possession's--and sometimes other parties'--ability to challenge the enforceability of the lender's prepetition loan agreements. Blanket waivers have been the subject of several blistering opinions, which generally describe these waivers as violations of the debtor in possession's fiduciary duty to creditors. n38 More modest waivers, binding on nondebtor parties only after the passage of a reasonable amount of time, are routinely approved.

Often, the form of the more modest waiver will authorize the creditors' committee to investigate and pursue an action against the lender if warranted. Where it does so, the provision is adequate to authorize the action without the need for a separate formal request from the committee to the debtor in possession to bring the action, denial of the request, and separate court authorization for the committee to bring the action. n39

Procedure for Obtaining Credit under Section 364(c)

Whether or not borrowing under section 364(c) is an ordinary course transaction, both the loan and its terms must be approved by the court, after notice and a hearing. The term after notice and a hearing requires such notice as is appropriate and requires a hearing only if requested by a party in interest. n40 In practice there is almost always a hearing held on a request for authorization under section 364(c).

Bankruptcy Bankruptcy Rule 4001(c) provides that a motion for authority to incur debt or obtain credit under section 364(c) must be made in accordance with Rule 9014 as a contested matter. Notice must be given to any committee appointed under section 1102 or elected under section 705 or, if no committee is appointed under section 1102 or in a chapter 9 case, to the creditors included on the list filed pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1007(d) and to such other parties as the court may direct. In addition, Bankruptcy Rule 9034(f) requires that the motion be served on the United States trustee in chapter 11 cases. The motion must be accompanied by a copy of the agreement. n41

Rule 4001(c)(2) provides for an emergency hearing, when necessary, and a final hearing at least 15 days after service of the motion. At the emergency hearing, the obtaining of credit may be authorized only to the extent necessary to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the estate.

Application of Nonbankruptcy Law Filing or Recording Requirements to Liens Authorized under Section 364

A lender extending credit to a trustee or debtor in possession will usually require adequate documentation of the transaction. The parties to the transaction may generally document it as they see fit, subject to court approval where otherwise required. Indeed, adequate documentation is generally necessary to detail the terms of the transaction and the parties' rights and remedies. With respect to remedies, however, the court ultimately has power and jurisdiction over property of the estate and may limit enforcement of remedies provided for under the agreement.

A difficult question for the parties to the transaction, and particularly for the lender, is to determine the extent to which normal, i.e., nonbankruptcy, documentation practices should be followed. If, for example, the lien authorized under section 364(c) is one which, absent bankruptcy, must be perfected by filing or recording to be valid against or gain priority over liens or interests, such action should not be necessary as long as the bankruptcy case is extant. Instead, the authorized acts of the trustee should be binding upon any successor in interest, n42 and the bankruptcy court, as a court holding custody of the res, should have paramount authority to determine the rights of the claimants thereto. n43

Nevertheless, the lender would be well advised to insist on appropriate documentation, including recording or filing, even if not strictly required in bankruptcy transactions. n44 After all, subsequent events may adversely affect an interest that was not properly taken or perfected under nonbankruptcy law. For example, the case might be dismissed. n45 Unless the court for cause orders otherwise, under section 349(b)(3) dismissal revests property of the estate in the entity in which the property was vested immediately before the commencement of the case. While normally the dismissal should be conditioned upon protection of the rights of parties with interests which have vested by reason of prior court determinations and orders, this may be scant protection after the case has been dismissed, particularly if the dismissal is under section 305 and, hence, not subject to appeal. Thus, the better practice is for the lender to document its loan fully and to comply with applicable nonbankruptcy recording statutes.

For a complete discussion of Code section 364, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 364 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 364.03 (Matthew Bender); Bray v. Ingersoll-Rand Fin. Credit Corp. (In re Snowshoe Co., Inc.), 789 F.2d 1085, 1088 (4th Cir. 1986) (no duty to seek credit from every possible lender).

n2

2. In re Sobiech, 125 B.R. 110, 115 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 131 B.R. 917 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (The subdivisions of Code § 364(c) are in the alternative; the authorization of credit under one does not imply authorization under another absent application for such additional relief.).

n3

3. Under section 102(5), or is not exclusive.

n4

4. Cf. In re AMT Inv. Corp., 53 B.R. 274 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985) (section 364(c) is not available as a means of providing adequate protection to a cash collateral creditor, for to grant such relief would place the cash collateral creditor in a higher priority than what is accorded to such creditor under section 363); In re 360 Inns, Ltd., 76 B.R. 573 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1987).

n5

5. See, e.g., In re Crouse Group, Inc., 71 B.R. 544 (Bankr. E.D. Pa.), aff'd, 75 B.R. 553 (E.D. Pa. 1987).

n6

6. 8 Collier on Bankruptcy, 6.40 (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1978); see also Warren v. Palmer, 310 U.S. 132, 60 S. Ct. 865, 84 L. Ed. 1118 (1940).

n7

7. In re Sobiech, 125 B.R. 110 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 131 B.R. 917 (S.D.N.Y. 1991). The extent of the priority or lien is limited to the credit extension approved by the court. William B. Schnach Retirement Trust v. Unified Capital Corp. (In re Bono Dev., Inc.), 8 F.3d 720, 29 C.B.C.2d 1634 (10th Cir. 1993).

n8

8. See Debbie Reynolds Hotel & Casino, Inc. v. Calstar Corp. (In re Debbie Reynolds Hotel & Casino, Inc.), 255 F.3d 1061 (9th Cir. 2001).

n9

9. See, e.g., KS Invs. v. T.M. Sweeney & Sons LTL Servs., Inc. (In re T.M. Sweeney & Sons LTL Servs., Inc.), 25 C.B.C.2d 962, 968, 131 B.R. 984, 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n10

10. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 363 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. See, e.g., KS Invs. v. T.M. Sweeney & Sons LTL Servs., Inc. (In re T.M. Sweeney & Sons LTL Servs., Inc.), 25 C.B.C.2d 962, 968, 131 B.R. 984, 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 364.05 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. Cf. In re Penn Central Transp. Co., 494 F.2d 270 (3d Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 883, 95 S. Ct. 147, 42 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1974).

n15

15. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 506 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. See In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp., 739 F.2d 73, 10 C.B.C.2d 1309 (2d Cir. 1984) (surcharge not appropriate for payment of attorneys fees); United States v. Boatmen's First Nat'l Bank of Kansas City, 5 F.3d 1157 (8th Cir. 1993) (surcharge is appropriate for taxes incurred in course of business). But see Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Union Planters Bank, N.A., 530 U.S. 1, 120 S. Ct. 1942, 147 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2000) (Bankruptcy Code does not provide an administrative claimant direct standing to seek payment of its claim from property encumbered by a secured creditors lien).

n17

17. See In re Keystone Camera Prods. Corp., 126 B.R. 177 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1991) (cross-collateralization is valid exercise if, at time of entry of cross collateralization order, lender advances to the debtor a new loan which would otherwise be unobtainable); In re Beker Indus., Corp., 58 B.R. 725 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986); In re Vanguard Diversified, Inc., 31 B.R. 364, 366 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1983) (yet describing cross collateralization as a disfavored means of financing).

n18

18. Burchinal v. Central Wash. Bank (In re Adams Apple, Inc.), 829 F.2d 1484, 17 C.B.C.2d 1132 (9th Cir. 1987); In re Ellingsen MacLean Oil Co., 65 B.R. 358 (W.D. Mich. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Unsecured Creditors' Comm. v. First Nat'l Bank and Trust Co. of Escanaba (In re Ellingsen MacLean Oil Co.), 834 F.2d 599, 17 C.B.C.2d 1402 (6th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 817, 109 S. Ct. 55, 102 L. Ed. 2d 33 (1988).

n19

19. 963 F.2d 1490, 27 C.B.C.2d 277 (11th Cir. 1992).

n20

20. 963 F.2d 1490, 1493, 27 C.B.C.2d 277, 280-81. The court rejected the approach adopted by the courts in Burchinal v. Central Wash. Bank (In re Adams Apple, Inc.), 829 F.2d 1484, 17 C.B.C.2d 1132 (9th Cir. 1987), and Unsecured Creditors' Comm. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. of Escanaba (In re Ellingsen MacLean Oil Co.), 834 F.2d 599, 17 C.B.C.2d 1402 (6th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 817, 109 S. Ct. 55, 102 L. Ed. 2d 33 (1988), that concluded the appeals were moot because cross-collateralization was authorized under section 364 for the purpose of section 364(e) mootness.

n21

21. To shield postpetition financing arrangements from appeal, observed the court, would afford lenders additional leverage in making emergency loans, thus facilitating insulation of their prepetition claims from attack postpetition. 963 F.2d 1490, 27 C.B.C.2d 277.

n22

22. Both subsections state that, after notice and hearing, the court may authorize the obtaining of credit or the incurring of debt, not the securing of prepetition unsecured or undersecured debt. 963 F.2d 1490, 1495, 27 C.B.C.2d 277, 283.

n23

23. 963 F.2d 1490, 1496, 27 C.B.C.2d 277, 285.

n24

24. In re Kmart, Corp., 359 F.3d 866, 51 C.B.C.2d 1076 (7th Cir. 2004).

n25

25. In re Kmart Corp., 359 F.3d 866, 51 C.B.C.2d 1076 (7th Cir. 2004).

n26

26. Resolution Trust Co. v. Official Unsecured Creditors' Comm. (In re Defender Drug Stores, Inc.), 145 B.R. 312 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1992) (postpetition financing arrangement provided that upon event of default under postpetition financing order, debtor would be given 30 days to find alternative financing for, or a buyer of, the business; if the debtor sold its assets, the lender would be entitled to an enhancement fee of 10% of the gross consideration for the assets).

n27

27. See In re Western Pacific Airlines, Inc., 223 B.R. 567 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997), appeal dismissed, 216 B.R. 437 (D. Colo. 1998), appeal dismissed, 181 F.3d 1191 (10th Cir. 1999).

n28

28. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of New World Pasta Co. v. New World Pasta Co., 322 B.R. 560 (M.D. Pa. 2005).

n29

29. Clyde Bergemann, Inc. v. Babcock & Wilcox Co. (In re Babcock & Wilcox Co.), 250 F.3d 955, 46 C.B.C.2d 381 (5th Cir. 2001).

n30

30. In re Channel Master Holdings, Inc., 309 B.R. 855 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004) (court maintains control over distribution of carve-out amounts, despite express terms to the contrary in loan agreement); Harvis Trien & Beck, P.C. v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (In re Blackwood Assocs., L.P.), 187 B.R. 856, 860 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1995) (advised that if attorneys really want to be paid they had best insist upon a real carve out--An agreed upon term in a cash collateral stipulation where a specific amount of the cash collateral, either in existence or to be generated, is earmarked for the payment of counsel fees and disbursements where the payment thereof is not conditioned upon a specific event or occurrence.); In re Ames Dep't Stores, Inc., 22 C.B.C.2d 1500, 115 B.R. 34 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990) (noting practice of district to insist on carve out fees in order to preserve adversary system). See generally Richard Levin, Almost All You Ever Wanted to Know About Carve-Out, 76 Am. Bankr. L.J. 445 (2002); James S. Cole, The Carve Out from Liens and Priorities to Guarantee Payment of Professional Fees in Chapter 11, 1993 Det. C. L. Rev. 1499 (1993). But see Unsecured Creditors' Comm. v. Jones Truck Lines, Inc. (In re Jones Truck Lines, Inc.), 156 B.R. 608 (W.D. Ark. 1992) (carve out for creditors' committee expenses and fees not required).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 506(c).

n32

32. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Union Planters Bank, N.A. 530 U.S. 1, 120 S. Ct. 1942, 147 L. Ed. 2d 1, 43 C.B.C.2d 861 (2000).

n33

33. Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp. v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc).

n34

34. In re FCX, Inc., 54 B.R. 833 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1985); cf. United States v. Reorganized CF&I Fabricators of Utah, Inc., 518 U.S. 213, 116 S. Ct. 2106, 135 L. Ed.2d 506, 35 C.B.C.2d 463 (1996); United States v. Noland, 517 U.S. 535, 116 S. Ct. 1524, 134 L. Ed. 2d 748, 35 C.B.C.2d 1 (1996).

n35

35. See, e.g., Delaware L. Bankr. R. 4001-2(a)(i)(E) (requiring these provisions to be highlighted in any motion seeking approval of postpetition financing).

n36

36. See 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b).

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(9)(A).

n38

38. See, e.g., In re Tenney Village Co., 104 B.R. 562, 568 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1989); In re Roblin Indus., Inc., 52 B.R. 241 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1985).

n39

39. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Clark (In re Nat'l Forge Co.), 51 C.B.C.2d 919, 304 B.R. 214 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2004).

n40

40. As discussed in Collier on Bankruptcy, 364.03[1] (Matthew Bender), an actual hearing will be necessary only if one has been requested after the giving of notice. However, the lender will often insist that a hearing will be held to, among other things, standards of the sufficiency of the notice as determined by the court. Section 102(1) requires simply that the notice and opportunity for a hearing be appropriate in the particular circumstances.

N41

41. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4001(c)(1).

n42

42. See Tully Constr. Co. v. Cannonsburg Envtl. Assocs., Ltd. (In re Cannonsburg Envtl. Assocs., Ltd.), 72 F.3d 1260, 1267 (6th Cir. 1996) (trustee stands in the debtor's shoes and has all the rights, duties, and powers of the debtor in possession); In re Hartec Enters., Inc. 117 B.R. 865 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1990), vacated on other grounds, 130 B.R. 329 (W.D. Tex. 1991) (a trustee appointed in chapter 11 or upon a conversion to chapter 7 will be bound as a successor in interest with respect to all terms of the contract assumed by the debtor in possession); see also Nicholas v. United States, 384 U.S. 678, 86 S. Ct. 1674, 16 L. Ed. 2d 853 (1966). But see Otte v. Manufacturers Commercial Corp. (In re Texlon), 596 F.2d 1092, 20 C.B.C. 621 (2d Cir. 1979).

n43

43. Cf. Small v. Beverly Bank, 936 F.2d 945 (7th Cir. 1991) (equitable liens are disfavored in bankruptcy); Monfort, Inc. v. Kunkel (In re Morken), 182 B.R. 1007 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1995).

n44

44. See U.C.C. §§ 9-203, 9-303, 9-401 et seq.

n45

45. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 305, 349, 707, 927, 1112 and 1307. Production Credit Ass'n of the Midlands v. Farm & Town Indus., Inc., 518 N.W.2d 339 (Iowa 1994), illustrates the problems that may arise when no steps are taken to protect postpetition financing from the effects of dismissal. There, the lender provided the debtor, a family farmer, with funds to plant the 1992 crop. The bankruptcy court authorized a credit that primed a first lien on the debtor's 1992 crops. The case was subsequently dismissed. After the dismissal, the prepetition lender (whose lien had been primed) took action to foreclose on its collateral, and sought a determination that its lien was superior to all others, including that of the postpetition lender. The state court held, among other things, that upon dismissal of [debtor's] case, subsection 349(b)(3) effectively reinstated [prepetition lender's] prior security interest in the 1992 crop. Because the bankruptcy court failed to order otherwise, we also hold that the priority status of [postpetition lender's] lien under bankruptcy law was not preserved. This conclusion, however, does not resolve the question of the validity of [postpetition lender's] security interest under state law." 518 N.W.2d 339, 343-44.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

147 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Ordinary-Course Use, Sale or Lease of Property

2008 Emerging Issues 1292

Collier on Ordinary-Course Use, Sale or Lease of Property

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers topics under section 363 such as the ordinary course of business requirement; the limitation on the trustee's right to use, sell, or lease property; the definition of "cash collateral"; and the use of cash collateral.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 363(c) authorizes the trustee, debtor in possession or chapter 13 debtor engaged in business n1 to use, sell or lease property of the estate in the ordinary course of business n2 without the need for notice or a hearing, if the continued operation of the business was authorized n3 and the court does not order otherwise. This provision is of particular importance in chapter 11 reorganization cases and in chapter 12 or 13 cases involving businesses, wherein the continued operation is essential to the preservation of the going concern value of the business. It can also be of importance in a chapter 7 case in which the trustee needs to complete performance under particular contracts or to take other ordinary business actions that will be necessary to maximize the value of the assets to be liquidated.

The absence of a notice and hearing requirement applies to entities with an interest in the property, such as a lien, as well as to general unsecured creditors. Under this provision, therefore, the trustee or debtor in possession may continue to use, sell, or lease property in the ordinary course of business even if the property is subject to a security interest or other encumbrance. n4 Of course, the trustee must provide adequate protection if requested by an entity with an interest in the property.

Ordinary Course of Business

In order for the trustee or debtor in possession to use, sell or lease property of the estate without the need for prior notice and a hearing, the proposed use, sale, or lease must be in the ordinary course of business. If the action is not in the ordinary course of business, it may be avoidable under section 549, which permits avoidance of postpetition transfers of property that were not authorized under section 363 or by the court. n5 Thus, in any case in which the parties are unsure about whether their transaction is in the ordinary course of business, it is advisable to comply with the notice and hearing requirement of section 363(b) rather than to rely on the ordinary course of business authorization under section 363(c).

Courts have developed two commonly used tests for determining whether a transaction is in the ordinary course of business: (1) horizontal dimension test; and (2) vertical dimension (also known as the reasonable expectations) test. n6

Horizontal Dimension Test. The horizontal dimension test looks to similarly situated businesses and determines whether the transaction at issue is one that would normally be entered into by similar businesses. n7 In effect, this test is aimed at determining whether the transaction is abnormal or unusual, in which case it is probably not in the ordinary course of business, or whether it is a reasonably common type of transaction. n8 Significantly, a transaction may be considered reasonably common even if it does not occur frequently, provided that it is an ordinary type of transaction within the business and the industry. n9

Vertical Dimension Test. The vertical dimension test reviews the transaction from the perspective of creditors, asking whether the transaction is one that creditors would reasonably expect the debtor or trustee to enter into. n10 This test measures the types of risks that creditors impliedly agreed to when they extended credit to the debtor and determines whether the transaction at issue is within the range of risks reasonably expected by creditors. n11 Under this test, even a transaction that might be ordinary for similar businesses might not be ordinary for the debtor's business. n12 For example, it might be unusual for a relatively small business to undertake a particularly large transaction, even if other larger businesses in the same industry might do so as a matter of course. On the other hand, transactions of a type that the debtor commonly engaged in, or which the debtor might have reasonably been expected to engage in prepetition, are likely to be within the ordinary course of business after the commencement of a case, whether or not common in the debtor's industry.

Limitation on Trustee's Right to Use, Sell or Lease Property

There are at least four other significant limitations on the trustee's rights to use, sell or lease property in the ordinary course of business. First, while the business of the debtor is presumed to operate postpetition in chapter 11, n13 chapter 12 n14 and chapter 13, n15 the court may tailor the trustee's rights and powers to the needs of the case. In chapter 7 cases, where operation is the exception, the order authorizing continued operation of the business may limit the right of the trustee to sell, use or lease property. n16 Secondly, in chapter 11 cases, the trustee is subject to certain rights of secured parties with interests in aircraft or rolling stock. n17 Third, the trustee may not use, sell, or lease in any manner inconsistent with any relief from the automatic stay that the court has granted to a party with an interest in the property. n18 Fourth, the court may impose restrictions on use, sale, or lease as necessary to provide adequate protection of a party's interest in property of the estate. n19 The final and most important exception is when the property is cash collateral. Recognizing that cash and cash equivalents are easily dissipated, the Code places strict limitations on a trustee's ability to use such property.

Cash Collateral; Definition; § 363(a)

Section 363(a) defines cash collateral as cash, negotiable instruments, documents of title, securities, deposit accounts, or other cash equivalents whenever acquired in which the estate and an entity other than the estate have an interest. The term security is defined in section 101 to include a variety of investment claims or interests, including stocks, bonds, notes, and interests in limited partnerships. Because securities are included in the definition of cash collateral, a trustee is subject to the rules with respect to cash collateral when seeking to use or sell these investment vehicles. n20 Under this provision, cash and cash equivalents subject to a security interest or to other interests are cash collateral. Cash collateral also includes proceeds, products, offspring, rents, or profits of property in which the entity has a security interest. n21 Cash collateral does not include non-cash assets that can be converted to cash, no matter how easily. n22 In addition, resolving a split among courts as to the proper treatment, n23 the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n24 amended section 363(a) to include fees, charges, accounts or other payments for the use or occupancy of rooms and other public facilities in hotels, motels, or other lodging properties.

After-Acquired Property. If collateral that is not cash collateral is converted to cash or cash equivalents during the case, and if the resulting cash or cash equivalents become collateral under applicable nonbankruptcy law and section 552, the collateral becomes cash collateral subject to the provisions of section 363(c).ⁿ²⁵ Although section 552(a) abrogates after-acquired property clauses in security agreements, after-acquired property is subject to a prepetition security interest if the agreement covers such property and the property is proceeds, products, offspring, rents or profits of property subject to the prepetition agreement or hotel revenues generated by such property, unless the court orders otherwise. Thus, for example, the trustee may sell inventory or collect accounts in the ordinary course of business without court approval, since these are not cash collateral, but the cash proceeds will be cash collateral, even if acquired by the trustee after the commencement of the case, because the cash is proceeds of the inventory or receivables, unless the court orders otherwise under section 552(b).ⁿ²⁶ Property that the debtor acquires postpetition that is not proceeds, product, offspring, rents or profit of property of the estate is not cash collateral even when deposited with the creditor.ⁿ²⁷

The language of section 363(a) is intentionally broad to deal with situations in which an entity has an interest, other than a security interest, in the cash or cash equivalents.ⁿ²⁸ To illustrate, a bank with a right of setoff is treated as the holder of a secured claim under section 506(a)ⁿ²⁹ notwithstanding that it does not have a security interest.ⁿ³⁰ Under section 363(a), the deposit account that is subject to the setoff right is considered cash collateral.

Hotel Revenues: After-Acquired Revenues. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994ⁿ³¹ amended section 363(a) to include fees, charges, accounts or other payments for the use or occupancy of rooms and other public facilities in hotels, motels, or other lodging properties in the definition of cash collateral. A parallel amendment was made to section 552(b) to recognize interests in after acquired hotel revenues.ⁿ³²

Before the 1994 amendments, a majority of bankruptcy courts had held the view that hotel revenues were accounts, rather than rents or profits; thus, a creditor's interest therein did not carry forward to revenues generated postpetition.ⁿ³³ The trend among the appellate courts, however, was to classify hotel revenues as rents or profits.ⁿ³⁴ Authority was further split on the issue whether state or federal law governed classification of hotel revenues as rents, proceeds, profits or the like. The majority followed *Butner v. United States*ⁿ³⁵ for the proposition that state law defines a party's interest in property.ⁿ³⁶ In In re Tollman-Hundley Dalton, L.P.,ⁿ³⁷ however, the court held that federal law defined the nature of the property interest. The court concluded that section 552(b) was intended to cover, as a matter of federal law, a wide range of derivative interests; therefore, hotel revenues, however characterized under state law, fell within the broad definition of rents. The 1994 amendments to sections 363(a) and 552(b) clarified that after-acquired hotel revenues could be subjected to a prepetition security interest and are cash collateral for purposes of section 363.

Significantly, however, the 1994 amendments did not resolve the question whether these revenues are rents or accounts. This issue is of some importance in terms of the proper perfection device.ⁿ³⁸ If the revenues are rents, an interest in them must be perfected under real estate law. If they are accounts, the interest must be perfected under the Uniform Commercial Code. Because this issue is unresolved, a careful lender will perfect an interest in hotel revenues under both systems, filing in the real estate records and in the U.C.C. records.

Perfection of Interest in Hotel Revenues. Section 552(b) was also amended to delete the requirement that the right to rents and hotel revenues depends on applicable nonbankruptcy law.ⁿ³⁹ This requirement led to considerable litigationⁿ⁴⁰ about whether applicable nonbankruptcy law might require seizure of the property, or appointment of a receiver, in order to perfect an interest in the revenue from the property. The revision was intended to clarify that lenders may have a valid interest in rents and hotel revenues notwithstanding their failure to have fully perfected under state law.ⁿ⁴¹ Nevertheless, because the interest remains subject to the trustee's avoidance powers, including the trustee's status as a judicial lien creditor and a bona fide purchaser of real property, the interest will need to be properly recorded in order to be effective against the trustee.

Perfection of Interest in Rents. A creditor taking a mortgage on real estate will often also take an interest in the rents generated by the real estate. Although pursuant to section 552(a) security interests generally do not extend to property acquired after the commencement of a bankruptcy case, section 552(b) provides that an interest in rents may continue.

Before the 1994 amendments, however, the interest continued only if it was perfected under applicable nonbankruptcy law. Courts disagreed about whether this required simply recordation in the real estate records, or whether a lender might have to gain control over the rents, such as by the appointment of a receiver. n42

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 amended section 552(b) to delete the reference to applicable nonbankruptcy law, clarifying that absolute perfection is not required. n43 The intent is to provide that lenders may have a valid interest in rents notwithstanding their failure to have fully perfected as to the rents under state law. n44 Nevertheless, recordation is still required as to the mortgage, since the lender's right to the rents remains subject to the trustee's avoidance powers, which include the power to avoid interests that are ineffective against a bona fide purchaser. n45

Absolute Assignments of Rents. In some states, an assignment of rents may be considered absolute, with title to the rents passing to the assignee and the assignor retaining no interest in the rents. n46 Under such an arrangement, the estate may have no interest in the rents. This would preclude the treatment of the rents as cash collateral under section 363. n47 Where the debtor retains an interest in the rents, however, they may be cash collateral and subject to use, even if in the secured creditor's possession. n48 When the lender has received a purported absolute assignment of rents, careful review of the intent and practices of the parties and of applicable nonbankruptcy law will be appropriate to determine whether the assignment is truly absolute or is absolute only in form. n49

Use of Cash Collateral; § 363(c)(2)

Section 363(c)(2) provides that the trustee or debtor in possession may not use, sell or lease cash collateral without either (1) the consent of the creditor with an interest in the collateral or (2) court authorization, granted after notice and a hearing. n50 In the absence of the creditor's consent, n51 the trustee may use cash collateral only with the approval of the court which will normally require adequate protection for the holder of the adverse interest. n52

The requirements of notice and a hearing, and of court authorization, before cash collateral may be used, sold or leased may at first blush appear to be particularly onerous to a debtor in possession faced with a genuine emergency. However, often a secured party will consent to limited use of the cash collateral in order to preserve the value of its interest in other collateral. Payment of expenses of preserving non-cash collateral, payroll expenses to keep the business operating and other immediate cash needs may be as important to a secured party early in a case as it is to the debtor in possession.

Sometimes a secured party will seek, in conjunction with an agreement to authorize the debtor in possession to use cash collateral, an agreement cross-collateralizing its prepetition debt with postpetition collateral. In addition, the secured party may seek administrative priority for its entire claim as the price of agreeing to the debtor in possession's use of cash collateral. In general, such use of cross-collateralization or administrative priority is questionable at best. n53 Although the secured party is entitled to protection of its interest in the cash collateral, it is not entitled to improve its position with respect to any unsecured claim that it holds. Such an improvement would be at the expense of other unsecured creditors and would violate the underlying bankruptcy notion of equality of treatment among similarly situated creditors.

Even in the absence of the secured party's consent, the court has ample power to act quickly on a request to use cash collateral. The term notice and a hearing means appropriate notice and perhaps no hearing at all, unless there is an objection. n54 When a hearing is required it may in some cases be prompt and somewhat informal. For example, in the case of a genuine emergency, such as an impending payroll, the notice may be telephonic and the hearing, if necessary, may be quite informal.

Section 363(c)(3) provides that the hearing shall be scheduled in accordance with the needs of the debtor and that the court shall act promptly on any request for authorization to use cash collateral. n55 This supports the notion that the court can quickly grant authority to use cash collateral for pressing needs.

Procedure for Hearing on Use of Cash Collateral. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 4001(b) governs the procedure to be followed in seeking authorization to use cash collateral. Rule Rule 4001(b) provides that a motion for authority to use cash collateral is made as a contested matter under Rule 9014. Notice of the motion and of the time and place of the preliminary and final hearing must be given to all entities that have an interest in the cash collateral, to any committee appointed under the Code or, if no committee has been appointed, to the holders of the 20 largest unsecured claims, Bankruptcy Rule 1007(d) excluding insiders, who will be included in the list filed by the debtor under), and to such other entities as the court may direct. The Advisory Committee Note to Rule 4001(b) offers guidance as to what should be set forth in the notice, which includes the name and address of the parties with an interest in the cash collateral, a proposed budget and the nature of the adequate protection which is to be offered. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n56 amended Bankruptcy Rule 7004 to require that service of process on a bank in an adversary proceeding or a contested matter be by certified mail addressed to an officer of the bank except in limited circumstances. This should not preclude telephonic notice in emergencies, but will apply to situations in which a contested matter is initiated by service by mail under Rule 7004. n57

While section 363(c)(3) and Rule 4001 recognize that a hearing for authority to use cash collateral may be a preliminary or a final hearing, when a hearing is held on short notice in an emergency situation, the hurried nature of the hearing suggests the wisdom of having a later final hearing for which the participants will have had more preparation time. In this regard, Rule 4001(b) provides that a final hearing may be held on no less than 15 days' notice. Prior to the final hearing, if the trustee needs authority to use cash collateral, authority may be granted at a preliminary hearing. However, the rule provides that the court may authorize the use of only that cash collateral as may be necessary to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the estate. At the final hearing, cash collateral usage that has been authorized or consented to may be further adjusted or conditioned. Although generally an order authorizing use of property is automatically stayed for 10 days, an order authorizing use of cash collateral is excepted from the rule. n58

Segregation of Cash Collateral. Section 363(c)(4) provides that a trustee is required to segregate and account for any cash collateral in the trustee's possession, custody or control. In the absence of authorization to use cash collateral, the trustee is responsible for maintaining the collateral for the protection of the creditor with an interest in the collateral. Segregation of cash collateral is also important to secured creditors in view of the requirement of nonbankruptcy law that a creditor be able to identify cash proceeds in order to maintain an interest in the proceeds. n59

This requirement will, in most circumstances, apply to cash collateral on hand at the time of filing and cash generated during the case through the accumulation of after-acquired cash, such as rents or hotel revenues or from the use, sale or lease of non-cash collateral and payments for inventory or receivables. n60 When the trustee has previously been authorized to use cash collateral, a common component of the adequate protection afforded the affected entity is an appropriate accounting.

Purpose of Cash Collateral Rules. The protection offered by the cash collateral provisions does not implement any nonbankruptcy law limitations inherent to cash collateral, n61 but rather is intended to recognize the unique nature of cash collateral, and the risk to the entity with an interest in such collateral, arising from the dissipation or consumption of the collateral in a rehabilitative effort in bankruptcy. n62 The protection applies whether or not there has been a default that would limit the trustee's use of such collateral.

Chapter 13 Cases. Section 1303 grants a chapter 13 debtor the right of a trustee, pursuant to section 363(b), to use, sell or lease property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. This requires notice and a hearing prior to such use, sale or lease and, pursuant to section 363(e), provision of adequate protection of an interest held by another entity, upon request by that entity. In addition, section 1304 grants a business debtor the power of a trustee, pursuant to section 363(c), to use, sell or lease, in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate. This latter authorization is subject to the limitations on the use of cash collateral found in section 363(c)(2).

A question that has arisen is whether a chapter 13 debtor who is not engaged in business may be authorized to use cash collateral out of the ordinary course of business. In general, courts have found that although the cash collateral rules are found in section 363(c), which is referred to only in conjunction with the use of property by chapter 13 business debtors, a nonbusiness debtor may use cash collateral, with the consent of the secured party or with court approval after furnishing adequate protection. n63 This approach recognizes that section 363(b) authorizes the use of any property of the estate, including cash collateral, after notice and a hearing. Thus, for example, a debtor whose automobile is destroyed and who receives an insurance recovery may obtain authorization to acquire a different vehicle with the insurance proceeds, even though the proceeds are cash collateral. The security interest would, of course, attach to the newly acquired vehicle.

Although it appears that the chapter 13 debtor should be entitled to use the cash collateral after notice and a hearing, and section 102 provides that the term after notice and a hearing does not mandate a hearing if none is requested, the better approach is for a court to review any such transaction even in the absence of an objection, and to approve or disapprove the use of cash collateral out of the ordinary course of business, based on whether the secured party is adequately protected. The cash collateral rules developed because cash is so easily dissipated. This danger is no less apparent when property is used out of the ordinary course of business than it is when property is used in the ordinary course. Thus, court approval should be obtained before the debtor uses cash collateral even if the use is not in the ordinary course of business.

For a complete discussion of Code section 363, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 363 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1107 (chapter 11), 1304 (chapter 13); see also 11 U.S.C. §§ 1203, 1204 (chapter 12).

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 344 (1977) [hereinafter House Report]; S. Rep. No. 989, 95th

Cong., 2d Sess. 55 (1978) [hereinafter Senate Report]; see Burlington Northern R.R. Co. v. Dant & Russell, Inc. (In re Dant & Russell, Inc.), 853 F.2d 700, 20 C.B.C.2d 369 (9th Cir. 1988) (discussion of what constitutes the ordinary course of business).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 721, which concerns the authorization to operate the business in a chapter 7 case, provides: The court may authorize the trustee to operate the business of the debtor for a limited period, if such operation is in the best interest of the estate and consistent with the orderly liquidation of the estate. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 721 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 1108, which pertains to the authorization to operate the business in a chapter 11 case, states: Unless the court, on request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, orders otherwise, the trustee may operate the debtor's business. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1108 (Matthew Bender). Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a), a debtor in possession in a chapter 11 case has the rights, powers and duties of a trustee. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1107 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See 11 U.S.C. § 363(f)(1) (sale may be free and clear of such other interest if applicable nonbankruptcy law permits sale of such property free and clear of such interest); Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.06[2] (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. Rajala v. Langer (In re Lodge Am., Inc.), 239 B.R. 580 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1999) (repayment of unauthorized loan wasn't in the ordinary course, even though loan proceeds were used to pay ordinary course expenses).

n6

6. See, e.g., In re Roth Am., Inc., 975 F.2d 949 (3d Cir. 1992); In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988).

n7

7. See In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988).

n8

8. See id.; see also Johnston v. First Street Cos., Inc., 56 B.R. 31 (D. Minn. 1985).

n9

9. In re Roth Am., Inc., 975 F.2d 949 (3d Cir. 1992); In re Johns-Manville Corp., 60 B.R. 612, 618 (S.D.N.Y. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 801 F.2d 60 (2d Cir. 1986).

n10

10. See In re Watford, 159 B.R. 597 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

n11

11. See In re Dant & Russell, Inc., 853 F.2d 700 (9th Cir. 1988); In re James A. Phillips, Inc., 29 B.R. 391 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).

n12

12. Johnston v. First Street Cos., Inc., 56 B.R. 31 (D. Minn. 1985).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1108; see also Amdura Nat'l Distrib. Co. v. Amdura Corp. (In re Amdura Corp.), 75 F.3d 1447 (10th Cir. 1996).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1203, 1204.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1304.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 721 (authorization to operate business for limited period when it is in the best interests of the estate and consistent with an orderly liquidation of the estate).

n17

17. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1110, 1168; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1110.01 et seq. and 1168.01 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 363(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.04 (Matthew Bender).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 363(e); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 363.05 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. See, e.g., In re Weisberg, 193 B.R. 916 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996).

n21

21. It has also been held that cash collateral includes fees charged for self storage units, Wattson Pacific Ventures v. Valley Fed. Savs. Loan (In re Safeguard Self-Storage Trust), 2 F.3d 967, 29 C.B.C.2d 997 (9th Cir. 1993), cash dividends paid on stock pledged as collateral, FDIC v. Hastie (In re Hastie), 2 F.3d 1042 (10th Cir. 1993), and funds received from the collection of accounts, In re Bumper Sales, Inc., 907 F.2d 1430, 23 C.B.C.2d 498 (4th Cir. 1990).

n22

22. Agency Servs., Inc. v. Keck Mahin & Cate (In re Keck Mahin & Cate), 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5056 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 1999) (unearned insurance premium).

n23

23. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994); see also Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Tollman-Hundley Dalton, L.P., 74 F.3d 1120, 1124 (11th Cir. 1996) (under pre-1994 law, federal, not state, law controlled scope of rents, profits, product, offspring and proceeds, and under federal law hotel revenues constitute rents within meaning of section 552(b) because section 552(b) was intended to cover a wide range of derivative property; in support of this view, court looked to the 1994 amendments).

n24

24. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214 (1994).

n25

25. S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 55 (1978).

n26

26. Unsecured Creditors Committee v. Marepcon Fin. Corp. (In re Bumper Sales, Inc.), 907 F.2d 1430, 23 C.B.C.2d 498 (4th Cir. 1990); In re Kerner Printing Co., 178 B.R. 363 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995).

n27

27. Agricultural Fed. Credit Union v. Harris (In re Harris), 260 B.R. 753 (Bankr. D. Md. 2001) (credit union share account deposit).

n28

28. See, e.g., National Bank of Ga. v. Air Atlanta, Inc. (In re Air Atlantic, Inc.), 74 B.R. 426 (Bankr. N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 81 B.R. 724 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.02 (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. See In re Quality Interiors, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1823, 127 B.R. 391 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1991).

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214(a) (1994).

n32

32. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214(b) (1994).

n33

33. See, e.g., In re Punta Gorda Assocs., 137 B.R. 535 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1992); In re Shore Haven Motor Inn, Inc., 124 B.R. 617 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1991); In re GGVXX Ltd., 130 B.R. 322 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991); In re Investment Hotel Props., Ltd., 109 B.R. 990 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

n34

34. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994); Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994) (federal law determines meaning of proceeds, products, profits, rents, offspring or product, and hotel room revenues and receipts constitute profits; state law determines perfection in such interests); S.F. Drake Assocs. v. Security Pacific Nat'l Bank (In re S.F. Drake Hotel Assocs.), 147 B.R. 538 (N.D. Cal. 1992); see also In re Churchill Props. VIII Ltd. P'ship, 164 B.R. 607 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994) (postpetition hotel revenues constitute rents); In re Miami Center Assocs. Ltd., 144 B.R. 937 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1992) (postpetition hotel revenues constitute profits). But see In re HRC Joint Venture, 175 B.R. 948 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994), in which the court held that payments received from a hotel operator under a management agreement which entitled the operator to receive the hotel revenues and obligated the operator to make payments to the owner were not room revenues, but were merely remittances under the agreement between the debtor in possession hotel owner and the hotel operator. As such, the mortgagee's interest could not attach to the remittances to which the debtor in possession became entitled after commencement of the chapter 11 case because the remittances were after acquired property under section 552(a) and the mortgagee's interest was not protected by section 552(b).

n35

35. 440 U.S. 48, 99 S. Ct. 914, 59 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1979).

n36

36. See, e.g., Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. v. Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship (In re Days California Riverside Ltd. P'ship), 27 F.3d 374, 31 C.B.C.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1994) (under California law hotel revenues constitute rents within the scope of section 552(b)); T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship v. Financial Sec. Assurance, Inc. (In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship), 10 F.3d 1099, 30 C.B.C.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1083, 114 S. Ct. 1833, 128 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1994) (same outcome under Louisiana law).

n37

37. 74 F.3d 1120 (11th Cir. 1996); see also Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994) (federal law determines meaning of proceeds, products, profits, rents, offspring or product and hotel room revenues and receipts constitute profits; state law determines perfection in such interests).

n38

38. See Great West Life & Annuity Assurance Co. v. Parke Imperial Canton, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 217, 177 B.R. 843 (N.D. Ohio 1994).

n39

39. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 214 (1994).

n40

40. See, e.g., In re Bellevue Place Assocs., 173 B.R. 1009 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

n41

41. Section-by-Section Description of H.R. 5116, 140 Cong. Rec. H10,764 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994).

n42

42. Compare In re Wheaton Oaks Office Partners Ltd. P'ship, 27 F.3d 1234, 31 C.B.C.2d 840 (7th Cir. 1994) (Illinois law requires recordation of mortgage to perfect assignment of rents), Vienna Park Props. v. United Postal Sav. Ass'n (In re Vienna Park Props.), 976 F.2d 106 (2d Cir. 1992) (under Virginia law creditor need not have taken any steps to enforce security interest), and In re Baltic Assocs., L.P., 170 B.R. 568 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (under Delaware law interest in rents is perfected upon recordation of executed security agreements), with Casbeer v. State Fed. Savs. & Loan of Lubbock (In re Casbeer), 793 F.2d 1436 (5th Cir. 1986) (under Texas law, assignment is not effective until mortgagee obtains possession of the property, impounds rents, secures appoint of receiver or takes similar action), and In re Turtle Creek, Ltd., 194 B.R. 267 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1996) (mortgagee must take additional steps such as foreclosure, sequestration of rents [appointment of a receiver to collect rent], or some similar action in order to perfect a lien in rents generated by a mortgagor's property in Alabama.), and In re Concord Mill Ltd. P'ship, 136 B.R. 896 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1992) (notice to tenants plus entry or attempted entry if thwarted by debtor).

n43

43. See Lyons v. Federal Savs. Bank (In re Lyons), 193 B.R. 637, 649 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996).

n44

44. 140 Cong. Rec. H10,764 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994) (section-by-section analysis of H.R. 5116).

n45

45. See, e.g., Scottsdale Medical Pavilion v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. in Rehabilitation (In re Scottsdale Medical Pavilion), 159 B.R. 295 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993), aff'd, 52 F.3d 244 (9th Cir. 1995).

n46

46. See Commercial Bank v. Mountain View Village, Inc., 5 F.3d 34, 29 C.B.C.2d 1241 (3d Cir. 1993) (Pennsylvania); First Fidelity Bank, N.A. v. Jason Realty, L.P. (In re Jason Realty, L.P.), 59 F.3d 423 (3d Cir. 1995) (New Jersey); Wolters Village, Ltd. v. Village Props., Ltd. (In re Village Props., Ltd.), 723 F.2d 441 (5th Cir. 1984) (absolute assignment of rents transfer title to rents; Texas courts reluctant to construe assignments as absolute).

n47

47. See In re Villamont-Oxford Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 230 B.R. 445 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998).

n48

48. In re Dupell, 235 B.R. 783 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1999).

n49

49. See, e.g., Condor One, Inc. v. Turtle Creek, Ltd. (In re Turtle Creek, Ltd.), 194 B.R. 267 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1996) (close reading of assignment required); In re Dacey, 80 B.R. 206 (D. Nev. 1987).

n50

50. In re Cross Baking Co., Inc., 818 F.2d 1027, 17 C.B.C.2d 236 (1st Cir. 1987).

n51

51. Freightliner Mkt. Dev. Corp. v. Silver Wheel Freightlines, Inc., 823 F.2d 362, 368-69 (9th Cir. 1987) (implied consent is not sufficient).

n52

52. In re Goode, 235 B.R. 584 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1999) (debtor's need for funds could not substitute for adequate protection).

n53

53. See, e.g., In re Willingham Investments, Inc., 203 B.R. 75 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1996); see also In re Saybrook Mfg. Co., Inc., 963 F.2d 1490, 27 C.B.C.2d 277 (11th Cir. 1992) (refusing to permit cross-collateralization of prepetition debt with unencumbered estate property in the context of debtor in possession financing).

n54

54. 11 U.S.C. § 102.

n55

55. Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, 964 F.2d 797 (8th Cir. 1992) (authority given ex parte to use cash collateral when necessary for debtor to maintain operations); Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. v. Center Wholesale, Inc. (In re Center Wholesale, Inc.), 759 F.2d 1440, 1449 & n.21, 12 C.B.C.2d 1107, 1118 & n.21 (9th Cir. 1985); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Plaza Family P'ship (In re Plaza Family P'ship), 95 B.R. 166 (E.D. Cal. 1989) (cash collateral hearing on seven days notice not an abuse of discretion).

n56

56. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 114 (1994).

n57

57. Notice by certified mail is also not required when the institution has appeared by its attorney, in which case the attorney may be served by first class mail.

n58

58. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 6004(g).

n59

59. See U.C.C. § 9-306(2) (1995) (provides, in part, that a security interest continues in any identifiable proceeds including collections received by the debtor. (emphasis supplied)); see also In re Patio & Porch Sys., Inc., 194 B.R. 569 (Bankr. D. Md. 1996).

n60

60. Scottsdale Medical Pavilion v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. in Rehabilitation (In re Scottsdale Medical Pavilion), 159 B.R. 295 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993), aff'd, 52 F.3d 244 (9th Cir. 1995) (rents collected prepetition are cash collateral and subject to the use limitations of section 363).

n61

61. See Reconstruction Fin. Corp. v. Kaplan, 185 F.2d 791 (1st Cir. 1950). Section 552(a) limits the effect of after-acquired property clauses in bankruptcy, but section 552(b) validates, unless inequitable, the secured creditor's right to proceeds to the extent provided by contract and applicable law. In re J. Catton Farms, Inc., 779 F.2d 1242 (7th Cir. 1985); Section 9-315(d)(3) of the Uniform Commercial Code limits the security interest of a secured creditor in second generation proceeds acquired with cash proceeds to proceeds of a type as to which the security interest attaches and the secured creditor has already perfected its security interest or perfects within 20 days after it attaches.

n62

62. Freightliner Mkt. Dev. Corp. v. Silver Wheel Freightlines, Inc., 823 F.2d 362, 368 (9th Cir. 1987).

n63

63. See, e.g., In re Carey, 202 B.R. 796 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1996); Woods v. John Fox Oldsmobile (In re Woods), 97 B.R. 850 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1989).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

148 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Postpetition Disclosure Requirements (Ch. 11)

2008 Emerging Issues 1294

Collier on Postpetition Disclosure Requirements (Ch. 11)

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses topics covered by section 1125, including the requirement that the written disclosure statement be transmitted to holders of claims and interests, the requirement that the disclosure statement contain adequate information, solicitation after commencement of the case, special provisions on disclosure statements applicable in small business cases, and types of information to be addressed in the disclosure.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1125 Requirements

Section 1125 of the Bankruptcy Code deals with the requirements for the disclosure of information to those whose votes on a plan are being solicited.

Written Disclosure Statement Required to Be Transmitted to Holders of Claims and Interests. Section 1125 requires that, other than in small business cases under section 1125(f), a written disclosure statement approved by the court after notice and hearing be transmitted to holders of claims and interests together with the plan or a summary of the plan. Postpetition solicitation of acceptances or rejections of a plan may be made only at the time of, or after transmission of, the disclosure statement.

Disclosure Statement Must Contain Adequate Information." Section 1125(a)(1) requires that the disclosure statement contain adequate information in sufficient detail as far as reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's financial records. It must be such information as would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor (typical of the holders of claims and interest of the relevant class) to make an informed judgment about the plan. Adequate information includes a discussion of the potential material federal tax consequences of the plan to the debtor, any successor to the debtor and the hypothetical reasonable investor. n1 However, adequate information need not include information about any other possible or proposed plan. n2 Section 1125(a)(2) defines the hypothetical investor referred to in subsection (a)(1) as an investor having a claim or interest of the relevant class; such a relationship with the debtor as the holders of other claims or interests of such class generally have; and such ability to obtain such information from sources other than the disclosure required by section 1125 as holders of claims or interests in such class generally.

Ultimately the bankruptcy court will determine whether the requirement of adequate information has been met, and the court in making the determination is required to conduct a cost-benefit analysis, weighing the benefit of additional information against the cost of providing such information. The statute does not indicate what constitutes additional information, but it may be assumed that the additional information referred to in section 1125(a)(1) would include the federal tax information specified in amended section 1125(a)(1). n3

Solicitation after Commencement of Case. Section 1125(b) forbids solicitation of an acceptance or rejection of a plan after the commencement of a case unless the entity whose vote is being solicited has an opportunity to review the plan, or a summary of the plan, and a disclosure statement approved by the court after notice and a hearing.

Section 1125(g), added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act"), n4 provides that, [n]otwithstanding subsection (b), an acceptance or rejection of a plan may be solicited without an approved disclosure statement if the solicitation complies with applicable nonbankruptcy law and the holder of the claim or interest was solicited before the case in a manner complying with applicable nonbankruptcy law.

Different Disclosure Statement May Be Transmitted to Different Classes. Section 1125(c) recognizes that information necessary for an informed judgment may differ among classes and therefore permits different disclosure statements for different classes, provided that the same statement be transmitted to each member of a particular class.

Disclosure Statement Information Need Not Follow Otherwise Applicable Federal or State Law. Section 1125(d) provides that the information contained in a disclosure statement need not follow otherwise applicable federal or state law. It also provides that an agency, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, may be heard on the issue of adequacy of information. The agency, however, may not appeal from or otherwise seek review of an order approving a disclosure statement.

Person Soliciting Acceptance or Rejection of Plan Provided with Safe Harbor" from Liability. Section 1125(e) provides any person who solicits acceptance or rejection of a plan on the basis of an approved disclosure statement with a safe harbor from liability for violation of state or federal securities laws or regulations.

Special Provisions on Disclosure Statements Applicable in Small Business Cases. Section 1125(f)(1), as amended in 2005, n5 provides that if the case is a small business case, as that term is defined in section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, n6 the court may determine that the plan itself provides adequate information and that a separate disclosure statement is not necessary. In addition, section 1125(f)(2), also added in 2005, provides that the court may approve a disclosure statement submitted on standard forms approved by the court or adopted under section 2075 of title 28, which is the Rules Enabling Act. n7

Finally, under section 1125(f)(3), the court, subject to final approval after notice and a hearing, may conditionally approve a disclosure statement as the basis for solicitation of votes on a plan. Provided that the conditionally approved disclosure statement is mailed not later than 25 days before the date of the hearing on confirmation of the plan, the court may conduct a combined hearing for final approval of the disclosure statement and confirmation of the plan.

Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Local Rules. Section 1125 must be read in conjunction with the relevant Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002, 2019, 3016 and 3017 and any applicable local rules.

Disclosure Requirements

Disclosure is the pivotal concept in reorganization practice under the Bankruptcy Code. n8 As described in the House Report:

If adequate disclosure is provided to all creditors and stock holders whose rights are to be affected, then they should be able to make an informed judgment of [sic] their own rather than having a court or the Securities and Exchange Commission inform them in advance whether the proposed plan is a good plan. Therefore, the key to the consolidated chapter is the disclosure section. n9

In a plan, the proponent is offering cash or securities to a captive group consisting of the creditors and equity holders of the debtor. To protect those who are entitled to vote to accept or reject the proposed plan, the Code requires that a plan proponent transmit to these captive investors information adequate to enable a hypothetical reasonable investor, typical of the holders of claims or interests of the relevant class, to make an informed judgment about the plan. The Code attempts to define both adequate information and a typical investor.

Adequate Information Defined. The definition of adequate information in section 1125(a)(1) requires that a disclosure statement include information in sufficient reasonable detail as far as is practicable. One court has said that the disclosure statement must clearly and succinctly inform the average unsecured creditor what it is going to get, when it is going to get it, and what contingencies there are to getting its distribution. n10 That analysis would seem to comport with the flexibility envisioned by the drafters of section 1125. As stated in the legislative history:

Precisely what constitutes adequate information in any particular instance will develop on a case-by-case basis. Courts will take a practical approach as to what is necessary under the circumstances of each case, such as the cost of preparation of the statements, the need for relative speed in solicitation and confirmation, and, of course, the need for investor protection. There will be a balancing of interests in each case. In reorganization cases, there is frequently great uncertainty. Therefore the need for flexibility is greatest. n11

The 2005 Act n12 amended section 1125(a)(1) to require that adequate information include a discussion of federal tax consequences of the plan to the debtor, any successor to the debtor and a hypothetical investor typical of the holders of claims or interests in the case. As amended, subsection (a)(1) further provides that in determining whether a disclosure statement provides adequate information, the court shall consider the complexity of the case, the benefit of additional information to creditors and other parties in interest, and the cost of providing additional information. n13

Practical Approach as to What Is Necessary under the Circumstances. The legislative history concepts of taking a practical approach, considering what is necessary under the circumstances, such as the cost of preparation and the need for speed were heeded in the early experiences under the Code which sought to retain the advantages of Chapter XI of the former Bankruptcy Act. n14 Increasingly, however, the legislative history concept of the need for investor protection has induced courts to promulgate disclosure statement standards which, if complied with, would all but doom the small and medium size businesses which might have been able to make use of former Chapter XI.

Congress may have been aware of this trend when, in amending section 1125(a)(1) in 2005 to require a discussion of the federal tax consequences of the plan, it also required that the the court weigh the benefit of supplying additional information against the cost of obtaining it. n15

Recognition of Plan Proponent's Potential Inaccessibility to Accurate Debtor Financial Data. The definition of adequate information recognizes that the proponent of a plan may not have access to accurate present or past financial data concerning the debtor, particularly in those cases where the plan may be proposed by a creditor or other party in interest. n16 Thus, section 1125(a)(1) qualifies the concept of adequate information so as to require only such information as may reasonably be furnished, particularly if the debtor's books and records are unavailable, the accuracy of the books and records are in doubt or the debtor is under the control of a trustee who is unable to produce the kind of information concerning the debtor's business which ordinarily might be expected from a debtor's management. n17

Types of Information to Be Addressed in Disclosure Statement. A number of courts have provided lists of the type of information which they believe should be addressed by a disclosure statement. One court indicated that the following information should be included:

- . the circumstances that gave rise to the filing of the chapter 11 petition;
- . a complete description of the available assets and their value;
- . the anticipated future of the debtor;
- . the source of the information provided in the disclosure statement;
- . a disclaimer, which typically indicates that no statements or information concerning the debtor or its assets or securities are authorized, other than those set forth in the disclosure statement;
- . the condition and performance of the debtor while in chapter 11;
- . information regarding claims against the estate;
- . a liquidation analysis setting forth the estimated return that creditors would receive under chapter 7;
- . the accounting and valuation methods used to produce the financial information in the disclosure statement;
- . information regarding the future management of the debtor, including the amount of compensation to be paid to any insiders, directors, and/or officers of the debtor;
- . a summary of the plan of reorganization;
- . an estimate of all administrative expenses, including attorney's fees and accountant's fees;
- . the collectibility of any accounts receivable;
- . any financial information, valuations or pro forma projections that would be relevant to creditors' determinations of whether to accept or reject the plan;
- . information relevant to the risks being taken by the creditors and interest holders;
- . information relevant to the risks being taken by the creditors and interest holders;

- . the actual or projected value that can be obtained from avoidable transfers;
- . the existence, likelihood and possible success of nonbankruptcy litigation;
- . the tax consequences of the plan; n18 and
- . the relationship of the debtor with affiliates. n19

It should be emphasized that these standards appear in reported cases that involve medium to large reorganizations, often where securities are to be issued. Seldom reported are the small and medium-size business cases where the creditor body is made up of a landlord, a financial institution with a blanket lien and several vendors. The plans in such cases usually consist of either a composition or an extension or a combination of both and would not require the kind of detailed and expensive disclosure contemplated by these lists. Even the judges who promulgate these detailed standards may not strictly impose them on small and medium businesses.

It has been stated that, at a minimum, the disclosure statement should contain:

- . a description of the business;
- . its history;
- . financial information;
- . a description of the plan;
- . facts respecting its execution;
- . a liquidation analysis;
- . identification of management and its compensation;
- . transactions with insiders; and
- . tax consequences of the plan. n20

The presence of internal inconsistencies within the disclosure statement should not be an automatic bar to its approval since the inconsistencies serve to illustrate to the voter the problems inherent in the proposed plan. n21

One court has said that it would approve supplemental solicitation materials provided by proponents and opponents to a plan to be transmitted with the disclosure statement if the materials focus on the strengths or weaknesses of the plan (or elements of the plan), rather than the plan's proponents or supporters not be ad hominem, and not purport to describe the thinking, motives, strategies or states of mind, of their opponents. While [the supplemental materials] should not talk about the purpose of an opponent's plan position, they can properly talk about its effect. n22

A chapter 11 plan proponent has a duty to disclose potential adversary proceedings against creditors before they vote on the plan. n23 While some courts have said that it is not necessary for the disclosure statement to reveal the debtor's plans respecting recovery of preferences, n24 a statement that there are no preference actions impliedly means the debtor may not, postconfirmation, commence such an action for its own benefit. n25 Courts have emphasized that disclosure statements must contain factual support for any opinions contained therein since opinions alone do not provide the parties voting on the plan with sufficient information upon which to formulate decisions. n26

Section 1125(a)(1) was amended by the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984 n27 to address the issue of the sufficiency of a disclosure statement which does not discuss other plans filed in a case when the exclusivity period had expired or been terminated. The amendment supports those cases which hold that a disclosure statement does not have to disclose the existence of other plans or the terms of such plans. n28

Consideration of Investor Typical of Holders of Claims or Interest of the Relevant Class. The definition of adequate information contained in section 1125(a)(1) must be considered in conjunction with the phrase investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class, defined in section 1125(a)(2). That definition acknowledges that the quality of information available to members of a given class will vary as will the sophistication of members of various classes. n29

For example, a trade creditor may have a general unsecured claim for $1,000 and be a member of a class which includes a commercial bank holding a claim of $1 million. The bank presumably will be more sophisticated in financial matters than the trade creditor and, depending on the circumstances of the case, may have access to detailed current and historical financial information concerning the debtor's business which is not, and has not been, available to the trade. Trade creditors, on the other hand, may have information with respect to the debtor's business and the sophistication necessary to interpret such information which is not enjoyed by the debtor's debenture holders or shareholders.

Therefore, with respect to each class, the court should consider the needs of the claims or interests of the class as a whole and not the needs of its most sophisticated or least sophisticated members. n30 The court must also consider whether the typical member of a class is able to obtain sufficient information to make a reasonable judgment from sources other than the disclosure statement. n31

Adequacy of Disclosure Is Not Governed by Otherwise Applicable Nonbankruptcy Law. Section Section 1125(d) specifically provides that the adequacy of disclosure is not to be governed by any otherwise applicable nonbankruptcy law, rule or regulation. n32 As stated in the House Report:

The bill also permits the disclosure statement to be approved without the necessity for compliance with the very strict rules of Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933, section 14 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or relevant State securities laws. Without such a provision, the court would have no discretion in approving disclosure statements that go to public classes, but would be required in every case to require a full proxy statement or prospectus whenever public classes were solicited [sic]. Such a statement requires certified audited financial statements and extensive information. The cost of developing a prospectus or proxy statement for a large company often runs well over $1 million. That cost would be nearly prohibitive in a bankruptcy reorganization. In addition, the information normally required under section 14 may simply be unavailable, because of the condition of the debtor. Finally, court supervision of the contents of the disclosure statement will protect the public investor from any serious inadequacies in the disclosure statement.

The provision does not prohibit a section 14-type statement or a prospectus. In some cases it may indeed be appropriate to go to that length in disclosure. The courts will have to determine the need on a case-by-case basis. The section merely does not require it in every public case. n33

Obviously, in the case of a company that has outstanding public securities, the Securities and Exchange Commission will be an important participant in a chapter 11 case. n34

For a complete discussion of Code section 1125, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1125 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub L. No. 109-8, § 717 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, added language requiring a discussion of the federal tax consequences to the debtor and other parties.

n2

2. The Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984), added to the definition of adequate information set forth in section 1125(a)(1), but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan.

n3

3. See note 1.

n4

4. Pub L. No. 109-8, § 408 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5

5. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 431(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Section 1125(f) was added to the Bankruptcy Code by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

n6

6. 101 U.S.C. § 101(51C), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 432(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n7

7. The language of section 1125(f)(2), by referring to section 2075 of title 28, appears to require that the Supreme Court promulgate the disclosure statement form. However, Rule 9009 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court under the Rules Enabling Act, delegates the promulgation of Official Forms to the Judicial Conference of the United States. This raises the question whether section 1125(f)(2) would be satisfied if the disclosure statement form is adopted by the Judicial Conference, but not the Supreme Court. This question appears to have been answered, however, by section 433 of the 2005 Act, which directs that within a reasonable time after the Act's effective date the Judicial Conference of the United States shall prescribe official standard form disclosure statements and plans of reorganization for small business debtors, balancing the needs of the court with economy and simplicity for debtors. Therefore, the better view is that that a disclosure statement form approved by the Judicial Conference will satisfy the requirement under section 1125(f)(2) that the form be adopted under section 2075 of title 28.

8. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 226-31 (1977). The congressional intent to require full disclosure for reorganization purposes is made abundantly clear in chapter 11. In re Cyr Bros. Meat Packing, Inc., 1 C.B.C.2d 426, 2 B.R. 620 (Bankr. D. Me. 1980).

n9

9. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess., 226 (1977).

n10

10. In re Ferretti, 128 B.R. 16 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1991). The court in In re Texas Extrusion Corp., 844 F.2d 1142, 1156-57 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 926, 109 S. Ct. 311, 30 L. Ed.2d 330 (1988), held that what is adequate is decided on a case by case basis and is left largely to the discretion of the bankruptcy court. Mabey v. Southwestern Elec. Power Co. (In re Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc.), 150 F.3d 503, 518 (5th Cir. 1998); see also In re River Village Assocs., 181 B.R. 795, 804 (E.D. Pa. 1995); In re Applegate Property, Ltd., 133 B.R. 827 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1991).

n11

11. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 409 (1977).

n12

12. Pub L. No. 109-8, § 717 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13

13. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 431(1) (2005). The term additional information, to which the court must apply a cost-benefit test is not defined in the Code, and it is unclear whether it includes the tax information required by amended section 1125(a)(1).

n14

14. Chapter XI was originally designed for use by the nonpublic, small business. It contains a quick procedure for an arrangement of a business unsecured debts. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. at 222 (1977); cf. In re Bel Air Assocs., 2 C.B.C.2d 103, 4 B.R. 168 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1980), where the court suggested that a plan could function as a disclosure statement.

n15

15. Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 717, 431(1) (2005).

n16

16. In re Michelson, 141 B.R. 715 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1992).

n17

17. See In re Werth, 8 C.B.C.2d 480, 29 B.R. 220 (D. Colo. 1983); In re Stanley Hotel, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 64, 13 B.R. 926 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

n18

18. As noted above, see Adequate Information Defined supra, amended section 1125(a)(1) provides that adequate information includes discussion of the potential material Federal tax consequences of the plan.

n19

19. In re Scioto Valley Mortgage Co., 88 B.R. 168 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1988); see also In re A.C. Williams Co., 25 B.R. 173 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982). The list of 19 factors also appears in In re U.S. Brass Corp., 194 B.R. 420, 424 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1996) (also holding that the proponent of a disclosure statement need not speculate about the value of litigation which involves complex legal and factual issues.). When a disclosure statement did not give a secured creditor adequate notice that its security interest would be altered by the chapter 11 plan, its claims were not affected by the plan. American Bank & Trust Co. v. Jarrdine Ins. Servs. Tex., Inc. (In re Barton Indus., Inc.), 104 F.3d 1241, 1246 (10th Cir. 1997) (distinguishing Turney v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 18

F.3d 865 (10th Cir. 1994) in which disclosure statement notice was held to be adequate).

n20

20. In re Malek, 10 C.B.C.2d 189, 35 B.R. 443 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1983).

n21

21. See In re A.C. Williams Co., 25 B.R. 173 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982); In re Stanley Hotel, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 64, 13 B.R. 926 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981); In re Hughes Marina, Inc., 16 B.R. 6 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1980).

n22

22. In re Adelphia Communications Corp., 352 B.R. 592, 602 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006) (emphasis in original).

n23

23. In re Coastal Group Inc., 13 F.3d 81 (3d Cir. 1994).

n24

24. In re Jennings, Inc., 12 C.B.C.2d 130, 46 B.R. 167 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1985). But see In re H.R.P. Auto Ctr., Inc., 130 B.R. 247 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1991), holding that the failure to disclose potential litigation in the disclosure statement precludes its subsequent prosecution.

n25

25. In re Galerie Des Monnaies of Geneva Ltd., 13 C.B.C.2d 1176, 55 B.R. 253 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985); see Payless Wholesale Distribs., Inc. v. Alberto Culver (P.R.), Inc., 989 F.2d 570 (1st Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 931, 114 S. Ct. 344, 126 L. Ed. 2d 309 (1993) (a debtor who represented that it had no claims other than those listed in the petition was estopped from asserting claims not disclosed on the schedules or in the disclosure statement); see also Krystal Cadillac-Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 337 F.3d 314, 321 (3d Cir. 2003) (disclosing claims as, Tort, contract, and violation of automatic stay claims against General Motors Acceptance Corporation was boilerplate language not adequate to provide the level of notice required); Oneida Motor Freight, Inc. v. United Jersey Bank, 848 F.2d 414, 416-18 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 967, 109 S. Ct. 495, 102 L. Ed. 2d 532 (1988); In re Kelley, 199 B.R. 698, 703 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996) (adequate information should also include potential counterclaims against a secured lender which would extinguish that lender's entire claim; the court held that a blanket reservation is insufficient to prevent the application of res judicata to a specific action); In re Metrocraft Publishing Servs., Inc., 10 C.B.C.2d 1182, 39 B.R. 567 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1984) (statement should indicate value of recoverable preferences, tax attributes, relationship with affiliates). But see In re Envirodyne Indus., 183 B.R. 812, 822 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1995), in which a creditor sued postpetition could not be said to have relied upon the disclosure statement because it was unimpaired and was to be paid in full under the plan.

n26

26. See In re Fierman, 21 B.R. 314 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1982); In re East Redley Corp., 16 B.R. 429 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1982); In re Civitella, 15 B.R. 206 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981).

n27

27. Pub. L. No. 98-353, § 509(a) (1984).

n28

28. See, e.g., In re Brandon Mill Farms, Ltd., 10 C.B.C.2d 283, 37 B.R. 190 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1984); In re Civitella, 14 B.R. 151 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981), reh'g denied, 15 B.R. 206 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981); In re Stanley Hotel, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 64, 68, 13 B.R. 926 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

n29

29. In re Bloomingdale Partners, 28 C.B.C.2d 1600, 155 B.R. 961 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993).

n30

30. Cf. In re Tenn-Fla Partners, 170 B.R. 946 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1994) (information is material and should be in the disclosure statement if a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of its class would want to know it to make an informed decision). As the court said in In re Barton Industries, Inc., 104 F.3d 1241, 1245 (10th Cir. 1997), In order to satisfy due process [the creditors] had to receive notice that specified the treatment of their class of claim and allowed them to make an informed judgment about [the] Chapter 11 plan.

n31

31. In re Bloomingdale Partners, 28 C.B.C.2d 1600, 155 B.R. 961 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993) (information held by insiders or an undersecured creditor in its own class from sources other than the disclosure statement, did not have to appear in the disclosure statement); see also In re Northwest Recreational Activities, Inc., 8 B.R. 10 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980); In re Bel Air Assocs., 2 C.B.C.2d 103, 4 B.R. 168 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1980).

n32

32. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 227-29 (1977); see Kirk v. Texaco, Inc., 18 C.B.C.2d 331, 82 B.R. 678 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

n33

33. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 227-29 (1977); see 11 U.S.C. § 1109(a).

n34

34. See H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 229 (1977).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

149 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Power to Dismiss or Convert a Ch 13 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1306

Collier on the Power to Dismiss or Convert a Ch 13 Case

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the power to dismiss or convert a chapter 13 case to chapter 7 under section 1307 of the Bankruptcy Code, including topics such as unreasonable delay by the debtor, nonpayment of filing fees or other charges, failure to make timely filing of a plan, failure to commence making timely payments, denial of confirmation of an original plan, and material default in a term of the confirmed plan.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: In cases in which dismissal or conversion is not a matter of right under the Bankruptcy Code, upon the request of the debtor, a creditor, the chapter 13 trustee n1 or the United States trustee, n2 the court may dismiss n3 or convert a chapter 13 case to chapter 7, n4 whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate. n5 The court may act under section 1307(c) of the Bankruptcy Code, which was amended in 2005, n6 only on the request of a party in interest n7 or the United States trustee n8 and after notice and a hearing, n9 for cause. n10 Although it has been held that the chapter 13 trustee is not a party in interest who may file such a motion, n11 courts generally have held otherwise. n12 Dismissal may also be obtained, on motion of a party in interest or the United States trustee, if the debtor fails to file a tax return required under section 1308, another provision added in 2005. n13

Most courts have held that a bankruptcy court cannot dismiss a case sua sponte under section 1307 or analogous sections in other chapters of the Code. n14 However, a 1986 amendment to section 105(a) of the Code gives the court the power to sua sponte take any action necessary to enforce or implement court orders or rules, or to prevent an abuse of process, and that section, as amended, presumably would give the court the power to dismiss a case sua sponte. n15 In any case, with the presence of the United States trustee, whose duty it is to monitor such matters and make appropriate motions to dismiss, this extraordinary power of the court should rarely be exercised. In such cases in which the court does consider sua sponte dismissal, the principles underlying section 1307 dictate that all parties in interest should be given notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

The court may not convert the chapter 13 case of a farmer n16 to chapter 7, except at the request of the farmer-debtor. n17 Furthermore, although not specifically mentioned in section 1307(c), the court may not convert a case originally commenced under chapter 13 to chapter 7 pursuant to section 1307(c) if the debtor has requested dismissal of the chapter 13 case under section 1307(b). n18

The procedure for dismissals that are not a matter of right is governed by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1017. The rule requires a hearing on notice in all such cases. n19 Unless the debtor has already filed a list of creditors, the debtor must provide the court with the names and addresses of all creditors so notice of the hearing may be given to them. n20

The only exceptions to this rule are a motion to dismiss for failure to pay filing fees and a motion under section 1307(c)(9) for failure to timely file required documents. n21 In such cases, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1017(b) and (c), as amended in 1991 and 1999, speaks only of notice to the debtor and the trustee, which seems to limit the more general language of Rule 1017(a). However, if the case is dismissed, notice of the dismissal must be given to all creditors pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002. n22

Notice of a dismissal hearing is important because creditors' interests may differ; some creditors may oppose a dismissal sought by other creditors, the trustee, the United States trustee or the debtor. A motion to dismiss a case, other than one filed by the debtor as a matter of right, is treated by the rules as a contested matter under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9014, n23 which incorporates many of the rules governing adversary proceedings, providing for discovery and other procedures. n24 It is incumbent upon a debtor opposing dismissal or conversion to controvert evidence submitted by the moving party, or such evidence may be deemed uncontested. n25

However, especially with respect to the debt limitations of section 109(e), n26 the courts have differed as to the extent of the hearing which should be held to consider the motion. The Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit held that the court should rely solely on the debtor's representations in the Chapter 13 Statement, as long as they are made in good faith. n27 This conclusion seems logical, since the hearing might otherwise require the resolution of numerous disputed claims at the very outset of the case and an inquiry into good faith should expose those cases in which debtors are clearly ineligible for relief. It is also in accord, as the Sixth Circuit court pointed out, with the procedure for disputes as to other monetary jurisdictional requirements in the federal courts. n28 However, other courts have demanded a more searching inquiry into the amount of claims against the debtor to determine initial eligibility under chapter 13. n29 In any event, if the court finds the debtor to be ineligible for chapter 13, the court has discretion either to dismiss or to convert the case, depending on the best interests of the creditors and the estate. n30 Once a chapter 13 plan has been confirmed, any motion to dismiss based on eligibility would be barred by res judicata. n31

Subsection Subsection 1307(c) as amended in 2005, enumerates 11 specific occurrences which constitute sufficient cause for the dismissal or conversion of a chapter 13 case to chapter 7. n32 The grounds enumerated in subsections 1307(c)(1) through (11) are not exhaustive. n33 For example, the court also has the power to dismiss the case if the debtor is not eligible to be a debtor under chapter 13 because of failure to meet the requirements of subsection 109(a), (e) or (g) of the Bankruptcy Code. n34 In addition, most courts have held that a chapter 13 case can be dismissed or converted if it is not filed in good faith. n35 Section 1307(e), added in 2005, states an additional ground for dismissal, based on failure to file required tax returns with taxing authorities. n36

Unreasonable Delay by the Debtor. The court may dismiss a chapter 13 case or convert it to chapter 7 if the debtor has been guilty of unreasonable delay prejudicial to the interests of creditors. n37 For example, in Howard v. Lexington Investments, Inc., n38 the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit affirmed the dismissal of a case in which the debtor, even having been granted extensions of time by the court, had failed to comply with a court order that he file tax returns necessary to compute taxing authorities' proofs of claim, without which a plan could not be confirmed. n39 Unreasonable delay in the filing of necessary modifications of a plan, in obtaining necessary acceptances from the holders of allowed secured claims or in taking actions required under the plan are other examples of delays warranting conversion or dismissal under this paragraph. n40

Nonpayment of Filing Fees or Other Charges. Nonpayment of the $220 filing fee prescribed by section 1930(a)(1) n41 of title 28 or of any additional charges which may be imposed pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States and section 1930(b) n42 of title 28, is sufficient reason for the dismissal or conversion of a chapter 13 case. n43

The procedure for dismissals based upon failure to pay the filing fee is set forth in Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1017(b). The case may be dismissed only after a hearing on notice to the debtor and the trustee. n44 If the case is dismissed, notice of the dismissal must be given within 30 days to all creditors on the list of creditors and to all creditors who have filed claims in the manner provided in Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2002. n45

Failure to Make Timely Filing of Plan. Chapter 13 permits only the debtor to file a plan. n46 The failure of the debtor to cause a chapter 13 plan to be timely filed may warrant the dismissal or conversion of the chapter 13 case. n47 However, when a plan is filed in time to be reviewed by creditors without delaying other steps in the case, and no creditor is prejudiced by the delay, dismissal is rarely appropriate. n48 Only when the delay in filing the plan is prejudicial, or is part of a larger pattern of unreasonable delay, should the court exercise its discretion to dismiss the case. n49

Failure to Commence Making Timely Payments. In accord with the requirement of amended section 1326 n50 that the debtor commence making payments proposed in a chapter 13 plan, as well as other payments, within 30 days of the filing of the order for relief, n51 section 1307(c)(4) n52 adds as grounds for dismissal or conversion the debtor's failure to comply with that requirement. Such a dismissal or conversion can occur upon request of the United States trustee n53 or a party in interest, who will normally be a creditor, or the chapter 13 trustee, and may occur only after notice and a hearing. n54

As under the other subsections of section 1307(c), the court's power to dismiss or convert is discretionary. n55 The court should do neither if the default in timely commencement of payments is a minor one. Similarly, if there are extenuating circumstances, or if the reason for the default can be cured by a permissible modification of the plan, to lower the payments for example, the debtor should normally be given a second chance. Likewise, if the debtor has failed to make payments to a secured creditor or personal property lessor required by section 1326(a), the more appropriate relief, if any, would be to grant that entity relief from the automatic stay. Since the dismissal would be without prejudice in such cases, n56 a debtor intent on proceeding in chapter 13 could simply file a new case and achieve the same result as would be obtained if the court excused the default. To impose upon the debtor the added expense that would be involved in a second petition, i.e., the additional filing and attorney's fees, would serve no legitimate purpose. The filing of a second petition could also prejudice creditors with claims incurred after the first petition, which would be dischargeable in a second case, a result hardly intended by Congress.

Serious and repeated defaults, of course, may very well warrant dismissal or conversion, particularly if it appears that the plan is unworkable or the case has been filed with no bona fide intention of proceeding. n57 In such cases, it is also appropriate to examine the debtor's payment of his or her attorney, n58 since an attorney who knowingly submits a plan that has no chance of succeeding should not be compensated for those actions. For this reason, some courts routinely order a hearing on attorney's fees after a plan is dismissed under such circumstances.

Denial of Confirmation and of Additional Time. A chapter 13 plan may be denied confirmation by reason of failure to comply with the standards set by section 1325 n59 or a confirmed plan may no longer be feasible, thereby necessitating the submission of a new plan or of modifications to a plan. n60 The debtor should normally be given at least one opportunity to submit a modified plan in such circumstances. n61 The denial of confirmation of an original or modified plan, coupled with a final refusal by the court to grant further time for filing another plan or modifications, will result in dismissal or conversion of the chapter 13 case. n62

Material Default under Confirmed Plan. Upon the request of a party in interest or the United States trustee n63 and after notice and a hearing, n64 the court may dismiss the chapter 13 case or convert it to chapter 7 if the debtor is guilty of a material default in a term of the confirmed plan. n65 It is the burden of the moving party to present evidence of the amount of the default so that the court may evaluate it under this provision. n66 The court must determine what constitutes a material default, but the mutuality of interests in most chapter 13 cases between the holders of unsecured claims and the debtor seems likely to prompt a common effort to facilitate the curing of defaults, rather than insistence by creditors on dismissal or conversion of the case to chapter 7. When the default is caused by unexpected circumstances beyond the debtor's control that have been remedied, the court may find that it is not a material default. n67 And even if there is a material default, dismissal or conversion is not automatic, but rather a matter of the court's discretion. n68 Generally, dismissal or conversion is appropriate only when efforts to cure a default are unsuccessful and when the plan cannot be modified to make it feasible for the debtor to complete it.

Revocation of Order of Confirmation for Fraud and Denial of Confirmation of a Modified Plan. If the order of confirmation has been revoked by the court on grounds of fraud n69 and a modified plan proposed pursuant to section 1330(b) is denied confirmation, the court may dismiss or convert the chapter 13 case to chapter 7. n70 Section 1307(c)(7) is to be read together with section 1330(b).

Section 1330(b) permits the court to allow time within which the debtor may propose a modified plan after the order confirming an earlier plan has been revoked for fraud. n71 Normally, the debtor should be given at least one opportunity to propose an acceptable modified plan. If the court refuses to grant time for the filing of a modified plan or the debtor fails to file or obtain confirmation of a modified plan within the time fixed by the court under section 1330(b), the court is required either to dismiss or to convert the case to chapter 7 in accordance with section 1307(c)(7). n72

Termination of Confirmed Plan Due to Condition Specified in Plan. A confirmed chapter 13 plan may include a provision that the plan be terminated or terminable upon the occurrence of one or more conditions specified by the plan other than completion of payments under the plan. n73 The plan may call for the termination of the plan in the event the debtor fails to comply with any one or more of the terms of the confirmed plan, such as its payment terms, provisions restricting postpetition property transfers, restrictions on obtaining postpetition credit or requirements concerning compliance with credit obligations incurred after confirmation of the plan.

Section 1307(c)(8) confers discretionary power upon the court, acting on the request of a party in interest or the United States trustee, n74 after notice and a hearing, to dismiss or convert the chapter 13 case. n75 Therefore, the violation of a termination provision in the confirmed chapter 13 plan may not result in the automatic dismissal or conversion of the chapter 13 case to chapter 7. The inclusion of any such automatic dismissal or conversion provision in a chapter 13 plan would contravene section 1307(c) and the plan would not be eligible for confirmation by reason of section 1325(a)(1). n76

Debtor's Failure to File Section 521 Information. The Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 n77 added to section 1307(c) two additional paragraphs that may result in either the dismissal or conversion of the chapter 13 case to chapter 7 when the debtor has failed to comply with section 521(1) or (2).

Section 1307(c)(9) provides that, only upon the request of the United States trustee, the court may dismiss or convert a chapter 13 case to chapter 7 upon the debtor's failure to file, within 15 days or such additional time as the court may allow, the information required by section 521(1). n78 As with the failure to file a plan in a timely manner, the court should exercise its discretion to dismiss or convert a case under this section only when there has been a substantial delay in filing the necessary papers and the delay is prejudicial to creditors. n79

Section 1307(c)(10) states that, only upon the request of the United States trustee, the court may dismiss or convert a chapter 13 case to chapter 7 if the debtor fails to comply with section 521(2). n80 However, since a chapter 13 debtor is not required to file a statement of intention under section 521(2), which by its terms applies only to chapter 7 debtors, n81 this subsection should never be applied, except perhaps in the case of a debtor who has converted a case from chapter 7 to chapter 13. n82 It is an inadvertent legislative enactment and should be deleted.

Other Cause, Including Lack of Good Faith. Section 1307 (c) states that the court may dismiss or convert a case for cause, including the 10 types of cause enumerated in the section. Because the word including is not exhaustive, n83 the court may dismiss for causes other than those enumerated. Most courts have held that lack of good faith can be cause for dismissal or conversion of a chapter 13 case. n84

It seems clear that a debtor who simply seeks to benefit from the provisions of the statute should rarely, if ever, be found to be lacking in good faith for that reason. Thus, the mere fact that a debtor has filed a previous case, n85 or seeks to discharge debt not dischargeable in chapter 7, n86 does not mean that a case is filed in bad faith. Similarly, a delay in filing until the debtor needs the automatic stay is not bad faith. n87

Courts have employed standards of good faith similar to those used in determining whether a chapter 13 plan has been proposed in good faith.⁸⁸ In re Leavitt,⁸⁹ the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit listed the following factors as relevant in considering the totality of the circumstances:

- . whether the debtor misrepresented facts in his [petition or] plan, unfairly manipulated the Bankruptcy Code, or otherwise [filed] his Chapter 13 [petition or] plan in an inequitable manner;

- . the debtor's history of filings and dismissals;

- . whether the debtor only intended to defeat state court litigation; n90 and

- . whether egregious behavior is present. n91

In re Love, n92 the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit listed a similar set of factors relevant in considering the totality of the circumstances, including:

- . the nature of the debt including the question of whether the debt would be nondischargeable in a chapter 7 proceeding;

- . the timing of the petition;

- . how the debt arose;

- . the debtors motive in filing the petition;

- . how the debtor's actions affected creditors;

- . the debtor's treatment of creditors both before and after the petition was filed; and

- . whether the debtor has been forthcoming with the bankruptcy court and the creditors. n93

Section 1325(a) was amended in 2005 by the addition of a new confirmation standard, based on the debtor having filed the petition in good faith. n94 This specific mention of good faith in filing the petition might be read to indicate that Congress intended it to be considered as a factor for plan confirmation rather than dismissal. It remains to be seen whether courts that have found lack of good faith to be grounds for dismissal will alter their rulings based upon this more recent enactment.

If courts do continue to hold that dismissal can be based upon lack of good faith, they may apply a different standard. Because dismissal is a harsher remedy than denial of plan confirmation, the showing of bad faith that must be made for dismissal should be greater than that necessary for denial of confirmation. n95 As with other grounds for dismissal, the moving party has the burden of proof on the issue of bad faith. n96

Failure to Pay Current Domestic Support Obligations. Section 1307(c)(11), added in 2005 as part of a package of amendments meant to promote the payment of support obligations, n97 renders the debtor's failure to pay domestic support obligations n98 that first become payable after the date of the petition grounds for dismissal or conversion of the case. It is important to note that this provision is limited to payments that first become due after the case is filed, and does not look to payment of prepetition arrearages. Those arrearages are to be dealt with in the chapter 13 plan as priority debts, pursuant to other provisions of the Code. n99 Like other parts of section 1307(c), section 1307(c)(11) leaves the decision about whether to dismiss the case in the discretion of the court. The debtor may be allowed to cure the default in support payments and the court may decide that it will be more likely that the debtor can do this if the chapter 13 case remains pending. In some cases, the court may decide that making payments that have been assigned to a governmental unit is less urgent than ensuring that the debtor's family will not, as a result of a case dismissal, lose its home to foreclosure or lose a car necessary to continued production of income. However, payment of current support is also a standard for confirmation under section 1325(a)(8), and a requirement for a discharge under section 1328(a), as those sections were amended in 2005. n100

Failure to File Required Tax Returns. Section Section 1307(e), enacted by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n101 provides that the court shall dismiss the case or convert it to chapter 7, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, if the debtor does not file a tax return under section 1308, which was enacted at the same time. n102 This dismissal provision can be invoked by a party in interest, presumably a taxing authority, or the United States trustee and the case can be dismissed only after notice and a hearing.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1307, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1307 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. The United States trustee program is not scheduled to become operational in judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina. Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3) (1986), as amended by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-518, effective November 13, 2000, which removed the October 1, 2002, deadline for Alabama and North Carolina to elect to participate in the United States trustee program. Most of the functions of the United States trustee are carried out in those districts by a bankruptcy administrator appointed by the court under Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3)(I).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c); see H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 428 (1977).

n6

6. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c). But cf. 11 U.S.C. § 1330(b); see Revocation of Order of Confirmation for Fraud and Denial of Confirmation of a Modified Plan; § 1307(c)(7) infra.

n8

8. The United States trustee program is not scheduled to become operational in judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina. Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3) (1986), as amended by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-518, effective November 13, 2000, which removed the October 1, 2002, deadline for Alabama and North Carolina to elect to participate in the United States trustee program.

n9

9. See 11 U.S.C. § 102(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.07[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. See Power to Dismiss or Convert Case to Chapter 7; § 1307(c) & (e); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017 infra.

n11

11. In re Kutner, 2 C.B.C.2d 34, 3 B.R. 422 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1980), appeal dismissed, 656 F.2d 1107, 5 C.B.C.2d 58 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1443, 71 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1982).

n12

12. In re Faaland, 37 B.R. 407 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1984); In re Kelsey, 2 C.B.C.2d 1192, 6 B.R. 114 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1980).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1307(e), 1308, enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Failure to File Required Tax Returns; § 1307(e) infra and Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1308 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. In re Terry, 630 F.2d 634, 636 n.5, 2 C.B.C.2d 1237, 1240 n.5 (8th Cir. 1980); Griswold v. Banco Central (In re Lozano), 11 C.B.C.2d 1424, 42 B.R. 971 (D.P.R. 1984); see also In re Moog, 774 F.2d 1073, 13 C.B.C.2d 910 (11th Cir. 1985) (chapter 11).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 105(a), as amended by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554, and as further amended by Pub. L. No. 101-650 (Judicial Improvements Act of 1990); see In re Minkes, 237 B.R. 476 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1999) (after enactment of amendment to section 105, that motion by party in interest was not required, notice and a hearing were still required).

n16

16. See 11 U.S.C. § 101; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.12[13] and 1300.12[9] (Matthew Bender).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(f), formerly § 1307(e), as redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.06 (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.03[1] (Matthew Bender).

n19

19. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(a) and (b), as amended by the 1991 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The rule was amended to add a reference to dismissal of chapter 12 cases, to make reference to cause for dismissal other than want of prosecution, and to clarify that all entities required to receive notice under Rule 2002 are entitled to notice of the hearing to dismiss the case. In re Krueger, 88 B.R. 238 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988) (dismissal order was void because debtor did not have notice of hearing on dismissal); see also In re Badalyan, 236 B.R. 633 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 1999) (reversing 180-day bar on refiling after dismissal because debtor had no notice of hearing at which bar was imposed).

n20

20. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(a) and (b), as amended by the 1999 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n21

21. An additional exception, not relevant in chapter 13, is a dismissal motion under section 707(b). Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017, as amended by the 2000 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1017.02 (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(f)(1), formerly 1017(d), as amended and redesignated by the 1999 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n24

24. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 9014 (Matthew Bender).

n25

25. See In re Blaise, 219 B.R. 946 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998).

n26

26. 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), these amounts are subject to adjustment every three years beginning April 1, 1998. For cases commenced on or after April 1, 2004, the limitations are $307,675 for unsecured debts and $922,975 for secured debts. For the three-year period beginning April 1, 2001, the amounts are $290,525 and $871,550, respectively. For the three-year period beginning April 1, 1998, the amounts are $269,250 and $807,750, respectively. For cases commenced before April 1, 1998, the amounts are $250,000 and $750,000, respectively. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03, 109.05 and 1300.40 (Matthew Bender).

n27

27. In re Pearson, 773 F.2d 751, 13 C.B.C.2d 749 (6th Cir. 1985). The information formerly found in the Chapter 13 Statement, an abrogated Official Form, is now found in the schedules and statement of affairs filed by the debtor.

n28

28. In re Pearson, 773 F.2d 751, 13 C.B.C.2d 749 (6th Cir. 1985).

n29

29. See, e.g., In re Sylvester, 6 C.B.C.2d 586, 19 B.R. 671 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982).

n30

30. Rudd v. Laughlin, 866 F.2d 1040 (8th Cir. 1989); In re Toronto, 165 B.R. 746 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994) (conversion preserved the ability to recover preference).

n31

31. United States v. Edmonston, 99 B.R. 995 (E.D. Cal. 1989).

n32

32. See 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(1)(11). 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(11) was added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n33

33. Note the use of the term including; see 11 U.S.C. § 102(3); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.07[1][c] (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 109(a), (e) and (g).

n35

35. Alt v. United States (In re Alt), 305 F.3d 413 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Lilley, 91 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 1996); In re Eisen, 14 F.3d 469 (9th Cir. 1994); In re Love, 957 F.2d 1350 (7th Cir. 1992); see Other Cause, Including Lack of Good Faith infra.

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(e), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Failure to File Required Tax Returns; § 1307(e) and Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1308 (Matthew Bender).

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(1).

n38

38. 284 F.3d 320 (1st Cir. 2002).

n39

39. Cf. Department of the Treasury v. Pagan, 279 B.R. 43 (D.P.R. 2002) (affirming denial of motion to dismiss for failure to file tax returns when plan had already been confirmed and taxing authority had not objected to confirmation). Failure to file such returns is now grounds for dismissal under section 1307(e), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Failure to File Required Tax Returns; § 1307(e) and Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1308 (Matthew Bender).

n40

40. See, e.g., In re Blaise, 219 B.R. 946 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998) (debtor who had converted from chapter 11 did not deny that plan was fraught with problems and he had made no efforts to market property that was to be sold under plan).

n41

41. 28 U.S.C. § 1930(a)(1), as most recently amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, which was itself amended by Pub. L. No. 109-13 (2005).

n42

42. In addition to the filing fee of 28 U.S.C. § 1930(a)(1), a debtor or couple commencing a chapter 13 case must also pay a miscellaneous administrative noticing fee of $39 imposed by the Judicial Conference of the United States under 28 U.S.C. § 1930(b). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.03[1][a][ii] (Matthew Bender).

n43

43. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(2).

n44

44. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(b), as amended by the 1999 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1017.05[3] (Matthew Bender).

n45

45. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(b), as amended by the 1999 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2002 was amended by the 2001 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure with respect to addresses to be used in notices, among other matters. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 2002 (Matthew Bender).

n46

46. 11 U.S.C. § 1321; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1321.01 (Matthew Bender).

n47

47. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(3). Dudley v. Powers (In re Dudley), 273 B.R. 197 (B.A.P. 8th Cir.), aff'd, Dudley v. Powers (In re Dudley), 49 Fed. Appx. 91, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 22420 (8th Cir. Oct. 17, 2002); Simmons v. Cosby (In re Simmons), 256 B.R. 578 (D. Md.), aff'd, Simmons v. Cosby (In re Simmons), 8 Fed. Appx. 228, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 8442 (4th Cir. May 4, 2001).

n48

48. In re McConnell, 60 B.R. 310 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1986).

n49

49. In re Martin-Trigona, 9 C.B.C.2d 958, 35 B.R. 596 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983) (unexplained failure to submit plan or any other financial information for four months after petition filed).

n50

50. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a). Section 1326(a) was amended in 2005 by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, to require the debtor to begin, within 30 days after filing the petition, not only plan payments but also, in some cases, adequate protection payments to secured creditors and payments to personal property lessors. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1326 (Matthew Bender).

n51

51. The date of the order for relief is ordinarily the date of the petition. 11 U.S.C. § 301(b), as amended by

Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. If a case is commenced and subsequently converted to chapter 13 more than 30 days after the order for relief, because section 348(a) provides that conversion does not effect a change in the date of the order for relief, it may be impossible to commence payments within 30 days after the order for relief, as appears to be required under section 1326(a)(1). See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1326 (Matthew Bender).

n52

52. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(4).

n53

53. The United States trustee program is not scheduled to become operational in judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina. Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3) (1986), as amended by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-518, effective November 13, 2000, which removed the October 1, 2002, deadline for Alabama and North Carolina to elect to participate in the United States trustee program.

n54

54. 11 U.S.C. § 102(1).

n55

55. In re McDonald, 118 F.3d 568 (7th Cir. 1997); In re Smith, 85 B.R. 729 (E.D. Va. 1988).

n56

56. 11 U.S.C. § 349(a). Code section 109(g), which forbids repetitive filings, would not apply in such a case, since there would be no willful failure to abide by orders of the court or to appear before the court in proper prosecution of the case. However, under amendments to section 362(c), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, such a debtor would not automatically receive the full protection of the section 362(a) automatic stay. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n57

57. See, e.g., In re Blaise, 219 B.R. 946 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998) (debtor who had converted from chapter 11 had made no payments for 11 months and had otherwise delayed case).

n58

58. See 11 U.S.C. § 329(b) (court may examine debtor's transactions with attorneys).

n59

59. 11 U.S.C. § 1325, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

n60

60. See 11 U.S.C. § 1329, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1329 (Matthew Bender).

n61

61. In re Minkes, 237 B.R. 476 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1999) (submission of one unconfirmable plan not sufficient cause for dismissal); see also In re Wilson, 117 B.R. 714 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990) (debtor permitted to submit supplemental budgetary information to cure problems identified by the court).

n62

62. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(5); see, e.g., Howard v. Lexington Investments, Inc., 284 F.3d 320 (1st Cir. 2002); In re Badalyan, 236 B.R. 633 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 1999).

n63

63. The United States trustee program is not scheduled to become operational in judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina. Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3) (1986), as amended by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-518, effective November 13, 2000, which removed the October 1, 2002, deadline for Alabama and North Carolina to elect to participate in the United States trustee program.

n64

64. 11 U.S.C. § 102(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.07[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n65

65. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(6).

n66

66. In re Midkiff, 85 B.R. 467 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1988).

n67

67. In re Durben, 70 B.R. 14 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1986); In re Jarvis, 7 C.B.C.2d 759, 24 B.R. 46 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1982).

n68

68. Roberts v. Boyajian (In re Roberts), 279 F.3d 91 (1st Cir. 2002) (no abuse of discretion in dismissing case when debtors failed to pay over sixty months all amounts that plan had provided that creditors would receive); In re Green, 64 B.R. 530 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1986).

n69

69. See 11 U.S.C. § 1330(a); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1330.01[2][b] (Matthew Bender).

n70

70. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(7); In re Scott, 77 B.R. 636 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1987).

n71

71. 11 U.S.C. § 1330(b).

n72

72. 11 U.S.C. § 1330(b).

n73

73. 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(10). The words other than completion of payments under the plan were added to section 1307(c)(8) by the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984). The legislative history describes this as a stylistic change. S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 86 (1983).

n74

74. The United States Trustee Program is not scheduled to become operational in judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina. Pub. L. No. 99-554, § 302(d)(3) (1986), as amended by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-518, effective November 13, 2000, which removed the October 1, 2002, deadline for Alabama and North Carolina to elect to participate in the United States Trustee Program.

n75

75. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(8).

n76

76. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n77

77. Pub. L. No. 99-554.

n78

78. 11 U.S.C. § 521(1) concerns the debtor's duty to file a list of creditors, a schedule of assets and liabilities, a schedule of current income and current expenditures and a statement of financial affairs; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 521(1) was redesignated as section 521(a)(1) and amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, but section 1307(c)(9) was not amended to reflect these changes.

n79

79. See Failure to Make Timely Filing of Plan; § 1307(c)(3) supra.

n80

80. 11 U.S.C. § 521(2) concerns the duty of an individual debtor to file a statement of the debtor's intention to retain or surrender property being used to secure consumer debt. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.10 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 521(2) was redesignated as section 521(a)(2) and amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, but section 1307(c)(10) was not amended to reflect these changes.

n81

81. See also Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(b)(2), as amended by the 1991 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (filing of a statement of intention required only in a chapter 7 case).

n82

82. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.80[2] (Matthew Bender).

n83

83. 11 U.S.C. § 102(3); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 102.04 (Matthew Bender).

n84

84. E.g., Alt v. United States (In re Alt), 305 F.3d 413 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Lilley, 91 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 1996); In re Molitor, 76 F.3d 218 (8th Cir. 1996); In re Eisen, 14 F.3d 469 (9th Cir. 1994).

n85

85. In re Barrett, 964 F.2d 588 (6th Cir. 1992); In re Smith, 848 F.2d 813 (7th Cir. 1988).

n86

86. In re Dickerson, 232 B.R. 894 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1999); In re Estalella, 101 B.R. 391 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1989).

n87

87. In re Cox, 247 B.R. 556 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000).

n88

88. In re Smith, 848 F.2d 813 (7th Cir. 1988); see 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(3); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.04 (Matthew Bender).

n89

89. 171 F.3d 1219 (9th Cir. 1999).

n90

90. However, a court must consider all the circumstances in applying this standard; merely filing a case prior to some significant event in a state court suit is not bad faith. Ho v. Dowell (In re Ho), 274 B.R. 867 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002).

n91

91. 171 F.3d 1219, 1224.

n92

92. 957 F.2d 1350, 1357 (7th Cir. 1992); see also In re Lilley, 91 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 1996) (quoting Love factors).

n93

93. See Alt v. United States (In re Alt), 305 F.3d 413 (6th Cir. 2002) (debtor failed to answer most basic questions at Rule 2004 examination and omitted from schedules tax debt that put her over chapter 13 eligibility limits).

n94

94. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(7), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

n95

95. In re Love, 957 F.2d 1350, 1356 (7th Cir. 1992).

n96

96. 957 F.2d 1350, 1355.

n97

97. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n98

98. Domestic support obligation is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n99

99. 11 U.S.C. §§ 507(a)(1); 1322(a), as both were amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 507 and ch. 1322 (Matthew Bender).

n100

100. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1325(a)(8); 1328(a), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 and ch. 1328 (Matthew Bender).

n101

101. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n102

102. 11 U.S.C. § 1308, enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1308 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

150 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Priority Status of Employee Benefit Plans

2008 Emerging Issues 1308

Collier on Priority Status of Employee Benefit Plans

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers issues pertaining to employee benefit plan contributions under section 507, including issues such as the types of employee benefit plans eligible for priority, the applicable 180-day priority period, pension plans, and workers compensation programs.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: The fifth priority of section 507 of the Bankruptcy Code consists of allowed unsecured claims for contribution to an employee benefit plan arising from services rendered within 180 days before the earlier of the date of the filing of the petition or the date of the cessation of the debtor's business. n1 The maximum dollar amount of priority claim for each employee benefit plan is equal to the number of employees covered by such plan multiplied by $10,950, n2 less the sum of (i) the aggregate amount paid to such employees under section 507(a)(4) and (ii) the aggregate amount paid by the estate on behalf of such employees to any other employee benefit plan. Section 507(a)(4) contains a priority for wages, salaries and commissions, including vacation and severance pay, up to $10,950 per individual.

Section 507(a)(5) was enacted in response to Supreme Court cases decided under the Bankruptcy Act holding that fringe benefits, unlike wages, were not entitled to priority status. n3 The legislative history indicates that Congress believed that fringe benefits were often taken by employees in lieu of higher wages and that Congress thought it appropriate to supplement the priority for wages with a priority for contributions to employee benefit plans. n4 Because the amount payable to employee benefit plans under the fifth priority is reduced dollar-for-dollar by the amount of payments to covered employees under the fourth priority for wages, the overall priority granted to employment related claims is not increased by the addition of section 507(a)(5). n5

Types of Employee Benefit Plans Eligible for Priority

The Code does not define the term employee benefit plan. The legislative history refers to pension plans, health insurance plans and life insurance plans as the type of employee benefit plan intended to be included within the scope of the priority. n6 Many courts defer to the definition used in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, commonly known as ERISA. n7 The definition is used to determine the scope of the term employee benefit plan and does not mean that only employee benefit plans governed by ERISA are eligible for priority. Other courts reject use of the ERISA definition, believing that had Congress intended the ERISA definition to apply to section 507(a)(5), it would have said so. n8 Those courts refer to the legislative history and common usage of the term.

In most instances, it will not matter whether the ERISA definition is used. The vast majority of employee benefit programs will qualify for priority regardless of the definition used.

Employee benefit plans eligible for priority generally fall into two categories. The first are self-insured plans where employees are reimbursed for expenses incurred by them that are covered by the employee benefit program. Claims for reimbursement of these expenses qualify for priority if they are customarily reimbursed by the employer whether or not there is a formal plan. n9 It is not necessary that the employer be obligated to establish the program through a collective bargaining agreement or other contractual arrangement. A voluntary or unilateral benefit program qualifies for priority to the same extent as one that the employer is legally obligated to provide. n10

The other common category of employee benefit plans is that in which the employer maintains insurance programs for the benefit of the employees. Employer contributions to such insurance programs are eligible for priority to the same extent as self-funded programs. n11

Applicable 180-Day Priority Period

A claim is entitled to priority under section 507(a)(5) only if the claim arises from services rendered within 180 days before the earlier of the filing of the petition or the cessation of the debtor's business. Cessation of the debtor's business is used as an alternative measuring date in order to protect the employee benefits priority if the debtor shuts down its business but delays the filing of a bankruptcy case. The 180-day priority period is the same as the 180-day priority period provided under the fourth priority for wages, salaries and commissions.

Cessation of the debtor's business is to be used as the measuring date only if the debtor ceases business altogether. It should not be used if the debtor merely scales back its business, closes a division or line of business or terminates the employee benefit plan or the portion of the debtor's business that established the employee benefit plan. n12 The standard for determining when to use cessation of the business as the measuring date is the same as under the fourth priority for wages, salaries and commissions. Cases under the fourth priority analyzing when cessation is considered to have occurred are relevant to the same issue under the fifth priority. n13

Scope of Claims Eligible for Fifth Priority

A claim will qualify for priority under section 507(a)(5) only if it is for contributions arising from services rendered during the 180-day period. The Code does not describe what kind of contributions qualify for priority. In self-insured programs, payments to be made directly to employees will qualify as contributions entitled to priority. In programs established through an insurance company or other third-party provider, the full range of payments owed under the debtor's contract with the third-party ought to be eligible for priority so long as they relate specifically to an eligible employee benefits plan. This would include claims for administrative costs as well as more direct reimbursements. n14

Time Within Which Services Are Rendered. The Code also provides no guidance on when services are rendered for the purposes of determining whether they are within the 180-day period. The paucity of case law on the issue suggests either that this has not been a difficult issue to resolve or that the dollar limits have been hit long before the 180-day limitation becomes an issue. It is clear, however, that the claim must be based upon services rendered during the applicable period. If the debtor fails to make a contribution for a period prior to the 180-day period, but that failure remains undiscovered until within the 180-day period, a claim based on the contribution will not be eligible for priority. n15 If a claim is based on services rendered both before and during the 180-day period, it will need to be apportioned with that part of the claim relating to services within the period being eligible for priority and the balance being a general unsecured claim. n16

Amount of Eligible Claim. The amount of an eligible claim that will be entitled to priority will be determined according to the statutory formula. The maximum claim for each plan will be $10,950ⁿ¹⁷ multiplied by the number of employees covered by such plan minus (i) the aggregate amount paid to such employees under the fourth priorityⁿ¹⁸ and (ii) the aggregate amount paid by the estate on behalf of such employees to any other employee benefit plan.ⁿ¹⁹ The effect of the last portion of the formula is that if there is more than one plan covering a group of employees, the priority will be apportioned pro rata among the various plans. In calculating the maximum amount of the priority, the calculation is to be done on the basis of the full number of employees covered by the plan, regardless of the particular amount of benefits allocatable to any individual.ⁿ²⁰

Pension Plans

Priority under section 507(a)(5) is often sought for claims seeking to recover unpaid contributions to pension plans. Such claims, whether relating to a single employer plan maintained by the debtor or a multi-employer plan, may be eligible for priority if the requirements of section 507(a)(5) are met. However, a number of issues may arise in determining whether such a claim is entitled to priority.

Defined Contribution Plans and Defined Benefit Plans. An analysis regarding the application of section 507(a)(5) to a pension plan will usually begin with a determination of whether the plan is a defined contribution or a defined benefit plan.ⁿ²¹ A defined contribution plan provides for an individual account for each employee eligible to participate in the plan. Benefits under a defined contribution plan are based solely on (1) the amount contributed to the participant's account and (2) any income, expenses, gains and losses, and forfeitures of accounts of other participants that may be allocated to the participant's account. In contrast, a defined benefit plan promises a specified benefit upon retirement, such as a percentage of compensation for each year of service, a percentage of average annual compensation or a fixed dollar amount per month. Employer contributions to a defined benefit plan must generally be actuarially determined. Some types of defined contribution plans, such as money purchase pension plans which mandate that specified levels of contributions be made with respect to each plan year, and all defined benefit plans, are subject to certain minimum funding standards under *section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code*ⁿ²² and section 302 of ERISA.ⁿ²³

Claims for contributions owed to defined contribution plans are relatively easy to categorize under section 507. Contributions on behalf of employee-participants under these plans with respect to any plan year are generally not based on services rendered for the employer in any prior year. For example, a defined contribution multi-employer plan may require a specified employer contribution for each hour worked by a covered employee. Even a defined contribution plan, however, may raise difficult issues under Code section 507. In In re Pacific Far East Line,ⁿ²⁴ the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit addressed the priority of an employer contribution that was due on the 20th day of the month, based on covered hours worked the prior month. Even though the debtor filed in chapter 11 on January 31, the Ninth Circuit ruled that the contribution due on February 20 (which was based on hours worked in January, i.e., before the filing of the bankruptcy petition) was entitled to an administrative expense priority. The court ruled the hours of pre-filing labor were not the consideration for the payments under the plan. Rather, the pre-filing hours were merely the units of measure for the post-filing payments, which were necessary for continued performance under the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ²⁵

Unlike a defined contribution plan, *section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code*ⁿ²⁶ and section 302 of ERISAⁿ²⁷ define the obligation to contribute to a defined benefit pension plan to include both (1) the normal cost of the plan for the plan year and (2) the amount necessary to amortize liabilities not directly arising from work performed during such plan year (for example, unfunded past service liabilities, experience losses or changes in actuarial assumptions).

Furthermore, payment of non-forfeitable benefits under terminated defined benefit pension plans are generally guaranteed by the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation (PBGC") under title IV of ERISA, n28 subject to certain limitations. n29 Thus, defined benefit pension plans are more heavily regulated than defined contribution plans.

Bankruptcy claims for contributions to defined benefit pension plans are often asserted by the PBGC. ERISA authorizes the PBGC to institute judicial proceedings to have it appointed as a successor trustee for the purpose of terminating pension plans that satisfy certain specified criteria indicating financial distress. n30 As a successor trustee under the plan, the PBGC has the authority to take such actions as it deems necessary to recover unpaid contributions and amounts sufficient to satisfy any accumulated funding deficiencies. n31

Claims for contributions to defined benefit pension plans thus present unique problems. Those that are based on the debtor's failure to pay the normal cost portion of debtor's minimum funding requirement for the 180-day period preceding the filing of the petition are clearly within the scope of section 507(a)(5). The normal cost component is determined with reference to the service of employees, and so fits within the statutory framework. However, minimum funding requirements, including the normal cost component, are determined on an annual basis. Therefore, unpaid contributions for the normal cost of the plan must be apportioned over the applicable 180-day period. The minimum required contribution under the Internal Revenue Code and ERISA, which is generally determined in advance based on projections of such data such as number of employees, must also be adjusted for actual experience during the 180-day period.

Non-Normal Costs. A more difficult question is posed by the other portions of the debtor's minimum funding requirement, the non-normal costs. Under a broader ERISA construction, the minimum funding obligation is a unitary concept and is entitled to a priority based on when the liability is due. In addition to the normal cost incurred postpetition and during the 180 day prepetition period, priority would also be claimed for the past service liability and other non-normal costs that are payable within those periods.

For example, in Columbia Packing Co. v. PBGC, n32 the court adopted an ERISA construction of funding priorities. The district court, relying largely on In re Pacific Far East Lines, n33 held that past service liability accrued when it became payable, even though it was calculated by reference to services performed before the priority period. n34 The court said that the fixed, amortized past service liability is more accurately viewed as a current cost of continuing the plan rather than as a form of compensation for past service. Therefore, the court granted priority to past service liability based on the portion of the plan year that fell within the subsection 507(a)(1) and (a)(5) periods.

Other courts have rejected the reasoning of Columbia Packing. In In re Sunarhausen, Inc., n35 the court held the PBGC's claim for minimum funding contributions was entitled to priority only for the normal cost component of the unpaid contribution. With regard to section 507(a)(5), the court quoted the statute in stating the priority applied to plan contributions arising from services rendered within 180 days before the date of the filing of the petition. n36 The court said this language invites, if it does not compel, an effort to match the services rendered within the 180-day period prior to the filing with the pension costs attributable to those services. n37

The priority treatment of claims for the non-normal cost component of unpaid defined benefit pension plan contributions has not been definitely resolved. The PBGC continues to press Congress for legislative clarification of plan sponsors' funding obligations in bankruptcy.

Debtor's Statutory Withdrawal Liability. Similar issues exist with respect to a debtor's statutory withdrawal liability. Under section 4201 of ERISA, n38 an employer that withdraws from a multi-employer pension plan in a complete or partial withdrawal n39 is liable to the plan for a portion of the plan's unfunded vested benefits liabilities. Generally, a debtor's withdrawal liability is not, in its entirety, an expense of administration, even where the withdrawal arises after the filing of a bankruptcy petition. In the leading case, Amalgamated Insurance Fund v. McFarlin, Inc., n40 the Second Circuit squarely rejected the administrative priority argument, reasoning that [t]he consideration supporting the withdrawal liability is the same as that supporting the pensions themselves, the past labor of the employees covered by the Plan. Because this consideration was largely provided prepetition, the court declined to allow an administrative expense priority for the withdrawal liability. n41

In In re Buf-Air Freight, Inc., n42 the court applied the reasoning of McFarlin in deciding whether withdrawal liability was entitled to any priority under Code section 507(a)(5). One issue that seemed to be left open by McFarlin was whether any part of a withdrawal liability could be allocated to services rendered either postpetition or during the 180-day prepetition period. Some courts recognized this possibility but provided no clear guidance regarding how an allocation should be made. n43 The Buf-Air court held that withdrawal liability is not of the nature contemplated by section 507 and that any claim for priority must be rejected. n44 The court reasoned that [w]ithdrawal liability represents future benefit contributions that will not be paid, and it is merely measured by the prior period. n45

Workers' Compensation Programs

For many years, there was controversy over the issue of whether workers' compensation insurance programs can be considered employee benefit plans within the scope of section 507(a)(5). This controversy was settled by the Supreme Court in Howard Delivery Service, Inc. v. Zurich American Insurance Co. n46 The Supreme Court, in a six-to-three decision, held that unpaid premiums on a policy purchased by the debtor to cover its workers' compensation liability do not fall within the scope of section 507(a)(5). The debtor in Howard Delivery Service purchased a workers' compensation insurance policy required under the laws of the states where the debtor did business. The insurance premiums were payable in installments. When the debtor filed for bankruptcy, the insurance carrier filed a claim for the unpaid premiums and alleged that the claim was entitled to section 507(a)(5) priority because the unpaid premiums constituted contributions to an employee benefit plan.

The Supreme Court held that a workers' compensation plan does not qualify as an employee benefit plan as that term is used in section 507(a)(5). The Court noted that workers' compensation plans are different than the employer-funded welfare and pension plans that are clearly within the scope of the statute. Welfare and pension plans are benefit plans because they constitute indirect compensation to employees and are part of the employees' overall remuneration from their employment. A workers' compensation program, in contrast, is designed to benefit the employer as much as the employees. The workers' compensation program shields the employer from being subject to lawsuits arising from job-related injuries. The Court held that a workers' compensation program was more akin to a liability insurance policy than an employee benefit plan. In reaching this decision, the Court declined to adopt an ERISA definition of employee benefit plans that arguably extends to workers' compensation plans. n47

For a complete discussion of Code section 507, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 507 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. This section was renumbered from 507(a)(4) to 507(a)(5) by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 212 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Decisions in cases filed before the effective date will thus refer to what was then section 507(a)(4).

n2

2. This dollar amount is effective for cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). The 2005 Act had set the amount at $10,000, effective April 20, 2005. For cases commenced between April 1, 2004, and April 19, 2005, the dollar amount was $4,925. For cases commenced during the three-year period beginning April 1, 2001, the amount was $4,650. The amount for the three-year period beginning April 1, 1998, was $4,300. For cases commenced before April 1, 1998, the amount was $4,000.

n3

3. Joint Indus. Bd. v. United States, 391 U.S. 224, 88 S. Ct. 1491, 20 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1968); United States v. Embassy Restaurant, Inc., 359 U.S. 29, 79 S. Ct. 554, 3 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1958).

n4

4. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 357 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 69 (1978).

n5

5. Crafts Precision Indus., Inc. v. U.S. Healthcare, Inc. (In re Crafts Precision Indus., Inc.), 43 C.B.C.2d 1194, 244 B.R. 178 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2000).

n6

6. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 357 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 69 (1978); Contributions to 401(k) plans have also been considered eligible employee benefits. See, e.g., In re C & S Cartage & Leasing Co., 204 B.R. 565 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1996).

n7

7. In re Plaid Pantries, Inc., 137 B.R. 405 (D. Or. 1991), aff'd on other grounds, 10 F.3d 605, 30 C.B.C.2d 159 (9th Cir. 1993) (ERISA definition of employee benefit plan applies to section 507(a)(4)); Allegheny Int'l, Inc. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (In re Allegheny Int'l, Inc.), 138 B.R. 171 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1992), aff'd, 145 B.R. 820 (W.D. Pa. 1992); Perlstein v. Rockwood Ins. Co. (In re AOV Indus., Inc.), 85 B.R. 183 (Bankr. D.C. 1988).

n8

8. State Ins. Fund v. Southern Star Foods, Inc. (In re Southern Star Foods, Inc.), 144 F.3d 712 (10th Cir. 1998); Employer Ins. of Wausau, Inc. v. Ramette (In re HLM Corp.), 62 F.3d 224 (8th Cir. 1995) (ERISA definition of employee benefit plan is not controlling for purposes of this section); Official Labor Creditors Comm. v. Jet Fla. Sys., Inc. (In re Jet Fla. Sys., Inc.), 80 B.R. 544 (S.D. Fla. 1987).

n9

9. Official Labor Creditors Comm. v. Jet Fla. Sys., Inc. (In re Jet Fla. Sys., Inc.), 80 B.R. 544 (S.D. Fla. 1987) (individuals seeking reimbursement for medical expenses entitled to priority where employer maintained self-insurance program); Allegheny Int'l, Inc. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (In re Allegheny Int'l, Inc.), 145 B.R. 820 (W.D. Pa. 1992) (contributions to both outside insured and self-insured plan eligible for priority).

n10

10. In re Saco Local Dev. Corp., 711 F.2d 441, 8 C.B.C.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1983); Official Labor Creditors Comm. v. Jet Fla. Sys., Inc. (In re Jet Fla. Sys., Inc.), 80 B.R. 544 (S.D. Fla. 1987); Official Creditors Comm. v. Blue Cross (In re Lummus Indus., Inc.), 193 B.R. 615 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1996).

n11

11. Employers Ins. of Wausau v. Plaid Pantries, Inc., 10 F.3d 605, 30 C.B.C.2d 159 (9th Cir. 1993); In re Saco Local Dev. Corp., 711 F.2d 441, 449, 8 C.B.C.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1983) (To allow the insurer to obtain the priority for premiums through the priority would seem the surest way to provide the employees with the policy benefits to which they are entitled.). But see In re AER-Aerotron, Inc., 182 B.R. 725 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1995) (insurance company not entitled to benefits priority). Accord Edward W. Minte Co. v. Franey & Parr (In re Edward W. Minte Co.), 286 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D.D.C. 2002).

n12

12. In re Danborn Mfg. Co., 56 B.R. 8 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1985) (no cessation of business where debtor continued in main line of work); In re Bodin Apparel, Inc., 46 B.R. 555 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985) (cessation of business occurs when debtor ceases its principal business activity and undertakes liquidation of its assets), aff'd, 56 B.R. 728 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); In re Adcock Excavating, Inc., 42 B.R. 84 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1984) (dismissing substantially all employees not cessation of business).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.05[4] (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. Official Creditors Comm. v. Blue Cross (In re Lummus Indus., Inc.), 193 B.R. 615 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1996) (fees for administering plan properly included in amount of priority claim); Allegheny Int'l, Inc. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (In re Allegheny Int'l, Inc.), 145 B.R. 820 (W.D. Pa. 1992) (same).

n15

15. See In re Pittston Stevedoring Corp., 40 B.R. 424 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984) (debtor's non-payment to fringe benefit fund uncovered by audit arose from services rendered prior to 180-day period and therefore not eligible for priority). But see In re Braniff, Inc., 218 B.R. 628 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998) (for an insurance company providing benefits, the services rendered under this section are the provision of insurance rather than the work performed by the employees covered by the insurance; because the insurance company provided benefit services during the 180-day period, it was entitled to priority); see also In re A.B.C. Fabrics of Tampa, Inc., 259 B.R. 759 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2001) (applying same reasoning to self-funded plan; applicable point in time is when the debtor's obligations to make required plan payments arose).

n16

16. See Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Joint Comm. of Unsecured Creditors (In re Cirruscorp), 196 B.R. 76 (S.D. Tex. 1996) (where amount payable to plan covers period both within and beyond the 180-day period, the amount entitled to priority can be determined by proration).

n17

17. This dollar amount is effective for cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). The 2005 Act had set the amount at $10,000, effective April 20, 2005. For cases commenced between April 1, 2004, and April 19, 2005, the dollar amount was $4,925. For cases commenced during the three-year period beginning April 1, 2001, the amount was $4,650. The amount for the three-year period beginning April 1, 1998, was $4,300. For cases commenced before April 1, 1998, the amount was $4,000.

n18

18. See In re Braniff, Inc. 218 B.R. 628 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998) (the deduction for employees under the third priority includes necessity payments of those wages done shortly after commencement of the case and is not limited to payments under the plan).

n19

19. See In re Cornell & Co., Inc., 219 B.R. 682 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1998) (the deduction only applies to postpetition payments to those other plans); In re Braniff, Inc., 218 B.R. 628 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998) (the reference to other benefit plans is not limited to those plans that qualify for priority under section 507(a)(4)).

n20

20. See In re Edgar B., Inc., 200 B.R. 119 (M.D.N.C. 1996) (reversing bankruptcy court decision placing a $4,000 limitation on benefits per individual where $4,000 was the applicable cap on wage priority claims); Crafts Precision Indus., Inc. v. U.S. Healthcare, Inc. (In re Crafts Precision Indus., Inc.), 43 C.B.C.2d 1194, 244 B.R. 178 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2000) (retired employees not counted in determination of cap amount); In re New England Cartage Corp., 220 B.R. 503, 504 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1998) (Section 507(a)(4)(B) [now section 507(a)(5)] is an aggregate limitation. It limits the total claims that can be paid under fourth [now fifth] priority, not the amount that can be paid to or on account of an individual employee.); In re Braniff, Inc., 218 B.R. 628, 635 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1998) (same); In re C & S Cartage & Leasing Co., 204 B.R. 565 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1996) (an employee is not precluded from receiving a priority claim under this priority because the employee also received the maximum claim under the wage priority); In re P.C. White Truck Line, 22 B.R. 540 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. 1982) (calculation is done on basis of gross numbers; there is no limitation based on individual benefits).

n21

21. Some pension plans have features of both defined contribution and defined benefit plans. These plans are sometimes commonly referred to as hybrid plans.

n22

22. 26 U.S.C. § 412.

n23

23. 29 U.S.C. § 1082(b).

n24

24. 713 F.2d 476 (9th Cir. 1983).

n25

25. 713 F.2d 476, 479. It should be noted, however, that Pacific Far East Lines was decided under the Bankruptcy Act, not the Bankruptcy Code. The outcome may have been affected by that difference.

n26

26. 26 U.S.C. § 412.

n27

27. 29 U.S.C. § 1082(b).

n28

28. The PBGC is a wholly owned United States government corporation established under section 4002 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1302, to administer the pension plan termination program created under title IV of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1301-1461.

n29

29. See ERISA §§ 4021, 4022, 4022A, 4022B, 4061, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1321, 1322, 1322a, 1322b, 1361.

n30

30. See ERISA § 4042, 29 U.S.C. § 1342.

n31

31. ERISA §§ 4042, 4062, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1342, 1362.

n32

32. 81 B.R. 205 (D. Mass. 1988).

n33

33. 713 F.2d 476 (9th Cir. 1983).

n34

34. 81 B.R. 205, 208 (D. Mass. 1988).

n35

35. 184 B.R. 273 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1995).

n36

36. 184 B.R. 273, 279.

n37

37. Id.

n38

38. 29 U.S.C. § 1301.

n39

39. See ERISA §§ 4203, 4205, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1383, 1385.

n40

40. 789 F.2d 98 (2d Cir. 1986).

n41

41. 789 F.2d 98, 101-02.

n42

42. 174 B.R. 184 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1994).

n43

43. See, e.g., In re Great Northeastern Lumber & Millwork Corp., 64 B.R. 426 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986); In re Pulaski Highway Express, Inc., 57 B.R. 502 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1986); In re Cott Corp., 47 B.R. 487 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1984).

n44

44. 174 B.R. 184, 186.

n45

45. Id.

n46

46. 547 U.S. 651, 126 S. Ct. 2105, 165 L. Ed. 2d 110 (2006).

n47

47. Workers' compensation obligations owed to a state agency have been held to qualify for priority as an excise tax under section 507(a)(8)(E). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.10[6][a][i] (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

151 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Appointment of Ch 11 Trustee

2008 Emerging Issues 1312

Collier on Appointment of Ch 11 Trustee

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the standards for appointment of a chapter 11 trustee, including topics such as the discretionary standards of section 1104(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, appointment of a trustee for cause, the grounds for finding of cause for the appointment of a trustee, and the best interests standard.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Discretionary Standards of Section 1104(a)

Section 1104(a) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee shall be appointed for cause, including fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement of the affairs of the debtor by current management or if such appointment is in the interests of creditors, any equity security holders, and other interests of the estate . To apply the imperative of the word shall, a court must first determine whether cause exists. Thus, the question of whether a trustee should be appointed in a reorganization case must be considered on a case-by-case basis. n1 To understand the underlying basis for the standards in section 1104(a), it is useful to remember the context, discussed in greater detail at the end of this chapter, n2 in which the provision was enacted. Section 1104(a), with its discretionary standard for the appointment of a trustee, represented a compromise between those who believed that, as under the prior Chapter X, a trustee should be appointed in all cases involving public security holders, and those who believed that a trustee would be unnecessary in most reorganization cases.

Section 1104(a) explicitly rejects the idea of mandatory appointment of trustees in public company cases. Instead, it states that cause for the appointment of a trustee under subsection (a)(1) does not include the number of holders of securities of the debtor or the amount of assets or liabilities of the debtor. In addition, section 1104(a)(2) states that the court's decision to appoint a trustee under subsection (a)(2) must be made without regard to the number of holders of securities of the debtor or the amount of assets or liabilities of the debtor.

The flexible standards embodied in section 1104(a) are intended to accommodate two goals: (1) facilitation of the debtor's reorganization; and (2) protection of the public interest and of creditors. According to the House Report, these goals could best be accomplished by flexible standards that envisioned the debtor remaining in possession unless some strong reason existed to remove the debtor in favor of a trustee. The House Report suggested that, in most cases, the debtor will have entered bankruptcy as a result of honest business reverses, and appointment of a trustee, with the attendant disruption of business management, would not benefit, and indeed might harm, creditors. n3 A trustee unfamiliar with the business and its creditors will usually suffer delay and expense learning facts and circumstances that the trustee needs to know in order to facilitate the debtor's reorganization. n4 Nevertheless, the House Report recognized that in some cases fraud, gross mismanagement, or other circumstances might be present under which the benefit of a trustee would outweigh the detriment. n5 In view of this expressed purpose, it would seem that a court considering a motion to appoint a trustee should generally balance the benefit to be gained from such an appointment against the detriment to the reorganization effort and the rights of the debtor that may result from such an appointment.

Appointment of a Trustee for Cause

Section 1104(a)(1) permits the court, on request of a party in interest or the United States trustee, to order the appointment of a trustee for cause, including fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement of the affairs of the debtor by current management, either before or after the commencement of the case, or similar cause, but not including the number of holders of securities of the debtor or the amount of assets or liabilities of the debtor.

Appointment of Trustee as an Extraordinary Remedy in a Chapter 11 Case. The appointment of a trustee in a chapter 11 case is an extraordinary remedy. n6 The drafters of the Code recognized that, as a general rule, in the absence of fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, gross mismanagement, or similar grounds, the debtor's management should be given an opportunity to propose a plan of reorganization for the debtor. For this reason, there is a strong presumption that the debtor should be permitted to remain in possession absent a showing of need for the appointment of a trustee n7 or a significant postpetition change in the debtor's management. n8

Focus on Current Management. In authorizing appointment of a trustee for cause, section 1104(a)(1) focuses on the current management of the debtor rather than on any misdeeds of past management. Thus, the fact that the prior management of the debtor might have been guilty of fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement does not provide grounds for the appointment of a trustee under subsection (a)(1), as long as the court is satisfied that the current management of the debtor is free from the taint of prior management. n9

In some cases, however, even the presence of new managers may not be sufficient to avoid the appointment of a trustee when prior management committed substantial fraud or mismanagement. In order to be free of the taint of the prior management, the new managers may need to have had sufficient time to familiarize themselves with and stabilize the business in order to have sufficient credibility with creditors to gain their confidence.

Cause may be found when the debtor's management fails to take appropriate steps to begin to turn around the debtor's business and improve its financial condition. Particularly when management miscues led the debtor into bankruptcy, management's failure to change its operations after commencement of a case may provide evidence of its inability to guide the debtor through the bankruptcy process. n10

Similarly, the consistent failure of management to meet its own operating projections or to satisfy requirements for its own plan proposals may suggest the need for a trustee. For example, in one case a debtor first proposed a plan calling for a 100 percent payout to unsecured creditors, then proposed a plan calling for only a 50 percent payout, and finally proposed one calling for only a 25 percent payout, spread over years. In that case, the court found that appointment of a trustee was appropriate as a result of the debtor's continuing operating losses, inability to make operating projections which have a longevity of more than several months" and lack of ability to proffer a business plan. n11

Extent to Which Court Can Exercise Discretion in the Appointment of Trustee When Cause Exists. Section 1104(a) provides that the court shall order the appointment of a trustee upon a finding of cause, suggesting that the court's discretion is circumscribed. Thus, the court must order the appointment of a trustee once it finds that cause exists. n12 However, the court retains considerable discretion to determine when evidence of fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, mismanagement or other factors are sufficiently serious to constitute cause requiring the appointment of a trustee and the extent to which any such allegations involve current (as opposed to former) management. The exercise of such discretion is likely to take on greater importance in light of the 2005 amendment to this section, which added section 1104(e), discussed below. n13 The amendment is likely to result in a motion for the appointment of a trustee in more cases than previously, so it will fall to the court to exercise sound discretion as to whether the grounds for appointment in section 1104(a) have been met in any particular case. Exercising this discretion, some courts have held that even after a court finds evidence of management's misbehavior, the court may determine that there is insufficient cause to warrant the appointment of a trustee. n14 This is, of course, a fact-sensitive determination. However, once such cause is found, the appointment is required and may not be denied based on the economics of the situation. n15

Grounds for Finding of Cause for Appointment of a Trustee

Four Bases Listed in Section 1104(a). Section 1104(a) lists four bases upon which cause may be found: fraud, dishonesty, incompetence and gross mismanagement. These are not the exclusive bases for finding cause for the appointment of a trustee. The provision states that appointment of a trustee shall be ordered for cause, including fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement of the debtor by current management. n16 Use of the word including suggests that the grounds listed are not exclusive, and that a finding of cause may be based on other factors as well. n17

Fraud, dishonesty and incompetence require fact-sensitive determinations concerning types of behavior that would suggest a need to oust the current management of the debtor. For example, in one case the court ordered the appointment of a trustee after discovering that the principal of the debtor in possession was looting the estate through a kickback scheme in connection with a company that was hired to provide management services to the debtor. n18 Other courts have ordered appointment where the debtor hid n19 or diverted funds, n20 or lied at the section 341 meeting of creditors. n21

In describing gross mismanagement of the debtor as one type of cause for the appointment of a trustee, section 1104(a)(1) is not intended to suggest that a court should order the appointment of a trustee whenever management has, to any degree, mismanaged the debtor's affairs. Instead, the reference to gross mismanagement represents tacit recognition that some degree of mismanagement exists in virtually every insolvency case, and that mere mismanagement does not, by itself, constitute cause. n22 The philosophy of chapter 11 is to give the debtor a second chance at business success. n23 Consistent with that philosophy, under normal circumstances current management should be permitted to identify and correct its past mistakes. However, if management's performance has been so deficient as to constitute gross mismanagement, creditors may reasonably lose all confidence in the ability of management to direct the reorganization effort. In such a case, a trustee may properly be appointed.

Additional Bases for Finding of Cause. In addition to the four enumerated bases for a finding of cause, other bases may be found. In one case, for example, the court affirmed the bankruptcy court's appointment of a trustee based on the debtor in possession's failure to keep adequate records and to file reports coupled with a history of questionable transactions between the debtor and affiliated companies. n24 In another case, the court ordered the appointment of a trustee after finding that the debtor's principal had an irreconcilable conflict through his interest in another enterprise that was seeking to acquire technology owned by the debtor. The court found that the principal was more concerned about the other enterprise than about the debtor, and that an independent, disinterested person was necessary to manage the debtor and investigate various causes of action that might exist. The court found that the underlying conflicts and self dealing constituted cause for the appointment of a trustee. n25 In still another case, the court found that conflicts among members of a debtor cooperative, coupled with the debtor's failure to collect payments due from some members and other misdeeds, provided sufficient basis for the appointment of a trustee. n26 Similarly, intense, irreconcilable conflicts and acrimony between the debtor and creditors may rise to the level of cause. n27 One court also appointed a trustee based on an agreement between the debtor and a major creditor, approved by the court in settlement of a motion to convert to chapter 7 or appoint a trustee, that a trustee would be appointed if the debtor did not assume and assign its lease by a certain date. The debtor failed to do so and the court appointed a trustee without an evidentiary hearing, which the district court affirmed. n28

However, one factor that does not constitute cause is the existence of public securities holders or a particular amount of debt. Under the Bankruptcy Act, the bankruptcy court was required to appoint one or more trustees upon approval of a Chapter X petition if the liquidated, noncontingent debts in the case exceeded $250,000. n29 In eliminating from cause the existence of public securities or of a certain amount of assets or liabilities, Congress sought to eliminate any automatic use of a trustee based on a perceived need to protect securities holders. n30 Instead, protections are contained in various provisions of chapter 11. The appointment of a trustee is not considered essential to effective protection.

Also, the court may not use the appointment of a trustee as a sanction for discovery misconduct, although such misconduct may itself provide cause under section 1104(a)(1) for the appointment. n31 When rehabilitation is unlikely, conversion to chapter 7 is preferred to appointment of a trustee in chapter 11. n32 This should remain true even after the addition of section 1104(a)(3), discussed below, which provides as an additional ground for the appointment of a trustee, satisfaction of the grounds for dismissal or conversion of the case to chapter 7. n33

Best Interests Standard; Appointment of Trustee

Section 1104(a)(2) provides that the court shall order the appointment of a trustee if such appointment is in the interests of creditors, any equity security holders, and other interests of the estate, without regard to the number of holders of securities of the debtor or the amount of assets or liabilities of the debtor.

Since earlier versions of section 1104 did not contain language comparable to subsection (a)(2), the House Report and Senate Report are not particularly helpful in interpreting this subsection. It should be noted that the remarks of the sponsors indicate that the court may appoint a trustee under subsection (a)(2) even though the party requesting such appointment is unable to establish the requisite cause required for an order of appointment of a trustee under subsection (a)(1). n34 To illustrate this point, the sponsors stated that if the current management of the debtor gambled away rental income before the filing of the petition, a trustee should be appointed after the petition, whether or not post-petition mismanagement can be shown. n35 This statement is the only illustration of the application of subsection (a)(2) contained in the legislative history. However, this example is not particularly helpful since the dissipation of a debtor's assets through gambling would appear to be cause under section 1104(a)(1).

Comparison of Interests' Standard with Cause' Standard. The interests standard may initially seem less stringent than the cause standard. After all, no showing of wrongful behavior on the part of management is required, as long as interested parties can show a meaningful benefit from the appointment of a trustee. However, it is important to remember that the interests standard requires a finding that appointment of a trustee would be in the interest of essentially all interested constituencies. Section 1104(a)(2) provides for the appointment of a trustee when such an appointment is in the interest of creditors, any equity security holders, and other interests of the estate. n36 Use of the word and suggests that creditors cannot on their own obtain the appointment of a trustee under this provision in order to disenfranchise equity security holders or other interests. Instead, appointment of a trustee must be in the interest of the estate generally in order to satisfy the statutory interests standard. Thus, when equity security holders or other ownership interests properly and in good faith support the debtor's current management, it will be difficult to obtain an order for the appointment of a trustee under the interests" standard, as such an appointment will presumably not be in the interest of equity. n37

Balancing of Costs and Benefits. The interests standard suggests a balancing of costs and benefits in determining whether the appointment of a trustee is appropriate. Such an appointment would be in the interest of the estate if the benefits to all interests of the estate to be derived from a trustee outweigh the detriment to the estate. The benefits will, of course, depend on the nature of the particular case. When current management is competent and able to adjust to its new obligations under chapter 11, and when the creditors' committee is functioning properly, there may in fact be little or no benefit to the appointment of a trustee. On the other hand, when significant tensions are present among the parties or corporate governance issues arise that place management in a conflicted position, appointment of a trustee may diffuse tensions and relieve suspicions about the debtor's managers. This may be essential to successful completion of plan negotiations and ultimate reorganization of the debtor. n38

The costs involved in a trustee's appointment are readily apparent. First, there is the cost of the trustee itself. The trustee is also likely to retain counsel. However, these costs must be balanced against the costs incurred by the debtor's managers in running the chapter 11 case, costs that may be saved when a trustee takes over. There are also the intangible costs of delay and education of the trustee, who must learn about the business and the various constituencies in a case before the trustee can address adequately the underlying issues. In addition, there is the even more intangible cost of divesting the debtor's owners and managers of control and influence in the chapter 11 process. Upon the appointment of a trustee, the debtor's exclusive period to propose a plan terminates. Prior to termination of exclusivity, the debtor maintains considerable control over the plan process, because only the debtor can propose a plan. This control enables the debtor to protect, to at least some extent, any interest that equity may have in the plan process. Termination of exclusivity, coupled with termination of the debtor's management prerogatives, reduces the ability of the debtor to protect its principals in negotiating a reorganization plan. However, cost alone does not appear to be sufficient to overcome the statutory directive for appointment of a trustee where best interest is shown. n39

Instances in Which Grounds Exist for Appointment in the Best Interest But Not for Cause. Few situations come to mind in which grounds will exist for the appointment of a trustee under subsection (a)(2) when cause for such appointment does not exist under subsection (a)(1). It may be argued that the existence of a split among partners in a partnership case or directors in a corporate case which prevents the partnership or the board of directors, as the case may be, from managing the debtor's affairs would justify the appointment of a trustee under subsection (a)(2) even though elements of fraud, dishonesty, incompetence or gross mismanagement are not present. On the other hand, it would seem likely that, in the absence of subsection (a)(2), a bankruptcy court could properly determine that a stalemate among partners or board members constitutes sufficient cause to justify the court's order for the appointment of a trustee. n40

Another situation in which section 1104(a)(2) might apply is when current management that has been recently appointed is competent and honest but does not have the expertise that an exceptional trustee would have in reorganizing the debtor. While the availability of superior management is probably not cause to oust current management, the appointment of a trustee in such a case might be in the best interest of creditors, equity security holders and other interests of the estate. The inability of the court to select the trustee and the possibility of the creditors' election of a trustee under section 1104(c) suggest, however, that it would be difficult to satisfy a superior management test, because of the difficulty of conclusively determining the identity of the trustee before the court orders the appointment.

Still another example might arise if creditors and equity security holders have entirely lost confidence in the current management of the debtor. Although generally such a drastic loss of confidence would result from management's fraud, incompetence or gross mismanagement and, therefore, would constitute cause, a loss of confidence may result from a simple inability to work with the current managers, which could interfere with the operation of the business and the negotiation of a reorganization plan. In such a case, the higher standard of fraud may not be met, but appointment of a trustee may be appropriate. n41 In light of the 2005 addition to the Code of section 1121(d)(2), which limits the permissible extension of the debtor's exclusive period to file a plan, courts should exercise caution not to vary the applicability and strictness of this standard based on how close to the expiration of the exclusivity period the motion is filed. Appointment of a trustee automatically terminates the exclusivity period. n42 Whether the moving party can meet the best interest standard should be independent of any considerations of exclusivity, because the court may shorten or terminate exclusivity independently of whether a trustee is appointed, and the court should keep the two issues appropriately separate. Courts should exercise caution, however, in relying on this ground in light of the 2005 addition to the Code of section 1121(d)(2), which limits the permissible extension of the debtor's exclusive period to file a plan, in case the creditors' ostensible dissatisfaction with management is merely a proxy for trying to let the exclusivity time limits run so that creditors can file their own plan without engaging in the hard bargaining with the debtor that is often necessary for a successful consensual resolution of a chapter 11 case.

As an Alternative to Dismissal or Conversion

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides grounds for the dismissal or conversion of a chapter 11 case. If the grounds are met, dismissal or conversion is generally mandatory. However, section 1112(b) contains an exception, by reference to section 1104(a)(3), which provides that the court may order the appointment of a trustee if grounds exist to convert or dismiss the case under section 1112, but the court determines that the appointment of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate. n43

The best interests of creditors and the estate standard here does not appear to differ materially from the interests of creditors, any equity security holders, and other interests of the estate of section 1104(a)(2), unless one puts special weight on best, as though the interests to be considered under section 1104(a)(2) may be other than the best interests. Of course, the interests to which section 1104(a)(3) refers does not include the interests of equity security holders and therefore has a narrower focus. However, since section 1104(a)(3) applies only when the court has already determined that the case should be dismissed or converted, the interests of equity security holders should be decidedly secondary in any event. Section 1112(b) itself requires the court to consider the best interests of creditors and the estate in making the decision to dismiss or convert, so it appears that there will be two interests screens for the courts to consider in reaching a decision to order the appointment of a trustee under this paragraph. The first, in section 1112(b) seems to go to the interests of creditors and the estate in whether the court should act at all under that section; the second, in section 1104(a)(3) seems to go to the question of whether, once the court has decided to act, the best course of action is to dismiss, convert, or order the appointment of a trustee.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1104, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1104 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. In re Sharon Steel Corp., 871 F.2d 1217, 1226 (3d Cir. 1989) (section 1104(a) decisions must be made on a case-by-case basis).

n2

2. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1104.LH (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 232-33 (1977).

n4

4. In re McCorhill Pub. Inc., 73 B.R. 1013 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987); In re Fisher & Son, Inc., 70 B.R. 7 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1986); In re L.S. Good & Co., 8 B.R. 312, 314 (Bankr. N.D. W. Va. 1980); In re Hotel Assocs., Inc., 1 C.B.C.2d 733, 3 B.R. 343 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1980).

n5

5. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 232-33 (1977).

n6

6. In re Sovereign Estates, Ltd., 104 B.R. 702 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989); In re William A. Smith Constr. Co., Inc., 77 B.R. 124 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1987); In re Parker Grande Development, Inc., 64 B.R. 557 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1986); Official Creditors' Comm. v. Liberal Market, Inc. (In re Liberal Market, Inc.), 13 B.R. 748, 751 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1981); In re Anchorage Boat Sales, Inc., 2 C.B.C.2d 348, 4 B.R. 635 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n7

7. Committee of Dalkon Shield Claimants v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 828 F.2d 239, 17 C.B.C.2d 591 (4th Cir. 1987); In re Parker Grande Development, Inc., 64 B.R. 557 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1986); In re Evans, 48 B.R. 46 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1985); In re Eichorn, 5 B.R. 755 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1980).

n8

8. In re Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 463, 471 (3d Cir. 1998).

n9

9. See In re Sharon Steel Corp., 871 F.2d 1217 (3d Cir. 1989) (citing Treatise).

n10

10. See, e.g., In re Sharon Steel Corp., 871 F.2d 1217, 1228-29 (3d Cir. 1989).

n11

11. In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc., 22 C.B.C.2d 1583, 113 B.R. 164 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990) (Eastern Airlines case).

n12

12. In re Oklahoma Refining Co., 838 F.2d 1133, 18 C.B.C.2d 278 (10th Cir. 1988).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(e), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1405 (2005), effective for cases filed on or after April 20, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1104.02[4] (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. Committee of Dalkon Shield Claimants v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 828 F.2d 239, 17 C.B.C.2d 591 (4th

Cir. 1987) (court affirmed the district court's denial of the motion for a trustee even though the debtor in possession had made improper postpetition payments to a degree that constituted civil contempt); Schuster v. Dragone (In re Dragone), 266 B.R. 268 (D. Conn. 2001).

n15

15. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Aardvark, Inc. (In re Aardvark, Inc.), 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3304 (D. Del. Mar. 4, 1997).

n16

16. Emphasis added.

n17

17. In re Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 463, 472 (3d Cir. 1998). Section 1104(a)(1) does not define the term cause but merely notes that cause includes fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement of the affairs of the debtor by current management. Section 102(3) provides that the terms includes and including are not limiting. The rule of construction contained in section 102(3) underscores the fact that cause for purposes of section 1104(a)(1) is not limited to fraud, dishonesty, incompetence or gross mismanagement.

n18

18. In re Bibb, Inc., 76 F.3d 256 (9th Cir. 1996).

n19

19. In re Brown, 2000 Bankr. LEXIS 247 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. Feb. 24, 2000).

n20

20. Koken v. Reliance Group Holdings, Inc. (In re Reliance Group Holdings, Inc.), 273 B.R. 374 (Bankr. D. Del. 2001).

n21

21. In re Sanders, 2000 Bankr. LEXIS 263 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. Mar. 2, 2000).

n22

22. In re Evans, 48 B.R. 46 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1985); Dardarian v. La Sherene, Inc. (In re La Sherene, Inc.), 1 C.B.C.2d 685, 3 B.R. 169 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

n23

23. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 220 (1977).

n24

24. In re Oklahoma Refining Co., 838 F.2d 1133, 18 C.B.C.2d 278 (10th Cir. 1988); see also In re Cumberland Investment Corp., 23 C.B.C.2d 1433, 118 B.R. 3 (Bankr. D.R.I. 1990), aff'd, 133 B.R. 275 (D.R.I. 1991).

n25

25. In re Embrace Sys. Corp., 178 B.R. 112 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1995).

n26

26. In re Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc., 69 F.3d 746 (5th Cir. 1995), reh'g granted and result reversed, 74 F.3d 599 (5th Cir. 1996); see also In re Colorado-Ute Elec. Ass'n, Inc., 120 B.R. 164 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

n27

27. In re Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 463, 472-74 (3d Cir. 1998).

n28

28. In re Angelika Films 57th, Inc., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7463 (S.D.N.Y. May 27, 1997).

n29

29. Chapter X Rule 10-202(a) provided as follows:

On approval of a petition, the court shall, if the indebtedness of a debtor, liquidated as to amount and not contingent as to liability, is $250,000 or over, promptly and on its own initiative, appoint one or more trustees; if such indebtedness is less than $250,000, the court may appoint one or more trustees or continue the debtor in possession.

n30

30. The Securities and Exchange Commission, in response to the Commission's Report, unsuccessfully sought to make the appointment of a trustee mandatory if the debtor had as few as 100 public security holders. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1104.LH[1][d] (Matthew Bender).

n31

31. Ngan Gung Restaurant, Inc. v. Official Comm., 195 B.R. 593 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

n32

32. In re Nelco Ltd., 210 B.R. 707 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997).

n33

33. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 442(b) (2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005; see Standards for Appointment of Trustee As an Alternative to Dismissal or Conversion; § 1104(a)(3) infra.

n34

34. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,102 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,419 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978). One court suggested that section 1102(a)(2) creates a flexible standard and that a trustee may be appointed after a review of (1) trustworthiness of debtor, (2) past and present performance of debtor, (3) confidence of business community and creditors in management and (4) costs and benefits of appointing trustee. In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc., 22 C.B.C.2d 1583, 113 B.R. 164 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990).

n35

35. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,102 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,419 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n36

36. Emphasis added.

n37

37. But see In re Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 463, 474-75 (3d Cir. 1998).

n38

38. In re Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 463, 475 (3d Cir. 1998).

n39

39. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Aardvark, Inc. (In re Aardvark, Inc.), 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3304 (D. Del. Mar. 4, 1997).

n40

40. See Cajun Elec. Power Coop., Inc. v. Central La. Elec. Coop., Inc. (In re Cajun Power Coop., Inc.), 74 F.3d 599 (5th Cir. 1996) (conflicts among cooperative members constituted cause).

n41

41. See In re Marvel Entertainment, Inc. 140 F.3d 463 (3d Cir. 1998) (deep seated conflict and animosity among debtor and its creditors made appointment in the best interest).

n42

42. 11 U.S.C. § 1121(c)(1).

n43

43. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 442(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

152 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Continued Payment of Retiree Benefits in a Chapter 11 Case

2008 Emerging Issues 1313

Collier on Continued Payment of Retiree Benefits in a Chapter 11 Case

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers continued payment of retiree benefits in chapter 11 cases, including topics such as the trustee's duty to comply with the provisions of the retiree benefit plan in effect at the time the case under the Bankruptcy Code was commenced, the limitation on prebankruptcy modification of retiree benefits, and remedies for non-payment of retiree benefits.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code section 1114(e)(1) sets forth the general rule that a trustee (which includes a debtor in possession) must continue to timely pay and not modify retiree benefits unless modification of such payments has been ordered by the court, upon motion and after notice and hearing, n1 or without a court order if the trustee and the authorized representative of the persons entitled to retiree benefits have agreed to such modification. n2 Delaying payments is a form of modification of retiree benefits for purposes of this section. n3 After modification, the trustee must continue to pay the modified amount. To prevent debtors from modifying retiree benefits prepetition to evade the requirements of section 1114(e), section 1114(l) permits a court to unwind any such modifications made within 180 days before the date of the filing of the petition. n4

Trustees Duty to Comply with Employee Benefit Plan in Existence on the Date of Commencement of Chapter 11 Case. The trustee or debtor in possession must comply with the provisions of the retiree benefit plan that was in effect at the time the case under the Bankruptcy Code was commenced. When an agreement provides that upon its expiration the responsibility shifts to another entity, the debtor in possession has no obligation to continue benefits under the expired agreement. n5

The majority of courts addressing the issue have found that a debtor in possession need not comply with the procedures and requirements of section 1114 if it has a right to unilaterally terminate retiree benefits under the retirement plan in question and applicable nonbankruptcy law. n6 These courts have reasoned that section 1114 does not expressly limit the debtor in possession's ability to exercise a reserved right under a contract to terminate retiree benefits and that the section does not preclude termination. Courts have found that retirees are protected by section 1114 from the termination of benefits due to the filing of a petition under the Bankruptcy Code but that they are not protected from the termination of rights due to the postpetition expiration of the agreement. n7 Furthermore, section 1114 generally does not require reinstatement of a plan terminated prepetition, even where another statute requires that an employer maintain such a plan. n8 The section applies only to benefits that have been previously promised by the debtor; it does not create any new obligations on the trustee or debtor in possession. n9

In addition, some courts have reasoned that sections 1114 and 1129(a)(13) of the Code were enacted against the backdrop of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, n10 which provides that a right to terminate a welfare benefit plan prevents the vesting of such benefits. Therefore, if section 1114 takes away the debtor in possessions right to modify or terminate a welfare benefit plan, in effect, the filing of a chapter 11 petition would cause the vesting of such benefits. Rather, section 1129(a)(13) is meant to result in the continued payment of retiree benefits only according to the prebankruptcy contract, as modified under section 1114. If sections 1114 and 1129(a)(13) prevent termination, chapter 11 would provide better protection for retiree welfare benefits than is provided under section 1113 for pensions under collective bargaining agreements. n11 It would also lead to disparate treatment of debtors, their creditors and retirees, depending on whether the debtor modified or terminated retiree benefits more than 180 days before, or within 180 days before, the date of the filing of the petition, or the trustee or debtor in possession attempted to terminate or modify the benefits after the date of the filing of the petition. Courts have reasoned that, absent explicit statutory language or other convincing evidence, they may not attribute to congressional intent such unusual results. n12 In one jurisdiction in which the court permitted a debtor in possession to terminate retiree benefits under a prebankruptcy contract that no longer obligated the debtor to make any such payments, the court permitted the debtor in possession to avoid payments made in respect to the benefits, both before and after the bankruptcy filing, under Code sections 548 and 549 on the ground that the debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent value, and to recover the value of such payments from the entity that was obligated to pay such benefits. n13

At least one court has held that even if section 1114 does not restrict modification of benefits because the debtor reserved the right to unilaterally terminate the retiree benefits in question, such termination was a transaction outside the ordinary course of business that required approval under sections 363 and 554 of the Bankruptcy Code, since the termination of the contract could be viewed as abandoning property of the estate. n14 On the other hand, a few courts, rejecting the prevailing view, have held that, regardless of a unilateral termination right in the contract, the plain language of section 1114 prohibits termination or modification of retiree benefits unless the court grants approval under subsections 1114(g) and (h). n15 This rationale assumes that the word modification in section 1114 includes termination insofar as termination would be a far more drastic measure than changes in benefits. n16 In the Farmland Industries case, the court cited as support for this position the legislative history of section 1114, n17 which indicates that the statute was intended to protect retirees regardless of whether a collective bargaining agreement was in effect, n18 as well as the pervasive nature of the statutory scheme which is meant to provide special protection to retirees. n19 Arguably lending some support to this view is the 2005 addition of new subsection (l) to section 1114 limiting a company's ability to modify retiree benefits during the 180-day period prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition. n20

Limitation on Prebankruptcy Modification of Retiree Benefits. For cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005, section 1114(l) of the Code, added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, n21 limits a debtors ability to modify retiree benefits in anticipation of the bankruptcy filing. Section 1114(l) provides that if the debtor, while insolvent, modifies retiree benefits within 180 days prior to the filing of the petition, the bankruptcy court shall order reinstatement of the retiree benefits, unless the court finds that the balance of the equities clearly favors such modification. The section provides for the court to act upon the motion of a party in interest, and after notice and hearing. Unless the court finds that the balance of the equities clearly favors the modification, the court shall reinstate, as of the date the modification was made, the retiree benefits that were in effect immediately before the date of modification. Such retroactive payments will have the status of administrative expenses under section 503 of the Bankruptcy Code. n22

The intent of the section is to prevent debtors from unfairly modifying or terminating retiree benefits just prior to the bankruptcy filing so as to avoid section 1114s restraints on unilateral modification after the petition is filed. The House Report states:

Current bankruptcy law prevents a chapter 11 debtor from unilaterally modifying certain retiree benefits, such as health insurance, during the pendency of the bankruptcy case unless an authorized retiree representative is appointed and agrees to the modification, or the court authorizes the modification. Section 1403 amends Bankruptcy Code section 1114 to prevent debtors from evading these requirements by terminating retiree benefit plans on the eve of bankruptcy. The amendment would require retroactive reinstatement of retiree benefits that were modified within 180 days before the debtor filed for bankruptcy protection, unless the court finds that the balance of the equities clearly favors the modification. n23

While section 1114(l) limits the debtors ability to modify retiree benefits prepetition, the test for allowing modification--that the balance of the equities clearly favors such modification--is an easier test to meet than that imposed after the petition is filed--that the modification is necessary to permit the debtors reorganization, the parties are treated fairly and equitably and modification is clearly favored by a balance of the equities. n24 The section does not authorize the bankruptcy court to act sua sponte, and no time frames are set regarding when a motion may be filed or a hearing held to determine whether the prepetition modification meets the balancing of the equities test of section 1114(l).

If, as discussed above, n25 modify includes terminate, then where the debtor had a legal right under a prebankruptcy retirement plan to terminate benefits unilaterally and did in fact terminate benefits within 180 days before bankruptcy, while insolvent, section 1114(l) appears to give the court the power to rescind the termination where the balance-of-the-equities test is met. Because, unlike section 1114(e)(1)(B), which applies postpetition, the language of section 1114(l) makes no exception for prepetition modification based upon an agreement between the debtor and the retirees authorized representative, it may also be read to restrict the debtors ability to modify retiree benefits even when a company and its union agree to do so within 180 days of the bankruptcy filing.

However, it remains to be seen whether courts will apply new subsection (l) in a manner that restores benefits that have been modified pursuant to a reserved right in a prebankruptcy contract. Even if a court were to find that subsection (l) applies to such amendable benefits, the fact that the debtor reserved a right to terminate such rights unilaterally might be considered by the court as a factor in balancing the equities under section 1114(l).

Effect of Sale or Reorganization of Debtor on Rights of Retirees to Continuation of Retiree Benefits. Whether a purchaser of the debtors operations is bound to assume obligations to pay retiree benefits under a collective bargaining agreement is governed by the terms of the sale agreement, and a third party will be obligated to assume making retiree payments only to the extent the plan, sale agreement, or applicable nonbankruptcy law provides for successor liability. n26 The debtor, therefore, may sell its operations free of such obligations unless the collective bargaining agreement or applicable nonbankruptcy law precludes it. Even in liquidating chapter 11 cases where the collective bargaining agreement or nonbankruptcy law does not preclude a sale free and clear of retiree obligations and the debtor does not seek, or is not granted, an order to modify such benefits, the debtor will retain all the obligations to pay its retiree benefits pursuant to section 1114. n27 Generally, when a debtor seeks to modify retiree benefits in the context of a sale of all of the debtors assets to a third party that will not be bound to make payments, it will not preclude a finding that the debtor is negotiating in good faith in attempting to reach mutually satisfactory modifications pursuant to section 1114(f)(2). n28

Remedy for Non-Payment of Retiree Benefits. The trustee must continue to timely make payments of retiree benefits as set forth under the benefit plan, and when there has been a modification of such plan, the trustee must continue to pay the modified amount. The required payment of benefits, however, depends upon the availability of unencumbered assets with which the debtor can make such payments. n29

There is no explicit remedy provided for when a debtor is unable to make payments as required by section 1114. It would appear, however, that traditional bankruptcy remedies for noncompliance with chapter 11--conversion to chapter 7, dismissal or the appointment of a trustee or examiner--would be available. Such remedies, however, may be counterproductive in the context of retiree benefits by lessening or eliminating the recovery. For example, section 1114 is not applicable so as to afford such benefits administrative claim status once a case has been converted to chapter 7.

n30

One court formulated a remedy that required the payment of the benefits as soon as there were unencumbered assets available to make such payments. In In re GF Corp., n31 the bankruptcy court recognized that by requiring the debtor to pay retiree benefits as soon as it has the funds to do so it was, in effect, creating a superpriority without the authority of an explicit provision of the Bankruptcy Code. To do otherwise the court stated, would ignore the mandate of section 1114(e)(1) that the DIP [debtor in possession] shall timely pay these benefits. n32 In reaching this conclusion, the court faced a dilemma of reconciling the mandate of section 1114(e)(1) with the underlying policy of chapter 11 which is to encourage the debtor in possession to reorganize in such a manner that the greatest benefit derives to all creditors. The court stated:

There is no remedy provided by law to effect the congressional desire that retiree benefits shall always be paid. Based on the information before the Court, the path chosen today presents the greatest likelihood that those benefits will be paid. This Courts finding that retiree benefits will accrue as first priority administrative expenses might be of little comfort to the GF retiree making the uncertain trip to the hospital today. But if this Court forces GF into a Chapter 7 liquidation, the company would be unlikely to make any other payment toward retiree benefits. If GF completes a sale in Chapter 11, there is a better chance that there will be funds available to make first priority payments to secure these benefits into the future. n33

Payment of Retiree Benefits Granted Administrative Expense Priority; § 1114(e)(2). Section 1114(e)(2) n34 provides that any payment for retiree benefits required to be made before the effective date of a reorganization plan confirmed under section 1129 of this title n35 has the status of an allowed administrative expense as provided in section 503 of this title. n36 Thus section 1114(e)(2) gives payments of retiree benefits the status of an allowed administrative expense. This appears to be true regardless of when the right to receive such benefits vests or whether the obligation to make the payment arose prepetition or postpetition. n37 Thus, section 1114(e)(2) has the effect of giving retiree claims a higher priority than third-party wage claims.

The fact that such benefits are allowed as administrative expenses does not appear, however, to require the debtor to use secured collateral to make benefits payments. Section 1114 does not authorize the debtor to use cash collateral without obtaining the secured creditor's consent or obtaining court authorization after providing adequate protection.
n38

Section 1114 is applicable in chapter 11 liquidating cases. n39 However, when a debtor is completely liquidating its assets in contemplation of a final distribution to creditors, one court has suggested that the debtor should not be compelled to continue to pay full retiree benefits on a priority basis under section 1114. n40

Effect of the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 on the Administrative Expense Priority Status of Payments of Retiree Benefits. The Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 n41 (the Coal Act), imposes costs on companies involved in the coal mining industry and their successors in order to provide health and life insurance benefits to retired coal workers. The legislations purpose was to remedy problems with the provision and funding of health care benefits with respect to the beneficiaries of multi-employer benefit plans that provide health care benefits to retirees in the coal industry. n42 The constitutionality of the Coal Act under the Due Process Clause and the Takings Clause has been upheld by several courts. n43

Courts addressing bankruptcy treatment of Coal Act claims have addressed the difficult issue of whether the claims arise pre- or postpetition. In United Mine Workers of America 1992 Benefit Plan v. Leckie Smokeless Coal Co. (In re Leckie Smokeless Coal Co.), n44 the Fourth Circuit determined that a debtors liability for Coal Act premiums is not determined by the time when the premiums are assessed, but by the acts which created the obligations. The fact that premiums were assessed after the bankruptcy filing simply made the prepetition claim unmatured, unliquidated and contingent. Similarly, the Fourth Circuit distinguished LTV Steel Co. v. Shalala (In re Chateaugay Corp.), n45 in which the Second Circuit addressed the status of claims arising under the Coal Act in the context of a chapter 11 case. The LTV court concluded the critical issue was whether premiums due to the combined retirement benefit fund for mine workers, created by the Coal Act, were in the nature of claims preexisting the chapter 11 petition which would therefore have to be disallowed insofar as no proof of claim had been filed. n46 The court held that such premiums were not prepetition claims because the statute, and consequently the obligation to pay such premiums, was enacted after the bankruptcy petition was filed. Instead, the court found that such premiums were taxes incurred by the estate under section 503(b)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code, n47 and that any such obligations imposed before confirmation were entitled to first priority as an administrative expense under section 507(a)(1). n48

Other courts have found it more appropriate to make a straightforward determination of whether the obligations at issue here were incurred by the estate pursuant to section 503(b)(1)(B). n49 In one such case, premium obligations due after the filing of the Chapter 11 petition were found to be postpetition taxes entitled to first priority treatment under section 507(a)(1). Contributions owed under any applicable National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement which had not been rejected under section 1113 of the Bankruptcy Code--and was therefore deemed assumed by the debtor--were found to constitute postpetition administrative expenses insofar as the debtor had an obligation under section 365(b)(1) of the Code to cure any existing default. n50 Where all events giving rise to liability occur prepetition, no administrative expense priority arises. n51 Furthermore, it is unclear that bankruptcy courts may compel postpetition reinstatement of terminated individual employer plans required by the Coal Act where claims arising from such termination are prepetition claims since to do so would distort the Bankruptcy Codes priority scheme. n52

For a complete discussion of Code section 1114, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1114.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 11 U.S.C. § 1114(e)(1)(A); see §§ 1114(g), (h); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.06 and Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.08.

n2 2. 11 U.S.C. § 1114(e)(1)(B).

n3 3. See Argeras v. GF Corp. (In re GF Corp.), 27 C.B.C.2d 42, 140 B.R. 884 (N.D. Ohio 1992), appeal dismissed, 996 F.2d 1215 (6th Cir. 1993).

n4 4. 11 U.S.C. § 1114(l), added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1403(2) (2005). The limitation applies to cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005. Id. § 1406; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.03[2].

n5 5. See CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc. v. Connors (In re CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc.), 163 B.R. 858 (Bankr. D. Utah 1994), appeal dismissed sub nom. United Mine Workers Combined Fund v. CF & I Fabricators (In re CF & I Fabricators), 169 B.R. 984 (D. Utah 1994); LTV Steel Co. v. Connors (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 111 B.R. 399, 404-05 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990), aff'd sub nom. LTV Steel Co. v. United Mine Workers (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 945 F.2d 1205, 25 C.B.C.2d 802 (2d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1093, 112 S. Ct. 1167, 117 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1992) (section 1114 prevents unilateral termination of bargained-for benefits, not the operation of mutually agreed upon contract provisions).

n6 6. See, e.g., LTV Steel Co. v. United Mine Workers (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 945 F.2d 1205, 120809, 25 C.B.C.2d 802 (2d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1093, 112 S. Ct. 1167, 117 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1992); In re North American Royalties, Inc., 276 B.R. 860 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2002); In re Doskocil Cos. Inc., 25 C.B.C.2d 699, 130 B.R. 870 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1991); see also In re Lykes Bros. S.S. Co., 233 B.R. 497, 517 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1997) (section 1114 does not require appointment of retiree committee where benefits were terminable under applicable nonbankruptcy law and were in fact effectively terminated by the Debtor during the pendency of this case).

n7 7. See LTV Steel Co., Inc. v. United Mine Workers (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 945 F.2d 1205, 25 C.B.C.2d 802 (2d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1093, 112 S. Ct. 1167, 117 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1992); In re Federated Dept Stores, 132 B.R. 572 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1991).

n8 8. See Buckner v. Westmoreland Coal Co. (In re Westmoreland Coal Co.), 213 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997) (section 1114 does not apply to statutorily imposed obligations or benefits paid by an insurer following prepetition termination of a debtors self-funded plan). But note the limit on modification of benefits during the 180-day period prior to the filing of a bankruptcy petition. 11 U.S.C. § 1114(l); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.03[2].

n9 9. See In re Doskocil Cos. Inc., 25 C.B.C.2d 699, 130 B.R. 870 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1991) (debtors preexisting contractual right to terminate retiree not lost by virtue of section 1114); see also LTV Steel Co. v. United Mine Workers (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 945 F.2d 1205, 25 C.B.C.2d 802 (2d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1093, 112 S. Ct. 1167, 117 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1992); In re North America Royalties, Inc., 276 B.R. 860 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2002) (section 1114 held to be inapplicable if agreement reserves right to amend benefits).

n10 10. 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.

n11 11. See In re North American Royalties, Inc., 276 B.R. 860 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2002); In re Federated Dep't Stores, 132 B.R. 572 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1991); see also In re Doskocil Cos. Inc., 25 C.B.C.2d 699, 130 B.R. 870 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1991).

n12 12. See note 11 supra.

n13 13. CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc. v. Conners (In re CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc.), 163 B.R. 858 (Bankr. D. Utah 1994), appeal dismissed sub nom. United Mine Workers Combined Fund v. CF & I Fabricators (In re CF & I Fabricators), 169 B.R. 984 (D. Utah 1994). Subsections 548(a)(2)(A) and (B) provide that the trustee may avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property that was made or incurred on or within two years before the date before the filing of the petition if the debtor received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for such transfer, and the debtor was insolvent on the date that such transfer was made. (The 2005 Act increased the look-back period to two years from one year, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1402(1) (2005), but only for cases commenced after April 20, 2006, id. § 1406(b)(2).) Section 549 permits avoidance of postpetition transactions made after the commencement of the case that are not authorized under title 11 or by the court. Where a plan is required to make payments for retiree benefits, the plan qualifies as an entity for whose benefit the transfers were made as set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 550(a)(1). That section allows for the recovery of property, or the value thereof, of a fraudulent conveyance under section 548, or a postpetition transfer under section 549, from the entity for whose benefit such transfer was made.

n14 14. In re North American Royalties, Inc., 276 B.R. 860, 866 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2002).

n15 15. In re Farmland Indus., Inc., 294 B.R. 903, 917 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2003); see also In re Ames Dept Stores, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18275 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 30 1992), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 76 F.3d 66 (2d Cir. 1996). The Second Circuit in Ames, ruling only on the appropriateness of attorneys fees incurred in appealing a decision on this issue, declined to rule on the issue of whether section 1114 applies when the debtor has a contractual right to terminate benefits because that issue was not before the court. However, it indicated that there was substantial room for disagreement on that issue.

n16 16. See In re Farmland Indus., Inc., 294 B.R. 903, 917 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2003).

n17 17. Id.

n18 18. 133 Cong. Rec. 21,099 (1987) (statement of Sen. Heflin); see Retirement Benefits Security Act of 1987: Hearings on S. 548 Before the Subcomm. on Courts and Administrative Practice of the Senate Comm. on the Judiciary, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 14 (1987) (statement of Sen. Metzenbaum).

n19 19. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 503, 1114(e)(2) (granting administrative expense priority to retiree benefits), § 1114(c)(2) (requiring appointment by debtor of an authorized representative with whom to negotiate if it seeks not to pay benefits), § 1114(j) (exempting retiree benefits from limitations on damages under section 502(b)(7)), § 1129(a)(13) (adding continuation of retiree benefits to plan confirmation standards). See generally Susan J. Stabile, Protecting Retiree Medical Benefits in Bankruptcy: The Scope of Section 1114 of the Bankruptcy Code, 14 Cardozo L. Rev. 1911 (1993).

n20 20. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1403(2) (2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.03[2]. The contrary argument is that had Congress intended to change prevailing judicial interpretation of section 1114 (that section 1114 is not applicable if a unilateral termination right exists), it could have done so explicitly as part of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005.

n21 21. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1403(2) (2005). New subsection (l) applies to cases commenced on or after the Acts date of enactment, April 20, 2005. Id. § 1406.

n22 22. See 11 U.S.C. § 1114(e)(2).

n23 23. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 154 (2005).

n24 24. 11 U.S.C. § 1114(g); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.06.

n25 25. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.03[1].

n26 26. See CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc. v. Conners (In re CF & I Fabricators of Utah Inc.), 163 B.R.

858 (Bankr. D. Utah 1994), appeal dismissed sub nom. United Mine Workers Combined Fund v. CF & I Fabricators (In re CF & I Fabricators), 169 B.R. 984 (D. Utah 1994); see also In re After Six, Inc., 141 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2709, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12154 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993), citing Fall River Dyeing & Finishing Corp. v. NLRB, 482 U.S. 27, 40-41, 107 S. Ct. 2225, 2234, 96 L. Ed. 2d 22, 36 (1987) and NLRB v. Burns Intl Sec. Serv., Inc., 406 U.S. 272, 281-82, 92 S. Ct. 1571, 1579, 32 L. Ed. 2d 61, 69-70, 80 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2225 (1972).

n27 27. In re GF Corp., 23 C.B.C.2d 267, 115 B.R. 579 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1990) (in the context of a debtor seeking to sell its business as a going concern, the court found that the debtor was still obligated to promptly pay retiree benefits from any unencumbered funds in its possession or which it may obtain during the pendency of the chapter 11 case); In re Ionosphere Clubs, 26 C.B.C.2d 798, 134 B.R. 515 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991) (court found that even though the case was a liquidating chapter 11 case, section 1114 would still apply to grant administrative expense status to the payment of retiree benefit claims) (citing In re Garfinckels, Inc., 24 C.B.C. 2d 1135, 124 B.R. 3 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1991)).

n28 28. See In re Maxwell Newspapers, Inc., 981 F.2d 85, 28 C.B.C.2d 352 (2d Cir. 1992), rev'd in part In re Maxwell Newspapers, Inc., 149 B.R. 334 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1992) (authorizing rejection of collective bargaining agreement and finding that a distinction between the reorganization of a debtor and the sale of a going concern asset to a third party is irrelevant to considerations of good faith negotiations under section 1113, based on chapter 11's goal of continuing the enterprise, regardless of ownership); United Food & Com. Workers Union, Local 770 v. Official Unsecured Creditors Comm. (In re Hoffman Bros. Packing Co.), 32 C.B.C.2d 293, 173 B.R. 177 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1994) (section 1113's requirement to bargain in good faith does not preclude rejection of agreement where the purpose or plan of the debtor is to liquidate by selling a going concern).

n29 29. See United Steelworkers of Am. v. Jones & Lamson Mach. Co. (In re Jones & Lamson Mach. Co.), 21 C.B.C.2d 259 (D. Conn. 1989); In re Garfinckels, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1135 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1991) (an interim order terminating retirement benefits under section 1114(h)(1) will not be granted when the debtor is not conducting any business and is incapable of making benefit payments because it has no unencumbered funds).

n30 30. See In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc., 26 C.B.C.2d 798 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

n31 31. 23 C.B.C.2d 267 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio), vacated in part on reconsideration, 120 B.R. 421 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1990). The court recognized that there is nothing in the legislative history of section 1114 to suggest that it was intended to discourage postpetition lending or to discourage chapter 11 reorganization in general.

n32 32. 23 C.B.C.2d 267, 276.

n33 33. 23 C.B.C.2d 267, 276.

n34 34. 11 U.S.C. § 1114(e)(2).

n35 35. 11 U.S.C. § 1129.

n36 36. 11 U.S.C. § 503.

n37 37. See Buckner v. Westmoreland Coal Co. (In re Westmoreland Coal Co.), 213 B.R. 1, 18 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997) (although the court found that section 1114 did not apply as the debtor had terminated its plan prepetition, it did note that, if section 1114 were applicable, the prepetition claims of a trustee of a union benefit plan for annual prefunding premiums for future health benefits for orphaned retirees and their families would be accorded an administrative expense priority).

n38 38. See discussion relating to remedies for nonpayment of retiree benefits in Collier on Bankruptcy, 1114.03[4].

n39 39. See In re Garfinckels, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1135 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1991); see also In re Moline Corp., 27 C.B.C.2d 1423 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1992), appeal denied, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14,202 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (section 1114 applies in chapter 11 liquidating cases). But cf. In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc., 26 C.B.C.2d 797 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991) (although Bankruptcy Code section 1114 applies to chapter 11 liquidations, it does not apply to chapter 7 liquidations).

n40 40. See In re Ionosphere Clubs, Inc., 26 C.B.C.2d 798 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

n41 41. Pub. L. No. 102-486, Subtitle C (1992) (codified at 26 U.S.C. §§ 1, 9701 et seq.).

n42 42. The Coal Act combined the 1950 and 1974 Benefit Trusts into a trust entitled the United Mine Workers of America Combined Benefit Fund (the Combined Fund), and requires all signatories to any Wage Agreement (or their successors) to make contributions to the Combined Fund, which in turn is responsible for providing benefits to retirees. Each signatory's contribution, which is calculated annually and payable in monthly/ installments, is based on the number of retirees who worked for the signatory and the current cost of health care, with an additional contribution required for orphan beneficiaries who are not allocated to a signatory or would be allocated to a signatory which has gone out of business. For an in-depth discussion of the Coal Act, see Carbon Fuel Co. v. USX Corp., 891 F. Supp. 1186 (S.D. W.Va. 1995).

n43 43. Blue Diamond Co. v. Secretary of Health & Human Servs. (In re Blue Diamond Co.), 79 F.3d 516 (6th Cir. 1996); Barrick Gold Exploration, Inc. v. Hudson, 47 F.3d 832 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 813, 116 S. Ct. 64, 133 L. Ed. 2d 26 (1995); Davon, Inc. v. Shalala, 75 F.3d 1114 (7th Cir. 1996); LTV Steel Co., Inc. v. Shalala (In re Chateaugay Corp.), 53 F.3d 478 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 913, 116 S. Ct. 298, 133 L. Ed. 2d 204 (1995); Lindsey Coal Mining Co. v. Shalala, 901 F. Supp. 959 (W.D. Pa. 1995); see also Holland v. High-Tech Collieries, Inc., 911 F. Supp. 1021 (N.D. W.Va. 1996). But see Unity Real Estate Co. v. Hudson, 889 F. Supp. 818 (W.D. Pa. 1995) (Coal Act, as applied to a corporate successor to signatory operators, did not violate substantive due process but did effect an uncompensated taking).

n44 44. 99 F.3d 573, 580-81, 36 C.B.C.2d 1693, (4th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1118, 117 S. Ct. 1251, 137 L. Ed. 2d 332 (1997); see Adventure Resources, Inc. v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786, 797-98, 39 C.B.C.2d 847 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 962, 119 S. Ct. 404, 142 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998); Buckner v. Westmoreland Coal Co. (In re Westmoreland Coal Co.), 213 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

n45 45. 53 F.3d 478, 486 (2d Cir. 1995).

n46 46. 53 F.3d 478, 496-97. A claim, for purposes of the Bankruptcy Code, is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101 as a right to payment, whether or not such right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured, or unsecured. 53 F.3d 478, 496.

n47 47. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(B).

n48 48. The court held such payments to be involuntary pecuniary burdens imposed by Congress for the public purpose of stabilizing the coal industry; these obligations were probably imposed under Congress taxing powers. 53 F.3d 478, 496. Accord UMW 1992 Benefit Plan ex rel. Holland v. Rushton (In re Sunnyside Coal Co.), 146 F.3d 1273, 40 C.B.C.2d 732 (10th Cir. 1998); Adventure Resources, Inc. v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786, 793, 39 C.B.C.2d 847 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 962, 119 S. Ct. 404, 142 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998); see also The Pittston Co. v. United States, 199 F.3d 694, 24 Employees Benefits Cas. 1576 (4th Cir. 1999); United Mine Workers of Am. 1992 Benefit Plan v. Leckie Smokeless Coal Co. (In re Leckie Smokeless Coal Co.), 99 F.3d 573, 583, 36 C.B.C. 2d 1693 (4th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1118, 117 S. Ct. 1251, 137 L. Ed. 2d 332 (1997); see also 11 U.S.C. §§ 503(b)(1)(B), 507507(a)(1).

n49 49. Adventure Resources, Inc. v. Holland, 193 B.R. 787 (Bankr. S.D. W.Va. 1996), rev'd in part on other grounds, 137 F.3d 786, 39 C.B.C.2d 847 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 962, 119 S. Ct. 404, 142 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998); see UMW 1992 Benefit Plan ex rel. Holland v. Rushton (In re Sunnyside Coal Co.), 146 F.3d 1273, 40 C.B.C.2d 732 (10th Cir. 1998). But see In re Reorganized CF & I Fabricators of Utah, Inc., 518 U.S. 213, 116 S. Ct. 2106, 135 L. Ed. 2d 506 (1996) (ERISA exaction on accumulated funding deficiency was not a tax subject to priority under the Bankruptcy Code); Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. v. CF & I Fabricators of Utah (In re CF & I Fabricators of Utah, Inc.), 150 F.3d 1293 (10th Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1145, 119 S. Ct. 2020, 143 L. Ed. 2d 1032 (1999) (chapter 11 debtors minimum contributions to employee pension plan are not taxes entitled to administrative priority in bankruptcy); see also In re Olga Coal Co., 194 B.R. 741 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996).

n50 50. Adventure Resources, Inc. v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786, 79798, 39 C.B.C.2d 847 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 962, 119 S. Ct. 404, 142 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998); see NLRB v. Bildisco & Bildisco, 465 U.S. 513, 531-32, 104 S. Ct. 1188, 1199, 79 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1984); In re Stewart Foods, inc., 64 F.3d 141, 145 (4th Cir. 1995). But see United Food & Comm. Workers Union v. Family Snacks, Inc. (In re Family Snacks, Inc.), 257 B.R. 884, 905 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001) (debtor must affirmatively assume collective bargaining agreement to fall subject to requirement to cure existing defaults in executory contract).

n51 51. See Buckner v. Westmoreland Coal Co. (In re Westmoreland Coal Co.), 213 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1997).

n52 52. 213 B.R. 1, 41-45.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

153 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Property of the Estate in a Chapter 11 Case in Which the Debtor Is an Individual

2008 Emerging Issues 1314

Collier on Property of the Estate in a Chapter 11 Case in Which the Debtor Is an Individual

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 1115, added to the Bankruptcy Code in 2005, defines property of the estate for a chapter 11 case in which the debtor is an individual. Its text is based upon and almost identical to section 1306, which is applicable only in chapter 13 cases. This Emerging Issues Analysis covers property of the estate in a chapter 11 case in which the debtor is an individual.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview. Bankruptcy Code Section 1115, added to the Bankruptcy Code in 2005, n1 defines property of the estate for a chapter 11 case in which the debtor is an individual. Its text is based upon and almost identical to section 1306, which is applicable only in chapter 13 cases. n2 Both sections supplement the estate with property that is excluded from the estate in an individuals chapter 7 case--namely, postpetition earnings from services as well as other property acquired postpetition.

This expansion of property of the estate includes property acquired postpetition and ensures that the additional property, which usually is necessary to fund or otherwise implement a plan of reorganization, n3 is protected by the automatic stay. n4 This is even the case with respect to entities which could pursue such property in a chapter 7 case, such as those holding postpetition claims. n5

This inclusion, however, does not change other provisions in chapter 11 that look to property of the estate as defined in section 541, such as the best interests of creditors test. n6 There is also no requirement that property coming into the estate due only to the operation of section 1115(a) be listed in the schedules. Obviously, such a requirement would be unworkable, since the debtors schedules would have to amended to reflect each paycheck or acquisition of property, as well as every expenditure.

While section 1115(a) adds additional property into the estate, section 1115(b) confirms the debtors presumptive right to remain in possession of that property as well as all other property of the estate. n7 The right to remain in possession of this property of the estate is a major advantage for individual chapter 11 debtors, who in a chapter 7 case would be required to turn over nonexempt property to the trustee. n8

Property of the Chapter 11 Estate Compared with Property of the Chapter 7 Estate; 11 U.S.C. §§ 541(a) and 1115(a)

Property Described in Section 541. A case under chapter 11 may be commenced by the filing of a petition under section 301 or section 302. The commencement of a chapter 11 case, in turn, creates an estate, the property of which, as set forth in the introductory language of section 1115(a), is defined initially by section 541(a). The broadly inclusive language of section 541(a) includes all legal and equitable interests of the debtor in property at the date of the commencement of the case, n9 as well as many (if not most) property interests acquired by the debtor after the commencement of the case, n10 exclusive of postpetition earnings. n11

Chapter 11s Inclusion of Postpetition Earnings; 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(2). Section 1115 expands the broad definition contained in section 541. For individuals who are debtors under chapter 11, section 1115 provides that property of the estate includes earnings from services of the debtor performed while the chapter 11 case is pending. In this regard, section 1115(a)(2) effectively nullifies section 541(a)(6) as it applies to postpetition income from services. n12 As a consequence, earnings from postpetition services are property of the chapter 11 estate for every chapter 11 debtor who is an individual.

Chapter 11s Inclusion of Postpetition Property Acquired by the Debtor; 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(1). Under chapter 11, as in other cases, property of the estate includes not only all of the kinds of property identified in section 541 as property of the estate, but also all proceeds, product, rents and profits of such property. This includes the standard concept of postpetition rent paid with respect to prepetition property, and postpetition interest paid on prepetition investments. n13 However, in chapter 11 it also includes permutations of postpetition income from services earned during the pendency of the chapter 11 case. Thus, at least one court has construed section 1306, an analogous provision affecting chapter 13 cases, to mean that a tax refund arising from earnings of a debtor during the pendency of a chapter 13 case was property of the estate when received prior to closing of the case, where the debtor's plan had committed tax refunds to payment of creditors. n14

Effect of Plan Confirmation on Estate Property. Section 1141(b) provides that, except as otherwise provided in the plan or the order confirming the plan, confirmation of a chapter 11 plan of reorganization vests all of the property of the estate in the debtor. Under the analogous provision in chapter 13, section 1327(b), courts have differed regarding whether this vesting of estate property terminates the estates rights in property, and whether new property acquired by the debtor after confirmation of a plan becomes property of the estate if the confirmed plan does not specifically so provide. n15 In any event, it is clear that if the plan, or order confirming the plan, provides that some or all property of the estate does not vest until the closing of the case or some other later date, all such property remains property of the estate until that date. n16

Possession of Property of the Chapter 11 Estate; 11 U.S.C. § 1115(b). Chapter 11 allows the debtor to remain in possession of all property of the estate as a debtor in possession. n17 Section 1115(b) confirms this status, and thus effectively nullifies section 521(a)(4), requiring the surrender by the debtor of nonexempt property of the estate.

Section 1115(b) also confirms that the ability to remain in possession of property of the estate is subject to section 1104, regarding the appointment of a trustee or examiner, and the provisions of a confirmed plan or an order confirming the plan.

The portion of section 1115(b) regarding the inability of the debtor to continue to hold estate property after a trustee is appointed could lead to confusing results. If a chapter 11 trustee is appropriate for a case of an individual chapter 11 debtor, and is appointed, section 1115(a) requires all postpetition earnings from the debtor's services to be property of the estate. Section 521(a)(4) then requires turnover of such property to the trustee. The prospect thus exists that a debtor would have to turn over all wages and earnings to the trustee, and the trustee would have to determine how much of the funds the debtor could retain for the maintenance and support of the debtor, and presumably, his or her dependents, and the authority for such retention. Resort to chapter 13 cases is of little help here, since chapter 13 does not imbue the trustee with the same wide-ranging powers as are held by the chapter 11 trustee, and section 1306 does not have any carve out for the chapter 13 trustee.

Property of the Estate in Cases Converted to Chapter 7 or Dismissed Cases Converted to Cases Under Chapter 7; 11 U.S.C. §348. Section 348(a) governs the fate of estate property in a case converted from chapter 11 to chapter 7. n18 That section essentially provides that a conversion does not change the date of the commencement of the case; it only changes the applicable chapter. In chapter 11 cases involving individual debtors, this means that, upon conversion, the composition of property of the estate changes; property included solely under section 1115 no longer retains its status as property of the estate. As a consequence, the debtor will be entitled to regain all postpetition service income that is still identifiable that would have been excluded had the case been initially filed as one under chapter 7.

This result, although logical, is not clear. Before 1994, courts were split regarding the effect of section 348(a) in chapter 13 cases. During that year, however, Congress added section 348(f) to the Code. That section explicitly provides that if property comes into a chapter 13 estate solely because of section 1306(a), it is not included in the estate in the converted case. n19 Therefore, property the debtor acquired during a chapter 13 case that is attributable to earnings from postpetition services loses its status as property of the estate in the chapter 7 case after conversion.

When Congress added section 1115 to the Code in 2005, it did not amend section 348(f) to refer to conversions from chapter 11 to chapter 7. There is thus less clarity as to the correct result. The legislative history of the 1994 changes to section 548(f)(2), however, indicates that Congress simply clarified what it already believed to be the law. n20 If a court were to adopt this explanation, then the same result should obtain in conversions to chapter 7 from chapter 11 as from chapter 13 to chapter 7: the debtor should receive back all funds held by the estate that are attributable to income from postpetition services.

Uncertainty might still exist, however, with respect to conversions made in bad faith. Section 348(f)(2) expressly addresses such bad faith conversions, and provides that postpetition service income remains property of the estate--a remedy that might not necessarily be reached by a court seeking to remedy the bad faith conversion in the absence of section 348(f).

Dismissed Cases; 11 U.S.C. § 349. When a chapter 11 case is dismissed, any property acquired by the debtor thereafter never becomes estate property, because section 1115(a)(2) limits the property coming into the estate to property and earnings acquired before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 11, or 12 of this title, whichever occurs first. n21 In addition, all property of the estate reverts in the entity in which such property was vested immediately before the commencement of the case under this title under section 349(b)(3). n22 The purpose of reversion, according to the legislative history is to undo the bankruptcy case, as far as practicable, and to restore all property rights to the position in which they were found at the commencement of the case. n23

For these reasons, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, in In re Nash, n24 held that upon dismissal of a chapter 13 case, a chapter 13 trustee must return all funds in the trustee's hands to the debtor. The court held that funds received by the trustee after the case was dismissed never became property of the estate and that ownership of the other funds held by the trustee had reverted in the debtor upon dismissal.

For further discussion of Code section 1115, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1115.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 321(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1306.

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)(8) (requiring an individual chapter 11 debtor to include all or a portion of income from postpetition services necessary to fund the plan).

n4

4. The chapter 13 cases construing cognate language in section 1306 establish this principle. See, e.g., Security Bank of Marshalltown, Iowa v. Neiman, 1 F.3d 687 (10th Cir. 1993) (chapter 13 estate continues to exist after confirmation of plan, so expenses to protect estate property were administrative expenses); Carver v. Carver, 954 F.2d 1573 (11th Cir. 1992) (debtors wages were property of estate and therefore action to collect alimony from those wages was not a section 362(b)(2) exception to automatic stay); Annese v. Kolenda (In re Kolenda), 38 C.B.C.2d 1640, 212 B.R. 851 (W.D. Mich. 1997) (property acquired postpetition remains in estate after confirmation and is protected by automatic stay); Clark v. United States (In re Clark), 207 B.R. 559 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1997) (all property of debtor was property of estate protected by automatic stay after confirmation of plan when order confirming the plan so provided).

n5

5. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3)(4), (b)(2) (protecting property of the estate); Carver v. Carver, 954 F.2d 1573, 1577 (11th Cir. 1992) (postpetition income protected from support enforcement); Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.03[5]362.03[6] and Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.05[2].

n6

6. See 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(7).

n7

7. See also 11 U.S.C. § 1107.

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(4); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.12.

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.04*Collier on Bankruptcy*, 541.09.

n10

10. These interests include interests recovered in an avoidance action, 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(3), (4), as well as some interests acquired within the first 180 days after filing, 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(5), and all proceeds, product, offspring, rents or profits from any estate property, 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(6). In some cases, property of the estate also includes community property interests of the debtor and the debtors spouse. 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(2).

n11

11. To foster a fresh start for individuals, property of the estate as defined in section 541 does not include earnings from services performed by an individual debtor after the commencement of the case. 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(6).

n12

12. Ordinarily, the earnings of a nondebtor spouse of the debtor are not included in this definition, although special issues may arise in community property states. For an example in the analogous chapter 13 context, see In re Nahat, 278 B.R. 108 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2002) (nondebtor spouses earnings were special community property under Texas law and not available to satisfy debts of her spouse).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 541.

n14

14. Midkiff v. Dunivent (In re Midkiff), 271 B.R. 383 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2002), aff'd, 342 F.3d 1194 (10th Cir. 2003); see also U.S. Postal Serv. v. Hudson, 230 B.R. 542 (W.D. Tenn. 1999) (chapter 13 case; imposition by employer of administrative fee complying with chapter 13 payroll deduction order constituted violation of automatic stay with respect to earnings which were part of the estate).

n15

15. The cases espousing the various viewpoints on these issues are discussed elsewhere in the Treatise. See Collier on Bankruptcy 1327.03.

n16

16. But see In re Richardson, 283 B.R. 783 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2002) (chapter 13 case; language deferring the vesting of property that was inserted by trustee in form order submitted to court without notice to debtor was not binding because it was imposed through denial of due process to debtor).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 1107.

n18

18. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 348.02.

n19

19. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 348.07.

n20

20. See 140 Cong. Rec. H10,770-71 (1994). This legislative history indicates that Congress agreed with the reasoning of the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit in In re Bobroff, 766 F.2d 797, 12 C.B.C.2d 1491 (3d Cir. 1985), and disagreed with decisions such as that of the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Lybrook, 951 F.2d 136 (7th Cir. 1991).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(1).

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 349.03[1].

n23

23. S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 49 (1978).

n24

24. 765 F.2d 1410, 13 C.B.C.2d 209 (9th Cir. 1985).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

154 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Duties of a Trustee or a Debtor in Possession in Small Business Chapter 11 Cases

2008 Emerging Issues 1316

Collier on Duties of a Trustee or a Debtor in Possession in Small Business Chapter 11 Cases

By Collier

December 4, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis covers the duties of a trustee or a debtor in possession under section 1116, including topics such as compliance by the trustee or debtor in possession, the documents to be provided, required attendance at meetings scheduled by the court or United States trustee, and the required filing of schedules and statements.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Overview. Added to the Bankruptcy Code by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, n1 section 1116 imposes duties on trustees and small business debtors in possession for the purpose of providing "greater administrative oversight and controls" in small business chapter11 cases. n2 These duties, which apply in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, n3 are in addition to those required by the Bankruptcy Code, and they complement the newly added duty of small business debtors to provide periodic reports pursuant to section 308, n4 as well as the United States trustees' new obligations with respect to small business cases pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(3)(H) and (a)(7). n5

A trustee or small business debtor in possession in a small business case is required to "append" to the voluntary petition the debtor's most recent financial documents, including a balance sheet, statement of operations, cash-flow statement and federal income tax return. The same documents must be provided in an involuntary case within seven days of the order for relief.

Senior management and counsel are required to attend meetings scheduled by the court or the United States trustee, including initial debtor interviews, scheduling conferences and meetings of creditors. The court may waive the requirement that senior management and counsel attend the meetings, but only after notice and a hearing and a finding of "extraordinary and compelling circumstances."

The trustee and the small business debtor in possession must timely file all schedules and statements of financial affairs, and the date for filing those documents may not be extended beyond 30 days after the order for relief "absent extraordinary and compelling circumstances." The trustee and the small business debtor in possession must file all postpetition reports required by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or by local rules, and must also maintain insurance that is "customary and appropriate to the industry." Tax returns and "other required government filings" must be timely filed, and all taxes entitled to administrative expense priority must be timely paid, with the exception of those being contested and diligently prosecuted by appropriate proceedings.

The United States trustee, or a designated representative of the United States trustee, shall be allowed to inspect the debtor's business premises, books and records at reasonable times, after reasonable written notice, unless notice is waived.

Compliance by Trustee or Debtor in Possession. Section 1116 provides that a trustee or the debtor in possession in a small business case shall have the duties described in paragraphs (1) through (7) of that section. A small business debtor in possession may be able to perform those duties, but in a small business case some of the duties are inapplicable to a trustee. For example, the trustee would not be able to append the required documents to the petition or to attend scheduled meetings through "senior management personnel."

A chapter 11 debtor's status as a "small business debtor," as defined in section 101, n6 depends in part on whether a creditors' committee is appointed, and also on whether an appointed committee is sufficiently active and representative to provide oversight of the debtor. That uncertainty may in some circumstances make it difficult for chapter 11 debtors to know whether they must perform the duties required by section 1116. Creditors' committees are, pursuant to section 1102(a)(1), supposed to be appointed in every chapter 11 case, but in smaller cases the committees are only rarely established. Creditors' committees typically are not appointed before the first meeting of creditors. If there is no creditors' committee when the case is filed and if the requirements of section 101 are otherwise met, the debtor would be designated a small business debtor.

Duties Otherwise Required by Title 11. The duties specified in section 1116 are required in addition to other duties imposed by the Bankruptcy Code. Section 1107 of the Bankruptcy Code describes the duties of all debtors in possession in chapter 11 cases, and section 521 imposes duties that are applicable to debtors in all chapters. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 added Code section 308, n7 which requires small business debtors to file periodic reports. n8

Documents to Be Provided

Voluntary Petition. Section 1116(1) requires a small business debtor in possession to "append" n9 to its voluntary petition the debtor's most recent balance sheet, statement of operations, cash-flow statement and federal income tax return. The debtor is not required to create these documents if they do not already exist; it must, however, append a sworn statement certifying that the documents have not been created or filed.

Presumably the balance sheet that is required is a statement of assets, liabilities and equity, and the required cash-flow statement is a statement of the sources and uses of funds. It is not clear, however, what is meant by a "statement of operations." The term "operating statement" frequently refers to a profit and loss statement; that is most likely what is meant by the term "statement of operations." However, in section 308, where a report relating to profitability is required, the term "profitability" is used and defined. "Statement of operations" as used in section 1116 may refer to something else, such as a narrative description of the debtor's business operations. Whether a particular type of "statement of operations" will satisfy the requirements of section 1116(1) is likely to depend on whether the United States trustee believes it is satisfactory or, if a dispute arises, how the courts construe that statutory language.

Involuntary Petition. In an involuntary small business case, the trustee or small business debtor in possession must file the debtor's most recent balance sheet, statement of operations, cash-flow statement and federal income tax return within seven days of the order for relief.

Statement That Documents Are Not Prepared or Filed. In lieu of filing a required document, section 1116(1)(B) provides that a statement may be filed "under penalty of perjury" certifying that no balance sheet, statement of operations, or cash-flow statement has been prepared and that no Federal tax return has been filed. (The requirement that the statement be filed under penalty of perjury is redundant as all statements must be verified pursuant to Rule 1008 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.)

Section 1116(1)(B) does not address the situation where a balance sheet, statement of operations or cash-flow statement was in fact prepared but is no longer in the debtor's possession.

To avoid disputes regarding whether the most recent documents have been appended to the petition, a debtor may prepare a balance sheet, cash-flow statement and statement of operations immediately before filing the petition and file those documents with the court together with the petition.

Privacy and Redaction. The documents filed pursuant to section 1116(1)(A) become part of the public record and are open to examination. An entity may be protected, however, at the discretion of the court with respect to trade secrets or confidential research, development or commercial information. A debtor, when filing any documents, must observe the privacy requirements imposed by the BankruptcyCode. n10

Required Attendance at Meetings Scheduled by Court or United States Trustee

Who Must Attend. A trustee or debtor in possession in a small business case must attend, "through its senior management personnel and counsel," all meetings scheduled by the court or the United States trustee. These meetings include initial debtor interviews, scheduling conferences and meetings of creditors convened under section 341. The statute refers to meetings scheduled by the court and the United States trustee, but it does not refer to meetings scheduled by bankruptcy administrators in districts in Alabama and North Carolina. The statute also does not refer to hearings or trials held by the court.

Rule 9001(5) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure provides that when it is necessary to compel attendance of a debtor for examination and the debtor is not a natural person, the debtor includes, if designated by the court, any or all of the debtor's officers, members of its board of directors or trustees or of a similar controlling body, controlling stockholders or members, or any other person in control. n11 If the debtor is a partnership, the debtor shall include all general partners or, if designated by the court, any other person in control of the partnership. The authority of the court pursuant to Rule 9001(5) to designate persons other than "senior management" to attend meetings called by the court or the United States trustee supplements the requirements of section 1116(2).

In most small business chapter 11 cases, identifying "senior management" should not be difficult. If there is any doubt, the debtor should confer and reach an understanding with the United States trustee before the identification of senior management becomes an issue.

Waiver of Required Attendance upon a Finding of "Extraordinary and Compelling Circumstances." The court may waive the requirement that the senior management and counsel of the small business debtor in possession attend meetings scheduled by the court or the United States trustee upon a finding of "extraordinary and compelling circumstances." "Extraordinary and compelling circumstances" is a new standard that was introduced to the Bankruptcy Code for the first time by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. The standard, which is not found in any other federal statute, is presumably a higher standard than "special circumstances," n12 "unusual circumstances" n13 or even "exigent circumstances," n14 as those terms are used in other sections of the Bankruptcy Code.

Required Filing of Schedules and Statements

Schedules and Statements to Be Timely Filed. Section 1116(3) requires the trustee or small business debtor in possession to timely file all schedules and statements of financial affairs. All debtors, unless otherwise ordered by the court, are required by section 521(a)(1)(B) n15 to file a schedule of assets and liabilities, a schedule of current income and current expenditures, and a statement of the debtor's financial affairs. It is not clear whether the requirements of section 1116(3) would preclude the court from ordering, pursuant to section 521(a)(1)(B), that such statements not be filed. Rule 1007(c) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure provides that schedules and statements shall be filed with the petition in a voluntary case, or within 15 days thereafter if the petition is accompanied by a list of all the debtor's creditors and their addresses. n16

Extension of Time in Which to File. The time for filing schedules and statements may be extended pursuant to Rule 1007(c) only on motion "for cause." n17 Rule 1007(c) does not limit the length of the extension, but section 1116(3) imposes a limit of 30 days after the order for relief in small business cases. The 30-day limit may be extended only if there is a showing of "extraordinary and compelling circumstances." n18

Required Filing of Postpetition Reports. Trustees and debtors in possession in small business cases are required to file all postpetition financial and other reports required by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or by local rules. n19 The postpetition reports would include the reports required by section 308, n20 but not the reports required by rules issued by the Attorney General pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 589b. n21

Trustee or Debtor in Possession Must Maintain Insurance. Section 1116(3) requires the trustee or debtor in possession in a small business case, subject to the prohibition in section 363(c)(2) against using cash collateral, to maintain insurance "customary and appropriate" to the industry. Presumably the industry referred to is the debtor's industry, not the insurance industry. There are many types of insurance, n22 and for several reasons small businesses chapter 11 debtors may have difficulty complying with this requirement. It is not uncommon for small businesses in financial difficulty to relinquish insurance coverage to save the costs of insurance premiums. Debtors often will not be able to afford new insurance that is "customary and appropriate" to the industry. Even if they can afford the premiums, debtors in a bankruptcy case may find it difficult or impossible to obtain insurance coverage. The specific circumstances of a debtor, especially one that has made large insurance claims in the past, may make insurance either impossible to obtain or prohibitively expensive.

Questions will surely arise concerning the type of coverage that is required. Does the "customary and appropriate" insurance refer to insurance necessary to protect the assets of the estate, or is the requirement much broader? Must small business debtors provide health insurance benefits for employees if that is the industry standard? Must a small business debtor obtain insurance coverage equivalent to that of a large profitable corporation in the same industry?

Unfortunately, section 1116(5) provides no exception to the insurance requirement even if "extraordinary and compelling circumstances" are demonstrated.

Required Timely Filing of Tax Returns and Other Government Filings. Trustees and debtors in possession in small business cases must timely file tax returns and "other government filings." n23 "Other government filings" is not defined. However, given the subsection's accompanying references to the filing of tax returns and the payment of taxes entitled to administrative expense priority, the "other government filings" should include at least other tax-related schedules and documentation. n24 The language differs from the reference to "required government filings" in the debtor reporting requirements of 11 U.S.C. § 308, which like section 1116 was added to the Bankruptcy Code by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. n25 It is not clear whether "timely" filing tax returns and other government filings means that the filings must be made within the prescribed time limits, or whether trustees and small business debtors in possession may seek extensions of those limits.

Required Payment of Taxes Entitled to Administrative Expense Priority. Trustees and debtors in possession in small business cases must, subject to the prohibition in section 363(c)(2) against using cash collateral, timely pay all taxes entitled to administrative expense priority. n26 Excepted from the requirement to timely pay all taxes entitled to administrative priority are those being contested by "appropriate proceedings" being diligently prosecuted. Presumably, one of several forms of "appropriate proceeding" to contest the amount or legality of a tax is a proceeding brought pursuant to section 505(a). n27

Trustee or Debtor in Possession Must Allow Inspection of Premises, Books and Records by United States Trustee. Section 1116(7) requires the trustee or debtor in possession in a small business case to allow the United States trustee, or a designated representative of the United States trustee, to inspect the debtor's business premises, books and records. The inspections must take place "at reasonable times, after reasonable prior written notice, unless notice is waived by the debtor." The timing of visits and the inspection of books may be the subject of scheduling orders arising from status conferences pursuant to section 105(d).

The United States trustee and bankruptcy administrators already routinely visit the debtor's business location in small business chapter 11 cases. The requirement of section 1116(7) complements the United States trustee's duty, under 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(7)(B), to visit the appropriate business premises of the debtor, ascertain the state of the debtor's books and records, and verify that the debtor has filed its tax returns, if determined to be "appropriate and advisable." Although section 1116(7) requires cooperation with inspections by the United States trustee or the United States trustee's designated representative, section 1116 does not address the situation of districts in Alabama and North Carolina which have bankruptcy administrators instead of a United States trustee.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1116, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1116.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 436(a) (2005).

n2 H.R. Rep. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 101 (2005).

n3 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501 (2005).

n4 11 U.S.C. § 308, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a)(1) (2005), does not become effective until 60 days after Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and official forms are prescribed to be used to comply with section 308. Id. § 434(b).

n5 These provisions were added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 439(1)(C), (4) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6 11 U.S.C. § 101(51D), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 532(a) (2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.51D n7 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a)(1) (2005). Section 308 does not become effective until 60 days after Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and official forms are prescribed to be used to comply with section 308. Id. § 434(b).

n8 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 308.

n9 The term "append" suggests that the documents will be physically attached to the petition. Most of the small business petitions will be filed electronically, and the documents will be attached electronically.

n10 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 112, 332, 351, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 233(a), 232(a), 1102(a), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure also address privacy concerns, and additional rules will be implemented in connection with the new sections and with the E-Government Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-347 (2002).

n11 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 9001.

n12 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B)(i); 11 U.S.C. § 523(d).

n13 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(1).

n14 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(3)(A)(i).

n15 As redesignated and amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 106(d)(1), 315(b)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1007.

n17 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007.

n18 See the discussion of "extraordinary and compelling circumstances" at Collier on Bankruptcy, 1116.05[2].

n19 11 U.S.C. § 1116(4).

n20 11 U.S.C. § 308, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a)(1) (2005), does not become effective until 60 days after Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and official forms are prescribed to be used to comply with section 308. Id. § 434(b).

n21 Section 589b was added to title 28 by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 602(a) (2005).

n22 Typical types of insurance include workers' compensation, property, vehicle and general liability, as well as "key man" coverage.

n23 11 U.S.C. § 1116(6)(A).

n24 11 U.S.C. § 1116(6)(A)-(B).

n25 But see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1116.LH notes 7 & 8 and accompanying text.

n26 11 USCS § 1116(6)(B).

n27 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. TX5 (discussing section 505(a)).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

155 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Chapter 13 Cramdown

2008 Emerging Issues 1253

Collier on Chapter 13 Cramdown

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to Chapter 13 cramdown, including retention of the lien securing the allowed secured claim and the requirement that the Chapter 13 plan propose to distribute property having a value, as of the effective date of the plan, at least equal to the amount of the allowed secured claim.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Under chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code, unless the debtor surrenders the property securing the lien to the holder of an allowed secured claim provided for by the plan n1 or such holder accepts the plan, n2 a chapter 13 plan that provides for a secured claim n3 may not be assured of confirmation without a cramdown provision comporting with section 1325(a)(5)(B). n4 Chapter 13 cramdown is comprised of two essential elements, lien retention n5 and equivalent value, distributed in accordance with certain rules n6 each of which must be provided for under the chapter 13 plan itself. n7

Retention of Lien Securing Allowed Secured Claim

The first essential element in chapter 13 cramdown is that the plan provide for the retention of the lien n8 securing the allowed secured claim. n9 Provision for retention of the lien securing the allowed secured claim is to be made in the plan itself. n10 The practical effect of requiring a lien retention provision in the plan is to protect the holder of an allowed secured claim from loss occasioned by a later failure on the part of the debtor to complete the proposed plan. Absent such a provision, the lien may be eliminated upon confirmation by the vesting of all property of the estate in the debtor. n11

Cases Filed Prior to Effective Date of 2005 Amendments. In light of its purpose, it seems clear under the law in effect for cases filed before the effective date of the 2005 amendments, n12 that to meet this confirmation standard the plan need only provide that the lien will be retained until all payments attributable to the allowed secured claim have been received by the holder of that claim. Indeed, the legislative history accompanying the addition of the original 1978 lien retention language to section 1325(a)(5) states specifically:

Of course, the secured creditors' lien only secures the value of the collateral and to the extent property is distributed of a present value equal to the allowed amount of the creditor's secured claim the creditor's lien will have been satisfied in full. Thus the lien created under section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) is effective only to secure payments to the extent of the amount of the allowed secured claim. To the extent the deferred payments exceed the value of the allowed amount of the secured claim and the debtor subsequently defaults, the lien will not secure unaccrued interest represented in such deferred payments. n13

In other words, once the holder of an allowed secured claim has received all payments attributable to that claim under the plan, the lien must be satisfied and the secured creditor has no further right to special treatment. n14 If, due to claim bifurcation under section 506(a), n15 the same creditor also holds an allowed unsecured claim, that creditor, like other holders of allowed unsecured claims, has no right to a lien securing its right to payment of the unsecured portion of its claim.

Moreover, as the legislative history above also states, if the debtor defaults on plan payments the secured creditor's lien cannot increase to include other amounts, such as present value interest, which should have been paid during the plan. If the debtor has reduced the lien by partial payment, or the value of the property appreciates during the plan, the equity created thereby cannot be encumbered by additions to the lien based upon charges such as unpaid interest. Thus, if the case is subsequently converted to chapter 7 or the debtor receives a hardship discharge before completing payments on the allowed secured claim, the remaining lien should not exceed the unpaid principal amount of the allowed secured claim. n16 With respect to conversion to chapter 7, this result was codified in section 348(f), enacted by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994. n17 For cases filed prior to the effective date of the 2005 amendments, that section provides that upon conversion, valuations of property and of allowed secured claims in the chapter 13 case apply in the converted case and allowed secured claims are reduced to the extent they have been paid in accordance with a chapter 13 plan. n18

Cases Filed after Effective Date of 2005 Amendments. The 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code added new language to section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i)(I), providing that to meet the lien retention standard the plan must permit the holder of an allowed secured claim to retain its lien until the earlier of the payment of the underlying debt determined under nonbankruptcy law or a discharge under section 1328. The new language also states that the plan must provide that if the case is dismissed or converted without completion of the plan, the lien will be retained to the extent recognized by applicable nonbankruptcy law. n19

This amendment is apparently an attempt to overrule the results of cases under the prior language that, as discussed above, n20 required elimination of the creditor's lien when the allowed secured claim had been paid. For debtors who cannot complete a plan but who have completely paid an allowed secured claim, it makes more attractive the options of a hardship discharge or a modification that allows plan completion, so that a discharge is entered and the lien can be eliminated. It is important to note that the fact that a lien is retained to the extent recognized by applicable nonbankruptcy law if the case is converted does not affect the amount that may be necessary to redeem the property in a chapter 7 case. That amount is determined by section 722. n21

A lien on substitute or replacement collateral for that securing the claim at the outset will not meet this confirmation test n22 without the consent of the holder of the claim. n23 Thus, a plan proposing to transfer the lien securing the allowed secured claim to other collateral is not entitled to confirmation without the acceptance of the holder of the claim. n24 Nor may a plan provide for the sale of part of the property securing a claim to obtain funds to pay other creditors without the claim holder's acceptance. n25 However, a chapter 13 plan may provide for the distribution of property in payment of an allowed claim secured by the lien retained by the holder n26 if the lien itself is not replaced; in that case, the claim is merely reduced to the extent of the property distributed. A chapter 13 debtor may also elect not to provide for an allowed secured claim under the plan n27 so that substitute or replacement collateral may be provided as adequate protection n28 outside the plan for collateral that the debtor will use, sell or lease. n29

Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) assures the holder of an allowed secured claim that its lien cannot be directly affected by a chapter 13 plan without its consent, although various indirect deleterious effects, resulting from depreciation, deterioration, damage, or loss may nonetheless occur during the extension period. But section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) does not require that a chapter 13 plan guarantee protection to the holder of an allowed secured claim against whatever diminution in value may result to the property securing the allowed secured claim in which the lien is retained; it merely requires a provision in the plan for the retention of the lien. n30 Furthermore, the plan may provide that the lien shall be eliminated upon entry of a discharge. n31

Equivalent Value

In addition to providing for retention of the lien securing an allowed secured claim, n32 chapter 13 cramdown requires that the chapter 13 plan propose to distribute property having a value, as of the effective date of the plan, at least equal to the amount of the allowed secured claim. n33 However, there is no prohibition under chapter 13 against a proposal to pay the holder of an allowed secured claim more than the amount of the allowed secured claim, provided the holders of allowed unsecured claims are not thereby deprived of any portion of the liquidation value of their claims as required under subsection 1325(a)(4). n34

In the language of the Code, it must be established that the value, as of the effective date of the plan, of property to be distributed under the plan on account of such [allowed secured] claim is not less than the allowed amount of such claim. n35 In Rake v. Wade, n36 the Supreme Court held that present value also had to be provided when a default on a claim is cured through a plan pursuant to section 1322(b)(5). In such cases, however, the Court held that the arrearage being cured is a distinct claim, and that the present value of the arrears is the amount made payable under section 1325(a)(5). n37 The result in Rake was overruled by a new section 1322(e), enacted by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n38 at least with respect to agreements entered into after the enactment of that Act. n39 Section 1322(e) provides that in a cure situation, a creditor shall receive only the interest and fees provided for in the agreement and permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law. n40

Effective Date of Plan as Valuation Date. The effective date of the plan will ordinarily be provided for by the plan, and may be the date as of which the order confirming the chapter 13 plan becomes final. n41 However, the court will normally determine present value as of the date of the hearing on confirmation held under section 1324, because, as a practical matter, confirmation will almost always follow within a brief time after the issues raised under section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) are resolved.

Property to Be Distributed under the Plan. The phrase property to be distributed under the plan plainly and significantly indicates that cramdown may be accomplished in a chapter 13 plan merely by proposing to distribute property during the course of the extension period. The property may be property of the estate in existence at the date of confirmation, either exempt property n42 or other property of the estate, n43 or deferred cash payments representing future earnings or income of the chapter 13 debtor, provided the present dollar value at confirmation n44 of the property to be distributed in the future equals the amount of the allowed secured claim. n45

Property is not a defined term, but it is altogether unrestricted in scope and unquestionably encompasses any and all kinds of property of the estate n46 and property of the debtor n47 to be distributed under the plan. n48 The phrase is not limited in its application to property in existence at the date of confirmation, n49 but may and usually will include deferred payments from future earnings or income of the debtor. n50 The crucial import of the phrase property to be distributed under the plan lies in its connotation of permission to satisfy allowed secured claims through future distributions of property of equivalent present value.

Property to Be Distributed in Equal Monthly Payments. Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(I), enacted in 2005, n51 provides that if property to be distributed to the holder of an allowed secured claim is to be in the form of periodic payments, such payments shall be in equal monthly amounts. It is important to note that this provision refers to the distributions to the holder of the allowed secured claim and not to the debtor's plan payments. As long as the plan provides that the trustee's distributions to the holder of the allowed secured claim be in equal monthly amounts, the debtor's plan payments need not be. There also does not seem to be any requirement that the equal monthly amounts extend throughout the plan. Indeed, because the debtor's payments must also be sufficient to provide adequate protection, and therefore greater than the amount necessary for equal payments throughout the plan, it may be mathematically impossible both to provide adequate protection and to make equal payments throughout the plan. n52 A debtor may, for example, provide for equal monthly amounts to be distributed to a particular secured creditor for the first 24 months of a 36-month plan or, if the requirement of providing adequate protection is met, n53 the last 24 months of a 36-month plan. Because section 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(I) only applies if the plan provides for periodic payments, it also does not preclude a plan providing for a single lump sum payment to a creditor. The requirement also does not apply to payments made to cure a default on a long term debt pursuant to section 1322(b)(5). n54

Payments Must Be Sufficient to Provide Adequate Protection. Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(II), also enacted in 2005, n55 simply codifies once more the right of the holder of an allowed secured claim to receive payments during the plan that are sufficient to provide adequate protection to the creditor's interest in the property, as was already provided by section 362 and section 363. n56 For the period prior to plan confirmation, section 1326(a)(1)(C), enacted at the same time, similarly provides for payments sufficient to provide adequate protection, to be made directly to the creditor unless the court orders otherwise. n57

The fact that provision of adequate protection has now been explicitly included in the standards for plan confirmation further buttresses those cases which have held that a creditor may not, after confirmation, seek relief from the stay based on a lack of adequate protection because the issue of adequate protection should have been raised before confirmation and confirmation of the plan is res judicata on the issue of adequate protection. n58

Valuation of Property to Be Distributed under the Plan. The valuation conducted by the court under section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) is meant to determine whether the property to be distributed under the plan n59 is at least equal in value to the amount of the allowed secured claim. n60 In most chapter 13 cases the property to be distributed under the plan will consist of deferred cash payments derived from the earnings or other future income of the chapter 13 debtor during the course of the extension period.

Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) is phrased in language virtually identical with section 1325(a)(4), the best interests test applicable in respect to allowed unsecured claims. n61 Both require that the court ascertain the value, as of the effective date of the plan, of property to be distributed under the plan on account of [the] claim. n62 Consequently, although the referent differs, the valuation of property proposed to be distributed under the plan for cramdown purposes is essentially the same as that required in the application of the best interests test in relation to unsecured claims under section 1325(a)(4). n63

Timing of Valuation. The value of property to be distributed under the plan is to be ascertained as of the effective date of the plan. n64 As a practical matter, the court will in fact ascertain present value n65 as of the date of the hearing on confirmation held under section 1324. n66 However, if no party objects to the plan and the plan is confirmed, the payment of interest is governed by the terms of the confirmed plan and cannot later be challenged. n67

Present Value Determination. Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) requires the court to determine the value of property to be distributed under the plan, as of the effective date of the plan. n68 In other words, the court must ascertain the then present value of the property to be distributed. In order to implement section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) the court must capitalize deferred payments by converting the deferred payments proposed to be distributed under the chapter 13 plan into an equivalent capital sum as of the effective date of the plan. Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii), cannot be faithfully implemented simply by comparing the sum total of all deferred payments proposed by the plan with the amount of the allowed secured claim. The court must arrive at an appropriate discount factor so as to fairly discount value proposed to be given in the future on account of the allowed secured claim. n69

The simplest method of equating the present value of deferred future payments with the amount of the allowed secured claim is to propose interest payments over and above the face amount of the allowed secured claim at whatever interest rate is equivalent to the discount rate selected by the court or agreed upon by the parties. Accordingly, in addition to deferred principal payments aggregating the face amount of the allowed secured claim, n70 a chapter 13 plan need only propose to pay interest on the face amount of the allowed secured claim at the appropriate discount rate over the course of the payment extension period.

The purpose of the present value requirement is to place the holder of an allowed secured claim in the same position economically as if the debtor exercised the option n71 of surrendering the collateral. Through the payment of interest, the creditor is compensated for the delay in receiving the amount of the allowed secured claim, which would be received in full immediately upon confirmation if the collateral were liquidated.

For many years the courts debated the appropriate discount or interest rate to accomplish this purpose, with some courts adopting a formula approach based on treasury bills or some other market index n72 and others holding that the pre-bankruptcy contract rate should be used absent evidence that it was not appropriate. n73 The Supreme Court resolved the issue in Till v. SCS Credit Corp., n74 holding that a formula approach based upon the prime rate of interest best carried out the intentions of Congress. n75

The Court reversed a decision of the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit that had held that the pre-bankruptcy contract rate should be the presumptive rate based on the theory that chapter 13 imposed a coerced loan on the secured creditor. The Supreme Court found that approaches based on such theories imposed significant evidentiary costs, requiring a bankruptcy court to consider evidence about credit markets, creditors' costs, creditors' financial circumstances and creditors' lending practices. n76 The Court also found that this approach overcompensated creditors to the extent it would yield a rate that included lenders' transaction costs and profits. The Court pointed out that such approaches could yield different rates for different lenders to the same debtors who were similarly situated in all relevant respects. n77

In contrast, the Court found that the formula approach entails a straightforward, familiar, and objective inquiry, and minimizes the need for potentially costly additional evidentiary proceedings. n78 The use of a formula, in which a small risk factor is added to the prevailing prime rate of interest depends only on the state of financial markets, the circumstances of the bankruptcy estate, and the characteristics of the loan, not on the creditor's circumstances or its prior interactions with the debtor. n79 The evidentiary burden of showing the appropriate risk factor that should be added is placed squarely on the creditors, who are likely to have readier access to any information absent from the debtor's filing (such as evidence about the liquidity of the collateral market.) n80

The Court did not decide the proper scale for the risk adjustment factor to be added to the prime rate, though it did note that other courts had approved adjustments of 1 percent to 3 percent, n81 and seemed to suggest that large adjustments would not be appropriate because a plan cannot be confirmed unless the bankruptcy court finds it is feasible. If the court determines that the likelihood of default is so high as to necessitate an eye-popping interest rate, the plan probably should not be confirmed. n82 The Court identified four relevant factors to be considered: (1) the probability of plan failure; (2) the rate of collateral depreciation; (3) the liquidity of the collateral market; and (4) the administrative expenses of enforcement. n83

The risk factor in such a calculation need not be large for several other reasons as well. First, the creditor's main protection against risk comes from its right to retain its lien, n84 and from its right to seek dismissal of the case in the event of a material default in payments, n85 which would restore the creditor's pre-bankruptcy remedies. Other protections include the requirement the trustee's monitoring of the case and the availability of wage deduction orders. n86 Indeed, the Court noted in Till that high contract rates cannot be assumed to reflect the true risk of a transaction. n87

The net effect of section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) is to accord allowed secured claims under a chapter 13 plan the identical treatment given to recourse creditors under section 1111(b)(1), except that the chapter 13 plan may propose distribution of other property as well as deferred cash payments. n88 But the lien retained by virtue of section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i)(I) only secures deferred payments under the plan to the extent of the allowed secured claim. n89 Therefore, interest payments over and above deferred payments aggregating the full amount of the allowed secured claim are not secured by the lien retained by the holder under section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i)(I). n90

Amount of Allowed Secured Claim. Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) requires that the value of property to be distributed under the plan be not less than the amount of the allowed secured claim. n91 The amount of the allowed secured claim is determined in accordance with the provisions of subsections 506(a) and (b). n92 Section 506(a) imposes a valuation procedure for the determination of the status of allowed secured claims which reflects the extent to which an allowed claim is either undersecured or oversecured, based on a determination by the court as to whether the property encumbered by the lien has a dollar value that is greater or smaller than the dollar amount of the allowed claim. Absent a specific provision in a confirmed plan providing otherwise, this valuation procedure may take place either before or after confirmation of the plan. n93 Courts have differed regarding whether a proceeding separate from the confirmation hearing on a plan that assigns a value to an allowed secured claim is required for a secured claim to be bifurcated. n94

The allowed claim is deemed an allowed secured claim to the extent of the value of the estate's interest in the collateral and an allowed unsecured claim to the extent that the amount of the allowed claim exceeds the value of that interest. n95 In determining value of assets subject to a lien of the Internal Revenue Service, it is not clear whether the value of assets exempt from levy under the Internal Revenue Code should be included. n96

The Supreme Court addressed the issue of determining valuation for purposes of section 1325(a)(5) in Associates Commercial Corp. v. Rash. n97 Looking to the language of section 506(a), which states that value shall be determined in light of the purpose of the valuation and of the proposed disposition and use of such property, the Court held that the allowed secured claim to be paid pursuant to section 1325(a)(5)(B) must be based upon the cost the debtor would incur to obtain a like asset for the same proposed use. n98

The Court made clear that it was not holding that this replacement value was the retail value of the property. It left the determination of replacement value to the bankruptcy courts, based on the evidence presented, but pointed out that, in retaining a vehicle, the debtor was not receiving the value of items such as warranties, inventory storage, and reconditioning which are normally part of a retail price. n99 Even when a vehicle is sold by a dealer as is, some of these items are included. Instead, the Court stated that the value must be based upon the price a willing buyer would pay a willing seller for the property, n100 suggesting that the more relevant market to consult would be the market of private sales between individuals, in which items such as warranties, inventory storage, and reconditioning are not factors. n101 Alternatively, auto auctions may indicate a market price for vehicles sold without those items. In light of the high costs of presenting proof on these issues, many courts have continued to use standard formulas such as the average of the retail and wholesale values of a vehicle, as a presumptive starting point in the valuation process. n102 With respect to other types of personal property, the most relevant market might be that of yard sales or garage sales populated by willing buyers and sellers.

The 2005 amendments to section 506(a) n103 codify this approach, clarifying that, as the Supreme Court held, the value of personal property under section 506(a) is the replacement value of the property, without deduction of costs of sale or marketing. n104 Section 506(a)(2), as amended, provides that with respect to property acquired for personal, family, or household purposes, replacement value shall mean the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind, considering the age and condition of the property, which like the Rash decision would have to take into account what the debtor is not receiving, such as reconditioning and warranties.

Although not all courts are in agreement on this point, the collateral should probably be valued as of the effective date of the plan. n105 The 2005 amendments clarify this issue as well. Section 506(a)(2) provides that the valuation of property acquired for personal, family, or household purposes should consider the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined, n106 which would normally be the date of the confirmation hearing.

When the value of the property securing the lien exceeds the amount of the allowed claim, the allowed secured claim may include interest and other reasonable fees, charges, and expenses provided for in the contract between the parties or a state statute, to the extent permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law. n107 Interest, but not other fees, charges and expenses, may be included in an oversecured claim even if the lien securing the claim is nonconsensual. n108 In either case, section 506(b) permits such interest to run only to the date the plan is confirmed, and does not require that interest be calculated at the contract rate. n109

In Rake v. Wade, n110 the United States Supreme Court held that section 1325(a)(5) of the Code entitles holders of oversecured claims to postconfirmation interest on arrearages and other charges paid under a chapter 13 plan, even if the terms of the underlying promissory note did not provide for such interest. The Court found that while section 1322(b)(2) prohibits debtors from modifying the rights of home mortgage holders, the arrearages constituted a distinct claim which was provided for by the plan and, therefore, were subject to interest payments under the plain language of section 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii). The result in Rake was overruled by Congress through a new section 1322(e) enacted under the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994. n111 Section 1322(e) provides that in a cure situation, a creditor will receive only the interest and fees provided for in the agreement and permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law. n112

However, if the claim is a claim secured solely by a security interest in the debtor's principal residence, the debtor's plan may not in some cases modify the rights of the holder of the claim. If a mortgage is not excepted from the operation of section 1322(b)(2) by section 1322(c)(2), n113 the debtor may not provide for the mortgage by paying the present value of the allowed secured claim and treating the allowed unsecured claim as unsecured. n114 In such a case, even if the value of the collateral is less than the amount of the claim, the plan may not modify the claim to provide for less than full payment of the claim according to its terms, at least if some portion of the claim is secured. n115 However, if the claim is wholly unsecured, the rationale of Nobelman dictates that it may be modified, because the creditor is not the holder of an allowed secured claim. n116

In addition, such a claim may be modified to the extent it is cured pursuant to section 1322(b)(5). n117 In such a case, the Supreme Court held in Rake v. Wade, n118 the arrearages are a distinct claim, and it is to that claim which the present value test of section 1325(a)(5) pertains. n119

For a complete discussion of Code section 1325, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(C); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[4] (Matthew Bender).

n2 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(A); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[2] (Matthew Bender).

n3 Section 1325(a)(5) applies only to secured claims provided for in plan. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[1][b] (Matthew Bender); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.09[4] (Matthew Bender).

n4 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5 See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i); see Retention of Lien Securing Allowed Secured Claim infra.

n6 See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii), (iii), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Equivalent Value infra.

n7 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8 See 11 U.S.C. § 101; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.12[15] (Matthew Bender).

n9 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10 Id.

n11 11 U.S.C. § 1327(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.03 (Matthew Bender).

n12 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13 124 Cong. Rec. H11,107 (Sept. 28, 1978) (remarks of Rep. Edwards); 124 Cong. Rec. S17,424 (remarks of Sen. DeConcini) (October 6, 1978).

n14 IRS v. Campbell, 180 B.R. 686, 33 C.B.C.2d 931 (M.D. Fla. 1993) (debtors were entitled to release of IRS lien upon payment of allowed secured claim through plan, notwithstanding fact that unsecured priority claim had not yet been paid); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Lee (In re Lee), 162 B.R. 217, 30 C.B.C.2d 863 (D. Minn. 1993) (plan could provide that property would vest in debtors upon full payment of allowed secured claim); Homeowners Funding Co. v. Skinner, 129 B.R. 60 (E.D.N.C. 1991); In re Rheame, 50 C.B.C.2d 1085, 296 B.R. 313 (Bankr. D. Vt. 2003) (citing First Branson Nat'l Bank v. Kerwin (In re Kerwin), 996 F.2d 552 (2d Cir. 1993)).

n15 11 U.S.C. § 506(a); see Amount of Allowed Secured Claim infra.

n16 See In re Stoddard, 167 B.R. 98 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994) (upon conversion to chapter 7 after full payment of allowed secured claim in chapter 13, debtor could redeem property from lien pursuant to section 722 without further payment to creditor); In re Hargis, 103 B.R. 912 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1989) (when case was converted to chapter 7 after allowed secured claim had been paid in full through plan, lien did not spring back into existence).

n17 Pub. L. No. 103-394.

n18 11 U.S.C. § 348(f) was amended in this regard by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 348.07[4] (Matthew Bender).

n19 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i)(II), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n20 See Cases Filed Prior to Effective Date of 2005 Amendments supra.

n21 11 U.S.C. § 722, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 722 (Matthew Bender).

n22 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n23 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(A); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[2] (Matthew Bender).

n24 11 U.S.C. §§ 1325(a)(5)(A), (B)(i); cf. In re Pence, 905 F.2d 1107 (7th Cir. 1990) (if no objection to plan providing replacement lien is filed, plan may be confirmed).

n25 In re Hink, 81 B.R. 489 (Bankr. W.D. Ark. 1987).

n26 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Property to be Distributed under the Plan infra.

n27 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.06[1] (Matthew Bender).

n28 See 11 U.S.C. § 361(2). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 361 (Matthew Bender).

n29 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 363, 1303; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1303.03 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 363 was amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 363 (Matthew Bender).

n30 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n31 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i)(I)(bb).

n32 See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i); see Retention of Lien Securing Allowed Secured Claim supra.

n33 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n34 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.05 (Matthew Bender). Compare Bankruptcy Act §§ 646(1), 656(a)(2), with former Bankruptcy Code §§ 1322(a)(3), (b)(1), 1325(a)(4).

n35 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n36 508 U.S. 464, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 28 C.B.C.2d 983 (1993).

n37 508 U.S. 464, 474, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 2193, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 434, 28 C.B.C.2d 983, 990.

n38 Pub. L. No. 103-394 (effective, as regards section 1322(e), with respect to agreements entered into after October 22, 1994).

n39 See Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 702(b)(2)(D) (1994).

n40 11 U.S.C. § 1322(e); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.18 (Matthew Bender).

n41 See Klee, All You Ever Wanted to Know About Cram Down under the New Bankruptcy Code, 53 Am. Bankr. L.J. 133, 137 n.24 (1979).

n42 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 522, 541; 1300.81, 1300.90 and 1306.02[1] (Matthew Bender); see also H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 368 (1977).

n43 See 11 U.S.C. § 1306(a); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1306.02 (Matthew Bender).

n44 See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Present Value Determination infra.

n45 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n46 11 U.S.C. §§ 522, 541, 1306, 1322(a)(1), (b)(8); In re Donahue, 231 B.R. 865 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1998); see also First Brandon Nat'l Bank v. Kerwin (In re Kerwin), 996 F.2d 552, 29 C.B.C.2d 82 (2d Cir. 1993) (chapter 12 debtor could meet identical requirement under section 1225(b)(1)(A) by transferring to creditor portion of property securing claim if that portion had value equal to creditor's claim); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.81, 1300.90, 1306.02[1], 1322.02, 1322.12 (Matthew Bender). But see Williams v. Tower Loan of Miss., Inc. (In re Williams), 168 F.3d 845 (5th Cir. 1999) (transfer of a portion of property securing debt to pay allowed secured claim not permitted when creditor was undersecured and transfer of property would not pay debt in full).

n47 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 522, 541, 1306, 1322(a)(1), (b)(8); First Brandon Nat'l Bank v. Kerwin (In re Kerwin), 996 F.2d 552, 29 C.B.C.2d 82 (2d Cir. 1993) (chapter 12 debtor could meet identical requirement under section 1225(b)(1)(A) by transferring to creditor portion of property securing claim if that portion had value equal to creditor's claim); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.81, 1300.90, 1306.02[1], 1322.02 and 1322.12 (Matthew Bender).

n48 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n49 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n50 See 11 U.S.C. § 1322(a)(1); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.02 (Matthew Bender); cf. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(A)(i)(II).

n51 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n52 In re DeSardi, 340 B.R. 790 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2006).

n53 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(II), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Equivalent Value; § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) infra.

n54 In re Davis, 56 C.B.C.2d 322, 343 B.R. 326 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006) (relying upon enactment of 11 U.S.C. § 1322(e) to make section 1325(a)(5) inapplicable to cure of long-term debt).

n55 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(II), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Equivalent Value; § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii) infra.

n56 11 U.S.C. §§ 362, 363, as both were amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 and ch. 363 (Matthew Bender).

n57 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1326 (Matthew Bender).

n58 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.02[1][c] (Matthew Bender).

n59 See Property to Be Distributed under the Plan supra.

n60 See 11 U.S.C. § 506(a), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.73[1][i] (Matthew Bender).

n61 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.05 (Matthew Bender).

n62 See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(4), (5)(B)(ii).

n63 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

n64 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Effective Date of Plan as Valuation Date supra.

n65 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Effective Date of Plan as Valuation Date supra.

n66 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Effective Date of Plan as Valuation Date supra; see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1324.02 (Matthew Bender).

n67 In re Szostek, 886 F.2d 1405 (3d Cir. 1989); In re Vincent, 252 B.R. 91 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 2000) (stating requested amount of interest in proof of claim does not constitute objection sufficient to contest interest rate at confirmation).

n68 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii); see Effective Date of Plan as Valuation Date supra.

n69 But see Baxter v. Watson (In re Watson), 292 B.R. 441 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2003) (interest may be reduced under Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act § 206, now § 207 of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, 50 U.S.C. App. § 527).

n70 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 414 (1977).

n71 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(C); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[4] (Matthew Bender).

n72 E.g., GMAC v. Valenti (In re Valenti), 105 F.3d 55 (2d Cir. 1997).

n73 E.g., Green Tree Fin. Servicing Corp. v. Smithwick (In re Smithwick), 121 F.3d 211, 38 C.B.C.2d 1005 (5th Cir. 1997).

n74 541 U.S. 465, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 51 C.B.C.2d 643 (2004).

n75 Although no opinion commanded a majority of five justices, the plurality opinion of Justice Stevens, speaking for four justices entered a judgment that reversed the decision below and ordered further proceedings consistent with that plurality opinion. Justice Thomas, concurred in that judgment but, based upon the language of the statute, expressed the view that the appropriate rate should be lower, including no amount to compensate the creditor for risk. See Bank of Montreal v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors (In re American Homepatient, Inc.), 420 F.3d 559, 566 (6th Cir. 2005) (Till treated as decision of the Court).

n76 541 U.S. 465, 477, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1960, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 799.

n77 Id.

n78 541 U.S. 465, 479, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1961, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 800.

n79 Id.

n80 541 U.S. 465, 479, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1961, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 800 (citation omitted).

n81 541 U.S. 465, 480, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1962, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 801.

n82 Id.

n83 541 U.S. 465, 480-81, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1964, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 803.

n84 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(i); see Retention of Lien Securing Allowed Secured Claim infra.

n85 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(6); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.04[6] (Matthew Bender).

n86 In re Knight, 254 B.R. 227 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 2000).

n87 See 541 U.S. 465, 475, 124 S. Ct. 1951, 1959 note 12, 158 L. Ed. 2d 787, 798 note 12 (noting reduction of risk due to fact that obligor becomes court-supervised estate).

n88 See 124 Cong. Rec. H11,107 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978).

n89 See Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Stevens (In re Stevens), 130 F.3d 1027 (11th Cir. 1997) (creditor was entitled to receive insurance compensating for the destruction of collateral only to the extent of the balance of its allowed secured claim); In re Arkell, 165 B.R. 432 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1994); In re McDade, 148 B.R. 42 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1992).

n90 See 124 Cong. Rec. H11,107 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978).

n91 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(ii).

n92 11 U.S.C. § 506(a)(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.73 (Matthew Bender).. See generally ch. 506 supra.

n93 In re Lewis, 875 F.2d 53 (3d Cir. 1989).

n94 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1327.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n95 11 U.S.C. § 506(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.73[1] (Matthew Bender). When community property that is property of the estate pursuant to section 541(a)(2) is encumbered by a lien, the determination of whether there is equity in the property is not affected by the fact that the nondebtor may hold a community property interest in the property. Because the entirety of the community property passes to the estate, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.13 (Matthew Bender), the elimination of a completely unsecured lien, or the reduction of the amount of a partially secured lien, affects the entire property, including the nondebtor spouse's community property interest therein. Highland Federal Bank v. Maynard (In re Maynard), 264 B.R. 209 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2001). In valuing real estate, the value of rental income should not be added because it is already taken into account in the fair market value of the property. Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corp. v. Thompson (In re Thompson), 352 F.3d 519 (2d Cir. 2003).

n96 See United States v. Barbier, 896 F.2d 377 (9th Cir. 1990), rev'g 84 B.R. 190 (D. Nev. 1988).

n97 520 U.S. 953, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 37 C.B.C.2d 744 (1997).

n98 See also Ardmor Vending Co. v. Kim (In re Kim), 130 F.3d 863 (9th Cir. 1997) (value of equipment must be determined based on intended continued use of property in debtor's business); Taffi v. United States (In re Taffi), 96 F.3d 1190 (9th Cir. 1996) (en banc), cert denied, 521 U.S. 1103, 117 S. Ct. 2478, 138 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1997) (hypothetical costs of sale not deducted if debtor plans to retain property).

n99 520 U.S. 953, 965 n.6, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1886 n.6, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 160 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 751 n.6 (1997).

n100 520 U.S. 953, 959 n.2, 117 S. Ct. 1879, 1884 n.2, 138 L. Ed. 2d 148, 156 n.6, 37 C.B.C.2d 744, 747 n.2 (1997).

n101 See In re McElroy, 210 B.R. 833 (Bankr. D. Or. 1997) (discussing proof of value after Rash).

n102 E.g., First Merit N.A. v. Getz (In re Getz), 242 B.R. 916 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 2000) (in absence of other evidence, finding that value was average of bluebook wholesale and retail values was not clearly erroneous); In re Lyles, 226 B.R. 854 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1998); In re Younger, 216 B.R. 649 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1998).

n103 11 U.S.C. § 506(a), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n104 H.R. Rep. No. 31, 109th Cong. 1st Sess., 17 (2005).

n105 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.02 (Matthew Bender). But see In re Hall, 24 C.B.C.2d 718, 118 B.R. 671 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1990) (valuation to occur as of commencement of the case); GMAC v. Chapman (In re Chapman), 135 B.R. 11 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1990) (date of filing of chapter 13 plan should be valuation date).

n106 11 U.S.C. § 506(a)(2), as enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n107 11 U.S.C. § 506(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.73[2] (Matthew Bender); see also In re Wilder, 22 B.R. 294 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982); In re Roberts, 6 C.B.C.2d 892, 20 B.R. 914 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1982).

n108 United States v. Ron Pair Enters., Inc., 489 U.S. 235, 109 S. Ct. 1026, 103 L. Ed. 2d 290, 20 C.B.C.2d 267 (1989).

n109 Key Bank N.A. v. Milham (In re Milham), 141 F.3d 420 (2d Cir.), cert denied, 525 U.S. 872, 119 S. Ct. 169, 142 L. Ed. 2d 138 (1998).

n110 508 U.S. 464, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 28 C.B.C.2d 983 (1993).

n111 Pub. L. No. 103-394 (effective with respect to agreements entered into after October 22, 1994).

n112 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.18 (Matthew Bender).

n113 11 U.S.C. § 1322(c)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.16 (Matthew Bender).

n114 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(2); Nobelman v. American Sav. Bank, 508 U.S. 324, 113 S. Ct. 2106, 124 L. Ed. 2d 228, 28 C.B.C.2d 977 (1993); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.06[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n115 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(2); Nobelman v. American Sav. Bank, 508 U.S. 324, 113 S. Ct. 2106, 124 L. Ed. 2d 228, 28 C.B.C.2d 977 (1993); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.06[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n116 Zimmer v. PSB Lending Corp. (In re Zimmer), 313 F.3d 1220 (9th Cir. 2002); Lane v. Western Interstate Bancorp (In re Lane), 280 F.3d 663, 47 C.B.C.2d 1320 (6th Cir. 2002); Pond v. Farm Specialist Realty (In re Pond), 252 F.3d 122 (2d Cir. 2001); Tanner v. FirstPlus Fin., Inc. (In re Tanner), 217 F.3d 1357 (11th Cir. 2000); Bartee v. Tara Colony Homeowners Ass'n (In re Bartee), 212 F.3d 277 (5th Cir. 2000); McDonald v. Master Fin., Inc. (In re McDonald), 205 F.3d 606 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 822, 121 S. Ct. 66, 148 L. Ed. 2d 31 (2000); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.06[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n117 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.09 (Matthew Bender).

n118 508 U.S. 464, 113 S. Ct. 2187, 124 L. Ed. 2d 424, 28 C.B.C.2d 983 (1993).

n119 The result in Rake was overruled by Congress through a new section 1322(e) enacted under the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (effective with respect to agreements entered into after October 22, 1994). Section 1322(e) provides that in a cure situation, a creditor will receive only the interest and fees provided for in the agreement and permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.18 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

156 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Commencement of Ch 13 Plan Payments

2008 Emerging Issues 1254

Collier on Commencement of Ch 13 Plan Payments

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: Before the passage of the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, there was a good deal of variation among bankruptcy courts as to when chapter 13 plan payments by debtors were to begin. Congress added to section 1326 of the Code subsection (a), which generally requires plan payments to begin within 30 days of the filing of the plan. As discussed in this Emerging Issues Analysis, provisions were significantly amended in 2005.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Before the passage of the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, n1 there was a good deal of variation among bankruptcy courts as to when chapter 13 plan payments by debtors were to begin. Many courts, by standing order or local rule, required commencement of payments immediately after the filing of a case. n2 Others held that no payments could be required until the plan was confirmed. n3 In those latter jurisdictions, this sometimes led to considerable delay in distributions to creditors. When confirmation was contested or delayed, the debtor did not begin making payments to the trustee for months or even years.

Congress also feared that some chapter 13 plans were being jeopardized by debtors becoming accustomed to higher living expenses when they were relieved of prior debt payments and not yet responsible for plan payments. n4 Trustees reported that when plan payments began promptly they had a greater chance of success. n5

Therefore, Congress added to section 1326 of the Code subsection (a), n6 which generally requires plan payments to begin within 30 days of the filing of the plan. n7 As discussed immediately below, this provision was significantly amended in 2005.

Deadline for Commencement of Payments

Section 1326(a)(1) was amended by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code n8 to provide that payments to the trustee must begin not later than 30 days after the filing of the plan or the order for relief, whichever is earlier. Because it is hard to imagine a circumstance in which a plan would be filed before the order for relief, which is normally the petition, n9 but could also be the conversion of a case from another chapter, n10 this amendment effectively requires payments to commence within 30 days after the petition or conversion to chapter 13. Section 1326(a)(1) was also amended at the same time to require payments, governed by the same deadline, to lessors of personal property and certain secured creditors, as discussed below. n11

Payments to the Trustee. Under subsection 1326(a)(1)(A), as amended and redesignated in 2005, n12 unless the court orders otherwise, the debtor must commence making payments to the chapter 13 trustee proposed by a plan within 30 days after the order for relief. This general rule will result in most plan payments beginning 30 days after the filing of a chapter 13 case, or the conversion of a case to chapter 13.

The court may extend the deadline for the commencement of plan payments in a particular case. Such an order is appropriate when the debtor is suffering a temporary drop in income or unusual expenses that are not likely to continue, although almost the same result could be achieved by the debtor's filing of a plan that simply provided for minimal payments at the beginning of the plan. An order would also be necessary when plan payments were to come from the liquidation of property, n13 which might take longer than 30 days or might have to await confirmation of the plan.

The failure to commence plan payments when required can be cause for dismissal or conversion of the chapter 13 case under section 1307(c)(4). n14 However, as in other situations in which the court may dismiss or convert the case under section 1307(c), the court has the discretion to excuse the failure to commence plan payments on time in appropriate circumstances. n15

Payments to Personal Property Lessors. Section 1326(a)(1)(B), added in 2005, n16 requires a chapter 13 debtor to make payment scheduled in a personal property lease directly to the lessor for that portion of the obligation that becomes due after the order for relief. These payments are to commence within the same 30 days after the filing of the plan or the order for relief, whichever is earlier. n17 Plan payments are to be reduced by the amount of such payments and the trustee is to be provided evidence of the payments, including the amounts and dates of the payments. n18

For leases that a debtor intends to assume, it has long been the practice to make current payments to the lessor after a chapter 13 petition is filed and to cure any default, as provided in section 365, through plan payments. n19 Therefore, for such leases, the practice will not be substantially changed. For leases the debtor intends to reject, the debtor may wish to continue lease payments to keep open the option of assumption, or the debtor may fail to comply with section 1326(a)(1)(B). If the lease is not assumed in the confirmed plan, it is deemed rejected as of the conclusion of the confirmation hearing and the stays under section 362 and section 1301 are automatically terminated. n20

The remedy for failure to make current lease payments required by section 1326(a)(1)(B) is likely to be relief from the automatic stay, the same remedy as exists under current law for failure to make current lease payments. However, a lessor will still have to file a motion for relief from the stay if payments have not been made, and the court may well allow a debtor to cure such a default in payments. Rather than filing such a motion, the lessor may decide to await plan confirmation if the plan does not propose to assume the lease, because the automatic termination of the stay upon confirmation will usually take place in about the same amount of time as it would take to file a motion for relief from the stay and obtain a hearing on the motion. A failure to make payments required by section 1326 is grounds for dismissal, n21 but the lessor will usually prefer stay relief and the trustee has no reason to seek dismissal of an otherwise viable plan.

Adequate Protection Payments. Section 1326(a)(1)(C), enacted in 2005, n22 requires a chapter 13 debtor to make adequate protection payments directly to a creditor holding an allowed claim secured by personal property to the extent it is attributable to the purchase of such property by the debtor for that portion of the obligation that becomes due after the order for relief. These payments are to commence within 30 days after the filing of the plan or the order for relief, whichever is earlier. n23 Plan payments are to be reduced by the amount of such payments and the trustee is to be provided evidence of the payments, including the amounts and dates of the payments. n24

Adequate protection payments under section 1326(a)(1)(C) need only be provided for the portion of claim that becomes due after the order for relief. Does this mean that no adequate protection needs to be provided for any arrears portion of claim? Adequate protection payments also need be made only to the extent the obligation is purchase-money and the property was purchased by the debtor. If property was originally titled in the name of another, such as a nondebtor spouse, it probably was not purchased by the debtor. And adequate protection payments must be provided only to a creditor that holds an allowed claim, which suggests they are not necessary until the creditor files a proof of claim. n25 If these provisions are deemed the extent to which some creditors are entitled to adequate protection, they may in some cases override stronger protections that creditors had under prior law.

The adequate protection provision was obviously designed primarily for car lenders. As a practical matter, although it technically applies to appliance and furniture creditors, it is unlikely they will do much to enforce these provisions because the adequate protection amounts would be minimal and these creditors typically do not desire return of the collateral if they can collect anything at all on their claims.

The amount of adequate protection payments presumably will initially be set by the debtor and be based on the rate of the collateral's depreciation. n26 This can be calculated for a vehicle by looking at the change in industry guide values over the previous few months. However, if a claim is substantially oversecured, and will remain oversecured, there should be no need for adequate protection payments, or they should be nominal. The amount of payments can be modified by order of the court pending confirmation of a plan, n27 which suggests that the plan will govern thereafter.

There is no requirement that the payments be made at any particular time intervals. For ease of administration, a debtor may wish to make one payment, directly through the attorney's office to facilitate bookkeeping and providing evidence to the trustee. When such a payment for the preconfirmation period is less than a full plan payment, as will usually be the case, the amount paid will be deducted from the first plan payment due.

The statute does not specifically state whether adequate protection payments end as of plan confirmation. There is nothing in the provision that sets an ending date. However, the plan is required by language added to section 1325(a)(5) to provide that payments on allowed secured claims under the plan be sufficient to provide adequate protection, n28 and the plan can certainly provide that adequate protection shall be provided by such payments.

The remedy for failure to make required adequate protection payments is likely to be relief from the automatic stay, the same remedy as under prior law for failure to provide adequate protection. The main difference is that prior law in effect placed the burden on the creditor to demand adequate protection, usually by filing a motion. However, a creditor will still have to file a motion for relief from the stay if adequate protection payments have not been provided, and the court may well allow a debtor to cure such a default in payments. Theoretically, a failure to make payments required by section 1326 could also be grounds for dismissal, n29 but the creditor will usually prefer stay relief and the trustee has no reason to seek dismissal of an otherwise viable plan.

Disposition by Trustee of Payments Made Before Confirmation Decision

Subsection 1326(a)(2) sets forth the trustee's duties, both before and after the confirmation decision, regarding payments made to the trustee before the confirmation decision.

Trustee Retains Payments until Confirmation Decision. Section 1326(a)(2) provides that until a decision on plan confirmation is rendered, the payments made by the debtor are required to be retained by the chapter 13 trustee so that after confirmation they may be distributed to creditors under the plan.

The debtor's ability to make regular payments during this period may be an important factor in whether the plan is confirmed, because it will demonstrate whether it is feasible for the debtor to make the payments proposed. n30 Ordinarily, if a debtor has been able to comply substantially with the proposed plan during the preconfirmation period, he or she should be given the benefit of the doubt in application of the feasibility test and allowed to attempt the plan as proposed, especially when no modification to lower payments is possible within the parameters of chapter 13.

Disposition of Payments When Plan Is Confirmed. Section 1326(a)(2) further provides that if a plan is confirmed, the trustee must distribute any payment he or she retained in accordance with the plan as soon as is practicable. The words directing the trustee to make distributions as soon as practicable after confirmation were added to subsection 1326(a)(2) by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n31 apparently in the belief that some chapter 13 trustees were unduly delaying distributions. The legislative history indicates that this new language may have been intended to encourage trustees to make distributions before the claims bar date, in districts where confirmation occurs before that date, as trustees in some districts have done. n32 Because of the 2005 amendment adding section 1324(b), n33 it is likely that almost all confirmation hearings will be concluded before the claims bar date.

However, other language in the legislative history states that trustees should make distributions before the claims bar date only if they can ensure adequate protection against any prejudice to later filing claimants caused by distributions before the bar date. n34 Unless a plan clearly directs a trustee to pay particular creditors who have already filed claims before all others, or a trustee obtains creditors' guarantees that they will disgorge payments if they have been paid in error, it is hard to see how a trustee can ensure such protection when distributions are made before the bar date. As long as there is a possibility that a timely filed secured or priority claim-- which should be paid by the initial distributions under the plan-- will be filed after distributions are made, the trustee will risk paying money to the wrong creditors. Indeed, this quandary is exacerbated by the 1994 Act's extension of the bar date for governmental creditors, who are often priority or secured creditors, n35 and by the 2005 amendment even further extending the deadline set for certain tax claims. n36

Hence, it is doubtful that the language in section 1326(a)(2) will cause any trustees to make distributions sooner than they had been doing previously. Few trustees, if any, would admit that they had not been making distributions as soon as practicable. Moreover, due to the extended bar dates for governmental claims, many of them will wait even longer before making distributions, until the government bar dates have passed.

Disposition of Payments When Plan Is Not Confirmed. Section 1326(a)(2) further provides that if a plan is not confirmed under chapter 13, the trustee must return all payments n37 to the debtor, deducting any unpaid claim for administrative expenses allowed under section 503(b). n38 Under language added in 2005, n39 the trustee is also to deduct any unpaid adequate protection payments that are due and owing to creditors under section 1326(a)(3). Because section 1326(a)(3) provides for possible court orders requiring particular payments pending confirmation of the plan, n40 the trustee is obligated to make payments to creditors, and withhold those payments from the debtor's refund, only if a specific order for payments to those creditors has previously been entered by the court and the trustee has not made the payments ordered when they were due.

The trustee's obligations under section 1326(a)(2) can arise if, before confirmation, the case is dismissed n41 or converted to another chapter. n42 They may also arise if confirmation is denied, although the trustee should normally first ascertain whether the debtor seeks to modify the plan n43 and again seek confirmation.

Ordinarily, if the case is converted to chapter 7, the payments returned to the debtor are not property of the chapter 7 estate. Those payments typically are derived from the debtor's postpetition income and section 348(f)(1)(a) provides that such property, which was not property of the estate as of the date the petition was filed, is not property of the chapter 7 estate after conversion. n44 The only exception to this rule is if the court finds, under section 348(f)(2), that the case was converted in bad faith. n45

In Beam v. IRS (In re Beam), n46 the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that the funds in the trustee's hands after a case is dismissed that are due to be returned to the debtor could be levied upon by the Internal Revenue Service and that if such a levy occurred, the funds must be turned over to the Internal Revenue Service rather than the debtor. The court held that once the debtors had the right to receive the funds from the trustee, the Internal Revenue Service could levy under section 6331 of title 26, United States Code, just as it could levy on any other entity which owed the debtors money. However, other courts have held that a creditor's levy does not overcome the trustee's duty under this section to return funds to the debtor, and that the funds are simply to be returned subject to the levy. n47 This situation should not arise often, since the trustee should normally disburse funds to the debtors forthwith upon the case being dismissed and therefore will rarely be holding funds long enough for a levy to take place. A levy prior to the dismissal would normally violate section 362(a)(4), n48 as an act to create a lien against property of the estate. And, in any event, the amount that would be available to satisfy a levy would be only the amount due to the debtor after deduction of administrative expenses and any unpaid payments under section 1326(a)(3). n49

Payment of Administrative Expenses When Plan Not Confirmed. Before payments in the trustee's hands are returned to the debtor, section 1326(a)(2) requires deduction of any administrative expenses allowed under section 503(b). It is not clear that a standing trustee's percentage fee, intended to cover the trustee's costs and compensation, n50 may be paid under this provision. At least two courts have held that because the trustee's percentage fee is not governed by section 326 or section 330, it is not an administrative expense under section 503(b). n51

The $5-per-month minimum compensation of section 330(c) n52 is not applicable to the payments returned to the debtor, because that section applies to distributions under the plan during the administration of the plan. n53

If the court has approved attorney's fees for the debtor's counsel, such fees would also be claims under section 503(b), n54 and must be paid by the trustee before the balance of the funds are returned to the debtor. n55 Any other claims of administrative expenses must be approved by the court and come within the ambit of section 503 n56 before they can be paid by the trustee.

Modification of Required Payments

Section 1326(a)(3), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n57 permits the court, after notice and a hearing, to modify, increase, or reduce the payments required under section 1326(a), which would include payments to the trustee, payments to personal property lessors, or adequate protection payments to holders of allowed claims secured by personal property. Because the amount of payments will usually be set by the debtor in the first instance, this provision may be used more often by creditors and lessors seeking to increase payment amounts. However, because the payments do not commence until 30 days after the petition, and because it may well take another 30 days to obtain a hearing on a motion to increase payments, there may be little incentive for them to utilize section 1326(a)(3). By the time a hearing is scheduled, the court may have confirmed a plan or be about to confirm a plan and confirmation may moot any issue of preconfirmation payments.

Some courts or trustees may wish to use this section to modify the payment requirement so that adequate protection payments can be routed through the trustee in order to ease the bookkeeping difficulties that would otherwise occur. A local rule or practice could provide a default procedure giving notice and a hearing in every case regarding such a modification, i.e., an opportunity for a creditor to object, with the absence of such an objection resulting in all payments being routed through the trustee.

Proof of Required Insurance

Section 1326(a)(4), added in 2005, n58 provides that a debtor who retains possession of personal property subject to a lease or securing a claim attributable in whole or in part to the purchase price of the property must provide the lessor or secured creditor reasonable evidence of the maintenance of any required insurance coverage on the property and continue to do so for so long as the debtor retains possession of the property.

The maintenance of required insurance on vehicles is often considered a form of adequate protection and this provision seeks to shift the burden a creditor or lessor previously had of demanding proof of such adequate protection. In most cases, such proof is not necessary, because a creditor or lessor is named as a loss payee on the insurance policy and is notified if coverage lapses. However, if coverage has lapsed, the creditor or lessor has an obvious interest in being notified that it is reinstated. Indeed, the fact that such evidence need not be provided for 60 days leaves a significant period of time during which the property may be uninsured.

The remedy for failure to provide proof of insurance is likely to be a motion for relief from the stay. Presumably, a creditor who knows that the property, in fact, is insured would not file such a motion. Indeed, even when it is not clear whether insurance exists, it would seem that an inquiry to the debtor's counsel would be a logical step before the costs of such a motion are incurred.

The language at the end of section 1326(a)(4), that the debtor shall continue to do so for so long as the debtor retains possession of the property is somewhat peculiar. It does not state how often the debtor shall do so--presumably, provide proof of insurance. Certainly, the language cannot be read literally to require the debtor to continually provide such proof. Again, as a practical matter, assuming the debtor has insurance naming the creditor or lessor as loss payee, there would be notice from the insurer to the creditor or lessor if the coverage lapsed, so this language is not likely to be frequently invoked.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1326, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1326 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984).

n2

2. S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1983).

n3

3. S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1983).

n4

4. S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 15-16 (1983).

n5

5. S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1983).

n6

6. Former 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a) and (b) were redesignated as subsections (b) and (c).

n7

7. See Deadline for Commencement of Payments; § 1326(a)(1) infra.

n8

8. Pub. L. No. 109-8, 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 301(b).

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 348(a). The language added to section 1326(a)(1) is ambiguous in that it could be read to require payments within 30 days after the order for relief in a converted case. However, such a reading would lead to a nonsensical result because conversion does not change the date of the order for relief, 11 U.S.C. § 348(a), and it would usually be impossible to begin payments within 30 days after the date of the order for relief under the chapter originally chosen, a date usually more than 30 days before the conversion.

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1)(B), (C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Payments to Personal Property Lessors; § 1326(a)(1)(B) and Adequate Protection Payments; § 1326(a)(1)(C) infra.

n12

12. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13

13. See 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(8); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.12 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(4); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.04[4] (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. In re Smith, 85 B.R. 729 (E.D. Va. 1988); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.04[4] (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1); see Deadline for Commencement of Payments; § 1326(a)(1) supra.

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1)(B).

n19

19. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.11 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 365(p)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 365 (Matthew Bender).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(4).

n22

22. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1); see Deadline for Commencement of Payments; §1325(a)(1) supra.

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(1)(C).

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 502(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 502.02[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n26

26. However, if there are significant arrears in the creditor's claim, the language giving adequate protection to only the portions becoming due after the order for relief may permit lower payments.

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n28

28. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(5)(B)(iii)(II), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(4).

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(6); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.07 (Matthew Bender); see also S. Rep. No. 65, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (1983).

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 103-394. A technical amendment adding is before practicable was made by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n32

32. See 140 Cong. Rec. H10,770 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994) (remarks of Rep. Jack Brooks).

n33

33. 11 U.S.C. § 1324(b), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 317(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1324.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See 140 Cong. Rec. H10,770 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994) (remarks of Rep. Jack Brooks).

n35

35. See 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(9), providing that governmental unit's proof of claim is timely filed if filed before 180 days after date of order for relief or such later date as Bankruptcy Rules provide. See, e.g., In re Wilson, 274 B.R. 4 (Bankr. D.D.C. 2001) (trustee required to seek disgorgement of payments made to unsecured creditors in light of later-filed government claims which rendered those payments excessive under confirmed plan).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(9), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 716(d) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, to permit filing of tax claims in chapter 13 within 60 days of a tax return filed under section 1308.

n37

37. For purposes of this provision, funds received from the preconfirmation sale of a debtor's property and designated by the sale order for the payment of liens on the property were not payments under the plan to be returned to the debtor. In re Witte, 279 B.R. 585 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2002).

n38

38. See Payment of Administrative Expenses When Plan Not Confirmed. infra. The Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554, had previously made a minor technical amendment to section 1326(a)(2).

n39

39. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n40

40. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Modification of Required Payments; § 1326(a)(3) infra.

n41

41. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(b), (c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.03 (Matthew Bender).

n42

42. 11 U.S.C. § 1307(a), (c), (d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1307.04 and 1307.05 (Matthew Bender).

n43

43. 11 U.S.C. § 1323; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1323 (Matthew Bender).

n44

44. 11 U.S.C. § 348(f)(1)(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 348.07[1] (Matthew Bender).

n45

45. 11 U.S.C. § 348(f)(2); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 348.07[2] (Matthew Bender).

n46

46. 192 F.3d 941 (9th Cir. 1999).

n47

47. In re Oliver, 40 C.B.C.2d 725, 222 B.R. 272 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998); In re Clifford, 33 C.B.C.2d 1006, 182 B.R. 229 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1995).

n48

48. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.03[6] (Matthew Bender).

n49

49. See In re Doherty, 229 B.R. 461 (Bankr. E.D. Wash. 1999) (claims of state taxing authority to funds in trustee's hands could be paid only after deduction of administrative expenses).

n50

50. 28 U.S.C. § 586(e).

n51

51. In re Rivera, 268 B.R. 292 (Bankr. D.N.M. 2001), aff'd, 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 1549 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. Dec. 4, 2001); In re Ward, 132 B.R. 417 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1991).

n52

52. 11 U.S.C. § 330(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.05[1] (Matthew Bender).

n53

53. 11 U.S.C. § 330(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.05[1] (Matthew Bender).

n54

54. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(2); see In re Harris, 258 B.R. 8 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2000) (attorney's fees could be paid from funds held by trustee only if allowed as administrative expenses); Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.09 (Matthew Bender).

n55

55. In re Oliver, 40 C.B.C.2d 725, 222 B.R. 272 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998).

n56

56. See Williams v. IMC Mortg. Co. (In re Williams), 246 B.R. 591 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1999) (denying request that mortgage payments not made during plan be allowed as administrative expenses).

n57

57. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n58

58. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(c)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

157 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Creditors Committees

2008 Emerging Issues 1255

Collier on Creditors Committees

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses section 1102(a)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, which provides that the court may, upon the request of a party in interest, order the appointment of additional committees of creditors or of equity security holders if necessary to assure adequate representation of creditors or of equity security holders.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Committee Membership

Court's Authority to Appoint Additional Committees. Section 1102(a)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that the court may, upon the request of a party in interest, order the appointment of additional committees of creditors or of equity security holders if necessary to assure adequate representation n1 of creditors or of equity security holders. n2 However, as section 1102(a)(1) also gives permission to the United States trustee to appoint such additional committees, a party seeking the appointment of an additional committee should first request appointment from the United States trustee before seeking an order from the court. If a party has failed to do so, the court ought to refrain from ruling on any request until the United States trustee has considered the request and determined not to appoint the additional committee. n3

Section 1102(a)(2) directs the court to order the appointment of additional committees only if necessary to assure adequate representation of creditors or of equity security holders. In most cases, a single committee of creditors and a single committee of equity security holders will be sufficient. Thus, the court should order the appointment of additional committees sparingly. The court should also keep in mind that the matter comes before the court only if the United States trustee determines that additional committees are not warranted. While the court is empowered to overrule the decision of the United States trustee not to appoint an additional committee, the court should afford some deference to that decision. n4

Court's Ability to Order Change in Membership of Committee. Section 1102(a)(4), added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2004 (the 2005 Act), n5 provides that the court may, on request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, order the United States trustee to change the membership of a committee appointed under section 1102 if the court determines that the change is necessary to ensure adequate representation of creditors or equity security holders.

Section 1102(a)(4) was enacted by Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. Before the 2005 Act, the Code did not contain explicit authority for the court to overrule committee appointments made by the United States trustee. The lack of authority led to a large number of judicial decisions over whether such authority was within the scope of the court's general equitable powers.

The court's authority to adjust committee membership is not unfettered. With the one exception noted below, the court may order a change in the composition of a committee only if the court determines that doing so is necessary to ensure adequate representation of creditors or equity security holders. It should also be noted that the court will not appoint any replacement committee members. The court will order the United States trustee to change membership on the committee but appointment of replacement members is still a decision that will be made by the United States trustee.

Section 1102(a)(4) also permits the court to order the United States trustee to increase the number of members of a committee to include a creditor that is a small business concern as defined in the Small Business Act. n6 The court may only do so, however, if it determines that the creditor holds claims the aggregate amount of which, in comparison to the annual gross revenue of that creditor, is disproportionately large. The effect of this section is to allow a smaller creditor to serve on a committee if the amount owed to that creditor will have a significant impact on the creditor's business, even if the creditor is not the holder of a large claim. The matter is discretionary and a court may decline to order the expansion of a committee to include such a creditor, even if the case will have a severe impact on the creditor's business.

Procedure for Challenging Appointment Decisions. Rule 2020 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure provides that a proceeding to contest any act or any failure to act by the United States trustee is governed by Bankruptcy Rule 9014. The effect of this rule is to establish that challenges to decisions by the United States trustee are to be determined by motion. Nothing in Bankruptcy Rule 2020 has an impact on whether particular actions are subject to judicial review or who may seek review of such actions.

Standing to Challenge Appointment Decisions. Before the enactment of section 1102(a)(4) by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, most courts allowing challenges to committee appointments have permitted the debtor, as well as any affected creditor, to contest committee appointments. n7 The 2005 Act should end any doubt by giving standing to challenge decisions to any party in interest.

There is nothing in the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure that requires an aggrieved party, whether an affected creditor or the debtor, to exhaust remedies with the United States trustee before seeking judicial review. n8 Nevertheless, doing so would be prudent for a party and a court should refrain from reviewing a decision until the United States trustee has had a chance to consider any request by a party to modify a decision. It would also be prudent for a party concerned about a committee appointment to act quickly. The courts have sometimes dismissed requests for review of decisions by the United States trustee for lack of timeliness. One court held that a motion to add a creditor to the committee which was filed two months after United States trustee denied request was untimely; another court held that a motion challenging composition of creditors' committee filed seven weeks after appointment of committee was void on timeliness grounds. n9

Appeal of Appointment Decisions. Appeals of judicial decisions reviewing committee appointments have been held to be interlocutory. n10 Consequently, there are relatively few appellate decisions on this issue. Those appellate courts considering the issue have applied a clearly erroneous standard in such appeals. n11

Special Duties of Creditors' Committees

Section 1102(b)(3), added by the 2005 Act, n12 specifies certain duties to be performed by creditors' committees. While the language of the section does not exclude equity committees, the operative portions of the subsection refer specifically and only to creditors. This subsection needs to be read in conjunction with section 1103, which sets forth the general duties of creditors' committees. Its inclusion in section 1102, rather than section 1103, is probably just the result of inartful drafting.

The Committee's Duty to Provide Access to Information. The first clause of section 1102(b)(3) requires that the committee provide access to information to creditors who hold claims of the kind represented by the committee and that are not appointed to the committee. n13 Note that the committee is not required to provide information. It is merely required to provide access to information. What this means will vary from case to case. In a small case, access to information may consist of no more than returning phone calls and responding to correspondence. In larger cases, it might be appropriate to establish a Web site or to ensure that the debtor's Web site contains information that would be of use to creditors.

One of the first published decisions to address this clause contains a good discussion of the factors that a committee needs to consider in determining how to fulfill its obligations under section 1102(b)(3)(A). In In re Refco, Inc., n14 the creditors' committee filed a motion seeking clarification of its obligations under this section. In response to the motion, the court issued an order, a copy of which is attached to the decision, describing the scope of that committee's obligations under the section. The duties of the committee set forth in that order are extensive, as befits a high-profile case involving claims for billions of dollars where it is not practical for the committee to communicate directly with its constituents. In a smaller case, the committee's obligation to provide access will necessarily be more modest. In determining how to fulfill its duties, the committee will need to balance the cost of undertaking formal procedures against the benefit to creditors from so doing.

The court in Refco also considered the extent to which a committee could withhold information from creditors. The court determined that the committee would not need to provide access to information that was confidential, nonpublic or proprietary, that could reasonably be determined to result in a general waiver of the attorney-client privilege or other applicable privilege, or that could reasonably be determined to violate an agreement, order or law if disclosed. The court also noted that the committee's duty to provide access to information was similar to the duty of a chapter 7 trustee under section 704(7) and that cases construing that section would be relevant under section 1102(b)(3)(A).

The Committee's Other Duties under Section 1102(b)(3). The second clause of section 1102(b)(3) requires committees to solicit and receive comments from holders of claims of the kind represented by the committee. n15 The language of section 1102(b)(3) makes this duty mandatory, and so it is incumbent on a committee to find a way to solicit and receive comments from creditors. Perhaps the simplest way would be for a committee to send a letter to creditors notifying them that they welcome to provide comments to the committee or its professionals. If this were included as part of a general distribution by the debtor to creditors, this duty could be fulfilled at nominal additional cost.

The third clause of section 1102(b)(3) requires that a creditors' committee be subject to a court order that compels any additional report or disclosure to be made to creditors represented by such committee. n16 This clause dispels any doubt, should there have been any, that a creditors' committee must comply with a court order to provide reports of disclosures to creditors.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1102, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1102 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. The issue of whether appointment of additional committees of creditors and of equity security holders is necessary to assure adequate representation is discussed, respectively, at Collier on Bankruptcy, 1102.02[4] and 1102.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

n2

2. Section 1102(a)(2) also provides that the United States trustee shall appoint the members of any additional committee ordered by the court. This is consistent with the philosophy of section 1102 which is intended to remove the court from the process of appointing members to committees.

n3

3. See In re McLean Indus., Inc., 16 C.B.C.2d 645, 70 B.R. 852 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987) (court's review of decision by United States trustee not to appoint additional committee subject to de novo review).

n4

4. In In re Texaco, 79 B.R. 560 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987), the court held that the underlying rationale for establishing two committees was no longer applicable and ordered that the two be combined into a single committee.

n5

5. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 405(a), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. A small business concern is defined in section 3(a)(1) of the Small Business Act, 15 U.S.C. § 631 et seq. The authority granted by the court to order the expansion of a committee to include a small business concern is not modified by the reference at the beginning of section 1102(a)(4) to the request of a party in interest after notice and a hearing.

n7

7. See In re Penn-Dixie Indus., Inc., 3 C.B.C.2d 710, 9 B.R. 936 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) (debtor has standing to object to composition of equity security holders committee); In re Laclede Cab Co., 145 B.R. 308 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1992) (debtor permitted to object to appointment of creditor to creditors' committee). In accord are In re Microboard Processing, Inc., 95 B.R. 283 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1989); In re Richmond Tank Car Co., 93 B.R. 504 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1988); In re Plant Specialties, 59 B.R. 1 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1986); In re M.H. Corp., 30 B.R. 266 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1983). See also In re Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., Inc., 200 B.R. 933 (M.D. Fla. 1996) (creditor denied membership on committee has standing to appeal); In re Victory Markets, Inc., 195 B.R. 9 (N.D.N.Y. 1996) (appeal from bankruptcy court order denying creditor's motion to be added to creditors' committee dismissed for lack of standing; but declining to decide whether creditor has standing to bring motion seeking to be added to creditors' committee).

n8

8. Decisions of the United States trustee with respect to committee appointments are not subject to the Administrative Procedures Act. In re Sharon Steel Corp., 100 B.R. 767 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1989).

n9

9. See Van Arsdale v. Clemo, 825 F.2d 794 (4th Cir. 1987); In re Hills Stores, 137 B.R. 4 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1992) (noting that granting request to form additional committee that could have been made six months earlier would result in delay of reorganization process); In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 118 B.R. 209 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990).

n10

10. See In re Victory Markets, Inc., 195 B.R. 9 (N.D.N.Y. 1996) (appeal from bankruptcy court order denying creditor's motion to be added to creditors' committee is interlocutory; leave to appeal granted); In re Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., Inc., 200 B.R. 933 (M.D. Fla. 1996) (same).

n11

11. See Van Arsdale v. Clemo, 825 F.2d 794 (4th Cir. 1987) (applying clearly erroneous standard to appeal of decision upholding committee appointed by United States trustee); In re Value Merchants, Inc., 202 B.R. 280 (E.D. Wis. 1996) (same); In re Penn-Dixie Indus., Inc., 3 C.B.C.2d 710, 9 B.R. 936 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) (bankruptcy court's determination under former section 1102(c) that committee was adequately representative was finding of fact subject to review under clearly erroneous standard).

n12

12. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 405(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(3)(A).

n14

14. 336 B.R. 187 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(3)(B).

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(3)(C).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

158 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on a Ch. 11 Plans Cure of Default to Reverse Acceleration

2008 Emerging Issues 1256

Collier on a Ch. 11 Plans Cure of Default to Reverse Acceleration

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses topics such as the advantages of 1124(2), the defaults specified in 365(b)(2), the meaning of cure under 1124(2)(A), reinstatement under 1124(2), the rationale behind 1124(2), the deacceleration of foreclosure judgment, and compensation for damages under 1124(C) and (D).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1124(2) of the Bankruptcy Code permits the plan to reverse a contractual or legal acceleration. In order for a class of claims or interests to be unimpaired for purposes of section 1124(2), the plan must cure any default, other than an ipso facto default of a kind specified in section 365(b)(2), or of a kind that section 365(b)(2) expressly does not require to be cured, n1 irrespective of whether such default occurred before or after commencement of the case. In addition, the plan must provide for the payment of compensation to the holder of the claim or interest for any damages incurred as a result of any reasonable reliance by the holder on the contractual provisions or applicable law that permitted acceleration.

Paragraph (D) of section 1124(2), n2 requires that the plan also provide for the compensation of actual pecuniary loss to the holder of a claim or interest arising from any failure to perform a nonmonetary obligation, other than a default arising from a failure to operate a nonresidential real property lease subject to section 365(b)(1)(A). Section 365(b)(1)(A) provides the types of nonmonetary obligations that need not be cured in order for a debtor to assume an executory contract or unexpired lease and expressly excludes from this cure requirement a default that is a breach of a provision relating to the satisfaction of any provision (other than a penalty rate or penalty provision) relating to a default arising from any failure to perform nonmonetary obligations under an unexpired lease of real property, if it is impossible for the trustee to cure such default by performing nonmonetary acts at and after the time of assumption. n3 However, section 365(b)(1)(A) also provides that if a default arises from the failure to operate in accordance with a nonresidential real property lease, then, in order for such a lease to be assumed, such default must be cured at the time of assumption, and subsequent to such time, in accordance with such lease, and pecuniary losses resulting from such default must be compensated. n4

Provided that the plan does not otherwise alter the legal, equitable or contractual rights to which the holder of the claim or interest is entitled, section 1124(2) permits the plan to reinstate the original maturity of the claim or interest as it existed before the default without impairing the claim or interest. n5

Advantages of Section 1124(2)

The advantages of section 1124(2) to the debtor are easily illustrated. If the debtor has defaulted with respect to a long-term debt obligation that has an interest rate substantially lower than the current market rate, the plan can reinstate the original maturity of the obligation and the original, lower interest rate, if the plan provides for (i) the curing of any payment or performance defaults (other than ipso facto default), (ii) compensation for any damages caused by the claimant's reasonable reliance on the right of acceleration and (iii) affirmation of the agreement according to its original terms.

In the case of a partnership, the proponent of a plan may use section 1124(2) to undo the effect of a clause in a partnership agreement that grants one or more general or limited partners the right to receive specified distributions with respect to their partnership interests upon occurrence of an event of default specified in the partnership agreement. Under section 1124(2), the plan may provide for the curing of the event of default, compensation to the partners for any damages incurred as a result of reliance upon their right to accelerate distributions with respect to their partnership interests, and affirmation of the partnership agreement according to its original terms. As explained above, section 1124(2)(D) also requires compensation to the partners for actual pecuniary loss arising from any failure to perform a nonmonetary obligation. n6 If each of the conditions of section 1124(2) is met and the rights of the partners are not otherwise affected under the terms of the plan, their interests will not be impaired, and thus the consent of the affected partners will not be required unless their rights are otherwise impaired under the terms of the plan.

Section 365(b)(2) Defaults; Relationship to Feasibility Requirement

Section 1124(2) permits deacceleration even though a default of the kind specified in section 365(b)(2) or of the kind that section 365(b)(2) expressly does not require to be cured, n7 is not cured. The defaults specified in section 365(b)(2) are breaches of provisions relating to (1) the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor at any time before the closing of the case; (2) the commencement of a case under title 11; (3) the appointment of, or taking possession by, a trustee in a case under title 11 or a custodian n8 before the commencement; or (4) the satisfaction of any penalty rate or penalty provision n9 relating to a default arising from any failure by the debtor to perform nonmonetary obligations under an executory contract or unexpired lease.

It has been suggested that section 1124(2)(a) permits the plan to reinstitute the maturity of a claim or interest without curing defaults with respect to the financial condition of the debtor that are included in the section 365(b)(2)(A) ipso facto clauses. This interpretation of section 1124(2) is correct. It has also been suggested that the fact that a plan does not have to cure a default relating to financial condition effectively modifies the agreement by nullifying covenants relating to financial conditions, such as net worth clauses, tangible asset restrictions and the like. This interpretation of section 1124 is incorrect except that the filing of a case under title 11 never need be cured. If the reinstated agreement was in default by reason of breach of financial covenants, the plan may provide for the reinstatement of the maturity of the obligation even though the debtor remains in default with respect to the financial covenants; however, the debtor will have to be in compliance with such covenants on the date the plan becomes effective or else, as of such date, the obligation whose maturity has been reinstated will again be in default and the holders of the obligation will have the right to accelerate. If the obligation is of a material amount, the debtor's inability to cure the financial covenants and the fact that the obligation will be in default on the date the plan becomes effective will raise a question as to whether the plan satisfies the confirmation standard contained in section 1129. Section 1129(a)(11) provides that the plan shall be confirmed if [c]onfirmation of the plan is not likely to be followed by the liquidation, or the need for further financial reorganization, of the debtor or any successor to the debtor under the plan, unless the liquidation or reorganization is proposed in the plan.

Thus, a class is unimpaired even though defaults relating to the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor after the plan becomes effective may give rise to a continuing default permitting the nondebtor party to accelerate the contract, lease or obligation. While the court may retain jurisdiction under section 1123(b)(5) and refrain from closing the case in order to permit the plan to be effectuated, the court cannot confirm the plan unless satisfied that the plan is not likely to be followed by further financial reorganization. Unless it is clear at the time of confirmation that the debtor will be in compliance with financial covenants within a reasonable time period after confirmation, the plan will not satisfy section 1129(a)(11) and cannot be confirmed. n10

Meaning of Cure

Under section 1124(2)(A), in order to deaccelerate or otherwise place the creditor in its original position and leave it unimpaired, it is necessary to cure any defaults, whether prepetition or postpetition, that may have occurred, except those relating to insolvency and the like and those defaults of a kind that section 365(b)(2) expressly does not require to be cured. n11 Although the Bankruptcy Code does not define cure, the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has held that:

A default is an event in the debtor-creditor relationship which triggers certain consequences. Curing a default commonly means taking care of the triggering event and returning to pre-default conditions. The consequences are thus nullified. This is the concept of cure used throughout the Bankruptcy Code. n12

Section 1124(2) prefaces the provision that allows a debtor to cure defaults with a clause that provides notwithstanding any contractual provision or applicable law that entitles the holder of such claim or interest to demand or receive accelerated payment of such claim or interest after the occurrence of a default. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, however, has rejected an argument that this clause indicates that cure is applicable only to obligations that have been accelerated due to default. Instead, the natural reading of references to default in section 1123 and section 1124 indicates that, subject to section 1124(2)(A)'s exception for defaults under section 365(b)(2), plans may cure all defaults without impairing the creditor's claim, and that such defaults include, but are not limited to, those defaults resulting in acceleration. n13 The court has held that a plan under which the debtor would pay arrearages on the debt, including interest at pre-default rate, and not a higher post-maturity default interest rate, would cure the default. n14 However, where the creditor is oversecured and the rights of unsecured creditors are not implicated, some courts have allowed the creditor to receive the default interest rate as part of the cure under section 1124(2). n15

Reinstatement under Section 1124(2) after Rights Are Altered by Operation of the Code

A creditor's rights may be altered by operation of the Code, n16 which raises the question whether reinstatement under section 1124(2) requires the restoration of the creditor's rights to its pre-bankruptcy position. n17 In In re Blackwelder Furniture Co. of Statesville, Inc., n18 the question involved the operation of section 552(a) of the Code. Pursuant to section 552(a), an after-acquired property clause in a security agreement is not effective to cause a security interest to attach to property acquired by the estate postpetition. n19 The court turned to the Senate Committee Report, which stated that the intervention of bankruptcy was a temporary change but if the plan provided for a return of the claim to its original position postconfirmation, the claim would be unimpaired. Thus, if the plan provided that the after-acquired property clause resumed effectiveness after confirmation, the secured creditor's claim is unimpaired.

There is authority, however, for the position that a debtor may unimpaired a claim by curing a default and reinstating the maturity of a creditor's claim without restoring certain state law rights. In In re Centre Court Apartments, Ltd., n20 the issue involved the application of a state statute that imposed attorney's fees with respect to a claim that was classified as unimpaired pursuant to section 1124(2). The court held that, as the debtor cured and reinstated the debt pursuant to the plan, the claim was deaccelerated and the parties were returned to a point in time prior to the debtor's default. Therefore, the court found that any claim for attorney's fees on the formerly accelerated debt was no longer applicable.

Rationale Behind Section 1124(2)

If the holder of a claim or interest, upon the occurrence of a default, has a contractual or legal right to receive accelerated payment with respect to the claim or interest, the holder of the claim or interest has, as a matter of nonbankruptcy law, the right to receive payment of the full amount to which the claim or interest entitles the holder. Upon acceleration of the debtor's obligation, the terms of the original agreement relating to the claim or interest cease to apply. Thus, a plan of reorganization that proposes to pay the amount due in respect of the claim or interest according to the original terms of the agreement alters the legal, equitable and contractual rights of the holder of the claim or interest. Congress, however, quite appropriately concluded that a party that receives the benefits of its original bargain is not impaired even if the plan modifies the party's rights by preventing the party from using a contractual or legal right of acceleration to terminate a valuable contract of the debtor in circumstances where the debtor is willing to cure past defaults and perform under the original terms of the agreement. n21

Deacceleration of Foreclosure Judgment

In the context of deacceleration of a secured claim that has been the subject of a foreclosure judgment, the courts have had to consider the relationship between section 1124 and section 1123(a)(5)(G), which states: (a) Notwithstanding any otherwise applicable nonbankruptcy law, a plan shall (5) provide adequate means for the plan's implementation such as (G) curing or waiving of any default. n22 In several cases, mortgagees who had obtained foreclosure judgments argued that, by reason of such judgments, they would be impaired if they received less than payment in full of the amount of the judgment on the effective date of the plan. n23 The essence of the argument has been that the mortgage obligation merged into the foreclosure judgment and therefore there was no mortgage to revive through deacceleration.

The issue of deacceleration in section 1124(2) was addressed by the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in In re Madison Hotel Associates. n24 The court held that a creditor holding a final judgment of foreclosure is not impaired under section 1124(2) if the debtor's plan of reorganization cures the default of an accelerated loan and reinstates the original terms of the loan. n25 The court distinguished earlier decisions where a judgment of foreclosure merged the mortgage and the judgment and transferred title to the mortgagee on the basis that, under the law of Wisconsin, a judgment of foreclosure was a judicial determination of what is due under an accelerated mortgage loan, but did not merge the mortgage and the judgment and, therefore, did not effectively transfer title to the mortgagee. n26

Notwithstanding the significance which the court attached to the fact that the judgment of foreclosure did not merge the mortgage and judgment, other cases suggest that the doctrine of merger under state law is irrelevant in sections 1124(2) and 1123(a)(5)(G) because these provisions evidence a clear intent by Congress to permit deacceleration and state law should not be relevant in defining the availability of such power. n27

In In re Hewitt, n28 the court held that section 1124 allows reversal of an acceleration even where the claim has been reduced to a judgment prior to the filing date. n29 The court supported its holding not only by reference to the legislative history of section 1124, but also by reference to the fact that section 1124(2) refers to class of claims and section 101 broadly defines the term claim to include a right to payment whether or not such right is reduced to judgment. n30

Compensation for Damages; § 1124(2)(C) & (D)

Damages incurred as a result of any reasonable reliance by the holder of a claim or interest that has been reinstated pursuant to section 1124(2) must be paid as a condition of reinstating the claim or interest. In addition, if a claim or interest arises from a failure to perform a nonmonetary obligation, other than a default arising from failure to operate a nonresidential real property lease subject to section 365(b)(1)(A), the holder of such claim or interest must be compensated for any actual pecuniary loss. n31 Although section 1124(2) provides that defaults must be cured on the effective date of the plan, it does not specifically state when compensation for damages must be paid. The courts that have addressed the issue have held that damages must be paid as of the effective date of the plan. n32 Thus, curing defaults and paying damages as of the time of the sale of the mortgaged property as opposed to as of the effective date of the plan, would impair the right of the mortgagees. n33

Interest. Generally, when a default has been cured and a mortgage reinstated, there is no liability for interest on the accelerated debt, because the parties are seen as having been returned to the period of time before the default occurred. n34 Nor is the creditor in this situation entitled to compensatory damages for the deprivation of the immediate use of its money. n35 When the creditor is oversecured, the court will allow simple interest to be awarded for the installments of principal that remain unpaid during the pendency of the reorganization proceedings, calculated, under section 506(b), at the rate provided for under the agreement under which such claim arose. n36 In that situation, claims for prepetition interest on the defaulted installments will be determined in accordance with state law. n37

Contract Interest; Late Charges; Attorney's Fees. Contract interest and late charges allowable under section 502(b) and section 506, as well as attorney's fees, fall within the category of damages included within section 1124(2)(C). n38 The argument that damages should include the difference between the market rate of interest and the contractual rate has been rejected because allowing these damages would undercut the purpose of section 1124. n39

For a complete discussion of Code section 1124, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1124 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. This clarification was added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act), Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(b)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. New paragraph (D) of section 1124(2) was added by the 2005 Act; former paragraph (D) was redesignated as paragraph (E). Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(b)(3)(4) (2005).

n3

3. Section 365(b)(1)(A) was amended by the 2005 Act to clarify a previous ambiguity as to what types of non-monetary obligations need not be cured in order for a debtor to assume an executory contract or unexpired lease. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(1) (2005).

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.05 (Matthew Bender), discussing the effect of the 2005 Act on section 365(b) in more detail.

n5

5. See, e.g., DiPierro v. Taddeo (In re Taddeo), 685 F.2d 24, 28-29 (2d Cir. 1982) (a chapter 13 case in which the court, referring to section 1124(2), wrote that curing a default, even though it inevitably changes a contractual acceleration clause, does not thereby impair a creditor's claim).

n6

6. In 2005, a new paragraph (D) of section 1124(2) was added; former paragraph (D) was redesignated as paragraph (E). Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(b)(3)(4) (2005).

n7

7. This clarification was added by the 2005 Act, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(b)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8

8. See 11 U.S.C. § 101 defining custodian; Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. The 2005 Act clarified this provision of section 365(b)(2)(D) by changing the phrase satisfaction of any penalty rate or provision to satisfaction of any penalty rate or penalty provision. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(1)(B) (2005).

n10

10. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1129.03[11] (Matthew Bender) discussing feasibility of a plan.

n11

11. See note 1 supra.

n12

12. DiPierro v. Taddeo (In re Taddeo), 685 F.2d 24, 26-27 (2d Cir. 1982); see also Great W. Bank & Trust v. Entz-White Lumber & Supply (In re Entz-White Lumber & Supply), 850 F.2d 1338, 1340 (9th Cir. 1988).

n13

13. Great W. Bank & Trust v. Entz-White Lumber & Supply (In re Entz-White Lumber & Supply), 850 F.2d 1338, 1341 (9th Cir. 1988) (also finding that language of Senate Report on bill that became section 1124 did not support creditor's claim, but merely showed that the drafters in the Senate were concerned primarily [but not exclusively] with defaults resulting in acceleration); see also In re Jones, 9 C.B.C.2d 451, 32 B.R. 951 (Bankr. D. Utah 1983) (plan provided for installment payment of amounts necessary to cure defaults; proponent of plan took position that this treatment left class unimpaired for purposes of section 1124(2), and that class did not need protections afforded by section 1129(b) because plan provided for market interest rate on deferred payments and thus, under formulation of In re Barrington Oaks General P'ship, 5 C.B.C.2d 969, 15 B.R. 952 (Bankr. D. Utah 1981), class was not impaired since protections afforded by section 1129(b) were not necessary; court held that installment payments did not leave the class unimpaired; installment payments constitute impermissible alternative beyond express terms of section 1124(2); court also found that class was impaired in terms of the protection afforded by section 1129(b) since section 1129(b) provides a structure in which the sufficiency of deferred cash payments may be tested); see also In re Onco Investment Co., 316 B.R. 163, 165168 (Bankr. D. Del. 2004) (where the debtor reinstated senior notes under section 1124(2) by paying interest at the nondefault rate and paying the senior notes in full, senior noteholders sought to recover the default interest and other penalty from distributions under the debtor's plan to subordinated noteholders pursuant to the terms of a subordination agreement between the senior noteholders and the junior, subordinated noteholders; the court held that allowing the senior noteholders to recover the default interest rate amounts from the subordinated noteholders would undermine the intended effect of reinstatement under section 1124(2)), appealed and dismissed as moot on appeal, In re Onco Investment Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21709 (D. Del. Sept. 29, 2005). But see In re Barrington Oaks General P'ship, 5 C.B.C.2d 969, 15 B.R. 952 (Bankr. D. Utah 1981) (where original mortgagor transferred property to general partnership and both entities filed chapter 11 petitions and subsequently filed consolidation plan that purportedly left claims of secured creditors unimpaired on the basis of curing defaults under the mortgages on plan's effective date, court held that sale of property breached due on sale clauses in mortgages, and that such breach, unlike a default for nonpayment, was incurable under section 1124(2); [b]y changing obligors, debtors may have altered the complexion of risk and hence of present value, and bank is therefore impaired because it needs the protection of Section 1129(b)'.

n14

14. Great W. Bank & Trust v. Entz-White Lumber & Supply (In re Entz-White Lumber & Supply), 850 F.2d 1338, 1340 (9th Cir. 1988) (debtor could cure debt that naturally matured prepetition by paying arrearages at predefault rate of interest).

n15

15. In re 139-141 Owners Corp., 313 B.R. 364 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (section 1124(2) is limited to authorizing the debtor to deaccelerate previously accelerated debt but does not allow the debtor to avoid all consequences of its prepetition default, including, where its contract with creditor so provides, its liability for interest at default rate); see also Hepner v. PWP Golden Eagle Tree, LLC (In re K & J Properties, Inc.), 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1993, at *29-31 (Bankr. D. Colo. May 13, 2005) (oversecured creditor is entitled to collect postpetition default interest on its claim)). For further explanation of the calculation of interest rates as part of creditor's claim, see 11 U.S.C. § 506; Collier on Bankruptcy, 506.04 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1124.02[9] (Matthew Bender), discussing impairment by operation of the Code pursuant to section 1124(1).

n17

17. See, e.g., In re Centre Court Apartments, Ltd., 18 C.B.C.2d 1064, 85 B.R. 651 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988) (debtor may cure and reinstate debt pursuant to sections 506(b) and 1124(2)(C); creditors seeking payment for attorney's fees under prepetition note and state law were not impaired because section 506(b) trumps state law regarding attorney's fees and creditors were free to seek cure for attorney's fees consistent with sections 506(b) and 1124(2)(C)); see also Florida Partners Corp. v. Southeast Co. (In re Southeast Co.), 868 F.2d 335, 20 C.B.C.2d 1348 (9th Cir. 1989) (payment of post-default rate of interest, even if no acceleration, is not required in order to leave claim unimpaired); United States Trust Co. of N.Y. v. LTV Steel Co. (In re Chateaugay), 150 B.R. 529, 542 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1993) (allowance of bondholders' claims in full, including postpetition interest at pre-default contract rate to original bond maturity date, and post-maturity rate from the original bond maturity date permissible to unimpaired claims).

n18

18. 8 C.B.C.2d 1379, 31 B.R. 878 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1983).

n19

19. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 552 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. 18 C.B.C.2d 1064, 85 B.R. 651 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

n21

21. In re Southeast Co., 18 C.B.C.2d 359, 81 B.R. 587 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1987), aff'd, Florida Partners Corp. v. Southeast Co. (In re Southeast Co.), 868 F.2d 335, 20 C.B.C.2d 1348 (9th Cir. 1989) (cure, reinstatement and reasonable reliance damages permit unimpairment even if there is some slight alteration; e.g., penalty interest need not be paid after default); Young v. Farmers Home Admin. (In re Young), 12 C.B.C.2d 983, 48 B.R. 678 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1985) (purchaser at prepetition foreclosure sale is not creditor of debtor with whom it did not contract; accordingly, there is no claim to be modified in plan and debtor's only remedy is via redemption pursuant to state law by paying redemption price within redemption period).

n22

22. See discussion in Collier on Bankruptcy, 1123.01[5] (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. See, e.g., In re Madison Hotel Assocs., 749 F.2d 410, 11 C.B.C.2d 771 (7th Cir. 1984) (order of foreclosure); In re Clark, 738 F.2d 869, 10 C.B.C.2d 1280 (7th Cir. 1984) (chapter 13); Grubbs v. Houston First Am. Sav. Ass'n, 730 F.2d 236, 246, 10 C.B.C.2d 549, 560 (5th Cir. 1984) (en banc) (chapter 13).

n24

24. 749 F.2d 410, 11 C.B.C.2d 771 (7th Cir. 1984).

n25

25. 749 F.2d 410, 422, 11 C.B.C.2d 771, 784.

n26

26. 749 F.2d 410, 422-23, 11 C.B.C.2d 771, 785, referring to In re Monroe Park, 18 B.R. 790 (Bankr. D. Del. 1982); In re St. Peter's School, 16 B.R. 404 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1982).

n27

27. See Di Pierro v. Taddeo (In re Taddeo), 685 F.2d 24, 29, 6 C.B.C.2d 1201, 1207 (2d Cir. 1982); see also Valente v. Savings Bank of Rockville, 9 C.B.C.2d 1004, 34 B.R. 362 (D. Conn. 1983).

n28

28. 5 C.B.C.2d 1626, 16 B.R. 973 (Bankr. D. Alaska 1982).

n29

29. In re Hewitt, 5 C.B.C.2d 1626, 1633, 16 B.R. 973, 977 (Bankr. D. Alaska 1982).

n30

30. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n31

31. The 2005 Act added paragraph (D) to section 1124(2) and redesignated existing paragraph (D) as paragraph (E). Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(b)(3)(4) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n32

32. See, e.g., In re Bernard, 70 B.R. 181, 184 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1986); In re Holthoff, 58 B.R. 216, 219

(Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1985).

n33

33. In re Otero Mills, Inc., 8 C.B.C.2d 1340, 31 B.R. 185 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1983).

n34

34. In re Forest Hills Assocs., 40 B.R. 410, 414 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984) (citing DiPierro v. Taddeo (In re Taddeo), 685 F.2d 24, 6 C.B.C.2d 1201 (2d Cir. 1982); In re Masnorth Corp., 36 B.R. 335, 337 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1984).

n35

35. In re Forest Hills Assocs., 40 B.R. 410, 414 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984) (citing DiPierro v. Taddeo (In re Taddeo), 685 F.2d 24, 6 C.B.C.2d 1201 (2d Cir. 1982); In re Masnorth Corp., 36 B.R. 335 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1984); In re Masnorth Corp., 28 B.R. 892, 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983)); see also In re Rainbow Forest Apartments, 33 B.R. 576, 578 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983) (The difference between the value of the loan amount reloaned at current market rate and value of the loan at the contract rate is not the type of compensatory damages contemplated by § 1124(2)(C). To award such damages would be counterproductive to Congress' scheme to allow for the reorganization and rehabilitation of debtors in distress.); In re Rolling Green Country Club, 26 B.R. 729, 733 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1982) (creditor's economic loss of expectation in such circumstances has a speculative basis assuming no decline in the cost of funds over time, and is not damage of the type contemplated by this section and need not be compensated).

n36

36. In re Forest Hills Assocs., 40 B.R. 410, 415-16 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984).

n37

37. In re Forest Hills Assocs., 40 B.R. 410, 416 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984); see also In re Arlington Village Partners, Ltd., 66 B.R. 308, 317 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1986) (compensation under section 1124(2)(C) must be in connection with reasonable reliance on contractual right to accelerate, which ends once bankruptcy petition is filed; compensation can consist of interest on prepetition arrearages; where creditor's claim is oversecured, interest may be granted on entire claim (i.e., whether prepetition or postpetition) under section 506(b); with oversecured claim, creditor may also receive reasonable fees, costs, or charges provided for under agreement under which such claim arose; in case of oversecured creditor, 11 U.S.C. § 506(b) provides independent basis for awarding interest in addition to other forms of compensation; if, however, parties' contract did not provide for fees, costs or charges and those fees, costs or charges related to reasonable reliance on lost right to accelerate, then damages may be obtained under section 1124(2)(C)).

n38

38. In re Orlando Tennis World Dev. Co., 9 C.B.C.2d 816, 819, 34 B.R. 558, 560 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1983); ; see In re Southeast Co., 18 C.B.C.2d 359, 81 B.R. 587 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1987) aff'd, Florida Partners Corp. v. Southeast Co. (In re Southeast Co.), 868 F.2d 335, 20 C.B.C.2d 1348 (9th Cir. 1989) (although not being required to pay post-default penalty interest is modification, nevertheless debt may be deaccelerated, reinstated and any damages paid so as to leave the debt unimpaired; only interest on overdue installments at contract nondefault rate is payable).

n39

39. In re Orlando Tennis World Dev. Co., 9 C.B.C.2d 816, 819-20, 34 B.R. 558, 560-61 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1983); see also General Elec. Mortgage Corp. v. South Village, Inc. (In re South Village, Inc.), 8 C.B.C.2d 42, 55, 25 B.R. 987, 998 (Bankr. D. Utah 1982) (given option to reinstate the contract on its original terms when a plan is proposed, it may be anomalous to require the payment of interest at a market rate while a case is pending [i]f this occurred, and if the market rate were greater than the contract rate, a refund of interest from the creditor to the estate would be necessary upon confirmation of the plan. Congress never contemplated opportunity cost as adequate protection in light of Section 1124(2).).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

159 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Disposable Income

2008 Emerging Issues 1259

Collier on Disposable Income

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1325(b) of the Bankruptcy Code was amended in a number of significant respects by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the 2005 amendments to section 1325(b), including the use of current monthly income to determine income, exclusions from income, determination of expenses, and the applicable commitment period.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1325(b) of the Bankruptcy Code was amended in a number of significant respects by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code. n1 These amendments altered the method of determining the debtor's income and the method for determining the debtor's expenses. They also increased the required plan length for some debtors from three to five years.

Use of Current Monthly Income" to Determine Income

The first major change in the disposable income test of section 1325(b) is the use of current monthly income as the basis for determining disposable income. Current monthly income is defined in section 101 as the debtor's average income over the last six months, but does not include benefits under the Social Security Act and certain other payments. n2 This use of prior income numbers directly contradicts language in section 1325(b)(1)(B), which refers to projected disposable income, creating immediate interpretive difficulties because the plan is subject to denial of confirmation only if all of the debtor's projected disposable income is not committed to the plan for the applicable time period. A projection for the future would seem to be something that could be quite different than an average of monthly income in the past. To the extent that courts give any meaning to the word projected, and courts are supposed to give meaning to every word in a statute, they may have to disregard the debtor's prior income if circumstances have changed. A number of courts have interpreted the word projected to allow them to look at changes in the debtor's income from the prior six months average, while recognizing that the sources of income considered must be the same as those defined to make up current monthly income by section 101. n3

If courts disregard the word projected,' the use of current monthly income to determine disposable income will help some debtors, whose income has increased, and could harm those whose income has decreased, since there is no explicit provision for adjusting income for such changes. If a debtor's income has increased, the trustee or unsecured creditors may not be able to tap all of it for plan payments. Even for plan modification, if section 1325(b) is applicable, the disposable income standard remains based on current monthly income, which never changes because it is based on the six months before the petition. To the extent current monthly income is determinative of required plan payments under section 1325(b), it will lead debtors to carefully time their bankruptcy petitions, when possible, to minimize current monthly income.

If a debtor's income has decreased, and is unlikely to change, a trustee should not file an objection under section 1325(b) based on the current monthly income figure if the debtor is paying all disposable income as defined by current law. Trustees have no legitimate interest in objecting to plans where debtors are paying all that they can truly afford. Unsecured creditors also would rarely have an interest in forcing debtors into chapter 7, which would be the likely result of such an objection, especially if the debtor is below median income and therefore not subject to the means test. Thus, absent an objection, a reasonable plan based on the debtor's true income may be confirmed, because section 1325(b), by its own terms, comes into play only if an objection is filed.

Exclusions from Income

The amended language of section 1325(b)(2) also creates new exclusions from disposable income. First, of course, are the exclusions in the section 101 definition of current monthly income of benefits under the Social Security Act and certain other payments. n4 The definition also makes clear that the income of other household members, including a non-debtor spouse, can be considered only to the extent that it is regularly contributed to household expenses. n5

Other exclusions from income in section 1325(b)(2) are child support payments, foster care payments, or disability payments received by the debtor for a dependent child to the extent reasonably necessary to be expended for the child. It is not clear what effect these exclusions will have. If courts exclude such payments, which may well go to expenses for the debtor's dependents, the debtor's income is reduced. But courts might exclude expenses for the child, to the extent covered by the payments. If so, the provision could be rendered almost meaningless. Its main effect would probably occur when the payments exceeded the child's pro-rata share of family expenses; it would prevent payments meant for the child from being diverted to pay debts or imputed to the expenses of other household members. In addition, courts could not necessarily exclude the expenses of the child if the debtor's current monthly income is over median income, because expenses would be determined under the rigid means test formula, based on household size, as discussed below. n6

Another important exclusion from disposable income consists of funds used for repayments of pension loans. New section 1322(f) provides that amounts required to repay loans described in section 362(b)(19) (basically loans from qualified plans) shall not constitute disposable income under section 1325(b). n7 This provision reverses the holdings of many courts under the law in effect prior to the 2005 amendments. n8 It is consistent with the increased protections given by the bill to retirement savings n9 and the fact that continued collection of such loans, usually through wage withholding, is permitted by section 362(b)(19). It also may be a recognition that debtors have often incurred such loans in attempts to pay other debts, so that repayment of the loans is really repaying an obligation incurred to pay other creditors. In addition, section 541(b)(7) specifically provides that neither amounts withheld from wages or received by employers as contributions to employee benefit plans, deferred compensation plans, or IRC section 403(b) plans shall be considered disposable income under section 1325(b)(2). n10 This exclusion covers most pension contributions, both involuntary and voluntary, and is a further step by Congress to give protection to retirement savings.

Determination of Expenses

Equally significant changes were made by the 2005 amendments in determining the debtor's expenses. For all debtors, payments on domestic support obligations first payable after the petition is filed are, under new language in section 1325(b)(2)(A)(i), specifically deducted from income in determining disposable income. This language simply gives effective priority to current support payments, which were ordinarily deducted from debtor's budget under the law in effect prior to the amendments as well.

Debtors with Current Monthly Income Above Applicable State Family Income. Perhaps the most dramatic changes in the disposable income test are the use of the section 707(b) means test expense calculations, coupled with the requirement of a five-year plan, for some debtors. New section 1325(b)(3) provides that for debtors with current monthly income ⁿ¹¹ above the applicable state median income for their household size, ⁿ¹² reasonably necessary expenses are to be calculated using the means test formula in section 707(b)(2)(A) and (B) in order to determine payments to unsecured creditors. ⁿ¹³

The applicable median income is the same as that used for the section 707(b)(7) means test safe harbor, based on the household size of the debtor, with a one person household using the state median income for one earner, households of two to four using the highest median income for a family of equal or lesser size, and household of over four using the highest median income for families of four or less, augmented by $525 per month for each member over four. ⁿ¹⁴ Because this provision is based on current monthly income rather than actual income, this may apply to debtors whose actual income has decreased to well below state median at the time they file the bankruptcy petition and throughout the plan. Again, the trustee is not compelled to object to a plan in these circumstances, and a trustee should not object to a plan, or later modification of a plan, if the debtor proposes to pay all the debtor can truly afford.

At the same time, this provision permits debtors to deduct amounts allowed by the chapter 7 means test, ⁿ¹⁵ even if they seem excessive to a trustee or creditor. ⁿ¹⁶ Secured debt payments are deductible, no matter how high. Moreover, secured debt payments due are deductible even if the debtor will have to pay less in a chapter 13 plan because the debt can be crammed down under section 1325(a)(5). ⁿ¹⁷ This differential provides the debtor a cushion equal to the difference between the amount of the scheduled payments on secured debts plus arrears (or IRS national standard if higher) and the amount payable on the debt in chapter 13. It may also provide some leeway from the strictures of the IRS standards for other expenses. Other expenses that are sometimes not allowed under prior law, such as a limited amount for private school education, are also permitted. ⁿ¹⁸

As originally enacted, section 1325(b)(3) probably did not permit debtors to deduct expenses for charitable contributions, because such expenses are not specified in section 707(b)(2). ⁿ¹⁹ To correct this flaw, Congress enacted the Religious Liberty and Charitable Donation Clarification Act of 2006, ⁿ²⁰ which amended section 1325(b)(3) to provide that expenses for religious and charitable contributions, those described in section 1325(b)(2)(A)(ii), are not to be determined under section 707(b)(2). Such expenses, therefore, continue to be determined under section 1325(b)(2)(A)(ii), which permits a chapter 13 debtor to make such contributions to the extent they do not exceed 15 percent of the debtor's annual gross income.

The provisions permitting the court to adjust expenses for special circumstances ⁿ²¹ are among those incorporated, so that if there are other expenses for which there is no reasonable alternative, the court can take those facts into account. Ultimately, the special circumstances test is not terribly different than the reasonably necessary test used today. However, it is not clear that adjustments to income based on special circumstances are possible. Although section 707(b)(2)(B), referenced in section 1325(b)(3), allows for adjustment of income, section 1325(b)(3) speaks only of amounts reasonably necessary to be expended.

Unfortunately, poor drafting does not make crystal clear how administrative expenses are to be paid. There has been some concern that the incorporated provisions from section 707(b) would limit the debtor's administrative expenses to the 10 percent cap in those provisions. ⁿ²² This would make almost every chapter 13 case impossible, because the expenses necessary to administer almost always exceed 10 percent. However, that cap applies only to hypothetical administrative expenses added for determining abuse in chapter 7. In chapter 13, the administrative expenses are actual priority claims under section 507(a)(2) n23 and therefore may be deducted as part of the means test deduction of priority claims. n24 Even if this were not the case, a debtor could argue that the administrative expenses are necessary legal expenses that may be deducted as Other Necessary Expenses allowed by the Internal Revenue Service collection expense standards. n25

In any event, if trustees were to regularly file such objections, the likely result would be that very few chapter 13 cases would be filed because there would be no way to pay all necessary administrative expenses through the plan. Indeed, if the administrative expenses were limited to 10 percent, the trustee would share those funds pro-rata with other administrative claimants and could not recover his or her full percentage payment. n26

Alternatively, if an objection is filed, courts will hopefully recognize that an administrative expense is an unsecured claim and that section 1325(b) requires funds remaining after the means test deductions to be paid to unsecured creditors generally, not just nonpriority creditors. n27 Creditor is defined as an entity holding a prepetition claim. Normally, the debtor's attorney seeking payment of fees is seeking payment primarily of prepetition fees. Moreover, the provision merely states that unsecured creditors are the entities to be paid from disposable income. It does not limit the payments to payments on prepetition claims. In addition, interpreting section 1325(b) to preclude payment of administrative expenses would place it in direct conflict with section 1326(b), which requires payment of any unpaid claim under section 507(a)(2), which provides for administrative claim priority. In light of all these factors, it seems very unlikely courts will adopt a reading of the statute that precludes payment of the expenses necessary to administer the case.

Debtors with Current Monthly Income Below Applicable State Median Family Income. The calculation of expenses for debtors with current monthly income below the applicable state median family income is much more similar to the expense calculation under prior law. Indeed, other than the specific deduction for postpetition payments on a domestic support obligation, the language is largely unchanged. However, as discussed above, these expenses are now deducted from current monthly income as defined in section 101 and adjusted by other provisions of the Code. n28

Poor drafting creates some confusion about how secured creditors can be paid by debtors below median income. The amended section 1325(b) uses language similar to the language now used by the statute to describe how much is paid into the plan for all creditors, but states that this amount is to be paid to unsecured creditors, creating a possible interpretation that debtors below median income cannot pay any money to secured creditors. However, in light of the fact that section 1325(b)(3), through its incorporation of the section 707(b)(2) means test, now considers payments to secured creditors a part of the amounts reasonably necessary to be expended for support of the debtor and the debtor's dependents with respect to debtors over median income, n29 it would be consistent to read the requirements for debtors below median income the same way, allowing necessary secured debt payments to be considered as reasonably necessary expenses. Some courts have implicitly done so even under prior law, when they have disallowed large secured debt payments made by debtors on items such as luxury automobiles as expenses that are not reasonably necessary. And again, trustees are not likely to raise such an objection to debtors paying secured claims; such objections, if made regularly, would eliminate most chapter 13 cases.

With respect to administrative expenses, the same reasoning should apply for debtors below median income as to debtors above median income, so that payments to unsecured creditors can include payments on priority administrative claims. n30 Alternatively, for debtors both above and below median income, one could argue that administrative expenses are allowed as other necessary expenses for a debtor in chapter 13.

Applicable Commitment Period

Another very significant change in the disposable income test made by the 2005 amendments n31 is the commitment period that must be proposed if the debtor is not proposing to pay 100 percent of allowed unsecured claims n32 and an objection is raised. Section 1325(b)(4) sets an applicable commitment period for section 1325(b) objections. The applicable commitment period remains three years if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined is below the applicable state median income, but is five years if it that current monthly income is above the applicable state median income. n33

One immediate issue with this provision is that a non-debtor spouse does not have any current monthly income, because current monthly income is defined by section 101 as income received by the debtor (or in a joint case the debtor and the debtor's spouse). n34 Thus, by definition, income of a non-debtor spouse not paid to the debtor's household expenses is not current monthly income. Congress must be assumed to know that its definitions will be used and the definition itself tells us when a spouse's income is current monthly income.

If this were not the case, the language including income of a debtor's spouse would not exclude income of a non-debtor separated spouse, even if that spouse contributes nothing to household. The debtor may not even know a separated spouse's income, so it may be difficult to base an objection on it. Moreover, including a separated spouse's total income makes no policy sense. It is hoped that trustees will not invoke section 1325(b) to demand a five-year plan based on income that in reality is unavailable to the debtor.

Because current monthly income does not change during the case--it remains, by definition in section 101, the average income for the six months before the petition--the debtor cannot be forced to change the commitment period if the debtor's income later changes from below median income to above median income.

On the other hand, the required applicable commitment period of five years if current monthly income is above the state median income will discourage some debtors who might otherwise file chapter 13 cases. It will also make plans more likely to fail. There will be two additional years, 67 percent more time, in which an unexpected drop in income or emergency expense could occur.

Another issue is whether the applicable commitment period has any relevance when the debtor's disposable income under section 1325(b) is zero or a negative number. Most courts have held that in such cases the debtor may propose a 36-month plan, since the amount required to be paid to unsecured creditors remains zero, whether the plan is 36 months or longer. n35

In any event, a chapter 13 trustee is not compelled to demand a five-year plan from a debtor whose current monthly income is above the state median income, and probably should not do so in cases where the debtor is not barred from chapter 7 by the means test. The five-year requirement is not applicable unless an objection to confirmation is filed, and it is hard to see how forcing such a debtor into chapter 7 is a desirable result for anyone.

The five-year-plan requirement does not appear to apply to modification of plans. Section 1329 is amended only to say that a modified plan cannot be longer than the applicable commitment period unless the court approves, with a five-year maximum, which implies that the plan may be shorter than the applicable commitment period. n36 Although there had been some dispute under prior law as to whether section 1325(b) applies to modifications, n37 this specific reference seems to make clear that this part of section 1325(b), at least, does not apply. Without the availability of modification, the only solutions for a debtor's inability to complete a plan, even after three years, would be conversion, dismissal or, if possible, a hardship discharge.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1325, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1325 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.10A; Exclusions from Income; §§ 1325(b)(2), 541(b)(7) and 1322(f) infra.

n3

3. E.g., In re Jass, 55 C.B.C.2d 1461, 340 B.R. 411 (Bankr. D. Utah 2006).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender); see also In re Rotunda, 349 B.R. 324 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 2006) (Congress intended to exclude Social Security benefits from income available to creditors).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 101(10A); In re Quarterman, 342 B.R. 647 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2006) (income of debtor's spouse could be considered only to extent contributed to household expenses).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(3); see Determination of Expenses; § 1325(b)(2) & (3) infra.

n7

7. See Baxter v. Johnson (In re Johnson), 346 B.R. 256 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2006); In re Haley, 354 B.R. 340 (Bankr. D.N.H., 2006).

n8

8. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.08[4][b][iv] (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 522(a)(3)(C), (d)(12), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 522 (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. Baxter v. Johnson (In re Johnson), 346 B.R. 256 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2006).

n11

11. Current monthly income is defined in § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. Median family income is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. The applicable median income is the same as that used for the section 707(b)(7) means test safe harbor, based on the household size of the debtor, with a one person household using the state median income for one earner, households of two to four using the highest median income for a family of equal or lesser size, and household of over four using the highest median income for families of four or less, augmented by $525 per month for each member over four.

n13

13. New provisions in chapter 11 make certain chapter 13 concepts, including the disposable income test, applicable to individual chapter 11 cases. However, because new section 1129(a)(15) incorporates only section 1325(b)(2) and not section 1325(b)(3), it does not appear that section 1325(b)(3) would be applicable in chapter 11 cases, even though most chapter 11 individual debtors will have incomes above the applicable state median income.

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.05[2][b] (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2), enacted by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.05[2][c] (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. In re Barr, 55 C.B.C.2d 1763, 341 B.R.181 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2006) (debtor entitled to Internal Revenue expense deductions, even if actual expenses are less); In re Guzman, 56 C.B.C.2d 636, 345 B.R. 640 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2006) (same).

n17

17. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.06[3] (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(IV).

n19

19. In re Diagostino, 347 B.R. 116 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 2006). Chapter 7 debtors may deduct such expenses in the chapter 7 means test by virtue of 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(1).

n20

20. Pub. L. No. 109-439 (2006).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.05[2][d] (Matthew Bender).

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(III).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(2), formerly § 507(a)(1), as redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(iv).

n25

25. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.05[2][c][i] (Matthew Bender).

n26

26. See 11 U.S.C. § 1326(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n27

27. The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules adopted this position in drafting the Official Forms. See Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 22C (debtor's attorney's fees can be paid from disposable income determined available for unsecured creditors). The confusion is compounded because section 707(b)(2)(A)(iv) allows the deduction of priority claims in the means test calculation, in addition to the chapter 13 administrative expenses up to 10% allowed by section 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(III). Then, section 1325(b) requires the disposable income remaining after the calculation to be paid to unsecured creditors generally, presumably including priority claims. It is doubtful that any court would allow the double-counting, or even triple-counting of administrative expenses that this language suggests.

n28

28. See Use of Current Monthly Income to Determine Income; § 1325(b)(2) supra.

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.05 [c][ii] (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. See Debtors with Current Monthly Income Above Applicable State Median Family Income; § 1325(b)(2) & (3) infra.

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(4)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n33

33. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(4)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n34

34. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender). Official Form 22C, which is intended to be neutral on this issue, incorporates this interpretation, as well as the interpretation that the income of both spouses must be counted, by permitting the debtor to take the position in line 13 that the nondebtor spouse's income that is not regularly contributed to household expenses of the debtor and the debtor's dependents is not counted to determine the applicable commitment period.

n35

35. In re Brady, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 501 (Bankr. D.N.J. Feb. 13, 2007); In re Fuger, 56 C.B.C.2d 475, 347 B.R. 94 (Bankr. D. Utah 2006); In re Alexander, 56 C.B.C.2d 427, 344 B.R. 742 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2006).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 1329(c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n37

37. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1329.05[3] (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

160 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Ch. 13 Trustees Duty to Give Notices re Domestic Support Obligations

2008 Emerging Issues 1260

Collier on Ch. 13 Trustees Duty to Give Notices re Domestic Support Obligations

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1302(b)(6) of the Bankruptcy Code, added by the 2005 amendments, requires the trustee to provide certain notices in cases in which there is a claim with respect to the debtor for a domestic support obligation. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to notice requirements under section 1302.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 1302(b)(6) of the Bankruptcy Code, n1 added by the 2005 amendments, requires the trustee to provide certain notices in cases in which there is a claim with respect to the debtor for a domestic support obligation. n2 Although the language of this provision is not entirely clear, it appears from section 1302(d) and the legislative history that the requirement only applies when the debtor is the obligor on such an obligation, and not when the debtor is the obligee. Section 524(c) speaks of the holder of a claim and the legislative history speaks of a domestic support claimant, n3 both of which suggest application to a person who has a claim against the debtor. Virtually identical provisions were also added in 2005 to chapters 7, 11 and 12. n4

The obvious purpose of these provisions is to enhance the ability of child support claimants and state child support enforcement agencies to assert their claims in the bankruptcy process and after bankruptcy, in order to compete with the enhanced rights of other creditors under the 2005 amendments.

Notice of Child Support Enforcement Agency Services and Bankruptcy Rights; § 1302(d)(1)(A). The trustee is required by section 1302(d)(1)(A) to provide to the holder of a domestic support obligation claim written notice that the claimant is entitled to use the services of the state child support enforcement agency established under sections 464 and 466 of the Social Security Act to obtain assistance in collecting support in bankruptcy and afterwards. n5 Such agencies exist in every state, as part of the federal government's effort to facilitate the collection of child support. However, because the definition of domestic support obligation goes beyond child support, n6 such agencies could not assist in the collection of every domestic support obligation. The notice is to include the address and telephone number of the child support enforcement agency. n7

Notice to State Child Support Agency; § 1302(d)(1)(B). The trustee must also provide written notice to the state child support enforcement agency of the existence of the claim against the debtor, and include in the notice the name, address and telephone number of the holder of the claim. n8 The statute does not say how the trustee is to obtain the telephone number of the claim holder, which is not listed in any papers filed in the case. Although the schedules could perhaps be changed to include this information, many holders of domestic support obligations would probably not appreciate their phone numbers being made available in public records. The trustee could also inquire about the telephone number at the meeting of creditors, although the debtor may not know the number. Presumably, this information is to be sent in case the child support agency wants to become involved in the case, perhaps because the claim has been assigned to it or because it has assisted the claimant in the past.

Notice at Time of Discharge; § 1302(d)(1)(C). The trustee is required to send another notice at the time the debtor is granted a discharge. This notice is to be sent to the domestic support obligee and to the state child support enforcement agency. n9

This notice is to inform its recipients of the granting of the discharge, the last recent known address of the debtor, the last recent known address of the debtor's employer, and the name of each creditor that holds a claim that is not discharged under section 523(a)(2) or (4), or that was reaffirmed. n10 Again, the purpose of this notice is presumably to facilitate child support collection, especially in cases in which there exist nondischarged or reaffirmed debts held by creditors that will be competing with the support claimant for the debtor's limited assets and income.

Request for Address of Debtor; § 1302(d)(2). Section 1302(d)(2)(A), also added in 2005, n11 permits the holder of a domestic support obligation claim or a state child support obligation agency to request the debtor's last known address from a creditor holding a claim that is not discharged under section 523(a)(2) or (4), or that was reaffirmed. This provision was likely added in recognition that large national creditors often have more sophisticated collection facilities that may give them an advantage in competing with child support creditors. Unfortunately, the provision does not oblige the creditor to respond to the request, so it simply confers a right that already existed--the right to make a request.

In the unlikely event that the creditor does respond to the request, the creditor is protected from liability for disclosing the debtor's address, notwithstanding any other provision of law, by section 1302(d)(2)(B). Such liability could otherwise be substantial, at least in occasional cases. It is possible, for example, that a child support creditor may have been the abuser in a domestic violence case, and that the debtor may have been a victim who had fled from the abuser. Although the debtor might have been able to protect her identifying information under section 107(c), n12 the debtor may not have known to seek such protection. The possibility of becoming involved in such situations is likely to discourage creditors from responding to requests for address information.

For a complete discussion of Code section 1302, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1302 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. Domestic support obligation is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch.101 (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. H.R. Rep. No.31, 109th Cong. 1st Sess., 62 (2005).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(10), (c); 1106(a)(8), (c); 1202(b)(6), (c); 1302(b)(6), (d), all added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 704.14, ch. 1106 and ch. 1202 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(d)(1)(A)(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(d)(1)(A)(ii), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(d)(1)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(d)(1)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 1302(d)(1)(C)(i)-(iv), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11

11. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. § 107(c), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 107.04 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

161 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Effect of Existing Defaults on the Assumption or Rejection of Executory Contract

2008 Emerging Issues 1261

Collier on Effect of Existing Defaults on the Assumption or Rejection of Executory Contracts

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 365(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that the trustee may not assume an executory contract or lease on which there has been a default unless the trustee complies with three requirements. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to section 365(b).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 365(b) provides that the trustee may not assume an executory contract or lease on which there has been a default unless the trustee complies with three requirements. n1 The trustee must: (1) cure the default or provide adequate assurance that the default will be promptly cured; (2) compensate or provide adequate assurance that the trustee will promptly compensate the other party for any pecuniary loss to the party resulting from the default; and (3) provide adequate assurance of future performance under the contract or lease. n2

As will be discussed more extensively below, n3 these requirements do not apply to a default that is a breach of a provision relating to insolvency or the financial condition of the debtor, the commencement of the case, or the appointment of a trustee or custodian. In addition, they do not apply to a cross-default clause unless the contract or lease at issue is part of a single, integrated transaction with the other contract or lease, such that, as a matter of state law, the breach of one contract would, independent of the cross-default provision, excuse performance under the other. n4 Where a single lessor leases multiple locations to a single debtor under separate leases, the cross-default provision will not be enforced. n5

Requirements Inapplicable Unless There Has Been Default

By its terms, section 365(b) applies only when there has been a default other than a default relating to bankruptcy or financial condition. If there has been no default, the trustee need not comply with the cure, compensation and adequate assurance requirements of section 365(b). Instead, the trustee, subject to court approval, may simply assume a contract or lease, unless such assumption is barred by other provisions of subsection 365, such as section 365(c) n6 or (e). n7

Default May Have Occurred Pre- or Postpetition

Section 365(b) applies to contracts for which default has occurred either before or after the commencement of the case. The other party to the contract or lease that the trustee proposes to assume is entitled to insist that any defaults, whenever they may have occurred, be cured, that appropriate compensation be provided, and that, a past default having occurred, adequate assurance of future performance is available. A chapter 11 debtor's discharge does not affect the obligation to cure defaults under a contract assumed under a plan. n8

However, the trustee or debtor in possession may cure, and thereafter assume, a contract or lease only if the agreement is still in existence. If the contract or lease was terminated prepetition or expired postpetition according to its terms, and if the termination process was actually completed and not subject to reversal, there is no contract or lease for the trustee to cure or to assume. n9

Terms of Cure

One important question under section 365(b) concerns the terms of the cure. The Code answers some but not all of the questions that may arise. First, there must be a cure. This means that the contract or lease must be brought back into compliance with its terms. Second, there must be compensation for pecuniary loss to the other party. n10 Finally, there must be assurance that the contract or lease will be performed in the future.

Adequate Assurance Suffices. In each instance, adequate assurance that the action will be taken is a substitute for the immediate taking of the action. There is no general definition of the term adequate assurance. n11 Its meaning is left to be developed based upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The term, however, has some flexibility. In particular, because in an appropriate case it is possible for the cure or compensation for loss to be something other than immediate cash payment, adequate assurance may be of something other than the availability of cash to cure or compensate.

Strict Compliance with Contract Terms Not Necessarily Required. The trustee takes executory contracts and leases as they are, subject to all of their provisions except those rendered unenforceable by applicable nonbankruptcy law or section 365. n12 This might suggest that the trustee is required to cure defaults according to the terms of the agreement. In many instances, however, a cure according to the terms of the lease or contract will not be possible, even with the assistance of the minimum 60-day grace period afforded the trustee by section 108(b), n13 because a cure cannot be effected within the first 60 days of the case. A contract or lease may be subject to a noncurable default but may not have terminated under state law. n14

This raises important questions concerning the cure under section 365(b). Must the cure of a default be upon the terms, and within the time, set forth in the contract or lease? Alternatively, is a cure of a default possible if there is no cure provision in the agreement?

The answer seems to be that the Code provides a broad right to cure, regardless of whether the agreement itself would permit cure. n15 The idea of cure in the Code is to provide the other party to the contract with the benefit of its economic bargain. n16 This suggests that if the trustee is able to provide a remedy that offers the other party to the contract the substantial equivalent to its economic rights under the contract, the trustee will have provided an adequate cure and, if the trustee complies with the other provisions of section 365(b), will be able to assume the contract or lease. n17

Incurable Nonmonetary Defaults. By their nature, certain nonmonetary defaults are not curable. For example, the prepetition breach of a continuous operation clause in a real property leases cannot literally be cured, because the trustee cannot go back in time and cause the debtor to operate in the past during the time that it did not operate. It was generally understood that a 1994 amendment to the Code, which added section 365(b)(2)(D), was intended to relieve the trustee of the obligation to cure such a default. However, the provision was poorly and ungrammatically drafted and so led to confusion. n18 In Claremont Acquisition Corp., the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit read the provision to require cure of such a default, thereby preventing the trustee from assuming a real property lease under which the debtor had violated a continuous operation clause. n19

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 n20 amended section 365(b)(1)(A) to overrule the result, although not the statutory reading, in Claremont Acquisition. n21 Section 365(b)(1)(A) specifically exempts from the cure requirement the cure of a default that is a breach of a provision relating to the satisfaction of any provision (other than a penalty rate or penalty provision) relating to a default arising from any failure to perform nonmonetary obligations under an unexpired lease of real property, if it is impossible for the trustee to cure such default by performing nonmonetary acts at and after the time of assumption. The provision retains much of the awkward and indecipherable flavor of section 365(b)(2)(D): a default that is a breach of a provision relating to the satisfaction of any provision relating to a default arising from any failure to perform . leaves the reader somewhat breathless, as well as perplexed as to what was intended. It is suggested, however, that the reference to nonmonetary obligations and the impossibility of cure by subsequent performance means that the provision relates to continuous operation provisions and other provisions that are similar in that they involve nonmonetary obligations and cannot be retroactively cured. Certainly, all of the bankruptcy and financial condition defaults described in section 365(b)(2) would fall within that group were they not covered separately.

Although this provision was intended to overturn the result in Claremont Acquisition, it does so narrowly. It applies only to real property leases. Personal property leases and nonlease executory contracts are expressly excluded. In addition, a companion amendment to section 365(b)(2)(D) resolves the prior ambiguity in that section consistent with the Ninth Circuit's decision in Claremont Acquisition, preventing a more charitable reading of the provision for personal property leases and executory contracts. n22 Moreover, it does not apply to the breach of a provision relating to the satisfaction of a penalty rate or penalty provision. Thus, a penalty rate or penalty provision must be cured. Cure of a penalty rate should be a straight-forward matter, which is accomplished by the payment of money. It is unclear how to cure a penalty provision that is not a rate, especially if the penalty provides, for example, for forfeiture of a right under the lease.

The new provision also adds the requirement that if such default arises from the failure to operate in accordance with a nonresidential real property lease, it must be cured by performance at and after the time of assumption in accordance with such lease, and the lessor is entitled to compensation for any pecuniary losses resulting from the default. This provision also suffers from an ambiguity, in that the antecedent to such default is unclear. It could be the default referenced in the beginning language of section 365(b)(1)(A)--the default that must be cured as a condition to assumption. Or it could be the default that need not be cured--the breach of a nonmonetary obligation that is impossible to cure. The latter makes more sense in context, because it would provide a substitute for cure of an incurable obligation. Monetary compensation for the former kind of default is already required under section 365(b)(1)(B).

Effect of Other Code Provisions. Three other provisions of the Code affect the treatment of breaches under executory contracts and unexpired leases in section 365(b). First, under section 108(b) some courts have held the trustee to a period of 60 days after the order for relief to cure any existing defaults. n23 Other courts have declined to apply section 108(b) literally in this context, holding that the trustee must be permitted a reasonable amount of flexibility, consistent with other provisions of the Code, in determining whether to assume or to reject an unexpired lease or executory contract. Under this approach, section 108(b) is not tacked on to the express requirements for curing defaults under section 365(b). n24 Second, section 362(a)(3) stays an act or action to obtain possession or control over a debtor's leasehold estate, including any act to obtain possession of the leased property. n25 Consequently, a lessor must obtain stay relief prior to terminating or modifying a lease. Similarly, the automatic stay prohibits any nondebtor party to a contract or lease from unilaterally terminating the agreement. n26 Third, just as a postpetition cure of a default under an assumed contract or lease is not only permitted but required, a cure of a default under an assumed contract or lease, which the debtor effected prepetition, is not subject to recovery as a preference under section 547. n27 Similarly, any prepetition payment under a contract that is later assumed is not avoidable as a preference, because assumption and cure would defeat the greater percentage test for preference. n28

Terminated Contracts. An even more difficult problem arises when the contract has already been terminated according to its terms under applicable nonbankruptcy law, which leaves the trustee with nothing to assume or reject. n29 If the termination process has not been completed or, if completed, can be reversed by application of a nonbankruptcy anti-forfeiture statute or waiver doctrine, the trustee may still assume. n30 It has often been said that bankruptcy courts generally are not inclined to support forfeitures. n31 However, if the contract has been completely and irrevocably terminated before the commencement of the case, the trustee's ability to cure under section 365(b) is inapplicable, as the contract no longer exists.

Insolvency-Related Defaults; § 365(b)(2)

The requirements of section 365(b)(1) do not apply to defaults that concern provisions that relate to the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor, the commencement of the case or the appointment of a trustee, receiver or custodian before the case. n32 This exception to the general rule requiring cure of defaults furthers the bankruptcy policy of preventing the enforcement of ipso facto or optional bankruptcy termination clauses. In the context of the cure requirement, the exception is particularly important because the trustee cannot possibly cure a default flowing, for example, from the debtor's commencement of a case. If a provision stating that the contract was in default upon the filing of a bankruptcy petition could be enforced, parties could write contracts that could never be assumed by a trustee or debtor in possession. The bars to the enforcement of ipso facto clauses in subsections 365(b)(2) and (e) are intended to prevent a party to a contract from opting out of bankruptcy through the use of such clauses. Section 365(e) also preempts nonbankruptcy laws that effect ipso facto terminations upon bankruptcy filings. n33

The scope of section 365(b)(2) is broad. It applies not only to defaults triggered by a bankruptcy filing, but also to defaults triggered by events or conditions that are likely to occur or exist around the time that a case is commenced. For example, a default measured by the debtor's financial condition need not be cured, whether the default is related directly to the bankruptcy filing or merely occurred on the road to bankruptcy.

This paragraph is a significant departure from Section 70b of the prior Act, which had permitted enforcement of ipso facto clauses and the like. Such clauses had been reluctantly enforced in rehabilitation cases under the Act, n34 although a significant trend away from enforceability had begun, at least in cases in which a public interest might be said to have been present or where termination might have frustrated confirmation of an otherwise feasible plan. n35

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 n36 amended section 365(b)(2) by adding subparagraph (D) to make it clear that, in curing a default under an executory contract or unexpired lease, it is not necessary to satisfy any penalty rate or provision relating to a default arising from any failure by the debtor to perform nonmonetary obligations. In a very close, but questionable, textual reading of subparagraph (D), however, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that the provision does not excuse the trustee from curing the debtor's prepetition violation of a continuous operation clause. n37 The court concluded that the adjective penalty in the phrase satisfaction of any penalty rate or provision relating to a default arising from any failure by the debtor to perform nonmonetary obligations modified provision as well as rate. Because the debtor's failure to operate was not a default of a provision relating to satisfaction of a penalty rate or the payment of a penalty, n38 subparagraph (D) did not apply to excuse cure of the default. Whether or not the court was correct in its grammatical parsing of the phrase, it seems that Congress's intent in enacting the subparagraph was to address just such a situation, that is, where the trustee cannot go back in time to undo an act or omission of the debtor but could compensate for any actual pecuniary loss that the other contracting party suffered as a result of the default. The Court of Appeals for the First Circuit came to the opposite conclusion, absolving the trustee of curing a nonmonetary historical default. n39 Whether the reference to any penalty rate will include late charges on lease payments will be determined by case law.

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 n40 resolved the differences in readings between the Ninth and the First Circuits. It amended subparagraph (D) by inserting penalty immediately before provision, so that the phrase now refers to the satisfaction of any penalty rate or penalty provision. This adopts the Ninth Circuit's view of the interpretation of subparagraph (B). At the same time, Congress amended section 365(b)(1)(A) in an effort to overturn the result in cases such as the one in which the Ninth Circuit ruled, that is, in the case of the prior breach of a continuous operation clause. n41

Leases of Real Property in a Shopping Center; § 365(b)(3)

The right to assume an unexpired lease under which there is an existing default is further limited by section 365(b)(3) if the lease is one of real property in a shopping center. The term shopping center is not defined in the Code, but should be strictly construed. n42 It is likely that the most important characteristic will be a combination of leases held by a single landlord, leased to commercial retail distributors of goods, with the presence of a common parking area. n43

Adequate Assurance of Future Performance of Shopping Center Leases. Section 365(b)(3) provides that when there has been a default in a shopping center lease, adequate assurance of future performance includes adequate assurance

- . of the source of rent and other consideration due under such lease, and in the case of an assignment, that the financial condition and operating performance of the proposed assignee and its guarantors, if any, shall be similar to the financial condition and operating performance of the debtor and its guarantors, if any, as of the time the debtor became the lessee under the lease;

- . that any percentage rent due under such lease will not decline substantially;

- . that assumption or assignment of such lease is subject to all the provisions thereof, including (but not limited to) provisions such as a radius, location, use, or exclusivity provision, and will not breach any such provision contained in any other lease, financing agreement, or master agreement relating to such shopping center; n44 and

- . that assumption or assignment of such lease will not disrupt any tenant mix or balance in such shopping center.

It is worth noting that, pursuant to section 102(3), the word includes, which is used in section 365(b)(3), is not limiting. Thus, other aspects of adequate assurance may be required in addition to those listed in section 365(b)(3).

Adequate Assurance in Absence of Default. In general, paragraph (3) applies only when there is a default. As with other executory contracts and leases, the assumption of a shopping center lease is not limited when the lease is not in default. Assignment of a shopping center lease, like other contracts or leases, requires adequate assurance of future performance whether or not the lease is in default. n45 Here, however, the standard of adequate assurance differs for shopping center leases even if they are not in default. This is because in 1984 Congress added the phrase and paragraph (2)(B) of subsection (f) to section 365(b)(3), confirming that the description of adequate assurance in section 365(b)(3) is applicable both to adequate assurance of future performance provided in order to assume a defaulted shopping center lease and also to the adequate assurance necessary when such a lease is assigned. n46 Thus, whether or not a default exists, the added language requires reference to section 365(b)(3) for the definition of the term adequate assurance in section 365(f)(2)(B) whenever a lease in a shopping center is to be assigned.

Furnishing of Services or Supplies; § 365(b)(4)

The remaining exception in section 365(b) involves any lease under which the lessor is required to provide services or supplies incidental to the lease. Subsection (b)(4) relieves the lessor of any requirement to provide services or supplies under the lease prior to assumption if there has been a default under the lease and the trustee fails to furnish compensation under the terms of the lease for the services or supplies provided. The lessor would be required in any event to provide such services or supplies if there were no default, in accordance with the terms of the lease. This paragraph indicates that a debtor-lessee's default under the lease does not necessarily relieve the lessor of its obligations to provide services or supplies, as long as the lessor receives compensation for the services or supplies provided.

Subsection (b)(4) has the effect of requiring that compensation for postpetition services or supplies be under the terms of the lease rather than upon terms approved by the court. Thus if the lease provides for payment on 30-day terms, the lessor cannot demand cash payment as a condition to providing services or supplies.

As with the assumption provision, the defaults that trigger the trustee's obligation to compensate the lessor do not include defaults related to ipso facto and similar clauses.

For a complete discussion of Code section 365, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 365 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.03 (Matthew Bender), text accompanying notes 1 and 2 (debtor in possession in a chapter 11 case and debtor in a chapter 12 or 13 case may assume or reject).

n2

2. Richmond Leasing Co. v. Capital Bank, N.A., 762 F.2d 1303, 1309-10, 12 C.B.C.2d 1202, 1207-08 (5th Cir. 1985); Pieco, Inc. v. Atlantic Computer Sys., Inc. (In re Atlantic Computer Sys., Inc.), 173 B.R. 844 (S.D.N.Y. 1994).

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.07 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See In re Sanshoe Worldwide, Corp., 139 B.R. 585 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (leases of different floors in separate transactions); In re Easthampton Sand & Gravel Co., 7 C.B.C.2d 903, 25 B.R. 193 (E.D.N.Y. 1982) (single transaction); see also In re Karfakis, 162 B.R. 719 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993) (certain agreements are indivisible and may therefore only be assumed together or not at all).

n5

5. In re Sanshoe Worldwide, Corp., 139 B.R. 585 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (leases of different floors in separate transactions); In re Sambo's Restaurants, Inc., 24 B.R. 755 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1982) (leases of different locations).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.06 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.07 (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. Century Indem. Co. v. National Gypsum Co. Settlement Trust (In re National Gypsum Co.), 208 F.3d 498 (5th Cir. 2000).

n9

9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. Attorney's fees are included as pecuniary loss only if the contract or lease provides for payment of attorney's fees by the defaulting party and only as to fees not relating to litigation arising under the Bankruptcy Code. In re Shangri-La, Inc., 213 B.R. 303 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1997).

n11

11. See, e.g., In re Martin Paint Stores, 199 B.R. 258, 263 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996) (courts give phrase adequate assurances a pragmatic construction and [a]t a minimum, the primary focus of adequate assurance concerns the assignee's [or debtor's] ability to fulfill the financial obligations under the lease); In re Carlisle Homes, Inc., 103 B.R. 524 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1988) (phrase adopted from UCC; should be given practical, pragmatic construction based upon the facts and circumstances of each case).

n12

12. See 11 U.S.C. § 365(e)(f).

n13

13. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 108 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. See In re Waterkist Corp., 775 F.2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1985); In re Fontainebleau Hotel Corp., 515 F.2d 913, 914 (5th Cir. 1975) (court observed that under Louisiana law cancellation for nonpayment of rent is not effective until the court has ordered termination and granted possession).

n15

15. See Post v. Sigel & Co., Ltd. (In re Sigel & Co., Ltd.), 923 F.2d 142, 24 C.B.C.2d 869 (9th Cir. 1991) (contract that is silent as to right to cure may nevertheless be assumed provided the other requirements for assumption are met) (citing Seacoast Prods., Inc. v. Spring Valley Farms, 34 B.R. 379, 382 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1983) (section 365(b) gives the debtor the power to void the non-debtor's right under state law to terminate the contract, provided the contract is executory)).

n16

16. See S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess., 59; H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 2d Sess.

n17

17. Coleman Oil Co. v. Circle K Corp. (In re Circle K Corp.), 190 B.R. 370 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996), aff'd, 127 F.3d 904 (9th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1148 (1998); In re Masterworks, Inc., 100 B.R. 149 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1989).

n18

18. More important than the ambiguity that the 2005 amendment to section 365(b)(2)(D) resolved, see Insolvency-Related Defaults; § 365(b)(2) infra, the language of subparagraph (D) does not parse as part of the grammatical sentence that is paragraph (2) of section 365(b).

n19

19. Worthington v. Gen. Mot. Corp. (In re Claremont Acquisition Corp.), 113 F.3d 1029 (9th Cir. 1997).

n20

20. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(1)(A) (2005), the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005.

n21

21. The amendments to section 365 are effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501 (2005).

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.04 (Matthew Bender). The Court of Appeals for the First Circuit had interpreted section 365(b)(2)(D) in a manner that would have permitted substitution of a monetary cure of such nonmonetary defaults. Eagle Ins. Co. v. Bankvest Capital Corp. (In re Bankvest Capital Corp.), 360 F.3d 291 (1st Cir. 2004) (prepetition failure to deliver equipment to the debtor's lessee need not be cured, but the reorganized debtor remained liable for damages for the breach).

n23

23. See Counties Contracting & Constr. Co. v. Constitution Life Ins. Co., 855 F.2d 1054, 1058-60 (3d Cir. 1988) (effectively holding debtor in possession to 60 days to assume or reject executory contract); In re Players Pub., Inc., 45 B.R. 387 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1985) (section 108(b) prevails over section 362 or 365 and requires debtor in possession to act within the parameters of section 108(b)).

n24

24. Coleman Oil Co. v. The Circle K Corp. (In re The Circle K Corp.), 127 F.3d 904, 38 C.B.C.2d 1445 (9th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1148, 118 S. Ct. 1166, 140 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1998) (a time-sensitive renewal option that may be exercised only if the debtor is not in default may be exercised before assumption and cure so as not to effectively shorten the time for assumption); Moody v. Amoco Oil Co., 734 F.2d 1200, 1216, 11 C.B.C.2d 1, 17 (7th Cir. 1984) (Applying section 108(b) here would force debtors to decide whether to cure long before they must decide whether to assume or reject the contract and long before they know whether any reorganization plan will be confirmed.); Coleman Oil Co. v. Circle K Corp. (In re Circle K Corp.), 190 B.R. 370 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996); In re Tudor Motor Lodge Assocs., Ltd. P'ship, 102 B.R. 936, 951 & n. 8 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1989); In re Masterworks, Inc., 100 B.R. 149 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1989) (section 365 gives the debtor a right to cure any time before confirmation); In re Memphis-Friday's Assocs., 88 B.R. 830 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 1988) (section 365(c)(3) is more specific and limiting than section 108(b)).

n25

25. In re Convenient Food Mart No. 144, Inc., 968 F.2d 592, 27 C.B.C.2d 272 (6th Cir. 1992); In re Atlantic Business & Community Corp., 901 F.2d 325, 22 C.B.C.2d 1176 (3d Cir. 1990) (mere possessory interest in property triggers stay).

n26

26. Computer Communications, Inc. v. Codex Corp. (In re Computer Communications, Inc.), 824 F.2d 725, 17 C.B.C.2d 556 (9th Cir. 1987).

n27

27. In re Superior Toy Mfg. Co., Inc., 78 F.3d 1169, 35 C.B.C.2d 637 (7th Cir. 1996).

n28

28. Philip Servs. Corp. v. Luntz (In re Philip Servs. (Del.), Inc.), 284 B.R. 541 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002).

n29

29. See Robinson v. Chicago Hous. Auth., 54 F.3d 316, 33 C.B.C.2d 603 (7th Cir. 1995); Erickson v. Polk, 921 F.2d 200 (8th Cir. 1990); Vanderpark Props., Inc. v. Buchbinder (In re Windmill Farms, Inc.), 841 F.2d 1467 (9th Cir. 1988).

n30

30. In re Waterkist Corp., 775 F.2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1985); Elkton Assocs. v. Shelco Inc. (In re Shelco Inc.), 107 B.R. 483 (Bankr. D. Del. 1989); Gallatin Hous. Auth. v. Talley (In re Talley), 69 B.R. 219 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1986); see also In re Burke, 76 F. Supp. 5 (S.D. Cal. 1948) (court invoked Cal. Code Civ. P. § 1179 to relieve the debtor from a prepetition forfeiture based upon defaults arising from nonpayment of rent and failure to report gross income).

n31

31. See Finn v. Meighan, 325 U.S. 300, 301, 65 S. Ct. 1147, 1149, 89 L. Ed. 1624, 1626 (1945), in which the Court, per Justice Douglas, stated: The bankruptcy court does not look with favor upon forfeiture clauses in leases. They are liberally construed in favor of the bankrupt lessee so as not to deprive the estate of property which may turn out to be a valuable asset.

n32

32. See 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(2), (e); Summit Inv. & Dev. Corp. v. Leroux, 69 F.3d 608, 34 C.B.C.2d 1351 (1st Cir. 1995) (section 365(e) invalidates contractual ipso facto provisions and preempts state partnership laws to the same effect).

n33

33. See, e.g., Summit Inv. & Dev. Corp. v. Leroux, 69 F.3d 608, 34 C.B.C.2d 1351 (1st Cir. 1995).

n34

34. See Finn v. Meighan, 325 U.S. 300, 301, 65 S. Ct. 1147, 1149, 89 L. Ed. 1624, 1626 (1945).

n35

35. Queens Blvd. Wine & Liquor Corp. v. Blum, 503 F.2d 202 (2d Cir. 1979); In re D. H. Overmyer Co., Inc., 510 F.2d 329 (2d Cir. 1975).

n36

36. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 219 (1994).

n37

37. Worthington v. General Motors Corp. (In re Claremont Acquisition Corp., Inc.), 113 F.3d 1029 (9th Cir. 1997). The court also reviewed the legislative history to support its conclusion. Id. at 1034.

n38

38. 113 F.3d 1029, 1033-34.

n39

39. Eagle Ins. Co. v. Bankvest Capital Corp. (In re Bankvest Capital Corp.), 360 F.3d 291 (1st Cir. 2004); accord Ramco-Gershenson Props., L.P. v. Service Merch. Co., Inc., 293 B.R. 169 (M.D. Tenn. 2003) (going dark clause).

n40

40. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(1)(B) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n41

41. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 328(a)(1)(A) (2005); see Incurable Nonmonetary Defaults supra.

n42

42. In re Joshua Slocum Ltd., 922 F.2d 1081, 1087, 24 C.B.C.2d 581, 587 (3d Cir. 1990) (factors considered in determining status of property under section 365(b)(3) include a combination of lease with other leases; all leases held by a single landlord; all tenants engaged in the commercial retail distribution of goods; the presence of a common parking area; the purposeful development of the premises as a shopping center; the existence of a master lease; the existence of fixed hours during which all stores are open; the existence of joint advertising; contractual interdependence of the tenants as evidenced by restrictive use provisions in their leases; the existence of percentage rent provisions in the leases; joint participation by tenants in trash removal and other maintenance; existence of a tenant mix; and contiguity of the stores).

n43

43. The characteristics of a shopping center and of pedestrian malls have been examined to some extent in picketing cases, such as Amalgamated Food Employees Union Local 590 v. Logan Valley Plaza, Inc., 391 U.S. 308, 88 S. Ct. 1601, 20 L. Ed. 2d 603 (1968), which have been cited approvingly in the bankruptcy context, see In re Joshua Slocum Ltd., 922 F.2d 1081, 24 C.B.C.2d 581 (3d Cir. 1990); In re Goldblatt Bros., Inc., 766 F.2d 1136, 13 C.B.C.2d 115 (7th Cir. 1985); In re Ames Dept. Stores, Inc., 24 C.B.C.2d 1076, 121 B.R. 160 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990).

n44

44. In a very aggressive reading of this provision, the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit rejected an assignment of a lease to a discount retail clothier, based on a lease provision that required that the premises be used only for an auto parts store. The lease required that the store be operated only under the debtor's trade name, but court left open the question of whether that provision could be enforced, because the landlord waived it in this case. Congress Fin. Corp. v. West Town Ctr. LLC (In re Trak Auto Corp.), 367 F.3d 237 (4th Cir. 2004).

n45

45. 11 U.S.C. § 365(f)(2).

n46

46. Added by the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353; see also In re Joshua Slocum Ltd., 922 F.2d 1081, 1090, 24 C.B.C.2d 581, 591-92 (3d Cir. 1990) (court observes that court's authority to waive the strict enforcement of lease provisions in the context of shopping center cases is limited further than nonshopping center leases. However, literal compliance with all lease provisions is not required as insubstantial disruptions in, among other things, the tenant mix, are not fatal and may be allowed.).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

162 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Dismissal of a Ch. 7 Case for Abuse

2008 Emerging Issues 1257

Collier on Dismissal of a Ch. 7 Case for Abuse

By Collier

December 3, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses section 707(b), including the 2005 amendments, the bright line test to determine whether a debtor's chapter 7 case is to be presumed abusive, safe harbor from means testing, the expenses allowed in a means test, adjustments for special circumstances, the exception for certain disabled veterans, and motions to dismiss based upon forms of abuse other than the presumption of abuse.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Modification of Former Substantial Abuse Standard

The 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code very substantially amended section 707(b) to establish new and detailed provisions relating to dismissal of chapter 7 cases. n1 The former language permitting motions under section 707(b) to be filed only by the court or the United States trustee was deleted, as was the language prohibiting motions filed at the request or suggestion of a party in interest. However, a new section 707(b)(6) forbids motions under section 707(b) against debtors below the applicable state median income standard from being filed by anyone other than the court or the United States trustee, or Bankruptcy Administrator, n2 if any. n3 In addition, a new section 707(b)(7) forbids any party from filing a means test motion, based on the debtor's ability to pay debts, against a debtor below the applicable median income standard. n4

The 2005 amendments also changed the standard for dismissal from "substantial abuse" to "abuse." It is unclear how much impact this will have; few, if any, courts permitted a chapter 7 case to proceed because they found it to be an abuse, but not a substantial abuse, under prior law. If courts found cases to be abusive under the totality of the circumstances, those cases were dismissed. n5

Similarly, the amendments eliminated the sentence that created a presumption in favor of granting chapter 7 relief to the debtor. Again, it is not clear whether this will make much difference in motions under section 707(b). Few courts relied upon this presumption to alter the disposition they would otherwise have ordered. n6 However, the amendments also created a presumption against granting relief to the debtor, a presumption of abuse, in certain cases. n7

Finally, the former language of section 707(b), which is now incorporated in section 707(b)(1) was amended to provide that as an alternative to dismissal, the court could convert a case to chapter 11 or chapter 13 with the debtor's consent. This, too, is not a marked change from the pre-existing practice, as debtors facing dismissal under former section 707(b) had normally been given the opportunity to voluntarily convert their cases to chapter 11 or chapter 13.

Presumption of Abuse

General Principles. The provisions of section 707(b)(2) create a bright line test to determine whether a debtor's chapter 7 case is to be presumed abusive for purposes of section 707(b). The test is applied only if the debtor's current monthly income, as defined in section 101, n8 is above the safe harbor amount set forth in section 707(b)(7). n9 Such debtors are required to perform a complicated set of calculations, in which various monthly expenses allowed by the statute, including certain expenses specified in the collection standards of the Internal Revenue Service, are deducted from current monthly income. If, after deduction of those expenses, the monthly amount deemed to be remaining, multiplied by 60, is either (1) greater than or equal to $6,575 n10 or 25 percent of the debtor's nonpriority unsecured debts, whichever is greater or (2) greater than or equal to $10,950, n11 then the case is presumed to be an abuse. If the case is presumed to be an abuse, the court may dismiss it under section 707(b) or, with the debtor's consent, convert the case to chapter 13. n12

Safe Harbor from Means Testing. Section 707(b)(7) provides a safe harbor that prohibits use of the means test if the current monthly income n13 of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, multiplied by 12, is equal to or less than the median family income n14 for a family the size of the debtor's household as set forth in the statute. n15 For a debtor in a household of one, the median family income is that for a family of one earner in the applicable state. For a debtor in a household of more than four members, the median family income is the highest median family income for a family of four or fewer members plus $575 n16 per month for each individual in excess of four. This language, and similar language applicable to households of two to four members, recognizes that in many states the median income for a smaller family may be higher than for a larger family, and allows the debtor to utilize the highest number.

The language concerning the debtor's spouse is problematic if the case is not a joint case. The definition of "current monthly income" includes only income that the debtor receives or, in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse. n17 By definition, then, a nondebtor spouse has no current monthly income. This fact might raise a question about why Congress found it necessary to add section 707(b)(7)(B), which excludes the income of a separated spouse in a case that is not a joint case, for purposes of the means test threshold if the debtor certifies that the spouses are separated for purposes other than evading the means test and specifies any cash or money payments from the nondebtor spouse to the debtor's household. However, this provision serves the purpose of preventing two spouses from evading the means test by living apart and filing separate chapter 7 cases; in that situation each spouse would be a debtor with current monthly income.

Official Form 22A, promulgated to implement the means test, appears to take the position that the nondebtor's spouse should be added to the debtor's income for purposes of section 707(b)(7), in that line 12 directs the debtor to state the total of both spouses' incomes. n18 Although the nondebtor spouse's income not devoted to the household expenses of the debtor or dependents of the debtor is subtracted in line 17 for other means tests purposes, the inclusion of the income will require some debtors whose current monthly income is below the applicable median income threshold to complete the entire means test form nonetheless, unless they affirmatively assert that the form is contrary to the language of the statute.

It does seem clear that the "bright line test" of section 707(b)(7) means that no chapter 7 case should be dismissed based on the debtor's ability to pay if the debtor has an income below the safe harbor threshold. As the House Report stated:

The Act's second safe harbor only pertains to a motion under section 707(b)(2), that is, a motion to dismiss based on a debtor's ability to repay. It does not allow a judge, United States trustee, bankruptcy administrator or party in interest to file such motion if the income of the debtor (including a veteran, as that term is defined in 38 U.S.C. § 101) and the debtor's spouse is less than certain monetary thresholds. n19

The median income threshold adopted by Congress for means testing recognizes that families with incomes below that threshold do not have the ability to pay significant amounts to their creditors while maintaining a reasonable living standard. Courts should not attempt to evade this congressional intent by using some alternative means test to find "abuse" on the part of debtors whose incomes are below the applicable median income threshold.

Expenses Allowed in Means Test

Internal Revenue Expense Standards. The first set of deductions allowed for debtors subject to the means test consists of the "applicable monthly expense amounts specified under the National Standards and Local Standards, and the debtor's actual expenses for the categories specified as Other Necessary Expenses" issued by the Internal Revenue Service. The National and Local Standards include amounts for housing and utilities, n20 transportation, n21 food, clothing, and other expenses. n22 The "Other Necessary Expenses" consist of a nonexclusive n23 list of other expenses necessary for family health and welfare or production of income. n24

Some of the IRS standards depend on the size of the debtor's household. Presumably, the household size at the time of the petition will be used for this purpose. The amounts allowed under the National Standards for food, clothing and other items depend on the debtor's income. Since there is no reference to current monthly income in the provisions incorporating the standards, unlike in many other provisions, but rather a reference to the "applicable" amounts, the income amounts used should be based on the way the IRS computes income. For example, benefits received under the Social Security Act should not be excluded for this purpose. The amounts allowed for food and clothing may be adjusted upward by up to 5 percent if the debtor demonstrates such adjustment is reasonable and necessary. n25

The statute is not crystal clear about how transportation expenses are computed. n26 The better view is that, because the language refers to deducting the "amounts specified" in the standards, and not actual expenses, the ownership allowance specified in the standards is the minimum amount to be deducted for the expense of car ownership, rather than the remaining car payments on a vehicle, if any, divided by 60 permitted by a later subparagraph. n27 This is the position taken by the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules in drafting Official Form 22A. n28 In fact, the literal language of the provisions could lead to a conclusion that both the "amounts specified" and the secured debt payments should be deducted, which would allow double counting of some of those payments. n29

The argument that only the remaining secured debt payments, and not the full ownership allowance, may be deducted does not withstand textual or policy scrutiny. This argument is based on language in the same paragraph stating "the monthly expenses of the debtor shall not include any payments for debts." This language means simply what it says: Although the IRS Other Necessary Expense standards permit debtors to make payments on other secured and unsecured debts, such payments are not allowed as part of the means test use of the IRS standards. The amounts deducted under the transportation ownership allowance are not payments for debts. They are the "amounts specified" by the allowance. It is more logical to conclude that the language prevents secured debt payments, which are allowed under a separate provision of the means test, from being double counted as part of the application of the IRS standards. Moreover, the argument that the language means the transportation ownership allowance cannot be allowed for a debtor with a car loan because it is a debt payment also proves too much. Under the Code's definition of "debt," n30 if no payment for any item that constitutes a debt were permitted under the local standards, debtors could not deduct any expenses for housing or transportation if they had a housing lease or an automobile lease, since an obligation on a prepetition lease is indisputably a debt. In addition, on policy grounds, allowing debtors to deduct only the remaining portion of their secured debt would leave them with no funds to replace an old car needed to continue employment, a result that would certainly not enhance either repayment of creditors or a fresh start. n31

For these reasons, the better reasoned decisions considering this issue have permitted debtors to deduct the amounts specified for the transportation ownership expense allowance even if they do not have an obligation to make car loan payments or are intending to surrender the vehicle. n32 These courts have rejected the arguments of the United States trustee that the allowance should not be allowed in such cases because the Internal Revenue Service would not allow it in its financial analysis. As one court pointed out, the legislative history undercut this argument.

A prior version of the BAPCPA that was never passed defined "projected monthly net income" for the means test to require a calculation of expenses as follows:

"(A) the expense allowances under the applicable National Standards, Local Standards, and Other Necessary Expenses allowance (excluding payments for debts) for the debtor .. in the area in which the debtor resides as determined under the Internal Revenue Service financial analysis for expenses in effect as of the date of the order for relief."

H.R. 3150, 105th Congress (1998) (emphasis added).

The fact that Congress omitted this language, as well as the fact that Congress specified in other parts of the means test that "actual expenses" were to be used, supported the argument that the Internal Revenue Service analysis was not intended to be used and the ownership allowance could be deducted for each car the debtor owned. n33

An additional issue that may arise with the IRS transportation allowance, especially in metropolitan areas, is that it seems to assume that debtor families who have cars do not use public transportation. For cases in which this is not true and family members commute to work or school by rail or bus, the allowance of "Other Necessary Expenses" required for production of income or the "special circumstances" adjustment to expenses, n34 appears to be the remedy. Similarly, the IRS transportation allowance does not take into account large disparities in car insurance costs that exist within some metropolitan areas.

The IRS housing expense allowances, determined by county and family size, present different issues. Again, there is the interrelationship with the allowed payments of secured debt, although home mortgage payments are much less likely to be concluded before the end of the plan. As with the transportation allowance, a literal reading of the provisions might well allow both the housing allowance and the secured debt payment. However, this would permit double-counting. To avoid such double-counting, it appears that in trying to combine the two provisions the homeowner debtor should first deduct the "amount specified" for the IRS housing allowance, which covers utilities, home maintenance, and other similar expenses, and then deduct the mortgage payment, after subtracting from the mortgage payment the amount which would be double counted because it was included in the housing allowance. n35 Using some other method that deducted the full mortgage payment from the housing allowance could quite possibly leave debtors no money to maintain their homes or even pay for telephone service, a result at odds with the obvious intent that homeowners should be able to continue mortgage payments and retain their homes. n36

For renters, as well as homeowners, the IRS housing allowance is also enhanced, with a special allowance for reasonable and necessary home energy costs to the extent they would take total housing and utility expenses over the IRS allowance. n37 However, if a renter's rent, by itself, exceeds the IRS allowance, there may be no way to include an expense for other utilities, such as basic telephone service, other than through the "Other Necessary Expense" category n38 or the special circumstances adjustment.

The Other Necessary Expense category presents still other issues. As discussed above, it is a nonexclusive list and includes such expenses as child care, court ordered payments, including alimony, support and other court-ordered payments (such as restitution), expenses for care of the elderly, invalid or handicapped, education for special needs children if suitable education is not available from public schools, n39 medical and dental expenses, n40 taxes, involuntary deductions from wages, including union dues, uniforms, etc., term life insurance premiums, mandatory pension loan repayments or contributions, and withholding taxes, optional telephone service, and Internet service. n41

Debtors may have a variety of other expenses that are necessary to family health and welfare or production of income, such as business expenses, required homeowner association or other assessments, household help for an elderly debtor who cannot feed or bathe herself, unreimbursed employee business expenses such as travel expenses or uniforms, and burglar alarm expenses in high crime neighborhoods. n42 The rigidity of the means test can be softened somewhat by sensible exercise of judicial discretion with respect to such expenses.

Other Expenses Allowed by Section 707(b). The means test specifies additional deductions that may overlap or exceed those allowed by the IRS standards. The debtor is clearly permitted to deduct reasonably necessary health insurance, disability insurance, and health savings account expenses, including for a spouse who may not be a codebtor or a dependent and may not be living with the debtor. n43 These provisions, evidencing a clear policy that families should have such insurance, may dictate purchasing insurance prior to bankruptcy if a debtor does not already have it, an important step toward financial stability, in order to assure that the substantial funds necessary for such insurance will be available to the debtor.

The debtor may deduct reasonably necessary expenses to maintain safety of the debtor and the family of the debtor from domestic violence, n44 which must be kept confidential by the court. n45 It is unclear how the confidentiality provision will work. If the court is to keep expenses confidential, is the trustee or United States trustee permitted to review them?

The allowed expenses may include "continuation of" actual reasonable and necessary expenses for the care and support of elderly, chronically ill, or disabled household members or immediate family members (parent, grandparent, sibling, child, grandchild, other dependent or spouse in a joint case if not a dependent). n46 This allowance may be broader than the IRS Other Necessary Expense category listed above, since it is not limited to dependents. It also may be broader, since the IRS category may not include support in addition to care.

Debtors are allowed to deduct, as under current law, charitable contributions to qualified religious or charitable entities or organizations. n47 However, the language of section 707(b)(1) referring to contributions the debtor "continues to make" suggests that the charitable impulse must have been evidenced by at least some contributions prior to the filing of the bankruptcy case, and debtors may need to provide some evidence of such gifts.

Debtors may also deduct actual public or private school educational expenses of up to $1,650 per year per child under 18. n48 To take this deduction, the debtor must supply detailed documentation of such expenses and of why they are reasonable and necessary and why they are not already accounted for under IRS standards. However, there is no explicit provision for a determination of whether the expenses are reasonable and necessary after the debtor supplies documentation stating they are. In any event, the allowance is insufficient for virtually all parochial or private schools, and also does not cover high school students over 18.

But the debtor may be able to argue that an adjustment for special circumstances should be allowed because pulling children out of school in the middle of a school year would be very disruptive to their lives and education. At a minimum, this allowance can provide funds for school supplies, school trips, uniforms and the like, which are not insignificant family expenses.

Beyond the listed expenses, the means test allows deduction of amounts payable on secured and priority debts, presumably on the theory that such debts would be paid before unsecured claims in a chapter 13 case. n49 But the deduction for secured claims is not in the amount that would be paid in chapter 13. Instead it is in the total amount "scheduled as contractually due" to any secured creditors in the 60 months after the petition, plus any arrears necessary to maintain possession of a principal residence, motor vehicle, or other necessary property, divided by 60. Determining this amount is relatively straightforward in the case of most mortgage or car loans (putting aside the interrelationship with the transportation and housing allowances discussed above.) However, on secured claims such as tax liens, mechanics' liens or other liens with respect to which the entire amount is immediately due, will the debtor be allowed to add the interest that would accrue over a 60 month repayment period? And the payments that may be deducted under this provision, which makes no distinction among secured debts on necessary property, include payments on debts secured by appliances and payments on credit union loans where credit cards are cross-collateralized by the debtor's car loan. Although it is not necessarily clear what is "scheduled as contractually due" on a credit card with a minimum payment, that may not matter much because with the high default interest rates charged to delinquents on most such cards the debtor would pay at least the entire balance on the card over a five year period.

The calculation for priority debts is somewhat less complicated, but there may be issues about which debts have priority. Debtors must divide the total amount due on priority claims by sixty to obtain a monthly amount. n50 Debtors will have an incentive to classify debts as priority rather than nonpriority. Most nonpriority tax debts formerly dischargeable in chapter 13 are now nondischargeable, n51 so debtors may arrange their financial affairs to maximize the nondischargeable debt that will be priority debt. Similarly, divorce property settlements are no longer dischargeable in chapter 7 cases, n52 so debtors may wish to argue that such debts are intended for support and therefore priority domestic support obligations, rather than property settlement debts, n53 so that they may be deducted in the means test.

Finally, if the debtor is eligible to file a chapter 13 case, the debtor's attorney must construct a hypothetical chapter 13 plan and determine the projected administrative expenses, but limited to ten percent. n54 This involves determining not only what would be paid to secured and priority creditors in a plan, but also the approximate amount that would be paid to unsecured creditors over five years, an amount that can only be precisely calculated under the same means test the debtor is in the process of completing.

Adjustments for Special Circumstances. Once all of the allowed expense deductions are taken, even if the income that is deemed to remain available is above the amount that creates a presumption of abuse, the debtor may rebut the presumption by showing special circumstances that justify additional expenses or a reduction in the income figure used. n55 Such special circumstances could be simply a reduction in the debtor's income below the current monthly income figure, or additional expenses, such as the moving expenses, security deposit, and other costs that would be incurred if the debtor moved to a lower rent apartment. There are many other possibilities, such as high commuting costs, n56 the increased price of gas, n57 security costs in dangerous neighborhoods or the cost of infant formula and diapers. Indeed, any legitimate expense that is out of the ordinary for an average family, or that may have increased since the IRS guidelines were calculated, could be considered.

The debtor must itemize each adjustment to income or expenses and provide supporting documentation. n58 The debtor must also provide a "detailed explanation" of why the adjustment is necessary and reasonable. n59 The debtor must certify "under oath" that both the itemization and explanation are accurate. n60 Presumably, a certification under penalty of perjury will meet this requirement. n61

The test for special circumstances in section 707(b)(2)(B) is that there must be "no reasonable alternative" to the adjustment, which might be viewed as a reasonableness test of sorts, and which gives the court a good deal of discretion to temper the arbitrariness of the means test numbers. Although the debtor has the burden of overcoming the presumption, as a practical matter the party seeking dismissal will have to show that there is a reasonable alternative to the debtor's additional expenses.

In any event, the presumption is only rebutted if the reduction in income or additional expenses bring the debtor's deemed available income below the amount that would trigger the presumption. n62 The statute speaks of special circumstances being shown only in the context of a dismissal proceeding, but a debtor may make such circumstances known to the United States trustee before such a proceeding is brought, in hopes that a decision will be made that no dismissal motion should be filed.

Exception for Certain Disabled Veterans. A complete exemption from the means test is carved out by section 707(b)(2)(D) for a disabled veteran, as defined in section 3741(1) of title 38 U.S. Code, n63 but only if the indebtedness occurred primarily during a period during which the veteran was on active duty, as defined by section 101(d)(1) of title 10, United States Code, n64 or performing a homeland defense activity, as defined by 32 USC 901(1). n65

This exception, in the cases where it applies, may raise issues of when a debt was primarily incurred. Are finance charges and other charges incurred when they are assessed, even if the original debt was incurred before the debtor was on active duty? It would seem that the exception should be construed broadly to include the situation of a debtor who was paying most debts until active duty or disability rendered that more difficult and led to increased finance charges and other fees.

There may also be an issue when the debtor files a joint case with a spouse who does not qualify for the exception. The purpose of the exception would be undermined if the veteran's spouse were to be subjected to means testing, because that would almost invariably involve consideration of the disabled veteran's situation as well and impact on the relief available to the veteran.

Abuse Other Than under Means Test Presumption

In addition to the presumption of abuse that is used for determining the debtor's ability to pay debts, section 707(b) permits a motion to dismiss based on other types of abuse. The 2005 amendmentsⁿ⁶⁶ in some ways expand and in other ways limit the ability of parties other than the court and United States trustee to bring motions to dismiss based on abuse. Creditors and trustees are permitted to bring motions under section 707(b) alleging abuse against debtors not protected by the safe harbor of section 707(b)(6).ⁿ⁶⁷ However, the amendments define abuse under section 707(b) to include bad faith, which some courts had held, under prior law, to be grounds for dismissal under section 707(a) that could be raised by any party.ⁿ⁶⁸

Safe Harbor. Section 707(b)(6) provides a safe harbor from abuse motions brought by creditors, trustees, and other entities other than the court or United States trustee if the current monthly incomeⁿ⁶⁹ of the debtor, or, in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, is equal to or less than the state median family incomeⁿ⁷⁰ for a family size equal to or less than the size of the debtor's household. In the case of a debtor in a household of one person, the median family income for one earner is used. In the case of a household of more than four, the highest state median income for a family of four or less is used, augmented by $525 per month for each household member in excess of four.

This safe harbor preserves to some extent the protections against motions brought by creditors under section 707(b) to coerce or harass debtors who cannot afford to defend them.ⁿ⁷¹ It limits the use of section 707(b) by creditors and trustees to debtors whose income is above the applicable state median income level. To the extent that the language of section 707(b)(6) is more restrictive than section 707(b)(7),ⁿ⁷² it also prevents a creditor or trustee from bringing a means test motion against a debtor whose income is below the levels set forth in section 707(b)(6).

Other Types of Abuse. Section 707(b)(3), added in 2005,ⁿ⁷³ specifies the two issues that the court must consider in determining whether a case is an abuse under section 707(b)(2) when the presumption of abuse does not arise or has been rebutted. In view of the language of this provision, it is not clear whether these factors are to be considered in cases in which the presumption of abuse does arise. The better view is that they can be considered in such cases as well, even though that view renders some of the language to be surplusage, because there is no language limiting the consideration of the section 707(b)(3) factors only to cases in which the presumption of abuse is not operative.

The court must first consider whether the case was filed in bad faith.ⁿ⁷⁴ As discussed above, under the law in effect prior to the 2005 amendments, courts had disagreed about whether bad faith was grounds for dismissal under section 707(a).ⁿ⁷⁵ The specific inclusion of bad faith as grounds for dismissal under section 707(b) should resolve this dispute, making clear that Congress intended bad faith to be raised only by parties who are permitted to file section 707(b) motions against the debtor.

The second consideration of the court must be the totality of the circumstances, and whether those circumstances demonstrate abuse.ⁿ⁷⁶ This consideration had been adopted almost universally as the primary standard for determining whether substantial abuse exists under section 707(b) prior to the 2005 amendments.ⁿ⁷⁷ It is doubtful that courts will create any bright line rules under this standard, by which its very nature is an open-ended and discretionary inquiry. It is also doubtful that the grounds for dismissal will change much, despite the change in the standard from "substantial abuse" to "abuse." Few, if any courts, permitted a case to go forward under prior law if they found it abusive. The general view appeared to be that any abuse was substantial and grounds for dismissal.

However, section 707(b)(3) does not permit a court to devise its own means test to determine ability to pay whenever the results of the congressionally devised means test in section 707(b)(2) are not satisfactory to the Court. n78 Section 707(b)(2) was designed to provide an objective methodology to limit courts' widely varying results with respect to ability to pay. n79 To determine that a case is an abuse solely on the basis of the debtor's ability to pay even though the means test concludes otherwise would be to invent a new means test, different than the uniform standard enacted by Congress after great deliberation and compromise to ensure that it appropriately balanced all of the interests involved.

Thus, for example, it would be contrary to congressional intent to use the $167 figure for available income to determine abuse without using all of the other parts of the means test of which that figure is a component. The section 707(b)(2) means test reflects policy choices made by Congress as to factors that should be considered in determining a debtor's ability to pay. For example, Congress specifically excluded Social Security benefits from current monthly income, a choice that is consistent with other amendments that protect retirement benefits at the expense of creditors. Similarly, by permitting debtors to deduct the amounts specified in the IRS guidelines rather than limiting debtors to actual expenses, Congress has chosen not to penalize debtors for their frugality in spending less than the IRS allowances. By comparing the total of allowed expenses to the debtor's current monthly income, Congress clearly intended that a debtor might spend more than the allowance for one category (e.g., rent) and less for another (e.g., food), as long as the end result did not leave $167 per month in disposable income. Courts should not undermine this policy by considering additional income available when the debtor's expenses for a particular item are less than the means test allows.

A special mention is made in section 707(b)(3)(B) of whether the debtor seeks to reject a personal services contract and the financial need for such a rejection. This language was a compromise on an earlier provision of the bill that would have more strictly limited the ability of debtors, such as highly paid recording artists, to reject personal services contracts they found to be disadvantageous. n80

Attorney's Fees in Abuse Motions

Subsections 707(b)(4) and (5), added by the 2005 amendments, n81 provide that in certain circumstances the prevailing party in a 707(b) motion may be awarded attorney's fees. The standards for awarding such fees vary depending upon which party prevailed and who brought the motion.

Abuse Motion Is Sustained. Under section 707(b)(4)(A), costs and attorney's fees incurred in a successful section 707(b) motion may be assessed against debtor's attorney, but only in those circumstances that would permit fees to be awarded under current law. Fees and costs may be awarded on motion of a party in interest or on the court's own initiative, but only if the case was dismissed under section 707(b) and the debtor's attorney violated Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011 in filing the bankruptcy case itself. n82 Moreover, the procedures of Rule 9011 for awarding costs and fees must be followed. n83

The only real change in this provision is that costs and attorney's fees may be awarded to the trustee even if the court makes the award on its own initiative. n84 However, this provision only applies if the motion to dismiss under section 707(b) is brought by the trustee, not the United States trustee. n85 The original purpose of the provision apparently was to give trustees an incentive to file section 707(b) motions, but since the provision was originally introduced, the standard was changed to a Rule 9011 standard n86 that is unlikely to entice trustees to expend great efforts in litigating under that section.

The court may also assess a civil penalty against a debtor's attorney who violates Rule 9011, either on motion of a party or on the court's own initiative. n87 Again, this is nothing new. Courts have long been able to assess civil penalties under Rule 9011. The only difference is that the penalty, unlike those assessed sua sponte under Rule 9011, may be payable to a trustee, United States trustee, or Bankruptcy Administrator.

Abuse Motion Is Denied. Section 707(b)(5) contains provisions that largely parallel those of section 707(b)(4), but provides for awarding to the debtor reasonable costs and fees, including attorney's fees, when a section 707(b) motion filed by a party in interest is denied. Like section 707(b)(4), it permits fees to be awarded by the court on motion of a party in interest or on its own motion, using the procedures of Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011. n88 However, it is not applicable to section 707(b) motions filed by a trustee, United States trustee or Bankruptcy Administrator. n89

Costs and fees may be awarded under this section if the position of the party that brought the section 707(b) motion violated Rule 9011. n90 They also may be awarded if the attorney, if any, who filed the motion did not comply with section 707(b)(4)(C)(1) and (ii) and the motion was made solely to coerce the debtor into waiving a right guaranteed by title 11. n91 These provisions also largely repeat standards that were already in place under Rule 9011.

Section 707(b)(5)(B), however, carves out an exception to the general rule of section 707(b)(5)(A)(ii)(I) allowing the award of costs and statutory fees against a party that violates Rule 9011 in filing a section 707(b) motion. A small business with an aggregate claim of under $1000 is not subject to that provision. "Small business" is defined in section 707(b)(5)(C), for purposes of this paragraph only, as an unincorporated business, partnership, corporation, association, or organization that has fewer than 25 full time employees when the motion is filed and is engaged in commercial or business activity. This exception is unlikely to be invoked often, because few small creditors with such a small claim would litigate a section 707(b) motion. Because the provision requires the small business to be the holder of a claim in order to be exempted, the protection would not extend to the attorney for the small business, even if the attorney is a small business.

In any event, all attorneys and parties in section 707(b) motions, including trustees, United States trustees, and Bankruptcy Administrators, continue to be subject to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011. There is no indication that Congress intended to give any attorney or party carte blanche to violate the fundamental rules governing conduct in bankruptcy cases.

For a complete discussion of Code section 707, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2 The Bankruptcy Administrator performs most of the duties of the United States trustee in judicial districts in North Carolina and Alabama, where the United States trustee program is not operational.

n3 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(6); see "Dismissal for Abuse under the 2005 Act; § 707(b)" infra.

n4 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(7); see "Dismissal for Abuse under the 2005 Act; § 707(b)" infra.

n5 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.04[4] (Matthew Bender).

n6 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.04[5][a] (Matthew Bender).

n7 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2); see "Presumption of Abuse; § 707(b)(2)" infra.

n8 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n9 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(7); see "Dismissal for Abuse under the 2005 Act; § 707(b)" infra.

n10 Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), this amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). This dollar amount is effective for cases filed on or after April 1, 2007. For cases commenced between October 17, 2005, and March 31, 2007, the amount is $6,000.

n11 Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), this amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). This dollar amount is effective for cases filed on or after April 1, 2007. For cases commenced between October 17, 2005, and March 31, 2007, the amount is $10,000.

n12 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(i).

n13 "Current monthly income" is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14 "Median family income" is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(k) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n15 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(7).

n16 Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), this amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender). This dollar amount is effective for cases filed on or after April 1, 2007. For cases commenced between October 17, 2005, and March 31, 2007, the amount is $525.

n17 11 U.S.C. § 101; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.10A (Matthew Bender).

n18 Official Form 22A.

n19 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109 Cong., 1st Sess. 51 (2005); see also the statement of the bill's Senate floor managers: "If you are below the State median income, you are not subject to the means test. It is as simple as that." 151 Cong. Rec. S2311 (Mar. 9, 2005) (statement of Sen. Hatch); "This bill clearly provides that people of limited income can still file under chapter 7 and get that fresh start. .. There is a specific safe harbor built in for these individuals, so their debts can be wiped away, as is done right now." 151 Cong. Rec. S1856 (Mar. 1, 2005) (statement of Sen. Grassley).

n20 See www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id=104696,00.html.

n21 See www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id=104623,00.html.

n22 See www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id=104627,00.html.

n23 H.R. Rep. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 114 n.66 (2005). The Other Necessary Expense standards themselves also state that the list is nonexclusive.

n24 See <http://www.irs.gov/irm/part5/ch15s01.html#d0e182546>.

n25 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(ii)(I).

n26 See Culhane & White, Taking the New Consumer Bankruptcy Model for a Test Drive: Means-Testing Real Chapter 7 Debtors, 7 Am. Bankr. Inst. L. Rev. 27, 44-46 (1999).

n27 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii); see "Presumption of Abuse; § 707(b)(2)" infra.

n28 Official Form 22A, line 24.

n29 This conclusion gains support from the language of section 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(IV), which, unlike section 707(b)(2)(A)(iii), requires the debtor to show that educational expenses have not already been accounted for in the IRS allowances.

n30 11 U.S.C. § 101(12).

n31 See Culhane & White, Taking the New Consumer Bankruptcy Model for a Test Drive: Means-Testing Real Chapter 7 Debtors, 7 Am. Bankr. Inst. L. Rev. 27, 44-46 (1999).

n32 In re Haley, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 2857 (Bankr. D.N.H. Oct. 18, 2006) (ownership expense allowed for vehicle with no loan or lease payment); In re Fowler, 349 B.R. 414 (Bankr. D. Del. 2006)(same); In re Farrar-Johnson, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 2214 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. Sept. 15, 2006) (debtor could deduct ownership allowance in case where debtor intended to surrender vehicle).

n33 In re Fowler, 349 B.R. 414, 419 (Bankr. D. Del. 2006).

n34 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B); see "Abuse Other Than under Means Test Presumption" infra.

n35 A similar method was used by a creditor-funded study of the means test. See Culhane & White, Taking the New Consumer Bankruptcy Model for a Test Drive: Means-Testing Real Chapter 7 Debtors, 7 Am. Bankr. Inst. L. Rev. 27, 47 (1999). In this respect, the creditor-funded Ernst and Young study was inconsistent in how it treated secured debt payments.

n36 The Executive Office of United States Trustees has published on its Web site tables that break out the ownership and non-ownership components of the housing allowance, similar to the separation of those components for the transportation allowance. Because this breakdown has not been adopted as a local standard by the Internal Revenue Service there is a significant issue as to whether it complies with the statutory requirement that the IRS local standards be used. Nonetheless, Official Form 22A directs the debtor to use the breakdown in the means test computation.

n37 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(V); see "Presumption of Abuse; § 707(b)(2)" infra.

n38 This category includes "optional telephone services" and also more generally includes any expense necessary for the welfare of a family.

n39 There is a separate education deduction, discussed below, for other students.

n40 There is also a separate deduction allowed, discussed below, for health and disability insurance.

n41 Because the statutory language allows "actual monthly expenses for the categories specified" as Other Necessary Expenses it is unclear whether the court can scrutinize these expenses, as the IRS would, to determine whether they are necessary to family health and welfare or the production of income.

n42 However, Official Form 22 does not permit such expenses to be deducted, simply permitting the debtor to list them at the end of the form for informational purposes only, and therefore appears to be inconsistent with the Code. In any event, Official Form 22 does not preclude the debtor from asserting that such expenses must be deducted when a motion to dismiss is filed under section 707(b) and the court applies the means test to determine whether a presumption of abuse exists.

n43 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(ii)(I).

n44 Such expenses are those which are reasonably necessary to maintain safety of the debtor and the family of the debtor from family violence as identified under federal law including section 309 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, which provides for: shelter, safe homes, meals, and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents. Related assistance includes direct assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents for the purpose of preventing further violence, helping such victims to gain access to civil and criminal courts and other community services, facilitating the efforts of such victims to make decisions concerning their lives in the interest of safety, and assisting such victims in healing from the effects of the violence; outreach and prevention services for victims and their children, employment training, parenting and other educational services for victims and their children, preventive health services within domestic violence programs (including nutrition, disease prevention, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), domestic violence prevention programs for school age children, counseling with respect to family violence; transportation, technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs, and referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), but not reimbursement for any health-care services; legal advocacy to provide victims with information and assistance through the civil and criminal courts, and legal assistance; and children's counseling and support services, and child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims. 42 U.S.C. § 10408.

n45 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(ii)(I).

n46 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(II).

n47 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.04[4][a] (Matthew Bender).

n48 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(IV). This dollar amount is effective for cases filed on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).. For cases commenced between October 17, 2005, and March 31, 2007, the amount is $1,500.

n49 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii).

n50 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(iv).

n51 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a), as amended.

n52 See 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523 (Matthew Bender).

n53 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.11 (Matthew Bender).

n54 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(III). The United States trustee is required to publish schedules of administrative expenses in particular districts, but since chapter 13 trustees will have more work to do under the new provisions, and since administrative expenses include attorney's fees, it is hard to imagine how they could be less than ten percent in any district. Nonetheless, the United States Trustee Program has inexplicably published percentage figures that appear to include only the trustee's percentage fee and not administrative expenses for attorney's fees.

n55 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B).

n56 In re Batzkiel, 56 C.B.C.2d 1205, 349 B.R. 581 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2006).

n57 In re Batzkiel, 56 C.B.C.2d 1205, 349 B.R. 581 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2006); see also 147 Cong. Rec. S2363 (daily ed. Mar. 15, 2001) (remarks of Sen. Grassley on predecessor bill with identical special circumstances language, stating that significant increase in gas prices could constitute special circumstances).

n58 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I).

n59 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II).

n60 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B)(iii).

n61 See 28 U.S.C. § 1746; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1008.

n62 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B)(iv).

n63 Under 38 U.S.C. § 3741(1), the term "disabled veteran" means (A) a veteran who is entitled to compensation under laws administered by the Secretary for a disability rated at 30 percent or more, or (B) a veteran whose discharge or release from active duty was for a disability incurred or aggravated in line of duty.

n64 Under 10 U.S.C. § 101(d)(1), the term "active duty" means full-time duty in the active military service of the United States. Such term includes full-time training duty, annual training duty, and attendance, while in the active military service, at a school designated as a service school by law or by the Secretary of the military department concerned. Such term does not include full-time National Guard duty.

n65 Under 32 U.S.C. § 901(1), the term "homeland defense activity" means an activity undertaken for the military protection of the territory or domestic population of the United States, or of infrastructure or other assets of the United States determined by the Secretary of Defense as being critical to national security, from a threat or aggression against the United States.

n66 Pub. L. No. 109-8, 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n67 See "Safe Harbor" infra.

n68 See "Other Types of Abuse; § 707(b)(1)" infra.

n69 "Current monthly income" is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.10A (Matthew Bender). 101.39A (Matthew Bender).

n70 "Median family income" is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(k) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.39A (Matthew Bender).

n71 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.04[1] (Matthew Bender).

n72 See "Presumption of Abuse; § 707(b)(2)" supra.

n73 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, specifies two issues that the court must consider in determining whether a case is an abuse under section 707(b)(2) when the presumption of abuse does not arise or has been rebutted.

n74 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(3)(A).

n75 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.03[2] (Matthew Bender).

n76 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(3)(B).

n77 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.04[4] (Matthew Bender).

n78 In re Nockerts, 357 B.R. 497 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2006).

n79 "The Means Test contained in the bill will provide a uniform standard to bankruptcy judges to evaluate the ability of bankruptcy filers to repay debts." 151 Cong. Rec. S1842-S1843 (Mar. 1, 2005) (statement of Sen. Hatch) (emphasis added).

n80 H.R. Rep. 105-794, 105th Cong. 2d Sess., 123 (1998).

n81 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n82 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(4)(A).

n83 Id.

n84 Under Bankruptcy Rule 9011(c)(2), if the court initiates the proceeding, any monetary sanction must be payable to the court.

n85 For this reason, it can apply only in cases of debtors above the median income safe harbor of section 707(b)(6), since a trustee cannot bring a section 707(b) motion against a debtor protected by that safe harbor.

n86 Cf. S.625 § 102 (as reported from Judiciary Committee in the 106th Congress).

n87 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(4)(B).

n88 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(5)(A).

n89 Id.

n90 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 707.06 (Matthew Bender).

n91 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(5)(ii).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

163 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Disclosure of Compensation for Debtors Attorney

2008 Emerging Issues 1048

Collier on Disclosure of Compensation for Debtors Attorney

By Collier

November 19, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to disclosure of compensation for the debtors attorney, including the disclosure provisions of Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b), which should be read in conjunction with Section 329, and the consequences of an attorneys nondisclosure.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Section 329(a) of the Bankruptcy Code requires an attorney for the debtor to file with the court a statement indicating any compensation paid or agreed to be paid to such attorney for services rendered or to be rendered in contemplation of or in connection with a case under the Code. The debtor's Statement of Financial Affairs (which must be filed pursuant to section 521) similarly requires the disclosure of all payments or agreements to pay the attorney or any other person rendering services to the debtor in connection with the case during the year preceding or since the filing of the petition. n1

Disclosure Provisions of Rule 2016(b)

Section 329 should be read in conjunction with Rule 2016. Rule 2016 implements and further specifies the disclosure requirements of section 329(a) of the Code. n2 Under section 329 and Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b), the statement also must disclose the source of such compensation, even if the source is not the debtor but a third party entity. The statement must be filed whether or not the attorney intends to apply for compensation under the Code, specifically under section 330 (e.g., a flat fee payment in full before the petition date). If, however, the payment or agreement was made more than one year before the date of the filing of the petition, then no such statement is required. n3 This temporal limitation represents a departure from prior law. Apparently a presumption exists that any compensation paid or promised prior to such time would not be for services rendered in contemplation of or in connection with a liquidation or reorganization case.

Disclosure of Fee Sharing Agreements. Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b) also incorporates specifically the requirement that the statement filed indicate whether the attorney has shared or has agreed to share in respect of any such compensation with any other person. With limited exceptions, the sharing of compensation is expressly prohibited by section 504 of the Bankruptcy Code. n4 Section 504(a) applies the general prohibition against attorney fee splitting to virtually all professional persons who seek compensation in bankruptcy cases except with certain public service attorney referral programs. n5 Since virtually all of the cases which address section 504 discuss the attorneys' role in the context of their professional ethics, rather than merely addressing the scope of the rule, the importance of disclosure of any agreements to share fees is exceedingly important. Only entities that perform real services are to be compensated and referral fees and forwarding fees are not permitted. n6 In addition, 18 U.S.C. § 155 imposes criminal sanctions for improper fee splitting or fixing by attorneys as well as non-attorney professionals.

The statement must include the details of any such sharing or sharing agreement, except that disclosure of the details of any sharing agreement with a member or regular associate of the attorney's law firm is not required. Regular associate of a law firm is defined in Bankruptcy Rule 9001(9) to include any attorney regularly employed by, associated with or counsel to that law firm. n7

Debtor Not Required to Be Insolvent. Section 329(a) is applicable when services are rendered in contemplation of or in connection with the case by such attorney. n8 Moreover, Bankruptcy Rule 2017, n9 also incorporates the in contemplation of language. Whether the services rendered were in contemplation of bankruptcy does not turn on whether the debtor was actually insolvent at the time. n10 Section 329 does not incorporate an insolvency test unlike other sections of the Bankruptcy Code. n11

Compensation Paid after the Case Is Filed. Only compensation for services rendered or to be rendered in contemplation of or in connection with the case by the debtor's attorney is the subject of section 329. Bankruptcy Rule 2017(b), however, subjects to court review all payments, or any agreements to pay, by the debtor to an attorney, made after entry of the order for relief, for services in any way related to the case. Services that are in any way related to the case encompass all services rendered in contemplation of the filing of a petition, as well as services rendered or to be rendered after the commencement of the case. Thus, the Code's addition of the phrase or in connection with to section 329, together with the language of Bankruptcy Rule 2017(b), effectively subjects to court examination compensation which is paid or promised to the debtor's attorney at some point after entry of the order for relief in, and in relation to, the liquidation or reorganization case. Section 329 also gives the bankruptcy court the authority to review fees which the debtor may have paid prepetition to a state court receiver. n12

Test Applied to Determine If Payment Was in Contemplation of Bankruptcy. Courts will apply a subjective, rather than an objective, test in determining whether the debtor's payments were made in contemplation of bankruptcy, and the debtor's financial condition at the time carries little relevancy. n13 The thought of impending liquidation or reorganization must be the impelling cause of the transaction. The controlling question is the state of mind of the debtor, i.e., whether, in making the transfer, the debtor is influenced by the possibility or imminence of a bankruptcy proceeding. n14 Thus, the payment of fees on the eve of bankruptcy, related to the attorneys' actions to obtain a moratorium from the state on certain obligations of the debtor to make refunds to investors, has been held to have been made in contemplation of bankruptcy and reviewable by the court. n15

Applicability of Section 329 to Services Rendered to Avoid Bankruptcy. Attorneys frequently represent debtors trying to avoid the commencement of a bankruptcy case by, for example, meeting with the borrower's creditors in an effort to restructure the borrower's debt. Services devoted to the prevention of bankruptcy, such as to effect a settlement or to determine the continued viability of a company, may also be subject to the provisions of section 329 once a bankruptcy case is commenced. n16 For example, in Arens v. Boughton (In re Prudhomme), n17 the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit determined that payments to attorneys were made in contemplation of or in connection with the case when the evidence suggested that the debtors were in desperate financial straits when they first consulted counsel, that they sought representation in resolving their disputes with their largest creditor, and that they had been unsuccessful in restructuring their debt in contemplation of bankruptcy and were, therefore, subject to reexamination. Thus, when a payment or promise of payment is made to a debtor's attorney in contemplation of a case under the Code, the reasonableness of such compensation may be reexamined, whatever the nature of the specific services rendered. n18

Limits of Section 329 Authority. There are limits to the scope of section 329. For example, in In re Swartout,ⁿ¹⁹ an attorney's fee for representing a debtor in divorce proceedings was subject to section 329 because the debtor's personal and business affairs so closely overlapped that the financial aspects of the divorce were intertwined with the bankruptcy. However, the portion of the compensation directly allocable to the divorce case was ruled to be unconnected to the bankruptcy, and thus not subject to section 329, which requires that the services bear more than a casual relationship to the bankruptcy proceedings.ⁿ²⁰

Time Period for Services Subject to Section 329. The time period during which these legal services are actually provided may also impact whether section 329(a) applies.

Courts have held that although the debtor's attorney was not required to obtain court approval during the gap period between the filing of an involuntary petition against the debtor and the entry of an order for relief, fees received during this period will be subject to judicial review for reasonableness' under section 329.ⁿ²¹

Courts have held that an attorney performing postconfirmation services for the reorganized debtor must still meet the requirements of section 329(a).ⁿ²² The mere fact that the attorney is representing a debtor in a case under the Bankruptcy Code required that the attorney file a statement of compensation paid or agreed to be paid under section 329(a) and Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b).

Claims for Compensation Where Services Were Not in Contemplation of Bankruptcy. When compensation is sought for legal services rendered prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition that were not in contemplation of or in connection with a case under the Code, the claim of the attorney is treated like that of any other creditor,ⁿ²³ and the claim does not fall within the purview of section 329. However, section 502, which provides for the allowance of claims, permits the court under section 502(b)(4) to examine the claim for services of a debtor's attorney and to disallow it to the extent that it exceeds the reasonable value of the attorney's services.

Compensation Paid or Agreed to Be Paid More Than One Year Before Petition Filed. Despite the language of section 329(a) which requires counsel to report compensation paid or agreed to be paid if such payment or agreement was made after one year before the date of the filing of the petition, the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit has held that a court has the power to order the disgorgement of a fee paid or agreed to be paid more than one year before the debtor's bankruptcy petition was filed.ⁿ²⁴ The court held that section 329(a) does not provide a limitations period beyond which the court cannot reach.ⁿ²⁵ The court reasoned that neither the reporting requirement of section 329(a) nor section 329(b) specifies any limitations period, nor that Rule 2017(a) also contains no one year limitations period. Focusing on the presumptive nature of the one year period, the court concluded that the one-year period mentioned in § 329(a) is based on the apparent presumption that any compensation paid before the year prepetition was not for services rendered in contemplation of bankruptcy. To recognize that the one-year period is based on a presumption is to suggest that the presumption can be rebutted, as the bankruptcy court reasoned. The court's treatment of the one-year period in § 329(a) as a presumption rebutted by fraud or concealment is consonant with the principle that, in a court of equity, a statute of limitations may be tolled by the inequitable conduct of the parties.ⁿ²⁶

Thus, a pattern of nondisclosure and concealment may constitute misconduct justifying disgorgement of fees paid more than one year before the petition date. The court may order disgorgement even if section 329(a) would otherwise preclude recovery of fees paid earlier than one year prepetition.ⁿ²⁷

Consequences of Attorney's Nondisclosure; Sanctions

An attorney's nondisclosure (which rises to the level of concealment) may expand the authority of the court under section 329. Failure to strictly follow the requirements of section 329(a) may result in other severe consequences, as demonstrated by the decision of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in Neben & Starrett Inc. v. Chartwell Financial Corp. (In re Park-Helena Corp.).ⁿ²⁸ In Park-Helena, the court denied all fees and costs requested by the debtor's law firm in part because the firm violated section 329 by stating that its $150,000 retainer was paid by the debtor, when in fact the retainer was paid by the debtor's president. The attorneys attempted to justify their misstatement by arguing that the president's payment was, in effect, a payment from the debtor because the president had previously received a $1.35 million loan from the debtor, and the $150,000 payment to the attorneys was credited toward this debt. The court rejected this argument, finding that a fee applicant must disclose the precise nature of the fee arrangement, and not simply identify the ultimate owner of the funds. n29 The court reasoned that [t]he disclosure rules are applied literally, even if the results are sometimes harsh. Negligent or inadvertent omissions do not vitiate the failure to disclose. Similarly, a disclosure violation may result in sanctions regardless of actual harm to the estate. n30

Because the attorneys failed to disclose all of the facts of the transaction, as those facts were known to the law firm, n31 the firm violated section 329 and was not allowed to receive any fees. n32 Several other courts have required disgorgement when the attorney failed to disclose that it had entered into a prepetition fee arrangement with certain of the debtor's creditors. n33

Just as the failure to strictly comply with the disclosure requirements of section 329 may result in harsh consequences, an attorney may also be sanctioned for failing to comply with the requirements contained in Rule 2016(b). A court may disallow fees requested by an attorney who receives, but does not file, a supplemental affidavit under Rule 2016 disclosing an additional retainer paid by a debtor's principal. n34 Notably, disclosure of any supplemental retainer in a fee application in lieu of a supplemental affidavit has been held to be insufficient disclosure. n35 Several other courts have held that a law firm may not rely on other documents filed in a case--such as a fee application--to excuse noncompliance with Rule 2016(b). n36 n1 Official Form 7, the Statement of Financial Affairs, is a separate document required to be filed with the petition or within 15 days thereafter. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(b)(1), (c). See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1007 (Matthew Bender). Only a debtor that is or has been in business, as defined in the form, should answer the questions concerning such debts.

Return to Text

n2 Rule 2016 provides that:

Every attorney for a debtor, whether or not the attorney applies for compensation, shall file and transmit to the United States trustee within 15 days after the order for relief, or at another time as the court may direct, the statement required by § 329 of the Code including whether the attorney has shared or agreed to share the compensation with any other entity. The statement shall include the particulars of any such sharing or agreement to share by the attorney, but the details of any agreement for the sharing of compensation with a member or regular associate of the attorney's law firm shall not be required. A supplemental statement shall be filed and transmitted to the United States trustee within 15 days after any payment or agreement not previously disclosed.

n3 But see Arnes v. Boughton (In re Prudhomme), 43 F.3d 1000 (5th Cir. 1995) (payments were made in contemplation of or in connection with the case when the evidence suggested that the debtors were in desperate financial straits when they first consulted counsel).

n4 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 504 (Matthew Bender); (one-year time period under section 329 is not a limitation of the court's powers).

n5 11 U.S.C. § 504, as amended by Pub. L. 109-8, § 326 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6 See In re Matis, 73 B.R. 228 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1987).

n7 See also In re Palladino, 267 B.R. 825, 833 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2001) (phrase associates does not bring other attorneys not in the firm within the exception).

n8 This language is derived from former Rule 220.

n9 Bankruptcy Rule 2017 permits the court, on motion or sua sponte, to examine payments to the debtor's attorney to determine whether the payments are excessive. This rule is derived from former Rule 220.

n10 In re J.J. Bradley & Co., Inc., 2 C.B.C.2d 1245, 6 B.R. 529 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n11 See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 547, 553.

n12 Yellow Cab Coop. Ass'n v. Mathis (In re Yellow Cab Coop. Ass'n), 185 B.R. 844 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1995).

n13 In re Zepecki, 258 B.R. 719, 724 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001) (reviewing attorney's services in connection with prepetition sale of debtor's property). Wootton v. Ravkind (In re Dixon), 143 B.R. 671, 67576 n.3 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1992); In re GIC Gov't Sec., Inc., 92 B.R. 525 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1988).

n14 Wootton v. Ravkind (In re Dixon), 143 B.R. 671, 67576 n.3 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1992) (relying on Conrad, Rubin & Lesser v. Pender, 289 U.S. 472, 53 S. Ct. 703, 77 L. Ed. 1327 (1933)).

n15 In re GIC Gov't Sec., Inc., 92 B.R. 525 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1988); see also In re Newton, 292 B.R. 563 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2003) (services rendered were not in contemplation of bankruptcy).

n16 See generally Conrad, Rubin & Lesser v. Pender, 289 U.S. 472, 53 S. Ct. 703, 77 L. Ed. 1327 (1933).

n17 43 F.3d 1000, 1004 (5th Cir. 1995); see also In re Mayeaux, 269 B.R. 614, 62324 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2001).

n18 See In re Wood & Henderson, 210 U.S. 246, 28 S. Ct. 621, 52 L. Ed. 1046 (1908); In re Ostas, 158 B.R. 312 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) (attorney was required to disclose $1600 in fees charged to obtain a stay of foreclosure because services were in connection with bankruptcy case; fees ordered disgorged due to nondisclosure).

n19 20 B.R. 102 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982); see also In re Zepecki, 258 B.R. 719, 724 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001).

n20 20 B.R. 102, 106.

n21 In re McNar, Inc., 116 B.R. 746 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1990).

n22 In re John G. Berg Assocs., Inc., 138 B.R. 782 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1992).

n23 Bethea v. Robert J. Adams & Assocs., 352 F.3d 1125, 1127 (7th Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1043, 124 S. Ct. 2176, 158 L. Ed. 2d 733 (2004); see also In re Griffin, 313 B.R. 757 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2004) (reviewing all cases); In re Symes, 174 B.R. 114 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1994) (examining retainer agreement requiring post-dated checks to be cashed postpetition and finding they constituted dischargeable claims) ; In re Swartout, 20 B.R. 102 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982); Tripp v. Mitschrich, 211 F. 424 (8th Cir. 1914); see also Magee v. Fox, 229 F. 395 (2d Cir. 1916).

n24 See Arnes v. Boughton (In re Prudhomme), 43 F.3d 1000 (5th Cir. 1995).

n25 43 F.3d 1000, 1003.

n26 43 F.3d 1000, 1002.

n27 43 F.3d 1000, 1002. In Prudhomme, the court required disgorgement of a $75,000 retainer after determining that the fee was excessive and that the professional consciously breached its duty to disclose the retainer fee as well as a contingency interest in a lender liability action the debtor was pursuing against the debtor's major creditor. See also In re Zepecki, 258 B.R. 719, 725 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001) (bankruptcy court may order disgorgement sua sponte).

n28 63 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1049, 116 S. Ct. 712, 133 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1996).

n29 63 F.3d 877, 881 (citations omitted).

n30 63 F.3d 877, 881.

n31 63 F.3d 877, 881; see also In re Lewis, 113 F.3d 1040 (9th Cir. 1997).

n32 In re Chestnut Hill Mortg. Corp., 158 B.R. 547 (D. Mass. 1993); accord In re Whitman, 51 B.R. 502 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1985).

n33 See also In re Hargis, 887 F.2d 77 (5th Cir. 1989), modified, 895 F.2d 1025 (5th Cir. 1990); In re W.T. Mayfield Sons Trucking Co., Inc., 225 B.R. 818, 828 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1998). In re Century Plaza Assocs., 154 B.R. 349, 352 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1992).

n34 See In re TJN, Inc., 194 B.R. 400 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1996).

n35 In re TJN, Inc., 194 B.R. 400, 40203.

n36 See In re Quality Respiratory Care, Inc., 157 B.R. 180 (Bankr. D. Me. 1993); In re Brandenburger, 145 B.R. 624 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1992); see also In re Redding, 247 B.R. 474 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2000).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

164 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Matters to Be Handled at Creditors Meeting

2008 Emerging Issues 1049

Collier on Matters to Be Handled at Creditors Meeting

By Collier

November 19, 2007

SUMMARY: Although section 341 of the Bankruptcy Code does not set forth specific provisions concerning the conduct of the meeting of creditors, Rule 2003(b)(1) states that the business of the meeting shall include the examination of the debtor and, if appropriate, the election of a trustee or of a creditors' committee. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses these issues pertaining to matters at the creditors meeting.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Agenda for Meeting

Although section 341 of the Bankruptcy Code does not set forth specific provisions concerning the conduct of the meeting of creditors, Rule 2003(b)(1) states that the business of the meeting shall include the examination of the debtor and, if appropriate, the election of a trustee or of a creditors' committee. n1 When a trustee is elected, the creditors may recommend the amount of the trustee's bond to be fixed by the court. n2

The following order of business might be followed at the meeting: n3

- . call for noting of appearance in person or by power of attorney;
- . election of trustee in a chapter 7 case, if any creditors seek election of a trustee; n4
- . election of creditors' committee in a chapter 7 case, if any creditors wish to elect a creditors' committee. n5 (But this is a rare event.)
- . examination of debtor; n6
- . miscellaneous business; and
- . continuance to a place, day and hour certain or final adjournment.

Creditors' Appearances at Creditors' Meetings. Creditors may appear at the meeting of creditors to participate in the examination of the debtor or in the other aspects of the meeting. In most consumer bankruptcy cases, few creditors attend the meeting because the expenditure of time and money necessary is rarely justified by significant benefits derived from attending. The meeting in such a case then consists simply of an examination of the debtor conducted by the trustee.

In some business cases, creditors may have reason to attend the meeting. The section 341 meeting represents a unique opportunity for a creditor, particularly one with a significant claim, to conduct a wide-ranging examination that may help determine whether a debtor has a realistic prospect for reorganizing and what a reorganized debtor might look like.

An individual creditor may represent himself or herself at a creditors' meeting. n7 Rejecting the minority view that appearing for a corporate creditor is the practice of law n8 and expanding on the majority view that a corporate creditor may be represented by a nonattorney, n9 the 2005 amendments to section 341 permit a nonattorney to appear and participate in a creditors' meeting on behalf of any creditor holding a consumer debt in a chapter 7 or chapter 13 case. n10 The nonattorney representative may appear alone or in conjunction with an attorney for the creditor, and may represent more than one creditor. n11 Amended section 341(c) provides that the representative may be an entity or an employee of an entity, enabling corporations, partnerships, and governmental units, as well as individuals, to represent creditors. n12 The amendments could create a negative implication concerning representatives of creditors that do not hold consumer claims and creditors in cases under other chapters. However, the amended provision does state that [n]othing in this subsection shall be construed to require any creditor to be represented by an attorney at any meeting of creditors. Therefore the law with respect to meetings of creditors in those situations will remain somewhat uncertain.

Rule 9010(a) requires that when a creditor appears by an attorney, the attorney shall be authorized to practice in the court. The attorney must have written authority to conduct any business other than the execution and filing of a proof of claim. But a creditor may employ an agent or attorney to vote its claim at creditors' meetings, provided such representative has the proper written authority. n13 Such written authority for voting at creditors' meetings should be presented by a creditor's attorney who is representing the creditor generally in the proceedings. n14 Authority of an attorney to act may be revoked, of course, in accord with ordinary principles of agency law. n15

Election of Trustee. Section 702 of the Code provides that, in a chapter 7 case, if creditors representing 20 percent in amount of the claims held by creditors qualified to vote request the election of a trustee, n16 the election is to take place at the meeting of creditors required under section 341. n17 A candidate for trustee can be elected by a majority of qualified voting creditors as long as qualified voting creditors representing at least 20 percent in amount of claims do in fact vote. n18 If a trustee is not elected, as is almost always the case, the interim trustee will serve as trustee for the duration of the chapter 7 case. n19

If the court has ordered the appointment of a trustee in a chapter 11 case, creditors have the option of electing a trustee. If such an order is entered prior to the creditors' meeting and the appropriate request required by section 1104(b) is made to the United States trustee, an election could be held at the creditors' meeting. n20

Eligibility and qualification of the trustee is provided for under section 321 and section 322 and, pursuant to section 324, the court may remove a trustee for cause. n21

Creditors' Committees. In a chapter 7 case at the meeting of creditors, a creditors' committee may be elected by creditors qualified to vote for the trustee. n22 However, this almost never occurs, because even in the small percentage of cases in which there are assets, the presence of a trustee is normally considered to provide sufficient oversight, especially since creditors may elect a trustee of their choosing. If a committee is elected, it must consist of no fewer than three and no more than 11 creditors, each holding an allowable unsecured claim entitled to distribution under section 726(a)(2) of the Code. The committee may consult with the trustee regarding the administration of the estate, make recommendations to the trustee and submit to the court any questions affecting the administration of the estate.

n23

Examination of Debtor. The debtor is required to appear at the meeting of creditors and submit to examination, under oath, by the creditors, an indenture trustee, the United States trustee, or any trustee or examiner in the case. n24 Most courts have held that an agent of a creditor may examine the debtor on the creditor's behalf even if the agent is not an attorney, because the meeting is not a judicial proceeding n25 and such participation is now specifically authorized on behalf of creditors holding consumer claims in chapter 7 and chapter 13 cases. n26 Section 105(b) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 provides that for states where the bankruptcy system is administered by a bankruptcy administrator instead of a United States trustee (Alabama and North Carolina), the bankruptcy administrator or his or her designee may examine the debtor and administer the oath under section 343 of the Code. n27

At the outset of the examination, the debtor is normally asked to sign an oath form stating that the testimony to be given will be true and correct under penalty of perjury. The questions asked generally concern the debtor's financial affairs, assets and liabilities, as initially set forth in the schedules and statements filed by the debtor. The purpose of the examination is to make a determination as to whether assets have been concealed, whether there has been any improper disposition of assets, whether a chapter 7 debtor's case might be considered an abuse under section 707(b), n28 or if there are grounds for objections to exemptions or to discharge. n29 In chapters 11, 12 and 13, the questions may also go to the feasibility of the debtor's proposed or anticipated plan.

The trustee will normally have available for use in such examination the statements and schedules filed by the debtor pursuant to section 521, n30 as well as the tax returns or transcripts provided pursuant to that section and, in chapter 13 cases, pursuant to section 1308. n31 However, because the information in such returns or transcripts may be subject to confidentiality protections, n32 the trustee may have to be careful not to ask questions that would impermissibly reveal such information. The length of the examination will vary depending on the nature of the case, ranging from a few minutes in a simple consumer bankruptcy case to many hours, or even days, in a complicated corporate case.

If the debtor asserts the privilege against self-incrimination, it is the responsibility of the court to determine whether the debtor has reasonable grounds to fear that his or her answer may be self-incriminating. n33 If the court is convinced that the question cannot possibly incriminate the debtor, the testimony can be compelled. If the contrary is true, the debtor may still be compelled to testify if the United States Attorney requests and obtains immunity from the district court. n34

Disputes Arising During Meeting. Although the United States trustee or a private trustee presides at the meeting of creditors, any disputes arising at that meeting must be resolved by the court. Thus, if the debtor believes that questions are beyond the scope permitted, or unduly repetitious, the debtor may object and even refuse to answer. However, if the court finds that such a refusal was unjustified, the debtor will usually be required to reappear at another meeting and, in cases where the objections were clearly unwarranted, may suffer sanctions.

Under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2003, the United States trustee may not resolve a disputed election. The 1991 Advisory Committee Note states that for purposes of expediency, the results of the election should be obtained, if feasible, for each alternative presented by the dispute and, if the disputed vote would affect the result of the election, reported to the court. A copy of the report must be mailed to any party in interest that has requested one, and unless a motion for resolution of the dispute is filed within 10 days after the report is filed, the interim trustee becomes the trustee for the case. n35 If a motion is made to resolve the dispute pursuant to Rule 2003(d), the court will determine the outcome and a new or adjourned meeting to conduct the election may not be necessary. The court may also make other orders, such as reopening the meeting after clarifying issues of a creditor's voting rights, so that the creditor might have a fair chance to vote. n36

As to the right to vote, Rule 2003(b)(3) states that a chapter 7 creditor is entitled to vote at a meeting if the creditor has filed a proof of claim at or before the meeting or a writing setting forth facts evidencing the creditor's right to vote, n37 unless objection is made or unless the proof of claim is insufficient on its face. In the event of an objection to the amount or allowability of a claim for the purpose of voting, unless the court orders otherwise, the United States trustee shall tabulate the votes for each alternative presented by the dispute and, if resolution of the dispute is necessary to determine the result of the election, report the findings to the court. n38

Miscellaneous Business. In some jurisdictions, the meeting of creditors may also be an occasion for discussion among the parties of future steps in the case. Particularly in chapter 12 and 13 cases, the trustee may advise the debtor of objections the trustee may have to the debtor's plan and suggest amendments. In addition, secured creditors may attend a chapter 12 or chapter 13 creditors' meeting to attempt to negotiate the treatment of their claims in the plan proposed by the debtor.

Adjournment of Meeting. Once it is scheduled and takes place, the meeting of creditors may be adjourned or continued to another date and time, with notice given only to those in attendance at the meeting. Such a continuance may be necessary, for example, if the debtor is unable to attend due to illness, or if further questions or investigation of the debtor appear necessary. n39 The practice of keeping meetings alive in such cases by successive continuances has been common and has much to commend it; it saves delay and expense in calling creditors together to consider special matters and often makes prompt action possible.

However, meetings of creditors should not be routinely continued if no special circumstances warrant such action. In a few jurisdictions, United States trustees have permitted all creditors' meetings to be continued indefinitely in order to prevent the expiration of the 30-day time period for objecting to exemptions, which commences at the conclusion of the meeting. n40 This practice plainly violates the intention of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure that there be a deadline for trustees and creditors to object to exemptions so that exemption issues can be settled expeditiously. n41 If a trustee needs further information in order to decide whether to object to an exemption, the trustee should either continue the section 341 meeting to a definite date or seek an extension of time to file objections to the exemption.

Thus, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held, in Smith v. Kennedy (In re Smith), n42 that a trustee could not adjourn a section 341(a) creditors' meeting indefinitely and that objections to exemptions filed some eight months after the indefinite adjournment were untimely. The court noted that Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2003 requires that for a Rule 2003(e) adjournment to be effective, it must be accompanied by an announcement of the adjourned date and time.' No other procedure for adjournment is provided by rule or statute, and no other method of adjournment is permitted under Rule 2003(e). n43 The court found that an announcement of the new date and time may be made within a reasonable period of time after the adjourned meeting, but in no case more than 30 days from the meeting. n44 The court went on to hold that once property the debtor claimed as exempt had been exempted due to the lack of a timely objection, the conversion of the case to chapter 7, with a new creditors' meeting, did not provide a new opportunity to object to the exemption of that property because it was no longer a part of the bankruptcy estate. n45

Record of Meeting

The examination of the debtor at the meeting of creditors is required to be recorded verbatim by electronic sound recording or other method of recording. n46 The record must be preserved by the United States trustee until two years after the meeting is concluded, and made available for public access. Thus, under Rule 2003(c), it is possible that the transcript might be destroyed before the conclusion of the case, although presumably the United States trustee would ordinarily preserve it until the case is over. Any entity may request a certified copy of the recording or transcript to be provided at that entity's expense.

Report to the Court

The presiding officer must report to the court the name and address of any person elected trustee or any entity elected to the creditors' committee. Similarly, any dispute concerning an election must be reported. In addition, the United States trustee will normally notify the clerk that the meeting has been concluded so that information can be recorded on the docket of the case. However, the requirement of a report in every case concerning exemptions and other matters no longer exists under the current Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

For a complete discussion of Code section 341, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 341 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(b)(1) was amended in 2003 to reflect the fact that a trustee cannot be elected in a case under subchapter V of chapter 7.

n2 Although this sentence was deleted from the rule by the 1991 amendments, the creditors may still make such a recommendation. See 1991 Advisory Committee Note to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003.

n3 See 2 Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide, 35.1035.15 (Matthew Bender).

n4 See 11 U.S.C. § 702(b); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(b), 2009. Rule 2003(b) and Rule 2009 were amended in 2003 to reflect the fact that a trustee cannot be elected in a case under subchapter V of chapter 7.

n5 See 11 U.S.C. § 705.

n6 See 11 U.S.C. § 343. Under section 341(d), as added by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 (1994), in chapter 7 cases only, the meeting should also include the trustee's oral examination of the debtor to ensure that he or she is aware of the effects of commencing a chapter 7 case, both positive and negative. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 341.05 (Matthew Bender).

n7 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9010(a); In re Looney, 262 F. 209 (W.D. Tex. 1920) (In all the courts of the United States the parties may plead and manage their own cases personally or by an attorney and counselor at law); In re H.E. Ploof Machinery Co., 243 F. 421 (S.D. Fla. 1916) (A person may, of course, represent himself in any of the courts of the United States. The bankruptcy court is not an exception to this general rule.).

n8 State Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Paul Mason & Assocs., 46 F.3d 469 (5th Cir. 1995); Staiano v. Schwab (In re Maloney), 44 C.B.C.2d 404, 249 B.R. 71 (M.D. Pa. 2000)

n9 Cases permitting the preparing and filing of a proof of claim on behalf of another on the part of an individual exercising a power of attorney who is not a lawyer, are: In re Mayflower Hat Co., 65 F.2d 330 (2d Cir. 1933); Rinderknecht v. Toledo Ass'n of Credit Men, 13 F. Supp. 555 (N.D. Ohio 1936); In re Scott, 53 F.2d 89 (W.D. Mich. 1931). Contra In re H.E. Ploof Machinery Co. 243 F. 421 (S.D. Fla. 1916). As to form for such proof of claim, see Official Form 10. An examination of the debtor may not be performed for another by a nonlawyer, as it constitutes the practice of law. Rinderknecht v. Toledo Ass'n of Credit Men, supra; In re Scott, 53 F.2d 89 (W.D. Mich. 1931); In re Looney, 262 F. 209 (W.D. Tex. 1920). State courts have enjoined all of the above activities generally in state proceedings as constituting the unauthorized practice of law. See Depew v. Toledo Ass'n of Credit Men, 142 Kan. 403, 49 P.2d 1041 (1935); L. Meisel & Co., v. National Jewelers Board of Trade, 90 Misc. 19, 152 N.Y.S. 913 (1st Dept. App. Term 1915), aff'd without op., 173 App. Div. 889, 157 N.Y. S. 1133 (1916).

n10 11 U.S.C. § 341(c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11 Id.

n12 Entity is defined in section 101 to include corporations, partnerships, estates, trusts, governmental units, and the United States trustee; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n13 The solicitation and voting of proxies is only available in liquidation cases. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2006 and the 1983 Advisory Committee Note.

n14 See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2006 and the 1983 Advisory Committee Note; see also In re Brent Indus., 20 C.B.C.2d 814, 96 B.R. 193 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 1989) (when a power of attorney given to an attorney by a creditor fails to indicate whether or not it is held by an unsecured claim holder, it becomes invalid when it is being used to vote for a permanent trustee).

n15 Central Loan Co. v. Russell, 16 F.2d 35 (5th Cir. 1926) (authority of creditor's attorney revoked after dividend had been declared).

n16 See Berg v. Esposito (In re Oxborrow), 913 F.2d 751, 23 C.B.C.2d 876 (9th Cir. 1990) (trustee election dispute).

n17 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(b), 2009. Rule 2003(b) and Rule 2009 were amended in 2003 to reflect the fact that a trustee cannot be elected in a case under subchapter V of chapter 7.

n18 See Rusch Factor Division v. Miller (In re Mission Carpet Mills, Inc.), 4 C.B.C.2d 502, 10 B.R. 494 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1981) (when there was evidence of confusion relating to a creditor's power of attorney and vote in the election of a permanent trustee, the bankruptcy court could reopen the section 341(a) meeting of creditors for the purpose of allowing the creditor to file a new proof of claim or power of attorney).

n19 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 701, 702(d); see also Berg v. Esposito (In re Oxborrow), 913 F.2d 751, 23 C.B.C.2d 876 (9th Cir. 1990) (the 20% requesting requirement is distinct from and independent from the twenty percent voting requirement).

n20 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1104 (Matthew Bender).

n21 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 321, ch. 322 and ch. 324 (Matthew Bender).

n22 11 U.S.C. § 705; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 705.02 (Matthew Bender) n23 See 11 U.S.C. § 705(b).

n24 See 11 U.S.C. § 343; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 343.03[1] (Matthew Bender).

n25 State Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Paul Mason & Assocs., 46 F.3d 469 (5th Cir. 1995); Staiano v. Schwab (In re Maloney), 44 C.B.C.2d 404, 249 B.R. 71 (M.D. Pa. 2000).

n26 11 U.S.C. § 341(c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (April 20, 2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, Creditors' Appearances at Creditors' Meetings supra.

n27 Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

n28 11 U.S.C. § 707(b), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (April 20, 2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 707 (Matthew Bender).

n29 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 331 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong. 2d Sess. 42 (1978).

n30 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1), (c), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (April 20, 2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n31 11 U.S.C. §§ 521(f); 1308, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (April 20, 2005), effective in cases filed on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 and ch. 1308 (Matthew Bender).

n32 See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 315(c) (April 20, 2005); 11 U.S.C. § 107(b); Collier on Bankruptcy 107.04 and ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n33 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 344 (Matthew Bender); see also In re French, 24 C.B.C.2d 1979, 127 B.R. 434 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1991).

n34 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 344 (Matthew Bender).

n35 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(d)(2), as amended by the 1999 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n36 Rusch Factor Division v. Miller (In re Mission Carpet Mills, Inc.), 4 C.B.C.2d 502, 10 B.R. 494 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1981).

n37 See In re I.J.F., Inc., 1 C.B.C.2d 907 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1980); In re Tartan Constr. Co., 2 C.B.C.2d 295, 4 B.R. 655 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1980).

n38 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(b)(3), as amended in 1991.

n39 See Petit v. Fessenden, 182 B.R. 57 (D. Me. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 80 F.3d 29, 35 C.B.C.2d 968 (1st Cir. 1996) (trustee has power to adjourn and reconvene meeting of creditors).

n40 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4003(b), as amended by the 2000 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n41 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4003(b), as amended by the 2000 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure; see Taylor v. Freeland & Kronz, 503 U.S. 638, 112 S. Ct. 1644, 118 L. Ed. 2d 280, 26 C.B.C.2d 487 (1992); cf. McGowan v. Ries (In re McGowan), 226 B.R. 13 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 1998) (local rule providing that section 341 meeting was deemed concluded 30 days after first date set for meeting construed not to apply if meeting was not actually held on that date, so it did not conflict with Bankruptcy Rule 4003(b)).

n42 235 F.3d 472 (9th Cir. 2000).

n43 235 F.3d 472, 476 (citations omitted).

n44 Id.; see also Chubb & Son, Inc. v. Clark (In re Clark), 46 C.B.C.2d 549, 262 B.R. 508 (B.A.P. 9th Cir.

2001) (trustee had continued meeting to a date certain when he had, within 30 days of prior meeting, announced date for continuing the meeting and rectified erroneous worksheet entry stating that prior meeting was concluded). But see Premier Capital, Inc. v. DeCarolus (In re DeCarolus), 259 B.R. 467 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2001) (trustee is not necessarily limited to 30 days in announcing new date for meeting).

n45 235 F.3d, 472, 478.

n46 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2003(c); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2003.03 (Matthew Bender).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

165 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Payment of Fees & Expenses Following Confirmation of Chapter 13 Plan

2008 Emerging Issues 1051

Collier on Payment of Fees and Expenses Following Confirmation of Chapter 13 Plan

By Collier

November 19, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1326(b) of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the requirements for payment of administrative expenses, fees, charges and percentage fees. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the payment of fees and expenses following the confirmation of a Chapter 13 plan.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Section 1326(b) of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the requirements for payment of administrative expenses, fees, charges and percentage fees. Under section 1326(b)(3), added in 2005, these fees may include limited amounts awarded to a chapter 7 trustee in a prior case under certain conditions. n1

Payment of Administrative Expenses, Filing Fees and Other Charges. Section 1326(b)(1) requires the disbursing agent, ordinarily the chapter 13 trustee, n2 to pay in full all unpaid priority administrative expense claims allowed under section 503(b), n3 as well as unpaid filing fees and other charges assessed against the estate under title 28, United States Code, chapter 123, n4 either before or with each distribution to creditors under the plan. n5

Under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1006(b), the $155 filing fee required in each chapter 13 case under 28 U.S.C. § 1930(a)(1) may be paid in installments. Under a 1996 amendment to Rule 1006, the debtor is also permitted to pay the miscellaneous administrative noticing fee, normally required at the time of filing, in installments. n6 The net effect of section 1326(b)(1) is to require payment in full of the chapter 13 case filing fee no later than the date of the first distribution to creditors under the plan.

Certain other charges promulgated by the Judicial Conference of the United States for assessment in chapter 13 cases n7 must be paid in full no later than the date of the first distribution to creditors under the plan. n8 Of course, these special charges may be assessed from time to time throughout the course of the proceedings. The effect of section 1326(b)(1) is to require all such charges to be paid as assessed or not later than the next distribution to creditors.

Other administrative expenses, such as the debtor's attorney's fees and costs, are also within the scope of section 1326(b)(1). Some courts have promulgated rules of procedures which delay the payment of attorney's fees in chapter 13 cases by spreading them out over some or all of the duration of the plan. n9 However, such delay contravenes section 1326(b)(1). n10

Payment of Percentage Fee of Standing Chapter 13 Trustee. The United States trustee, with the approval of the Attorney General, n11 or the bankruptcy court, n12 may appoint one or more individuals to serve as chapter 13 trustee where warranted by the chapter 13 caseload. n13 The standing chapter 13 trustee is to receive a salary and reimbursement of actual necessary expenses as authorized by the Attorney General or by the court. n14 The salary and expenses of the standing chapter 13 trustee are to be defrayed with funds derived from a percentage fee, fixed in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 586(e)(1)(B), assessed against all payments received by the trustee under chapter 13 plans administered by the standing trustee. Section 1326(b)(2) requires that payment of the accrued percentage fee remaining unpaid be made by and to the standing chapter 13 trustee either before or with each distribution to creditors under the plan.

Full payment need not be made to the trustee in advance of any payment to creditors. Since the percentage fee is computed on payments into the plan, percentage fees accrue throughout the extension period as additional payments are made under the plan by the debtor. The accrued percentage fee is to be disbursed not later than the next distribution to creditors. n15

It should be noted that the statutory limitations of trustees' fees are not absolute. Particular circumstances may warrant an equitable adjustment of the trustee's fee. n16 In Foster v. Heitkamp (In re Foster), n17 the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals opined that the Congress left much discretion to the bankruptcy court in computing trustee fees. While a fixed percentage fee is usually considered reasonable, the Fifth Circuit was of the view that where a large portion of the funds are disbursed on mortgage payments the bankruptcy court should adjust the percentage fee to better reflect the trustee's actual efforts in administering the disbursements. However, the Foster court's holding that the trustee may charge a percentage fee on payments not made through the trustee has been overruled by changes in the statutory language. n18

Payment of Compensation and Expenses of Chapter 13 Trustee for Particular Case. Although section 1326(b) does not expressly authorize payment of compensation and reimbursement of the expenses of a chapter 13 trustee appointed to serve in a particular case n19 contemporaneously with payments to creditors, n20 the same result is required under those provisions where an administrative expense claim is approved under section 503(a) and (b)(2) and interim compensation is authorized under section 331.

A trustee appointed to serve in a particular chapter 13 case may seek an interim allowance of compensation and reimbursement of expenses by application to the court under sections 330, n21 331, n22 503(a) n23 and 503(b)(2). n24 After notice and a hearing, n25 the court may authorize an interim allowance and disbursement of compensation and reimbursement. To the extent that such an allowance represents compensation and reimbursement allowed under section 503(b)(2), it constitutes a priority administrative expense claim under section 507(a)(2), n26 which must be paid in full to the chapter 13 trustee before or with the next distribution made to creditors under the plan. n27

It has been held that section 1326(b)(1) itself does not require that the trustee be fully paid in advance of disbursing payment on other claims and that unless such a requirement is imposed by the terms of the plan the trustee's fee may be disbursed simultaneously with disbursements to creditors. n28

Compensation to Chapter 7 Trustee in Prior Case. Section 1326(b)(3), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n29 provides for limited payments by the chapter 13 trustee to a person who was a chapter trustee in a prior case under certain circumstances. In order to qualify for such payments all of the following conditions must be met:

- . The debtor filed a prior case under chapter 7. The references to a prior case makes clear that a trustee in a case that is converted to chapter 13 does not qualify under this provision because that case is the same case and not a prior case.

- . The chapter 7 trustee in the prior case was allowed compensation.

- . The compensation was allowed due to the conversion or dismissal of the case under section 707(b). In other words, compensation for efforts to administer assets or otherwise administer the case is not permitted.

- . Some portion of the compensation awarded due to the conversion or dismissal has not been paid.

If all of the requirements are met, there are limits on the amounts that can be distributed to the former trustee. The monthly amount cannot exceed the total compensation divided by the number of months in the plan. n30 It also cannot exceed the greater of (1) $25 or (2) 5 percent of the total amount payable to general unsecured creditors under the plan divided by the number of months in the plan. n31 The practical effect of this provision is to cap the former trustee's payments at $1,500 in a 60-month plan and $900 in a 36-month plan unless the dividend payable to general unsecured creditors is greater than $30,000 in a 60-month plan or $18,000 in a 36-month plan, with proportionate amounts in between for plans of lengths between 36 and 60 months. Of course, each of these amounts would be received only if the debtor completed the plan, since the payments are to be pro-rated.

Section 1326(d), also added in 2005, n32 provides that notwithstanding any other provision in title 11 the compensation referred to in section 1326(b)(3) is payable and may be collected in a chapter 13 case, even if it has been discharged in a prior case, but it is payable only to the extent permitted by section 1326(b)(3). Presumably, a former chapter 7 trustee who qualifies for payments under section 1326(b)(3) will have to file proof of claim or other request for the payments to be made.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1224(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Compensation to Chapter 7 Trustee in Prior Case infra.

n2

2. See 11 U.S.C. § 1326(c); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1326.04 (Mathew Bender).

n3

3. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 503(b), 507(a)(2); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.72[2] and 1300.74 (Matthew Bender). 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(2) was formerly designated as section 507(a)(1) and was redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 212 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See generally, Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.04 and 507.02 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1914(b), 1930. In addition to the filing fee, a debtor or couple commencing the chapter 13 case must also pay a miscellaneous administrative noticing fee of $39 imposed by the Judicial Conference of the United States under 28 U.S.C. § 1930(b). See Judicial Conference Bankruptcy Court Miscellaneous Fee Schedule, Item 8; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.03[1][a][ii] (Matthew Bender); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.42, 1300.43, 1322.03, 1325.01 and 1325.03[1] (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(b)(1); In re Parker, 5 C.B.C.2d 913, 15 B.R. 980 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981).

n6

6. See 1996 Advisory Committee Note to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1006; see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.03[1][a][i] (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. See 18 U.S.C. § 1930(b); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.02[1] (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. §§ 507(a)(1) and 1326(b)(1).

n9

9. E.g., In re Lanigan, 101 B.R. 530 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989); see also In re Pedersen, 229 B.R. 445 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1999) (attorney could agree to deferred payment of fees).

n10

10. In re Shorb, 101 B.R. 185 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989) (fees cannot be deferred to six months after confirmation of plan); In re Harris, 304 B.R. 751 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2004) (no payment may be made to any other creditor under the plan unless unpaid administrative expense is paid in full, either first or at the same time).

n11

11. 28 U.S.C. § 586(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.04[1] (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.04[2] (Matthew Bender).

n13

13. The Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554, amended section 1326(b)(2) by substituting section 586(b) of title 28 for section 1302(d) of this title [11] and substituting section 586(e)(1)(B) of title 28 for section 1302(e) of this title [11]. This amendment became effective in a judicial district when that district became part of the nationwide United States trustee system; except for the judicial districts in Alabama and North Carolina, all districts now have United States trustees. In the judicial districts without a United States trustee, the chapter 13 trustee is appointed by the court.

n14

14. 28 U.S.C. § 586(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.55[1] and 1302.05[1] (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. In re Shorb, 21 C.B.C.2d 274, 101 B.R. 185 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989); In re Parker, 5 C.B.C.2d 913, 15 B.R. 980 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981).

n16

16. Foster v. Heitkamp (In re Foster), 6 C.B.C.2d 285, 670 F.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1982); In re Eaton, 1 C.B.C.2d 358, 1 B.R. 433 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1979).

n17

17. 670 F.2d 478, 6 C.B.C.2d 285 (5th Cir. 1982).

n18

18. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1302.05[1][c] (Matthew Bender).

n19

19. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1302(a), 28 U.S.C. § 586(b); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.55[3], 1302.02 and 1302.05 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(b)(1); see Payment of Administrative Expenses, Filing Fees and Other Charges supra.

n21

21. See 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(4)(B), providing that in chapter 13 cases, court may allow reasonable compensation to debtor's attorney for representing interests of debtor in connection with bankruptcy case based on consideration of benefit and necessity of services to debtor and other factors set forth in section 330(a); 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(5), providing that court may reduce compensation awarded by amount of interim compensation previously awarded under section 331 and, if interim compensation exceeds total compensation awarded, may order return of excess to estate.

n22

22. See 11 U.S.C. § 331; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.59[1] (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. See 11 U.S.C. § 503(a), providing that request for allowance of administrative expense must be timely filed unless court, for cause, allows it to be tardily filed.

n24

24. See 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(2), allowing compensation and reimbursement awarded under section 330(a).

n25

25. See 11 U.S.C. § 102(1); Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.07[1][a] and 1300.12 (Matthew Bender).

n26

26. 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(2) (formerly designated as § 507(a)(1) and redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 212 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1300.72[2] and 1300.74 (Matthew Bender); see also In re Powell, 5 C.B.C.2d 775, 15 B.R. 465 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. §§ 330, 507(a)(2) (formerly designated as § 507(a)(1) and redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 212 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005), § 1326(b)(1).

n28

28. In re Parker, 5 C.B.C.2d 913, 15 B.R. 980 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981).

n29

29. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1224(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(b)(3)(A).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(b)(3)(B).

n32

32. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1224(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

166 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Scope of the Debtors Examination at 341 Meeting

2008 Emerging Issues 1052

Collier on the Scope of the Debtors Examination at 341 Meeting

By Collier

November 19, 2007

SUMMARY: The debtor is required under section 343 of the Bankruptcy Code to appear and submit to examination under oath at the meeting of creditors provided for under section 341(a). The examination may be conducted by creditors, any indenture trustee, any trustee or examiner or the United States trustee. The scope of examination is governed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the examination of debtor.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The debtor is required under section 343 of the Bankruptcy Code to appear and submit to examination under oath at the meeting of creditors provided for under section 341(a). The examination may be conducted by creditors, any indenture trustee, any trustee or examiner or the United States trustee. The scope of examination is governed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

Examination of the Debtor at the Meeting of Creditors

Section 343 of the Bankruptcy Code was derived from Section 21a of the former Bankruptcy Act. n1 The scope of the examination of the debtor under section 343 is substantially the same as that under Section 21a as expanded by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2004(b), n2 i.e., the examination may relate only to the acts, conduct, or property, or to the liabilities and financial condition of the debtor, or to any matter which may affect the administration of the debtor's estate, or to his right to discharge. In cases commenced under chapter 11, except for a railroad reorganization, and in cases under chapter 12 and chapter 13 of the Code, the debtor's examination may relate to the operation of the debtor's business and the desirability of its continuance, the source of any money or property acquired or to be acquired by the debtor for purposes of consummating a plan and the consideration given or offered therefore, and any other matter relevant to the case or to the formulation of a plan. n3

Wide Range of Inquiry Permitted under Rule 2004(b). The scope of the questions permitted at a creditors' meeting and in a Rule 2004 examination is the same. n4 Under the broad scope of Rule 2004(b), an examination, including an examination of the debtor at either the section 341(a) meeting or a later examination, is inquisitorial in nature, and consequently the field of inquiry is wide. Within the limitations prescribed, any question is permissible which seeks to ascertain facts concerning the debtor's conduct property and affairs. n5 As the Supreme Court stated in considering Section 21(a) of the former Bankruptcy Act: The need for truthful testimony in a § 21(a) bankruptcy proceeding is great, since the proceeding is a searching inquiry into the condition of the estate of the bankrupt, to assist in discovering and collecting the assets, and to develop facts and circumstances which bear upon the question of discharge. n6

The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit was similarly expansive in describing the scope of the examination: [F]rom the beginning it has been recognized that the trustee may inquire at large and without limit except in cases of plain abuse, to be determined in the court's discretion. n7

The inquiry undertaken, therefore, is one to aid in the discovery of assets and to assist in all particulars in the administration of the estate, n8 and the fact that no specified issue is or can be made up is not grounds for objecting to the examination. n9

[Any] fact or circumstance is relevant and material which fairly tends to establish something which may become important in the administration of the estate. The existence of property rights or interests not scheduled, or rights to defend against apparent claims, or rights of creditors to reclaim property in the hands of the bankrupt [now debtor], or rights of a debtor to discharge-all these are instances of matters properly subject to such investigation on such a proceeding. n10

Similarly, the fact that the information sought from the debtor may be of use in other litigation is not grounds for limiting the broad range of inquiry normally permitted. n11

It is the traditional rule, therefore, that a trustee is granted a virtually unfettered right to inquire into all transactions that relate to a debtor so as to discover the existence and location of assets of the estate. n12 The examination of a witness regarding the acts, conduct and property of a debtor may be as broad in scope as that permitted of the debtor, n13 and the fact that the trustee's examination may lead to the prosecution of an action against the witness does not foreclose the inquiry. n14

Examination of Relatives and Associates of the Debtor. When the witness is the spouse of the debtor, n15 or known to have been closely connected with the debtor in business dealings, n16 great latitude will be allowed. n17 The examination, of course, must be confined within the limits of the general inquiry permitted, n18 and if the questions are not relevant to such matters, the witness is justified in refusing to answer them. n19 The examination cannot be used to delve into the private affairs of a witness when such affairs have no connection with the acts, conduct or property of the debtor, n20 and there are limits with respect to examinations that are unduly burdensome for the witness. n21 However, if the acts inquired of are interwoven with those of the debtor in such a way as to cause a reasonable suspicion that the witness has been preferred or is colluding with the debtor to secret property, the witness will be required to answer and even to produce his or her own books. n22

Relation of Examination to Possible Litigation. The fact that the examination is for the purpose of securing information regarding the prosecution of suits by the trustee will not render the inquiry objectionable. n23 But it has been held that if an examination is used to obtain facts as to the solvency or insolvency of the debtor, or to gain evidence to support an involuntary petition, the court, in its discretion, may refuse to allow the examination. n24

With regard to preferential or fraudulent transfers, the scope of examination under the former Bankruptcy Act was not limited to transactions within either the four-month period or one-year period before the filing of a petition, but could pertain to all matters material or relevant to the debtor's acts, conduct or property, irrespective of remoteness of time. n25 Similarly, under the Code there is no reason why the scope of the examination would be limited to transactions within either the 90-day period before the date of the filing of the petition, with regard to preferential transfers, n26 or the one-year period before the date of the filing of the petition, with regard to preferential transfers to insiders n27 or fraudulent transfers. n28

Examination Regarding Certain Postpetition Acts Permitted. Although the time of filing of the petition will ordinarily represent the forward limit of the scope of the inquiry, it appears that the examination may explore matters concerning the debtor's acts after that time, if such acts affect or concern the debtor's property or conduct prior to the filing of the petition. Moreover, since under the terms of section 541, the trustee takes title to certain after-acquired property of the debtor, the examination should be permitted to touch upon conduct or facts as will pertain to such property, even though they occur after the filing of the petition. In cases under chapters 11, 12 and 13, questions pertaining to the postpetition business operations of the debtor and issues relating to the formulation of a plan may also be asked. n29

Books and Records of the Debtor

The debtor may at any time be ordered to produce the debtor's books, papers and documents for examination and be examined concerning them. n30 The debtor has a duty pursuant to section 521(a)(4) of the Code to surrender to the trustee the books, documents, records, and papers relating to property of the estate. n31

Under prior law, which also included the books and papers of the debtor as property of the estate, n32 the debtor could not refuse to turn them over to the trustee if requested, n33 and clearly has at least an equal obligation under the Code. The legislative history to section 541 of the Code indicates that Congress intended section 541(a)(1) to include tangible or intangible property, causes of action, and all other forms of property currently specified in section 70a of the Bankruptcy Act. n34 Bankruptcy Rule 2004(c) Bankruptcy Rule 2004(c) indicates that the production of documentary evidence may be obtained from any person, including the debtor, by a subpoena. n35

In addition, section 521(e)(2), added in 2005, n36 requires the debtor to provide to the trustee, at least seven days before the section 341(a) meeting, a copy of the debtor's federal income tax return for the most recent tax year ending before the petition and for which a return was filed, or a transcript thereof. n37 Local rules may require the production of other documents at the meeting.

Books and Records of Third-Party Witnesses. A witness other than the debtor may be compelled to produce upon subpoena books, papers and documents that relate to the acts, conduct, or property of the debtor and to testify as to their contents. n38 It has been suggested in connection with an examination under former Bankruptcy Act Section 21a that the bankruptcy court might impound the books in a proper case. n39

When Third-Party Books and Records Need Not Be Produced. When the witness shows that the records sought are not in his or her possession, the order requiring the witness to produce them must be set aside. n40 Such books or papers must have some relation to or bearing on the inquiry, n41 although the latitude is wide. n42 The court, however, on application or sua sponte, may, when justice requires, protect the estate or any person from the disclosure of secret, confidential, scandalous or defamatory matter by appropriate order. n43 In addition, the court may for cause protect individuals from disclosure of other types of information if disclosure would create an undue risk of identity theft or other unlawful injury to a person or property. The applicant for an examination cannot obtain evidence by such means as to transactions between other persons with which the debtor had no connection. n44

When Third-Party Books and Records Must Be Produced. Thus, when third parties have had dealings with the debtor and it appears that property of the debtor has been turned over to them in violation of the Code, such parties may be examined and may be compelled to produce their books of account. n45 And a witness cannot avoid production of books or the answering of questions in reference thereto by a mere plea that they are personal or do not relate to the debtor. [T]his matter is not left to the opinion of the witness but must be determined by the court. n46 For example, in Marx v. Chase National Bank, n47 a bank was compelled to produce certain documents for inspection when the affairs of a debtor corporation, its sole stockholder and its subsidiaries were inextricably commingled, because it would be impossible otherwise to unravel such a tangled corporate skein. An officer of a corporation may refuse to answer questions regarding entries in corporate books on the grounds that they will incriminate him or her, but the officer cannot refuse to produce the books for the same reason. n48

Under these principles, the books, papers and documents of a third person, such as a corporation, may be ordered produced for examination relating to the debtor's conduct or property, n49 or any matter which may affect the administration of the debtor's estate, or to the debtor's right to a discharge. n50 A corporation is presumed to be in the possession and control of its own books, and this presumption cannot be rebutted by the bald statement of some officer that he or she does not know where they are; to be excused from the requirement of production, the corporation must show clearly that it does not have and cannot obtain possession of them. n51

For a complete discussion of Code section 343, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 343 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 332 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 43 (1978).

n2 Congress intended that the scope of the examination under section 343 would be governed by the Bankruptcy Rules. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 332 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 43 (1978).

n3 Rule 2004(b) was amended in 1991 to allow the same scope of examination in chapter 12 cases as in chapter 11 and 13 cases. Under prior law, the scope of examination in chapter 13 cases was governed by former Rule 13-206(d). See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2004 and the 1983 Advisory Committee Note.

n4 Carlson v. Boucher (In re Boucher), 728 F.2d 1152 (8th Cir. 1984).

n5 Todd v. Bradley, 99 Conn. 307, 122 Atl. 68 (1923); In re Williams, 123 F. 321 (D. Tenn. 1903); In re Insull Utility Investments, Inc., 27 F. Supp. 887 (S.D.N.Y. 1934).

n6 Bronston v. United States, 409 U.S. 352, 357, 93 S. Ct. 595, 599, 34 L. Ed. 2d 568 (1973) (citing Travis v. United States, 123 F.2d 268, 271 (10th Cir. 1941)).

n7 Marx v. Chase Nat'l Bank, 117 F.2d 800, 801 (2d Cir. 1941); see also In re Autocue Sales and Distributing Corp., 151 F. Supp. 798, 800 (S.D.N.Y. 1957) (district court, using the same test applied under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26, stated that such an inquiry must be carried on in an atmosphere which permits great leeway and scope of questions); In re Foerst, 93 F. 190 (S.D.N.Y. 1899); In re GHR Energy Corp., 9 C.B.C.2d 516, 33 B.R. 451 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983) (citing Foerst).

n8 In re Eastern Util. Inv. Corp., 98 F.2d 620 (3d Cir. 1938); Travis v. United States, 123 F.2d 268 (10th Cir. 1941).

n9 In re Youroveta Home & Foreign Trade Co., 288 F. 507 (2d Cir. 1923); Ulmer v. United States, 219 F. 641 (6th Cir. 1915); In re Samuels and Lesser, 215 F. 845 (2d Cir. 1914); In re Bogen, 19 F.2d 935 (E.D.S.C. 1927); In re Fixen & Co., 96 F. 748 (S.D. Cal. 1899).

n10 Ulmer v. United States, 219 F. 641 (6th Cir. 1915).

n11 In re Larkham, 24 B.R. 70 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1982).

n12 Stonitsch v. St. Louis Banana & Tomato Co. (In re Isis Foods, Inc.), 9 C.B.C.2d 591, 33 B.R. 45 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1983); In re Arkin-Medo, Inc., 11 C.B.C.2d 878, 44 B.R. 138 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984).

n13 Chereton v. United States, 286 F.2d 409 (6th Cir. 1961); Ulmer v. United States, 219 F. 641 (6th Cir. 1915).

n14 Marx v. Chase Nat'l Bank, 117 F.2d 800 (2d Cir. 1941); see In re Mantolesky, 14 B.R. 973, 979 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1981).

n15 In re Worrell, 125 F. 159 (E.D. Pa. 1903); Travis v. United States, 123 F.2d 268 (10th Cir. 1941).

n16 In re Olin of N.Y., Inc., 1979 Bankr. LEXIS 886 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Jan. 10, 1979).

n17 In re Mantolesky, 14 B.R. 973, 976 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1981) (examination under predecessor to Rule 2004 may cut a broad swath through the debtor's affairs, those associated with him, and those who might have had business dealings with him or who even participated in [business dealings with the debtor]).

n18 See In re Howard, 95 F. 415 (2d Cir. 1899); In re Underwriters Fin. Corp., 13 F. Supp. 690 (S.D.N.Y. 1935).

n19 In re Youroveta Home & Foreign Trade Co., 288 F. 507 (2d Cir. 1923).

n20 Id.; In re Wilcher, 56 B.R. 428 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1985); In re Mittco, Inc., 44 B.R. 35 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1984); Keene Corp. v. Johns-Manville Corp. (In re Johns-Manville Corp.), 42 B.R. 362 (S.D.N.Y. 1984); In re G.H.R. Energy Corp., 9 C.B.C.2d 516, 33 B.R. 451 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983); see also In re Continental Forge Co., Inc., 73 B.R. 1005 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1987) (manufacturer's right to privacy in its business affairs exceeded debtor's interest in obtaining proprietary information not relevant to potential cause of action nor to administration of the estate).

n21 In re Texaco Inc., 17 C.B.C.2d 1084, 79 B.R. 551 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987), aff'd on other grounds, 18 C.B.C.2d 331, 82 B.R. 678 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

n22 In re Carley, 106 F. 862 (D. Ky. 1901); In re Fixen, 96 F. 748 (S.D. Cal. 1899); see In re Dependable Merchandise Corp., 14 F.R.D. 257 (S.D.N.Y. 1953).

n23 Marx v. Chase Nat'l Bank, 117 F.2d 800 (2d Cir. 1941); In re Paramount Publix Corp., 82 F.2d 230 (2d Cir. 1936); In re Underwriters Finance Corp., 13 F. Supp. 690 (S.D.N.Y. 1935); In re Insull Utility Investments, Inc., 27 F. Supp 887 (S.D.N.Y. 1934); In re Cliffe, 97 F. 540 (E.D. Pa. 1899); In re Larkham, 24 B.R. 70 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1982).

n24 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 343.03[2] and 343.11(Matthew Bender).

n25 In re Mallow Hotel Corp., 18 F. Supp 18 (M.D. Pa. 1937) (examination as to transactions occurring 1215 years previously which reasonably related to the transactions and conduct of debtor and whereabouts of its property).

n26 11 U.S.C. § 547(b)(4)(A); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.03[6] (Matthew Bender).

n27 11 U.S.C. § 547 (b)(4)(B); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.03[6] (Matthew Bender).

n28 See 11 U.S.C. § 548, as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 548 (Matthew Bender).

n29 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2004(b).

n30 See In re Horgan and Slattery, 98 F. 414 (2d Cir. 1899); In re Rukeyser, 1 F. Supp. 711 (S.D.N.Y. 1932); In re Hyman J. Herr (No. 1), 182 F. 715 (M.D. Pa. 1910); In re Alper, 162 F. 207 (S.D.N.Y. 1907); see also In re Soloway & Katz, 195 F. 103 (D. Conn. 1912).

n31 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(4), formerly § 521(4), as redesignated by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.12 (Matthew Bender).

n32 Section 70(a)(1) of the former Bankruptcy Act included documents relating to the debtor's property as property of the estate.

n33 In re Fuller and McGee, 262 U.S. 91, 43 S. Ct. 496, 67 L. Ed. 881 (1923); Babbitt, Trustee v. Dutcher, 216 U.S. 102, 30 S. Ct. 372, 54 L. Ed. 402 (1910); see also In re Shapiro, 110 F. Supp. 288 (W.D. Pa. 1953).

n34 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 539 (1977); see also 11 U.S.C. § 542(e) (indicating that the debtor's books and records continue to be property of the estate).

n35 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2004(c), as amended by the 2002 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (attendance of an entity for examination and production of documentary evidence may be compelled in the manner provided in Rule 9016 for the attendance of witnesses at a hearing or trial); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2004.03 (Matthew Bender). Bankruptcy Rule 9016 incorporates Civil Rule 45. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 9016.01 (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of Rule 45, see 9 Moore's Federal Practice, ch. 45 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

n36 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n37 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 521.20 (Matthew Bender).

n38 In re Fox, 96 F.2d 20 (3d Cir. 1938); In re Landquist, 70 F.2d 929 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 293 U.S. 584, 55 S. Ct. 98, 79 L. Ed. 680 (1934); see 11 U.S.C. § 542(e); see also In re Manufacturers Trading Corp., 194 F.2d 948 (6th Cir. 1952). Bankruptcy Rule 2004(c) authorizes the use of a subpoena to compel the attendance of a witness or the production of documentary evidence.

n39 In re Fox, 96 F.2d 20 (3d Cir. 1938); In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 201 F. 66 (2d Cir. 1912).

n40 In re Charlotte Textile Co., 94 F. Supp. 872 (S.D.N.Y. 1950).

n41 In re Carley, 106 F. 862 (D. Ky. 1901) (insofar as this case holds that there is less latitude in the examination of third persons, it is not good law).

n42 See Freeman v. Seligson, 405 F.2d 1326 (D.C. Cir. 1968); Marx v. Chase Nat'l Bank, 117 F.2d 800 (2d Cir. 1941).

n43 11 U.S.C. § 107(b) provides that the court may enter an order protecting against disclosure of confidential information or to protect a person with respect to scandalous or defamatory matter. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 107.03 (Matthew Bender). Bankruptcy Rule 9018 provides the court with similar powers to protect against unwarranted disclosures. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 9018.02 (Matthew Bender).

n44 In re Fox, 96 F.2d 20 (3d Cir. 1938).

n45 In re Fixen & Co., 96 F. 748 (S.D. Cal. 1899).

n46 In re Fixen & Co., 96 F. 748 (S.D. Cal. 1899); see also In re E.S. Wheeler & Co., 158 F. 603 (2d Cir. 1907); In re Fox, 96 F.2d 23 (3d Cir. 1938).

n47 117 F.2d 800 (2d Cir. 1941).

n48 In re Bleecker, 14 F.2d 1018 (S.D.N.Y. 1925), aff'd, 14 F.2d 1019 (2d Cir. 1926).

n49 See In re Fox, 96 F.2d 23 (3d Cir. 1938); In re Charlotte Textile Co., 94 F. Supp. 872 (S.D.N.Y. 1950); In re United States Graphite Co. 159 F. 300 (E.D. Pa. 1908); In re Fixen & Co., 96 F. 748 (S.D. Cal. 1899).

n50 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2004(b).

n51 In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 201 F. 66 (2d Cir. 1912).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

167 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Reimbursement of Actual and Necessary Expenses under Section 330

2008 Emerging Issues 1053

Collier on the Reimbursement of Actual and Necessary Expenses under Section 330

By Collier

November 19, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 330(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code authorizes the reimbursement of officers of the estate for their actual and necessary expenses. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues such as the definition of actual and necessary expenses, the expenses of the trustees and the examiners, the expenses of professional persons, compensation for travel time, and the cost of paraprofessionals.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE:

Section 330(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code authorizes the reimbursement of officers of the estate for their actual and necessary expenses.

Definition of Actual and Necessary Expenses

Expenses are deemed actual when they are, in fact, incurred rather than based upon guesswork, formula or pro rata allocation, n1 and when they are obviously attributable to a bankruptcy client. n2 Expenses are deemed necessary if they are incurred because they were properly required to accomplish the task for which the professional was employed, n3 and when they do not raise a substantial question of necessity in light of all available alternatives. n4 Under section 330, compensation for services and reimbursement of expenses is determined according to the same standard of reasonableness. n5 Consequently, the factors employed to determine the reasonableness of compensation for services are also applicable with regard to the reimbursement of expenses. n6

Although section 330(a)(1)(B) authorizes reimbursement of expenses, it does not create an automatic entitlement to reimbursement. n7 Reimbursement of expenses is more readily allowed, however, than is compensation of services. A court might disallow interim compensation to debtor's attorney but award full reimbursement of expenses. n8 When the court denies compensation it will neither necessarily nor automatically deny reimbursement for necessary expenses incurred. n9 The determination as to whether to allow reimbursement of expenses depends, in part, upon whether such expenses are considered non-reimbursable overhead charges.

Prior to the enactment of the Bankruptcy Reform Act, the Bankruptcy Code did not specifically provide for the reimbursement of members of a creditors' committee for their actual and necessary expenses, although courts generally held that such expenses should be compensable as long as they are reasonable. n10 For example, in In re The George Worthington Co., n11 the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit held that, although the Bankruptcy Code at that time did not expressly authorize reimbursement of committee expenses, authority for such reimbursement was implied in the overall scheme for reorganization and in the legislative history of the Code and its amendments. The Sixth Circuit further recognized that many courts construed section 503(b) broadly to include official committees, based on the fact that reimbursement is necessary to effectuate the policies underlying the statutory scheme for reorganization under the Code. n12 Finally, the Sixth Circuit incorporated some courts' reliance on logic and equity to support an interpretation of the Code that authorized reimbursement of the expenses of official committees. The court pointed out that a more restrictive interpretation of the Code would create the anomalous situation in which unofficial committees would be entitled to compensation, but those committees required to be appointed under chapter 11 would not. n13

Section 503(b)(3)(F) now codifies a court's authority to allow reimbursement of expenses incurred by members of a committee appointed under section 1102 to the extent that the expenses for which reimbursement is sought were incurred in the performance of the duties of the committee. n14 Regardless of the status qualifying an applicant for reimbursement of expenses, the applicant must set forth in detail specific expenses and may not request a flat surcharge intended to cover such expenses. n15

Expenses of Trustees and Examiners

Section 330 does not specifically identify what the phrase actual, necessary expenses includes. It does not set forth which expenses may properly be allowed and which may not be allowed, aside from the requirement that the expenses were incurred necessarily in the performance of the officer's duties. n16 Expenses for which reimbursement may be allowed to trustees may range from rental payments necessary to preserve estate assets to the cost of publicity designed to attract a crowd and induce it to purchase estate assets.

Section 330(b)(3) covers: (1) expenditures incident to the authorized operation of a business; (2) rent; (3) insurance; (4) salaries; (5) wages; (6) costs of merchandise and production; (7) royalties; and (8) taxes. Also falling within the ambit of section 330 are: (1) expenses of investigation; (2) litigation; (3) arbitration and settlement; (4) travel.

Expenses Must Be Properly Documented. In order to be allowed, a trustee's expenses must be documented adequately and in detail, so as to enable the court to render an independent decision as to the reasonableness of the expenses. n17

Limitation of Trustee Compensation under Section 326. The limitation in section 326 on compensation for the trustee's services applies whether or not a particular duty is actually performed by the trustee or delegated to another. n18 If the trustee delegates to another a statutory duty that may be performed by someone other than the trustee without prior court approval, the delegate cannot be paid independently of the trustee's compensation because that could result in compensation in excess of the statutory maximum for trustee services. n19 If the trustee receives the maximum compensation allowable under section 326(a), then the delegate's compensation must be subtracted from that amount to the extent that the delegate is being compensated for trustee services. n20 In In re Hance Meyer, Inc., n21 the trustee had sought the maximum compensation allowed by section 326(a) in addition to reimbursement of expenses for the trustee's paralegal staff. The bankruptcy court held that section 326(a) sets an absolute maximum on the amount of compensation the court may award a trustee, and when the maximum amount of compensation is awarded, the allowance as an expense of any amount over the trustee's actual out-of-pocket costs violates section 326. The limitation applies as well to professionals employed by the trustee. Therefore, an attorney employed by the trustee will not be compensated separately for services statutorily required of the trustee. n22

Expenses of Professional Persons

Professionals employed by the trustee, particularly attorneys, carry the major responsibility for administering the estate, uncovering funds, recovering property and bringing the case to a successful conclusion. Their expenses incurred are generally reimbursable pursuant to section 330(b), but there has been a wide divergence of policy among the bankruptcy courts concerning the treatment of costs and expenses considered by some courts to be non-reimbursable because they constitute expenses allocable to overhead.

Overhead Nonreimbursable. Nonreimbursable overhead has been defined as regular administrative and general expenses incident to the operation of a business that cannot be attributed to a particular client or cost. n23

At least one district court has held that the cost of copying, postage, long distance telephone calls, travel and other like expenses are incurred on behalf of a particular client. Therefore, they can be differentiated from true overhead expenses such as rent, utilities and salaries. n24 Similarly, another district court has held that clerical expenses, postage, express mail services, local travel expenses and computer time were reimbursable expenses because they were attributable to a particular client through the law firm's billing system. n25

The trend in allowing reimbursement of arguably overhead expenses requires that expenses be specifically allocable to the bankruptcy case and be documented. n26 Courts have held that a debtor's attorneys were entitled to reimbursement of their legal expenses incurred in the retention of another law firm to defend against meritless lawsuits commenced against them by the chapter 7 trustee; n27 that special litigation counsel retained by a debtor was entitled to reimbursement of interest that he had paid on money borrowed to pay litigation expenses; n28 that computerized legal research expenses n29 and word processing charges are reimbursable; n30 and that a debtor's attorney was entitled to reimbursement for costs related to indemnification against actions by trustee. n31

Compensation for Travel Time. One of the major issues over which courts disagree with respect to compensation is travel time.

Local Travel Time Not Compensable. Courts generally agree that local travel time should not be billed and paid as an expense to the bankruptcy estate. Local travel to the courthouse beyond a minimal time should be included in overhead. n32

Non-local Travel Time Compensable; Extent Varies. Courts generally permit compensation for a professional's non-local travel time; however, the courts are not in agreement with respect to what extent the time spent traveling should be compensable.

Full Compensation If Travel Time Was Reasonable and Necessary. On one side of the issue are courts that view travel time in the same manner as any other billable activity. In In re Frontier Airlines, Inc., n33 for example, the bankruptcy court held that time spent in traveling should be compensated at the professional's full hourly rate. The Frontier Airlines court asserted that travel time is not soft time and that the notion that only travel during normal business hours is compensable imposes penalties on those professionals who forego their personal time on weekends or at night to fly to a location for an early meeting. Rather than focusing on the potential lack of productivity of travel time, the court focused on whether the travel time was reasonable and necessary. The court stated nonbankruptcy attorneys typically bill their travel time at the full hourly rate because it precludes them from engaging in other billable professional work. n34

Other courts have refused to award full compensation for travel, based on reasons such as lack of productivity, burden to the estate and the availability of local counsel. For example, in In re Landing, Inc., n35 the court reduced compensation for time spent traveling by the trustee's attorneys to 50 percent of their normal hourly billing rate, focusing on the non-productivity of travel. The Landing court indicated that it would permit a greater award for travel time when the applicant specifically shows that travel time was concurrently used for preparing for meetings or court appearances. Determining that charging the bankruptcy estate at the full rate for travel time would be burdensome to the estate, the bankruptcy court in In re Environmental Waste Control, n36 also limited compensation of professionals' travel time to one-half their normal hourly rate. The court in In re Grimes, n37 reduced the debtor's out-of-state attorney reimbursement of travel fees and expenses to 25 percent of the requested amount, deeming it to be unnecessary. Although the Grimes court indicated that travel time could be reimbursed at a full hourly billing rate, it emphasized that compensation for travel may be denied as unnecessary if an attorney located far from the situs of the bankruptcy is employed when adequate local representation is available. n38

Reimbursement for a Field Office. Courts have also denied reimbursement to a debtor's out-of-state attorney for overhead costs, such as rent, payroll and furniture, for establishing a temporary field office when the bankruptcy case was pending. n39

Paraprofessionals Separately Compensable. Section 330 specifically provides that the cost of paraprofessionals n40 employed by professional persons serving the estate is separately compensable and is not an ordinary expense of operation. n41 This provision was included as a measure to reduce the cost of administering bankruptcy cases. In other areas, professionals are able to charge for a paraprofessional's time on an hourly basis, and not include it in overhead. If a similar practice were not allowed in bankruptcy cases, then there would be less inclination to use paraprofessionals even when the work could easily and perhaps more efficiently be handled by these individuals at a lower cost to the estate. n42 The provision is designed to encourage attorneys and other professionals to use paraprofessional assistance when possible, and to ensure that the estate, not the professional, will bear the cost. n43 Whether a task is appropriate for assignment to a paraprofessional is a matter of professional judgment, and the bankruptcy court generally should not substitute its own judgment. n44

The allowance of paraprofessional fees in bankruptcy cases is not without limitation, however. Several courts have imposed restrictions on the compensation of paraprofessionals. For example, the court in In re Grimes, n45 concluded that if paralegal work is to be compensated, the qualifications of the paralegal should be established in order to justify the charge. In In re C&F Fabricators of Utah, Inc., n46 the court held that although the cost of paraprofessional service is reimbursable, the fees charged must be reasonable in relation to the specific services rendered. Finally, in In re Grenoble Apartments, II, n47 the district court ruled that in awarding compensation for paralegal services, the bankruptcy court is limited to the prevailing market rate approach.

For a complete discussion of Code section 330, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 330 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Max Rouse & Sons, Inc. v. Specialty Plywood, Inc. (In re Specialty Plywood, Inc.), 30 C.B.C.2d 199, 160 B.R. 627 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993) (citing In re Williams, 102 B.R. 197, 199 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1989)).

n2

2. In re Mulberry Phosphates, Inc., 169 B.R. 750 (M.D. Fla. 1994) (citing In re New Hampshire Elec. Coop., Inc., 146 B.R. 890, 903 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1992)).

n3

3. Max Rouse & Sons, Inc. v. Specialty Plywood, Inc. (In re Specialty Plywood, Inc.), 30 C.B.C.2d 199, 160 B.R. 627 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993) (citing In re Williams, 102 B.R. 197, 199 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1989)); In re Spanjer Bros., Inc., 191 B.R. 738 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996).

n4

4. In re Mulberry Phosphates, Inc., 169 B.R. 750 (M.D. Fla. 1994) (citing In re New Hampshire Elec. Coop., Inc., 27 C.B.C.2d 1337, 1354, 146 B.R. 890, 903 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1992)).

n5

5. See Max Rouse & Sons, Inc. v. Specialty Plywood, Inc. (In re Specialty Plywood, Inc.), 30 C.B.C.2d 199, 160 B.R. 627 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993).

n6

6. For a discussion of the factors considered in determining the reasonableness of compensation, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.04 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 330 (Matthew Bender); see also Milbank, Tweed & Hope v. McCue, 111 F.2d

100 (4th Cir. 1940); In re Prudence Bonds Corp., 122 F.2d 258 (2d Cir. 1941).

n8

8. See, e.g., In re Gloria Mfg. Corp., 6 C.B.C.2d 1028, 20 B.R. 603 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1982).

n9

9. See Woods v. City Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 312 U.S. 262, 61 S. Ct. 493, 85 L. Ed. 820 (1941) (denying compensation to fiduciary on the basis of conflict of interest but granting reimbursement of expenses that benefited estate).

n10

10. See e.g., In re Toy & Sports Warehouse, Inc., 37 B.R. 141 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984); In re Global Int'l Airways Corp., 11 C.B.C.2d 1211, 45 B.R. 258 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1984); In re GHR Energy Corp., 35 B.R. 539 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983); In re Grynberg, 6 C.B.C.2d 541, 19 B.R. 621 (Bankr. D. Col. 1982); In re Farm Bureau Serv., Inc., 32 B.R. 69 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1982); In re Fireside Office Supply, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 111, 17 B.R. 43 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1981); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.01[2] (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. 921 F.2d 626, 24 C.B.C.2d 308 (6th Cir. 1990).

n12

12. 921 F.2d 626, 633, 24 C.B.C.2d 308, 317 (6th Cir. 1990).

n13

13. 921 F.2d 626, 633, 24 C.B.C.2d 308, 318 (6th Cir. 1990).

n14

14. See discussion of 503(b)(3)(F) in Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.01 (Matthew Bender)..

n15

15. See In re Belknap, Inc., 103 B.R. 842 (Bankr. W.D. Ky. 1989).

n16

16. See In re National Paragon Corp., 76 B.R. 73 (E.D. Pa. 1987).

n17

17. In re Central Pac. Boiler & Piping, Ltd., 88 B.R. 277 (Bankr. D. Haw. 1988).

n18

18. In re Lowry Graphics, Inc., 86 B.R. 74 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1988).

n19

19. See In re Lanier Spa, Inc., 21 C.B.C.2d 75, 99 B.R. 490 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1989); In re Prairie Cent. Ry. Co., 87 B.R. 952 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988); In re Lowry Graphics, Inc., 86 B.R. 74 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1988); In re Impact Publications, Inc., 24 B.R. 980 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1982). But see Cavazos v. Simmons, 90 B.R. 234 (N.D. Tex. 1988) (statutory limit on trustee compensation not applicable to paraprofessionals employed by trustee). See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 323 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20. In re Lowry Graphics, Inc., 86 B.R. 74, 80 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1988).

n21

21. 30 C.B.C.2d 449, 161 B.R. 839 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 1993).

n22

22. In re Air Vermont, 114 B.R. 48 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1988) (improperly billed trustee services is an unwarranted double dipping).

n23

23. In re Convent Guardian Corp., 103 B.R. 937 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989).

n24

24. In re National Paragon Corp., 76 B.R. 73 (E.D. Pa. 1987).

n25

25. In re Mulberry Phosphates, Inc., 151 B.R. 948, 951 (M.D. Fla. 1992). But see In re Michaelson, 222 B.R. 595 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1997) (clerk's time is considered part of overhead).

n26

26. See, e.g., In re Motor Freight Express, 80 B.R. 44 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987); In re Mayflower Associates, 78 B.R. 41 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (photocopying, postage, long distance telephone calls, and travel costs compensable only if properly documented). But see In re Convent Guardian Corp., 103 B.R. 937 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989) (denying reimbursement for items such as secretary costs, postage, messenger costs absent extraordinary circumstances).

n27

27. In re Met-L-Wood Corp., 115 B.R. 133 (N.D. Ill. 1990). See In re American Preferred Prescription, Inc., 218 B.R. 680 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1998) (chapter 11 debtor's accountants were entitled to reimbursement of their legal expenses incurred to defend against meritless motion for disqualification made by debtor) (citing In re Met-L-Wood Corp.).

n28

28. In re Central Ice Cream Co., 114 B.R. 956 (N.D. Ill. 1989).

n29

29. In re Wizard Enterprises, Inc., 109 B.R. 708 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1990). But see In re Belknap, Inc., 103 B.R. 842 (Bankr. W.D. Ky. 1989) (disallowing clerical pay and computer research charges as overhead).

n30

30. In re Jensen-Farley, 47 B.R. 557 (Bankr. D. Utah 1985). But see In re D'Lite of Am. Inc., 92 B.R. 554 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988) (word-processing charges are nonreimbursable overhead).

n31

31. In re Met-L-Wood Corp., 103 B.R. 972 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989).

n32

32. See, e.g., In re Ginji Corp., 24 C.B.C.2d 216, 117 B.R. 983 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1990); In re Metro Transp. Co., 78 B.R. 416 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987); In re Tavern Motor Inn, Inc., 69 B.R. 138 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1987) (local travel time should be treated as part of overhead).

n33

33. 74 B.R. 973 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1987).

n34

34. See also In re Cano, 122 B.R. 812 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1990).

n35

35. 122 B.R. 701 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1990).

n36

36. 122 B.R. 341 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990).

n37

37. 115 B.R. 639 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1990).

n38

38. 115 B.R. 639, 643 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1990).

n39

39. In re Braniff, Inc., 117 B.R. 702 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990).

n40

40. A paraprofessional is one who assists a professional person but is not a member of the profession. In re Balli, 228 B.R. 546 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1998) (citing Black's Law Dictionary and finding that a nonprofessional trustee, by definition, is not capable of employing a paraprofessional).

n41

41. For cases allowing compensation of paraprofessional services, see In re Wolverine Knitting Mills, Inc., 107 B.R. 546 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1989) (allowing accountants separate compensation for clerical services rendered to the estate); In re Marsh, 5 C.B.C.2d 106, 14 B.R. 615 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1981); In re D & W Motel Enters., 3 C.B.C.2d 861, 9 B.R. 355 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1981) (allowing cost of paraprofessional services performed by secretaries engaged in creative work beyond secretarial duties); In re Quick Release, Inc., 3 C.B.C.2d 230, 6 B.R. 713 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1980).

n42

42. In re Klemen, 21 B.R. 77 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1982) (inclusion of paraprofessional services in section 330 was for purpose of lowering the overall costs to the estate).

n43

43. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 330 (1977).

n44

44. In re St. Rita's Assocs. Private Placement, L.P., 216 B.R. 490 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1998).

n45

45. 115 B.R. 639 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1990).

n46

46. 25 C.B.C.2d 779, 131 B.R. 474 (Bankr. D. Utah 1991).

n47

47. 152 B.R. 608 (D.S.D. 1993).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

168 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Effect of Rejection of an Executory Contract or Unexpired Lease

2008 Emerging Issues 959

Collier on the Effect of Rejection of an Executory Contract or Unexpired Lease

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues that arise under Section 365(g), including the rights of sublessees and leasehold mortgages, the ability of a real property lessor to retake the premises, the effect of the rejection of a contract or lease previously assumed, and the protection of personal property lessors.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Section 365(g) of the Bankruptcy Code deals generally with the effect of a rejection of an executory contract or unexpired lease. When the contract or lease has not been previously assumed, rejection constitutes a breach immediately before the date of the filing of the petition. n1

Other Party Becomes General Unsecured Creditor

The purpose of section 365(g) is to make clear that, under the doctrine of relation-back, the other party to a contract that has not been assumed is simply a general unsecured creditor. Section 502(g) provides much the same. n2 The effect of the breach is to permit the creditor to seek allowance of its claim under section 502. n3 This is confirmed by the definition of the term "creditor" in section 101, n4 which provides that the term includes any entity that has a claim of the type specified in section 502(g). Thus, the effect of a rejection is that a breach is deemed to exist, which in the ordinary case will give rise to a claim for damages. n5 Rejection does not, however, affect the parties' substantive rights under the contract or lease, such as the amount owing or a measure of damages for breach, n6 and does not waive any defenses to the contract. n7

Treatment of Special Cases

Several unique situations are dealt with by other provisions of section 365. Section 365(h) deals with leases of real property under which the debtor is lessor and with timeshare plans under which the debtor is the seller of the timeshare interest. n8 Section 365(i) deals with land sale contracts and with timeshare sale contracts under which the debtor is seller and the buyer is already in possession of the property. n9 Finally, rejection of intellectual property licenses under which the debtor is licensor is addressed in section 365(n). n10 In general, these provisions represent special cases in which the other party to the contract may be permitted, after rejection, to opt to retain most or all of its rights under the contract, other than those that require affirmative performance from the trustee or debtor in possession.

Breach Is Not Termination of Contract

Although the Bankruptcy Code explicitly provides that, in general, rejection of an executory contract or unexpired lease constitutes a breach, one question that has troubled courts is whether rejection terminates the contract or lease. n11 If rejection terminates the contract or lease, such termination may have consequences that affect parties other than the debtor and the other party to the contract or lease. For example, termination upon a lessee's rejection may affect the rights of a leasehold mortgagee, a sublessee or an assignee of the lessee's rights. Similarly, termination upon a lessor's rejection may affect the rights of a lessee, sublessee or, at times, a leasehold mortgagee.

Unlike other provisions of section 365, n12 which mention the "termination" of a contract or lease, section 365(g) describes the effect of rejection as a "breach" of the contract or lease. Indeed, section 365 uses the terms "rejection," "breach" and "termination" differently. n13 Thus, "rejection" is the decision of the trustee or the debtor, as the case may be, not to assume a burdensome contract or lease. "Rejection" constitutes a "breach" pursuant to section 365(g), except to the extent that a contract or lease is "terminated" pursuant to section 365(h) or (i). Subsections (h) and (i) authorize lessees of real property, timeshare purchasers or buyers of real property to remain in possession of the property after rejection by a lessor or seller or, alternatively, to treat the lease or sale agreement as "terminated" by the rejection. Other than the option given to lessees and purchasers to treat rejection as termination, section 365 does not explicitly provide for termination of a party's or lessee's contract interests. n14 Moreover, if rejection of the lease worked a termination, it would be difficult to justify granting the other party to the contract or lease a damage claim for rejection, which the lessor is given by section 502(g). n15 Similarly, because a rejection constitutes only a breach, not a termination, a covenant not to compete in a rejected contract continues to bind the debtor, unless the obligation is discharged. n16

This suggests that the effect of rejection of an executory contract or unexpired lease is limited to a breach or abandonment by the trustee or debtor in possession rather than a complete termination of the lease. n17 Rejection should not operate to damage the rights of third parties with rights in the leasehold estate. n18 When the lease is deemed rejected by reason of the expiration of the time set pursuant to section 365(d)(4), the debtor's right to possession of the premises is extinguished but the leasehold itself is not. n19

Rights of Sublessees and Leasehold Mortgages. This issue has arisen most frequently with respect to real property leases in which the debtor is a lessee who granted a sublease of or leasehold mortgage on real property or in which the debtor is a lessor whose lessee granted such an interest. Typically, a party down the chain is seeking to protect its interest that flows from the debtor's rights. When the debtor is lessee, recognition that rejection of the lease does not terminate all rights under the lease leaves it open to the sublessee or leasehold mortgagee to prove that, under nonbankruptcy law, it is entitled to retain its interest even if the debtor-lessee breached the lease. This is particularly important in view of section 365(d)(4), which deems rejected a lease that is not assumed by a debtor-lessee within 60 days after the order for relief. n20

When the rejection is by a debtor-lessor, an amendment enacted in 1994 protects parties who derive their rights through the lessee. n21 Section 365(h) now provides that, upon rejection by a lessor of real property, the lessee may retain not only its own possessory rights, but other rights appurtenant thereto, including rights to sublet, assign or hypothecate the lease.

Abandonment to Debtor of Lease or Contract Rejected by Trustee. The effect of rejection on third parties is also an issue in chapter 7 cases, particularly in the case of leases, since leases are rarely assumed by chapter 7 trustees and are therefore automatically rejected pursuant to section 365(d)(1). Because rejection does not effect a termination of the lease, most courts that have considered the issue have held the rejection to have the effect of abandoning the lease back to the debtor. n22 The 1984 amendments to the Code support this interpretation for leases other than leases of nonresidential real property. While section 365(d)(4) requires a nonresidential tenant to vacate a property where the lease is not assumed, there is no such requirement for a residential tenant. In addition, if a landlord accepts rental payments after the expiration of the 60-day period, the debtor may argue that any breach of the lease has been waived. n23 Subsection (p) provides special rules for the trustee's rejection of a personal property lease. n24

Ability of Real Property Lessor to Retake Premises

The courts are split on the issue whether the bankruptcy court has the power to order a surrender of the premises to the landlord upon a proper request or whether the landlord should have to exercise its remedies under applicable state law. n25 The better approach in a case involving a lease of nonresidential real property is to analogize to section 365(d)(4) and to require the debtor to surrender leased premises after rejection of the lease, without the necessity to suffer further delay by engaging in eviction proceedings under nonbankruptcy law. However, in other cases involving disputes between the debtor and the lessor about possession, the most the bankruptcy court should do is grant relief from the automatic stay, if appropriate, to allow the lessor to proceed in state court.

Effect of Rejection of a Contract or Lease Previously Assumed

Section 365(g) provides that if a contract or lease was assumed previously and is then rejected, the breach is at the time of rejection unless the case was converted under section 1112, n26 1208 n27 or 1307, n28 in which case the breach is immediately before the date of the conversion, unless the assumption itself took place after the conversion, in which case the breach is at the time of rejection. The reason for the somewhat complicated wording is to make it clear that when a contract or lease is assumed in a case under chapter 11, 12 or 13 and then breached in the ensuing liquidation under chapter 7, any administrative priority claim flowing from the breach will not fall within the superpriority of section 726(b). n29

Although section 365(g) indicates that, in general, a post-assumption rejection constitutes a breach as of the time of rejection, it does not clearly indicate that damages from that breach are entitled to administrative priority. One might argue that if the estate gets no benefit from the breach, there is no basis for administrative priority under section 503. The better approach, however, is to recognize that the estate receives the benefit of the assumed contract, which presumably was viewed as beneficial at the time it was assumed, and takes that contract cum onere. Therefore, any damages flowing from the breach of a previously assumed contract should be considered first priority administrative expenses. n30

This suggests that a trustee or debtor in possession should proceed cautiously in electing to assume a contract or lease, since an assumption will have the effect of making the expenses and liabilities incurred expenses of administration. n31 Similarly, once a contract is rejected it stays rejected. This view is supported by the wording of section 1123(b)(2) and section 1322(b)(7), which permit the assumption or rejection in the plan of contracts "not previously rejected." n32

The limitation upon the amount of an allowed claim arising from breach of a real property lease in section 502(b)(6) n33 of the Code does not apply to leases assumed and thereafter rejected in the case. n34 However, a similar limitation applies upon the amount of the administrative expense that arises upon rejection of a real property lease that has previously been assumed in the case. n35

Protection of Personal Property Lessors

Section 365(p)(1) Section 365(p)(1) gives relief to personal property lessors by providing that upon rejection or deemed rejection, the leased property is no longer property of the estate, "and the stay under section 362(a) is automatically terminated." n36 The provision is analogous to the protection provided to lessors of nonresidential real property under section 365(d)(4), under which the trustee is required to surrender the property immediately to the lessor upon the deemed rejection of the lease. However, it differs markedly. Section 365(p)(1) applies not only on deemed rejection, but also upon the trustee's affirmative rejection of a personal property lease. On the other hand, it does not require surrender of the property; it merely terminates the automatic stay. This provision applies equally under all chapters, n37 and to all kinds of debtors, whether individual or corporate, whether consumer or business.

Under section 365(p)(1), the leased personal property is no longer property of the estate. Although not stated, that suggests that the property returns to being property of the debtor, and the debtor may deal with it free of any restrictions of the Bankruptcy Code. n38 The lessor may apparently also deal with the property free of any such restrictions, because the provision automatically terminates the automatic stay under section 362(a). The stay ordinarily protects both the debtor and the estate and property of the debtor and the estate. The stay termination under section 365(p)(1) is broad enough to terminate the stay as to both entities. Interestingly, the literal language of section 365(p)(1) is even broader than that. It appears to effect a total termination of the automatic stay, for all creditors, for all property, for all actions, in any case in which "a lease [any lease!] of personal property is rejected or not timely assumed by the trustee." Such a result would be absurd and appear to be demonstrably at odds with clear congressional intent. A more charitable reading suggests that Congress intended only to terminate the stay as to the particular lessor, lease, and leased property that has been rejected. Such a reading is supported by section 365(p)(2), which provides safe harbors from the stay for certain of the lessor's post-rejection activities, discussed below, and by section 365(p)(3), which provides for termination of the stay in individual chapter 11 or 13 cases after rejection.

Subsection (p)(2) n39 permits an individual chapter 7 debtor to notify the lessor in writing that the debtor desires to assume a personal property lease that the trustee has rejected or that has been deemed rejected. It is a curious provision, in that there is nothing in the Code that suggests that a debtor could not contact a lessor, whether or not its lease had been rejected. One could infer that the provision is an indirect prohibition on contacting the lessor other than in writing or other than after rejection, but nothing in the language, the history, or the context suggests that such an inference is warranted. After the lessor (referred to in the statute as "the creditor") is contacted, it may notify the debtor that it is willing to have the debtor assume the lease. The lessor's action is entirely optional. Again, one might wonder why statutory authorization was required for the lessor's act. The lessor may condition the assumption on cure of outstanding defaults on terms set by the lease. If the debtor notifies the lessor in writing not later than 30 days "after notice is provided under subparagraph (A)" that the lease is assumed, then the debtor, and not the estate, assumes the liability for the lease. The provision does not specify which "notice provided under subparagraph (A)" triggers the 30-day clock.

In sum, the procedure in subsection (p)(2) envisions three possible steps: The debtor may notify the lessor of a desire to assume; the lessor may notify the debtor of its willingness to have the lease assumed and of the terms of cure; and the debtor may accept. If the lessor does not set terms of cure, it appears the debtor still may assume the lease; although other Code provisions expressly limit the estate's general right to assume executory contracts or leases in certain cases, n40 subsection (p)(2) does not contain any limitation on the debtor's right to assume other than the lessor's ability to condition assumption on cure of any outstanding default on terms set by the contract. n41 The Code does not specify what happens if either of the parties does not meet any of the deadlines, nor does it indicate whether they may reach an agreement between themselves on terms or times different from those specified. The provision does not appear to prohibit any such alternative agreement.

Finally, the creditor's conduct in contacting the debtor in response to the debtor's request to assume is expressly excepted from both the automatic stay and the discharge injunction. The exception does not cover, however, any contact by the lessor to request that the debtor assume before the debtor first contacts the lessor. However, section 362(h) terminates the stay in an individual case as to particular property if the debtor does not timely perform the statement of intentions required under section 521(a)(2). n42

Section (p)(3) Section 365(p)(3) applies only in a chapter 13 or an individual chapter 11 case. It provides that if a personal property "lease is not assumed in the plan confirmed by the court" then it "is deemed rejected as of the conclusion of the hearing on confirmation." Implementation of the timing requirements of this section may be challenging in some cases. Upon rejection, the automatic stay of section 362 and the codebtor stay of section 1301 in chapter 13 cases are automatically terminated as to the leased property. The provision does not expressly terminate the automatic stay as to the debtor or the estate, so any effort to collect any amounts owing from the debtor, the estate or a codebtor remains stayed.

In some cases, the court does not confirm a plan immediately upon conclusion of the confirmation hearing. For example, a plan amendment may be required before the court will sign the order, or an order might not have been submitted to the court before the hearing. A literal reading of the language would seem to suggest that in those cases, all of the debtor's personal property leases would be deemed rejected, before the court actually confirmed the plan, because the rejection operates at the conclusion of the hearing, but not on leases "assumed in the plan confirmed by the court." A court could resolve this apparent anachronism by keeping the confirmation hearing open until the confirmation order is actually entered. To avoid problems with the plain meaning rule of statutory construction, that may be the best solution. Alternatively, the court could read the two clauses as referring to the same point in time.

For a complete discussion of Code section 365, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 365 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See 11 U.S.C. § 365(g). Reference to chapter 12 (Adjustment of Debts of a Family Farmer with Regular Annual Income) in subsection (g)(1) was added by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986).

n2

2. Section 502(b)(6) contains significant limitations on the allowance of a possible claim for damages flowing from a breach in the case of leases of real property and employment contracts. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 (Matthew Bender)..

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 (Matthew Bender); see Stewart Title Guaranty Co. v. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co., 83 F.3d 735 (5th Cir. 1996); Leasing Serv. Corp. v. First Tennessee Bank N.A., 826 F.2d

434 (6th Cir. 1987) (rejection of equipment leases does not affect grant of security interest in lease); Trustees of the Amalgamated Ins. Fund v. McFarlins, Inc., 789 F.2d 98, 14 C.B.C.2d 1075 (2d Cir. 1986).

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. Aslan v. Sycamore Inv. Co. (In re Aslan), 909 F.2d 367 (9th Cir. 1990); In re Chi-Feng Huang, 7 C.B.C.2d 639, 23 B.R. 798 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982); Mazirow v. Grigsby (In re White Motor Corp.), 12 C.B.C.2d 183, 44 B.R. 563 (N.D. Ohio 1984). A damage claim is not limited to monetary relief. See In re West Chestnut Realty of Haverford, Inc., 177 B.R. 501 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1995) (specific performance may be available if authorized under state law).

n6

6. Megafoods Stores, Inc. v. Flagstaff Realty Assocs. (In re Flagstaff Realty Assocs.), 60 F.3d 1031, 1034, 34 C.B.C.2d 152, 155 (3d Cir. 1995).

n7

7. Durkin v. Benedor Corp. (In re G.I. Indus., Inc.), 204 F.3d 1276 (9th Cir. 2000).

n8

8. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.10 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.11 (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.14 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. See, e.g., Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Sowashee Venture (In re Austin Dev. Co.), 19 F.3d 1077, 1082 (5th Cir.) ("the terms rejection, breach and termination are used differently, but not inconsistently or interchangeably, as some courts have suggested"), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994); In re Tri-Glied, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 670, 179 B.R. 1014 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1995); In re Empire Knitting Mills, Inc. 123 B.R. 688, 691 (Bankr. D. Me. 1991). See generally Andrew, Executory Contracts in Bankruptcy: Understanding "Rejection," 59 U. Colo. L. Rev. 845 (1988).

n12

12. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 365(e), (h), (i).

n13

13. See, e.g., Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Sowashee Venture (In re Austin Dev. Co.), 19 F.3d 1077 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994).

n14

14. A similar option is given to licensees of intellectual property by section 365(n).

n15

15. See, e.g., Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Sowashee Venture (In re Austin Dev. Co.), 19 F.3d 1077 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994).

n16

16. Sir Speedy, Inc. v. Morse, 256 B.R. 657 (D. Mass. 2000).

n17

17. See Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Sowashee Venture (In re Austin Dev. Co.), 19 F.3d 1077 (5th Cir.) (effect of rejection is a breach of the lease rather than termination), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994); In re Continental Airlines, 981 F.2d 1450, 28 C.B.C.2d 538 (5th Cir. 1993); CASC Corp. v. Milner (In re Locke), 180 B.R. 245 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1995); Andrew, Executory Contracts in Bankruptcy: Understanding "Rejection," 59 U. Colo. L. Rev. 845, 921 (1988).

n18

18. See Commercial Trading Co. v. Lansburgh (In re Garfinkle), 577 F.2d 901 (5th Cir. 1978); Blue Barn Assocs. v. Picnic'N Chicken, Inc. (In re Picnic'N Chicken, Inc.), 14 C.B.C.2d 475, 58 B.R. 523 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1986).

n19

19. Eastover Bank for Sav. v. Sowashee Venture (In re Austin Dev. Co.), 19 F.3d 1077 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994); Anderson v. Elm Inn, Inc. (In re Elm Inn, Inc.), 942 F.2d 630 (9th Cir. 1991); In re Tri-Glied, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 670, 179 B.R. 1014 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1995).

n20

20. See, e.g., CASC Corp. v. Milner (In re Locke), 180 B.R. 245 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1995).

n21

21. Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 205 (1994).

n22

22. In re Reed, 94 B.R. 48 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (rejection results in abandonment of lease to debtor); In re Rodall, 30 C.B.C.2d 1322, 165 B.R. 506 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994) (same); see also In re Austin Dev. Co., 19 F.3d 1077 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 874, 115 S. Ct. 201, 130 L. Ed. 2d 132 (1994) (rejection of lease does not terminate lease with respect to parties that have not rejected it nor does it affect their rights); In re Szymecski, 87 B.R. 14 (W.D. Pa. 1988) (automatically rejected public housing lease is abandoned to debtor); In re Knight, 3 C.B.C.2d 742, 8 B.R. 925 (Bankr. D. Md. 1981).

n23

23. In re Ranch House of Orange-Brevard, Inc., 773 F.2d 1166, 13 C.B.C.2d 1073 (11th Cir. 1985); In re T.F.P. Resources, Inc., 56 B.R. 112 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985); In re Storage Technology Corp., 53 B.R. 471 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1985) (rejection is a breach of lease that may be waived, not a termination of lease).

n24

24. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 365.09[6] (Matthew Bender).

n25

25. Compare In re Elm Inn, Inc., 942 F.2d 630 (9th Cir. 1991) (court has power to order immediate possession), with In re Williams, 171 B.R. 420 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1994) (lessor must commence adversary proceeding or state court action). Such a request would also have to include a request for relief from the stay, as section 365 is not an exception to the stay. See In re Tri-Glied, Ltd., 33 C.B.C.2d 670, 179 B.R. 1014 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1995).

n26

26. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1112 (Matthew Bender).

n27

27. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1208 (Matthew Bender). Reference to chapter 12 (Adjustment of Debts of a Family Farmer with Regular Annual Income) in subsection (g)(2) was added by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986).

n28

28. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1307 (Matthew Bender).

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 726 (Matthew Bender). The Code deals with priorities in both section 503 and section 726 if the case is under chapter 7. See Devan v. Simon DeBartolo Group, L.P. (In re Merry-Go-Round Enters., Inc.), 180 F.3d 149 (4th Cir. 1999) (for an application of the principles to a lease entered into during chapter 11 and breached during the chapter 7 case).

n30

30. See Adventure Resources v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786 (4th Cir. 1998); Nostas Assocs. v. Costich (In re Klein Sleep Products, Inc.), 78 F.3d 18 (2d Cir. 1996); Elliott v. Four Seasons Props. (In re Frontier Props., Inc.), 979 F.2d 1358, 27 C.B.C.2d 1515 (9th Cir. 1992).

n31

31. See Samore v. Boswell (In re Multech Corp.), 12 C.B.C.2d 562, 47 B.R. 747 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 1985).

n32

32. See Nostas Assocs. v. Costich (In re Klein Sleep Products, Inc.), 78 F.3d 18 (2d Cir. 1996).

n33

33. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 502.03[7] (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See Adventure Resources v. Holland, 137 F.3d 786 (4th Cir. 1998); Nostas Assocs. v. Costich (In re Klein Sleep Products, Inc.), 78 F.3d 18 (2d Cir. 1996); Samore v. Boswell (In re Multech Corp.), 12 C.B.C.2d 562, 47 B.R. 747 (N.D. Iowa 1985). But see Penn Ctr. Management Corp. v. Ultimate Restaurants Group, Inc. (In re Ultimate Restaurants Group, Inc.), 144 B.R. 291 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1992).

n35

35. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(7).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 365(p)(1), added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 103(a) (chapter 3 applies in cases under chapter 7, 11, 12 or 13).

n38

38. It is unclear how a corporate chapter 11 debtor in possession would reacquire property upon lease rejection in its capacity as the debtor during the chapter 11 case. Presumably, the debtor in possession would surrender the property to the lessor, but other outcomes are possible.

n39

39. 11 U.S.C. § 365(p)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 309(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n40

40. E.g., 11 U.S.C. § 365(c).

n41

41. Alternatively, section 365(p)(2) could be read to permit assumption only if the lessor notifies the debtor that it is willing to have the lease assumed. However, if this is the intent, it is curious that the restriction on assumption is not stated anywhere in the subsection, unlike other restrictions on assumption in section 365.

n42

42. 11 U.S.C. § 362(h); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender). Although section 362(h) refers to the statement of intention under section 521(a)(2), that section does not mention leases. However, the Official Form for the statement of intention does permit the debtor to state, for purposes of section 362(h), whether a lease of personal property will be assumed. This statement of intention should not be construed to be the notice that the debtor desires to assume a lease under section 365(p)(2)(A).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

169 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Financial Management Instructional Course Requirement under the Code

2008 Emerging Issues 960

Collier on the Financial Management Instructional Course Requirement under the Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to the financial management instruction course requirements in the Code, including exceptions to the requirements, approval of financial management courses, timing of financial management courses, the consequences of a failure to obtain mandated financial management courses, and the credit reporting prohibition.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Individual Debtors

Individual debtors, subject to certain limited exceptions, are now required to complete a financial management instructional course in order to obtain a discharge in chapters 7 and 13. Section 727(a)(11), added as part of the 2005 Act, provides that an individual who has failed to complete an instructional course related to personal financial management, subject to certain statutorily prescribed exceptions, shall not be granted a discharge. n1 Section 1328(g)(1) provides that an individual may not obtain a discharge unless there has been completion of a financial management course described in section 111; as with section 727(a)(11), there are certain important exceptions. n2

There appear to be no similar provisions in chapters 11 and 12, although individuals can be debtors in these two chapters. In the absence of a provision analogous to sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(1), one can make a valid argument that the postfiling debtor education is not a mandate for debtors in chapters 11 and 12. Whether a court will read in such a requirement will await future litigation. A similar gap does not exist with respect to prebankruptcy counseling, which leads to an anomalous result, namely, that all debtors have a new entry requirement (regardless of chapter choice) but only certain debtors have the new exit requirement (those in chapters 7 and 13). While there are recent data suggesting that debtors are not a homogenous group, there does not appear to be any justification for treating who should be subjected to these two requirements differently based on chapter choice. There are no data to suggest that individuals in chapter 11 and 12 are, as a group, less in need of financial management courses. To be sure, there are likely to be debtors whose reasons for seeking bankruptcy relief are unrelated to their financial acumen, and hence they are less likely to benefit from a financial management course, particularly one designed to offer increased financial sophistication.

As is true with respect to prebankruptcy counseling, it is legitimate to ask why financial management courses are not required of businesses, at least small businesses. At least some businesses may fail because of inadequate management and that management team might benefit from increased financial acumen. Perhaps the real reason for the absence of parity is that part of the goal was to add an additional hurdle that individual debtors must overcome to partake of the benefits of bankruptcy. The expectation is, one might suspect, that these added hurdles will signal the significance of bankruptcy and perhaps curtail the number of debtors participating, or at least discourage their participation, in the process.

Exceptions

In an earlier version of Pub. L. No. 109-8, financial management education was required of all individual debtors in chapters 7 and 13, unless there were not enough adequate approved courses. ⁿ³ However, when the Senate considered S. 256 in 2005, a change was made. Sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(2) now provide that debtors who qualify for an exception from prebankruptcy counseling under section 109(h)(4) are also entitled to be relieved from postfiling financial management education requirement. ⁿ⁴ Section 109(h)(4) specifically provides that a court can eliminate the prefiling counseling requirements because of the "incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a military combat zone" of the debtor. ⁿ⁵ Section 109(h)(4) goes on to define incapacity and disability very narrowly. When cross-referenced in sections 727 and 1328, the language with respect to "paragraph 1" (dealing with pre-filing counseling) in section 109(h)(4) will need to be ignored.

"Incapacity" is defined in section 109(h)(4) as being "incapable of realizing or making rational decisions" by reason of mental illness or mental deficiency. Whether such a person can seek bankruptcy relief, without the guidance of a custodian, is a different issue. ⁿ⁶ "Disability" is defined as physical impairment of such a level that the individual cannot participate in person, after reasonable effort, in counseling by telephone or through the Internet. ⁿ⁷ Because financial management education can be delivered through these three means, an individual would have to be extraordinarily impaired to be incapable of even telephone or Internet education. ⁿ⁸ "Reasonable efforts" is not a defined term and case law will need to flesh out its meaning. The final exception relates to those in active military duty--but only if they are a combat zone; this is a very limited exception.

Sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(2) do reflect a change in language from that which appears in section 109(h)(4). Under section 109(h)(4), to get the benefit of the exception, individual debtors need a court order. This suggests that a debtor would need to bring a motion--which would likely require counsel. ⁿ⁹ Sections 727 and 1328 permit the exception if the debtor "is a person described in section 109(h)(4)." The open question, then, is whether it is enough to describe the person seeking an exemption (perhaps in an affidavit or in the plan) or whether a hearing is required. The changed language in sections 727 and 1328 suggests that seeking the exception requires less than what is required in section 109(h)(4) with respect to prebankruptcy counseling.

Providers of Financial Management Courses

Section 111 provides that financial management courses must be approved by the United States trustee (or the bankruptcy administrator) in order for the debtor to be eligible for a discharge. ⁿ¹⁰ Section 111(a)(1) provides that the clerks of court are required to maintain a list of approved courses. This list must be publicly available, although section 111(a)(1) does not clarify the means by which it will be available. One would hope that the list of approved courses will be accessible at the courthouse as well as online and perhaps even via a telephone hotline. ⁿ¹¹ Moreover, if only the course is approved, one would hope there would be information about the provider of the course and the course's content as well--to enable thoughtful comparisons. One would hope also that the public lists would clearly distinguish between prebankruptcy and postfiling offerings since they could be easily confused.

With respect to approval, there is an important distinction between prebankruptcy counseling and debtor education. In the context of prebankruptcy counseling, the nonprofit budget and credit counselors--the agencies that provide the services--must be approved. For instructional courses in financial management education, the courses--as distinguished from the providers--must be approved. To be sure, significant aspects of what is needed to approve a course relates to the qualifications of the providers, as shown in section 111(d).ⁿ¹² However, there is no equivalent to the detailed requirements in section 111(c)(2) with respect to providers of postfiling debtor education. Why this distinction exists is unknown, and while the credit counseling agencies have been subjected to considerable criticism, the absence of providers of postfiling education should still be structured in a manner that is protective of consumers.

Approval Process. The approval process rests in the hands of the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) pursuant to sections 111(a)(2), (b) and (d). The legislation does not clearly indicate who will make the approvals, namely the Executive Office for United States Trustees or the regional offices or some combination thereof (the most likely result).ⁿ¹³ Nor is it clear whether approvals, by whomever made, will be done on a court-by-court basis, a region-by-region basis or a national basis. However, there is a suggestion in section 111(b)(3) that listings will be on a "district" basis since that section speaks to entities not appearing on the initial "district" list.ⁿ¹⁴ This suggests that whoever makes the decisions, those approved will be listed by district, and, although not defined, a district can and should be read to mean "judicial district" as Web site listings for the offices of the United States trustee program are done by region and within the regions by judicial districts based on location. These are relevant questions in that there may be providers of financial management courses who have a broad national reach and it is unclear whether, as a practical matter, they have to get approval from each court or each region or district (which would be cumbersome) or whether there can be some nationwide approval process.ⁿ¹⁵ One can also anticipate a thorny issue if a course is approved by one district or one region but not approved by another.

Section 111(b) identifies three specific steps that must be followed by the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) in the context of the providers of financial management course. These are the same three steps that apply with respect to nonprofit budget and credit agencies.ⁿ¹⁶ First, pursuant to section 111(b)(1), the United States trustee must have thoroughly reviewed the qualifications of the potential provider and can require additional information from said applicants. While some of the specific qualifications are identified in section 111(d), it is unclear what other qualifications might be assessed and what particular information might be solicited. The nature of what will be reviewed is not specified.ⁿ¹⁷ One can assume that the Executive Office for United States Trustees will create some sort of checklist for its regional offices, unless all of the decisions, including initial vetting, are to be made at the national level. Given the paucity of specific requirements, it is hoped that added requirements will be considered in the approval process, including an assessment as to whether for-profit providers of financial literacy education present added risks for consumers, something that is an issue in the content of for-profit credit counseling.ⁿ¹⁸

Second, section 111(b)(2) provides that the United States trustees must have determined that the provisions contained more generally in section 111 have been met. For providers of debtor education, these are the specific requirements set forth in section 111(d). The statutory language says the requirements must be "fully satisfied," suggesting that the identified requirements are mandatory as distinguished from discretionary.

Third, section 111(b)(3) provides, in somewhat awkward language, that if an instructional course does not appear immediately on the initial approved district list, the course shall have provisional approval for a period not to exceed six months. Section 111(b)(4) then provides that this provisional period can be extended for successive one-year periods if the applicable course meets the applicable standards and can meet them in the future. Section 111(b)(4) is clear in terms of the length of approvals; they cannot exceed one year, suggesting that there will be some ongoing evaluation process of the approved courses. The mechanisms for ongoing evaluation have not been determined.

The legislative history to this section suggests that all appointments are probationary and that none can be for a period in excess of one year. n19 Although the statute itself is not as clear as it should be on this point, all approvals for courses should proceed under section 111(b) and (c), not section 111(a); section 111(a) should apply only to the maintenance of lists, not who gets approved and for what time period. Section 111(b)(3) speaks about instructional courses that did not appear on the approved list required under section 111(a). The language in section 111(b)(3) is hard to decipher and states, in relevant part, that if an agency "did not appear on the approved list for the district under subsection (a) immediately before approval under this section [section 111(b)(3)], approval under this subsection shall be for a probationary period not to exceed six months." Section 111(b)(4) then specifically cross-references section 111(b)(3). This suggests that the term of approval is a probationary six months, following by one year approvals, only for those approved under section 111(b)(3), not those approved initially. This is because the limitation of term (either probationary or one year) does not cross-reference section 111(a)(1), which contains the list of those approved. Thus, there is a seeming gap in terms of the length of term for those who appear on the initial list. If a course is approved initially, the term of that approval should both be probationary and thereafter for a term not to exceed one year. While at first blush, it would appear to make a significant difference if a course appeared on the initial or subsequent lists, that position cannot be supported. The statutory gap is eliminated if all approvals are treated as covered by sections 111(b) and (c).

The most reasonable approach, despite this gap, is to read into the course-approval process a probationary period followed by a one-year approval term; otherwise, courses would be approved in perpetuity, which is inconsistent with at least the intent of the statute. Support for this position is clearly found in sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(3); these two sections explicitly mention terms not to exceed one year and that renewals must be made no less frequently than annually. The one-year approval term should, then, be read into section 111. There is also some ambiguity in terms of how a course gets approved "immediately" as opposed to approved in a probationary manner. The Executive Office for United States Trustees will need to provide some initial approval process, and the criteria in sections 111(b) and (d) will need to be satisfied. One should also assume that initial approvals are probationary under section 111(b)(1), although that is not clear in the statute. How many courses will get approved initially and how many will be approved for a probationary period is unclear. Nor is it clear whether the question of immediate or probationary approval is based on the differing qualities of the courses (and their providers) or timing alone. How providers in the pilot financial management program will be approved and treated is not specified. n20 This gap becomes significant because the pilot program extends for 18 months, and one would want those pilot programs being studied to be approved for an 18-month period. Moreover, since the pilot regions will be educating consumers within the bankruptcy system, they would need to be approved providers, likely listed pursuant to section 111(a); otherwise, the debtors in those pilot programs will be precluded from obtaining a discharge. n21 Clearly, individuals obtaining their education through the pilot should be in no different position than those obtaining the education outside the pilot. One would expect that the existence of the pilot program would be disclosed to participants in the pilot program, although such disclosure is not specifically mandated. n22

Review Process. Section 111(b)(5) provides that within 30 days after final decisions are made under section 111(b)(4), they can be reviewed by an appropriate district court. Appeals can be brought by any interested person, a term not defined in the Code, although the term "party in interest" is defined in section 1109. One could posit several groups that might be particularly interested in appealing a decision on an instructional financial management course: the provider of the course who is denied approval under section 111(b)(4) or a group or a person that believes that an approval under section 111(b)(4) was improvidently granted. It is unclear why approvals or denials under section 111(b)(4) are the only ones referenced in section 111(b)(5). Suppose that someone objected to a course or its provider approved pursuant to section 111(b)(1) and (2) and listed pursuant to section 111(a); does the specificity in section 111(b)(4) preclude an interested party from seeking judicial review under section 111(b)(5)? The authority to review these decisions is housed in the district court; this could be an effort to comply with 28 U.S.C. § 1334, and one needs to consider whether those reviews will be delegated to the bankruptcy court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157, which contemplates a referral from the district court to the bankruptcy court. It is also possible that decisions by the United States trustee will be considered as administrative decisions and governed by the Administrative Procedure Act instead. It is also not evident how interested parties, other than those participating directly in the process, would know of the decision under section 111(b)(4) in sufficient time to have it reviewed, although this issue may be resolved by internal procedures established by the Office for United States Trustees. One could assume that positive decisions might be made public somehow (perhaps by the name of the approved course appearing on the public list referenced in section 111(a)(1)). It is unclear how parties (other than the one directly affected) would hear about negative decisions. The process would also be facilitated if the names of those seeking approval were disclosed before a decision was made as that would enable both comments during the process by interested parties and a sense of decisions to follow after the process was completed. As noted in the context of prebankruptcy counseling, the question of when and how one can review decisions of the United States trustee is not unique to this situation. n23

Section 111(e) adds that the district court can review the qualifications of nonprofit budget and counseling agencies "currently" approved and request needed documentation; the district court can also remove previously approved agencies. n24 This provision does not extend to instructional financial management courses or their providers. It speaks only to nonprofit counseling agencies. It is unclear why this review and removal right would be eliminated in the context of the postfiling educational requirement. It is true that there was voiced concern over the quality of credit counselors. But that does not justify deletions of these important protections for consumers in the context of instructional course providers. If they are unsatisfactory, they too need to be reviewed and removed. This oddity is further evidenced by the requirement in section 111(f) to notify the court clerk of removal of a previously approved course. That said, section 111(b)(5) permits interested persons to seek review of instructional courses (in addition to nonprofit budget and credit counselors). Nonrenewal under section 111(b)(4) also remains possible, but renewal is different from review and removal specified in section 111(e).

Requirements. Section 111(d) sets forth general criteria that must be met before a budget and credit counselor can be approved. These are far less specific than the mandatory minimum requirements set forth in sections 111(c)(1) and (2) with respect to nonprofit budget and credit counselors. Section 111(d) provides that instructional courses on financial management will be approved only if the course satisfies five minimum requirements. It is worth observing that these minimum requirements appear to apply only to approval under section 111(b)(3), which references approval for those who do not appear on the initial list. Were this literally true, those appointed and listed under section 111(a) and approved pursuant sections (b)(1) and (2) would not be required to satisfy the requirements in section 111(d)(1). Even if seemingly permissible by virtue of the language of the statute, this cannot be what was intended. Moreover, section 111(d)(2) references one-year approvals but does not cross-reference them to sections 111(b)(3) or (b)(4). Sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(3) add further support for one-year approvals. It would appear, then, although the language in section 111 is far from clear, that Congress intended one-year periods for approvals of financial management courses, and the statute should be read accordingly. Probationary approvals should be operative regardless of how approvals are made, followed by one-year terms.

Section 111(d)(1) then identifies five minimum requirements for financial management instruction courses, four of which relate to the provider and one of which relates to the content of the course itself. Since they are minimum requirements, other requirements could be added. In addition, one would have expected that the approvals for instructional financial management courses would be informed by the results of the pilot debtor education program referenced in section 105 of the 2005 Act. n25 However, the pilot program commences after mandatory debtor education is required (with the pilot program commencing 270 days after, and the mandatory education commencing 180 days after enactment). Once the results of the pilot study are released, one would hope that these would inform decisions under section 111(d). Since the pilot runs for 18 months and the evaluation is not due to Congress until 30 days after completion of the pilot initiative, the benefits of this knowledge are a long way off.

Section 111(d)(1)(A) requires, somewhat awkwardly, that the course provide "trained personnel with adequate experience and training in providing effective instruction and services." None of the key terms is defined. n26 The term

"trained personnel" and "adequate experience" are the same as those appearing in section 111(c)(2)(F) involving nonprofit budget and credit counselors. It is not clear what training is required or who will do the training. The statute does not reference a nationwide certification program, such as exists in Canada. However, in order to insure quality debtor education, it is critical that there be quality training. n27 One can imagine a certification program or mandates that personnel attend at least one of certain predetermined programs annually or semiannually in order to be considered trained within the meaning of this section. Although it is possible for providers of instructional courses to do their own training internally, caution should be taken if this is deemed an acceptable approach in that the quality of the education may be inferior to that provided by outside providers or through participation in outside programs. The statutory language does suggest that the personnel must have adequate experience and training. How much experience is needed is unknown. n28 What this does suggest, as it did in the context of approval of nonprofit agencies for counseling, is that new entrants may have a harder time obtaining approval. n29 Whether the mandates mean that everyone providing the courses or counseling must be trained or whether it is sufficient if some staff members have the training (and oversee others) is unclear. Perhaps the most nettlesome term in this section is "effective." It is a word that is repeated in sections 111(d)(1)(C), (d)(1)(D) and (d)(2)(A). The fact that there must be a determination of effectiveness suggests that there will be some empirical measure of outcome; how else would one determine effectiveness? n30 Effectiveness could reference different types of outcomes, ranging from improved skills in budgeting to navigating the bankruptcy process to understanding the world of credit. It is noteworthy that sections 111(d)(2)(A) and (B) address similar issues. Section 111(d)(2)(A) speaks to programming that is effective in helping individuals "to understand personal financial management," and section 111(d)(2)(B) speaks about courses "likely to increase substantially the debtor's understanding of personal financial management." Both of these sections, then, also suggest the need to empirically assess effectiveness. The quality of that empirical assessment remains an important open issue; if the evaluative devices are weak or flawed, the determinations of effectiveness will be equally weak and flawed.

Section 111(d)(1)(C) requires that courses take place at adequate facilities located in convenient locations. This is a two part requirement. The setting must be adequate (the building, the classrooms, the facilities) and the location must be reasonably convenient. How exactly one makes these assessments is unknown. n31 Certainly, adequacy of facilities will need to be measured on a location-by-location basis. The contours of adequate facilities in Manhattan may not be the same as adequate in Bangor, Maine. However, this does hint at the fact that locations in a private home, for example, or in an apartment may not qualify as adequate. Convenience will also be location specific. In regions of the country where there is mass transit, one would suppose that convenience would mean proximate to public transportation. In regions without easy public transit, one would need a location that is easily accessible by car. In rural areas, how close is close enough to qualify as "convenient" is presently unknown. A lack of either facilities or convenience is, and should be, a basis for objecting to a course (and consequently, its provider). There is an important exception carved into section 111(d)(1)(C), namely, that the facilities can include courses by telephone or through the Internet. The phraseology suggests that delivery by telephone or through the Internet must be located at the approved facility. One could also read this to mean that approved facilities will also provide delivery of their educational product by telephone or through the Internet. It would seem odd to require that those providing in-person courses would be the only locations from which Internet or telephone courses could be handled. On the other hand, perhaps this is signaling the possibility that the same providers of in-person instructional courses will also provide alternative delivery systems for the same educational materials. That said, it would seem better to permit a bifurcation and allow there to be telephone and Internet providers that do not perform in-person education, if these non-in-person providers are qualified.

The most striking aspect of section 111(d)(1)(C) is the last five words of the section, which state, "if such instructional course is effective." These words seem to modify the reference to courses delivered by telephone or through the Internet. This means that there appears to be some initial concern about educational delivery systems that are not in person. This suggests that in-person programs, although they too need to be effective under section 111(d)(2), are the norm. This would reflect a difference then between debtor education postfiling and prefiling counseling. It is anticipated that the prefiling counseling could take one of three forms--in person, by telephone or through the Internet--and there does not seem to be a preference expressed statutorily between them. n32 With respect to the instructional financial management courses, in-person seems to be the preferred delivery system. Yet, there is an alternative reading of this language. Perhaps the five indicated words refer to the course generally--although such a reading is strained--in which event, there is no statutorily expressed preference for one form of the course over another.

Section 111(d)(1)(D), again awkwardly worded, requires that the course--which should be read to mean course provider--will prepare and retain reports that will permit an evaluation of the effectiveness of the financial management course. This means that there will be some sort of ongoing evaluation of the instructional courses. The section goes on to require retention of evidence of satisfaction of the course requirements by "each" individual in attendance. This suggests that course providers will need to demonstrate by some means--perhaps a test or some certificate of completion--that each of the course participants has completed the course requirements. The evidence of this latter requirement must be available for inspection by three identified entities: the Executive Office for United States Trustees, the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) or the chief bankruptcy judge for the district in which the course is operated. The identification of these three parties is unusual. First, the specific reference to the Executive Office is unusual, suggesting that every Code reference to the United States trustee does not reference or mean the Executive Office. Next, although courts are referenced in the Code, there is usually no specific mention of a special role within the Code for the chief judge. Yet, with respect to evaluating whether a course is adequate, these three entities have inspection and evaluation powers. The designation of this triumvirate is interesting in that none of them contain particular expertise in the evaluation of educational programming and hence none is necessarily in a position to provide a determination whether the course provided to debtors is effective--unless the evaluation consists of passage of a certain test (which in and of itself would need to be a quality testing instrument) or evidence of hours of class attendance or some other indicia of satisfaction.

Section 111(d)(1)(E) addresses the question of fees. The lead-in language is, again, awkward, but provides that the financial management course shall only be approved if the fee is reasonable and services are provided without regard to ability to pay. This language is ambiguous and is virtually the same language that appears in section 111(c)(2)(B) with respect to nonprofit credit counselors. n33 Neither of these suggestions provides any guidance with respect to what is reasonable. Nor is there any guidance in terms of whether providing pro bono services must be provided to all who ask for or need same. As with prefiling counseling, there is a question whether providers of postfiling education can "cherry pick" their students to insure that some can and will pay. Failure to permit free services should be a basis for removal from the list of approved providers. That said, if a provider needs to balance its services between those who pay and those who cannot and is providing free services, it is unclear whether that means that the provider must accept additional clients who cannot pay. It is unclear whether there can be any rejection of clients or only a rejection if there are already free services being provided and there is neither the ability nor the space for more clients needing free services. This is an issue that must be addressed. This is not the only provision in the legislation addressing the inability of debtors to pay for services; the addition of in forma pauperis filing of chapter 7 cases is another example. n34

Section 111(d)(1)(B) is the only provision addressing the actual content of the financial management course, although the description is vague and lacks some of the already limited specificity that exists with respect to prebankruptcy counseling. n35 This section provides that, to be approved, the course must have "learning materials and teaching methodologies designed to assist debtors in understanding personal financial management." The provision goes on to state that these materials must be consistent with "stated objectives directly related to the goals" of the proffered course. As with the other subsections of section 111(d), this section lacks definiteness. There are no guidelines for determining what learning materials and teaching methodologies will satisfy this standard. Moreover, since it will be the United States trustee making these assessments, one has to wonder upon what basis these determinations will be made. The pedagogical effectiveness of materials and teachers is hard to determine even with trained educators and evaluators. Importantly, too, this section notes that any evaluation of effectiveness must be linked to course goals, and there are no guidelines as to what goals these courses may have. It is possible and indeed likely that different providers of financial management courses will have different course goals in mind, and these differences will affect how the materials are taught. There appears to be no effort, at least in the statute itself, to suggest which goals are more significant or useful than others.

The determination of course goals is critical in terms of teaching and materials. For example, if the goal of a financial management course in a chapter 13 case is to assist consumers in obtaining plan confirmation by living within their budget, managing without credit and learning to navigate the chapter 13 process, then there will a set of materials designed to achieve these goals. For these goals to be met, the debtor would need to take the course early in the life of the chapter 13 case, despite the fact that there is no requirement as to when an approved course must be taken. On the other hand, if the instructional course goal is to teach chapter 7 debtors to navigate the world of credit upon receipt of their discharge and how to distinguish among prospective lenders, including determining which are predatory, then the course materials will be designed to further these goals. Courses premised on empowering consumers will be different from courses that seek to scare consumers out of spending. Educative models based on financial failure as a symptom of other failures (such as job loss, death, divorce, illness) will differ from those that view nonpayment as evidence of deviant behavior.

One could posit that a goal, whether or not explicit, of some providers could be to get debtors to purchase their products or products of related entities. Such a result should be viewed as problematic. However, there is nothing in section 111(d), unlike section 111(c) with respect to prebankruptcy counselors, that requires that providers of financial management education be nonprofit organizations. n36 Nor does the legislation provide that the course providers must lack a pecuniary interest in the products about which they are teaching. n37 Nor is there a requirement that the providers disclose their relationship to the products about which the debtor is learning. This is another troubling aspect of the absence of these disclosures. An educational offering could serve a dual purpose. The debtors could obtain accurate and useful information from the provider; however, the provider is seeking to establish a trust relationship with the debtor so that postbankruptcy, that debtor will come to that provider (or one of its affiliates) to purchase product. n38 This is not a far-fetched notion. For example, in today's consumer financial markets, many programs are a vehicle for advancing a particular product in the guise of objective education. n39

Another unaddressed aspect of the legislation is the likely bifurcation between the creators of the materials and the teachers of the courses, although these are addressed together in section 111(d)(1)(B). It is probable that there may be many developers of educative materials. Then, individuals will need to be trained to teach these materials to their particular clients, even through the instructors did not develop the materials. Some of the course developers may be expert in adult pedagogy, while others may not. Thus, some may be in a position to train those who use their materials; others will lack this pedagogical orientation. Consider, for example, three developers of educational materials: a lending institution, an educational institution and a nonprofit organization. All three can develop materials addressing financial management. It is unclear which of the three will have expertise in training others to teach the materials, for the training encompasses not just the substantive materials but the pedagogy as well (which may not be within the expertise of the lender for example). There is a growing recognition that teaching about money and finance is more complex than it first appears. This is because money means more to most individuals than dollars and cents; it is a nuanced concept imbued with meaning based on gender, race, ethnicity, religion, family background and culture. n40

Removal. Section 111(f) provides that the United States trustee (or a bankruptcy administrator) is required to notify the court clerk if a previously approved instructional course is no longer approved. That course then needs to be removed from the list of approved providers maintained pursuant to section 111(a). This is the same provision that exists with respect to prebankruptcy budget and credit counseling agencies. n41

There seems to be one primary avenue pursuant to which removal could occur, namely, if the term of a formerly approved agency is not renewed pursuant to sections 111(d)(2)(A) and (B). Under these provisions, the term of course approval is one year, provided, however, that renewal is only continued if three conditions are met: (1) the course satisfied the requirements of section 111(d)(1); (2) the course has been effective in assisting a "substantial" number of debtors; and (3) the course is "otherwise likely to increase substantially the debtor's understanding of personal financial management." The latter two requirements seem to require empirical assessment. Section 111(d)(2)(A) suggests that helping some debtors is not enough; approved courses must help a substantial number of debtors. This requirement does not identify what "substantial" means. Suppose that the educational provider educated only 30 individuals. It is unclear if this is "substantial." This requirement and the requirement in section 111(d)(2)(B) suggest some sort of comparative analysis between where debtors were before the educational offering and where they are postcourse. How else would one determine an increase in understanding personal finance and ascertain effectiveness? This suggests that pre- and post-course testing will need to be done. The development of effective test measures requires careful planning, and many course providers are not experienced empiricists or test designers. If the measurement devices are poorly designed, then the results are not useful. For example, many programs present attendees with postcourse evaluations (often termed "smile" sheets) in which participants answer questions about whether they liked the course and whether they think it helped them. These types of evaluations are problematic in that they are not a true measure of learning; they are a measure of how students perceive the course at completion. Better measures might be pre and post-tests, some of which would be administered months or even years after the courses were provided. This depth of empirical assessment would be expensive and difficult for most providers to administer. Because of the differences among courses, no single nationwide test should be required, particularly given the differences among debtors, regional practices and language barriers. So, one has to speculate that the mandates might not require rigorous and replicable testing. Instead, the results will be measured less scientifically, although how determinations of effectiveness and improvement as a result of the course will be made is unknown. Since renewal hinges on showing both effectiveness and increased understanding, some guidance will be needed. If a provider's course is not effective, that is a basis for denial of renewal and hence, there is a sense in which rigorous empirical assessment matters.

With respect to prebankruptcy counseling, removal is also possible under section 111(e); n42 however, that section does not extend to providers of financial management courses. There is no reason to justify the omission of instructional courses from this investigation and removal process.

Timing of Financial Management Courses

General Rule. Section 111 does not specify when the instructional financial management course must be provided. Obviously, it must occur after a petition is filed and before a discharge is sought in a chapter 7 or a chapter 13 case. In a chapter 7 case, the window for obtaining the course is small, given that the time period between filing and obtaining a discharge can range from three to nine months. In a chapter 13 case, the educational program could occur early or late in the case. For example, it could occur shortly after filing, in which event a course related to how the plan process works and how to satisfy plan requirements over the life of the plan (which could range from three to five years depending on the case) would be useful. On the other hand, the course could occur shortly before plan completion, in which event a course geared to how to re-enter the credit marketplace as a thoughtful participant would be particularly useful. Such a course would be given to far fewer debtors because most debtors do not complete their plans. Given the existing failure rate in chapter 13 cases, the education may not even be received by those chapter 13 debtors whose plans fail before completion. There is nothing in the legislation that addresses these issues. This is another instance in which there are differences between how prebankruptcy counseling and postfiling financial management education will operate. n43

Exceptions. Sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(2) specifically provide that if there are not adequate available courses, debtors are not required to complete a course as a condition of discharge. n44 For these purposes, "adequacy" references the numeric availability of courses, not their substantive adequacy. That will be determined pursuant to section 111(d). The adequacy of availability is not a permanent determination. Section 717(a)(11) specifically provides that the determination must be revisited within the year in which it was made and annually thereafter. Section 1328(g)(3) contains the same language. One could posit that within the lifetime of a debtor's chapter 13 plan, there could be a change in the availability of eligible courses. For example, it is possible that early in the life of the 2005 Act, courses will not be available but that in year four of a five-year plan, such courses would become available. This suggests that debtors' lawyers will need to remain vigilant; otherwise, debtors would have relied on the absence of a course at the inception of their plan only to learn that such a course has become available. One reading of the language in sections 727(a)(11) and 1328(g)(3) is that if the status of course availability changes during the life of a case, the debtor's exception will not last and the debtor must take a course if it becomes available. The monitoring aspects of this are significant.

Consequences of Failure to Obtain Mandated Financial Management Courses; Denial of Discharge

If an individual debtor does not fulfill the requirement of participating in a financial management course, then that debtor can be denied a discharge in a chapter 7 or chapter 13 case. Other than the previously enumerated exceptions in sections 109(h), 111(d)(2), 727(a)(11) and 1328(g), there are no other bases upon which a debtor can be excepted from the requirements, unless section 105 is invoked. n45

Costs and Fees

Costs of Course. As previously observed, section 111(d)(1)(E) states that, to be approved, financial management courses must be offered at a reasonable fee. n46 However, there are no guidelines presently in place for what constitutes "reasonable." Since courses can be offered in person, by telephone or through the Internet, one would expect that the fees would be different depending on how the course was delivered. In-person courses would seem likely to be the most expensive. Section 109(h) provides the prebankruptcy counseling can be conducted one-on-one or in group sessions; there is no similar provision with respect to financial management courses. n47 However, the language in section 111(d) speaks to debtors in the collective in section 111(d)(1)(B), although there are references to "debtor" in the singular in section 111(d)(1)(D). The term "instructional course" suggests more than one participant in a class. This suggests that postfiling financial management courses would usually be in a group if they are in person, although that is not a requirement. However, telephonic and Internet courses would usually be one-on-one, although one can imagine an online chat room with multiple debtors or a telephone call where more than one debtor is conferenced in. Moreover, one might expect that there could be different types of approved courses, and the fees might depend on the nature, length and provider of that counseling. n48 For example, a short Internet course might be less expensive than an intensive full-day financial management session. In Canada, which has mandatory financial management education in addition to counseling, individual sessions are more expensive than group sessions. n49

Fees raise a serious concern about a race to the bottom. With more than two million individuals needing financial management instructional courses, providing these educational offerings will be a growth industry. However, it is likely that there will be considerable effort among providers to provide relatively cheap courses to increase their clientele. Providers with perhaps higher quality products and thus somewhat higher (but still reasonable) fees may be driven from the market, a problematic outcome. Moreover, it is also possible that providers of financial management education will provide a short and inexpensive course that satisfies the requirements of the 2005 Act and then offer attending debtors the opportunity to sign up for longer and more expensive courses. To the extent that providers use the longer course for the more useful information and the shorter class as a type of "loss leader," the result is problematic. Another troubling possibility is for providers to offer consumers a package of courses for a bulk course rate, with the first course being the only requirement of the new law. Like other bundled services outside the bankruptcy arena, consumers could often end up purchasing things that they do not need. By way of analogy, with the advent of free credit reports, credit reporting agencies are now offering that "free" report with other services, including monitoring and credit scoring. It is easy for consumers who simply wanted the free credit report to find that they have purchased other unneeded or undesired products. This bundling problem is more likely to occur in the context of postfiling financial management education than prebankruptcy counseling, although a bundling of the pre and postfiling products is possible. n50 In part, this is because the prebankruptcy counseling session may be brief, although one could offer limited services that satisfy the statutory requirements and more complex counseling for additional monies, thereby circumventing the requirement of a "reasonable" fee.

It is also possible that fees will be different in different parts of the country. Courses in cities may be more expensive given higher overhead costs. One can also foresee added costs if the course is needed immediately or if it is needed in a language other than English. Whether these added fees would be "reasonable" is certainly open to question.

An unaddressed issue is whether the fees in the pilot instructional program created by section 105 will be different from the fees in the mandated program. Typically, individuals who agree to be "subjects" of study are required to pay less, and perhaps nothing, for the provided services. This is a common approach. Sometimes, subjects are paid to participate. n51 Thus, it would be important for the United States trustees to consider a different and smaller payment requirement, or no payment at all, in the pilot project. n52 The Congressional Budget Office suggested a fee per debtor in the pilot program of $40.00, to paid by the government. n53 Whether this is a reasonable fee for debtors outside the pilot program should be considered. Exactly how the $40.00 number was derived is unclear. At present, the mandate appears to be unfunded.

Fee Waivers. As noted previously, section 111(d)(1)(E) states that approved courses must be provided without regard to ability to pay. What is unclear is how many nonpaying clients a provider must take, or which clients should be paying for this counseling. For example, course providers could not survive, unless grant supported or supported by outside contributions, if all of their clients were nonpaying. That said, it is unclear as to how determinations will be made as to who should be paying for their counseling.

Section 111(d)(1)(E) recognizes the possibility of approved courses without any fees at all to the individual. For example, legal aid offices, if they are permitted to offer financial management courses, could provide them to their clients without charge. Typically, such clients will fit within prescribed income guidelines. There may be others willing to provide counseling without charge; however, the requirements for approval may discourage some pro bono educational efforts.

Referral Fees. An unaddressed issue in the statute is whether approved course providers can pay fees to lawyers for referring clients to them. n54 For example, one can imagine contractual or informal relationships between approved for-profit course providers and lawyers pursuant to which all of a lawyer's clients are directed to a particular entity in exchange for a fee paid by that entity to the lawyer.

Tying Arrangements. Section 111 does not explicitly address whether there can be a relationship between approved courses, nonprofit budget and credit counselors and lawyers of a law firm. n55 While the statute does make clear that no one on the board of approved credit counseling agencies can benefit economically, there is nothing to preclude benefits where there are no board members. n56 This would permit lawyers and counselors to have arrangements where each serviced the clients of the other. There are no restrictions expressed with respect to the relationship among course providers and either or both approved credit counselors and attorneys. While there might be no referral fees among these entities, there would be expectations that the clients of each would service the other's clients. From the perspective of the consumer, this would affect--if they were aware of this--their choice of counselor, lawyer or course. If the client were first to visit the counselor, then the counselor would arguably be required to make disclosure of the fact that all its clients in need of bankruptcy assistance are referred to a single firm or lawyer. There would also seem to be an obligation to disclose a relationship with a course provider, whether or not monies changed hands. Such a disclosure requirement would be found in section 111(c)(2)(D). It seems that the entity with the most possibility of effectuating these relationships is the credit counselor since that entity sees the debtor first. That may be why the disclosure requirements only appear with respect to credit counselors. However, there could be separate relationships between lawyers and course providers and if that relationship were economic, there is nothing to prohibit that and no mandated disclosure. If a course were developed and taught by an entity that could benefit from the debtor as a long-standing customer (perhaps a bank providing the education and then seeking to have this student as a prospective customer), that fact is worth disclosing. To be sure, section 111(d)(1) provides that the listed requirements reflect the minimum needed for approval, and this type of contact might require additional information at the behest of the United States trustee. It is also unclear whether disclosures, even if made, would affect consumer decision-making. n57

Credit Reporting Prohibition

As previously noted, section 111(g)(1) provides that budget and credit counseling agencies are prohibited from reporting that individuals sought or received personal financial management instruction. n58 If counseling itself is viewed as "financial management instruction," then the prohibition makes sense. But, the language used is unclear in that it could also be referencing the postfiling financial management courses. What some prebankruptcy counselors provide might not, then, be characterized as financial management instruction. It is the choice of the word "instruction" that is problematic. It is clear that the postfiling financial management courses would fit within the term "instruction." However, it would be ironic if those could not be reported to credit reporting agencies since these courses can actually work to a consumer's benefit. Indeed, at least one of the newer credit reporting agencies is noting completion of financial management courses in its database and using the information to create consumer achievement scores. n59 Thus, the prohibition with respect to postfiling courses is, it seems, the inverse of what it should be. That said, unless the credit counselor is tied into the course provider, it is unclear how the counselor would become aware of the postfiling course--unless the financial management course intended to be referenced in section 111(g)(1) is one that was obtained before the bankruptcy filing.

Compliance with Applicable State Laws

There do not appear to be specific state laws that govern financial management courses, and in this way, financial management courses differ from the extensive state regulation of budget and credit counselors. n60 Still, there are some states that require licensing of those providing education, and some states require evidence of qualification to do business within the state if one is offering courses. Some states prohibit the issuance of degrees or other formal certification without appropriate licensing. One would expect that nothing in the 2005 Act ameliorates the obligation to satisfy these legal requirements. n61

Provider Noncompliance

There is no counterpart to section 111(g)(2) for financial management course providers who act willfully or negligently. Although the presence of that section is somewhat helpful to individuals harmed by credit counselors, there is no reason why this benefit should not be extended to recipients of educational programming. The critical question is whether the absence of a provision should be intended to preclude a debtor from pursuing a cause of action. There is no reason to deny a debtor access to the judicial system in the event that a course provider fails to comply with the requirements of the Code. Moreover, with respect to both course providers and credit counselors, there is no reason to believe that the presence or absence of section 111(g) eliminates any other cause of action unrelated to the requirements under title 11. So, for example, if a credit counselor or course provider failed to comply with state law or breached some other obligation to its clients, those causes of action would remain.

Implementation

As with prebankruptcy counseling, there are enormous issues with respect to implementing mandatory nationwide postfiling debtor education. Each step of the process--from the providers to the content of the programming to the removal of unsatisfactory providers--is complex. Moreover, in addition to the initial steps, there will need to be thoughtful ongoing monitoring of this entire aspect of the bankruptcy system. Courts will also need to be apprised of the details of this program since they will have to address at least some of these issues, especially the specifically mentioned chief judges. n62 There will need to be opportunities for the participants in the system to provide their input as well.

Empirical Assessment--Pilot Financial Management Program

Although there is an absence of explicit empirical assessment with respect to prebankruptcy counseling, there are several significant empirical aspects in place with respect to the postfiling financial management education, some of which have already been addressed. n63 The most significant of these is the pilot financial management program that will be conducted under the auspices of the Executive Office for United States Trustees. n64 The Congressional Budget Office estimates that 90,000 consumers would participate in this project if it were administered by the Executive Office for United States Trustees. n65

This pilot program is to commence no later than 270 days after the new legislation was signed into law, meaning that the pilot program commences after the mandated program under section 111 is commenced (180 days after signing). This pilot initiative is based on a detailed report that appears as Appendix G-3.a. to the National Bankruptcy Review Commission Report, and the pilot should be guided by that report. n66 First, the pilot program will use six beta sites, selected by the Executive Office, and it is anticipated that these sites will be diverse because there is a likelihood that different programs may work better in certain locations.

There are several specific requirements placed upon the Executive Office for United States Trustees with respect to this project. First, they must consult with a wide range of debtor education experts who operate financial literacy programs. One would assume, then, that the Executive Office would look in particular at programs designed for consumers in the bankruptcy system. Some of these programs have already been the subject of articles and some have been empirically assessed. Programs that fit within this category include those offered by the Coalition for Consumer Bankruptcy Debtor Education, located in New York City, which trained more than 600 consumer debtors over an 18-month period and then studied whether the program changed debtor knowledge, attitudes and behavior with respect to money and spending. n67 Certain chapter 13 trustees have operated programs for many years, and some of these have been studied. n68 Certain financial institutions have created programming as well. There are other educational programs, but these have not been directed at consumers within the bankruptcy system; an assessment of them is not within the mandate, although consideration of them might prove useful. Second, the Executive Office is charged with developing a financial management training curriculum and materials. Third, the Executive Office must evaluate the effectiveness of pilots and consider other programs that are operational. The House Report specifically directs the Executive Office to look at programs sponsored by the credit industry, chapter 13 trustees and consumer counseling. Indeed, the House Report specifically directs the Executive Office to the work of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission on this topic. n69 Fourth, the Executive Office must submit its finding to Congress within three months after the evaluation is completed (and that is expected to run for 18 months coterminous with the pilot study). That report will detail the findings and specifically address the effectiveness and costs of the curricula, materials and programs.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the costs of the pilot project to be $4 million. n70 In reaching this figure, the Budget Office estimated a cost of $40 per debtor; one has to wonder whether this should be the guidepost for determining the reasonableness of the fee for financial management education. Compared to the estimated cost of the pilot contain in Appendix G-3.a. of the Report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission, the per-debtor cost is similar, depending on which of the models for the pilot is employed. n71 All costs for the pilot project should be borne by the Executive Office for United States Trustees and participating debtors should have no-cost or low-cost financial management instruction while the programs are being studied.

For a complete discussion of Code section 111, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 111 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See "Exceptons" infra.

n2

2. See "Exceptions" infra.

n3 3. See "Timing of Financial Management Courses" infra.

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1004.1 cannot be ignored. It addresses the need for a guardian, representative or other similar person to petition for those individuals who are incompetent. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1004.1 (Matthew Bender).. The educational mandate surely would not extend to those designated to file for the incompetent person.

n7

7. Section 111(d)(1)(C) provides that can be done in person, by telephone or through the Internet, and individually or in groups. See "Requirements" infra.

n8

8. There does seem to be a sense that most financial management education will be in person, rather than by telephone or through the Internet. See "Requirements" infra. If that is the case, then there will be more individuals who can claim an exemption as it is harder to access a physical facility outside the home than a telephone or the Internet.

n9

9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.02[2] (Matthew Bender).

n10

10. On October 7, 2005, the Executive Office for United States Trustees announced approval of 41 providers of courses in personal financial management. According to the press release, available at <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>, "[t]here are approved debtor education course providers serving all federal judicial districts for which the United States Trustee Program is responsible."

n11

11. A list of course providers can be found on the United States Trustee Program's Web site, <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>, and will be updated as more providers are approved.

n12

12. See "Requirements" infra.

n13

13. The specific reference to the Executive Office for United States Trustees in section 111(d)(1)(D) does suggest that when the Executive Office is not mentioned, the specific reference to the United States trustee is the regional offices and the trustees within those offices. Of course, it is possible that the specificity of the reference in section 111(d)(1)(D) was not meant to signal that the Executive Office would not be in charge of or responsible for other decisions under section 111. See "Requirements" infra.

n14

14. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[1] (Matthew Bender). The nonprofit credit organizations are termed "agencies" and those who provide the instructional financial management courses are termed "providers."

n17

17. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03 (Matthew Bender). It is worth observing that for-profit credit counselors cannot be approved under section 111.

n19

19. See Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. (2005).

n20

20. See "Empirical Assessment Pilot Financial Management Program" infra.

n21

21. See "Who Must Obtain Financial Management Instruction" infra.

n22

22. See "Requirements" and "Tying Arrangements" infra.

n23

23. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[2] (Matthew Bender).

n24

24. See id.

n25

25. See "Empirical Assessment Pilot Financial Management Program" infra.

n26

26. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n27

27. See note 26 supra.

n28

28. See note 26 supra.

n29

29. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

n30

30. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n31

31. See note 30 supra.

n32

32. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 and 111.04 (Matthew Bender).

n33

33. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.07[1] (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See 28 U.S.C. § 1930(f).

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.04 (Matthew Bender)l

n36

36. See "Providers of Financial Management Courses" infra.

n37

37. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n38

38. See note 37 supra.

n39

39. On military bases, for example, there have been efforts to address insurance needs and the providers of the information are insurance salesmen, often former military officers. This practice has been roundly criticized.

n40

40. See, e.g., Karen Gross, Learning Money's Language, University Bus., Mar. 2005, and available at www.universitybusiness.com/page.cfm?p=749; see also Karen Gross, Joanne Ingham & Richard Matasar, Strong Palliative But Not a Panacea: Results of an Experiment Teaching Students About Financial Literacy, NASFAA J. (forthcoming 2005).

n41

41. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[5] (Matthew Bender).

n42

42. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[5] (Matthew Bender).

n43

43. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.05 (Matthew Bender).

n44

44. On October 7, 2005, the Executive Office for United States Trustees announced a temporary waiver of the requirement for an instructional course in personal financial management for bankruptcy filers in areas affected by Hurricane Katrina. According to the press release announcing the waiver, available at <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>:

The [2005 Act] permits United States Trustees to waive the debtor education requirement within a judicial district where approved debtor education courses are not adequate to serve bankruptcy filers. The United States Trustee for Region 5 made this determination with respect to the Eastern, Middle, and Western Districts of Louisiana, and the Southern District of Mississippi.

n45

45. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[5] (Matthew Bender).

n46

46. See "Requirements" supra.

n47

47. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.04 (Matthew Bender) and "Requirements" supra.

n48

48. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at a suggestion that courses be at least two hours in length. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n49

49. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.04 (Matthew Bender) and "Requirements" supra.

n50

50. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.07[4] (Matthew Bender).

n51

51. The Coalition for Consumer Bankruptcy Debtor Education paid those who participated in its pilot study. See Susan Block-Lieb, Karen Gross, Richard Wiener & Corinne Donovan, The Coalition for Consumer Bankruptcy Debtor Education: An Overview of Its Pilot Project, 21 Emory Bankr. Dev. J. 233 (2004).

n52

52. See "Empirical Assessment Pilot Financial Management Program" infra.

n53

53. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 38 (2005).

n54

54. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n55

55. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n56

56. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

n57

57. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

n58

58. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.08 (Matthew Bender).

n59

59. For an example of a credit reporting agency that does consider financial management programs, see PayRent Build Credit's Achiever's 100+ score which takes into account consumer completion of approved courses. See <http://prbc.com/partners/achievers.php?>.

n60

60. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

n61

61. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n62

62. See "Requirements" supra.

n63

63. See "Providers of Financial Management Courses" supra.

n64

64. This pilot program was created by the section 105 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005).

n65

65. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 38 (2005).

n66

66. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 9 (Matthew Bender). The applicable appendix bears number G-3.a. and is available at <http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/nbrc/report/g3a.pdf>.

n67

67. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 note 9 (Matthew Bender).

n68

68. Two appendices to the National Bankruptcy Review Commission Report address chapter 13 trustee programs, namely Appendices G-3.b. and G-3.c., available at <http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/nbrc/report/g3a.pdf>. The success of some of these programs has been challenged. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 9 (Matthew Bender).

n69

69. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 54 (2005).

N70

70. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 38 (2005).

n71

71. For a useful and detailed discussion of the costs of a pilot initiative, see Appendix G-3 of the Report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission, available at <http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/nbrc/report/g3a.pdf>.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

170 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Time Limitations under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 961

Collier on Time Limitations under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Periods of limitation for causes of action arising under the Code are separately governed by sections 546(a), 549(d) and 550(e). This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to Section 108, including the time limitation on a suit by the trustee, the extension of time for doing certain acts, the extension of the statute of limitations for the creditor, and the relation of Section 108 to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Time Limitation on Suit by Trustee--11 U.S.C. § 108(a)

Sections 108(a) and (b) operate to extend time periods for actions that could have been taken by the debtor prepetition that may then be taken on behalf of the estate by the trustee. n1 Section 108 makes clear that it refers to suits continued by the trustee, in the place of the debtor, in addition to those suits which are initiated postpetition. It is important to note, however, that periods of limitation for causes of action arising under the Code are separately governed by sections 546(a), 549(d) and 550(e). n2

Extension of Nonbankruptcy Statutes of Limitation. Subsection (a) of section 108 extends any statute of limitation for commencing an action by the debtor for two years after the date of the order for relief, unless it would expire later. In contrast, subsection (b) gives the trustee 60 days to take over actions not covered under subsection (a), such as filing a pleading, demand, notice or proof of claim or loss (such as an insurance claim), unless the period for doing the relevant act expires later than 60 days after the date of the order for relief. n3 Hence, section 108 clearly allows for the commencement or continuation of an action beyond two years from the order for relief if applicable nonbankruptcy law fixes a time period which extends beyond that two year limitation. This aspect of section 108(a) incorporates any rule regarding tolling of statutes of limitation that would govern under applicable non-bankruptcy law. n4

Because the language of section 108(a) refers to an "action," the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit has held that it does not apply to an administrative refund application to the Internal Revenue Service. n5 The court held that the ordinary meaning of the term "action" envisioned litigation in a court rather than an administrative claim. The opinion suggested that the refund application might have been encompassed in the categories listed in section 108(b), but did not decide the issue because the application was not filed within the time limits of section 108(b). n6 Similarly, the term "action" does not encompass an appeal in litigation that is already pending. As the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit held in Roberts v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, n7 the filing of an appeal does not constitute the "commencement of an action." The court found that the filing of an appeal by a debtor in possession fits within section 108(b).

The same principles were applied by the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in deciding whether a debtor could proceed under the Federal Tort Claims Act. n8 That statute requires a claimant, prior to filing suit, to present an administrative claim to the appropriate federal agency within two years of when the claim accrues. n9 In Ramming v. United States, n10 the court held that the filing of an administrative claim is not the "commencement of an action" because it is not a lawsuit brought in a court. Instead, the court held that it is governed by section 108(b), which extends the time allowed to 60 days after the order for relief.

The language of section 108(a) referring to the date of the order for relief eliminates some confusion that had arisen under the Bankruptcy Act in cases in which an adjudication occurred on a later date than the original bankruptcy filing. n11 When a case is converted from one chapter to another, section 348(a) provides that the conversion does not change the date of the order for relief for purposes of section 108.

The key phrase is "applicable non-bankruptcy law," n12 which apparently replaces the necessity for the varying results created by the wording of former Bankruptcy Act Section 11e. The Code provision cannot operate to shorten the period of time available to the trustee to commence or continue an action, or file a pleading or other similar act. The wording of section 108 allows the trustee "the later of" two periods, one being the end of the period prescribed by applicable non-bankruptcy law, and the other a specific extension granted by this section. Section 108 was amended by the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984 n13 to substitute the word "or" for the word "and" at the end of each of subsection (a)(1), (b)(1) and (c)(1). This amendment has the effect of emphasizing that the actions specified may be taken at the end of either period, whichever is later.

Order for Relief Is Operative Date. Section 108 provides that the period for bringing suit is two years after the date of the order for relief n14 in bankruptcy, unless applicable non-bankruptcy law allows for a longer period. The date of closing the estate has no significance in this regard; hence a suit by the trustee ordinarily could not be instituted after two years have elapsed since the order for relief, irrespective of the later reopening of the estate. n15 Only when an applicable state or federal non-bankruptcy statute of limitations, an order entered in a non-bankruptcy proceeding, or an agreement fixing a period, as per subsection (a) of section 108 is of longer duration than the two years specified, could such a suit be maintained, and then only within the time remaining under such other governing time period.

Parties Who May Take Advantage of Extension. Although section 108 refers only to the trustee, it also extends time periods for a chapter 11 or chapter 12 debtor in possession, since a debtor in possession has all the rights and powers of a trustee serving under those chapters. n16 For similar reasons, section 108 should be applicable to a chapter 13 debtor, who is entitled to remain in possession of all property of the estate and thus retains the right to any cause of action which would otherwise pass to a trustee. n17 However, the benefits of subsections (a) and (b), which refer to the trustee, do not pass to a debtor in a case under chapter 7, or under chapter 11 or 12 when a trustee has been appointed and the debtor is no longer a debtor in possession. n18 Once property has reverted in a chapter 11 debtor upon confirmation of a plan, the benefit of the extension may also be lost unless the plan provides that the particular causes of action involved remain property of the estate subject to administration in the bankruptcy court. n19 Similarly, subsections (a) and (b) may not be invoked by a creditor who is not authorized to bring an action on behalf of the bankruptcy estate. n20 Nor may those subsections normally be utilized by an assignee of the debtor. n21

Extension Not Applicable to Causes of Action Arising after Order for Relief. Finally, section 108(a) applies only to causes of action which the debtor possesses on the date of the order for relief and not to those which arise or are acquired by the trustee thereafter. n22 In Independent Fire Insurance Co. v. Pender (In re Phillip), n23 the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held that "at least in the ordinary case," section 108(a) had no applicability to a claim of the estate that had arisen after the order for relief in a chapter 11 case, even though the case had been converted to chapter 7 and the claim had been brought within one year of the conversion. The court held that, under section 348(a), the conversion did not change the date of the order for relief, so that even if the claim had arisen prior to the order for relief, the time period permitted by section 108(a) had expired. n24

Extension of Time for Doing Certain Acts--11 U.S.C. § 108(b)

Section 108(b) is designed to apply when there is a time limit set for the doing of certain acts, such as the filing of pleadings or claims, and when such period has not expired before the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. n25 The last sentence of Section 11e of the former Bankruptcy Act formed the basis for subsection (b). It was the thought, under the Act, that an extension of time should be given the trustee (or receiver) in such cases, as in cases affected by a state or federal statute of limitation, so that the trustee could take the necessary steps to preserve for the estate rights which might otherwise be barred. n26 The Code continues this rationale through section 108(b), under which the trustee is given 60 days to take other actions not covered under subsection (a), such as filing a pleading, demand notice, or proof of claim or loss (such as an insurance claim) unless the period for doing the relevant act expires later than 60 days after the date of the order for relief. n27 Like section 108(a), section 108(b) has been held to apply only to deadlines that existed at the time the petition was filed. n28

Types of Acts to Which Extension Is Applicable. An insurance policy, for example, may require proof of loss within 60 days and, if the claim is rejected, that action be brought within six months thereafter. In such a case, if the time for filing proof of loss has not expired before the filing of the petition, the trustee, under the terms of section 108(b), may make proof of loss within 60 days subsequent to the order for relief even though the contract period expired immediately after the bankruptcy petition was filed. n29 Similarly, section 108(b) would extend a contractual deadline for the exercise of an option to renew a lease. n30 If a debtor has a right to cure a default on an insurance contract, with the insurance to remain in effect during the period in which the debtor may cure, that period may be extended for 60 days under section 108(b). n31

In Autoskill v. National Educational Support Systems, n32 the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit held that, in an appeal which was not stayed by section 362(a), section 108(b) afforded an extension of time for filing a notice of appeal from a district court and that, to the extent that Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 4(a)(1) was inconsistent with section 108(b), the statute prevailed because it was enacted after promulgation of the rule. n33 The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit agreed with this reasoning and result in Local Union No. 38 v. Custom Air Systems, Inc. n34 Both courts also agreed that a chapter 11 debtor in possession could take advantage of the provision because the debtor in possession has the powers of a trustee. n35

Several courts have held that administrative claims, even those which must precede a lawsuit, are governed by section 108(b), rather than section 108(a). Thus, the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held in Ramming v. United States n36 that an administrative claim under the Federal Tort Claims Act n37 is not the commencement of an action. Likewise, the same court held that an administrative tax refund application is governed by section 108(b). n38

In Noonan v. Secretary of HHS (In re Ludlow Hospital Society, Inc.), n39 the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit held that a Medicare regulatory deadline for the sale of capital assets also fell within the ambit of section 108(b). The court found that the pertinent inquiry in construing section 108(b) for purposes of the case was whether the undertaking in question involved "the exercise of a right, or the performance of a duty, prescribed by non-bankruptcy law in the prepetition environment encountered by the debtor, failing which any related prepetition legal right would be forfeit." n40 The court also held that a bankruptcy court was not empowered by Code section 105(a) to grant an extension of time longer than that which section 108(b) specifically permitted. n41

Section 108(b) specifies that the trustee shall have the benefit of the longer period whenever the limitation fixed by contract or in a non-bankruptcy proceeding is longer in duration than the period prescribed in subsection (b).

Section 108(b) Not Applicable to Time Periods for Stayed Litigation Against Debtor or Codebtor. It is important to note that section 108(b) does not apply to time periods in actions against the debtor, or against a codebtor protected by the codebtor stay of section 1201 or 1301 of the Code. Such actions are stayed by section 362, 922, 1201 or 1301 and may proceed only when the stay under the applicable section terminates. n42 At that point, the time available is governed by section 108(c), which provides at least 30 days to take action when an act or proceeding had been stayed. n43 Thus, when the debtor has a deadline for filing an appeal prior to bankruptcy, if the action was originally brought against the debtor, the trustee need not meet the 60 day time limit of section 108(b) since the action would have been stayed by section 362. n44 There is no need to file pleadings or other briefs in a proceeding which has been stayed; section 108(c) will be applicable if the stay terminates. n45 However, section 108(b) would probably be applicable to time periods for the trustee to act in proceedings against the debtor that are not automatically stayed, such as police or regulatory enforcement actions, n46 since section 108(c) is intended to deal only with those actions which are stayed as a result of the bankruptcy filing.

Relationship to Other Code Sections Providing for Powers of Debtor and Trustee. The courts have not agreed upon how the provisions of section 108(b) relate to other Code sections that give debtors or trustees specific powers, such as the power to cure defaults and the power to assume or reject executory contracts.

Several courts of appeals have held that, when a mortgage foreclosure sale has taken place and the debtor has a statutory time period in which to redeem the property, section 108(b) is the sole section of the Bankruptcy Code governing the debtor's rights in the property, extending the redemption period for a maximum of 60 days. n47 These courts have held that if the debtor's rights would have become divested by the mere passage of time and no further necessary step in the sale process was automatically stayed by section 362, then the specific language of section 108(b) left no room for the debtor to extend further the redemption period through a plan curing the mortgage default or otherwise modifying the creditor's rights. n48

This conclusion, which undermines the effect of other provisions of the Code designed to help debtors save their homes and farms, is far from self evident. While section 108(b) might well govern the right of a trustee to redeem in such a situation, there is no reason to conclude automatically that it overrides other provisions of the Code which allow debtors' plans to cure defaults or modify creditors' rights. n49 Other courts have held that section 108(b) does not eliminate these protections. n50

Especially when the automatic stay prevents further action required to complete the sale and the debtor's right to redeem extends until that action is taken, section 108(b) should not constitute a bar to the exercise of other powers granted to debtors and trustees in title 11 cases. Even the leading case holding that redemption rights are governed by section 108(b) implied that its result might be different if any additional act were necessary to complete the foreclosure sale. n51 In such cases section 108(c) may be applicable rather than section 108(b), at least if a court action is involved.

Extension of Statute of Limitations for Creditor--11 U.S.C. § 108(c)

Section 108(c) extends time periods for commencing or continuing civil actions that are stayed by section 362, 922, 1201 or 1301 of the Code. n52 It provides that if an action on a claim against the debtor in a court other than a bankruptcy court is stayed due to the bankruptcy case, any time deadline for commencing and continuing the action is extended to 30 days after notice of termination of the stay, if the deadline would have occurred on an earlier date. n53 The termination of the stay may occur due to a grant of relief from the stay, closing of the case, dismissal of the case, the granting or denial of the debtor's discharge or the fact that the property involved is no longer property of the estate. n54 The statute contains an exception that incorporates the prohibition in section 524 against actions to collect discharged debts as personal liabilities of the debtor. n55

Scope of Section 108(c). Section 108(c), derived from Section 11f of the former Bankruptcy Act, is broader than former Section 11f in that it applies to the commencement or continuation of actions. However, section 108(c) is narrower in scope than section 108(b). It applies only to civil actions in courts on claims against the debtor, or against codebtors protected by the codebtor stay. n56 Courts have generally held that it does apply to time periods within which a creditor must bring an action to enforce a lien before the lien expires. n57 It also applies to the time period to renew a judgment to maintain its enforceability. n58 But it does not appear to apply to other types of acts against the debtor or codebtor that do not involve litigation, such as the filing of documents other than in court proceedings. n59 In many such cases, the party seeking to act must seek relief from the automatic stay to act before its time period expires. This problem was ameliorated to a large degree for certain types of actions by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n60 which amended section 362(b)(3) to provide that the automatic stay does not prevent an act to maintain or continue the perfection of an interest in property to the extent that the trustee's rights and powers are subject to such continued perfection under section 546(b). n61 Section 546(b) was in turn amended by the same legislation to provide that the trustee's rights are subject to applicable law that provides for maintenance or continuation of an interest in property to be effective against an entity that acquires rights in the property before action is taken to effect that maintenance or continuation. n62 If, due to the exception in section 362(b)(3), a party is not stayed from perfecting its lien, section 108(c) is inapplicable. n63

Like section 108(b), section 108(c) does not apply to actions brought by the trustee based upon powers granted by the Code. n64 Nor does it apply to actions against codebtors which are not automatically stayed. n65

Amount of Time Permitted for Further Action. Section 108(c) permits the commencement or continuation of an action until the later of two periods. The first is the end of a time period fixed by applicable non-bankruptcy law, an order entered in a non-bankruptcy proceeding or an agreement. Such time period expressly includes any suspension of such period occurring on or after the commencement of the case.' Such a suspension may result from either state or federal law. The legislative history discusses one important example that is applicable in certain tax cases: For example, section 6503(b) of the Internal Revenue Code suspends collection of tax liabilities while the debtor's assets are in the control or custody of a court, and for six months thereafter. By adopting the language of the Senate amendment, the House amendment insures not only that the period for collection of the taxes outside bankruptcy will not expire during the title 11 proceedings, but also that such period will not expire until at least six months thereafter, which is the minimum suspension period provided by the Internal Revenue Code. n66

Other examples are suspensions of a statute of limitations during periods when a party is a minor or incompetent. In some jurisdictions state law may dictate suspension of a statute of limitations when a bankruptcy or another court proceeding has stayed the initiation of an action. Such suspensions would presumably be included within the terms of section 108(c), adding the entire duration of the automatic stay to the applicable time period. n67

However, absent such a provision in applicable non-bankruptcy law, a statute of limitations or other deadline for an action against a debtor which would have expired while an automatic stay was applicable is extended by only the second period set forth in section 108(c), 30 days after notice of the termination or expiration of the automatic stay barring the action. n68 It is important to note that this extension continues not simply until 30 days after the termination of the stay, but until 30 days after notice of that termination. When a party has no such notice, the 30 days never begin to run. n69 Occasionally, the stay will halt litigation in which there is a series of impending deadlines. At least one court has held that, in this situation, only the act required by the first deadline is due to be performed within 30 days, and subsequent acts are to be performed thereafter according to the sequence and timing provided by non-bankruptcy law. n70

Applicability to Time Periods under Sections 507(a)(8) and 523(a)(1). Prior to 2002, there was considerable confusion in the courts regarding whether section 108(c) has any applicability to the time periods in section 507(a)(8) n71 or section 523(a)(1) n72 for determining priority and dischargeability of certain prepetition tax debts in subsequent bankruptcy cases. n73 As the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held in Quenzer v. United States (In re Quenzer), n74 the plain language of section 108(c) refers only to periods for commencing or continuing a civil action, and only to periods set by non-bankruptcy law, non-bankruptcy orders or agreements. Thus, that court held that section 108(c) did not provide for any tolling of the time limits in section 507(a)(7) (currently designated as section 507(a)(8)). n75 The Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit similarly found that the plain language of the statute does not support tolling of the time limits in section 507(a)(8), but held that the court can use its equitable powers under section 105 to "toll" those time limits where there is a showing that the circumstances of the case warrant such an extension. n76 Other courts held that the time period was automatically tolled under section 108(c), not only during the pendency of the automatic stay in a prior bankruptcy case but also for six additional months, finding that section 108(c) incorporated Internal Revenue Code section 6503. n77

The Supreme Court resolved this issue in Young v. United States. n78 The Court held that it did not have to decide whether section 108(c) tolled the time periods in sections 507(a)(8) and 523(a)(1) because those time periods were equitably tolled during the period that the Internal Revenue Service was precluded from collecting its debt by the automatic stay in a prior bankruptcy case filed by the debtors. Although the Court concluded that "the lookback period of 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8)(A)(i) is tolled during the pendency of a prior bankruptcy petition," n79 the Court also stated that "the IRS was disabled from protecting its claim during the pendency of the Chapter 13 petition, and this period of disability tolled the three-year lookback period " n80 Thus, the reasoning of the decision suggested that the lookback period would be tolled only for the period during which the automatic stay prevented the taxing agency's collection actions if that period were shorter than the duration of the previous case.

A slightly different resolution, with respect to issues under section 507(a)(8) at least, is brought about by amendments to section 507(a)(8) made in 2005. n81 Section 507(a)(8)(A)(ii)(II) was added to provide that the 240-day period therein is extended by the amount of time during which a stay of proceedings against collections was in effect in a prior case during that period, plus 90 days. In addition, language was added at the end of section 523(a)(8) stating that any time period stated in the paragraph is suspended during any period in which a stay of proceedings was in effect in a prior case or during which collection was precluded by the existence of a confirmed plan under title 11, plus 90 days. Neither of these changes affect the time periods in section 523(a)(1), except to the extent that section 523(a)(1) incorporates section 507(a)(8).

Relation to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006

Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9006(a) governs the methods of computing periods of time for acts to be done and proceedings to be had in cases under title 11 of the United States Code. n82 In situations in which section 108 is pertinent to setting a time period for some action in a bankruptcy case or a proceeding in a bankruptcy case, Rule 9006(a) is thus applicable. Rule 9006(b) gives the court discretion to authorize extensions of time for certain acts required or allowed under or pursuant to court order. n83 Thus, this portion of the rule could be applicable only to extensions of time under section 108 involving court orders, and it is not entirely clear that the rule even applies to orders other than those in bankruptcy cases or proceedings. Subdivision (b)(1) states that the court may for cause shown at any time in its discretion: (a) with or without motion or notice order the period enlarged if the request therefore is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order; or (b) on motion made after the expiration of the specified period permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect. However, the rule excludes in the interests of prompt administration of bankruptcy cases' n84 certain time periods that may not be extended. Subdivision (b)(2) lists the rules in which the time periods that are established cannot be extended:

- . Rule 1007(d) time for filing a list of 20 largest creditors;
- . Rule 2003(a)--meeting of creditors not more than 40 days after order for relief;
- . Rule 2003(d)--10 days for filing a motion for resolution of an election dispute;
- . Rule 7052(b)--10-day period to move to amend findings of fact;

. Rule 9023--10-day period to move for a new trial; and

. Rule 9024--time to move for relief from judgment. n85

Subdivision (b)(3) of Rule 9006 further limits the availability of an extension of time for:

. the time for paying the filing fee in installments under Rule 1006(b)(2);

. the time limits for a motion to dismiss a chapter 7 case for substantial abuse under Rule 1017(e); n86

. the 90-day period for filing a claim in a chapter 7 or 13 case pursuant to Rule 3002(c);

. the 30-day period under Rule 4003(b) for filing an objection to a claim exemption; n87

. the 60-day periods to object to a discharge under Rule 4004(a) and to file a dischargeability complaint under Rule 4007(c);

. the 10-day period for filing a notice of appeal under Rule 8002; n88 and

. the time to file objections to proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law under Rule 9033. n89

Unless a rule with a specific authorization to extend time is listed in Rule 9006(b)(3), an extension of time may be granted under Rule 9006(b)(1).

For a complete discussion of Code section 108, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch 108 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Under Section 11e of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, this extension was also applicable to a receiver. However, since section 105(b) of the Code expressly prohibits a court from appointing a receiver in a case under title 11, section 108 now refers to trustees only.

n2 11 U.S.C. §§ 546(a), 549(d), 550(e); see In re Dry Wall Supply, Inc., 11 B.R. 933 (D. Colo. 1990); In re Topcor, Inc., 132 B.R. 119 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991); Collier on Bankruptcy, 546.02, 549.03[4] and 550.03[3] (Matthew Bender); see also Wolf v. Degner, 243 Neb. 702, 502 N.W.2d 440 (1993) (not mentioning section 546(a) but holding that section 108(a) did not extend time for trustee's fraudulent conveyance action on behalf of creditors). But see Belford v. Martin-Trigona (In re Martin-Trigona), 763 F.2d 503 (2d Cir. 1985) (trustee's suit to avoid fraudulent conveyance by debtor held timely due to application of section 108(c)).

n3 Spears Carpet Mills v. Century Nat'l Bank, 85 B.R. 86 (W.D. Ark. 1988); In re Carter, 125 B.R. 832 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1991); H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 318 (1977).

n4 Ambrose Branch Coal Co., Inc. v. Tankersley, 106 B.R. 462 (W.D. Va. 1989).

n5 TLI, Inc. v. United States, 100 F.3d 424 (5th Cir. 1996). But see CGE Shattuck LLC v. Town of Jaffrey, N.H. (In re CGE Shattuck LLC), 272 B.R. 514 (Bankr. D.N.H. 2001) (appeal from refusal of property tax abatement was commencement of action because standard of review was de novo and new evidence could be presented).

n6 TLI, Inc. v. United States, 100 F.3d 424, 427 n.2 (5th Cir. 1996).

n7 175 F.3d 889 (11th Cir. 1999).

n8 28 U.S.C. § 2401.

n9 28 U.S.C. § 2401(b).

n10 281 F.3d 158 (5th Cir. 2001).

n11 See, e.g., Kamerman & Kamerman v. Seligson (In re Ira Haupt & Co.), 390 F.2d 251 (2d Cir. 1968); Estate of B.J. McAdams, Inc. v. Sugar Foods Corp., 171 B.R. 12 (S.D.N.Y. 1994); see also Rothenberg v. Ralph D. Kaiser Co. (In re Rothenberg), 173 B.R. 4 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1994) (section 108(a)(2) inapplicable to involuntary case in which order for relief never entered).

n12 The word "nonbankruptcy" was added to subsections 108(a), (b) and (c) by the Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-353.

n13 Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984).

n14 "Order for relief" means entry of an order for relief as defined in 11 U.S.C. § 102(6). See T.C.I., Ltd. v. Sears Bank & Trust Co. (In re T.C.I., Ltd.), 6 C.B.C.2d 1316, 21 B.R. 876 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1982); M & M Cattle Co. v. Reliable Drywall, Inc. (In re Reliable Drywall, Inc.), 6 C.B.C.2d 1257, 20 B.R. 386 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1982).

n15 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 5010 governs the reopening of cases in conjunction with section 350 of the Code. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 350 and ch. 5010 (Matthew Bender).

n16 Martinson v. First Nat'l Bank of Oakes (In re Martinson), 731 F.2d 543 (8th Cir. 1984); DiSalvo v. DiSalvo (In re DiSalvo), 224 B.R. 763 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1998), reversed on other grounds, 219 F.3d 1035 (2000); Flying S' Land & Cattle Co., Inc. v. Beaumont (In re Flying S' Land & Cattle Co., Inc.), 71 B.R. 183 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1987); see 11 U.S.C. §§ 1107(a), 1203; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1107.02, 1203.011 (Matthew Bender); see also Rudin v. Tax Comm'n of New York City (In re Olympia & York Maiden Lane Co.), LLC, 233 B.R. 662 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999) (state court receiver whose appointment to manage property of the debtor was continued by order of bankruptcy court could invoke section 108(a) to extend time for challenging tax assessment).

n17 11 U.S.C. § 1306(b); Gaskins v. Metropolitan Home Imp. Ctr., Inc. (In re Gaskins), 98 B.R. 328 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1989); see Thomas v. GMAC Residential Funding Corp., 52 C.B.C.2d 865, 309 B.R. 453 (D. Md. 2004) (chapter 13 debtor given benefit of extension under section 108(b) to give notice of rescission under Truth in Lending Act); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1306.01 (Matthew Bender).

n18 See Rousseau v. Diemer, 24 F. Supp. 2d 137 (D. Mass. 1998) (permitting trustee to be substituted as plaintiff to take advantage of tolling provision in action brought by chapter 7 debtor); Craig v. Barclays Am. Fin., Inc. (In re Craig), 7 B.R. 864 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1980); Tingley v. Harrison, 125 Idaho 86, 867 P.2d 960 (1994) (trustee could not, after deadline had passed, ratify suit brought in debtor's name within deadline).

n19 National Env't'l Waste Corp. v. Stephens, Berg & Lasaster (In re National Env't'l Waste Corp.), 200 F.3d 1266, 43 C.B.C.2d 796 (9th Cir. 2000) (statute of limitations extended under section 108(a) where chapter 11 plan reserved right to enforce claims, even though specific claim was not identified in plan); United States for Use of Am. Bank v. C.I.T. Construction, Inc., 944 F.2d 253 (5th Cir. 1991) (dictum); Cunningham v. Healthco, Inc., 824 F.2d 1448 (5th Cir. 1987); Natco Indus. Inc. v. Fed. Ins. Co., 69 B.R. 418 (S.D.N.Y. 1987); Solar Constr. Co., Inc. v. Department of Gen. Servs., 105 Pa. Commw. 609, 525 A.2d 28 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1987).

n20 United States for Use of Am. Bank v. C.I.T. Constr., Inc., 944 F.2d 253 (5th Cir. 1991).

n21 Motor Carrier Audit & Collection Co. v. Lighting Products, Inc., 113 B.R. 424 (N.D. Ill. 1989). But cf. Coliseum Cartage Co. v. Rubbermaid Statesville, 975 F.2d 1022 (4th Cir.1992) (when debtor in possession and assignee of cause of action obtained ex parte court approval of amended agreement under which debtor in possession retained an interest in the cause of action, debtor could be joined in action and section 108(a) could be invoked).

n22 Northern Specialty Sales, Inc. v. INTV Corp. (In re Northern Specialty Sales, Inc.), 14 C.B.C.2d 439, 57 B.R. 557 (Bankr. D. Or. 1986); Waldschmidt v. Edgcomb Metals (In re Ward), 11 C.B.C.2d 569, 42 B.R. 946 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1984).

n23 948 F.2d 985 (5th Cir. 1991).

n24 948 F.2d 985, 987. Accord Huennekens v. Nicoll (In re Southern Int'l Co., Inc.), 29 C.B.C.2d 1230, 159 B.R. 192 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1993); Baltensperger v. Wellensiek, 250 Neb. 938, 554 N.W.2d 137 (1996).

n25 A reference to section 1201 was added to section 108(b) by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986).

n26 See Statement of David Teitelbaum, representing the Bankruptcy Committee of the New York City Bar Association, in House Hearings on H.R. 6439, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., 33-35 (1937).

n27 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 318 (1977); see, e.g., Henry v. Department of Transp., 255 Ga. 467, 339 S.E.2d 715 (1986); Di Maggio v. Blache, 466 So. 2d 489 (La. App. 1985).

n28 Dougherty v. IRS (In re Dougherty), 187 B.R. 883 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1995).

n29 Federal Ins. Co. v. Sheldon, 150 B.R. 314 (S.D.N.Y. 1993); see also Weiner v. Sprint Mortgage Bankers Corp., 235 A.D.2d 472, 652 N.Y.S.2d 629 (A.D. 1997) (time for reporting unauthorized endorsement to bank subject to extension under § 108(b)).

n30 In re Future Growth Enter., Inc., 14 C.B.C.2d 1410, 61 B.R. 469 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986); In re Dulan, 13 C.B.C.2d 737, 52 B.R. 739 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1985). However, some courts have held that the provisions of section 108(b) do not apply to the exercise of options of various types because they are not acts "similar" to those enumerated in that section. Compare In re P.I.N.E., Inc., 52 B.R. 463 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1985) (relying on Good Hope Refineries v. Benavides, 602 F.2d 998 (1st Cir.)), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 992, 100 S. Ct. 523, 62 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1979), which reached a similar holding under Section 11e of the 1898 Act, with Santa Fe Dev. and Mortgage Corp. v. McCormack (In re Santa Fe Dev. and Mortgage Corp.), 5 C.B.C.2d 1186, 16 B.R. 165 (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1981) (section 108(b) should be broadly construed to best serve the purpose of the debtor's rehabilitation).

n31 Kirtley v. Sovereign Life Ins. Co. (In re Durability, Inc.), 212 F.3d 551, 44 C.B.C.2d 25 (10th Cir. 2000); Counties Contracting & Constr. Co. v. Constitution Life Ins. Co., 855 F.2d 1054 (3d Cir. 1988); Sentry Insurance v. John J. Sullivan, Inc. (In re John J. Sullivan, Inc.), 128 B.R. 7 (D. Mass. 1991).

n32 994 F.2d 1476 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 916, 114 S. Ct. 307, 126 L. Ed. 2d 254 (1993). Accord Production Credit Ass'n of Minot v. Burk, 427 N.W.2d 108 (N.D. 1988).

n33 See also Roberts v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 175 F.3d 889 (11th Cir. 1999) (debtor in possession's time to appeal from tax court governed by section 108(b); In re Howard Indus., Inc., 170 B.R. 358 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994) (section 108(b) applicable to claim for tax refund).

n34 333 F.3d 345 (2d Cir. 2003).

n35 333 F.3d 345, 347-48 (citing Autoskill, Inc. v. National Educ. Support Sys., 994 F.2d 1476, 1484 n.4 (10th Cir. 1993)).

n36 281 F.3d 158 (5th Cir. 2001).

n37 28 U.S.C. § 2401(b).

n38 TLI, Inc. v. United States, 100 F.3d 424 (5th Cir. 1996). Accord In re Howard Indus., Inc., 170 B.R. 358 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994).

n39 124 F.3d 22 (1st Cir. 1997).

n40 124 F.3d 22, 29; see also Thomas v. GMAC Residential Funding Corp., 52 C.B.C.2d 865, 309 B.R. 453 (D. Md. 2004) (chapter 13 debtor given benefit of extension under section 108(b) to give notice of rescission under Truth in Lending Act).

n41 124 F.3d 22, 27.

n42 11 U.S.C. §§ 362, 922, 1201 and 1301; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362, ch. 922, ch. 1201 and ch. 1301 (Matthew Bender). Section 362 was extensively amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n43 11 U.S.C. § 108(c); see "Extension of Statute of Limitations for Creditor; § 108(e)" infra. But see Production Credit Ass'n of Minot v. Burk, 427 N.W.2d 108 (N.D. 1988) (erroneously holding that debtors were required by section 108(b) to file appeal in state court foreclosure action against them within 60 days of order for relief).

n44 See, e.g., Cathey v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 711 F.2d 60, 8 C.B.C.2d 1179 (6th Cir. 1983); Association of St. Croix Condo. Owners v. St. Croix Hotel Corp., 682 F.2d 446, 7 C.B.C.2d 137 (3d Cir. 1982).

n45 Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus. (In re Hoffinger Indus.), 329 F.3d 948, 952 (8th Cir. 2003) (citing Treatise).

n46 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(4), as amended by the Omnibus Consolidated Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999, Pub. L. No. 105-277 (1998); see (Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.05[5] (Matthew Bender). But see EEOC v. Guerdon Indus., 76 B.R. 102 (W.D. Ky. 1987).

n47 Canney v. Merchants Bank (In re Canney), 284 F.3d 362, 47 C.B.C.2d 1508 (2d Cir. 2002); In re Roach, 824 F.2d 1370, 17 C.B.C.2d 493 (3d Cir. 1987); Goldberg v. Tynan (In re Tynan), 773 F.2d 177, 13 C.B.C.2d 655 (7th Cir. 1985); Johnson v. First Nat'l Bank of Montevideo, 719 F.2d 270, 9 C.B.C.2d 579 (8th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1012, 104 S. Ct. 1015, 79 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1984). However, the Roach decision was overruled by amendments made to section 1322 by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (enacted on October 22, 1994 and effective with respect to cases filed on or after that date). To the extent that a sale is not finalized until a redemption period expires, some of the other cases cited in this note may also have been overruled. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.09[6] (Matthew Bender).

n48 See cases cited in preceding note. Some courts adopting this reasoning have, however, found that either the bankruptcy court, by specific order, or the parties themselves could extend the time for redemption. See In re G-N Partners, 48 B.R. 462 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1985); Federal Land Bank of Omaha v. Bollin, 408 N.W.2d 56 (Iowa 1987).

n49 See In re Pellegrino, 284 B.R. 326 (Bankr. D. Conn. 2002) (Canney, note 20 supra, not applicable in chapter 13 case due to operation of chapter 13 cure provisions); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1322.09[6] (Matthew Bender). Interestingly, the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held that the cure provisions in section 365 did override section 108(b) in Moody v. Amoco Oil Co., 734 F.2d 1200, 11 C.B.C.2d 1 (7th Cir.), cert denied, 469 U.S. 982, 105 S. Ct. 386, 83 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1984), a holding seemingly contrary to its holding in Goldberg v. Tynan (In re Tynan) 773 F.2d 177, 13 C.B.C.2d 655 (7th Cir. 1985). Besides Moody, several courts have held that section 108(b) does not limit a debtor's rights under section 365 with respect to leases and executory contracts. See, e.g., Coleman Oil Co. v. Circle K Corp. (In re Circle K Corp.), 127 F.3d 904, 909 n.4 (9th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1148, 118 S. Ct. 1166, 140 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1998); Econo-Therm Energy Sys. Corp. v. Prudential Ins. Co. (In re Econo-Therm Energy Systems Corp.), 80 B.R. 137 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1987); In re Round Hill Travel, Inc., 52 B.R. 807 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1985). But see Counties Contracting & Constr. v. Constitution Life Ins. Co., 855 F.2d 1054 (3d Cir. 1988) (once 60-day extension of insurance policy grace period expired, insurance contract was no longer in existence and could not be assumed because it had expired according to its terms); see also Hamblen v. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. (In re Thomas J. Grosso Inv. Co., Inc.), 457 F.2d 168 (9th Cir. 1972).

n50 In re Chambers, 27 B.R. 687 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1983); Sapphire Inv. v. Stewart Title & Trust (In re Sapphire Inv.), 6 C.B.C.2d 639, 19 B.R. 492 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1982); see also Maanum v. Rieffer (In re Maanum), 838 F.2d 991 (8th Cir. 1988) (Heaney, J., dissenting); Justice v. Valley Nat'l Bank, 849 F.2d 1078, 1088, 19 C.B.C.2d 172, 183 (8th Cir. 1988) (Heaney, J., dissenting).

n51 Johnson v. First Nat'l Bank of Montevideo, 719 F.2d 270, 277, 9 C.B.C.2d 579, 586 (8th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1012, 104 S. Ct. 1015, 79 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1984); see also 11 U.S.C. § 1322(c)(1), enacted by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (effective with respect to cases filed on or after October 22, 1994), providing that a chapter 13 debtor can cure a mortgage default until the property "is sold," which implies completion of all steps in a sale.

n52 11 U.S.C. §§ 362, 922, 1201 and 1301; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362, ch. 922, ch. 1201 and ch. 1301 (Matthew Bender). Section 362 was extensively amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n53 11 U.S.C. § 108, as amended by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986).

n54 11 U.S.C. § 362(c) and (d), as both subsections were amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.06, 362.07 (Matthew Bender).

n55 11 U.S.C. § 524(a), as amended by a technical amendment in Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 524 (Matthew Bender).

n56 See Roberts v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 175 F.3d 889 (11th Cir. 1999) (tax court proceeding for redetermination of deficiencies assessed against debtor was not an action against the debtor); New Pentax Film, Inc. v. Trans World Airlines, 936 F. Supp. 142 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (section 108(a) applies to statute of limitations for claims under Warsaw Convention).

n57 Valley Transit Mix of Ruidoso, Inc. v. Miller, 928 F.2d 354 (10th Cir. 1991); Miner Corp. v. Hunter's Run Ltd. P'ship (In re Hunter's Run Ltd. P'ship), 875 F.2d 1425, 21 C.B.C.2d 491 (9th Cir. 1989); Morton v. Nat'l Bank of New York City (In re Morton), 866 F.2d 561, 20 C.B.C.2d 465 (2d Cir. 1989); City of Bridgeport v. Debek, 210 Conn. 175, 554 A.2d 728 (1989). But see Hazen First State Bank v. Speight, 888 F.2d 574 (8th Cir. 1988) (section 108(c) did not apply to time period set by agreement during which creditor had to bring lawsuit to preserve priority of its lien).

n58 Spirtos v. Moreno (In re Spirtos), 221 F.3d 1079 (9th Cir. 2000); Wessinger v. Raab (In re Greenberg), 288 B.R. 612 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2002).

n59 Maiona v. Vassilowitch (In re Vassilowitch), 72 B.R. 803 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1987); RDR Sys. Development, Inc. v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co. (In re RDR Sys. Dev., Inc.), 57 B.R. 540 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1986). But see Bond Enterprises, Inc. v. Western Bank of Farmington (In re Bond Enterprises, Inc.), 54 B.R. 366 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1985) (time for filing continuation statement to preserve security interest extended by section 108(c)).

n60 Pub. L. No. 103-394 (enacted on October 22, 1994 and effective with respect to cases filed on or after that date).

n61 11 U.S.C. § 546(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 546.03 (Matthew Bender).

n62 11 U.S.C. § 546(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 546.03 (Matthew Bender).

n63 Premier Inv. Group v. Premier Hotel Dev. Group (In re Premier Hotel Dev. Group), 47 C.B.C.2d 573, 270 B.R. 234 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn 2001); see also In re Durango Ga. Paper Co., 297 B.R. 316 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2003) (when required act served to create lien, rather than perfect or maintain lien it was stayed and therefore within ambit of section 108(c)).

n64 See McCoy v. Grinnell (In re Radcliffe's Warehouse Sales, Inc.), 9 C.B.C.2d 628, 31 B.R. 827 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 1983); see also "Time Limitation on Suit by Trustee; § 108(a)" supra. But see Belford v. Martin-Trigona (In re Martin-Trigona), 763 F.2d 503 (2d Cir. 1985).

n65 Cockerham v. Armstrong World Indus., 717 F. Supp. 433 (M.D. La. 1989); Cardinal Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n. v. Flugum, 10 Ohio App. 3d 243, 461 N.E.2d 932 (1983).

n66 124 Cong. Rec. H11,109 (daily ed., Sept. 28, 1978); S17,426 (daily ed., Oct. 6, 1978); see also Brickley v. IRS (In re Brickley), 70 B.R. 113 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1986).

n67 See, e.g., Smith v. Lachter (In re Smith), 293 B.R. 220 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2003) (if state law tolls time to renew judgment, longer period permitted by state law would apply); Panzella v. Hills Stores Co., 171 B.R. 22 (E.D. Pa. 1994); Schumacher v. Worcester, 55 Cal. App. 4th 376, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (1997); First Nat'l Bank of Lancaster County v. Brewer, 301 Pa. Super. 104, 447 A.2d 263 (1982).

n68 Husman v. TWA, 169 F.3d 1151 (8th Cir. 1999); Simon v. Navon, 116 F.3d 1, 38 C.B.C.2d 38 (1st Cir. 1997); Rogers v. Corrosion Products, Inc., 42 F.3d 292 (5th Cir.), cert denied, 515 U.S. 1160, 115 S. Ct. 2614, 132 L. Ed. 2d 857 (1995); Aslanidis v. U.S. Lines, 7 F.3d 1067 (2d Cir. 1993); Grotting v. Hudson Shipbuilders, Inc., 85 B.R. 568 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 1988); Hazel v. Van Beek, 135 Wash. 2d 45, 954 P.2d 1301 (1998); Thurman v. Tafoya, 895 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1995); Raikes v. Langford, 701 S.W.2d 142 (Ky. App. 1986); Howard v. Howard, 670 S.W.2d 737 (Tex. App. 1984). But see Garbe Iron Works, Inc. v. Priester, 75 Ill. 2d 84, 75 Ill. Dec. 428, 457 N.E.2d 422 (1983) (interpreting section 108(c) to provide for extension of statute of limitations by time period equal to duration of automatic stay despite apparent absence of state law tolling provisions).

n69 Schumacher v. Worcester, 55 Cal. App. 4th 376, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (1997).

n70 Roadside Stations, Inc. v. 7HBF, Ltd., 905 S.W.2d 1 (Tex. App. 1994).

n71 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8), formerly § 507(a)(7), as renumbered by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 507.10 (Matthew Bender).

n72 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.07 (Matthew Bender).

n73 Section 507(a)(7)(A) (now (a)(8)(A)) addresses only prepetition taxes. Missouri Dep't of Revenue v. L.J. O'Neill Shoe Co. (In re L.J. O'Neill Shoe Co.), 64 F.3d 1146 (8th Cir. 1995).

n74 19 F.3d 163 (5th Cir. 1993).

n75 19 F.3d 163, 165.

n76 Morgan v. United States (In re Morgan), 182 F.3d 775 (11th Cir. 1999).

n77 E.g., West v. United States (In re West), 5 F.3d 423, 426, 29 C.B.C.2d 1039 (9th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1081, 114 S. Ct. 1830, 128 L. Ed. 2d 459 (1994); Montoya v. United States (In re Montoya), 965 F.2d 554 (7th Cir. 1992).

n78 535 U.S. 43, 122 S. Ct. 1036, 152 L. Ed. 2d 79 (2002).

n79 535 U.S. 43, 53, 122 S. Ct. 1036, 1043, 152 L. Ed. 2d 79, 89.

n80 535 U.S. 43, 50-51, 122 S. Ct. 1036, 1041, 152 L. Ed. 2d 79, 87.

n81 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n82 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1001, 9006. Rule 9006(a) was amended by the 1991 amendments to the Bankruptcy Rules and Official Forms to govern the computation of time prescribed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure when a civil rule is made applicable by the Bankruptcy Rules to a bankruptcy case or proceeding. Rule 9006 was amended again, by the 2001 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, to provide for time periods service in by electronic or other means not otherwise authorized under Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b). See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 9006 (Matthew Bender).

n83 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9006(b), as amended in 1999.

n84 1983 Advisory Committee Note to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9006.

n85 Id.

n86 The reference to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1017(e) was added to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9006(b)(3) by the 1991 amendments.

n87 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 4003(b) was amended by the 2000 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, effective December 1, 2000.

n88 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 8002; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 8002 (Matthew Bender).

n89 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9033; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 9033 (Matthew Bender).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

171 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Who May Be a Debtor under Chapter 13

2008 Emerging Issues 962

Collier on Who May Be a Debtor under Chapter 13

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to section 109, including the requirement that a Chapter 13 debtor be an individual with regular income, debt limitations applicable to eligibility for Chapter 13 relief, method of determining eligibility to be a Chapter 13 debtor, and debts of spouses in application of Chapter 13 limitations.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The eligibility requirements for status as a debtor under chapter 13, which governs the adjustment of debts of an individual, are contained in section 109(e). One of the purposes of chapter 13 is to allow the small sole proprietor, for whom the reorganization process provided in chapter 11 is too cumbersome or otherwise inappropriate, to obtain relief under the Bankruptcy Code. n1 The eligibility criteria set forth in section 109(e) are specific and restrictive, with monetary amounts established to govern eligibility so as to ensure that those persons for whose benefit the chapter is directed are those who employ its provisions. Thus, the fundamental purpose of section 109(e) is to establish the dollar limitation on the amount of indebtedness that an individual with regular income can incur and still file under chapter 13. n2

Requirement That the Chapter 13 Debtor Be an Individual with Regular Income

The first requirement found in subsection (e) is that the chapter 13 debtor be an "individual with regular income," or such an individual and that individual's spouse. The phrase "individual with regular income" is defined in section 101 of the Code to mean an "individual whose income is sufficiently stable and regular to enable such individual to make payments under a plan under chapter 13 of this title, other than a stockbroker or a commodity broker." n3 This definition, barring debtors from chapter 13 eligibility if they are unable to make plan payments, is closely related to the standard of plan feasibility for chapter 13 plan confirmation under section 1325(a)(6). n4

Since "individual" is a narrower term than "person," which as defined by section 101 includes individual, partnership and corporation, it is clear that partnerships and corporations are not eligible to file chapter 13 cases. n5 However, an individual who is a member of a partnership is eligible to file on his or her own behalf, in which case the assets of the partnership would not be property of the estate but the debtor's interest in the partnership would be property of the estate. n6 Similarly, although a trust is not an individual eligible to file a chapter 13 case, n7 an individual who is the trustee of a trust may file a chapter 13 case. n8

The section 101 definition of "individual with regular income" is a much more encompassing concept than was the "wage earner" entitled to chapter 13-type relief under pre-1978 bankruptcy laws. Chapter 13 relief is not limited to those whose regular income comes from employment, but encompasses "individuals on welfare, social security, fixed pension incomes, or who live on investment incomes." n9 In Bibb County Department of Family & Children Services v. Hope (In re Hammonds), n10 the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit held that public assistance benefits were regular income and that a recipient of those benefits could be a chapter 13 debtor. The standard is based not on the source of the income but, rather, on its regularity and sufficiency to meet plan payments. n11 Although the debtor must demonstrate an ability to meet plan payments, eligibility under chapter 13 does not require that the debtor receive regular income at the time of the petition or that the exact amount of future income be ascertainable at that time. n12 It also does not require that the regular income be weekly or monthly, as long it is reasonably predictable and sufficient to make the proposed plan payments. n13 However, an extremely irregular income pattern, or an income that is too low to allow for plan payments, will fail to meet the eligibility requirements of section 109(e). n14 Often issues of this nature are dealt with as part of the feasibility test for chapter 13 plan confirmation. n15

Although the receipt of Social Security payments entitles an individual to file a chapter 13 petition, the anti-assignment provision of 42 U.S.C. § 407 is still valid, so the court cannot order the Social Security Administration to make payments directly to the chapter 13 trustee. In In re Buren, n16 the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit held that, in accordance with the anti-assignment provision to the Social Security Act, a bankruptcy court could not compel the Social Security Administration to pay a chapter 13 debtor's SSI benefits directly to the trustee. The overriding authority of the anti-assignment provision had been clarified in an amendment among the Social Security Amendments of 1983: "No other provision of law, enacted before, on or after the date of the enactment of this section may be construed to limit, supersede, or otherwise modify the provisions of this section except to the extent that it does so by express reference to this section." n17

The legislative history to this amendment states that some bankruptcy courts n18 had mistakenly "considered Social Security and SSI benefits listed by the debtor to be income for purposes of Chapter XIII bankruptcy and had ordered SSA in several hundred cases to send all or part of a debtor's benefit check to the trustee in bankruptcy." n19 The amendment was apparently written to correct this application of the bankruptcy law in the future because, as stated in the House Report, the "bill specifically provides that Social Security and SSI benefits may not be assigned notwithstanding any other provisions of law, including, P.L. 95-598, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978." n20 Since the amendment to the Social Security Act, bankruptcy courts have generally found that they cannot make orders for payment of federal benefits to the trustee when those benefits cannot be assigned pursuant to federal law. n21 However, nothing in any of these statutes prevents the recipient of the benefits from being a chapter 13 debtor, and since the definition of an individual with regular income does not include the ability to have income paid directly to the trustee, they do not pose a barrier to chapter 13 eligibility.

Another issue that sometimes arises concerning the source of the debtor's income is whether a nonworking spouse may assert that the support he or she receives from the other spouse is "regular income." It is clear that alimony or support received by a separated spouse or parent was meant to be encompassed within the term "regular income," and also that the spouse of an individual with regular income need not have his or her own separate source of income if the spouse is a joint debtor with that individual. Based on the obvious intent of Congress that the term be construed broadly, most courts have permitted the spouse of an individual with regular income to file without the necessity of that individual filing jointly, at least if there is a commitment of the nonfiling spouse to provide the income. n22 They have even permitted a debtor to file based on the commitment of friends and relatives to provide the necessary income. n23

Occasionally other issues arise, such as whether a debtor who owns real estate in trust for another must have regular income from the trust to be eligible for chapter 13. Since the test applies to the debtor, who is the individual and not the trust, income from the trust is not required. n24

The definition specifically excludes stockbrokers n25 and commodity brokers. As an additional protection, to ensure that there is no avoidance of the customer protection provisions set forth in chapter 7, section 109(e) provides that an individual's spouse may join in seeking chapter 13 relief, as long as that spouse is not a stockbroker or commodity broker. Thus, the combination of the section 101 definition and the spousal petition provision of section 109(e) guarantees that stockbrokers and commodity brokers are completely excluded from the scope of chapter 13.

Debt Limitations Applicable to Eligibility for Chapter 13 Relief

In contrast to provisions involving chapter 7 debtors, the language of section 109(e) is drafted explicitly to require that a chapter 13 debtor owe debts n26 on the date that the petition is filed. However, while the debtor must owe some debts, the debtor cannot owe debts in too large an amount and still expect to take advantage of the streamlined rehabilitative scheme provided in chapter 13. Thus, the core of subsection (e) is its monetary limitation on eligibility for chapter 13 relief. The monetary limitations of subsection (e) reflect Congress's recognition that a chapter 11 reorganization might be too cumbersome a procedure for a sole proprietor or individual with a small amount of debt. n27 At the same time, they ensure that chapter 13 is not used by individuals with large businesses in which the creditor protections of chapter 11, such as voting and the disclosure statement, are more important.

Dollar Amounts of Chapter 13 Debt Limitations. The debtor must owe less than $336,900 in unsecured debt and less than $1,010,650 in secured debt when the petition is filed. n28 As originally enacted in 1978, the debtor had to owe less than $100,000 in unsecured debts and less than $350,000 in secured debts. n29 Under section 104(b) of the Code, the dollar amounts of the chapter 13 debt limitations were adjusted for changes in the cost of living on April 1, 1998, on April 1, 2001 on April 1, 2004, and again on April 1, 2007. The dollar amounts will next be adjusted on April 1, 2010, and will be adjusted every three years thereafter. n30

The dollar limits on both categories of debts, unsecured and secured, apply only to debts that are noncontingent and liquidated at the decisive petition filing date. n31 Debts owed by related entities, but not by the debtor or debtors filing the case, are not counted. n32 However, one court in a community property state has held that the amount of the "community claims" under section 101(7) n33 against the other spouse must be included in the calculation of the dollar-amount jurisdictional eligibility applied to the chapter 13 debtor because such claims will be entitled to participate under any plan proposed by the debtor. n34

Only Noncontingent Debts Counted Toward Chapter 13 Limitations. In deciding whether a claim is noncontingent, and therefore counted toward the debt limits, courts have generally ruled that if a debt does not come into existence until the occurrence of a future event, the debt is contingent. A claim is contingent as to liability if the debtor's legal duty to pay does not come into existence until triggered by the occurrence of a future event. Thus, a creditor's claim is not contingent when the "triggering event" occurred before the filing of the chapter 13 petition. n35 In some cases, there may be a dispute regarding whether the "triggering event" has occurred—for example, because the party whose debt the debtor guaranteed raises defenses to the principal debt. In others, the debtor may be found to be jointly and severally liable under state law, and no prior recourse to the principal debtor is required. n36

In certain circumstances, a criminal conviction may support a claim that is noncontingent and thus must be included in the section 109(e) calculations. n37 However, a criminal conviction does not allow the court to impute civil liability stemming from the same occurrence, and therefore a pending tort claim is contingent. n38 A disputed debt can be a noncontingent debt within the meaning of section 109(e),ⁿ³⁹ although it may be unliquidated, as discussed below.

Only Liquidated Debts Counted Toward Chapter 13 Limitations. A debt must also be liquidated to count toward the debt limits. Although for purposes of this section, "liquidated" is not defined, courts have generally held that a debt is liquidated if its amount is readily and precisely determinable, as where the claim is determinable by reference to an agreement or by a simple computation. For example, a tort cause of action against the debtor for personal injuries, pain and suffering would obviously be an unliquidated claim, and not counted no matter how large the potential damages. In In re Wenberg,ⁿ⁴⁰ the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that when a creditor's claim was unliquidated, but an award of attorney's fees to the creditor was readily ascertainable, the attorney's fees were liquidated but the damages were not.ⁿ⁴¹ If a judgment has already been entered in excess of the eligibility limits, the debtor is ineligible even if there remains additional litigation about punitive damages. In In re Nikoloutsos,ⁿ⁴² the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held that a debtor was ineligible to convert his case to chapter 13 because at the time of his petition there had already been a judgment for compensatory damages entered against him in excess of $600,000.

A debt is not liquidated if there is a substantial dispute regarding liability or amount.ⁿ⁴³ Although there may be issues whether a substantial dispute exists, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has held that one exists when determination of liability requires an extensive and contested evidentiary hearing involving substantial evidence.ⁿ⁴⁴ However, in the context of statutory obligations, it has been held that the fact that a debtor disputes the amount of the obligation does not necessarily make the obligation unliquidated. In United States v. Verdunn,ⁿ⁴⁵ the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit held that federal income tax deficiencies, as well as interest and penalties stated in a deficiency notice issued by the Internal Revenue Service, were liquidated debts, notwithstanding the fact that the debtor disputed them. They were readily ascertainable and calculable using fixed legal standards. In Mazzeo v. United States (In re Mazzeo),ⁿ⁴⁶ the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that the alleged "responsible person" liability of a corporate officer for withholding taxes owed by a corporation was neither contingent nor unliquidated despite the fact that the officer disputed whether he was a responsible person. The debt was not contingent because the debtor's liability on the debt did not depend on any future event, and the debt was not unliquidated because the concept of liquidation related to the amount of liability rather than whether liability existed. Similarly, in In re Knight,ⁿ⁴⁷ the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held that a readily determinable statutory penalty debt was not unliquidated even though it was disputed by the debtor.

Treatment of Secured Debts in Application of Chapter 13 Limitations. There has also been litigation to resolve the issue as to how a court should determine the amount of a secured debt for the purposes of section 109(e). Most courts, including the Courts of Appeals for the Fourth, Seventh and Eighth Circuits, have held that the valuation test of section 506(a) should be used in making a determination as to whether there is an unsecured deficiency.ⁿ⁴⁸ That test deems a debt secured only to the extent of the value of the collateral. Thus, if a debtor had a liquidated, noncontingent debt of $700,000, secured by a $300,000 property, the debtor would be ineligible for chapter 13 because the $400,000 unsecured portion of the debt would exceed the $336,900 limit for unsecured debts.ⁿ⁴⁹

The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit applied similar reasoning to debts which are secured by a lien that impairs an exemption and that is avoidable under section 522(f). In Scovis v. Henrichsen (In re Scovis),ⁿ⁵⁰ the court held that such a debt should be treated as an unsecured debt because, even though the lien was not avoided on the date of the petition, the ultimate status of the debt as unsecured is "readily ascertainable."ⁿ⁵¹ This conclusion seems incorrect, because it is not certain as of the date of the petition that the lien will be avoided. A lien is avoided under section 522(f) only if the debtor files a motion to avoid the lien. Unlike a determination under section 506(a) that a lien is undersecured, avoidance of a lien under section 522(f) can be sought only by the debtor, and a debtor could decide not to seek avoidance of the lien.

Courts have disagreed on whether a debt is deemed secured for purposes of section 109(e) if it is secured by property other than property of the debtor. n52

Method of Determining Eligibility to Be a Chapter 13 Debtor

There has been some dispute as to whether the bankruptcy court may look beyond the debtor's schedules to determine eligibility under section 109(e). The Courts of Appeals for the Sixth, Seventh and Ninth Circuits have held that, just as a court does in evaluating whether a diversity plaintiff meets the federal amount in controversy requirement under section 1332 of title 28, a court should look beyond the amounts asserted by the debtor in the schedules only if it determines that they were not filed in good faith. n53 In addition, cases have held that the petition date is the crucial reference point for determining eligibility. n54

However, when the debtor does not exercise reasonable diligence or good faith in completing and filing the schedules, the bankruptcy court may look to other evidence, including postpetition events such as proofs of claim, to determine eligibility. n55

Debts of Spouses in Application of Chapter 13 Limitations

Subsection (e) recognizes that a debtor under chapter 13 must deal with future family expenses and family income as well as preexisting family debts. It attempts to facilitate the treatment of the family as a unit to the extent possible by authorizing spouses to achieve chapter 13 debtor status jointly if the aggregate of their debts is within the applicable limits. n56 However, in some cases, adding the debts of a spouse will cause those debts to exceed the statutory limits, and the limits are not doubled in a joint case. In such cases, only one spouse may be able to file as a chapter 13 debtor. n57 Alternatively, if few of the debts are joint, each spouse may be eligible to file a separate chapter 13 case. As noted earlier, neither spouse may be a stockbroker or commodity broker.

For a complete discussion of Code section 109, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch 109 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 320 (1977).

n2

2. S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong. 2d Sess. 31 (1978). 11 U.S.C. § 109(e) was amended by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394. The amendment raised the debt limits applicable to a chapter 13 petition. See "Debt Limitations Applicable to Eligibility for Chapter 13 Relief" infra.

n3

3. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101(Matthew Bender).

n4

4. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.07 (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1304.01[3] (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. In re W.F.C. Real Estate Trust #1, 236 B.R. 90 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1999).

n8

8. See In re Foster, 19 B.R. 28 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1982).

n9

9. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 313.

n10

10. 729 F.2d 1391, 1393, 10 C.B.C.2d 754, 756 (11th Cir. 1984) (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 313).

n11

11. See In re Lapin, 302 B.R. 184 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2003) (income can include withdrawals from IRA account); In re Ristic, 27 C.B.C.2d 366, 142 B.R. 856 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1992); see also In re Ellenburg, 19 C.B.C.2d 443, 89 B.R. 258 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988) (debtor who receives $500 monthly from spouse for bookkeeping services is eligible for chapter 13 relief).

n12

12. See In re Bradley, 7 C.B.C.2d 119, 18 B.R. 105 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1982) (evidence of future income is sufficient to qualify debtor under chapter 13).

n13

13. In re Fiegi, 61 B.R. 994 (Bankr. D. Or. 1986) (farmer's projected proceeds from harvests sufficient to make annual payments were regular income).

n14

14. See In re Wilhelm, 3 C.B.C.2d 147, 6 B.R. 905 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(6); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.07 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. 725 F.2d 1080, 10 C.B.C.2d 236 (6th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 818, 105 S. Ct. 87, 83 L. Ed. 2d 34 (1985).

n17

17. Pub. L. No. 98-21 (1983).

n18

18. In fact, before the amendment, at least one appellate court had also ruled that the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code overrode those of 42 U.S.C. § 407. United States v. Devall, 704 F.2d 1513 (11th Cir. 1983).

n19

19. H.R. Rep. No. 98-25, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 82, 83 (1983).

n20

20. H.R. Rep. No. 98-25, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 302 (1983).

n21

21. E.g., In re Roach, 94 B.R. 440 (W.D. Mich. 1988), aff'g. 90 B.R. 286 (Bankr. W.D. Mich.); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 1325.09[2] (Matthew Bender).

n22

22. In re Antoine, 37 C.B.C.2d 1763, 208 B.R. 17 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1997) (oral commitment of spouse to devote salary to plan payments); In re Varian, 91 B.R. 653 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1988).

n23

23. In re Baird, 228 B.R. 324 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1999) (debtor's son was making chapter 13 payments); In re Campbell, 38 B.R. 193 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1984).

n24

24. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. Wynn, 8 C.B.C.2d 615, 29 B.R. 679 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1983).

n25

25. An employee and account executive of a stock brokerage firm is not a "stockbroker" and, therefore, may be a debtor eligible for relief under section 109(e). In re Berry, 7 C.B.C.2d 270, 22 B.R. 950 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982).

n26

26. A loan, guaranteed by a debtor, is not included in the calculation of debt for purposes of chapter 13 eligibility as long as the borrower does not default on the loan. In re Fischel, 22 C.B.C.2d 1461, 103 B.R. 44 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1989).

n27

27. In re Toronto, 30 C.B.C.2d 2019, 165 B.R. 746 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994).

n28

28. 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amounts are subject to periodic adjustment and were raised from $307,675 to $336,900 for unsecured debt and from $922,975 to $1,010,650 for secured debt, effective in cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. For cases commenced before April 1, 2004, the amounts were $290,525 and $871,550, respectively. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).

n29

29. The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 raised the debt limitation to $250,000 for unsecured debt and $750,000 for secured debt and provided for periodic adjustment of the dollar amounts.

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 104(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03 (Matthew Bender).

n31

31. See Slack v. Wilshire Ins. Co. (In re Slack), 187 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 1999) (calculation not affected by events subsequent to filing date that affect numbers); Cavaliere v. Sapir, 208 B.R. 784 (D. Conn. 1997) (debt discharged in previous chapter 7 case not counted toward debt limits); In re Horne, 277 B.R. 320 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2002) (fact that debt was reduced to judgment after petition filing date did not render it liquidated); In re Stern, 266 B.R. 322 (Bankr. D. Md. 2001) (date of original petition remains relevant point of reference when debtor seeks to convert to chapter 13); People's Bank v. Winder (In re Winder), 31 C.B.C.2d 1601, 171 B.R. 728

(Bankr. D. Conn. 1994) (the chapter 13 petition date is the reference point of both section 109(e) and a debtor's schedules).

n32

32. Ho v. Dowell (In re Ho), 274 B.R. 867 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002) (debt owed by corporation of which debtor was principal not counted).

n33

33. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.07 (Matthew Bender).

n34

34. See In re Monroe, 282 B.R. 219 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002). The rationale for the decision appears faulty, however, as there are other types of claims, such as contingent and unliquidated claims, that participate under any plan proposed yet do not count in applying the jurisdictional amount limitation. Moreover, the case does not discuss the statutory requirement of section 109(e) that the debts to be included in calculating chapter 13 eligibility are those certain noncontingent, liquidated debts that the debtor "owes." In many community property states, while the debtor's interest in community property may be utilized to satisfy a debt of the other spouse, the nondebtor spouse does not "owe" the obligation as a personal liability.

n35

35. See, e.g., In re Hatzenbuehler, 282 B.R. 828 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2002) (when bank exercised option creating liability on guarantee after petition was filed, liability was contingent on petition date); In re Robertson, 21 C.B.C.2d 825, 105 B.R. 504 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1989) (claim against debtor-guarantor is not contingent when principal defaulted before filing of petition); DeKalb Bank v. Flaherty (In re Flaherty) 4 C.B.C.2d 343, 10 B.R. 118 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1981) (same); In re Wilson, 3 C.B.C.2d 912, 9 B.R. 723 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981) (same).

n36

36. See In re Fostvedt, 823 F.2d 305 (9th Cir. 1987).

n37

37. See In re Gordon, 25 C.B.C.2d 5, 127 B.R. 574 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) (a claim for criminal restitution that is conditioned on the debtor's ability to pay is not a contingent claim because the liability has already attached, and must be counted toward the ceiling set forth in section 109(e)).

n38

38. See In re Belt, 21 C.B.C.2d 1065, 106 B.R. 553 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1989). There is also some authority for the proposition that an unliquidated tort claim is not always a contingent debt. See In re Taylor & Assocs., L.P., 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996) (court must accept allegation that unliquidated tort claim is not contingent debt for purposes of section 303(b) unless it appears to a legal certainty that petitioning creditor could not obtain judgment). However, the Taylor case relies on the principle that the allegations of a petition should be accepted unless it appears to a legal certainty they are inaccurate. In the case of a voluntary chapter 13 petition, this same principle dictates that a good faith allegation of eligibility due to contingency of a debt must be accepted. See "Method of Determining Eligibility to Be a Chapter 13 Debtor" infra.

n39

39. In re Albano, 14 C.B.C.2d 237, 55 B.R. 363 (N.D. Ill. 1985); In re Pennypacker, 24 C.B.C.2d 64, 115 B.R. 504 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990).

n40

40. 902 F.2d 768 (9th Cir. 1990) aff'g. 94 B.R. 631 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1988).

n41

41. See also Slack v. Wilshire Ins. Co. (In re Slack), 187 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 1999) (when debtor had stipulated to amount of damages, debt was liquidated even though debtor contested liability); Sylvester v. Dow Jones & Co. (In re Sylvester), 6 C.B.C.2d 586, 19 B.R. 671 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) (a debt is liquidated if the amount due can be determined with some degree of precision); In re Toronto, 30 C.B.C.2d 2019, 165 B.R. 746 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994); In re Sitarz, 28 C.B.C.2d 640, 150 B.R. 710 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1993).

n42

42. 199 F.3d 233 (5th Cir. 2000); see also Elliott v. Papatones (In re Papatones), 143 F.3d 623 (1st Cir. 1998) (judgment ordered by court before bankruptcy petition filed but not docketed until after petition filed was liquidated debt).

n43

43. See In re Lambert, 11 C.B.C.2d 693, 43 B.R. 913 (Bankr. D. Utah 1984); In re King, 4 C.B.C.2d 130, 9 B.R. 376 (Bankr. D. Or. 1981).

n44

44. In re Wenberg, 902 F.2d 768 (9th Cir. 1990); Ho v. Dowell (In re Ho), 274 B.R. 867 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002).

N45

45. 89 F.3d 799 (11th Cir. 1996).

n46

46. 131 F.3d 295, 39 C.B.C.2d 38 (2d Cir. 1997).

n47

47. 55 F.3d 231 (7th Cir. 1995).

n48

48. Ficken v. United States (In re Ficken), 2 F.3d 299, 29 C.B.C.2d 947 (8th Cir. 1993); Brown & Co. Sec. Corp. v. Balbus (In re Balbus), 933 F.2d 246, 24 C.B.C.2d 1841 (4th Cir. 1991) (also holding that, in determining whether a debtor satisfies the limit on unsecured debt under section 109(e), hypothetical costs of the sale of real property securing debt are not to be deducted from the value of the property when the debtor intends to retain the property); In re Day, 747 F.2d 405, 11 C.B.C.2d 733 (7th Cir. 1984).

n49

49. But see Cavaliere v. Sapir, 208 B.R. 784 (D. Conn. 1997) (if undersecured nonrecourse debt is bifurcated under section 506(a) no unsecured claim is created).

n50

50. 249 F.3d 975 (9th Cir. 2001).

n51

51. 249 F.3d at 984.

n52

52. Compare In re Belknap, 174 B.R. 182 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1994) (considered secured); In re Gorman, 58 B.R. 372 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1986) (considered secured), with In re Tomlinson, 116 B.R. 80 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1990) (considered unsecured). See also Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Russell, 188 B.R. 542 (E.D.N.C. 1995) (finding debt secured by assets of corporation which was wholly owned by debtors to be secured); In re Lower, 311 B.R. 888 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2004) (debt secured by assets of corporation owned by debtor not secured).

n53

53. Scovis v. Henrichsen (In re Scovis), 249 F.3d 975 (9th Cir. 2001); In re Lybrook, 951 F.2d 136, 138-39 (7th Cir. 1991); Comprehensive Accounting Corp. v. Pearson (In re Pearson), 773 F.2d 751, 756, 13 C.B.C.2d 749, 756 (6th Cir. 1985) (also holding that a claim whose amount can only be determined after a hearing must have been unliquidated when the petition was filed).

n54

54. See Scovis v. Henrichsen (In re Scovis), 249 F.3d 975 (9th Cir. 2001); People's Bank v. Winder (In re Winder), 31 C.B.C.2d 1601, 171 B.R. 728 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994) (also stating that because a debtor's schedules are subscribed under penalty of perjury, and because chapter 13 eligibility is to be determined efficiently, it is appropriate to use the debtor's schedules in determining the amount of qualifying debt for purposes of section 109(e) eligibility).

n55

55. De Jounghe v. Mender (In re De Jounghe), 334 B.R. 760 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2001).

n56

56. A debtor may not exclude a joint debt with the nondebtor spouse for which the debtor is fully liable, from the debt ceiling which determines eligibility under section 109(e). In re Marchetto, 7 C.B.C.2d 963, 24 B.R. 967 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 1982). The increased debt limits effected by Pub. L. No. 103-394, and adjusted by section 104(b) to $307,675 of unsecured debt and $922,975 of secured debt, are also applicable to joint filings.

n57

57. See In re Tabor, 232 B.R. 85 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1999) (joint case dismissed only as to debtor-husband because debtor-wife's debts alone were within eligibility limits). But see In re Monroe, 282 B.R. 219 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002) (claim against debtor's husband that was enforceable against community property of debtor filing separately counted toward debt limit even though she did not "owe" the debt, as would seem to be required by the literal language of section 109(e)).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

172 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Who May Be a Debtor under Chapter 7

2008 Emerging Issues 963

Collier on Who May Be a Debtor under Chapter 7

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code contains the provisions governing liquidation of debtors' estates. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to Chapter 7 debtors, including the type of entity that may be a debtor and the exclusions from Chapter 7 eligibility.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code contains the provisions governing liquidation of debtors' estates. The standards for determination of which types of entities may file for relief under chapter 7 are found in section 109(b). This subsection provides for a broad category of eligible persons, with a few specifically enumerated exclusions.

Type of Entity That May Be a Debtor under Chapter 7

Basically, "persons" may be debtors under chapter 7. The definition of the word "person" in section 101 provides a small measure of limitation upon the scope of the category of those eligible for liquidation, in that the definition, while including individuals, corporations and partnerships, excludes, for eligibility purposes, governmental units. (One type of governmental unit, municipalities, is specifically embraced by a separate rehabilitative segment of the Bankruptcy Code, chapter 9.) n1 Certain entities that are not included in the definition of "person," such as probate estates and most trusts, are also ineligible to file under chapter 7. n2 However, a business trust is eligible to file a chapter 7 case, since it is encompassed within the definition of "corporation" in section 101. n3

Insolvency Not Required for Chapter 7 Eligibility

It is worth noting that a chapter 7 "debtor" need not be insolvent to be eligible for chapter 7 relief. n4 Nor does the standard established for those persons who "may be" a debtor under chapter 7 contain any specific or implied requirement that persons who file for relief be heavily burdened by debts.

Various legislative attempts to set a minimum debt amount as a criterion for eligibility have been unsuccessful, such minimum requirements being seen as an unnecessary burden upon hard-pressed debtors. n5 A debtor under chapter 7 may be solvent or insolvent, and the debtor's motive is generally considered to be immaterial, n6 except that the debtor may not file a petition for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud. n7 Thus, a solvent person that prefers to have its property distributed among its creditors through chapter 7 liquidation may do so, n8 provided, of course, that the debtor is otherwise eligible. While the Code structure in no way requires a debtor to allege insolvency in its petition, or to prove it, neither does bankruptcy law make it obligatory on an insolvent person to accept the benefits of the Code. n9

Although only section 109(e), governing eligibility for chapter 13 relief, n10 limits its application to an individual "that owes debts," it seems obvious that there can be no bankruptcy without the existence of some fixed or contingent debts, and thus the omission of such an explicit requirement in no way affects the operation of the Code. A person must owe a debt or debts to have any rational use for orderly liquidation and protection of the debtor under chapter 7. n11 Of course, ownership of property--something to be liquidated--is not essential, since protection of the debtor is as much a part of chapter 7 as fair distribution to creditors. n12

Exclusions from Chapter 7 Eligibility

Exclusions from eligibility for chapter 7 relief are explicitly set forth in subsections (b) and (g), and an individual, corporation or partnership should be considered eligible unless it is within the scope of the expressly excluded categories. Subsection (b), as amended in 1994 n13 and 2005, n14 enumerates those exclusions by stating that a person may be a debtor under chapter 7 only if such person is not--

1. a railroad;

2. a domestic insurance company, bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, homestead association, a New Markets Venture Capital company as defined in section 351 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, small business investment company licensed by the Small Business Administration section 301 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, credit union, or industrial bank or similar institution that is an insured bank as defined in section 3(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (except that an uninsured State member bank, or a corporation organized under section 25A of the Federal Reserve Act, which operates, or operates as, a multilateral clearing organization pursuant to section 409 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Improvement Corporation Act of 1991 may be a debtor if a petition is filed at the direction of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System); or

3. a foreign insurance company engaged in such business in the United States, foreign bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, or credit union, that has a branch or agency in the United States.

But the excluded categories are not necessarily as simply defined as they may appear to be on the surface, and a debtor may have to look to underlying congressional intent.

The Exclusion of Small Business Investment Companies. The 1994 Act amended subsection (b)(2) to exclude small business investment companies licensed by the Small Business Association under subsection (c) or (d) of section 301 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958' from eligibility as debtors under chapter 7. n15 The Congressional Record indicates that this change was made to preclude debtors from using chapter 7 to subordinate the Small Business Administration's interests to other creditors. n16

Even before the 1994 amendment, the access of small business investment companies had been limited when alternative federal liquidation procedures had been invoked. In United States v. Royal Business Funds Corp., n17 the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that a debtor lost its absolute right to file for bankruptcy relief when it willingly entered into a stipulation that (1) provided for a receivership by the SBA, (2) limited the power of the debtor's board of directors and (3) provided for additional loans by the SBA to the debtor, all of which was subject to federal court supervision.

The Exclusion of Debtors Engaged in the Business of Insurance and Banking. There has been a legion of cases in which the principal issue was whether a certain corporation was engaged in the insurance business so as to be excluded. n18 The same may be said with respect to the exception for banks and similar institutions. n19

There appear to be no clear rules for determining whether a particular corporation falls within the two exclusions. Two available approaches to the problems have been suggested and used at times by the courts: (1) a classification based upon the law of the state of incorporation; n20 and (2) an independent classification by the bankruptcy court based upon its own definition of the words of the Bankruptcy Code. Although the first of these approaches, commonly called the "state classification test," is more favored by the courts, this does not mean that state law is followed literally without regard for the real activities of the corporation, n21 particularly when the corporation has failed to use the powers conferred on it by its charter or has developed into a different type of corporation. Nor does the fact that a state may have provided for state supervision and liquidation of a kind of corporation by itself bring such a business into the excepted class. n22

Generally, in determining whether a corporation is a bank or an insurance company, the court will first look to the state statute under which the corporation was formed. If that statute defines the corporation as one of a kind that the Code excludes, the immediate, if not final, inference should be that the corporation is not amenable to status as a debtor under chapter 7. n23 This approach was followed by the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the In re Estate of Medcare HMO, n24 in which the court stated that it should look "primarily" to state law to determine whether an entity is within an excluded category. In making its determination, a court should evaluate the degree to which the entity is regulated by state law; the more extensive the regulation, the greater the state's interest and the more likely it is that Congress intended to exclude the entity from bankruptcy relief. n25 Courts are especially likely to consider whether the state provides special machinery for the entity's liquidation. n26 Once the entity's status under state law is determined, state law should be overlooked only if there is good reason to conclude that following it will frustrate the full effectiveness of the Code. n27

Even application of the "state classification test" does not prevent a bankruptcy court from looking into the substance of both the state statute and the actual operations of the business under consideration. Hence, it has been said that an essential element of a banking corporation is the power to receive deposits, n28 but, on the other hand, the mere fact that a corporation has the power to receive deposits does not ipso facto make it a banking corporation. n29 Also, it has been held that when a corporation operates in such a manner as to be classified as a banking corporation, this will not exclude it from bankruptcy if such operations are ultra vires. n30

In this regard, it is important to recognize the reason why these exclusions are made, i.e., that the excluded entities are those types for which there commonly are provided state or other federal statutory methods of liquidation and rehabilitation. Banking institutions and insurance companies are excluded from liquidation under the bankruptcy laws because alternate provision is made for their liquidation under various regulatory laws. n31 This accounts for the addition of credit unions to the list of excluded entities. The same reasoning applies when a foreign banking or insurance company is engaged in business in the United States and, therefore, subject to the same regulatory laws.

This explains the import of paragraph (3) of section 109(b). When a foreign insurance company, bank or the like, as designated in that provision, has assets in the United States but is not engaged in business in the United States, it has no recourse to alternate liquidation provisions. Thus, it should be, and is, covered by the Bankruptcy Code, since the provisions of chapter 7 are the only ones available for liquidation of any of the company's assets in the United States.

Therefore, a foreign bank or insurance company not engaged in banking or insurance business in this country, but with assets here, may avail itself of the bankruptcy laws. n32

It is noteworthy that the exclusion of banking institutions is stated in encompassing language, covering "domestic insurance company, bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, homestead association, a New Markets Venture Capital company as defined in section 351 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, a small business investment company licensed by the Small Business Administration under section 301 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, credit union, or industrial bank or similar institution which is an insured bank as defined in section 3(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act" (as well as foreign entities of the same nature when engaged in business in the United States). Expansive language was chosen to ensure that the exception would be stated in terms current with banking laws.

The sweeping language of section 109(b)(3) was amended by the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2001, n33 which allows some banking institutions to file cases under chapter 7 or chapter 11 in certain circumstances. The amendment permits an uninsured State member bank, or a corporation organized under section 25A of the Federal Reserve Act, which operates, or operates as, a multilateral clearing organization pursuant to section 409 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Improvement Corporation Act of 1991 to be a debtor, but only if the bankruptcy petition is filed at the direction of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. This limited exception allows the Federal Reserve the option of using the bankruptcy system to liquidate these particular kinds of entities, but makes clear that otherwise such entities may not file a chapter 7 case.

These amendments were accompanied by an amendment to the definition of "financial institution" in section 101 n34 and the addition of sections 781 through 784 in a new subchapter V of chapter 7, "Clearing Bank Liquidation," to govern such liquidations. n35

Section 109(b)(3) was amended again in 2005 in conjunction with the enactment of chapter 15 governing ancillary and other cross-border cases. n36 The amendment limits the exclusion of foreign insurance companies to those engaged in business in the United States, and clarified that the exclusion of foreign banks is for those with a branch or agency, as defined in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978, in the United States. The legislative history accompanying these amendments states:

Section 802(d) amends section 109 of the Bankruptcy Code to permit recognition of foreign proceedings involving foreign insurance companies and involving foreign banks which do not have a branch or agency in the United States (as defined in 12 U.S.C. § 3101). While a foreign bank not subject to United States regulation will be eligible for chapter 15 as a consequence of the amendment to section 109, section 303 prohibits the commencement of a full involuntary case against such a foreign bank unless the bank is a debtor in a foreign proceeding. n37

For a complete discussion of Code section 109, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. As amended by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.04 (Matthew Bender).

n2

2. See In re Goerg, 844 F.2d 1562, 18 C.B.C.2d 1125 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1034, 109 S. Ct. 850, 102 L. Ed. 2d 981 (1989) (decedent's estate not a "person"); In re Wayson Trust, 8 C.B.C.2d 677, 29 B.R. 58 (Bankr. D. Md. 1982) (a testamentary trust under which the trustees operate a business may not be a debtor); In re Jarrett, 6 C.B.C.2d 496, 19 B.R. 413 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982) (the probate estate of a deceased chapter 13 debtor is not a person eligible for chapter 7 relief); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.02[1][a] (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. See Brady-Morris v. Schilling (In re Knight Trust), 303 F.3d 671 (6th Cir. 2002) (trusts created with the primary purpose of transacting business or carrying on commercial activity for the benefit of investors qualify as business trusts, while trusts designed merely to preserve the trust res for beneficiaries generally are not business trusts; the determination is fact-specific, and it is imperative that bankruptcy courts make thorough and specific findings of fact regarding what was the intention of the parties, and how the trust operated); Shawmut Bank Conn. v. First Fidelity Bank (In re Secured Equipment Trust of Eastern Airlines), 38 F.3d 86, 32 C.B.C.2d 1069 (2d Cir. 1994) (discussing attributes of a business trust); In re Affiliated Food Stores, Inc. 26 C.B.C.2d 104, 134 B.R. 215 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991) (a business trust may qualify as a corporation under the Code and, therefore, be eligible for bankruptcy relief if it meets the definition of "business trust" under applicable state law); In re Constitutional Trust #2-562, 23 C.B.C.2d 1577, 1586, 114 B.R. 627, 633 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1990) (emphasizing the need to evaluate carefully an entity alleged to be a business trust and noting that "merely calling something a duck does not make it a duck" and "[p]ouring gravy on cotton candy does not make it mashed potatoes").

n4

4. But see Connell v. Coastal Cable T.V., Inc. (In re Coastal Cable T.V., Inc.), 709 F.2d 762, 8 C.B.C.2d 1211 (1st Cir. 1983) (a person in bankruptcy, while not necessarily insolvent, must at least owe debts, and a question of the propriety of a bankruptcy case is accordingly raised when the debtor's debts are incurred through parties who allegedly do not legitimately control the debtor).

n5

5. See 1 Collier on Bankruptcy, 4.03 n.1 (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1974).

n6

6. In re Fike, 117 F.2d 667 (7th Cir. 1941).

n7

7. Zeiting v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 F. 719 (8th Cir. 1917), cert. denied, 245 U.S. 667, 38 S. Ct. 64, 62 L. Ed. 538 (1917).

n8

8. In re Harriman, 31 F. Supp. 50 (S.D.N.Y. 1939).

n9

9. Summers v. Abbott, 122 F. 36 (8th Cir. 1903).

n10

10. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.06 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. See In re Fox West Coast Theatres, 25 F. Supp. 250 (S.D. Cal. 1936), aff'd, 88 F.2d 212 (9th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 301 U.S. 710, 57 S. Ct. 944, 81 L. Ed. 1363 (1937); see also Connell v. Coastal Cable T.V., Inc. (In re Coastal Cable T.V., Inc.), 709 F.2d 762, 8 C.B.C.2d 1211 (1st Cir. 1983). The debt need not be dischargeable, however; bankruptcy confers some benefits that do not depend on a discharge. There was a division of judicial authority under bankruptcy law prior to 1978 as to whether a debtor needed to have at least one dischargeable debt, but the majority view was that it did not. 1 Collier on Bankruptcy, 4.03 (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1974).

n12

12. In re Schwaninger, 144 F. 555 (E.D. Wis. 1906).

n13

13. Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994).

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n15

15. The 2005 amendments deleted the references to "subsection (c) or (d)." Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1204(1) (2005).

n16

16. See 140 Cong. Rec. H10,796 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994), stating that "[t]his section specifies that small business investment companies are ineligible to file for bankruptcy protection. This will prevent such filings from being utilized to subordinate the interests of the Small Business Administration to other creditors."

n17

17. 724 F.2d 12 (2d Cir. 1983).

n18

18. See In re Grouphealth P'ship, Inc., 137 B.R. 593 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1992) (determination of whether a health maintenance organization (HMO) is a domestic insurance company barred from filing a petition for relief under the Bankruptcy Code is made by using the "state classification test," whereby a court looks to the applicable state law under which the HMO was formed to determine whether it is a type of corporation excluded by the Code and gives particular deference to the state's regulatory interest in the business of insurance at the outset of the section 109 analysis); see also In re Beacon Health, Inc. 21 C.B.C.2d 1108, 105 B.R. 178 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1989); Solomon v. St. Joseph's Mercy Hosp. (In re Michigan Master Health Plan, Inc.), 11 C.B.C.2d 1192, 44 B.R. 642 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1984). In Portland Metro Health, Inc. v. Driscoll (In re Portland Metro Health, Inc.), 5 C.B.C.2d 651, 15 B.R. 102 (Bankr. D. Or. 1981), the debtor was held to be an insurance company and, therefore, ineligible for relief under chapter 7.

n19

19. See Deltacorp, Inc., v. Office of Thrift Supervision (In re Deltacorp, Inc.) 22 C.B.C.2d 803, 111 B.R. 419 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990); Central Mortgage & Trust Co. v. Texas (In re Central Mortgage & Trust Co.) 13 C.B.C.2d 617, 50 B.R. 1010 (S.D. Tex. 1985).

n20

20. See In re Estate of Medcare HMO, 998 F.2d 436, 29 C.B.C.2d 255 (7th Cir. 1993) (if the law of the state in which an entity is incorporated classifies such entity as one which is excluded from relief under section 109(b)(2) or if it is substantially similar to one excluded under this section, that entity may not be a debtor).

n21

21. Cash Currency Exch. v. Shine (In re Cash Currency Exch., Inc.), 762 F.2d 542, 12 C.B.C.2d 1499 (7th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 904, 106 S. Ct. 233, 88 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1985); Central Mortgage & Trust, Inc. v. State of Texas (In re Central Mortgage & Trust, Inc.) 13 C.B.C.2d 617, 50 B.R. 1010 (S.D. Tex. 1985).

n22

22. Sims v. Fidelity Assurance Ass'n, 129 F.2d 442 (4th Cir. 1942) (a bank holding company whose main assets are five state chartered subsidiary banks who are not themselves debtors is not eligible to be a debtor under chapter 7); In re Peoples Bankshares, Ltd. 16 C.B.C.2d 124, 68 B.R. 536 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 1986).

n23

23. Kansas ex rel. Roynton v. Hayes, 62 F.2d 597 (10th Cir. 1932).

n24

24. 998 F.2d 436, 29 C.B.C.2d 255 (7th Cir. 1993).

n25

25. 998 F.2d 436, 446, 29 C.B.C.2d 255, 268.

n26

26. In re Prudence Co., Inc., 79 F.2d 77 (2d Cir. 1935), cert. denied, 296 U.S. 646, 56 S. Ct. 248, 80 L. Ed. 459 (1936); see also Oil & Gas Ins. Co. v. Illinois, 9 F.3d 771 (9th Cir. 1993) (finding debtor in state insurance company liquidation proceedings ineligible to file). But see In re Guaranteed Ins. Underwriters, Inc. 9 C.B.C.2d 593, 33 B.R. 582 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1983) (corporation engaged in the general insurance agency business, and which controls a corporate subsidiary that has received state permission to organize as a domestic insurance company, is not a domestic insurance company).

n27

27. In re Estate of Medcare HMO, 998 F.2d 436, 442, 29 C.B.C.2d 255, 263-64 (7th Cir. 1993).

n28

28. See Cash Currency Exch. v. Shine (In re Cash Currency Exch., Inc.), 762 F.2d 542, 12 C.B.C.2d 1499 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 904, 106 S. Ct. 233, 88 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1985); Gamble v. Daniel, 39 F.2d 447 (8th Cir.), appeal dismissed, 281 U.S. 705, 50 S. Ct. 464, 74 L. Ed. 1129, cert. denied, 282 U.S. 848, 51 S. Ct. 27, 75 L. Ed. 752 (1930). But see Pokela v. Gildor (In re Trade Fin. Bank), 163 B.R. 558 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1994) (merchant bank was a bank even though it could not accept deposits).

n29

29. See Clemons v. Liberty Savings & Real Estate Corp., 61 F.2d 448 (5th Cir. 1932).

n30

30. See Gamble v. Daniel, 39 F.2d 447 (8th Cir.), appeal dismissed, 281 U.S. 705, 50 S. Ct. 464, 74 L. Ed. 1129, cert. denied, 282 U.S. 848, 51 S. Ct. 27, 75 L. Ed. 752 (1930).

n31

31. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 318 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 31 (1978); see In re Affiliated Food Stores, Inc. Group Benefit Trust, 26 C.B.C.2d 104, 114, 134 B.R. 215, 222 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991) (citing First Am. Bank & Trust Co. v. George, 540 F.2d 343 (8th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1011, 97 S. Ct. 634, 50 L. Ed. 620 (1976)).

n32

32. Israel-British Bank (London), Ltd. v. FDIC, 536 F.2d 509 (2d Cir. 1976). 11 U.S.C. § 303(k) limits involuntary cases against a foreign bank not engaged in business in the United States to a case under chapter 7 and only where a foreign proceeding respecting such bank is pending. This limitation does not apply to voluntary cases commenced by a foreign bank and does not apply to any of the other entities identified in section 109(b)(3).

n33

33. Pub. L. No. 106-554 (2000). The same Act added New Markets Venture Capital companies, as defined in section 351 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, to the list of entities excluded from chapter 7.

n34

34. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n35

35. 11 U.S.C. §§ 781784; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 780, ch. 781, ch. 782, ch. 783 and ch. 784 (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 802(d)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. See generally Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1501 (Matthew Bender).

n37

37. H. R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 118-19 (2005).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

173 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Who May File an Involuntary Petition

2008 Emerging Issues 964

Collier on Who May File an Involuntary Petition

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 303(b) contains a host of requirements addressing who is eligible to file an involuntary bankruptcy case and the 2005 amendments provide some clarifications of existing provisions. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses the general requirements of Section 303(b), which entities can commence an involuntary case, the payment of costs and fees to petitioning creditors, and counsel for petitioning creditors.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code section 303(b) contains a host of requirements addressing who is eligible to file an involuntary bankruptcy case and the 2005 amendments provide some clarifications of existing provisions. n1 Despite the detail of this section, it has generated controversy, and courts have been called upon to resolve disputes over who may be a petitioning creditor and how many creditors are required to initiate the involuntary case. n2

General Requirements of Section 303(b)

Section 303(b) provides that the only entities that can commence an involuntary case are those holding claims n3 (or an indenture trustee representing the holder) that (1) are not contingent as to liability and (2) are not subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount, the latter five words being added by the 2005 amendments. There is no specific term within the Code defining the entities that file involuntary petitions, and they are not statutorily referred to in section 303(b) as creditors. n4 The term "petitioning creditors" can be used to refer to entities that are commencing the case, whether or not they are statutorily authorized to do so. Those that satisfy the requirements can be termed "qualifying creditors." n5 The aggregate of the claims of such entity or entities must be at least $13,475 of unsecured debt. n6 Section 303(b)(1) also provides that an involuntary filing must be made by three or more entities. Under section 303(b)(2), if the debtor has fewer than 12 eligible holders (not counting certain interested parties), an involuntary filing can be made by as few as one qualifying creditor. If the debtor is a partnership, fewer than all general partners can initiate an involuntary filing. If the debtor is the subject of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative may commence an involuntary case.

Petitioning Entities

To determine if the requirements of section 303(b) are met with respect to the number of petitioning creditors and the dollar amount of their claims, it is first necessary to look closely at which entities may commence an involuntary case. Only entities that are holders of claims or indenture trustees representing such a holder are permitted to file. The term "entity" is broadly defined to include a person, estate, trustee, governmental unit and the United States trustee. n7 The term "claim" also is broadly defined within the Bankruptcy Code, n8 but only the holders of claims that are not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount may be petitioning creditors. The fact that there is a joint obligee on the claim does not preclude one holder of that claim from being an eligible entity. n9

There is one noteworthy threshold question--namely, whether a debtor can defeat an involuntary petition by paying the debts owed to one or more of the petitioning creditors in the period between the filing and a decision on the merits of the involuntary petition. If permitted, the debtor would be disabling the petitioning creditors not only from holding a claim but also from contesting debtor's motion to dismiss. n10 The limited decisional law provides that "buying out" all petitioning creditors is impermissible; however, repaying one of the petitioning creditors is not per se prohibited. n11 There is an additional twist: If repaying one of the petitioning creditors results in the three-creditor requirement not being met, then other creditors are accorded an opportunity to join in the involuntary petition under section 303(c) and Rule 1003(b). n12

Contingent Claims. Normally, the term "claim" includes interests that are contingent as to liability. The limitation in section 303(b)(1) means that creditors with claims contingent as to liability cannot be petitioning creditors. Although the term "contingent" is not defined in the Bankruptcy Code, a claim that is contingent as to liability is one as to which the debtor's obligation to pay does not come into being until the happening of some future event, and that event was within the contemplation of the parties at the time their relationship originated. n13 Thus, when the duty to pay does not rest upon a future event, the claim is not contingent. n14

The standard for determining whether a claim is contingent as to liability has been articulated in a variety of ways. One detailed and useful standard has been articulated by the court in In re Taylor & Associates, L.P. n15 It adopts the standard from Longhorn 1979-II Drilling. n16 Quoting in part from Longhorn, the Taylor court stated as follows: "When all the events have occurred which allow a court to adjudicate a claim and determine whether or not payment should be made, there is no contingency concerning the claim itself" unless "it is apparent, to a legal certainty," that the petitioning creditors would be unable to obtain a judgment against the debtor upon adjudication of its claim. n17

For example, past due rental payments under a lease are not contingent as to liability. n18 Promissory notes in default or invoices from trade creditors that are overdue are not claims that are contingent as to liability. n19 An example of a claim that is contingent as to liability is that of a guarantor of payment; until it is clear that the principal obligor is unable to pay, the obligation of the guarantor remains contingent. Another example concerns a debtor who owes a sales agent commissions only if potential purchasers actually buy the goods in question. If no sales have been made as of the date the involuntary petition is filed, the debtor's obligation to the sales agent is contingent as to liability since commission payment hinges on the happening of a future event, namely a sale. n20

A claim is not contingent just because a debtor disputes the creditor's claim and asserts a counterclaim against it. n21 However, issues of counterclaims can affect other aspects of section 303(b), including whether the $13,475 aggregation requirement is satisfied and whether the claim is subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount. n22

A judgment rendered by a state court should be sufficient to demonstrate that a claim is noncontingent. n23 A creditor whose right to payment depends on obtaining an as-yet unobtained judgment raises a complex issue. If a judgment is treated as a condition of payment rather than a condition to liability, a creditor so positioned may be able to file an involuntary case. n24

In those states, such as New York, in which a judgment is considered final and is not affected by the prosecution or pendency of an appeal, the underlying obligation should not be contingent as to liability. n25 If a stay pending appeal has been obtained, however, the strength of the foregoing position is brought into question. n26 In the rare situation in which a judgment is attacked by the debtor based on the theory that the judgment was obtained through fraud or a lack of subject matter jurisdiction over the parties and the issues being litigated, the claim may be contingent as to liability.

Claims of petitioning creditors involving tort, fraud or antitrust allegations raise particular problems. In these situations, it can be argued that the claim is contingent as to liability before judgment. n27 It would become noncontingent when a judgment is entered. Alternatively, it could be argued that the claim is disputed rather than contingent since liability for tort, fraud or antitrust actions does not hinge on the happening of a future event, such as entry of a judgment; liability hinges on findings of fact and issues of law to be determined by a court, and a court determination is not the type of future event that renders a claim contingent. n28 Under this approach, a tort action accrues when the tort is committed or when the injured party acquires a right to sue. The latter is the stronger position, and is a position hinted at in In re B.D. International Discount Corp. n29 and taken by the court in In re Taylor & Associates, L.P. n30 A final approach is to consider a claim to be both contingent and disputed, a position that, in essence, adopts both approaches.

Subject of a Bona Fide Dispute. Petitioning creditors cannot hold a claim that is subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount. Prior to the addition of the words "as to liability or amount," added by the 2005 amendments, the term "bona fide" dispute had been the subject of considerable litigation. n31 The term "bona fide dispute as to liability or amount" also appears in section 303(h), and although many courts treat the terms interchangeably, they refer to different situations. n32

In the context of section 303(b), bona fide disputes disqualify specific entities from filing an involuntary petition. Under section 303(h), a debtor is subject to an involuntary filing if it is generally not paying its debts as they become due. The standard in section 303(h), however, contains an important qualification: The determination of "generally not paying" excludes debts that are subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount. n33 It is possible that the petitioning creditor (whose claim is subject to a bona fide dispute under section 303(b)) is also the creditor whose claim is excluded from the calculation of the generally-not-paying standard under section 303(h). However, satisfying the standard under section 303(h) could involve many other creditors, including in appropriate circumstances, one or more of the petitioning creditors. Thus, while the term "bona fide dispute as to liability or amount" is the same in subsections (b) and (h) of section 303, it relates to satisfying different requirements under the Code and may involve entirely different parties or a party with different types of claims. n34

As a definitional matter, the term "bona fide dispute" (before the addition of the words "as to liability or amount") had been given the same meaning by courts whether used in subsection 303(b) or (h). n35 It should be noted that some courts have not even addressed the complex issue of "bona fide dispute" if they can determine that the debtor is generally paying its debts as they became due. n36 If a court determines that the petitioning creditor's claim is the subject of a bona fide dispute under section 303(b), the court may never get to the issues under section 303(h). Alternatively, a court may focus on the issue of bona fide dispute in the context of section 303(h), in which case the issue might not need to be determined under section 303(b). Nothing in the 2005 amendments should affect the reasoning of these pre-amendment cases.

The Meaning of a Bona Fide Dispute. The meaning of the term "bona fide dispute": has been somewhat clarified by the 2005 amendments with the addition of the words "as to liability or amount." However, what actually constitutes a "bona fide dispute" remains undefined in the Bankruptcy Code, and it is uncertain, for example, whether a small dispute as to the amount due (such as under an attorney's fee clause) will disqualify an otherwise liquidated debt in its entirety. n37 The term is intended to balance the interests of debtors and creditors in involuntary cases. n38 If creditors with clearly disputed claims could initiate an involuntary filing, the filing could simply be harassing a debtor into paying the troublesome creditors. n39 Moreover, it has been suggested that Congress wanted creditors to settle disputed claims outside of bankruptcy given the severity of an involuntary bankruptcy as a remedy. n40 On the other hand, if a debtor could challenge an involuntary filing merely by alleging that a claim is disputed, especially if the dispute lacks merit, creditors' ability to commence involuntary cases would be curtailed. Cases decided prior to the addition in 1984 of the term "subject to a bona fide dispute." n41 reveal the confusion that existed and the effort to resolve the tension between the interests of debtors and creditors. n42 However, the addition of the wording in 1984 did not end the litigation, leading to the 2005 amendment, which itself might engender additional litigation.

There currently exist a series of interpretations of the term "subject to a bona fide dispute." Some courts have adopted a summary judgment standard; if there are material issues of law or fact regarding the claim, it will be considered disputed. n43 Other courts have utilized a multi-factored test which takes into account the debtor's subjective state of mind. n44 The current trend is to utilize an objective standard. This approach has been adopted by the Second, n45 Third, n46 Fifth, n47 Seventh, n48 Eighth n49 and Tenth n50 Circuits, although the actual articulation of the standard varies. The Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Sixth Circuit has also adopted the objective approach, n51 as has a district court in the First Circuit. n52 Relying on In re Lough, n53 the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held that a bona fide dispute exists "[i]f there is a genuine issue of material fact that bears upon the debtor's liability, or a meritorious contention as to the application of law to disputed facts " n54 The gloss on this definition is that if there are substantial factual or legal questions raised by the debtor, the debtor can preclude the creditor from being an eligible petitioning creditor. The Courts of Appeals for the Seventh and Tenth Circuits suggest that the court must "determine whether there is an objective basis for either a factual or legal dispute as to the validity of the debt." n55 The Second Circuit explicitly adopted the Seventh Circuit's approach. n56

The application of the objective standard has presented courts with considerable difficulty, some of which may diminish with the added language "as to liability or amount." Affirmative defenses to a creditor's claim suggest that a bona fide dispute exists, but the debtor's assertion of a counterclaim that does not go to the merits of the creditor's claim does not necessarily demonstrate a bona fide dispute. n57 Prior to the 2005 amendments, some courts took the position that a debtor's counterclaim disputing the amount of a creditor's claim, and not the legitimacy or the existence of such claim, did not make the creditor's claim the subject of a bona fide dispute. n58 It appears that this result may change as a consequence of the 2005 amendments, since a dispute as to amount is sufficient to disqualify the petitioning creditor.

All complications, though, are not resolved by the 2005 amendments. Even with the new statutory language in section 303(b), a counterclaim arising out of a different transaction (and hence not creating a right of recoupment) does not evidence the existence of a bona fide dispute. n59 However, it may be relevant in determining whether the requisite dollar amount is met under section 303(b)(1), especially with the addition of further new language in 2005 that "the noncontingent undisputed claims" must aggregate at least $13,475. n60 This added language suggests that the language "as to liability or amount" clearly must be taken into account to determine the requisite dollar amount. A counterclaim may also matter in determining whether the debtor is generally not paying its debts as they become due under section 303(h)(1). n61 The existence of litigation before the filing of an involuntary case is also not dispositive of a bona fide dispute, n62 although pending litigation between a petitioning creditor and the debtor should be examined. An unstayed judgment suggests the absence of a bona fide dispute, n63 although there is case law to the contrary. n64 A bona fide dispute can exist when a claim has not yet matured and prerequisites to payment have not yet been satisfied. n65 Even if state law holds that an agent, acting as an undisclosed principal, is personally liable for the underlying transaction, there can remain critical factual issues and difficulty determining if a bona fide dispute exists. n66 For example, just because an officer operates under a fictitious name does not mean the officer is personally liable; being merely an officer is not enough to confer liability. n67

Even a well-articulated and substantiated legal argument does not insulate the petitioning creditors from a bona fide dispute challenge by the debtor, especially in view of the added language in 2005. This is because the new language enlarges the opportunity for a debtor to argue that a bona fide dispute exists.

Burdens of Proof as to a Bona Fide Dispute. The burden is on the petitioning creditor to establish a prima facie case that there is no bona fide dispute as to both liability and amount. n68 A debtor's listing of the petitioning creditor's claim pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1003(b) is not an admission sufficient to carry petitioning creditor's burden of proof. Compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 1003 does not obviate the need for the petitioning creditor to demonstrate that its claim is neither contingent as to liability nor the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability and amount. n69 Once the creditor satisfies its burden, the burden shifts to the debtor to demonstrate that a bona fide dispute exists as to either liability or amount. n70 The debtor's subjective intent or belief as to the amount of the debt or value of services provided is insufficient proof. n71 To resolve the issue, a court may, but is not required to, address the merits of the underlying dispute. n72 The determination may well hinge on an assessment of the credibility of witnesses and other factual considerations. n73 Moreover, a debtor's whole or partial postpetition payment to a petitioning creditor may evidence that the claim is not the subject of a bona fide dispute. n74

When disputed claims are an issue, some courts have suggested balancing the interests of the debtor and the petitioning creditors. The interest of the debtor to be protected from an unwarranted bankruptcy case is balanced against the need for creditors to be protected from a debtor's wasting of assets. n75 Although the balancing approach has some appeal, the issue is better resolved by relying on the objective test.

Disputes in Whole or in Part. Before the 2005 amendments, n76 there was considerable question whether disputes as to amount alone were enough to make a petitioning creditors' claim invalid for purposes of filing an involuntary case. Prior to 2005, disputes as to the entire amount of the claim (hence liability) were enough to eliminate a creditor as a petitioning creditor. n77 That still remains true. However, there were courts that held that a counterclaim by the debtor was insufficient to create a bona fide dispute, a position that is weakened, albeit not eliminated, by the 2005 amendments. This is because, with the new language, disputes as to amount--not just liability--are sufficient to create a bona fide dispute. n78 Hence, one will now need to look at the basis for the counterclaim to assess whether it qualifies as to a dispute as to amount or is completely unrelated to the amount owed. Based on the 2005 legislation, a stronger argument can be made that partial disputes are sufficient to disqualify a petitioning creditor. Thus, the cases prior to the legislation that indicated that disputes as to a portion of the creditor's claims did not disqualify that creditor from filing an involuntary case will have less potency based on the 2005 amendments to section 303(b)(1). n79 That said, if the dispute is limited to the portion of the amount owed, the creditor is not precluded from arguing that there is some "undisputed" claim and it should be entitled to seek the protection offered by the Code through an involuntary filing--although that argument may fail.

Standards of Review. In terms of the standard of review regarding the determination of whether a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount exists, courts have had differing views. Some have viewed a determination of whether there is a bona fide dispute as a factual matter, thus leading to a review on the clearly erroneous standard. n80 Other courts have noted that a determination regarding a bona fide dispute might, in some circumstances, involve conclusions of law, in which case a de novo standard of review would apply. n81 Yet another approach is to look at a given case and then decide, based on the presented situation, which standard of review would apply. Thus, if the particular situation involved a factual question, the standard would be clearly erroneous but when the situation involved conclusions of law, the standard would be de novo. n82 The essence of this latter approach is that the determination of which type of review (factual or legal) is not made ahead of time; instead, it is made on the basis of the presented situation and then, at that point, the applicable standard of review is applied.

Requirement That Petitioning Creditors Hold a Claim. In addition to the requirement that petitioning creditors cannot hold claims contingent as to liability or claims subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount, they must also be holders of a claim. n83 The term "claim" is broadly defined. n84 A creditor holds a claim even if the claim is not due, since claims can be unmatured. n85 Being nonrecourse does not disqualify an entity from filing an involuntary case. n86 However, a nonrecourse secured creditor in a chapter 7 case cannot be the sole petitioning creditor, since there is no unsecured claim against the debtor, even if the secured creditor is undersecured. n87 If the secured creditor waived its security interest, the debt would, nevertheless, remain nonrecourse. n88 If a petitioning creditor becomes a debtor and a trustee is appointed or elected, the trustee substitutes for the creditor. Also, if a petitioning creditor holds a claim against the debtor "for which another entity is jointly liable," this claim may still serve as the basis for the petitioning creditor's claim. n89

Transferors and Transferees. A transferor or a transferee of a claim can be a petitioning creditor if there has been compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 1003(a). This rule requires that the petitioning creditor affirmatively state that the transfer was not for the purpose of commencing an involuntary case. n90 Thus, a creditor who acquired, transferred or split a claim for the purpose of commencing an involuntary case is not qualified as a petitioning creditor. n91 Determining a transferor or transferee's motivation in this context can be difficult and hotly contested. n92

Secured Creditors. The general rule is that fully n93 and partially secured creditors n94 can be petitioning creditors. With respect to a fully secured creditor, the other petitioning creditors' noncontingent, undisputed, unsecured claims must aggregate at least $13,475. Since the fully secured creditor has no unsecured claim, the unsecured indebtedness of the other petitioning creditors must at least equal $13,475. n95 Whether a creditor's claim is actually secured is not always easy to determine, and the issue is often governed by state law. n96 The use of the word "aggregate" in section 303(b) means that it is the total of the claims of the petitioning creditors that matters, not whether one particular petitioning creditor is owed a prescribed amount. Further, the use of the word "aggregate" in section 303(b) applies only to the creditors commencing the case; fully secured creditors are still entitled to be counted to determine the debtor's total number of creditors. n97 The permissibility of secured creditors serving as petitioning creditors is reinforced by the language in section 303(c) that specifically provides that only creditors "holding an unsecured claim" may join in a petition. n98 As to a partially secured creditor, the amount of its claim for purposes of being a petitioning creditor is the amount of the unsecured portion of its debt (the amount over and above the value of the collateral securing the claim). n99 A fully secured creditor (with recourse) may also serve as the sole petitioning creditor if it waives its security interest, although any such waiver is valid for all purposes in a case. n100 An oversecured or nonrecourse secured creditor may serve as one of the three petitioning creditors, provided, however, that the other two creditors hold unsecured claims that aggregate at least the amount specified in section 303(b) and are not contingent as to liability or subject to a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount. n101

Limited Partners. The ability of limited partners to file an involuntary case against the partnership is problematic. Courts are of the general view that limited partners are not creditors since they do not have a right to payment or a right to an equitable remedy as required under the definition of "claim." n102 Instead, limited partners have made a contribution to capital. n103 The characterization of a limited partner's debt is not based on the debtor's characterization; instead, the nature of the transaction should be examined. In addition to assessing whether the transaction was arm's length, courts have looked at other factors: which include: (1) whether the transaction bears the formality of a loan agreement; (2) the financial situation of the partnership; (3) when the loan was made; (4) the relationship between the limited partners' equity ownership and the parties participating in the making of the loan; and (5) whether a reasonable outside creditor would have made a loan to the debtor on similar terms. n104

However, if the limited partners are proceeding on the basis of a tort or contract action, they may well be the holders of claims and be qualified as involuntary petitioners. n105

Spouses, Children, Other Relatives. Although insiders are not counted as holders of claims for purposes of establishing the minimum number of petitioning creditors requirement in section 303(b), n106 these individuals can be petitioning creditors if they satisfy the other requirements. Former spouses and their children (either through their parent or a third party) may be petitioning creditors because their entitlement to alimony and child support, respectively, makes them entities holding claims. n107

Creditors Holding Avoidable Claims. Creditors holding avoidable claims are not counted for purposes of establishing the numerosity requirement in section 303(b). n108 But, despite some case law to the contrary, n109 creditors who received avoidable transfers can be petitioning creditors if they hold claims. n110 This prevents the debtor from paying off the petitioning creditors' claims so as to avoid the involuntary petition. n111

Stockholders, Officers, Directors and Employees. Although insiders, defined in section 101, cannot be included for purposes of the numerosity requirement, they can serve as petitioning creditors if they hold claims. If the interests the stockholders hold are equity interests, they cannot be petitioning creditors since their interests are not claims; i.e., a right to payment. n112 If the employees have unpaid wages entitled to a priority, they can still be petitioning creditors. n113 A debtor attorney's prepetition claim against the debtor can be counted for section 303(b) purposes; whether the attorney can continue to represent the debtor is another matter. n114

Indenture Trustees. Section 303(b)(1) specifically provides that indenture trustees may commence involuntary petitions although they are not actually creditors themselves. The indenture trustee may join two debenture holders as petitioning creditors, and such joinder would not extinguish the claims of the other holders. n115 Thus, the three petitioning creditors requirement under section 303(b), unless prohibited by some express language in the debenture itself, is satisfied by a combination of debenture holders and indenture trustees. n116 However, the wording of subsection 303(b)(1) and (2) suggests that if the debtor has fewer than 12 creditors, an indenture trustee cannot be a petitioning creditor. Thus, the indenture trustee can be one of the three petitioning creditors but not the sole petitioning creditor.

Claims Against Spouses in Community Property States. In community property states, entities holding claims against one spouse should not have standing to file an involuntary petition against the other spouse even though these entities will have "creditor" status in relation to the debtor upon entry of an order for relief because they hold "community claims." n117 Although it could be argued that a creditor of the other spouse holds a claim, section 303(b) states that the claim must be against the "person" as distinguished from against the "debtor." To allow creditors of one spouse to file an involuntary petition against the other spouse would complicate the distributional scheme contemplated by section 726(c)(2)(D), and would encourage involuntary filings in situations not intended by Congress. n118 It should be noted, however, that the filing of an involuntary petition creates an estate under section 541 which includes the nondebtor's interests in community property. The property of nondebtors, therefore, can be dealt with in the involuntary bankruptcy of their spouses. n119

Other Entities Including the Government, Debtors, Pension Funds and Tenants. The government, which is included within the definition of "entity," n120 can be a petitioning creditor if it holds a claim. n121 A debtor in an unrelated title 11 case can also be a petitioning creditor because it does not need authority to sue or recover an outstanding debt. However, a pension, health or welfare fund cannot be a petitioning creditor as a fund per se unless that is expressly provided for in the underlying fund documents, since only a real party can commence actions on a fund's behalf. Thus, only parties entitled to bring actions on behalf of a fund, such as the fund trustee, can be petitioning creditors. n122 Some courts have refused to allow tenants to act as petitioning creditors solely on the basis of the landlord's possession of their security deposits. This is because, under certain state laws, until default, a tenant has full ownership of its security deposit and hence there is no debt owed to the tenant by the nondefaulting landlord; arguably, there is no claim. n123

Death of Petitioning Creditor. If a petitioning creditor dies, the personal representative should be substituted pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 7025, which incorporates Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 25(a).

Payment of Costs and Fees to Petitioning Creditors

A petitioning creditor, after notice and a hearing, may be entitled to costs and expenses for filing an involuntary case under section 303. This is specifically contemplated by section 503(b)(3)(A). n124 This allowed administrative expense is referenced in the legislative history. n125 In determining the amount that the petitioner (and its professionals) may be entitled to receive, courts have determined that costs and expenses can go beyond the mere preparation and filing of the petition; they can go to the adjudication of the issue. n126 The entry of an order for relief following the filing of an involuntary petition is also not a prerequisite to petitioning creditors (and their professionals) receiving compensation. n127 However, if petitioning creditors lose litigation on the permissibility of the involuntary filing, they can be denied compensation. n128

Counsel for Petitioning Creditors

Counsel for the petitioning creditors is not automatically disqualified from representing the trustee. n129 However, when there is an objection by a creditor or the United States Trustee, "the court shall disapprove such employment if there is an actual conflict." n130 Counsel for the petitioning creditors could serve, instead, as special counsel if it is in the best interests of the estate and counsel does not hold or represent an adverse interest with respect to the matter as to which counsel is being employed. n131 If a petitioning creditor receives an administrative claim for actual and necessary costs of filing an involuntary case under section 503(b)(3)(A), counsel to the creditor can also receive an administrative claim for reasonable compensation under section 503(b)(4), a point made clear in the 2005 amendments by a specific cross-reference to subsection (b)(3)(A) in subsection (b)(4). n132

For a complete discussion of Code section 303, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 303 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1234 (2005).

n2

2. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.04.

n3

3. "Claim" is broadly defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

n4

4. They are referred to as creditors elsewhere in the Code. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 303(c), 503(b)(3)(A).

n5

5. In re Atwood, 124 B.R. 402 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 303(b). This dollar amount is effective for cases filed on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03. For cases commenced during the three-year period beginning April 1, 2004, the dollar amount was $12,300.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n8

8. Id.

n9

9. In re Brooklyn Resource Recovery, Inc., 216 B.R. 470 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1997).

n10

10. See William L. Medford, Dismissal of Involuntary Petitions--Can You Buy Your Way Out?, Am. Bankr. Inst. J., Dec. 2001.

n11

11. In re Vortex Fishing Sys., Inc., 277 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002) (holding, inter alia, that repaying one petitioning creditor is permissible); In re Faberge Restaurant of Florida, Inc., 222 B.R. 385 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1997) (holding repayment to all petitioners is inappropriate).

n12

12. In Vortex, supra, there were four petitioning creditors, so the repayment of one of them did not implicate the need to solicit other creditors, an issue that was problematic because the list of creditors was sealed.

n13

13. Subway Equip. Leasing Corp. v. Sims (In re Sims), 994 F.2d 210, 29 C.B.C.2d 443 (5th Cir. 1993). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.06[2][b]. (discussion of contingent debts in chapter 13 eligibility context).

n14

14. In re All Media Props., Inc., 2 C.B.C.2d 449, 5 B.R. 126 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1980), aff'd, 646 F.2d 193 (5th Cir. 1981).

n15

15. 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996), stay granted, vacated, remanded, 249 B.R. 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), on remand, petition dismissed, 249 B.R. 448 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.), aff'd, 249 B.R. 474 (E.D. Tenn. 1998) (grounds unrelated).

n16

16. In re Longhorn 1979-II Drilling Program, L.P., 32 B.R. 923, 927 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1983).

n17

17. 193 B.R. 465, 475.

n18

18. Subway Equip. Leasing Corp. v. Sims (In re Sims), 994 F.2d 210, 220, 29 C.B.C.2d 443, 455-56 (5th Cir. 1993).

n19

19. In re Mavellia, 149 B.R. 301, 304 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1991); In re All Media Props., Inc., 2 C.B.C.2d 449, 454-55, 5 B.R. 126, 132-33 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1980), aff'd, 646 F.2d 193 (5th Cir. 1981). Contra In re Atlas Mach. & Iron Works, Inc., 190 B.R. 796 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1995).

n20

20. In re Skye Mktg. Corp., 4 C.B.C.2d 954, 11 B.R. 891 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981).

n21

21. In re McNeil, 5 C.B.C.2d 402, 404, 13 B.R. 434, 436 (E.D. Tenn. 1981); In re North County Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 4 C.B.C.2d 1533, 13 B.R. 393 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1981); In re Skye Mktg. Corp., 4 C.B.C.2d 954, 11 B.R. 891 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981); see In re Elsub Corp., 70 B.R. 797 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1987).

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.05 (Matthew Bender).

n23

23. In re Drexler Assocs., Inc., 57 B.R. 312 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986); In re Drexler, 56 B.R. 960 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986); In re Arker, 3 C.B.C.2d 121, 6 B.R. 632 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980); see In re Pan Am Corp., 31 C.B.C.2d 903, 166 B.R. 538 (S.D.N.Y. 1994).

n24

24. In re Pan Am Corp., 31 C.B.C.2d 903, 166 B.R. 538 (S.D.N.Y. 1994); In re Bowers, 5 C.B.C.2d 1376, 16 B.R. 298 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1981).

n25

25. In re Arker, 3 C.B.C.2d 121, 125, 6 B.R. 632, 635 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n26

26. In re Raymark Indus., Inc., 99 B.R. 298 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989).

n27

27. In re Taylor & Assocs., L.P., 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996), stay granted, vacated, remanded, 249 B.R. 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), on remand, petition dismissed, 249 B.R. 448 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.), aff'd, 249 B.R. 474 (E.D. Tenn. 1998) (grounds unrelated).

n28

28. In re Dill, 13 B.R. 9 (D. Nev. 1981), aff'd, 731 F.2d 629, 10 C.B.C.2d 1119 (9th Cir. 1984).

n29

29. 5 C.B.C.2d 813, 15 B.R. 755 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1981), aff'd, 701 F.2d 1071, 8 C.B.C.2d 300 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 830, 104 S. Ct. 108, 78 L. Ed. 2d 110 (1983).

n30

30. 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996), stay granted, vacated, remanded, 249 B.R. 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), petition dismissed, 249 B.R. 448 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.), aff'd, 249 B.R. 474 (E.D. Tenn. 1998) (grounds unrelated).

n31

31. See generally Lawrence Ponoroff, Involuntary Bankruptcy and the Bona Fides of a Bona Fide Dispute, 65 Ind. L.J. 315 (1990).

n32

32. See In re Seko Inv., 156 F.3d 1005, 40 C.B.C.2d 1384 (9th Cir. 1998) (recognizing that the same term could mean different things under subsections 303(b) and (h)).

n33

33. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.14[1][c].

n34

34. See In re Seko Inv., 156 F.3d 1005, 40 C.B.C.2d 1384 (9th Cir. 1998) (petitioning creditor held a claim as an assignee and also served as the title insurer).

n35

35. Determining what constitutes a bona fide dispute under section 303(b) involves a higher standard than determining what constitutes a disputed claim for purposes of determining eligibility under section 702. See In re Williams, 277 B.R. 114 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2002).

n36

36. In re Palace Oriental Rugs, Inc., 193 B.R. 126 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1996).

n37

37. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003); In re Elsa Designs, Ltd., 155 B.R. 859 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1993).

n38

38. Comments of Sen. Baucus, 130 Cong. Rec. S7618 (daily ed. June 19, 1984), cited in In re Cates, 62 B.R. 179, 180-81 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1986).

n39

39. In re West Side Community Hosp., Inc., 112 B.R. 243 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1990).

n40

40. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003); In re Cates, 62 B.R. 179 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1986); In re Hope Communications, Inc., 59 B.R. 939 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1986).

n41

41. See Lawrence Ponoroff, Involuntary Bankruptcy and the Bona Fides of a Bona Fide Dispute, 65 Ind. L.J. 315 (1990).

n42

42. In re Covey, 650 F.2d 877, 4 C.B.C.2d 719 (7th Cir. 1981); In re Blaine Richards & Co., Inc., 16 B.R. 362 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1982); In re B.D. Int'l Discount Corp., 5 C.B.C.2d 813, 15 B.R. 755 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1981), aff'd, 701 F.2d 1071, 8 C.B.C.2d 300 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 830, 104 S. Ct. 108, 78 L. Ed. 2d 110 (1983).

n43

43. See, e.g., In re Stroop, 51 B.R. 210 (D. Colo. 1985). However, the Tenth Circuit now utilizes another standard. See Bartmann v. Maverick Tube Corp., 853 F.2d 1540, 19 C.B.C.2d 940 (10th Cir. 1988).

n44

44. See, e.g., In re Johnston Hawks, Ltd., 12 C.B.C.2d 1188, 49 B.R. 823 (Bankr. D. Haw. 1985).

n45

45. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003).

n46

46. B.D.W. Assocs., Inc. v. Busy Beaver Bldg. Ctrs., Inc., 865 F.2d 65 (3d Cir. 1989); see also In re Enviro-Hort, Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6965 (E.D. Pa. May 22, 2000); IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Sys., Inc., 179 B.R. 474 (W.D. Pa. 1995).

n47

47. Subway Equip. Leasing Corp. v. Sims (In re Sims), 994 F.2d 210, 29 C.B.C.2d 443 (5th Cir. 1993).

n48

48. In re Busick, 831 F.2d 745, 17 C.B.C.2d 788 (7th Cir. 1987).

n49

49. In re Rimell, 946 F.2d 1363 (8th Cir. 1991).

n50

50. Bartmann v. Maverick Tube Corp., 853 F.2d 1540, 19 C.B.C.2d 940 (10th Cir. 1988).

n51

51. In re Eastown Auto Co., 215 B.R. 960 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 1998).

n52

52. Efron v. Gutierrez, 226 B.R. 305 (D.P.R. 1998).

n53

53. 14 C.B.C.2d 375, 57 B.R. 993 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1986).

n54

54. B.D.W. Assocs., Inc. v. Busy Beaver Bldg. Ctrs., Inc., 865 F.2d 65, 66-67 (3d Cir. 1989).

n55

55. Bartmann v. Maverick Tube Corp., 853 F.2d 1540, 1544, 19 C.B.C.2d 940, 944-45 (10th Cir. 1988); In re Busick, 831 F.2d 745, 750, 17 C.B.C.2d 788, 794 (7th Cir. 1987).

n56

56. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003).

n57

57. IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Sys., Inc., 179 B.R. 474 (W.D. Pa. 1995); In re Elsa Designs, Ltd., 155 B.R. 859, 869 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1993).

n58

58. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003) (noting that a bona fide dispute exists where a claim for offset arises out of the same transaction and is directly related to the creditor's underlying claim, and, if valid, could serve as a complete defense to that claim).

n59

59. In re Seko Inv., 156 F.3d 1005, 40 C.B.C.2d 1384 (9th Cir. 1998).

n60

60. This dollar amount applies in cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03. For cases commenced in the three-year period beginning April 1, 2004, the dollar amount was $12,300.

n61

61. In re Seko Inv., 156 F.3d 1005, 40 C.B.C.2d 1384 (9th Cir. 1998); In re Biogenetic Technologies, Inc., 248 B.R. 852 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1999); In re Audio Visual Workshop, Inc., 211 B.R. 154, 158-59 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997).

n62

62. IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Sys., Inc., 179 B.R. 474 (W.D. Pa. 1995).

n63

63. See In re Cohn-Phillips, Ltd., 193 B.R. 757 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996); In re Raymark Indus., Inc., 99 B.R. 298 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989).

n64

64. In re Prisuta, 121 B.R. 474 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1990).

n65

65. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003).

n66

66. In re Vinales, 268 B.R. 749 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2001).

n67

67. Id.

n68

68. Liberty Tool & Mfg. v. Vortex Fishing Sys., Inc. (In re Vortex Fishing Sys., Inc.), 277 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002); In re Reid, 773 F.2d 945, 13 C.B.C.2d 781 (7th Cir. 1985).

n69

69. In re Gutfran, 210 B.R. 672, 673-74 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1998).

n70

70. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003); McGinnis v. Jenkins & Assocs., Inc. (In re McGinnis), 296 F.3d 730 (8th Cir. 2002); Subway Equip. Leasing Corp. v. Sims (In re Sims), 994 F.2d 210, 221, 29 C.B.C.2d 443, 456 (5th Cir. 1993); In re Vinales, 268 B.R. 749 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2001).

n71

71. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003).

n72

72. In re Everett, 32 C.B.C.2d 1565, 178 B.R. 132 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1994).

n73

73. In re Rimell, 946 F.2d 1363, 1364 (8th Cir. 1991).

n74

74. In re Faberge Restaurant of Florida, Inc., 222 B.R. 385, 388 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1997).

n75

75. In re Drexler, 56 B.R. 960, 971 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986).

n76

76. Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005).

n77

77. In re Fox, 162 B.R. 729 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1993).

n78

78. See, e.g., IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Sys., Inc. 179 B.R. 474 (W.D. Pa. 1995); In re Onyx Telecomm., Ltd., 60 B.R. 492, 498 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985); see also Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1234 (2005), and accompanying legislative history.

n79

79. Key Mechanical, Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003) (noting that if a claim for offset arises out of the same transaction and works as a complete defense, a bona fide dispute exists); IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Sys., Inc. 179 B.R. 474 (W.D. Pa. 1995).

n80

80. See Liberty Tool & Mfg. v. Vortex Fishing Sys., Inc. (In re Vortex Fishing Sys., Inc.), 277 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2002).

n81

81. See McCarthy v. Navistar Fin.Corp. (In re Vogel Van & Storage), 59 F.3d 9 (2d Cir. 1995).

n82

82. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003).

n83

83. 11 U.S.C. § 303(b).

n84

84. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n85

85. In re Win-Sum Sports, Inc., 5 C.B.C.2d 248, 14 B.R. 389 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1981).

n86

86. ALI Inc. v. Cold Harbor Assocs., L.P., 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 10852 (4th Cir. May 9, 1996). But see In re Allen-Main Assocs., Ltd. P'ship, 223 B.R. 59 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998).

n87

87. In re Allen-Main Assocs., Ltd. P'ship, 223 B.R. 59 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998).

n88

88. In re Allen-Main Assocs., Ltd. P'ship, 223 B.R. 59 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998).

n89

89. In re Brooklyn Resource Recovery, Inc., 216 B.R. 470, 481 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1997) (citing In re Elsub Corp., 15 C.B.C.2d 1256, 1275, 66 B.R. 172, 187 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1986)).

n90

90. In re McMeekin, 18 B.R. 177 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1982).

n91

91. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.04.

n92

92. In re Beaucrest Realty Assocs., 1 C.B.C.2d 1095, 4 B.R. 166 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1980).

n93

93. Paradise Hotel Corp. v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 842 F.2d 47, 18 C.B.C.2d 838 (3d Cir. 1988); In re Everett, 32 C.B.C.2d 1565, 178 B.R. 132 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1994).

n94

94. In re R.N. Salem Corp., 23 B.R. 452 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio), aff'd, 29 B.R. 424 (S.D. Ohio 1983).

n95

95. 11 U.S.C. § 303(b). This dollar amount is effective for cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 104(b), the amount is adjusted every three years to account for changes in the cost of living. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 104.03. For cases commenced during the three-year period beginning April 1, 2004, the dollar amount was $12,300. In the preceding three-year period, the amount was $11,625.

n96

96. In re Harman, 243 B.R. 671 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1999) (if a debtor no longer had legal title, there was nothing to which the judgment creditor's lien could attach).

n97

97. In re Evans, 1997 Bankr. LEXIS 1073, at *36 (Bankr. E.D. Va. June 6, 1997).

n98

98. 11 U.S.C. § 303(c) (emphasis added); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.09.

n99

99. 11 U.S.C. § 506.

n100

100. In re All Media Props., Inc., 2 C.B.C.2d 449, 5 B.R. 126 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1980), aff'd, 646 F.2d 193 (5th Cir. 1981); In re American Gypsum Co., 31 B.R. 187 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1983).

n101

101. Key Mechanical Inc. v. BDC 56 LLC (In re BDC 56 LLC), 330 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2003); In re Allen-Main Ltd. P'ship, 223 B.R. 59 (B.A.P. 2d Cir. 1998); In re Apache Trading Group, Inc., 210 B.R. 869, 875 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1997).

n102

102. 11 U.S.C. § 101; In re Royal Gate Assocs., Ltd., 18 C.B.C.2d 664, 81 B.R. 165 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1988); In re Equidyne Props., Inc., 60 B.R. 245 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986).

n103

103. In re Riverside-Linden Inv. Co., 85 B.R. 107 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1988), aff'd, 99 B.R. 439 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989), aff'd, 925 F.2d 320, 24 C.B.C.2d 1210 (9th Cir. 1991); In re Taylor & Assocs., L.P., 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996), stay granted, vacated, remanded 249 B.R. 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), on remand, petition dismissed, 249 B.R. 448 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.), aff'd, 249 B.R. 474 (E.D. Tenn. 1998) (grounds unrelated).

n104

104. In re Cold Harbor Assocs., L.P., 37 C.B.C.2d 753, 763-68, 204 B.R. 904, 915-19 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997).

n105

105. In re Riverside-Linden Inv. Co., 85 B.R. 107 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1988), aff'd, 99 B.R. 439 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989), aff'd, 925 F.2d 320, 24 C.B.C.2d 1210 (9th Cir. 1991); In re Taylor & Assocs., L.P., 193 B.R. 465 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1996), stay granted, vacated, remanded, 249 B.R. 431 (E.D. Tenn. 1997), on remand, petition dismissed, 249 B.R. 448 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn.), aff'd, 249 B.R. 474 (E.D. Tenn. 1998) (grounds unrelated).

n106

106. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.04.

n107

107. In re Hopkins, 177 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Me. 1995).

n108

108. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.04.

n109

109. In re Kreidler Import Co., 2 C.B.C.2d 159, 4 B.R. 256 (Bankr. D. Md. 1980).

n110

110. In re Kenval Mktg. Corp., 38 B.R. 241 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1984).

n111

111. In re Atwood, 124 B.R. 402 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

n112

112. In re Runaway II, Inc., 168 B.R. 193 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1994).

n113

113. In re United Kitchen Assocs., Inc., 33 B.R. 214 (Bankr. W.D. La. 1983).

n114

114. In re Cold Harbor Assocs., L.P., 37 C.B.C.2d 753, 760, 204 B.R. 904, 912 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997).

n115

115. In re Federated Group, Inc., 107 F.3d 730, 732-33, 37 C.B.C.2d 795, 798-99 (9th Cir. 1997).

n116

116. Id.

n117

117. In re Karber, 25 B.R. 9, 13 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1982) (Section 303(c) further prevents a holder of a claim against a nondebtor spouse from joining in an involuntary petition once filed.)

n118

118. Testimony of Professor Stefan A. Riesenfeld Before the House Judiciary Committee makes this point. Hearings on H.R. 31 & 32 Before the Subcomm. on Civil and Constitutional Rights of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 1530 (1976).

n119

119. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 541.13.

n120

120. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n121

121. In re Crabtree, 32 B.R. 837 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1983).

n122

122. In re Admiral Merchants Motor Freight, Inc., 11 B.R. 63 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1981). See generally United States v. Larkin, Hoffman Daly & Lingreen, 841 F. Supp. 899 (D. Minn. 1993).

n123

123. In re Cold Harbor Assocs., L.P., 37 C.B.C.2d 753, 760-61, 204 B.R. 904, 912-13 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1997).

n124

124. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(3)(A).

n125

125. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 355 (1977); S. Rep. No. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 66-67 (1978).

n126

126. In re On Tour, LLC, 276 B.R. 407 (Bankr. D. Md. 2002); In re Indian Motorcycle Apparel & Accessories Co., 26 BCD 377 174 B.R. 659 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994); In re Stroeker, 21 BCD 1239, 128 B.R. 205 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n127

127. In re Indian Motorcycle Apparel & Accessories Co., 26 BCD377, 174 B.R. 659 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1994); In re Stroeker, 21 BCD 1239, 128 B.R. 205 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991); In re Hanson Indus., Inc., 90 B.R. 405 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1988).

n128

128. In re Stroeker, 21 BCD. 1239, 128 B.R. 205 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n129

129. 11 U.S.C. § 327(c). See generally In re Renninger Mason Contrs., Inc., 58 B.R. 516 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) (decided under section 327(c) before that section was amended).

n130

130. 11 U.S.C. § 327(c). See generally In re Renninger Mason Contrs., Inc., 58 B.R. 516 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986).

n131

131. 11 U.S.C. § 327(e); see In re Renninger Mason Contrs., Inc., 58 B.R. 516 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986).

n132

132. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 503.11; In re Crazy Eddie, Inc., 120 B.R. 273 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1990). One court has held that a lawyer who conducts limited research on affirmative defenses to an involuntary petition filed against a debtor may not necessarily be disqualified from representing a creditor interested in purchasing that debtor's assets if no attorney-client privilege was formed with the debtor, there was no relationship between the issues, and the lawyer acquired no information related to the subsequent representation. In re Spivey Chevrolet, Inc., 204 B.R. 32, 36 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 1996).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

174 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Discharge Exception for Domestic Support Obligations

2008 Emerging Issues 965

Collier on the Discharge Exception for Domestic Support Obligations

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 523(a)(5) excepts from discharge debts for a domestic support obligation. The term domestic support obligation is a new defined term, added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to Section 523(a).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Collier on the Discharge Exception for Domestic Support Obligations

Bankruptcy Code section 523(a)(5) excepts from discharge debts for a domestic support obligation. The term "domestic support obligation" is a new defined term, added by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. n1 It is defined in section 101(14A) n2 as a debt that accrues before, on, or after the date of the order for relief in a case under this title, including interest that accrues on that debt as provided under applicable nonbankruptcy law notwithstanding any other provision of this title, that is--

(A) owed to or recoverable by--

- (i) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or such child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative; or
- (ii) a governmental unit;

(B) in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit) of such spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or such child's parent, without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated;

(C) established or subject to establishment before, on, or after the date of the order for relief in a case under this title, by reason of applicable provisions of--

- (i) a separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement;

(ii) an order of a court of record; or

(iii) a determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit; and

(D) not assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless that obligation is assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child of the debtor, or such child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative for the purpose of collecting the debt.

Use of the words "former spouse" should serve to overrule pre-Code cases holding that annulment of a marriage voided in its inception and therefore an agreement to support the debtor's wife was dischargeable in his bankruptcy. n3 A party to an annulled marriage would still be a "former spouse." Also, the language makes it absolutely clear that alimony payable after divorce is nondischargeable. The use of the term "spouse" makes it clear that alimony, maintenance and support due to a husband from a debtor-wife falls within the exception.

The meaning of the new defined term, "domestic support obligation" was explained in the legislative history of the 2005 Act:

As defined in the Act, the term includes a debt owed to or recoverable by: (1) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor, or such child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative; or (2) a governmental unit. To qualify as a domestic support obligation, the debt must be in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit), without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated. It must be established or subject to establishment before, on, or after the date of the order of relief pursuant to: (1) a separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement; (2) an order of a court of record; or (3) a determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit. It does not apply to a debt assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless it was assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent solely for the purpose of collecting the debt. n4

Before the 2005 Act, the debts excepted from discharge by section 523(a)(5) were not the defined term, "a domestic support obligation." Rather, the discharge exception was described as any debt to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor, for alimony to, maintenance for, or support of such spouse or child, in connection with a separation agreement, divorce decree or other order of a court of record, determination made in accordance with State or territorial law by a governmental unit, or property settlement agreement, but not to the extent that--

(A) such debt is assigned to another entity, voluntarily, by operation of law, or otherwise (other than debts assigned pursuant to section 408(a)(3) of the Social Security Act, or any such debt which has been assigned to the Federal Government or to a State or any political subdivision of such State); or

(B) such debt includes a liability designated as alimony, maintenance, or support, unless such liability is actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support.

The new defined term, domestic support obligation, which now governs the scope of the section 523(a)(5) exception to discharge, is more expansive than the type of debt covered under the prior version of section 523(a)(5). n5 Under prior law, to be nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5), an obligation must have arisen "in connection with a separation agreement, divorce decree or other order of a court of record, determination made in accordance with State or territorial law by a governmental unit, or property settlement agreement." n6 The new term, as defined in section 101(14A), also encompasses debts that "are subject to establishment" in a separation agreement, divorce decree, property settlement agreement, court order or other determination by a governmental unit on "or after the date of the order for relief" in a bankruptcy case. Also, the new term differs from the prior section 523(a)(5) exception to discharge in that it encompasses support debts owed or recoverable by a governmental unit without any of the qualifications previously set forth in section 523(a)(5).

The new term is broader than the type of debt included in former section 523(a)(5) in that a domestic support obligation includes a debt arising after the commencement of the bankruptcy case. n7 This more expansive aspect of the term is of no consequence under section 523(a)(5) because, even under prior law, debts arising postpetition were not dischargeable in most circumstances. n8 The more expansive term is much more significant to a debtor seeking a discharge under chapter 11 or 12. n9 The new defined term is also significant in that it is employed in several other sections of the Code which determine the rights of debtors and creditors in connection with a variety of subjects including the priority of distribution, n10 exemptions, n11 preferences, n12 dismissal of chapter 7 cases for abuse, n13 dismissal of chapter 11 cases, n14 dismissal of chapter 12 cases, n15 dismissal of chapter 13 cases, n16 and calculation of disposable income in chapter 13 cases. n17

Relationship of a "Domestic Support Obligation" to Section 523(a)(15); Dischargeability. Since its enactment, for purposes of dischargeability, the Code has drawn a distinction between an obligation that is in the nature of alimony, maintenance and support and other types obligations arising out of a marital relationship, more specifically, a debt arising in the course of a divorce or separation or in connection with a separation agreement or divorce decree. The latter type of debt is commonly referred to as a property settlement obligation. It is not always simple to distinguish whether an obligation is alimony, maintenance or support as opposed to a property settlement. Nevertheless, before the enactment of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, n18 the distinction between the two types of debts was critical in evaluating the dischargeability of a domestic relations related obligation under section 523(a).

Prior to the 2005 Act, section 523(a)(15) provided an exception to discharge for a debt:

not of the kind described in paragraph (5) that is incurred by the debtor in the course of a divorce or separation or in connection with a separation agreement, divorce decree or other order of a court of record, a determination made in accordance with State or territorial law by a governmental unit unless--

(A) the debtor does not have the ability to pay such debt from income or property of the debtor not reasonably necessary to be expended for the maintenance or support of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor and, if the debtor is engaged in a business, for the payment of expenditures necessary for the continuation, preservation, and operation of such business; or

(B) discharging such debt would result in a benefit to the debtor that outweighs the detrimental consequences to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor[.] n19

Thus, a debt in the nature of alimony, maintenance and support was nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5). A property settlement debt was subject to a dischargeability balancing test set forth in section 523(a)(15).

As part of the 2005 Act, the balancing test previously set forth in former subsections (A) and (B) of section 523(a)(15) was deleted. Section 523(a)(15) now provides unqualifiedly that a debt encompassed by section 523(a)(15) is nondischargeable. Thus, with respect to dischargeability in cases under chapters 7, 11 and 12, all of which base dischargeability on section 523(a), n20 the distinction between a domestic support obligation and other types of obligations arising out of a marital relationship is of no practical consequence. However, in chapter 13, debts encompassed by section 523(a)(5) are not dischargeable, while debts encompassed by section 523(a)(15) are dischargeable. n21 The distinction also remains significant in other contexts under the Code. n22

Broad Construction Given to Terms Alimony and Support. The terms "alimony" and "support" are given a broad construction to promote the congressional policy that favors enforcement of obligations for spousal and child support. In this respect, Congress has recognized the legitimate needs of the dependents of a bankruptcy debtor and has overridden the general bankruptcy policy in which exceptions to discharge are construed narrowly. n23 The determination whether an obligation is in the nature of alimony, support or maintenance is one of federal bankruptcy law, not state law. n24 To ensure that the underlying policy of section 523(a)(5) is given effect, a federal court's determination as to whether an obligation is "actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support" is governed neither by state law treatment of the obligation nor by the label the parties have affixed to the obligation. n25 Payments that would not be considered alimony or support under state law may be considered alimony or support for purposes of section 523(a)(5). n26 Nevertheless, although state law is not dispositive, the bankruptcy court will examine state law for guidance in making its decision. n27

Requirement That Obligation Be in Connection with or Subject to Establishment in a Separation Agreement, Divorce Decree or Court Order. To be nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5), a debt must have been established or be subject to establishment before, on or after the commencement of the case through the provisions of a separation agreement, property settlement agreement, divorce decree, other order of a court of record or a determination made in accordance with State or territorial law by a governmental unit. n28 The reference to court orders was originally added to the Code in 1984, n29 making it clear that the exception covers cases in which there was no marriage, such as support orders for children born out of wedlock. Before 1984, courts had divided on the issue whether debts for support of children born out of wedlock were dischargeable in chapter 7 cases. n30 The scope of the exception has been further expanded to include cases where a court has not yet entered an order creating an obligation in the nature of alimony or support, but such an order "is subject" to be being entered. Prior to the 2005 amendments, a mere agreement to pay for support and maintenance did not fall within the exception. n31 Nor did section 523(a)(5) except from discharge contracted for liabilities for goods purchased (even if they were necessities), n32 medical attention furnished n33 or board supplied n34 by a parent for the use and benefit of a wife and child. n35 It is likely that the expanded scope of the exception established by the 2005 amendments will apply to claims for alimony or support that have actually been filed or otherwise asserted but have not yet been determined as of the filing of the bankruptcy case. However, since, under applicable nonbankruptcy law, such claims ordinarily relate back only to the date of filing, claims which might be "subject" to a support order, but cannot be included in a support order because they predate the initiation of support proceedings should continue to be dischargeable debts.

Requirement That Debt Be to a Spouse, Former Spouse or Child or to a Governmental Unit. To be nondischargeable as a domestic support obligation under section 523(a)(5), a debt must be owed to "a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or such child's parent, legal guardian or responsible relative [or] a governmental unit." n36 The reference to the child's parent, legal guardian or responsible relative was added by the 2005 Act. n37 Under section 523(a)(5), prior to the 2005 Act, most courts held that the determination whether a particular obligation is owed to a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor was not dependent on the identity of the payee of the obligation.

An obligation may be nondischargeable support even though it is not payable directly to the spouse or child of the debtor. n38 As one court has reasoned, "the pertinent inquiry is whether payment has been ordered in recognition and fulfillment of a duty to provide for the well-being of his or her child." n39 This issue arises frequently in the context of a debtor's obligation to pay: (1) attorneys' fees incurred by a spouse or former spouse in divorce proceedings n40 and post-divorce proceedings where the award of attorneys' fees under state law is based on financial need; n41 (2) attorneys' fees incurred for a court-appointed counsel or a guardian ad litem for a debtor's child; n42 and (3) attorneys' fees awarded to the mother in a paternity action against the debtor and medical expenses (i.e., birth expenses) incurred by the mother of a child of the debtor born out of wedlock. n43

Although the courts have not been consistent, the language of the statute dictates that if the obligation is not one owed to the spouse, former spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or such child's parent, legal guardian or responsible relative, it is dischargeable under section 523(a)(5), even though it is in the nature of support. n44 A debt owed to or recoverable by a governmental unit is nondischargeable if it is in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support. However, if the support obligation is assigned involuntarily to the governmental unit by a spouse, former spouse, child of the debtor or such child's legal guardian or relative responsible for the purpose of collecting the debt, the debt is not a domestic support obligation, it does not fall within the scope of section 523(a)(5) and it is dischargeable. n45

Requirement That Debt Be in Nature of Alimony, Maintenance or Support. The term "domestic support obligation" expressly includes within its definition the requirement that the debt be "in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated." Former section 523(a)(5)(B) expressed the same principle, albeit through a convoluted, double negative. Former section 523(a)(5)(B) provided that a debt was excluded from scope of section 523(a)(5)'s nondischargeability provision if the debt was designated as alimony, maintenance, or support "unless such liability is actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support." Notwithstanding the change in the statutory text, the scope of the exception remains the same. Regardless of designation, debts which are actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support are nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5) and those debts which are not of that nature are not encompassed by the exception to discharge of that provision.

When a debt characterized as alimony, maintenance or support is in dispute, the court should hold an evidentiary hearing to determine whether the debt is actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support within the meaning of section 523(a)(5). If a debt is determined to be in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support, it is nondischargeable and the bankruptcy court has no power to balance the need of the recipient spouse against the need of the debtor for a fresh start. n46 The critical issue is whether the parties intended the obligation to provide support to the debtor's spouse, former spouse or child. The question whether a debt is in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support often arises in cases also raising the issue whether the debt is owed to a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor. n47 Regardless how these issues are framed, the proper inquiry is whether the payment obligation derived from a duty to provide for the well-being of the spouse, former spouse or child. When that is the case, courts have not hesitated to find that the obligation is nondischargeable. For example, in Strickland v. Shannon (In re Strickland), n48 the court held that an award of attorneys' fees granted in favor of the debtor's former spouse and against the debtor, which arose from the debtor's unsuccessful attempt to modify the child custody and support provisions of a divorce judgment and was based upon a state statute authorizing the award on the basis of the relative need and ability to pay of the parties, was in the nature of support and thus nondischargeable under section 523(a)(5). If a debt is found dischargeable under section 523(a)(5), it may nonetheless be nondischargeable if it is a property settlement obligation covered by the discharge exception in section 523(a)(15), added by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, n49 as modified by the 2005 amendments. n50

Factors Considered in Distinguishing Alimony, Maintenance and Support Claims from Property Settlement Claims. The issue whether a particular debt is a nondischargeable alimony, maintenance or support claim is one of federal bankruptcy law. n51 However, it is not always easy to distinguish domestic support obligations, covered by section 523(a)(5), from property settlement claims, which are not covered by section 523(a)(5). Particularly when the debt arises from a negotiated separation agreement, the parties often focused on the state law implications of their agreement, not how the obligation would be characterized in a bankruptcy case. Thus, the bankruptcy court's retrospective inquiry is into the intentions of the parties with respect to an issue that they may not have fully considered.

When the obligation arises from a state court order, the order has been based on state statutes or doctrines that may or may not be helpful in characterizing the nature of the obligation for purposes of section 523(a)(5). State law generally recognizes that the issues of property division and support are inextricably intertwined. State law governing support and division of property takes into account comparable factors--primarily the financial resources and needs of the parties. Similarly, separation agreements often treat support and property division as somewhat interchangeable. A spouse who receives more property may need less support. An obligation denominated as a property settlement may be essential to the support of the recipient of the property. Conversely, an obligation denominated as alimony may be a substitute for property that the obligee would otherwise have received. These trade-offs are often made by the parties with a view toward tax or business consequences.

The main principle guiding bankruptcy courts in determining whether a debt is nondischargeable alimony, maintenance or support is the intent of the parties or the state court in creating the obligation and the purpose of the obligation in light of the parties' circumstances at that time. n52 If the intent is not explicitly expressed, the bankruptcy court must attempt to infer the intent by examining the underlying facts of the case. To assist in this difficult inquiry, the courts have developed a series of factors that may be considered in distinguishing alimony, maintenance or support obligations from property division obligations. n53

Labels in Agreement or Order. It is well established that the bankruptcy court is not bound by the labels given to a debt in the parties' agreement or in the order creating the debt. n54 The bankruptcy court must look behind the label and determine the true nature of the obligation. Even so, the label given to an obligation may well be an accurate indication of the parties' intent and deference to that characterization may be given by the bankruptcy court. n55 Similarly, when a state court enters an order after articulating the factors it considers, the label attached to the obligation by the court is entitled to great weight. n56 Because extraneous factors, such as business or tax considerations, are less likely to affect court orders, more weight is generally given to the labeling of an obligation in a court order as opposed to the labels in an agreement. In cases involving marital agreements, the bankruptcy court will consider the labels in the agreement, but other factors are also given weight in the ultimate determination under section 523(a)(5). The amount of deference given by the bankruptcy court to the labels in an agreement will often depend on the detail, precision and structure of the entire agreement. Thus, the bankruptcy court may defer to the language of an agreement that contains a consistent and clear designation of different types of payment obligations. n57 On the other hand, an agreement that contains a waiver of alimony but that also creates an obligation to make payments to help provide the other spouse with housing may be construed as only a limited waiver of alimony for purposes of section 523(a)(5). n58

Income and Needs of the Parties at the Time the Obligation Became Fixed. Perhaps the most important factor considered by the bankruptcy courts in evaluating the intentions of the parties is their financial situation when they entered into their agreement or when the state court entered its order fixing the obligation. n59 If the obligee spouse or former spouse would have had difficulty in providing for himself or herself and the parties' children, it is likely that the obligation will be determined to be in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support and therefore nondischargeable, regardless of how the obligation is labeled. n60 In In re Calhoun, n61 the Sixth Circuit stated that the inquiry must focus on whether the purpose and effect of the obligation at the time it was created was to provide for the daily needs of the former spouse and any children. The court also held that an additional consideration is the current abilities and needs of the parties. n62 However, virtually all other courts have held that the current financial posture of the parties is not relevant. n63

Amount and Outcome of Property Division. A factor closely related to the parties' relative financial needs is an analysis of the property divided at the time of the divorce. As stated earlier, the fact that a spouse received or did not receive a substantial amount of marital property can affect the need for ongoing support. In addition, when a payment obligation is directly linked to the sale of identifiable property, the obligation is more likely to be determined to have arisen from property division and therefore, to be dischargeable as far as section 523(a)(5) is concerned. However, the source of the payment obligation does not conclusively determine the nature of the obligation, and if the payment is necessary for the support of the obligee, the bankruptcy court may determine the debt to be nondischargeable. n64

Whether the Obligation Terminates on Obligee's Death or Remarriage or on Emancipation of Children. An obligation that terminates on the death or remarriage of the obligee or the emancipation of the parties' children is likely to have been intended for support. n65 However, the absence of termination provisions does not dictate the conclusion that the debt is a property settlement obligation. n66

Number and Frequency of Payments. An obligation due to be paid in a lump sum or in a limited number of payments over a short period of time is more likely to be considered a property settlement rather than for support. On the other hand, a long-term obligation to make regular monthly payments is more characteristic of support. By itself, this factor may be of limited use in the inquiry, particularly as the number of installments increases. Since an award of alimony may be made for a limited duration, the mere fact that there are a limited number of installment payments due cannot be dispositive. n67 Conversely, tax considerations may lead parties to spread out the payment of a property settlement obligation. n68 Most commonly, this factor will be considered in conjunction with other, more significant factors. n69

Waiver of Alimony or Support Rights in Agreement. Provisions in marital agreements for the waiver of alimony or support may be considered by the bankruptcy court in determining whether an obligation is in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support. n70 However, this factor is of limited utility. If an agreement provides for payments to the nondebtor spouse designated as a property division but lacks other meaningful provisions for support, the obligation is nonetheless likely to be characterized as nondischargeable support. n71

Availability of State Court Procedures to Modify the Obligation or Enforce it Through Contempt Remedy. If an obligation is judicially modifiable or enforceable by contempt-of-court remedies, it is more likely to be determined to be in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support. However, this factor must be considered in connection with the other factors discussed above. The fact that an obligation is not modifiable may be due to the parties' agreement itself and, therefore, does not bear on the issue whether the obligation was intended to support the nondebtor spouse. Other indicia may require that a nonmodifiable obligation be determined to be nondischargeable support. n72

Tax Treatment of Obligation. In applying section 523(a)(5) of the Bankruptcy Code, some courts have considered the tax treatment given to marital obligations under the Internal Revenue Code, since both Codes attempt to distinguish obligations in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support from property division obligations. The interests of the debtor are at cross-purposes under the two statutes. Thus, when a debtor treated his payments as a nondeductible expense, one court held that the obligation was dischargeable since it was unlikely the debtor would have foregone the favorable tax treatment had the parties intended the obligation to be support. n73 A debtor who attempted to qualify payments as deductible alimony or support for purposes of federal income tax treatment may be unable to successfully assert that the obligation is not alimony, maintenance or support for purposes of section 523(a)(5). Some courts have even held that a debtor is estopped from doing so. n74 The Bankruptcy Code and the Internal Revenue Code have different purposes; tax treatment by itself should not be dispositive of dischargeability under section 523(a)(5). n75 As with other factors, courts can and should look to the tax treatment given to the obligation in conjunction with the other factors discussed above.

Distinguishing Interests in Property from Dischargeable Debts; Pensions. In many cases, debtors file their bankruptcy petitions while divorce proceedings containing equitable distribution claims are pending or after an agreement or state court order has equitably distributed an asset titled in the debtor's name. Frequently, the asset involved is the debtor's interest in a pension. In such cases, the bankruptcy court must decide the fundamental question whether the debtor's obligations to the spouse or former spouse are no more than a right to payment, n76 and, therefore, potentially dischargeable as a debt under the Code, or whether the nondebtor former spouse has obtained a property interest in the asset itself. If the spouse obtained an ownership interest in the asset, no debt exists which may be discharged, and the spouse's rights will be unimpaired by the bankruptcy filing unless there is some basis for avoiding the transfer of the property interest to the spouse. In making the inquiry into the nature of the obligation, the bankruptcy court will necessarily examine state law. In many jurisdictions, the spouse will have obtained a separate ownership interest in the pension. n77 The spouse's ownership interest may attach even if the equitable distribution proceedings have not been completed prior to the bankruptcy filing. n78 Some cases also refer to the state court proceedings as creating a constructive trust in which the debtor is the trustee with bare legal title and the spouse is the beneficiary whose beneficial interest in the asset is not part of the bankruptcy estate pursuant to section 541(d) of the Code. n79 If the court's conclusion is that the spouse does not have a property interest in the asset, the court must analyze whether the obligation is dischargeable based on the relevant factors under section 523(a)(5). n80

Status of Assigned Debts under Section 523(a)(5). A debt for alimony, maintenance, or support, although otherwise within the terms of the definition of domestic support obligation in section 101(14A), is excluded from the statutory definition and is therefore dischargeable under section 523(a)(5), if it has been assigned to a nongovernmental entity. However, if the debt was assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent solely for the purpose of collection, the debt is a domestic support obligation and is not discharged pursuant to section 523(a)(5). n81 However, a debt does not become nondischargeable simply by virtue of a state court order directing the obligor to make payment directly to a third party. n82 Prior to the 2005 Act, section 523(a)(5) provided that debts assigned pursuant to section 408(a)(3) n83 of the Social Security Act n84 or any debt assigned to the federal government or to a state or a political subdivision of a state were not within the class of debts dischargeable based on their status as assigned debts. The nondischargeability of a debt in the nature of alimony or support which has been assigned to a governmental unit has been maintained in the definition of domestic support obligation in section 101(14A) and the incorporation of that term into the section 523(a)(5) discharge exception. n85

For a complete discussion of Code section 523, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 211(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.14A.

n3 In re Collis, 184 Misc. 717, 53 N.Y.S.2d 316 (1945); see also Norris v. Norris, 324 F.2d 826 (9th Cir. 1963).

n4 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 59 (2005), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 10(b).

n5 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (2005), reprinted in in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 10(b).

n6 Former 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5) (2004), amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 215(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n7 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 16 (2005), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 10(b).

n8 Except for those debts arising postpetition which are treated as if they arose prepetition when chapter 11, 12 or 13 cases are converted to chapter 7, see 11 U.S.C. § 348(d), the chapter 7 discharge applies to debts that arose before the commencement of the bankruptcy case. See 11 U.S.C. § 727(b).

n9 See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 1112(p), 1129(a)(14), 1208(c)(10), 1225(a)(7), 1228(a), 1307(c)(11), 1325(a)(10), 1328(a).

n10 11 U.S.C. § 507(A)(1).

n11 11 U.S.C. § 522(c)(1) (referring to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5)).

n12 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(7).

n13 11 U.S.C. § 707(c)(3).

n14 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(4)(P).

n15 11 U.S.C. § 1208(c)(10).

n16 11 U.S.C. § 1307(c)(11).

n17 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(2)(A)(ii).

n18 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005).

n19 Former section 523(a)(15) was added to the Code in 1994 by Pub L. No. 103-394, § 304(e), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 9(a). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.21.

n20 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.02.

n21 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a).

n22 See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 507(a)(1), 547(c)(7), 707(c)(3), 1112(p), 1129(a)(14), 1208(c)(10), 1225(a)(7), 1228(a), 1307(b)(11), 1325(a)(8), 1325(b)(2), 1328(a).

n23 See In re Jones, 9 F.3d 878 (10th Cir. 1993); In re Stacey, 164 B.R. 210 (Bankr. D.N.H. 1994); In re Peters, 133 B.R. 291 (S.D.N.Y. 1991), aff'd, 964 F.2d 166 (2d Cir. 1992); In re Booch, 95 B.R. 852 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988); see also Mullally v. Carter, 67 B.R. 535, 538 (N.D. Ill. 1986) (discussing historic policy against bankruptcy discharge of family financial obligations).

n24 See H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 363 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 77-79

(1978).

n25 In re Young, 35 F.3d 499 (10th Cir. 1994); In re Fitzgerald, 9 F.3d 517, 30 C.B.C.2d 185 (6th Cir. 1993); In re Sampson, 997 F.2d 717, 29 C.B.C.2d 198 (10th Cir. 1993). Section 523(a)(5) is intended to overrule cases such as In re Waller, 494 F.2d 447 (6th Cir. 1974), which assumed that the law of the state in which the bankruptcy court sits is controlling on the question of whether a debt qualifies as alimony, maintenance or support so as to be nondischargeable.

n26 In re Biggs, 907 F.2d 503 (5th Cir. 1990); In re Harrell, 754 F.2d 902, 12 C.B.C.2d 340 (11th Cir. 1985); Shaver v. Shaver, 736 F.2d 1314 (9th Cir. 1984); Melichar v. Ost, 661 F.2d 300 (4th Cir. 1981).

n27 Forsdick v. Turgeon, 812 F.2d 801, 16 C.B.C.2d 452 (2d Cir. 1987); In re Spong, 661 F.2d 6, 5 C.B.C.2d 242 (2d Cir. 1981).

n28 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A)(C).

n29 Pub. L. No. 98-353 (1984), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 6(a); see also 130 Cong. Rec. S 6094 (daily ed. May 21, 1984) (remarks of Sen. Exon).

n30 Compare Shine v. Shine, 802 F.2d 583 (1st Cir. 1986) with Lake County Dep't of Public Welfare v. Marino (In re Marino), 29 B.R. 797 (N.D. Ind. 1983); In re Fenstermacher, 8 C.B.C.2d 1294, 31 B.R. 77 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1983).

n31 Leib v. Auerbach, 10 N.J. Super. 391, 76 A.2d 726 (Co. Ct. N.J. 1950); Wintrobe v. Connors, 67 Ohio App. 106, 35 N.E.2d 1018 (1941); Schwoll v. Meeks, 76 Ohio App. 231, 63 N.E.2d 831 (1944).

n32 Schellenberg v. Mullaney, 112 A.D. 384, 98 N.Y.S. 432 (1906).

n33 In re Meyers, 12 F.2d 938 (W.D.N.Y. 1926). But see In re Livengood, 157 B.R. 678 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1993); In re Beattie, 28 C.B.C.2d 849, 150 B.R. 699 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1993).

n34 In re Lo Grasso, 23 F. Supp. 340 (W.D.N.Y. 1938); Leman v. Locke, 240 Mass. 551, 134 N.E. 343 (1922).

n35 Wintrobe v. Connors, 67 Ohio App. 106, 35 N.E.2d 1018 (1941). But see In re Ozey, 166 B.R. 169 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1994) (contract to pay children's college expenses nondischargeable).

n36 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A)(A)(i)(ii).

n37 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 211(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n38 In re Tremblay, 162 B.R. 60 (Bankr. D. Me. 1993); Monsanto Industrial Chemicals, Inc. v. Harris, 161 B.R. 385 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1993); In re Glynn, 138 B.R. 360 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1992).

n39 Cain v. Isenhower (In re Cain), 29 B.R. 591, 596, quoting Deeb v. Morris (In re Morris), 5 C.B.C.2d 371, 374, 14 B.R. 217, 219 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1981).

n40 In re Spong, 661 F.2d 6, 5 C.B.C.2d 242 (2d Cir. 1981). But see In re Garcia, 32 C.B.C.2d 1, 174 B.R. 529 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1994).

n41 Strickland v. Shannon (In re Strickland), 90 F.3d 444 (11th Cir. 1996); Joseph v. O'Toole (In re Joseph), 16 F.3d 86 (5th Cir. 1995); In re Jones, 9 F.3d 878, 30 C.B.C.2d 206 (10th Cir. 1993); In re Catlow, 663 F.2d 960 (9th Cir. 1981).

n42 In re Miller, 55 F.3d 1487, 33 C.B.C.2d 1044 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 916, 116 S. Ct. 305, 133 L. Ed. 2d 210 (1995); In re Peters, 964 F.2d 166 (2d Cir. 1992), aff'g 133 B.R. 291 (S.D.N.Y. 1991).

n43 Hudson v. Raggio & Raggio, Inc. (In re Hudson), 107 F.3d 355, 37 C.B.C.2d 1109 (5th Cir. 1997); In re Seibert, 914 F.2d 102, 23 C.B.C.2d 1157 (7th Cir. 1990); Smith v. Barbre (In re Barbre), 91 B.R. 846 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1988); In re Booch, 95 B.R. 852 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

n44 In re Visness, 57 F.3d 775 (9th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1099, 116 S. Ct. 828, 133 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1996); In re Erfourth, 126 B.R. 736 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1991) (cost of placing child in group home dischargeable); In re Lutz, 128 B.R. 244 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1991) (debt owed to debtor's sister for support of debtor's child dischargeable). See generally, Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 6.03[3] (Matthew Bender).

n45 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A)(D).

n46 Vickers v. Vickers (In re Vickers), 7 C.B.C.2d 849, 853, 24 B.R. 112, 116 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1982).

n47 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.11[4].

n48 90 F.3d 444, 36 C.B.C.2d 718 (11th Cir. 1996).

n49 Pub. L. No. 103-394 (enacted on October 22, 1994), at § 304(e), reprinted in App. Pt. 9(a) infra, adding 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15), effective on the date of enactment, and not applicable to pending cases.

n50 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 215(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n51 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.11[1].

n52 Friedkin v. Sternberg (In re Sternberg), 85 F.3d 1400 (9th Cir. 1996); Yeates v. Yeates (In re Yeates), 807 F.2d 874 (10th Cir. 1986); Shaver v. Shaver, 736 F.2d 1314 (9th Cir. 1984).

n53 In re Fitzgerald, 9 F.3d 517, 30 C.B.C.2d 185 (6th Cir. 1993); Davidson v. Davidson (In re Davidson), 947 F.2d 1294, 25 C.B.C.2d 1501 (5th Cir. 1991); Gianakas v. Gianakas (In re Gianakas), 917 F.2d 759, 23 C.B.C.2d 1510 (3d Cir. 1990). For extensive discussion of the case law pertaining to obligations in the nature of alimony, maintenance or support under section 523(a)(5), see generally, Sommer & McGarity, Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 6.04-6.06 (Matthew Bender).

n54 Sylvester v. Sylvester, 865 F.2d 1164 (10th Cir. 1989); Goin v. Rives (In re Goin), 808 F.2d 1391 (10th Cir. 1987); Benich v. Benich (In re Benich), 811 F.2d 943 (5th Cir. 1987); Forsdick v. Turgeon, 812 F.2d 801, 16 C.B.C.2d 452 (2d Cir. 1987).

n55 Catron v. Catron (In re Catron), 164 B.R. 912 (E.D. Va. 1994).

n56 Forsdick v. Turgeon, 812 F.2d 801, 16 C.B.C.2d 452 (2d Cir. 1987); Long v. West (In re Long), 794 F.2d 928 (4th Cir. 1986).

n57 Sampson v. Sampson (In re Sampson), 997 F.2d 717 (10th Cir. 1993); Tilley v. Jessee, 789 F.2d 1074, 14 C.B.C.2d 1376 (4th Cir. 1986).

n58 Carrigg v. Carrigg (In re Carrigg), 5 C.B.C.2d 446, 14 B.R. 658 (Bankr. D.S.C. 1981).

n59 Dennis v. Dennis (In re Dennis), 25 F.3d 274, 31 C.B.C.2d 713 (5th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1081, 115 S. Ct. 732, 130 L. Ed. 2d 636 (1995).

n60 See Yeates v. Yeates (In re Yeates), 807 F.2d 874 (10th Cir. 1986); Shaver v. Shaver, 736 F.2d 1314 (9th Cir. 1984).

n61 715 F.2d 1103, 9 C.B.C.2d 290 (6th Cir. 1983).

n62 But see In re Fitzgerald, 9 F.3d 517 (6th Cir. 1993) (limiting Calhoun holding to obligations not designated as alimony or support).

n63 E.g., Draper v. Draper, 790 F.2d 52 (8th Cir. 1986); In re Harrell, 754 F.2d 902, 12 C.B.C.2d 340 (11th Cir. 1985).

n64 Buccino v. Buccino, 397 Pa. Super. 241, 580 A.2d 13 (Pa. Super. 1990); Goin v. Rives (In re Goin), 808 F.2d 1391 (10th Cir. 1987); Zaera v. Raff (In re Raff), 93 B.R. 41 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1988).

n65 Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald (In re Fitzgerald), 9 F.3d 517, 30 C.B.C.2d 185 (6th Cir. 1993); Sylvester v. Sylvester, 865 F.2d 1164 (10th Cir. 1989); see also In re Morel, 983 F.2d 104 (8th Cir. 1992).

n66 Sampson v. Sampson (In re Sampson), 997 F.2d 717 (10th Cir. 1993); Singer v. Singer (In re Singer), 787 F.2d 1033, 14 C.B.C.2d 1386 (6th Cir. 1986).

n67 See Forsdick v. Turgeon, 812 F.2d 801, 16 C.B.C.2d 452 (2d Cir. 1987).

n68 See Messnick v. Messnick (In re Messnick), 104 B.R. 89 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 1989).

n69 Pattie v. Pattie (In re Pattie), 112 B.R. 437 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990). See generally Brody v. Brody (In re Brody), 3 F.3d 35 (2d Cir. 1993).

n70 Beiler v. Beiler, 80 B.R. 63 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1987); Wadleigh v. Wadleigh (In re Wadleigh), 68 B.R. 499 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1986).

n71 Sylvester v. Sylvester, 865 F.2d 1164 (10th Cir. 1989).

n72 In re Albin, 591 F.2d 94 (9th Cir. 1979).

n73 Tilley v. Jessee, 789 F.2d 1074, 14 C.B.C.2d 1376 (4th Cir. 1986); see also Beiler v. Beiler, 80 B.R. 63 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1987).

n74 Robb-Fulton v. Robb (In re Robb), 23 F.3d 895, 30 C.B.C.2d 2061 (4th Cir. 1994); In re Davidson, 947 F.2d 1294, 25 C.B.C.2d 1501 (5th Cir. 1991).

n75 Friedkin v. Sternberg (In re Sternberg), 85 F.3d 1400 (9th Cir. 1996), citing Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code, 6.04[10] (Matthew Bender 1996).

n76 11 U.S.C. § 101(12); 11 U.S.C. § 101(5).

n77 In re Chandler, 805 F.2d 555 (5th Cir. 1986); In re Teichman, 774 F.2d 1395, 13 C.B.C.2d 1077 (9th Cir. 1985).

n78 In re Bennett, 175 B.R. 181 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1994).

n79 11 U.S.C. § 541(d). See McCafferty v. McCafferty (In re McCafferty), 96 F.3d 192, 36 C.B.C.2d 1074 (6th Cir. 1996); Bush v. Taylor, 912 F.2d 989, 23 C.B.C.2d 1294 (8th Cir. 1990).

n80 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.11[6].

n81 See H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 59 (2005), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App.

Pt. 10(b).

n82 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.11[4].

n83 The cross-reference to the Social Security Act was changed from section 402(a)(26) to section 408(a)(3) by the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-193.

n84 Section 2334(b) of title XXIII of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, Pub. L. No. 97-35, approved August 13, 1981.

n85 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 59 (2005), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 10(b).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

175 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Discharge Exception for Educational Loans

2008 Emerging Issues 966

Collier on the Discharge Exception for Educational Loans

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to the discharge exception for educational loans in Section 523(a)(8), including discharge based on undue hardship, partial discharge, timing of the filing of a dischargeability complaint in Chapter 13 cases, postpetition interest on nondischargeable student loans in Chapter 13 cases, and Health Education Loans.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code section 523(a)(8) restricts the dischargeability of educational benefits or loans which were insured or guaranteed by a governmental unit or under any program funded by a governmental unit or nonprofit institution. In addition, as a result of the 2005 Act, the discharge of any education loan that is qualified for a tax deduction is similarly restricted. n1 The 2005 Act extended the nondischargeability of educational loan to some loans that are not insured or guaranteed by a governmental unit or under a program funded by a governmental unit or nonprofit institution. Typically, the participants in government insured or guaranteed educational loan programs (whether lenders or guarantors) grant credit to persons who might not qualify for credit under traditional credit standards, in order to foster the government's policy of promoting access to educational opportunities. n2

In delineating the boundaries of section 523(a)(8), courts have focused on two purposes of this exception to discharge:

preventing abuses of the educational loan system by restricting the ability to discharge a student loan shortly after a student's graduation, and safeguarding the financial integrity of governmental entities and nonprofit institutions that participate in educational loan programs. n3

Based on these purposes, some courts have held that the liability of a non-student co-obligor of a guaranteed education loan (such as the student's parent) is not dischargeable under section 523(a)(8). n4 A loan made by a debtor's employer for the express purpose of repaying the debtor's educational debt is not itself a nondischargeable educational loan. n5

To fall within the discharge exception, an obligation must meet the literal criteria of section 523(a)(8) and be either an "overpayment of an educational benefit" or a "loan." To constitute a "loan," the creditor must have actually transferred funds to the debtor or the parties must have entered into an agreement for the extension of credit. Thus, the mere fact that the school has permitted a student to attend classes despite the student's unilateral decision not to timely pay the tuition does not transform the student's obligation to pay the tuition into a loan subject to the section 523(a)(8) discharge exception. Courts will treat the debt as a loan only if there is a formal, express agreement between the student and the school, such as a written loan agreement or a promissory note. n6

Discharge Based on Undue Hardship. Section 523(a)(8) is the "hardship" provision, which allows the court to discharge an otherwise nondischargeable student loan if excepting the debt from discharge will impose an undue hardship on the debtor or the debtor's dependents. This exemption from the exception to discharge requires the bankruptcy judge to exercise discretion in determining whether payment of the debt will cause undue hardship on the debtor and his dependents, thus defeating the "fresh start" concept of the bankruptcy laws. There may well be circumstances that justify failure to repay a student loan, such as illness or incapacity. When the court finds that such circumstances exist, it may order the debt discharged. The Supreme Court has stated that section 523(a)(8) is "self-executing" and that "[u]nless the debtor affirmatively secures a hardship determination, the discharge order will not include a student loan debt." n7 In other words, student loan debt remains due until there is a determination that the loan is dischargeable. n8 There has been a wide range of judicial reaction to the undue hardship claims of debtors. The most widely used test for evaluating the dischargeability of a student loan under section 523(a)(8) states that the debt is dischargeable if three conditions are met:

- the debtor cannot maintain, based on current income and expenses, a "minimal" standard of living if forced to repay the loans;
- there are indications that the state of affairs is likely to persist for a significant portion of the repayment period; and
- the debtor made good faith efforts to repay the loans. n9

In the first inquiry, the court will consider the debtor's income, living expenses and standard of living. A debtor is not expected to live in "abject poverty" in order to repay a student loan. n10 Accordingly, the federal poverty level is too strict a standard for measuring whether the debtor's standard of living is at a minimal level and should not be employed for that purpose. Nor is it appropriate for the court to go through a debtor's budget dollar-for-dollar in order to find every possible way to create or increase a surplus if the overall expense level and living standard remains minimal. n11 Rather, the court should examine the debtor's income and expenses in a manner that is sensitive to the particular circumstances of the case, taking into account the debtor's needs for care, including food, shelter, clothing, transportation medical treatment and a small source of recreation. n12

The second prong of the test, sometimes referred to as "the additional circumstances test," requires that the court make a predictive judgment as to the likelihood that the debtor's financial hardship will continue for a significant portion of the repayment period. There are two elements to the second prong. The first is whether the debtor's financial difficulties are "likely" to continue. Under this standard, a debtor must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the debtor's financial situation is not likely to improve. The debtor is not required to prove with certainty that the financial situation will not improve and the court's determination must be based on a realistic, factual assessment of the debtor's financial prospects, not on unfounded optimism. n13 Nor is the debtor required to prove that the his or her financial distress will continue due to a serious illness, psychological problem, disability of the debtor or a dependent or some other exceptional circumstances. It is sufficient for the debtor to establish any circumstances that show that the inability to pay is likely to persist for a significant portion of the repayment period. n14 The court's judgment on this question necessarily must be based on a consideration of the debtor's education, work history, health and other relevant circumstances. The second element of the second prong is that the financial difficulties must be likely to persist for a significant portion of the repayment period. There is little judicial discussion of the meaning of the term "significant portion of the repayment period," perhaps because courts are able to make judgments whether the factors causing a debtor's financial hardship are likely to persist indefinitely without the need for more precision. One court concluded that, for a 10-year loan, five years constituted a significant portion of the repayment period and evaluated the debtor's financial prospects within that time frame. n15

The good faith inquiry is guided by the understanding that "undue hardship" encompasses a notion that the debtor's bad financial condition and default should not have been caused by the debtor's own willfulness or negligence, but rather by factors beyond the debtor's control. n16 Therefore, if the debtor has not made payments on the loans because, through no fault of the debtor, he or she has never had the ability to pay, the good faith effort test is met. n17 One circumstance that some courts have considered is the potential availability, in certain cases, of an income-contingent repayment plan pursuant to which the monthly payment due on a student loan is dependent on the debtor's income and, after a 25-year repayment period, any remaining unpaid balance is canceled. n18 Creditors have argued that a debtor who has not applied for an income-contingent repayment plan cannot meet the good faith test. A more ambitious argument is that the existence of an option to repay based on the debtor's income establishes that there is no undue hardship and that, therefore, the student loan should not be discharged. n19 These arguments overstate the role that an income-contingent repayment plan should play in determining dischargeability. The U.S. Department of Education regulations provide that under an income-contingent repayment plan, a debtor is obliged to make some payment once the debtor's income exceeds the federal poverty level. n20 However, the federal poverty level is below a "minimal" standard of living. Therefore, the repayment program is based on a standard different from that found in section 523(a)(8) and cannot be determinative. n21 Courts must also be careful not to treat the enactment of the statute authorizing the U.S. Department of Education to accept an income-contingent repayment plan as an implied repeal of section 523(a)(8) of the Bankruptcy Code.

If there is a meaningful prospect for an improvement in the debtor's financial condition, an income-contingent repayment plan could provide relief to the debtor until the improved circumstances exist. However, if the debtor's prospects are not likely to improve, a mechanical finding that the existence of an income-contingent repayment precludes an undue hardship may prejudice the debtor. During the repayment program, which could last up to 25 years, interest continues to accrue on the debt. If, after the expiration of a lengthy repayment period, a large student loan is forgiven under the program, the debtor may incur a large tax debt due to taxable income arising from the debt forgiveness. Such a result would be inconsistent with the fresh start purposes of the Bankruptcy Code. Thus, the availability, by itself, of the income-contingent repayment plan should not preclude hardship discharge under section 523(a)(8). At most, its existence is one factor that may be considered by the court. n22

Despite the courts' best efforts to formulate objective criteria for evaluating undue hardship, the application of the articulated standards necessarily requires each court to apply its own intuitive sense of what is a "minimal" standard of living and what is "good faith." At bottom, the Bankruptcy Code requires bankruptcy courts to decide how much personal sacrifice society expects from individuals who accepted the benefits of guaranteed student loans but who have not obtained the financial rewards they had expected to receive as a result of their educational expenditures.

Partial Discharge. The plain language of section 523(a)(8) provides for the nondischargeability of any debt falling within its terms unless certain conditions exist. The statutory text appears absolute on its face; it does not provide that a debt is nondischargeable "to the extent" that repayment would impose an undue hardship on the debtor. Nonetheless, some courts have found the "all or nothing" approach to student loan dischargeability dictated by the plain language to be inconsistent with the purpose of the provision and have held that section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code n23 empowers the court to grant a discharge of that portion of the student loan obligation which would impose an undue hardship on the debtor. n24 Other courts have rejected the partial discharge doctrine as unauthorized by the statute. n25

Timing of Filing of Dischargeability Complaint in Chapter 13 Cases. In 1990, Congress amended section 1328(a) to incorporate the section 523(a)(8) discharge exception in chapter 13 cases. n26 Since a dischargeability determination under section 523(a)(8) requires an examination of the debtor's current and future financial situation, the question arises as to whether the dischargeability determination may be made prior to the end of a chapter 13 case. This is not an issue which arises in chapter 7 cases. As one court has explained,

In a Chapter 7 case, the bankruptcy proceeding is short-lived and the debtor achieves a quick discharge of his unsecured, dischargeable debts. Thus, predicting whether the debtor's current inability to maintain a minimal standard of living will persist throughout a significant portion of the repayment period is based upon a known, current situation. Where an adversary proceeding seeking a discharge of student loan obligations is brought early in a Chapter 13 case, however, the question of whether the debtor will be unable to maintain a minimal standard of living throughout a significant portion of the repayment period must be premised upon a prediction of what the debtor's situation will be at the conclusion of the Chapter 13 plan which, as here, may extend up to five years. n27

Some courts have held that, in a chapter 13 case, a dischargeability determination is not ripe until the completion of the chapter 13. n28 Other courts have held that where circumstances exist that would permit the court to determine the debtor's future financial condition in advance of the conclusion of the chapter 13 case, a dischargeability determination under section 523(a)(8) may be made prior to the completion of the debtor's chapter 13 plan. n29

Postpetition Interest on Nondischargeable Student Loans in Chapter 13 Cases. Under section 502(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, n30 unmatured interest on an unsecured claim is not allowable. Thus, the bankruptcy estate is not liable for postpetition interest on an unsecured claim. Since the Supreme Court's decision in Bruning v. United States, n31 it has been settled that the estate's freedom from liability does not relieve the debtor from personal liability for postpetition interest on a nondischargeable tax debt. n32 This principle applies to nondischargeable student loan debts in chapter 13 cases. Thus, unless the chapter 13 plan provides otherwise, n33 the debtor will remain liable for postpetition interest on a student loan claim which is nondischargeable under section 523(a)(8) after the conclusion of the chapter 13 case, even if the chapter 13 plan provided for full payment of the prepetition claim. n34

Repealed Seven-Year Rule; Consolidation Loans; Former § 523(a)(8)(A). Prior to October 7, 1998, section 523(a)(8) provided for the dischargeability of an educational loan or benefit if the debtor's repayment obligation "first became due more" than seven years (exclusive of any applicable suspension period) before the date of the filing of the petition. n35 Former section 523(a)(8)(A) reflected a legislative judgment that after a seven year repayment period has expired, the public policy concerns about potential abuse of the educational loan system and the risks to the system's fiscal integrity are outweighed by the fresh start policy of the Code. In 1998, Congress deleted section 523(a)(8)(A) from the Code, leaving "undue hardship" as the sole basis for discharging an educational loan or benefit. n36 The elimination of the "seven year rule" applies to all cases commenced after October 7, 1998. n37

Under former section 523(a)(8)(A), the term "first became due" was measured from the date the first installment payment on the loan fell due. n38 Further, any time period in which repayment of the student loan was "suspended" was disregarded in computing whether seven years elapsed between the date repayment first fell due and the commencement of the bankruptcy case. An improper deferment, such as an unrequested unemployment deferment or one that was not authorized by the applicable regulations, did not suspend the running of the seven year period. n39

It is not uncommon for a debtor to sign a single note that consolidates the series of smaller notes that were signed when the debtor was in school. In some cases, the debtor has signed the consolidation note some time after repayment fell due on the original notes. In such cases, some courts held that the seven-year period was measured from the execution of the consolidation note, not the earlier date on which the debtor's repayment obligation began. n40 This result was questionable because it effectively expanded the seven-year repayment period established by Congress for the dischargeability of student loans.

Health Education Loans; 42 U.S.C. § 292f(g) (HEAL); 42 U.S.C. § 254o(c)(3) (NHSC). Separate dischargeability rules apply to certain health educational loan programs. The most well known are loans provided under the Health Education Assistance Loan Act (HEAL). n41 HEAL provides in pertinent part:

(g) A debt which is a loan insured under the authority of this subpart may be released by a discharge in bankruptcy under any chapter of title 11, United States Code , only if such discharge is granted--

(1) after the expiration of the 5-year period beginning on the first date, as specified in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of section 731(a)(2) , when repayment of such loan is required;

(2) upon a finding by the Bankruptcy Court that the nondischarge of such debt would be unconscionable; and

(3) upon the condition that the Secretary shall not have waived the Secretary's right to apply subsection (f) to the borrower and the discharged debt.

The dischargeability of a HEAL loan under all chapters of the Code is controlled by 42 USCS § 292f(g), the more specific and later enacted statute, rather than section 523(a)(8). n42 The "unconscionability" standard for discharging HEAL loans is stricter than the "undue hardship" standard under section 523(a)(8). n43 However, in evaluating whether a debtor can establish that requiring repayment of the debt would be unconscionable, a court should consider the same factors used in determining whether a debt is dischargeable under the undue hardship standard. n44

The National Health Service Corps (NHSC) Scholarship Program awards students scholarships in return for a commitment to serve for two years in the Public Health Service or as a civilian member of the NHSC. If a student does not receive a degree, the amount of the scholarship must be repaid. The NHSC statute bars the discharge of NHSC repayment obligations in bankruptcy cases except in certain circumstances. n45

For a complete discussion of Code section 523, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8)(B), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 220 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. See Santa Fe Medical Services, Inc. v. Segal (In re Segal), 57 F.3d 342, 33 C.B.C.2d 1496 (3d Cir. 1995).

n3

3. E.g., In re Renshaw, 222 F.3d 82 (2d Cir. 2000). However, the National Bankruptcy Review Commission concluded that the anecdotal concerns about abuse of the educational loan system are not supported by empirical evidence. National Bank. Rev. Comm'n, Bankruptcy: The Next Twenty Years, §1.4.5 (Oct. 20, 1997), cited in In re Hornsby, 144 F.3d 433, 40 C.B.C.2d 313 (6th Cir. 1998).

n4

4. In re Pelkowski, 990 F.2d 737, 28 C.B.C.2d 1023 (3d Cir. 1993).

n5

5. Santa Fe Medical Services, Inc. v. Segal (In re Segal), 57 F.3d 342 (3d Cir. 1995).

n6

6. In re Chambers, 348 F.3d 650 (7th Cir. 2003); Boston Univ. v. Mehta (In re Mehta), 310 F.3d 308 (3d Cir. 2002); Cazenovia College v. Renshaw (In re Renshaw), 222 F.3d 82 (2d Cir. 2000).

n7

7. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. v. Hood, 541 U.S. 440, 124 S. Ct. 1905, 1912, 158 L. Ed. 2d 764, 51 C.B.C.2d 627 (2004).

n8

8. Underwood v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (In re Underwood), 299 B.R. 471 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2003).

n9

9. Brunner v. New York State Higher Educ. Servs. Corp., 831 F.2d 395 (2d Cir. 1987); see also Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Polleys, 356 F.3d 1302, 1309 (10th Cir. 2004) (adopting Brunner framework with qualification that it "must be applied such that debtors who truly cannot afford to repay their loans may have their loans discharged"); Hemar Ins. Corp. of Am. v. Cox (In re Cox), 338 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2003); In re Pena, 155 F.3d 1108, 40 C.B.C.2d 848 (9th Cir. 1998); Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency v. Faish (In re Faish), 72 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1995); Cheesman v. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. (In re Cheesman), 25 F.3d 356 (6th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1081, 115 S. Ct. 731, 130 L. Ed. 2d 634 (1995); In re Roberson, 999 F.2d 1132, 29 C.B.C.2d 561 (7th Cir. 1993); cf. Long v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Long), 322 F.3d 549 (8th Cir. 2003) (adopting "less restrictive" totality of the circumstances test focusing on (1) the debtor's past, present and reasonably reliable future financial resources, (2) the reasonable, necessary living of expenses of the debtor and the debtor's dependents and (3) any other relevant facts and circumstances).

n10

10. Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency v. Faish (In re Faish), 72 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1995).

n11

11. Cline v. Illinois Student Loan Assistance Ass'n (In re Cline), 248 B.R. 347 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2000).

n12

12. See Ivory v. United States (In re Ivory), 269 B.R. 890 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2001); Salinas v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (In re Salinas), 258 B.R. 913 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 2001).

n13

13. Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Polleys, 356 F.3d 1302 (10th Cir. 2004).

n14

14. Nys v. Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Nys), 308 B.R. 436, 444 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004) ("The circumstances need be exceptional' only in the sense that they demonstrate insurmountable barriers to the debtor's financial recovery and ability to pay.").

n15

15. Mayer v. Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency (In re Mayer), 198 B.R. 116 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1996).

n16

16. Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Polleys, 356 F.3d 1302 (10th Cir. 2004); Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency v. Faish (In re Faish), 72 F.3d 298, 305, 34 C.B.C.2d 1312, 1324 (3d Cir. 1995) (citations omitted).

n17

17. Alderete v. Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Alderete), 308 B.R. 495 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2004); Great Lakes Higher Education Corp. v. Brown (In re Brown), 239 B.R. 204 (S.D. Cal. 1999); Clevenger v. Nebraska Student Loan Program (In re Clevenger), 212 B.R. 139 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1997).

n18

18. See 20 U.S.C. § 1087e(d)(1); 34 C.F.R. §§ 685.208-685.209 (William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program).

n19

19. See Long v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Long), 292 B.R. 635 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003).

n20

20. 34 C.F.R. § 685.209.

n21

21. Alderete v. Educational Credit Management Corp. (In re Alderete), 308 B.R. 495 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2004) (little weight given to the debtor's failure to investigate eligibility for an income contingent repayment plan where evidence showed that, if eligible, the debtor could not have afforded the minimum program payments).

n22

22. Ford v. Student Loan Guar. Found. of Ark. (In re Ford), 269 B.R. 673 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 105.

n24

24. E.g., Saxman v. Educational Credit Management BJR Corp. (In re Saxman), 325 F.3d 1168 (9th Cir. 2003); Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. v. Hornsby (In re Hornsby), 144 F.3d 433 (6th Cir. 1998); see also Miller v. Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency (In re Miller), 377 F.3d 616 (6th Cir. 2004) (clarifying Hornsby and holding that the section 105 does not provide an independent basis for a partial discharge; the section 105 power to grant a partial discharge can only be made upon a showing of undue hardship under section 523(a)(8) as to the partial amount to be discharged).

n25

25. E.g., Salinas v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (In re Salinas), 258 B.R. 913 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 2001); Skaggs v. Great Lakes Higher Educ. Corp. (In re Skaggs), 196 B.R. 865 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1996).

n26

26. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 1328.02[3][d] (Matthew Bender).

n27

27. Ekenasi v. Education Resources Institute (In re Ekenasi), 325 F.3d 541, 547 (4th Cir. 2003).

n28

28. E.g., Soler v. United States (In re Soler), 250 B.R. 694 (Bankr. D. Minn. 2000).

n29

29. Ekenasi v. Education Resources Institute (In re Ekenasi), 325 F.3d 541, 547 (4th Cir. 2003); see also Goranson v. Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency (In re Goranson), 183 B.R. 52 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1995).

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(2).

n31

31. 376 U.S. 358, 84 S. Ct. 906, 11 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1964).

n32

32. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 523.07[7] (Matthew Bender).

n33

33. Great Lakes Higher Education Corporation v. Pardee (In re Pardee), 193 F.3d 1083 (9th Cir. 1999) (even if statute provides for nondischargeability of debt, the debt was discharged by the creditor's failure to challenge the plan during the bankruptcy proceedings); Andersen v. UNIPAC-NEBHELP (In re Andersen), 179 F.3d 1253 (10th Cir. 1999) (same). But see Banks v. Sallie Mae Servicing Corp. (In re Banks), 299 F.3d 296 (4th Cir. 2002) (confirmation order held not binding on creditor because dischargeability must be determined by adversary proceeding).

n34

34. Kielisch v. Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. (In re Kielisch), 258 F.3d 315 (4th Cir. 2001); Leeper v. Pennsylvania Higher Educ. Assistance Agency (In re Leeper), 49 F.3d 98, 32 O.&G.R. 1833 (3d Cir. 1995).

n35

35. Section 523(a)(8)(A) originally required that an educational loan or benefit be due and owing for a five-year period before that debt could be discharged. The five-year period was increased to seven years in 1990. Pub. L. No. 101-647, § 3621(1) (1990).

n36

36. Higher Education Amendments of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105-244, § 971(a) (1998).

n37

37. Higher Education Amendments of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105-244, § 971(b) (1998).

n38

38. Nunn v. State of Washington (In re Nunn), 788 F.2d 617, 14 C.B.C.2d 892 (9th Cir. 1986); see also Woodcock v. Chemical Bank, NYSHESC (In re Woodcock), 45 F.3d 363, 32 C.B.C.2d 1341 (10th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 828, 116 S. Ct. 97, 133 L. Ed. 2d 52 (1995).

n39

39. Connecticut Student Loan Found. v. Keenan (In re Keenan), 14 C.B.C.2d 1344, 53 B.R. 913 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1985).

n40

40. See, e.g., Hiatt v. Indiana State Student Assistance Commission, 36 F.3d 21 (7th Cir. 1994); United States v. McGrath, 143 B.R. 820 (D. Md. 1992); In re Martin, 137 B.R. 770 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1992).

n41

41. 42 U.S.C. § 292f(g).

n42

42. United States v. Rice, 182 B.R. 759 (N.D. Ohio 1994), aff'd, 78 F.3d 1144 (6th Cir. 1996); Hines v. United States (In re Hines), 15 C.B.C.2d 959, 63 B.R. 731 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1986).

n43

43. U.S. Dep't of Health & Human Servs. v. Smitley, 347 F.3d 109 (4th Cir. 2003); Rice v. United States (In re Rice), 78 F.3d 1144 (6th Cir. 1996); In re Lawrence, 32 C.B.C.2d 1903 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1995).

n44

44. Rice v. United States (In re Rice), 78 F.3d 1144 (6th Cir. 1996); see also U.S. Dep't of Health & Human Servs. v. Smitley, 347 F.3d 109 (4th Cir. 2003) (considering, inter alia, the debtor's age, income, earning ability, health, educational background, dependents, standard of living, the likelihood that the debtor's situation will improve, the debtor's previous efforts to repay the loan).

n45

45. 42 U.S.C. § 254o(c)(3); see United States v. Brown (In re Brown), 79 B.R. 789 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1987).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

176 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of Claim Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 968

Collier on the Definition of Claim Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to section 101(5) of the Code, including statutory obligations as claims, statutory administrative functions with respect to pension plans as claims, criminal restitution obligations as claims, rights against a debtors property constituting a claim, right to payment arising from breach of the equitable right to performance, and tort claims.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: "Claim" is defined as any right to payment, whether or not reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, n1 matured, unmatured, disputed, n2 undisputed, legal, equitable, secured or unsecured. The effect of the definition is a significant departure from prior law. The Code defines the term "claim" much more broadly in section 101(5) than under previous law. Under Section 1 of the former Bankruptcy Act, "claim" was not defined. The term was only used with the concept of provability in Section 63 of the Act to limit the kinds of debts that were payable in a bankruptcy case. n3

The term "claim" is coextensive with the term "debt," according to the Supreme Court in Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare v. Davenport. n4 Under the broad definition in the Code, "claim" may include a claim based on state law for breach of warranty, n5 subrogation as well as contribution and indemnity claims, n6 the claim for contribution of a codebtor ex-spouse who paid more than her proportionate share of joint debts n7 or an individual debtor's personal but contingent and unliquidated liability for trust fund taxes. n8 By fashioning a single definition of "claim" in the Code, Congress intended to adopt the broadest available definition of that term. n9 The Supreme Court has repeatedly reiterated this principle and has declined all invitations to exclude rights to payment from the definition of claim. n10

"Claim" may also include a cause of action or right to payment that has not yet accrued or become cognizable. n11 Neither the contingency of the debt nor the immaturity of the obligation affects whether a right to payment is a claim. n12 For example, in In re Manville Forest Products, n13 the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that an obligation under a prepetition indemnification agreement was a prepetition debt discharged by confirmation of a chapter 11 plan even though the contingency against which the nondebtor party had been indemnified had not yet occurred when the bankruptcy petition was filed. A creditor's right to payment that arose from the earliest point in the relationship between debtor and creditor is a claim. n14 A collective bargaining representative has a "right to payment" of unpaid wages of its members. n15 Equitable relief held against a debtor should be estimated as to its monetary value for proof of claim purposes. n16

However, the broad definition of claim is not boundless. The fact that an entity may have a claim in the future does not mean that the entity has a claim on the date of the petition. A person who might be injured in the future due to a manufacturing defect in a product made before bankruptcy does not have a prepetition claim if the person did not have a prepetition relationship with the debtor or the product. n17 A parent corporation's asserted interest in customer obligations it was to transfer under an operating agreement to its finance subsidiary, a chapter 11 debtor, was not a claim. n18 A claim is distinguishable from an ownership interest in the debtor, and the holder of an equity security, without more, is not the holder of a claim. n19 Retirement advances that may have to be repaid under certain contingencies have been found not to be "claims" where the obligation is dependent on the debtor's choice of future actions. n20 A sue sponte monetary sanctions award that was ordered postpetition in a lawsuit that was filed prepetition, in a case in which no party could have fairly contemplated such an award when the bankruptcy petition was filed, has also been found not to be a prepetition "claim." n21 Similarly, new or continuing postpetition acts in violation of a statute that the debtor had been violating before filing the petition can give rise to postpetition claims, separate from the prepetition claims based on prepetition violations. n22

Statutory Obligations as Claims; Ohio v. Kovacs. In Ohio v. Kovacs, n23 the United States Supreme Court, affirming the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, held that a state court judgment requiring the removal of hazardous waste from a dump site was a "claim" within the meaning of section 101 and, therefore, dischargeable under section 727. The Court, in a unanimous decision, rejected the State's arguments that because the breach was statutory it was not a liability on a claim, and that the breach of the debtor's obligation did not give rise to a right to payment within the meaning of subparagraph (B). "There is no indication in the statute that a right to performance cannot be claimed unless it arises from a contractual arrangement . It makes little sense to assert that because the cleanup order was entered to remedy a statutory violation, it cannot likewise constitute a claim for bankruptcy purposes." n24 The Court concluded that upon the debtor's default on the judgment, the State of Ohio's appointment of a receiver to obtain possession of the debtor's assets and to implement the site cleanup had reduced the judgment to a monetary obligation. n25

Most payment obligations to environmental regulatory agencies, even if contingent, are claims if they are based upon prepetition conduct. n26 A claim under federal and state environmental statutes generally arises upon the actual or threatened release of hazardous waste or when the conduct of a debtor which gives rise to the cause of action occurs. n27 However, when the state neither seeks money nor has a right to payment, but only exercises its right to force a debtor to comply with the debtor's continuing obligation under state law to dispose of hazardous waste, the state's demand that the debtor remedy the hazard is not a claim of the state. n28

If a claimant's right to payment arises from a statute that was enacted after the debtor's reorganization, the court will determine whether the right to payment constitutes a discharged claim on the basis of whether the claimant had an analogous right to payment under the law that was in existence at the time of the debtor's reorganization. n29 In the context of environmental cleanup claims, several courts have expressed concern that, although the triggering event for establishing liability (i.e., the actual or threatened release of hazardous substances) may have occurred prepetition, a party having the right to recover damages from the debtor for the cleanup costs relating to such environmental contamination may not know until many years after the debtor has emerged from bankruptcy that (1) a release occurred or (2) the debtor was liable for such cleanup. n30 As a result, many courts evaluating whether a claim for environmental cleanup costs constitutes a "claim" that was discharged in the debtor's bankruptcy case assess whether (1) the actual or threatened release occurred prepetition and (2) whether the claim was fairly contemplated. Evidence that a claim by a governmental agency was fairly contemplated during a debtor's bankruptcy case could include the following: knowledge by the parties of a site at which a debtor may be liable; listing of the site on the National Priorities List; notification by the Environmental Protection Agency of liability; commencement of investigation and cleanup activities; and incurrence by the governmental agency of cleanup costs. n31 In cases where a private party asserts an environmental claim against a debtor, relevant factors could include the following: whether the party was aware of releases of hazardous substances at a site; whether the party contemplated future suit against the debtor; whether the parties considered the site an environmental risk prior to bankruptcy; whether visible signs of contamination existed; whether the party had the ability or responsibility to determine the site's condition because of a contractual relationship with the debtor (such as a lease) or otherwise; and whether the party knew of the use of the site. n32

Statutory Administrative Functions with Respect to Pension Plans as Claims. A debtor that sponsors a pension plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA") n33 may have a variety of statutory obligations with respect to the plan and its participants and beneficiaries. For example, to the extent the debtor is the plan administrator n34 under a defined benefit pension plan, n35 section 4041 of ERISA 36 mandates a variety of obligations that must be fulfilled in order to complete a successful termination of the plan. These obligations include a duty to terminate the plan in accordance with ERISA section 4041, n37 to notify the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation after the filing of a bankruptcy, to notify all affected parties of the impending termination and to comply with various reporting requirements as to the net assets and liabilities of the plan. n38 Other duties imposed upon a plan administrator by ERISA, regardless of whether the ERISA plan is a defined benefit plan, include maintaining a fidelity bond with respect to the plan, n39 preparing annual reports n40 and issuing participant statements. n41 A plan administrator may have additional responsibilities under the Internal Revenue Code, such as maintaining the plan document in compliance with changing federal laws and regulations applicable to the plan, n42 and making minimum required distributions to certain participants and beneficiaries. n43

The issue raised in In re Esco Manufacturing n44 was whether ERISA termination obligations were "claims" that the trustee was obligated to resolve. In Esco, the chapter 7 trustee filed a notice with the bankruptcy court stating the debtor intended to abandon its pension plan. n45 The trustee argued that the plan was not property of the estate, and that even if it were later deemed to be so, it was of little value to the estate, and thus could be abandoned as burdensome under section 554(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. n46 The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation ("PBGC") n47 filed an objection, asserting that the trustee was prohibited from abandoning the debtor's statutory obligations to the pension plan under ERISA. n48 The bankruptcy court granted the trustee's motion, and the PBGC appealed. n49 The district court in Esco held that the ERISA termination obligations were "claims" that the trustee was obligated to resolve. n50 Initially, the Fifth Circuit affirmed, finding that the duties imposed by the Bankruptcy Code include the obligation to perform any termination obligations imposed by ERISA, and that by doing so a trustee is acting in the best interests of the bankruptcy estate. n51 However, on rehearing, the court's first opinion was withdrawn and a second opinion was issued. The second Esco opinion stated that the terms of the pension plan set up a committee as a plan administrator. n52 Based on this plan provision, the court concluded that the debtor was not the plan administrator, and thus never had the power to terminate the plan. n53 According to the court, the power to terminate the plan was vested in the "administrator," not the plan sponsor, under ERISA. n54 Therefore, the court found the bankruptcy trustee could not succeed to the power to terminate the plan. n55 The withdrawal of the first Esco opinion left it unclear whether its finding that ERISA termination obligations are "claims" that the trustee is obligated to resolve continues to apply in circumstances where the debtor is in fact the plan administrator under the terms of its pension plan.

In CPT Holdings v. Industrial and Allied Union Employees Pension Plan, n56 the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit considered a chapter 11 debtor's withdrawal liability with respect to a union pension plan that it withdrew from after confirmation of its plan, which had assumed the collective bargaining agreement. The former debtor argued that it was liable only with respect to its postconfirmation membership in the plan and that any liability with respect to its prepetition membership was a claim that had been discharged in the chapter 11 case. Disagreeing with or distinguishing the decisions of several lower courts that had found withdrawal liability to be a dischargeable claim, n57 the court held that an employer's withdrawal liability does not exist until the employer actually withdraws from the plan, leaving the plan underfunded. Therefore, the court held, the withdrawal liability cannot be discharged unless the employer withdraws from the plan prior to confirmation. n58

In In re New Center Hospital, n59 an action was brought on behalf of a defined contribution retirement plan to compel a court-appointed chapter 11 trustee to administer the plan. The trustee asserted that the duty to act as a plan administrator did not lie with the trustee, but rather with a court-appointed plan trustee. n60 The bankruptcy trustee argued that if he were to administer the plan, he would be required to act solely in the interest of the plan beneficiaries, which would be in conflict with the trustee's duty to the bankruptcy estate. n61 The New Center Hospital court compelled the bankruptcy trustee to administer (i.e., terminate) the retirement plan. In reaching its conclusion, the court found that under the plan at issue, the debtor was both the plan sponsor and the plan administrator. n62 The court, citing section 541 Code, stated that a bankruptcy trustee assumes the position of the debtor as to that debtor's many obligations, including statutory obligations relating to retirement plans. n63

Criminal Restitution Obligations as Claims; the Davenport Case. The Supreme Court again had occasion to address the definition of "claim" in Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare v. Davenport, n64 in which the issue was whether a criminal restitution obligation was a claim. Despite dictum in its earlier decision in Kelly v. Robinson n65 expressing doubts that such obligations were claims, the Court, in a seven-to-two decision, held that such obligations were within the scope of the Code's definition of "claim." In reaching its decision, the Court first noted the expansive language of section 101, and the fact that it was modified only to reflect "a broad rather than restrictive view of the class of obligations that qualify as a claim' giving rise to a debt.'" n66 The Court also referred to the legislative history describing the definition of "claim" as the "broadest possible" and noted that the Code "contemplates that all legal obligations of the debtor will be able to be dealt with in a bankruptcy case." n67 The Supreme Court rejected the argument of the defendants in Davenport that a criminal restitution obligation did not arise out of a "traditional debtor-creditor relationship" because of its special purposes of punishment and rehabilitation. Although the purpose of the obligation was relevant to whether it was dischargeable under Code section 523(a)(7), n68 the Court stated that the language of section 101 made no reference to purpose, and the objectives of the state in imposing restitution were therefore irrelevant. n69 The Court also rejected the argument that restitution obligations were not claims because they were enforced differently from other obligations. Although neither the Probation Department nor the victim could enforce the obligation in civil proceedings in the Davenport case, the obligation was enforceable through other means, such as the threat of probation revocation and incarceration. The fact that the enforcement mechanisms available to the creditors were criminal rather than civil was held not to affect the character of the obligation as a right to payment. n70 Although only criminal enforcement mechanisms were available to enforce the Pennsylvania restitution order in Davenport, criminal restitution orders in other states may be enforced through civil proceedings. n71

The Davenport decision reinforces the statute's intended effect to define the scope of the term "claim" as broadly as possible, subject to the limitations on equitable remedies that are expressly stated in section 101. It can be expected that in light of Davenport the courts will rebuff virtually all attempts to characterize obligations as outside the scope of the definition due to "special" or unique characteristics of those obligations. Although Congress, in two separate acts, n72 amended Code section 1328(a) to make certain criminal restitution debts nondischargeable in chapter 13 cases, thus reversing the result in Davenport, it did nothing to change the definition of claim or to disturb the Supreme Court's holding regarding the scope of that definition. Therefore, the broad scope of the term "claim" described in Davenport, including obligations for criminal restitution, continues to be the law.

Rights Against Debtor's Property Constitute a Claim; Johnson v. Home State Bank. The Supreme Court addressed the definition of "claim" yet again in Johnson v. Home State Bank. n73 In that case, the Court held that when a debtor had discharged his personal liability on the notes underlying a mortgage, the mortgagee's right to receive the proceeds from the sale of the mortgaged property remained an enforceable monetary obligation, and therefore a right to payment within the definition of "claim." The discharge of the debtor's personal liability merely extinguished one mode of enforcing the claim through an in personam judgment; the fact that the claim could thereafter be enforced only by another mode--collecting from the debtor's property--was held to be immaterial. n74

After reviewing case law, legislative history, the Code definition of "claim," and the rule of construction concerning "claim against the debtor," the Court in Johnson confirmed that Congress had intended to adopt the broadest available definition of "claim," and that a "right to payment," as "claim" is defined in section 101(5)(A), meant "nothing more or less than an enforceable obligation." Even after the debtor's personal liability had been discharged, the mortgage holder still retained a "right to payment" stemming from its right to the proceeds from the sale of the debtor's property. The Court noted that the rule of construction set forth in section 102(2) established that the phrase "claim against the debtor" includes a claim against the property of the debtor. n75

The Court in Johnson concluded that the issue was a straightforward one of statutory construction to be resolved by reference to the Code itself and to legislative history, which confirmed that the definition of "claim" includes an obligation enforceable only against a debtor's property. Finally, the Court rejected the bank's argument that Congress had intended to prohibit a debtor from utilizing serial filings to discharge such a debt, pointing out that when Congress intended to discourage certain types of serial filings, it did so explicitly. Considering the full range of Code provisions designed to protect chapter 13 creditors, and the intent of Congress that "claim" be construed broadly, the Court found it unlikely that Congress intended bankruptcy courts to police chapter 13 abuses through a limitation of the Code's definition of "claim."

Right to Payment Arising from Breach of Equitable Right to Performance. The definition of "claim" also includes breach of an equitable right to performance which gives rise to a right of payment. n76 The intended result is that a liquidation or estimation of a contingent right of payment for which there may be an alternative remedy makes the equitable claim dischargeable in bankruptcy. n77 For example, in some states, a judgment for specific performance may be satisfied by an alternative right to payment in the event performance is refused; in that event the creditor entitled to specific performance would then have a "claim" for the purpose of a case under title 11. In Johnson v. Home State Bank, n78 the Supreme Court held that this language encompassed the right of a mortgage holder to foreclose on property after the debtor had discharged his personal obligation on the underlying notes in an earlier chapter 7 case. A purchaser's down payment for a purchase that created a right to either performance or a remedy for breach of performance against the debtor constitutes a "claim" for purposes of this section. n79 Similarly, the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held in In re Continental Airlines n80 that employees' rights to reinstatement under a collective bargaining agreement could be reduced to monetary damages and therefore were "claims." A claim is a right to payment, or a right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance if such breach gives rise to a right to payment; it is irrelevant whether the right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, fixed, matured, disputed, legal, equitable or secured. n81

On the other hand, rights to an equitable remedy for breach of performance with respect to which such breach does not give rise to a right to payment are not "claims" within the Code's contemplation, and would not therefore be dischargeable in bankruptcy, unless such obligations could be translated into a claim for damages if breached. n82 When there is no money damage alternative to state court ordered equitable remedies such as resulting trust, partition in kind, or deed reformation, they do not fit the definition of claim under section 101(5) and, therefore, are not subject to discharge under the Code. n83 For example, in In re Ben Franklin Hotel Associates, n84 the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held that an equitable demand for reinstatement of a partnership interest in a partnership owning unique commercial property could not be reduced to damages and therefore was not a claim. Most courts have concluded that a covenant not to compete, or at least the portion of such a contract giving a right to injunctive relief, is not a claim. n85 Courts have disagreed about whether injunctions requiring a debtor to clean up contaminated property constitute "claims." n86 So long as a monetary payment is not being sought, or monetary payment is viewed as a "suboptimal" remedy for the creditor, a growing number of courts will not classify a request for injunctive relief as a claim. n87

The definition of "claim" as it was originally proposed in H.R. 8200 was designed to give "claim" the broadest interpretation, as the Code contemplated that all legal obligations of the debtor, no matter how remote or contingent, be able to be dealt with in the bankruptcy case. It permitted the court to give the broadest possible relief. n88 As enacted, however, section 101(5)(B) limits the definition of "claim" by excluding rights to an equitable remedy for a breach of performance with respect to which such a breach does not give rise to a right to payment. Such rights are not "claims" and are not, therefore, susceptible to discharge in bankruptcy. n89

Tort Claims are "Claims." Tort claims constitute claims, and thus are payable out of the estate, and constitute dischargeable debts. Under former Section 63, only limited types of tort claims were provable in a bankruptcy case, but if not provable would receive no distribution and be nondischargeable. Under the Code, the fact that the tort claim may be unliquidated or disputed does not mean that it is not a claim. As the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit held in In re Cambridge Biotech Corporation, n90 a claim for damages arising from patent infringement would be considered a type of tort within the definition of "claim."

For a complete discussion of Code section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. See In re La Bonte, 5 C.B.C.2d 181, 13 B.R. 887 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1981) (guarantor of debtor's note held contingent claim).

n2

2. See NCNB Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Shumate, 55 B.R. 489 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 1985) (creditor's disputed right to payment on debtor's guarantee).

n3

3. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 309 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1978).

n4

4. 495 U.S. 552, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1990).

n5

5. Southeastern Sprinkler Co. v. Meyertech Corp. (In re Meyertech Corp.), 831 F.2d 410, 18 C.B.C.2d 34 (3d Cir. 1987).

n6

6. In re Hemingway Transp., 954 F.2d 1, 26 C.B.C.2d 372 (1st Cir. 1992); In re Erin Food Services, Inc., 980 F.2d 792 (1st Cir. 1992); In re Charter Co., 862 F.2d 1500, 20 C.B.C.2d 915 (11th Cir. 1989); Solow Bldg. Co., L.L.C. v. ATC Assocs., 175 F. Supp. 2d 465 (E.D.N.Y. 2001); In re Eagle-Picher Indus., Inc., 164 B.R. 265 (S.D. Ohio 1994); In re Cottonwood Canyon Land Co., 146 B.R. 992 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992); In re Kent Holland Die Casting & Plating, 125 B.R. 493 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1992); Acevedo v. Van Dorn Plastic Mach. v. Cut Rate Plastic Hanger, 68 B.R. 495 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1986). But see In re Reading Co., 115 F.3d 1111 (3d Cir. 1997) (in Bankruptcy Act case, contribution claim not a claim where explicit statutory right to contribution not created until after consummation of reorganization); In re M. Frenville Co., 744 F.2d 332 (3d Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1160, 105 S. Ct. 911, 83 L. Ed. 2d 925 (1985) (claim for indemnity accrued only when cause of action for indemnity accrued under state law).

n7

7. In re Amburgey, 68 B.R. 768 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1987).

n8

8. In re Kilen, 25 C.B.C.2d 326, 129 B.R. 538 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991).

n9

9. See In re Udell, 18 F.3d 403, 30 C.B.C.2d 1192 (7th Cir. 1994).

n10

10. FCC v. NextWave Personal Communications, Inc. (In re NextWave Personal Communications, Inc.), 537 U.S. 293, 123 S. Ct. 832, 154 L. Ed. 2d 863 (2003) (FCC's right to payment for broadband licenses was a claim even if obligation to pay was also a regulatory condition); Johnson v. Home State Bank, 501 U.S. 78, 83, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1991).

n11

11. Watson v. Parker (In re Parker), 313 F.3d 1267 (10th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 965, 124 S. Ct. 429, 157 L. Ed. 2d 309 (2003) (claim arises when underlying conduct occurred, not when cause of action accrued); see In re Cool Fuel, Inc., 210 F.3d 999 (9th Cir. 2000) (tax board had claim even though it had not, as of petition date, taken all steps necessary to bring a collection action); McSherry v. TWA, 81 F.3d 739 (8th Cir. 1996) (employee had claim for discrimination based on prepetition events even though she had not yet received a right to sue letter from the investigating agency); In re Clinton Centrifuge, Inc., 81 B.R. 844 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988); In re Johns-Manville Corp., 14 C.B.C.2d 273, 57 B.R. 680 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986); see also Kilbarr Corp. v. General Servs. Admin. Office (In re Remington Rand Corp.), 836 F.2d 825, 18 C.B.C.2d 367 (3d Cir. 1988) (claim deemed to arise when government has requisite knowledge of its right to payment based on breach of contract even though claim has not accrued under the Contract Disputes Act of 1978).

n12

12. In re Oxford Management, 4 F.3d 1329 (5th Cir. 1993) (commissions owed by debtor on rents to be collected in the future were claims); In re Rosteck, 899 F.2d 694 (7th Cir. 1990) (prepetition contract obligation for future condominium assessments was a prepetition claim); Smith v. Smith (In re Smith), 81 B.R. 888 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1988).

n13

13. 209 F.3d 125 (2d Cir. 2000).

n14

14. In re A.H. Robins Co., 63 B.R. 986 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Grady v. A.H. Robins Co. (In re A.H. Robins Co.), 839 F.2d 198, 18 C.B.C.2d 176 (4th Cir. 1988); see also In re UNR Indus., Inc., 20 F.3d 766 (7th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 999, 115 S. Ct. 509, 130 L. Ed. 2d 416 (1994). Cf. Epstein v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors (In re Piper Aircraft Corp.), 58 F.3d 1573 (11th Cir. 1995) (prepetition conduct can give rise to claim only if there is relationship between identifiable claimant and that conduct; class of persons who at time of chapter 11 plan confirmation had no known injuries due to debtor's conduct did not have claims); Lemelle v. Universal Mfg. Corp., 18 F.3d 1268, 30 C.B.C.2d 1830 (5th Cir. 1994) (holding that while the term "claim" is meant to be given a broad interpretation when determining which claims are discharged in a bankruptcy case, it is not so broad as to include claims relating to injuries and manifestations of injuries that occurred after the plan was confirmed when there was no evidence contemporary with the bankruptcy case from which the debtor could have identified and notified the victims of the case).

n15

15. In re Altair Airlines, Inc., 727 F.2d 88, 10 C.B.C.2d 343 (3d Cir. 1984); see also In re Berry Estates, Inc., 12 C.B.C.2d 1023, 49 B.R. 1002 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985) (N.Y. State Division of Housing and Community Renewal has claim for excess rents charged by debtor to its tenants).

n16

16. See Goodman v. NLRB (In re Goodman), 18 C.B.C.2d 219, 81 B.R. 786 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1988).

n17

17. Epstein v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors (In re Piper Aircraft Corp.), 58 F.3d 1573 (11th Cir. 1995); see also Fogel v. Zell, 221 F.3d 955 (7th Cir. 2000).

n18

18. Storage Technology Corp. v. Storage Technology Fin. Corp. (In re Storage Technology Corp.), 55 B.R. 479 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1985).

n19

19. See Carrieri v. Jobs.com, Inc., 301 B.R. 187 (N.D. Tex. 2003) (right to have debtor repurchase preferred stock was equity security, not claim).

n20

20. See Mullen v. U.S., 696 F.2d 971, 7 C.B.C.2d 1074 (6th Cir. 1983); New York City Employees' Retirement Sys. v. Villarie (In re Villarie), 648 F.2d 810, 4 C.B.C.2d 494 (2d Cir. 1981).

n21

21. In re Water Valley Finishing, Inc., 139 F.3d 325 (2d Cir. 1998).

n22

22. O'Loughlin v. County of Orange, 229 F.3d 871 (9th Cir. 2000) (debtor's continued actions in violation of Americans with Disabilities Act could give rise to postpetition claims or damages not encompassed in debtor's discharge).

n23 23. 469 U.S. 274, 105 S. Ct. 705, 83 L. Ed. 2d 649, 11 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1985).

n24

24. 469 U.S. 274, 279, 105 S. Ct. 705, 708, 83 L. Ed. 2d 649, 656, 11 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1070.

n25

25. The state had the option of instituting contempt proceedings or a suit for environmental law violations against the debtor in Kovacs but failed to do so. 469 U.S. 274, 283, 105 S. Ct. 705, 710, 83 L. Ed. 2d 649, 658, 11 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1072 (1985); see also United States v. Robinson (In re Robinson), 55 B.R. 355 (M.D. Fla. 1985), reversing without explanation United States v. Robinson (In re Robinson), 12 C.B.C.2d 49, 46 B.R. 136 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1985) (bankruptcy court followed Kovacs despite the absence of a receiver and a de facto money judgment).

n26

26. In re Chateaugay Corp., 944 F.2d 997 (2d Cir. 1991).

n27

27. In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific R.R. Co., 974 F.2d 775 (7th Cir. 1992) (Bankruptcy Act case); In re Jensen, 25 C.B.C.2d 214, 127 B.R. 27 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1991); NCL Corp. v. Lone Star Bldg. Centers (Eastern) Inc., 144 B.R. 170 (S.D. Fla. 1992); In re National Gypsum Co., 27 C.B.C.2d 199, 139 B.R. 397 (N.D. Tex. 1991); In re Bicoastal Corp., 147 B.R. 258 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1992); In re Cottonwood Canyon Land Co., 146 B.R. 992 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1992) (debtor became liable at the time of disposal); Storage Technology Corp. v. Comite Pro Rescate de la Salud (In re Storage Technology Corp.), 117 B.R. 610 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990) (nature of claim is defined when triggering act--here, gas emission--occurred); see In re Chateaugay Corp., 944 F.2d 997, 25 C.B.C.2d 620 (2d Cir. 1991) (Environmental Protection Agency may have a claim under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act against the estate for prepetition acts that released or threatened the release of hazardous substances); Norwesco Dev. Corp. v. Pennsylvania, Dep't of Env'tl. Resources (In re Norwesco Dev. Corp.), 16 C.B.C.2d 145, 68 B.R. 123 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1986) (holding that breach of a state court order requiring the chapter 11 debtor to build a permanent water system for the town residents, although statutory, constitutes a claim for bankruptcy purposes). But see In re Reading Co., 115 F.3d 1111 (3d Cir. 1997) (claim arises when all elements of claim under nonbankruptcy law have accrued unless contingent claim exists because of prepetition legal relationship between parties); Al Tech Specialty Steel v. Allegheny Int'l (In re Allegheny Int'l), 126 B.R. 919 (W.D. Pa. 1991) (claim for cleaning up hazardous waste site arises when funds are expended for the cleanup and not when contamination occurs). Cf. Chemetron Corp. v. Jones, 72 F.3d 341, 34 C.B.C.2d 810 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1137, 116 S. Ct. 1424, 134 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1996) (implicitly accepting that claims by individuals for alleged injury from exposure to toxic chemicals as a result of time spent in area prior to bankruptcy case constituted prepetition claims).

n28

28. In re Torwico Elecs., Inc., 8 F.3d 146, 30 C.B.C.2d 86 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1576, 128 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1994).

n29

29. CMC Heartland Partners v. Union Pacific R.R. (In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific R.R. Co.), 78 F.2d 285 (7th Cir. 1996); In re Penn Central Transp. Co., 944 F.2d 164 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 906, 112 S. Ct. 1262, 117 L. Ed. 491 (1992) (because "legal relationship" giving rise to claim did not evolve until after the consummation date, retroactive environmental cleanup costs could be assessed against the reorganized company); United States v. Serafini, 135 B.R. 219 (M.D. Pa. 1991) (following Penn Central's binding precedent, court held that debt was not discharged because it was not provided for under the debtor's Chapter XI arrangement under the Bankruptcy Act); In re The Duplan Corp., 209 B.R. 324 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997) (where CERCLA was enacted four years after petition date, parties' contribution claim under CERCLA for prepetition contamination was not a prepetition claim).

n30

30. See California Dep't of Health Servs. v. Jensen, 995 F.2d 925, 29 C.B.C.2d 101 (9th Cir. 1993); In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific R.R. Co., 974 F.2d 775 (7th Cir. 1992) (Bankruptcy Act case); In re Chateaugay Corp., 944 F.2d 997, 25 C.B.C.2d 620 (2d Cir. 1991); In re National Gypsum Co., 27 C.B.C.2d 199, 139 B.R. 397 (N.D. Tex. 1991).

n31

31. In re National Gypsum Co., 27 C.B.C.2d 199, 139 B.R. 397 (N.D. Tex. 1992); see also California Dep't of Health Servs. v. Jensen, 995 F.2d 925, 29 C.B.C.2d 101 (9th Cir. 1993) (claim was fairly contemplated when the state agency (i) visited inactive site several weeks after the commencement of the debtors' bankruptcy cases and observed hazardous substances, (ii) knew a serious environmental hazard existed at the site, and (iii) notified the debtors of the condition); In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific R.R. Co., 974 F.2d 775 (7th Cir. 1992) (Bankruptcy Act case). Compare United States v. Union Scrap Iron & Metal, 123 B.R. 831 (Bankr. D.

Minn. 1990) (court declined to hold a prepetition claim discharged when the Environmental Protection Agency was not notified of the debtor's liability at the site and the debtor had not listed the liability in any schedule or disclosure statement in the bankruptcy).

n32

32. AM Int'l, Inc. v. Datacard Corp., 106 F.3d 1342 (7th Cir. 1997) (where there had been no visible signs of contamination, soil testing, involvement by the Environmental Protection Agency, publicized spills, or reports of releases to the Environmental Protection Agency, and debtor did not even realize until after confirmation that it faced CERCLA liability, purchaser of debtor's contaminated property "did not have sufficient information to tie [the debtor] to environmental contamination before [the debtor's] bankruptcy was confirmed"); NCL Corp. v. Lone Star Bldg. Centers (Eastern) Inc., 144 B.R. 170 (S.D. Fla. 1992) (contractual relationship between landlord and lessee, landlord's actual knowledge of site's potential condition, and landlord's ability to inspect the site rendered environmental cleanup claims fairly contemplated); Texaco, Inc. v. Sanders (In re Texaco, Inc.), 182 B.R. 937 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1995) (claims discharged where claimants had received either actual or constructive notice of the bar date, had contracts with the debtor, and knew of debtor's use of oil wells that allegedly had caused environmental contamination). Compare Chemetron Corp. v. Jones, 72 F.3d 341, 342 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1137, 116 S. Ct. 1424, 134 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1996) (remanding to the district court to determine whether claims by individuals alleging injury from exposure to toxic chemicals as a result of prepetition time spent in area could be brought four years after bar date under the excusable neglect standard).

n33

33. 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001 et seq.

n34

34. Under ERISA, "plan administrator" is a defined term for the fiduciary charged with administering the plan. The administrator is "the person specifically so designated by the terms of the plan." ERISA § 3(16)(A)(i), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16)(A)(i). The statute distinguishes between plan sponsors and plan administrators, providing that the plan sponsor becomes the plan administrator only if the plan does not designate an administrator. ERISA § 3(16)(A)(ii), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16)(A)(ii). "Plan sponsor" is a separate defined term for the employer who sets up an employee benefit plan. ERISA § 3(16)(B), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(16)(B).

n35

35. A "defined benefit pension plan" is a pension plan other than an individual account plan. ERISA § 3(35), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(35). Generally, a defined benefit pension plan is an employer-sponsored retirement plan that promises a specified benefit upon retirement (for example, a percentage of compensation for each year of service, a percentage of average annual compensation, or a fixed dollar amount per month).

n36

36. 29 U.S.C. § 1341.

n37

37. 29 U.S.C. § 1341.

n38

38. 29 U.S.C. § 1341.

n39

39. ERISA § 412, 29 U.S.C. § 1112.

n40

40. ERISA §§ 103-104; 29 U.S.C. §§ 10231024.

n41

41. ERISA § 105; 29 U.S.C. § 1025.

n42

42. See I.R.C. § 401(a); 26 U.S.C. § 401(a).

n43

43. I.R.C. § 401(a)(9); 26 USCS § 401(a)(9).

n44

44. 33 F.3d 509 (5th Cir. 1994).

n45

45. 33 F.3d 509, 510.

n46

46. 33 F.3d 509, 510.

n47

47. The PBGC is a wholly-owned United States government corporation established under section 4002 of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1302, to administer the pension plan termination program created under Title IV of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1301-1461.

n48

48. 33 F.3d 509, 510.

n49

49. 33 F.3d 509, 510.

n50

50. 33 F.3d 509, 510.

n51

51. 33 F.3d 509, 513.

n52

52. In re Esco Mfg. Co., 50 F.3d 315, 316 (5th Cir. 1995).

n53

53. 50 F.3d 315, 316.

n54

54. 50 F.3d 315, 316.

n55

55. 50 F.3d 315, 316.

n56

56. 162 F.3d 405 (6th Cir. 1998).

n57

57. In re Art Shirt Ltd., Inc., 93 B.R. 333 (E.D. Pa. 1988); In re Pulaski Highway Express, Inc., 57 B.R. 502, 504-508 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1986); In re Silver Wheel Freightlines, Inc., 57 B.R. 476 (Bankr. D. Or. 1985).

n58

58. 162 F.3d 405, 409.

n59

59. 200 B.R. 592, 20 E.B.C. 1869 (E.D. Mich. 1996).

n60

60. 200 B.R. 592, 593.

n61

61. Id.

n62

62. Id.

n63

63. Id.

n64

64. 495 U.S. 552, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067 (1990).

n65

65. 479 U.S. 36, 107 S. Ct. 353, 93 L. Ed. 2d 216, 15 C.B.C.2d 890 (1986).

n66

66. 495 U.S. 552, 558, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2130, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 596, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1070.

n67

67. 495 U.S. 552, 558, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2130, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 596, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1070 (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, p. 309 (1977)); see also In re Udell, 18 F.3d 403, 30 C.B.C.2d 1192 (7th Cir. 1994).

n68

68. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7).

n69

69. 495 U.S. 552, 559, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2131, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 596, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1071.

n70

70. 495 U.S. 552, 559, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 2131, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 597, 22 C.B.C.2d 1067, 1071.

n71

71. See Newton v. Fred Haley Poultry Farm (In re Newton), 5 C.B.C.2d 1181, 15 B.R. 708 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

n72

72. Section 1328(a) was amended to except from the chapter 13 discharge a debt "for restitution included in a sentence on the debtor's conviction of a crime" by both the Criminal Victim's Protection Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-581, effective as to petitions filed on or after November 15, 1990, and the Crime Control Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-647, effective as to petitions filed on or after November 29, 1990.

n73

73. 501 U.S. 78, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66, 24 C.B.C.2d 1171 (1991).

n74

74. 501 U.S. 78, 84, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 2154, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66, 75, 24 C.B.C.2d 1171, 1176.

n75

75. 11 U.S.C. § 102(2) provides: "claim against the debtor" includes claim against property of the debtor."

n76

76. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 309 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1978).

n77

77. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,090 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,406 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n78

78. 501 U.S. 78, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66, 24 C.B.C.2d 1171 (1991).

n79

79. See In re Cybermech Inc., 13 F.3d 818, 30 C.B.C.2d 696 (4th Cir. 1994) (debtor's later repudiation of contract gives purchaser right to pursue damages for breach of contract, which damages also constitute a "claim.").

n80

80. 125 F.3d 120 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1014, 118 S. Ct. 599, 139 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1997).

n81

81. See In re Aslan, 65 B.R. 826 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1986) (chapter 11 trustee has power to reject land sale contract and discharge ensuing claim because contract had clause calling for money damage remedy as well as remedy of specific performance, and if a judgment can be converted into money damages it is a claim under the Code).

n82

82. In re Chateaugay Corp., 944 F.2d 997 (2d Cir. 1991).

n83

83. In re Davis, 3 F.3d 113, 29 C.B.C.2d 1306 (5th Cir. 1993); see Gouveia v. Tazbir, 37 F.3d 295 (7th Cir. 1994) (state law remedy was both injunction and damages); In re Roxse Homes, 74 B.R. 810 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1987) (when the only remedy allowed by state law to enforce a judgment is a nonmonetary one, that judgment is not a claim in the context of the debtor's chapter 11 case).

n84

84. 186 F.3d 301 (3d Cir. 1999).

n85

85. Kennedy v. Medicap Pharms., Inc., 267 F.3d 493 (6th Cir. 2001); In re Udell, 18 F.3d 403 (7th Cir. 1994). But see Maids International, Inc. v. Ward (In re Ward), 194 B.R. 703, 712 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996).

n86

86. Compare In re Torwico Elecs., Inc., 8 F.3d 146, 30 C.B.C.2d 86 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1576, 128 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1994) (state court order requiring a chapter 11 debtor to clean up contamination on property it no longer owned did not constitute a claim), with In re Goodwin, 163 B.R. 825 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1993) (noting that a state or federal environmental agency typically has the option of performing the cleanup itself and seeking to recover the cleanup costs from the debtor).

n87

87. In re Torwico Elecs., Inc., 8 F.3d 146, 30 C.B.C.2d 86 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1576, 128 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1994) (the ruling that cleanup order was not a claim was warranted, in the court's view, because the state was not seeking money from the debtor and, therefore, had no right to payment under the statutory authority asserted in the state's cleanup order, even though provisions of state law permitted the state to clean up the property and seek reimbursement from the debtor); Sheerin v. Davis (In re Sheerin), 3 F.3d 113, 29 C.B.C.2d 1306 (5th Cir. 1993) (applying test outside the environmental context); Industrial Salvage, Inc. v. Illinois (In re Industrial Salvage, Inc.), 196 B.R. 784 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1996) (because state had not sought money from the debtors as an alternative to performance of debtors' obligations to close landfills, obligation was not a claim; court later states, however, that the state did not have the ability under state law to effect the closure itself and seek recovery from the debtor); see also AM Int'l, Inc. v. Datacard Corp., 106 F.3d 1342 (7th Cir. 1997) (even though party could seek recovery of cleanup costs under CERCLA, order requiring reorganized debtor to clean up property under RCRA did not create claim because no alternative right to payment is recognized under RCRA). Compare Durham Inland Wetlands & Watercourses Agency v. Jimmo (In re Jimmo), 204 B.R. 655 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1997) (because Injunction and Remediation Order provided that persons to be selected by the plaintiff restore the wetlands to their original condition, but the debtors were neither ordered nor permitted to do the work themselves and the debtors were ordered to reimburse the plaintiff for the cost of the work, the order constituted a claim).

n88

88. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 309 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1978).

n89

89.124 Cong. Rec. H11,090 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); S17,406 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n90

90.186 F.3d 1356 (Fed. Cir. 1999).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

177 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of Family Farmer Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 969

Collier on the Definition of Family Farmer Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis details the definition of a family farmer under Section 101(18) of the Bankruptcy Code, including the distinction between an individual family farmer and a corporate/partnership family farmer, the maximum indebtedness ceiling, the requirement that a debtor be engaged in farming, and the farm debt test and the farm income test.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 101(18), the term "family farmer" means--

(A) individual or individual and spouse engaged in a farming operation whose aggregate debts do not exceed $3,544,525 n1 and not less than 50 percent of whose aggregate noncontingent, liquidated debts (excluding a debt for the principal residence of such individual or such individual and spouse unless such debt arises out of a farming operation), on the date the case is filed, arise out of a farming operation owned or operated by such individual or such individual and spouse, and such individual or such individual and spouse receive from such farming operation more than 50 percent of such individual's or such individual and spouse's gross income for

(i) the taxable year preceding; or

(ii) each of the 2d and 3d taxable years preceding;

the taxable year in which the case concerning such individual or such individual and spouse was filed; or

(B) corporation or partnership in which more than 50 percent of the outstanding stock or equity is held by one family, or by one family and the relatives of the members of such family, and such family or such relatives conduct the farming operation, and

(i) more than 80 percent of the value of its assets consists of assets related to the farming operation;

(ii) its aggregate debts do not exceed $3,544,525 n2 and not less than 50 percent of its aggregate noncontingent, liquidated debts (excluding a debt for one dwelling which is owned by such corporation or partnership and which a shareholder or partner maintains as a principal residence, unless such debt arises out of a farming operation), on the date the case is filed, arise out of the farming operation owned or operated by such corporation or such partnership; and

(iii) if such corporation issues stock, such stock is not publicly traded. n3

Use of Definition in the Code. The definition of family farmer was enacted as part of the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 n4 along with the enactment of chapter 12 of the Code. The term "family farmer" is used in the definition of "family farmer with regular annual income," which is in turn used in section 109(f), which sets forth the eligibility requirements for filing for relief under chapter 12. n5

The Code contains definitions of both "farmer" and "family farmer" and the two terms should not be confused. The term "family farmer" is used to determine eligibility for filing for relief under chapter 12. The term "farmer" is used in sections 303(a), 1112(c) and 1307(e), which prohibit the filing of an involuntary case or an involuntary conversion to chapter 7 against a person who qualifies as a farmer. The two terms involve some overlap and the same person may fit both definitions or may qualify under one definition but not the other. Because of the overlap between the two definitions, many of the cases decided under the definition of farmer will be relevant to determining the definition of family farmer. n6 Another relevant definition is "family fisherman," which was enacted by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. n7 This definition was modeled on and closely tracks the definition of "family farmer." Accordingly, cases referring to comparable provisions in the definition of family fisherman will be relevant in interpreting provisions in the definition of family farmer.

Distinction Between Individual Family Farmer and Corporate/Partnership Family Farmer. The definition of family farmer is divided into two parts. The first applies to individuals, and the second applies to corporations and partnerships. Each sets up a different, though related, test for determining whether individuals, corporations and partnerships qualify as family farmers. Both have an aggregate indebtedness limitation of $3,544,525, n8 and require the debtor to be engaged in a farming operation at the time that the case is commenced. If the case involves an individual, the farming operation must be owned and operated by such individual or by such individual and such individual's spouse. If the case involves a corporation or partnership, the entity must be engaged in a farming operation and the farming operation must be conducted by a family that owns, either alone or in conjunction with relatives, more than 50 percent of the stock of the entity. For both individuals and entities, there is a further requirement that not less than 50 percent of the debtor's noncontingent, liquidated debts at the commencement of the case, other than debts for a dwelling used as a principal residence, must arise out of the debtor's farming operation. An individual debtor must fulfill one additional test. The individual debtor must have received from his or her farming operation at least 50 percent of such individual's gross income during the taxable year preceding the year in which the petition was filed or during each of the second and third taxable years preceding the year in which the petition was filed.

Maximum Indebtedness Ceiling. In order for either an individual debtor or a corporate or partnership debtor to qualify as a family farmer, the debtor cannot have aggregate debts in excess of $3,544,525. When chapter 12 was originally enacted in 1986, the debt limit was $1,500,000. This limit was raised to $3,237,000 as part of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. n9 Cases decided before the effective date of the 2005 Act will refer to the former debt ceiling of $1,500,000. The word "aggregate" is used in the definition of family farmer without qualification, in contrast to section 109(e) which sets forth the eligibility requirements for chapter 13. The indebtedness limitation in that section refers to "noncontingent, liquidated" debts. The lack of any qualification also stands in contrast to later language in the definition which uses the phrase "noncontingent, liquidated" to qualify the term "aggregate debts." The logical inference from this choice of language is that Congress explicitly intended that all of a person's debts be used in calculating the indebtedness ceiling. n10 This would certainly include government farm program indebtedness if the debtor's obligation under the program is styled as a loan. n11

If the validity of a debt is disputed, the court should make a preliminary determination with regard to the validity of the debt. If it is prima facie valid, it should be counted even though the debtor may have defenses to payment or rights of offset. n12 The date on which the aggregate indebtedness limitation is to be calculated is the date of commencement of the case. n13 Debts that have been forgiven or satisfied prior to filing should not be included. In determining the amount of the debtor's outstanding debts, the debtor's schedules should be accorded prima facie validity. n14

Debtor Must Be Engaged in Farming. A second element that is common to both the definition of an individual family farmer and of a corporate or partnership family farmer is that the debtor must be engaged in a farming operation at the time the case is commenced. n15 This requirement stands in contrast to the definition of farmer, which does not require that the debtor continue to be engaged in farming. n16 If a person has ceased farming, even if that person has been a lifelong farmer, that person would not meet the definition of family farmer. n17 If the cessation is only temporary, however, due to financial setbacks, and the debtor intends to resume farming in connection with the debtor's chapter 12 case, the debtor may nonetheless be held to be engaged in a farming operation. n18

Farm Debt Test. A third requirement common to the definitions of an individual family farmer and a corporate or partnership family farmer is that not less than 50 percent of the debtor's noncontingent, liquidated debts at the commencement of the case, other than debts for a dwelling used as a principal residence, must arise out of the debtor's farming operation. When chapter 12 was originally enacted in 1986, the percentage applicable under the farm debt test was 80 percent. The percentage was reduced to 50 percent by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005. n19 Cases decided before the effective date of the 2005 amendments will refer to the 80 percent requirement applicable at the time. Application of the farm debt requirement makes it necessary for the court to determine whether each of the debtor's debts "arises out of" a farming operation. n20 It is not enough, however, that the debt merely arise out of a farming operation. The debt must arise out of a farming operation in which the debtor plays a part. In one case, the Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit held that a guarantee of another person's farm loan would not be considered farm debt unless the guarantor could demonstrate an ownership interest or an operational involvement in the farming operation. n21

Farm Income Test. To qualify as a family farmer, an individual family farmer must fulfill a "farm income" test that is not applicable to a corporation or partnership desiring to qualify as a family farmer. To satisfy the farm income test, an individual must have received at least 50 percent of such individual's gross income from the individual's farming operation during the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year in which the petition was filed or during each of the second and third years preceding the taxable year in which the petition was filed. n22 When chapter 12 was originally enacted in 1986, the farm income test was measured only during the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year in which the petition was filed. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 expanded eligibility to also include individuals who could not meet the farm income test during the immediately preceding year but who could meet the test for both of the two prior years. n23 The result is that a farmer who ceased farming during the year before filing bankruptcy could still qualify for chapter 12 if the farmer met the farm income requirement during the two years before the farmer ceased farming. It should be noted, however, that at the time the petition is filed a family farmer must be "engaged in a farming operation." If a person ceased farming but has not resumed farming, the changes to the farm income requirement will not create eligibility. Determining whether the farm income test has been fulfilled requires the court to first determine the amount of the debtor's gross income during the relevant tax year and then to determine the portion of that income attributable to the debtor's farming operation. n24 Some courts have used the Internal Revenue Code definition of gross income to calculate the amount of the debtor's gross income, although this approach has not been universally followed. n25 In analyzing whether income can be considered farm-related, there is no statute such as the Internal Revenue Code to look to for guidance and a decision must be made on a case-by-case basis. Proceeds received from government farm programs have typically been considered farm income. n26 Income received from joint venture or sharecropping arrangements has also been considered farm income. n27 Proceeds from sale of real property have been held to be non-farm income when the debtor had not farmed the land that was sold. n28 Wages are not generally considered farm income, although an exception might be made for wages received by a person from a wholly-owned corporation. n29 Income received from sale of farm equipment has generally been held to be farm income. n30

There is a split of authority, however, with regard to income from rental of farmland. Some cases have held that rental income should not be considered farm income because the lessor does not bear the traditional risk of farming. n31 Others have held that the issue must be decided on a case-by-case basis in light of all relevant circumstances. n32 An important Eighth Circuit decision rejects this latter line of cases and stresses that the proper characterization of income received by a debtor must focus on the relationship between the income and a farming operation of the debtor. n33 If income is to be considered farm income, the debtor must be involved to some extent in the farming operation that gives rise to the income. Where the income consists of cash rent, the debtor must demonstrate that the debtor "had some significant degree of engagement in, played some significant operational role in, or had an ownership interest in the crop production" taking place on the rented farmland. n34

For a complete discussion of Code section 101, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $3,237,000.

n2

2. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $3,237,000.

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 101(18).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 99-554 (1986), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 7(a) (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1007(b) (2005) amended section 109(f) to change "family farmer with regular annual income" to "family farmer or family fisherman with regular annual income."

n6

6. See In re Wagner, 808 F.2d 542, 16 C.B.C.2d 28 (7th Cir. 1986); Armstrong v. Corn Belt Bank (In re Armstrong), 812 F.2d 1024, 16 C.B.C.2d 238 (7th Cir. 1986).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 101(19A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1007(a)(2) (2005).

n8

8. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $3,237,000.

n9

9. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1004 (2005). That Act also made the amount subject to the three-year adjustments specified in section 104(b). For cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007, the dollar amount is $3,544,525.

n10

10. See Quintana v. Internal Revenue Service (In re Quintana), 107 B.R. 234 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989); In re Vaughan, 100 B.R. 423 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1989); In re Carpenter, 79 B.R. 316 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987); see also Lindsey, Stephenson & Lindsey v. Federal Dep. Ins. Corp. (In re Lindsey, Stephenson & Lindsey), 995 F.2d 626 (5th Cir. 1993) (nonrecourse debts included in calculation of debt limit).

n11

11. In re Carpenter, 79 B.R. 316 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987); In re Stedman, 72 B.R. 49 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987) (full face amount of a debt owed to the Farm Credit System, including the equity portion of the loan, must be included within the debtor's aggregate indebtedness).

n12

12. Quintana v. Internal Revenue Service (In re Quintana), 107 B.R. 234 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989); In re Cross Timbers Ranch, 151 B.R. 923 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1993); In re Vaughn, 100 B.R. 423 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1989). But see In re Budde, 79 B.R. 35 (Bankr. Colo. 1987). In Budde, the debtor disputed the amount of interest claimed by a creditor. The amount of the disputed interest was critical in determining whether the debtor's debts exceeded the maximum. The court denied the creditor's motion to dismiss on the grounds that the court had insufficient evidence from which to make a determination. The court held, however, that dismissal was without prejudice to the creditor's submitting new evidence and raising the issue again at the confirmation hearing.

n13

13. In re Cross Timbers Ranch, 151 B.R. 923 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1993); In re Orr, 16 C.B.C.2d 640, 642 n.4, 71 B.R. 639, 641 n.4 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1987).

n14

14. In In re Labig, 74 B.R. 507 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987), the court held that the schedules create a rebuttable presumption with regard to the amount of the debtor's indebtedness but that a creditor may overcome the presumption by introducing evidence controverting the schedules. If a creditor does so, the burden of proof on the amount of the debt belongs to the debtor. But see In re LLL Farms, 22 C.B.C.2d 1182, 111 B.R. 1016 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1990), where the court held that three sisters who equally owned a farm that was bought for their father and operated by one of their sons were eligible for relief under chapter 12, even though they held outside jobs and none lived on the farm or personally operated it. A debtor who elects not to plant a crop and to rent his land on a cash basis, but who can provide clear and convincing evidence that such act is based on sound business judgment that such drastic steps are necessary in order to save the farming business, has met the burden of proving that he is a "family farmer." In re Hettinger, 20 C.B.C.2d 1466, 95 B.R. 110 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1989).

n15

15. The term "farming operation" is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101(21).

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 101(20); see Potmesil v. Alexandria Prod. Credit Ass'n, 11 C.B.C.2d 953, 42 B.R. 731 (W.D. La. 1984).

n17

17. See In re Buckingham, 197 B.R. 97 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1996) (farmers who had ceased farming but intended to lease out farm to third parties for grazing land not engaged in a farming operation); In re Tart, 16 C.B.C. 2d 1278, 73 B.R. 78 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1987) (farmers who had become disabled and could no longer continue farming not engaged in a farming operation); In re Haschke, 77 B.R. 223 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1987) (debtors who had leased out farmland, sold their farm equipment, and taken nonfarm jobs not engaged in farming operation despite retaining interest in stored crops).

n18

18. Compare Otoe County Nat'l Bank v. Easton (In re Easton), 883 F.2d 630, 634 (8th Cir. 1989) (renting out farmland, by itself, does not constitute being engaged in a farming operation; the debtor must be directly involved in the production of crops or the raising of livestock), with In re Mikkelsen Farms, Inc., 16 C.B.C.2d 1247, 74 B.R. 280 (Bankr. D. Or. 1987) (noting that five factors can be considered relevant in determining whether debtors who had leased out their farmland could be considered engaged in a farming operation: (1) whether the debtor remains physically present on the farm, (2) whether the debtor owns traditional farm assets, (3) whether leasing land is a form of "scaling down" the debtor's farming business, (4) the form of the lease between the debtor and the lessee (i.e., is the lease a crop share lease in which the lessor bears some of the risk of the farming venture), and (5) whether the debtor intended to continue its own investment of assets and labor to produce crops or livestock in the future). See also Cottonport Bank v. Dichiara, 193 B.R. 798 (W.D. La. 1996) (debtors who held full time non-farming jobs were held to be "engaged in a farming operation" where they continued some farming on a reduced basis); In re Koppes, 2000 Bankr. LEXIS 1898 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa Jan. 5, 2000) (debtors who ceased farming not engaged in farming operation); In re Fogle, 87 B.R. 493 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1988) (debtor who had sold his farm equipment but not his farmland, and who testified that he intended to continue in farming through a joint venture, was considered to be engaged in farming).

n19

19. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1004 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n20

20. Compare In re Douglass, 77 B.R. 714 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1987) (debt secured by mortgage on service station considered farm debt because loan proceeds used in debtor's farming operation), with In re Kan Corp., 101 B.R. 726 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1988) (loan secured by the debtor's farmland did not constitute farm debt because proceeds of loan had been used to refinance an existing loan used to acquire a beer distributorship). See also In re McSwine Creek Farms, Inc., 276 B.R. 461 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 2000) (debt encumbering property transferred to the debtor on the eve of filing by an insider not counted for debt calculation where property excluded from the debtor's estate); In re Roberts, 78 B.R. 536 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1987) (inheritance taxes assessed in connection with death of the debtor's mother arose out of a farming operation because they were related to the debtor's acquisition of farm); In re Rinker, 17 C.B.C.2d 488, 75 B.R. 65 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) (debt arising out of lawsuit settlement is farm debt because lawsuit dispute was over acquisition of farmland).

n21

21. Otoe County Nat'l Bank v. Easton (In re Easton), 883 F.2d 630 (8th Cir. 1989).

n22

22. The test will be applied based on taxable years even if the case was filed late in a calendar year. In re Fogle, 87 B.R. 493 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1988) (using 1986 tax year for case filed December 31, 1987); In re Shepherd, 17 C.B.C.2d 92, 75 B.R. 501 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1987) (using 1985 tax year for case filed December 31, 1986).

n23

23. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1004 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n24

24. The farm income test is to be determined at the outset of the case based on facts. See In re Grey, 145 B.R. 86 (Bankr. D. Kan. 1992) (rejecting the debtor's argument that if pending lawsuit against Commodity Credit Corporation was successful, the debtor could amend its income tax return and meet the farm income requirement).

n25

25. See In re Wagner, 808 F.2d 542, 16 C.B.C.2d 28 (7th Cir. 1986) (applying Internal Revenue Code definition of gross income in a case decided under identical language in the definition of farmer). Accord In re Vernon, 101 B.R. 87 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1989); Shamblin v. Dutton (In re Dutton), 18 C.B.C.2d 1323, 86 B.R. 651 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1988); In re Fogle, 87 B.R. 493 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1988); In re Bergmann, 78 B.R. 911 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 1987); In re Etheridge, 68 B.R. 235 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1986) (considering definition of farmer). But see In re Rott, 73 B.R. 366 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987) (holding that Internal Revenue Code definition of gross income would not be considered binding); In re Faber, 78 B.R. 934, 935 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) (stating in dictum that Internal Revenue Code definition would be applied except where doing so would lead to a result "absurdly irreconcilable" with overall purpose of chapter 12); In re Snider, 99 B.R. 374 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1989) (same); see also In re Lamb, 209 B.R. 759 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1997) (using Internal Revenue Code definition of gross income and holding that gross income includes distributive share of partnership income).

n26

26. In re Jessen, 82 B.R. 490 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1988); In re Shepherd, 17 C.B.C.2d 92, 97, 75 B.R. 501, 504 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1987); In re Welch, 16 C.B.C.2d 1431, 74 B.R. 401 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987).

n27

27. In re Martin, 78 B.R. 593 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1987); In re Welch, 16 C.B.C.2d 1431, 74 B.R. 401 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1987).

n28

28. Integra Bank v. Ross (In re Ross), 270 B.R. 710 (Bankr. S.D. Ill. 2001); In re Sohrakoff, 85 B.R. 848 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1988); Aud v. Van Fossan (In re Van Fossan), 18 C.B.C.2d 65, 82 B.R. 77 (Bankr. W.D. Ark. 1987) But see In re Bircher, 241 B.R. 11 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1999) (capital gain from farmland held to be farm income).

n29

29. See Shamblin v. Dutton (In re Dutton), 18 C.B.C.2d 1323, 86 B.R. 651 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1988) (work done on another person's farm not considered to be farm income); In re Schafroth, 18 C.B.C.2d 149, 81 B.R. 509 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) (wages from family corporation held to be farm income); In re Hampton, 100 B.R. 535 (Bankr. D. Or. 1987) (contra); In re Pierce, 175 B.R. 153 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1994) (payment to debtor for managing farming business received from a partnership in which the debtor was a partner considered farm income).

n30

30. See Armstrong v. Corn Belt Bank (In re Armstrong), 812 F.2d 1024, 16 C.B.C.2d 238 (7th Cir. 1987) (holding, in case considering identical language in definition of farmer, that proceeds of sale of farm equipment constitutes farm income); In re Barnett, 162 B.R. 535 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1993) (same); In re Haschke, 77 B.R. 223 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1987) (proceeds from sale of farm equipment are farm income even though debtors had sold all of their farm equipment and debtors were no longer engaged in farming; the court, however, held that the debtors were not eligible for chapter 12 because of the fact that they were no longer engaged in farming); In re Shepherd, 17 C.B.C.2d 92, 75 B.R. 501 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1987) (farm equipment sale proceeds are farm income even though the debtor sold all of the debtor's equipment). But see In re Burke, 18 C.B.C.2d 141, 81 B.R. 971 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) (noting that proceeds from sale of farm equipment would not be considered farm income if the sale involved all the debtor's farm equipment and the debtor did not intend to continue farming).

n31

31. See Armstrong v. Corn Belt Bank (In re Armstrong), 812 F.2d 1024, 16 C.B.C.2d 238 (7th Cir. 1987) (holding, in a case considering identical language in the definition of farmer, that lease income is not farm income when the rent is paid in cash and up front because the lessor does not bear the traditional risks of farming); In re Krueger, 104 B.R. 223 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1988) (cash rent from pasture lease not farm income because the landlord bore no risk); In re Haschke, 77 B.R. 223 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1987) (cash rent is not farm income when the debtors are no longer engaged in farming and no longer owned any farm equipment); In re Seabloom, 78 B.R. 543 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 1987) (cash rent does not constitute farm income despite fact that the rent was not payable until after harvest and debtors had indicated an intent to resume farming the land).

n32

32. This approach was suggested by the dissenting opinion in Armstrong v. Corn Belt Bank (In re Armstrong), 812 F.2d 1024 (7th Cir. 1987). See In re Coulston, 98 B.R. 280 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1989) (cash rent is farm income where debtor compelled to rent out farmland due to financial difficulties and where debtor continued a related farming operation); In re Lamb, 209 B.R. 759 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1997) (same). Cases employing this approach in the Eighth Circuit have been disapproved by the Easton decision, though it is possible that application of the Easton approach may have led to the same outcome. See, e.g., In re Vernon, 101 B.R. 87 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1989) (cash rent is farm income where lease terminable at will and entered into to save farm); In re Hettinger, 20 C.B.C.2d 1466, 95 B.R. 110 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1989) (cash rent is farm income where debtors were lifelong farmers and used lease income to pay debts secured by their farm); In re Jessen, 82 B.R. 490 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1988) (cash rent considered farm income when debtors, who had been farming for over twenty years, were forced to cease farming due to financial difficulties, even though debtors apparently leased all of their land and sold all of their farm equipment); In re Burke, 18 C.B.C.2d 141, 81 B.R. 971 (Bankr. S.D. Iowa 1987) (crop share rent from debtors' wholly owned corporation considered farm income); In re Rott, 17 C.B.C.2d 381, 73 B.R. 366 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1987) (cash rent from debtor's son considered farm income when the farming operations of debtor and son were related and rent would not have been payable had the son's crop failed).

n33

33. Otoe County Nat'l Bank v. Easton (In re Easton), 883 F.2d 630 (8th Cir. 1989). Still another approach was taken in In re Creviston, 157 B.R. 380 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1993), which contains an additional list of factors to be considered in analyzing this issue.

n34

34. 883 F.2d 630, 636.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

178 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of "Family Fisherman" Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 970

Collier on the Definition of "Family Fisherman" Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis details the definition of "family fisherman" and "family fisherman with a regular income" under Section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code, including issues pertaining to individual versus corporate or partnership family fishermen, maximum aggregate debt, and the requirement that a debtor be engaged in a commercial fishing operation.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Family Fisherman. Pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 101.19A, the term "family fisherman" means--

(A) an individual or individual and spouse engaged in a commercial fishing operation--

(i) whose aggregate debts do not exceed $1,642,500 n1 and not less than 80 percent of whose aggregate noncontingent, liquidated debts (excluding a debt for the principal residence of such individual or such individual and spouse, unless such debt arises out of a commercial fishing operation), on the date the case is filed, arise out of a commercial fishing operation owned or operated by such individual or such individual and spouse; and

(ii) who receive from such commercial fishing operation more than 50 percent of such individual's or such individual's and spouse's gross income for the taxable year preceding the taxable year in which the case concerning such individual or such individual and spouse was filed; or

(B) a corporation or partnership--

(i) in which more than 50 percent of the outstanding stock or equity is held by--

(I) 1 family that conducts the commercial fishing operation; or

(II) 1 family and the relatives of the members of such family, and such family or such relatives conduct the commercial fishing operation; and

(ii) (I) more than 80 percent of the value of its assets consists of assets related to the commercial fishing operation;

(II) its aggregate debts do not exceed $1,642,500ⁿ² and not less than 80 percent of its aggregate noncontingent, liquidated debts (excluding a debt for 1 dwelling which is owned by such corporation or partnership and which a shareholder or partner maintains as a principal residence, unless such debt arises out of a commercial fishing operation), on the date the case is filed, arise out of a commercial fishing operation owned or operated by such corporation or such partnership; and

(III) if such corporation issues stock, such stock is not publicly traded.

The definition of "family fisherman" was enacted by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 as part of the provisions expanding the scope of chapter 12 to include family fishermen.ⁿ³ The term "family fisherman" is used in the definition of "family fisherman with regular annual income," which is itself used in section 109(f), which sets forth the eligibility requirements for filing a case under chapter 12.

Individual vs. Corporate or Partnership Family Fishermen. The definition of family fisherman is divided into two parts. The first part applies to individuals and the second part applies to corporations and partnerships. Each part sets up a slightly different test for determining whether an individual, a corporation, or a partnership will qualify as a family fisherman. Both parts have an aggregate indebtedness limitation of $1,642,500ⁿ⁴ and require the debtor to be engaged in a commercial fishing operation at the time the case is commenced. Both also require that not less than 50 percent of the debtor's noncontingent, liquidated debts at the commencement of the case, other than debts for a dwelling used as a principal residence, must arise out of the debtor's commercial fishing operation. An individual debtor must fulfill one additional requirement. The individual must have received from his or her fishing operation at least 50 percent of such individual's gross income from the individual's commercial fishing operation during the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year in which the petition was filed or during each of the second and third years preceding the taxable year in which the petition was filed. The definition of family fisherman was modeled on and closely tracks the definition of family farmer. Accordingly, cases referring to comparable provisions in the definition of family farmer will be relevant in interpreting provisions in the definition of family fisherman.

Maximum Aggregate Debt. For a debtor to qualify as a family fisherman, a debtor cannot have aggregate debts in excess of $1,642,500. This debt limit is equally applicable to both individual debtors and debtors that are corporations or partnerships. For some reason, the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 set the debt ceiling for family fishermen at $1,500,000 at the same time that it raised the debt ceiling for family farmers from $1,500,000 to $3,237,000.ⁿ⁵ This was probably an inadvertent error but nonetheless will constitute the debt limit until changed by congressional action. The word "aggregate" is used in the definition of family fisherman without qualification, in contrast to section 109(e), which sets forth the eligibility requirements for chapter 13. The indebtedness limitation in that section refers to "noncontingent, liquidated" debts. The lack of any qualification also stands in contrast to later language in the definition which uses the phrase "noncontingent, liquidated" to qualify the term "aggregate debts." The logical inference from this choice of language is that Congress explicitly intended that all of a person's debts be used in calculating the indebtedness ceiling. If the validity of a debt is disputed, the court should make a preliminary determination with regard to the validity of the debt. If it is prima facie valid, it should be counted even if the debtor may have defenses to payment or right of offset. The date on which the aggregate indebtedness limitation is to be calculated is the date of commencement of the case. Debts that have been forgiven or satisfied prior to filing should not be included. In determining the amount of the debtor's outstanding debts, the debtor's schedules should be accorded prima facie validity.

Engaged in Commerical Fishing Operation. A second element that is common to both the definition of an individual commercial fisherman and a corporate or partnership commercial fisherman is that the debtor must be engaged in a commercial fishing operation.ⁿ⁶ If the case involves an individual, the commercial fishing operation must be owned and operated by such individual or by such individual and such individual's spouse. If the case involves a corporation or partnership, the entity must be engaged in a commercial fishing operation and the commercial fishing operation must be conducted by a family that owns, either alone or in conjunction with relatives, more than 50 percent of the stock of the entity. The "engaged in a commercial fishing operation" language is phrased in the present tense. If a person has ceased fishing operations, even if the person was a lifelong commercial fisherman, that person would not meet the definition of family fisherman. If the cessation is only temporary, however, due to financial setbacks, and the debtor intends to resume commercial fishing in connection with the debtor's chapter 12 case, the debtor may nonetheless be held to engaged in a commercial fishing operation.

A requirement common to both individuals and corporations and partnerships is that not less than 50 percent of the debtor's contingent, liquidated debts at the commencement of the case, other than debts for a dwelling used as a principal residence, arise out of the debtor's commercial fishing operation. This requirement makes it necessary for the court to determine whether each of the debtor's debts "arise out of" a commercial fishing operation. n7

Family Fisherman with Regular Annual Income. The term "family fisherman with regular annual income" means a family fisherman whose annual income is sufficiently stable and regular to enable such family fisherman to make payments under a plan under chapter 12 of title 11. The definition of "family fisherman with regular annual income" was enacted by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 as part of the provisions expanding the scope of chapter 12 to include family fishermen. n8 The term is used in section 109(f) with respect to eligibility for relief under chapter 12 of the Code. n9

Analyses of the term "family farmer with regular annual income" are equally applicable to family fishermen. However, while the "regular annual income" requirement has rarely been an impediment to chapter 12 relief with regard to family farmers, perhaps the same will not be true with regard to family fishermen. If the income of a family fisherman is so erratic or unstable as not to be considered regular, a court might find that the family fisherman does not qualify for chapter 12 relief. It is more likely, however, that a court will find the family fisherman to be eligible and consider the stability of the family fisherman's income in the context of whether the chapter 12 plan is feasible.

For a complete discussion of Code section 101, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $1,500,000.

n2

2. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $1,500,000.

n3

3. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1007(a)(2), (c) (2005).

n4

4. For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the dollar amount was $1,500,000.

n5

5. Both debt ceilings are subject to the three-year adjustment provided for in section 104(b). For cases commenced on or after April 1, 2007, the dollar amounts are $3,544,525 and $1,642,500 for family farmers and family fishermen, respectively.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 101(7A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1007(a)(1) (2005).

n7

7. There are numerous cases considering the same issue in the context of the definition of family farmer. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.18 (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1007(a)(2), (c) (2005).

n9

9. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 (Matthew Bender).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

179 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of "Insolvent" Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 971

Collier on the Definition of "Insolvent" Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Under the Bankruptcy Code, there is no requirement that a debtor be insolvent to obtain relief under title 11. Section 109(d) states only a person that may be a debtor under chapter 7 may be a debtor under chapter 11. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the definition of insolvent under the Code, including issues pertaining to what property is included, municipal insolvency, community property states, fair valuation of property, and debts.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The term insolvent means--

(A) with reference to an entity other than a partnership and a municipality, financial condition such that the sum of such entity's debts is greater than all of such entity's property, at a fair valuation, exclusive of--

- (i) property transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud such entity's creditors; and
- (ii) property that may be exempted from property of the estate under section 522 of this title;

(B) with reference to a partnership, financial condition such that the sum of such partnership's debts is greater than the aggregate of, at a fair valuation--

- (i) all of such partnership's property, exclusive of property of the kind specified in subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph; and
- (ii) the sum of the excess of the value of each general partner's nonpartnership property, exclusive of property of the kind specified in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, over such partner's nonpartnership debts; and

(C) with reference to a municipality, financial condition such that the municipality is--

- (i) generally not paying its debts as they become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute; or

(ii) unable to pay its debts as they become due. n1

Under the Code, there is no requirement that a debtor be insolvent to obtain relief under title 11. Section 109(d) states only a person that may be a debtor under chapter 7 may be a debtor under chapter 11. No requirement of insolvency is enunciated for filing under either chapter. In an involuntary case, a debtor need only be unable to pay its debts as such debts become due. n2 This represents a significant departure from the Act concerning the grounds for involuntary bankruptcy which required balance sheet insolvency n3 and an act of bankruptcy. n4

The term insolvent has particular applicability under the Code in the context of avoidance actions. It is relevant in ascertaining whether a transfer is preferential for purposes of avoiding the transfer or substituting the trustee in lieu of the transferee, n5 for finding that a transfer that was made or an obligation that was incurred was constructively fraudulent, n6 and for determining whether a judicial lien can be either set aside or made available for the estate. n7

The definition of insolvent as found under the Act was applicable to persons--a term having a specific meaning in section 1(23) of the Act, rather than entities as it appears under the Code. Entity is specifically defined under the Code in section 101(15) and encompasses the term person within it. In addition, an estate, trust, governmental unit, and a United States Trustee are entities. The Code, however, further differentiates between an entity other than a partnership and a municipality (subparagraph (A)), a partnership (subparagraph B), and a municipality (subparagraph C). A slightly varying test of insolvency is to be applied in each.

In the case of an entity other than a partnership and a municipality, the test is whether the debts of such entity are greater than its assets, at a fair valuation, exclusive of property exempted under section 522 or fraudulently transferred. The standard of insolvency for a partnership is modified with respect to the liability of a general partner for the partnership debts. Property fraudulently transferred is also excluded in computation of a partnerships financial condition. However, the sum of the excess of the value of each general partners separate property, exclusive of exempt property and fraudulently transferred property, over such partners separate debts is also excluded. The standard of insolvency for a municipality is that the municipalitys financial condition is such that it is generally not paying its debts as they become due unless those debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute, or the municipality is unable to pay its debts as they become due. n8 In order to be found insolvent for purposes of chapter 9 eligibility, a municipality must prove that it will be unable to pay its debts as they become due in the current fiscal year, or, based on an adopted budget, in the next fiscal year. In determining whether the municipality is insolvent, a court should apply a prospective analysis with respect to the debtors ability to pay its debts and should examine the debtors cash flow, not the debtors projected budget deficits. n9

Property to Be Included. The composition of the assets side of the statutory assets-and-liabilities test of insolvency is circumscribed by the formula the sum of (in the case of an entity other than a partnership or municipality) such entitys property, exclusive of property transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud such entitys creditors and property that may be exempted from property of the estate under [section 522 of title 11]. The Code, like the Act, fails to give a specific definition of the breadth of the meaning in which the word property is used. It has been held to denote something subject to ownership, transfer, or exclusive possession or enjoyment, which may be brought within the dominion of a court through some recognized process. n10 Simply stated, property signifies something which is considered an asset by business practice. n11 Under the Code, property covers not only property rights in real estate and chattels but also choses-in-action n12 and other incorporeal rights of various types such as contract rights, tort claims, interest in patents, patent rights, copyrights and trademarks, and applications therefor, memberships in trade organizations, n13 as well as licenses, franchises and permits under the state and federal regulatory statutes, even where the transfer requires certain approvals. n14 Under the Act, the single express exclusion which the statutory definition of insolvency specified, related to property conveyed or concealed by the debtor with the intent to defraud, hinder or delay his creditors. The Act thus denied the debtor and, correspondingly, a creditor who has received a preference, the benefit of adding such property to the assets side of the comparison test. Section 1(19) of the Act was written in terms first specifying active conduct on the part of the debtor and then enunciating passive conduct as within the exclusion, (i.e., permitted to be concealed). Substantively, the Code reaches the same result. The wording of the Code is objective, e.g., exclusive of property transferred, concealed or removed. Presumably, this phrase would include the active and the passive conduct specifically set forth in the Act. The prohibition extends no further than the actual interest transferred. When the fraudulent transfer consists of the giving of a mortgage, the debtor is still allowed to include the value of its remaining interest in the land or of the equity of redemption within its assets. n15 But where the transfer is outright, no such privilege exists, and it does not matter that the transfer was meant to be merely temporary or subject to a trust for the benefit of a fraudulent grantor. n16

The mental state required by the exclusionary clause in section 101(32) is the actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, that is, only conduct that would render the transfer avoidable under section 548(a)(1)(A). n17 The statute contains no analogous exclusion with respect to property which has been the object of a preferential transfer, and no special regulation is needed. This is because a preferential transfer satisfies an antecedent debt of the debtor, and therefore, does not diminish the estate. There is no reason to doubt that property which has been conveyed for the purpose of a preferential transfer, to the extent of such conveyance, thereafter has ceased to form a part of the debtors estate inasmuch as at common law such transaction is valid against the other creditors. Thus, it cannot be counted as property of the debtor in determining solvency at the time of subsequent occurrences. n18 On the other hand, the property so transferred must be counted among the debtors assets when solvency at the time of such transfer itself is to be decided. n19 Section 1(19) of the Act failed to exclude property that was exempt under state law, and therefore, such assets were typically valued in determining the question of the alleged bankrupts insolvency. Under the Code, however, such exemption is made express in the section 101(32) definition of insolvency, and is repeated in section 522, which states that such property may be exempted from an insolvency computation. Section 522(b)(2)(A) in turn, states that an individual debtor may exempt from property of the estate either:

any property that is exempt under Federal law, other than subsection (d) of this section, or State or local law that is applicable on the date of the filing of the petition .

While the word property is used in the definition in a broad sense and does not require that the assets involved are either subject to the reach of creditors or freely available to be used for the payment of the debtors debts, n20 it is obvious that interests which are subject to creditors remedies must necessarily be considered for inclusion in the balance sheet test. n21 In particular, property which is subject to a valid and subsistent lien by judgment, attachment, garnishment, execution or supplementary proceedings against the debtor may to that extent still be counted as property, although the debtor has parted with its ownership at the critical date. n22 On the other hand, the mere fact that interests may be reached by creditors process does not necessarily signify that those interests possess actual value under the valuation standards of the definition. Thus, it has been held that the debtors right to income from a trust fund, although at least in part subject to garnishee execution under the controlling local law, has nevertheless no sale value of substance, where such right is contingent on the debtors survival and applicable state law denies enforcement of a voluntary assignment of such interest and, in addition, prohibits insurance without the debtors consent. n23 Analogous considerations apply, of course, with even greater cogency to assets which, because of their contingent or otherwise intangible nature, are withdrawn from the local collection proceedings, but still possess commercial transferability, and thus convertibility into cash. n24 Such interests, which include rights of subrogation, contribution or reimbursement, rights to funds, good will of business, expectancies and contingent interests in the corpus of a testamentary trust, must also be valued for inclusion within the asset side of the balance sheet test. n25 Of course, value that is speculative or remote will not be attributed to the property in question. n26 For example, attempts to allocate a separate pecuniary value to the good will of a financially distressed business have not met with tangible success. n27 The definition of insolvent is modified to account for the liability of a general partner for the partnerships debts. n28 Partnership property, exclusive of property transferred, concealed or removed with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud the partnership creditors, and the surplus value of each general partners property, exclusive of exemptions, n29 will be included as partnership assets.

Municipal Insolvency. The definition of insolvent in section 101(32) was amended in 1988 by Pub. L. No. 100-597. n30 The Act added the words and a municipality in subparagraph (A) after the word partnership, and added subparagraph (C), which provides that

[insolvent means] with reference to a municipality, financial condition such that the municipality is--(i) generally not paying its debts as they become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute; or (ii) unable to pay its debts as they become due. n31

In order to be found insolvent for purposes of chapter 9 eligibility, a municipality must prove that it will be unable to pay its debts as they become due in the current fiscal year, or, based on an adopted budget, in the next fiscal year. In determining whether the municipality is insolvent, a court should apply a prospective analysis with respect to the debtors ability to pay its debts and should examine the debtors cash flow, not the debtors projected budget deficits. n32

Community Property States. Separate and special consideration must be given to the operation of section 101(32) in the community property states. Unfortunately, the divergences among the different community property regimes and recent amendments to various community property laws n33 make the subject complex. The fundamental complexities stem from the fact that the statutory formula for insolvency, referring to the aggregate of the debtors property as well as the debts, is ill-suited to the intricate blending of assets and liabilities attendant to the community property systems. Because creditors of both spouses may satisfy their claims from community property, it should have been made clear that the test for insolvency takes all such claims into account. n34 While the Code does avoid the problem of cutting off the right of the nondebtor spouses creditors to reach community property in the estate, n35 nothing was done to integrate this same policy consideration into the definition of insolvency. Further difficulties derive from the legislative technique which makes the criteria of insolvency separate from, but not wholly independent of, the equally troublesome questions of what assets pass to the trustee (section 541) n36 and of what debts are affected by a discharge (section 524). n37 Therefore, a sensible interpretation of section 101(32) requires due regard for the ramifications flowing from these related matters.

The situation in California may serve as an example for one approach. Statutory language and judicial interpretation have established in California that the marital community is not regarded as a separate entity, but rather, there are only debts of the husband and debts of the wife. n38 Under California law, all community property, as well as the separate property of the contracting spouse, is obligated for the contracts of either spouse made after marriage and prior to legal separation. n39 This is consistent with the concept that management and control resides in both spouses. n40 The separate property and earnings during marriage of one spouse are exempt from liability for debts of the other spouse which were contracted before marriage. n41 Broader liability is imposed where debts are incurred for necessities of life. Creditors providing such necessities are entitled to resort to both the community property and to the separate property of each spouse. n42 With respect to tort claims, a distinction is made between torts committed while performing an activity beneficial to the marital community and those committed under other circumstances. In the former instance, the liability must be satisfied first from the community property and then from the separate property of the spouse who committed the tort. In the latter, the separate property of the tortfeasor must be exhausted before the community property is liable. n43 As a result of section 541(a)(2) of the Code, a petition by one spouse passes not only that spouses separate property to the estate but also the whole of the community property, n44 with the possible exception of a community property business solely managed by the nondebtor. This composition of the estate dictates that creditors of both spouses share in its distribution, n45 and affects the discharge granted to the debtor. n46 The determination of the solvency or insolvency of either spouse under the California community property system should proceed on the basis of the framework outlined above. Accordingly, in determining the solvency of a spouse, the assets which are to be counted consist of a debtors entire separate estate and all of the community property, except exempt property and a community property business under the sole management and control of the nondebtor if, under state law, creditors of the spouse may not reach this asset, n47 but including possible rights of repayment from the nondebtors separate property. n48 The debts which must be balanced against these assets are the debts of the debtor and such debts of the nondebtor spouse as are entitled to satisfaction from community property, n49 with due regard to marshaling of the nondebtors creditors claims against assets of the nondebtor spouse which do not pass to the estate.

n50 Analogous considerations apply to the determination of solvency or insolvency in the other community property states. In each case, reference should be made to applicable state law and to the provisions of sections 541(a)(2) and 101(7) of the Code. n51

Fair Valuation of Property. The Code definition of insolvency is essentially a balance sheet test. A debtor is insolvent when its liabilities exceed its assets. n52 Insolvency is determined by whether assets exceed liabilities, and not, except in the case of a municipality, whether the debtor was able to pay its debts as they became due. n53 The application of an assets-and-liabilities test requires of necessity a valuation of the property involved. This may be a difficult task, however, because value is not a natural or fixed quality, but will vary according to the purposes and policies which dictate the determinative judgments and the processes by which it is ascertained. n54 The statute describes the controlling standard of valuation with one brief phrase: at a fair valuation. But the meaning and effect of this term in concrete cases generates a formidable and, on the surface, not always consistent stream of adjudications.

Valuation, in general, will signify the reasonable estimate of what can be realized from the assets by converting them into, or reducing them to cash, under carefully guarded if not idealized conditions. Fair valuation is not the same as reasonably equivalent value. It is necessary to look at market value, and not distress value, to reach a fair valuation. n55

On the one hand, the statutory definition does not imply that a person can only be deemed solvent at a particular time when the amount which creditors would be able to actually obtain at the time is sufficient to pay all debts then existing. n56 Otherwise, the controlling test would possess greater stringency than the one applicable under the traditional equity concept of insolvency, a result which the framers of the clause definitely intended to obviate. Rather, the underlying policy requires disregard of, and allowances for, unavoidable sacrifices or other adverse effects caused by the particular distress of the debtor. n57 Accordingly, saleable value and fair value are not synonymous. n58 In particular, the latter test ordinarily is not met by reliance on the sum which could be realized at a foreclosure, execution or receivership sale. n59 Nor is it satisfied by equating it with the price which the debtor could obtain if he or she were forced to instantly dispose of the assets in question. Conversely, compliance with the appropriate standard likewise does not require the taking into account of the sum which could be realized only through retail sale of certain articles in the slow process of trade, n60 or through collection from debtors without property by patient and persistent effort, n61 or through a protracted search for a buyer who because of a special use for a particular item or other special circumstances is willing to pay an extraordinary price. n62 Couching the mandates of fair valuation in positive terms it can be said that they direct the estimate of what can be realized out of the assets within a reasonable time n63 either through collection or sale at the regular market value, n64 conceiving the latter as the amount which could be obtained for the property in question within such period by a capable and diligent effort n65 from an interested buyer who is willing to purchase under the ordinary selling conditions. n66

Of course, unless there is a current market for the property in question there is much of opinion that enters into the estimate. n67 The courts have identified and utilized different methods of valuation suitable to various types of assets. Thus, notes or accounts receivable are not appraised at their face value but on the basis of prospect at the critical date n68 of their collectibility within a reasonable time, depending on the solvency of the obligors, n69 the presence or absence of a serious dispute over their validity n70 or the availability of other defenses. Stocks, bonds and other securities having a readily ascertained price in a normally active market should be valued at the applicable quotations for the pertinent date; but if the market is sluggish or exceptionally depressed, or if there is no regular market for the type of securities involved, they may still be counted at par or with particularized deductions so long as interest payments are not in arrears and principal and interest are amply secured. n71 Merchandise inventories are to be valued with due regard for the age and condition of the stock, the season of the year, and the general state of the trade. n72 Acquisition costs or book values are not tantamount to fair value n73 but may furnish an adequate measure thereof under the particular conditions of a case. n74 Moreover, in a number of instances, the courts have permitted resort to prior inventories and book values, at least as a starting point for the process of valuation, especially where such approach was the only feasible one under the circumstances and the results were not particularly critical. n75 Subsequent inventories and appraisals may be interpolated to a prior date, if such procedure appears to be reliable and the most promising avenue. n76 Real estate and other tangible fixed assets have been appraised at their fair selling price by consideration of a variety of factors. Ordinarily the issue calls for expert opinion, n77 but such judgment may be formed on the basis of widely varying elements covering not only physical characteristics such as location, n78 type of business for which the premises are designed or suited, n79 or age and condition, n80 but also original costs n81 and past and prospective earnings n82 or other pertinent factors. n83 Intangible assets in the nature of franchises which are considered transferable and have an independent commercial value, such as business licenses and patents, are to be appraised with due regard for the competitive or technological advantage which they secure in the light of the state of the trade or industry. Assets of singular character, such as earned credits for completed work under construction contracts, n84 or future or other conditional interests n85 are appraised in view of the particular circumstances.

One of the most vexing problems in the valuation of the assets of a business enterprise as of a specified date is the question whether, and under what conditions, it should be treated as a going concern requiring appraisal of its property as an active unit rather than on an item-by-item basis. Fair value, in the case of a going concern, is determined by the fair market price of the debtors assets that could be obtained if sold in a prudent manner within a reasonable period of time. n86 There is overwhelming authority to the effect that normally such valuation must be made from the vantage of a going concern and that subsequent dismemberment or impossibility to dispose of plant, equipment, inventory, etc., as an entirety should not enter into the picture. n87 Indeed, it has been held that the court should use fair market going concern price unless a business is on its deathbed, n88 in which case a liquidating value should be used. n89 Where the enterprise was already defunct at the critical date a non-going concern value has been applied by the courts. n90 Where the going concern value is the appropriate standard, the appraisal must take into account the additional value element which flows from the combination of the various assets to an economic unit. Closely allied to the matter under discussion is the further question of whether, and under what conditions, good will constitutes an independent item to be included in the aggregate of the debtors property. The courts have quickly discounted fantastic claims of such assets n91 and generally exhibited a great reluctance to accept good will as a separate asset, particularly where the enterprise was already in a seriously distressed condition. n92

Debts. The term debt contained in the definition of insolvent must be construed in light of the meaning ascribed to it under section 101(12). The pertinent discussion should be consulted. n93 The statutory definition specifies that a debt means liability on a claim. Because claims may be contingent, n94 contingent liabilities must be included in the computation of total indebtedness. Accordingly, liability as surety, guarantor, or endorser of commercial paper must be counted, n95 with appropriate allowances under assets for possible rights of subrogation or reimbursement from the principal, or contribution from cosureties or coendorsers. In some instances, the question of the inclusion of a particular item among the liabilities of the debtor will depend upon whether or not it constitutes a valid debt under applicable state or federal law. Although the court may have to determine the existence and amount of the claim, no finding of balance sheet insolvency is required for debtor relief under title 11. All that is necessary is that the debtor is unable to meet its debts as they mature.

For a complete discussion of Code section 101, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 101(32).

n2

2. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 323-24 (1977). See S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 34 (1978). See also 11 U.S.C. § 303(h).

n3

3. In Finn v. Meighan, 325 U.S. 300, 65 S. Ct. 1147, 89 L. Ed. 1624 (1945), Justice Douglas defined insolvency under the Bankruptcy Act as an insufficiency of assets at a fair valuation to pay the debts. See also Dabney v. Chase Natl Bank of the City of New York, 98 F. Supp. 807 (S.D.N.Y. 1951), revd in part on other grounds, 196 F.2d 668 (2d Cir. 1952), reversed after retrial, 201 F.2d 635 (2d Cir. 1952).

n4

4. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 323-324 (1977); see S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 34 (1978).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 547.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 548.

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 545.

n8

8. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.32 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. In re City of Bridgeport, 25 C.B.C.2d 269, 129 B.R. 332 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1991).

n10

10. See Gleason v. Thaw, 236 U.S. 558, 35 S. Ct. 287, 59 L. Ed. 717 (1915).

n11

11. The willingness of the debtors principal stockholder to advance funds to the debtor is not an asset which can be included in a balance sheet computation. In re Sponsor Realty Corp., 48 F. Supp. 735, 739 (S.D.N.Y. 1943). An oral agreement of creditors of the debtor to exchange their notes for stock, however, was held a binding subscription agreement under California Law and includable as an asset. Hoppe v. Rittenhouse, 279 F.2d 3 (9th Cir. 1960); see also Penn v. Grant, 244 F.2d 309 (9th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 837, 78 S. Ct. 58, 2 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1957) (pending usury suit of debtor against finance company was inchoate and uncertain in character and amount and therefore had no appreciable value); Mossler Acceptance Co. v. Martin, 322 F.2d 183 (5th Cir. 1963) (estate of tenant at will is not susceptible of assignment as an asset in determining issue of debtors insolvency).

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. § 522.

n13

13. Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U.S. 1, 12 S. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915 (1891); Page v. Edmunds, 187 U.S. 596, 23 S. Ct. 200, 47 L. Ed. 318 (1903); Chicago Bd. of Trade v. Johnson, 264 U.S. 1, 44 S. Ct. 232, 68 L. Ed. 533 (1923).

n14

14. Friederich v. Dockery, 209 F.2d 677 (8th Cir. 1954); Barutha v. Prentice, 189 F.2d 29 (7th Cir. 1951); In re Rainbo Express, 179 F.2d 1 (7th Cir. 1950).

n15

15. Warner Coal Corp. v. Costanzo Transp. Co., 144 F.2d 589 (4th Cir. 1944); Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 F. 74 (6th Cir. 1907); Lansing Boiler & Engine Works v. Ryerson & Sons, 128 F. 701 (6th Cir. 1904).

n16

16. Brickell v. Bond Realty Corp., 36 F.2d 865 (5th Cir. 1930); In re Hughes, 183 F. 872 (S.D.N.Y. 1910).

n17

17. Section 548(a)(1)(A) was formerly designated as 548(a)(1) before amendment by the Religious Liberty and Charitable Donation Protection Act of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105-183, effective for cases pending or commenced on or after June 19, 1998.

n18

18. In re Doscher, 120 F. 408 (E.D.N.Y. 1902), seemingly contains language opposed to the statement in the text. But closer analysis reveals that the court merely decided that in the case of a preferential mortgage or pledge the value of the hypothecated property so far as it exceeds the secured debt cannot be excluded from the computation of the debtors assets in determining his solvency at a subsequent date. The debt, of course, will likewise not be an outstanding item in the balance sheet test under such circumstances.

n19

19. In re Utrecht Coal Co., 63 F.2d 745 (2d Cir. 1933); see also In re Doscher, 120 F. 408 (E.D.N.Y. 1902).

n20

20. Lasswell & Stein-Block & Co., 93 F.2d 322, 323 (5th Cir. 1937).

n21

21. Syracuse Engineering Co. v. Haight, 97 F.2d 573 (2d Cir. 1938).

n22

22. 1 Collier on Bankruptcy, 1.19[2] (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1974).

n23

23. Syracuse Engineering Co. v. Haight, 110 F.2d 468 (2d Cir. 1940), noted in 39 Mich. L. Rev. 813 (1941).

n24

24. See statements to that effect in In re Studebaker Corp., 9 F. Supp. 426, 427 (D. Ind. 1935).

n25

25. In re Xonics Photochem., Inc., 841 F.2d 198, 18 C.B.C.2d 711 (7th Cir. 1988).

n26

26. See In re Bloch, 109 F. 790 (2d Cir. 1901) (prospective profits on foreign goods ordered but not paid for or delivered, but which may arise if orders from domestic customers materialize, were not properly capable of valuation); In re Sponser Realty Corp., 47 F. Supp. 735, 738 (S.D.N.Y. 1943) (willingness of debtors principal stockholder to advance funds to meet debtors requirements is not asset that can be included in balance sheet computation).

n27

27. See, e.g., Fifth Natl Bank of the City of New York v. Lyttle, 250 F. 361 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 247 U.S. 506, 38 S. Ct. 427, 62 L. Ed. 1240 (1918) (no value to good will of insolvent company); Fair Valuation of Property, 1 Collier on Bankruptcy, 1.19[3], nn. 44, 45 (Matthew Bender 14th ed. 1974).

n28

28 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 312 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 25 (1978).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 522.

n30

30. An Act to Amend the Bankruptcy Law to Provide for Special Revenue Bonds, and for Other Purposes, Pub. L. No. 100-597.

n31

31. Pub. L. No. 100-597 (1988) deleted from section 109(c)(3) the phrase or unable to meet such entity's debts as such debts mature.

n32

32. In re City of Bridgeport, 25 C.B.C.2d 269, 129 B.R. 332 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1991).

n33

33. For a discussion of the amendments to certain states community property laws, see Pedlar, The Implications of the New Community Property Laws for Creditors Remedies and Bankruptcy, 63 Cal. L. Rev. 1610 (1975); Pedlar, Community Property and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 11 St. Marys L.J. 349 (1979).

n34

34. See Pedlar, The Implications of the New Community Property Laws for Creditors Remedies and Bankruptcy, 63 Cal. L. Rev. 1610 (1975); Pedlar, Community Property and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 11 St. Marys L.J. 349 (1979).

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy 101.07 and Collier on Bankruptcy 726.04726.05 (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. See Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13 (Matthew Bender).

n37

37. See Collier on Bankruptcy 524.02 (Matthew Bender).

n38

38. See Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13 (Matthew Bender).

n39

39. Cal. Civ. Code §5120.110(a).

n40

40. See Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308, 311 (1860).

n41

41. Cal. Civ. Code §5120.110(b).

n42

42. Cal. Civ. Code § 5120.140(b).

n43

43. Cal. Civ. Code § 5122(b).

n44

44. See Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13 (Matthew Bender).

n45

45. See Collier on Bankruptcy 101.07 and Collier on Bankruptcy 726.05 (Matthew Bender).

n46

46. See Collier on Bankruptcy 524.01 (Matthew Bender).

n47

47. See Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13 (Matthew Bender).

n48

48. This claim would clearly be property of the estate under section 541(a)(2).

n49

49. See Collier on Bankruptcy 101.07. One would total the claims against the debtor and the community claims against either spouse.

n50

50. Marshaling assets is an equitable doctrine requiring that a debtors assets be applied to protect a creditor or other person having an interest in only a portion of the assets. In the community property context, the doctrine would require the creditors of one spouse to utilize separate property for the satisfaction of their claims to enable the creditors of the other spouse to utilize the community property for payment of their debts. This doctrine is invoked only when to do so does not prejudice other creditors rights.

n51

51. See the discussion of the law of each community property state contained in Collier on Bankruptcy 101.07 and Collier on Bankruptcy 541.13 (Matthew Bender).

n52

52. Torgenrud v. Benson (In re Wolcott), 194 B.R. 477, 487 (Bankr. D. Mont. 1996).

n53

53. In re Durso Supermarkets, Inc., 193 B.R. 682, 701 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996).

n54

54. Dabney v. Chase Natl Bank of the City of New York, 98 F. Supp. 807 (S.D.N.Y. 1951), reversed in part, 196 F.2d 668 (2d Cir. 1952); see Penn v. Grant, 244 F.2d 309 (9th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 837, 78 S. Ct. 58, 2 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1957).

n55

55. In re Durso Supermarkets, Inc., 193 B.R. 682, 701 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996); see BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 114 S. Ct. 1757, 1761, 128 L. Ed. 2d 556 (1994).

n56

56. The proposition stated in the test was first established in the early leading case of Duncan v. Landis, 106 F. 839 (3d Cir. 1901).

n57

57. See Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U.S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171 (1901).

n58

58. In re Crystal Ice & Fuel Co., 283 F. 1007, 1009 (D. Mont. 1922).

n59

59. Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 F. 800 (2d Cir. 1916), cert. denied, 242 U.S. 644, 37 S. Ct. 213, 61 L. Ed. 542 (1916); In re Marine Iron Works, 159 F. 753 (E.D.N.Y. 1908); Rutland County Natl Bank v. Graves, 156 F. 168 (D. Vt. 1907); In re Hines, 144 F. 142 (D. Or. 1906); Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. Roebling Sons Co., 107 F. 71 (D. Ill. 1901).

n60

60. Stern v. Paper, 183 F. 228, 231 (D.N.D. 1910), affd, 198 F. 642 (8th Cir. 1912); Matthews v. Concrete Engineering Co., 228 Iowa 493, 497, 292 N.W. 64, 66 (1940).

n61

61. In re Coddington, 118 F. 281, 282 (D. Pa. 1902); Irving Trust Co. v. Manufacturers Trust Co., 6 F. Supp. 185 (S.D.N.Y. 1934).

n62

62. In re Hines, 144 F. 142 (D. Or. 1906); see also In re Ouellette, 98 F. Supp. 941, 943 (S.D. Me. 1951).

n63

63. In In re Studebaker Corp., 9 F. Supp. 426, 427 (D. Ind. 1935), the court stated:

A person or corporation is insolvent when he or it is unable to pay debts and this inability to pay debts is not temporary, through lack of assets convertible in a reasonable time, not necessarily at forced sale, but nevertheless within a reasonable period . If the assets will not sell on the market within a reasonable time for enough to liquidate debts insolvency exists.

n64

64. In re Hines, 144 F. 142, 143 (D. Or. 1906) (I can conceive of no better or surer standard by which to arrive at fair valuation than the market value; that is what the property will probably bring, or is worth in the general market, where everybody buys.).

n65

65. In re Sedalia Farmers Coop. Packing and Produce Co., 268 F. 818 (7th Cir. 1920); Stern v. Paper, 183 F. 228 (D.N.D. 1910), affd, 198 F. 642 (8th Cir. 1912); In re Ouellette, 98 F. Supp. 941, 943 (D. Me. 1950).

n66

66. In re Kobre, 224 F. 106, 117 (E.D.N.Y. 1915).

n67

67. In re Hines, 144 F. 142, 143 (D. Or. 1906).

n68

68. Although the value depends on the prospect of their collectibility, as it exists at the critical date, courts sometimes have relied on hindsight gained from the success or failure of subsequent efforts to collect exerted by either the debtor or the trustee in bankruptcy, especially in cases involving preferences. See Matthews v. Concrete Engineering Co., 228 Iowa 493, 292 N.W. 64 (1940).

n69

69. Where the note or account is undisputed but its collectibility is doubtful, the courts have tried to determine whether or not it can be collected within a reasonable time, often by inquiry into the obligors resources or reliance on witnesses experienced in similar businesses or acquainted with the debtors transactions. In re Coddington, 118 F. 281 (D. Pa. 1902); In re Rome Planning Mill, 99 F. 937 (N.D.N.Y. 1900).

n70

70. The existence of a serious dispute over the validity of a note or account has induced the court to either appraise it under a heavy discount or to disregard it in toto in the valuation process, presumably in order to avoid the necessity of going into collateral issues. The former approach was taken in Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 F. 800 (2d Cir. 1916), affg 220 F. 981 (N.D.N.Y. 1915); In re International Mercantile Agency, 127 F. 173 (S.D.N.Y. 1922). The second category is represented by Houghton Wool Co., 249 F. 434 (1st Cir. 1918); In re Cooper, 12 F.2d 485 (D. Mass. 1926); First Natl Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 136 F. 466 (D. Pa. 1905); cf. In re Commonwealth Lumber Co., 223 F. 667 (D. Wash. 1915), relating to uncertainty of a contest.

n71

71. In re Cleveland Discount Co., 9 F.2d 97 (D. Ohio 1924); In re Kobre, 224 F. 106 (E.D.N.Y. 1915).

n72

72. Stern v. Paper, 183 F. 228 (D.N.D. 1910), affd, 198 F. 642 (8th Cir. 1912); In re Hines, 144 F. 142 (D. Or. 1906); In re Ouellette, 98 F. Supp. 941 (D. Me. 1951).

n73

73. Dunlavey v. Uhlmeier (In re Uhlmeier), 67 B.R. 977 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1986) (insolvency is determined by a balance sheet test; the debtor is insolvent if the sum of debts is greater than assets at fair valuation. It is not necessary to examine the debtors financial statements to make that determination).

n74

74. Inter-State Natl Bank of Kansas City v. Luther, 221 F.2d 382, 391 (10th Cir. 1955) (book value of stored grain); Updike v. Oakland Motor Car Co., 53 F.2d 369 (2d Cir. 1931); In re Hines, 144 F. 142 (D. Or. 1906); In re Ouellette, 98 F. Supp. 941 (D. Me. 1951) (acquisition cost of hardware store inventory).

n75

75. Farmers State Bank v. Freeman, 249 F. 579 (8th Cir. 1918); In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 197 F. 280 (2d Cir. 1912); In re Electron Chem. Co., 208 F. 954 (D.W. Mo. 1913); Brown v. Streicher, 177 F. 473 (D.R.I. 1910); In re McMurtrey & Smith, 142 F. 853 (D. Tex. 1905); see also Bogen & Trummel v. Protter, 129 F. 533 (6th Cir. 1904), involving the determination of solvency or insolvency of a retail merchant at a date some time subsequent to a fire in his store. The court held that in order to ascertain the amount of his insurance claims for loss of part of his stock in trade it was necessary to have the last inventory taken before the fire, with the books showing the purchases and sales since, or, in their absence, to resort to any other evidence. Full credence was given to the book values of inventory.

n76

76. Rosenberg v. Semple, 257 F. 72 (3d Cir. 1919); accord Stern v. Paper, 183 F. 228 (D.N.D. 1910), affd, 198 F. 642 (8th Cir. 1912); In re Docker-Foster Co., 123 F. 190 (D. Pa. 1903). But cf. Rosenman v. Coppard, 228 F. 114 (6th Cir. 1915), holding that an appraisement, made ex parte in the course of bankruptcy proceedings, in itself does not constitute competent evidence of insolvency in an action to recover a preference.

n77

77. Current appraisals of the debtors assets afford a more accurate determination of the debtors insolvency than can be had solely by the balance sheet test. American Insulator Co. v. Marsh Plastics (In re American Insulator Co.), 60 B.R. 752 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986).

n78

78. Stitzer Hotel Co. v. Beyer, 55 F.2d 620 (3d Cir. 1932); In re Kobre, 224 F. 106 (E.D.N.Y. 1915).

n79

79. In cases involving hotel property it has been held that fair valuation is the value of the assets as an entirety taken in their relationship to the business of the hotel as a going concern. Special attention is due to the particular location of the hotel property and its competitive position relative to other hotels in regard to design, construction and modernization. Meyer v. Dolan, 145 F.2d 880 (2d Cir. 1944); Stitzer Hotel Co. v. Beyer, 55 F.2d 620 (3d Cir. 1932).

n80

80. Meyer v. Dolan, 145 F.2d 880 (2d Cir. 1944); In re Brown Comml. Car Co., 227 F. 387 (7th Cir. 1915).

n81

81. Although it is recognized that neither acquisition costs nor book values of real property and buildings are determinative of their fair value, courts have attributed evidentiary value to the original construction or acquisition costs either without or with adjustments, see In re Brown Comml. Car Co., 227 F. 387 (7th Cir. 1915); In re Klein, 197 F. 241 (6th Cir. 1912) (hotel equipment); In re Hines, 144 F. 142 (D. Or. 1906); In re Rogers Milling Co., 102 F. 687 (D. Ark. 1900).

n82

82. Doyle Dry Goods Co. v. Lewis, 5 F.2d 918 (8th Cir. 1925); see also Meyer v. Dolan, 145 F.2d 880 (2d Cir. 1944); Dabney v. Chase Natl Bank of the City of New York, 98 F. Supp. 807 (S.D.N.Y. 1951), rev'd in part on other grounds, 196 F.2d 668 (2d Cir. 1952); In re Gibson Hotels, 24 F. Supp. 859 (D. W.Va. 1938).

n83

83. Amounts realized at subsequent sheriffs and bankruptcy sales are usually not particularly significant, Liberty Natl Bank v. Foltz, 25 F.2d 295 (6th Cir. 1928). Upon occasion, courts have attached some evidentiary force to such figures, especially for the purpose of deflating over valuation, see Rosenberg v. Semple, 257 F. 72 (3d Cir. 1919); Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 F. 619 (8th Cir. 1908); In re Mayo Contracting Co., 157 F. 469 (D. Mass. 1907).

n84

84. Tumarkin v. Gally, 127 F. Supp. 94 (S.D.N.Y. 1954).

n85

85. For purposes of the insolvency test, if there is a contingent asset or contingent liability, that asset or liability must be reduced to its present, or expected value. In re Xonics Photochem., Inc., 841 F.2d 198, 18 C.B.C.2d 711 (7th Cir. 1988); Syracuse Engineering Co. v. Haight, 110 F.2d 468 (2d Cir. 1940) (future interest); Warner Coal Corp. v. Costanzo Transp. Co., 144 F.2d 589 (4th Cir. 1944) (nonassignable leasehold and qualified title to machinery).

n86

86. In re Roblin Indus., Inc., 78 F.3d 30, 35 (2d Cir. 1996).

n87

87. Meyer v. Dolan, 145 F.2d 880 (2d Cir. 1944) (concurring opinion); In re Nathanson Bros. Co., 64 F.2d 912 (6th Cir. 1941); In re Bucyrus Road Mach. Co., 10 F.2d 333 (6th Cir. 1926); In re Klein, Dougherty v. First Natl Bank of Ohio, 197 F. 241 (6th Cir. 1912); Chicago Motor Vehicle Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 141 F. 518 (7th Cir. 1905); J.W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 143 F. 295 (7th Cir. 1905).

n88

88. Schwinn Bicycle Comm. v. AFS Cycle & Co., Ltd., 192 B.R. 477, 486 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996), quoting Utility Stationery Stores, Inc. v. Southworth Co., 12 B.R. 170, 176 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1981).

n89

89. In re Taxman Clothing Co., Inc., 905 F.2d 166, 170 (7th Cir. 1990).

n90

90. In re Brown Comml. Car Co., 227 F. 387 (7th Cir. 1915); In re Jones Co., 268 F. 818 (7th Cir. 1920) (It cannot be accepted, as a general rule, that in every situation the debtor must inevitably be regarded as going concern even if at the time of giving the alleged preference he was financially dead or mortally wounded.).

n91

91. See, e.g., Farmers State Bank v. Freeman, 249 F. 579 (8th Cir. 1918).

n92

92. See, e.g., Wofford Oil Co. v. Hatcher, 73 F.2d 335 (5th Cir. 1934); Updike v. Oakland Motor Car Co., 53 F.2d 369 (2d Cir. 1931); Everette v. Warfield Mining Co., 37 F.2d 328 (4th Cir. 1930); Fifth Natl Bank of the City of New York v. Lyttle, 250 F. 361 (2d Cir. 1918); see also In re Doscher, 120 F. 408 (E.D.N.Y. 1902); Davenport v. Lines, 72 Conn. 118, 44 Atl. 17 (1905).

n93

93. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 101.12 (Matthew Bender).

n94

94. 11 U.S.C. § 101(5). For purposes of the insolvency test, if there is a contingent asset or contingent liability, that asset or liability must be reduced to its present, or expected value. In re Xonics Photochem., Inc., 841 F.2d 198, 18 C.B.C.2d 711 (7th Cir. 1988).

n95

95. Syracuse Engineering Co. v. Haight, 97 F.2d 573 (2d Cir. 1938); Updike v. Oakland Motor Car Co., 53 F.2d 369 (2d Cir. 1931); Wingert v. Hagerstown Bank, 41 F.2d 660 (4th Cir. 1930); Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 F. 619 (8th Cir. 1908); In re Bowers, 215 F. 617 (D. Ga. 1914).

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

180 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Definition of "Small Business Debtor" Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 972

Collier on the Definition of "Small Business Debtor" Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses the definition of a small business debtor under section 101(51C) of the Bankruptcy Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Under 11 U.S.C. § 101(51C), small business means a person engaged in commercial or business activities (but does not include a person whose primary activity is the business of owning or operating real property and activities incidental thereto) whose aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debt as of the date of the petition does not exceed $2,000,000. n1 The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 repealed the definition of small business, n2 and the definition is not effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. n3

The definition of small business was added by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994. n4 Section 11 U.S.C. § 101(51C) was added as part of a process to expedite small business reorganization under chapter 11. n5 The definition of a small business does not restrict the availability of the small business amendments to a person who at the time of the filing of the petition is presently engaged in commercial or business activities and who expects to continue in those same activities under a plan of reorganization. That person may have incurred $2,000,000 in liquidated secured and unsecured debts that arose from business activities before the date of the filing of the case, but as of the petition date may have discontinued those business activities. There is nothing in the legislative history to suggest that in this latter instance, the small business amendments should not apply to that person. n6

For a complete discussion of Code section 101, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 101(51C).

n2

2. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 432(a) (2005).

n3

3. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501 (2005).

n4

4. Pub. L. No. 103-394 (1994), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 9(a) (Matthew Bender).

n5

5. Section-by-Section Description of H.R. 5116, 140 Cong. Rec. H10,768 (daily ed. Oct. 4, 1994).

n6

6. But cf. 11 U.S.C. § 101(18)(A), defining family farmer. By way of contrast, relief under chapter 12 is not available to an individual or an individual and his or her spouse who had been engaged in a farming operations, but by implication discontinued or materially reduced his or her or their farming operation so that less than 50% of gross income is received from that operation for the taxable year that precedes the taxable year during which the case was filed. Thus, if Congress intended to exclude from the small business amendments those businesses that are not operating as of the date of the petition, it could have done so as it did with the family farmer amendments.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

181 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention & Consumer Protection Act of 2005

2008 Emerging Issues 973

Collier on Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005: Business Bankruptcy

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ended seven years of congressional silence on bankruptcy laws. Changes affecting business debtors were made to the administrative and operating rules governing chapter 11 debtors, including some changes designed to streamline the chapter 11 process. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses these issues.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 n1 ended seven years of congressional silence on bankruptcy laws. n2 With origins in the report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission issued in October 1997, n3 the legislation contains some of the sharpest diversions from provisions and policies found in the 1978 Reform Act. Although concerns sparked by historically high consumer filings were the principal impetus behind the 2005 amendments, the legislation also significantly affected business bankruptcies. Changes affecting business debtors were made to the administrative and operating rules governing chapter 11 debtors, including some changes designed to streamline the chapter 11 process. n4 In addition, although some changes--such as amendments to avoiding powers--technically affect all debtors, their principal impact will be on business debtors.

Avoiding Powers. Several changes were made to the avoiding powers. The 2005 amendments made minor changes to section 545, modifying it to clarify that it does not apply to federal tax liens, n5 and changes to the venue provisions for avoiding power actions, generally making it more difficult for an estate to sue in the home district to recover small preferences. n6 Section 546 was amended to expand greatly the reclamation rights of unpaid vendors; the time limits for making a reclamation demand were expanded to 45 days, n7 and a new priority was created for vendors who supply goods within 20 days before the commencement of the case. n8 Section 547Section 547Section 547, dealing with preferences, was changed in several ways. First, the effects of the DePrizio decision were finally sorted out, and thus it is now clear that a transfer that benefits an insider will not render vulnerable a transfer to a connected non-insider creditor. n9 Second, the ordinary course of business test was softened in favor of creditors by allowing the defense if the creditor can establish either that the transfer was made according to ordinary business terms or that it was made in the ordinary course of the debtor's and the transferee's business; previously, both had to be shown. n10 Smaller transfers of less than $5,000 were shielded by an explicit defense in business cases, n11 and the grace period for perfecting a security interest was extended from 10 to 30 days. n12 Section 548 Section 548s one-year lookback period was extended to two years, but only for cases commenced after April 20, 2006. n13 An additional ground for finding a constructive fraudulent transfer was added: for cases filed on or after October 17, 2005, if a transfer or obligation is made for less than reasonably equivalent value to or for the benefit of an insider and made under an employment contract outside the ordinary course of business, then it may be set aside under section 548 regardless of whether the debtor was solvent at the time of the transaction. n14 Finally, Congress added a new subsection (e), which gives the estate 10 years to look back and set aside actually fraudulent transfers made to a self-settled trust or similar device. n15

Executory Contracts. The 2005 amendments made several changes to the way in which executory contracts are treated in bankruptcy. Overruling some prior decisions to the contrary, the amendments modified section 365 to permit the assumption of an unexpired lease of real property in which there is a nonmonetary default without the need to cure that default if that default is impossible to cure--such as would arise if an executory contract requires continuous insurance coverage and the debtor has a gap in coverage. n16 More important, section 365(d) was changed to extend to 120 days the time in which the estate has to assume or reject an unexpired lease of nonresidential real property, and to cap the total amount of extensions of such time at 210 days, unless the landlord consents to a further extension. n17 Finally, Congress placed limits on administrative claims arising from the rejection of a previously assumed nonresidential real property lease--specifically, two years worth of rent and other lease obligations. n18

Committee Duties and Powers. Chapter 11 committees were also affected by the 2005 amendments. Congress clarified a bankruptcy courts right to require the United States trustees to change the membership of an existing chapter 11 committee in order to ensure adequate representation of creditors and equity security holders. n19 Further changes increased the duty of committees to solicit and receive comments from their constituents, and to provide wider access to information the committee obtains. n20

Health Care, Privacy Rights and Employee Benefits. Congress added several protections related to health and privacy issues. The post of ombudsman was created to monitor sales of personal information under section 363 and to monitor the progress of health care bankruptcies. n21 Congress also added a direct prohibition on the release of the names of minor children. n22 Finally, studies were ordered to ensure the privacy of tax-related information debtors are required to disclose. n23 Employees also received changes to their status. Congress more than doubled the priority for wages and contributions to employee benefit plans, increasing it to $10,000. n24 The practice of giving existing management severance and retention bonuses as administrative claims was curtailed. n25

Procedure and Standard for Dismissal for Chapter 11 Cases. The provisions related to the conversion or dismissal of a chapter 11 case, or for the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee, were changed in three ways. First, Congress expanded the number of grounds of cause for such actions from 10 to 16. n26 Second, Congress limited the amount of discretion given to a court to consider the best interest of creditors and the estate. n27 Third, the time frame in which such a motion must be heard was circumscribed; a court must hear the motion within 30 days and must decide it within 15 days after hearing it. n28 In addition, Congress made clear that the same grounds and procedure sufficient to convert or dismiss a chapter 11 case will apply to the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee. n29

Single Asset Debtors. The 2005 amendments removed the debt limit for single asset debtors. n30 Further, the relief from stay provisions related to single asset debtors were modified to allow debtors to make adequate protection payments from cash collateral and to require only nondefault contract rates of interest with respect to any interim interest payments. n31

Small Business Cases. The 2005 amendments radically reformed small business cases. Small business treatment is no longer optional; it is now mandatory for chapter 11 business debtors with less than $2,190,000 in non-insider debt and which do not have active creditors' committees. n32 Once classified as a small business debtor, the debtor is subject to increased reporting and informational requirements, n33 and accelerated time frames to propose and to confirm a plan. n34 In addition, in a measure to deter serial filers, any small business debtor that files again within two years of dismissal or plan confirmation (or any entity that acquires all or substantially all of a small business debtors assets out of a bankruptcy) will not automatically receive the benefit of the automatic stay, but will be able to seek to have it imposed for cause shown. n35

Chapter 11 for Individuals. The 2005 amendments singled out individual chapter 11 debtors for different treatment. First, the 2005 amendments provide that, unlike previous treatment in chapter 11 and the current treatment in chapter 7, postpetition earnings from services will be part of the individuals chapter 11 estate. n36 In addition, an amount equal to five years worth of such earnings will have to be committed to the debtor's chapter 11 plan n37 and that plan will, in addition to all other requirements, be subject to the disposable income test borrowed from chapter 13. n38 Finally, the discharge for an individual in chapter 11 normally will be moved from the time of confirmation to the time that all plan payments are completed. n39

For an overview of consumer and business bankruptcy changes by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005). With certain specified exceptions, the acts provisions are effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. For a detailed account of the tumultuous legislative reform initiative that culminated in the 2005 amendments, see Susan Jensen, A Legislative History of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, 79 Am. Bankr. L.J. 485 (2005).

n3

3. National Bankruptcy Review Commn, Bankruptcy: The Next Twenty Years (Oct. 20, 1997), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 44 (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. For example, several provisions of the Code were changed to accommodate prepackaged chapter 11 plans. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 341(e) (allowing the United States trustee to dispense with calling a first meeting of creditors), 11 USCS § 1125(g) (validating postpetition vote solicitation in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law but without a court-approved disclosure statement if the person was solicited prepetition in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 545(2).

n6

6. 28 U.S.C. § 1409(b).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9).

n9

9. See 11 U.S.C. § 547(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1213(a)(2) (2005), effective in any case pending on, or commenced on or after, October 17, 2005.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(9), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 409(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. § 547(e)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 403 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n13

13. Pub. L. No. 109-8, §§ 1402(1), 1406(b)(2) (2005).

n14

14. 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B)(i)(IV), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1402(3)(C) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 548(e), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1402(4) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1)(A).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 365(d)(4).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(7).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(4).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(3).

n21

21. The post of consumer privacy ombudsman is created by new section 332 of the Code, see Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 232 (2005), and enforced through the amendments to section 363(b)(1), see id. § 231(a). The post of patient care ombudsman is created in new section 333. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1104(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 112.

n23

23. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 315(c) (2005).

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(4)(5), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1402(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after April 20, 2005.

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 503(c), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 331 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n26

26. 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(4).

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(1), in which may was changed to shall, with certain limited exceptions.

n28

28. 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(3).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 442(b)(3) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n30

30. See 11 U.S.C. § 101(51B), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1201(5) (2005).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(3), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 444 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n32

32. The opt-in language previously found in section 1121(e) was deleted by the amendments. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 437 (2005) (codified at 11 U.S.C. § 1121(e)). The definition of small business debtor is found at 11 U.S.C. § 101(51D). For cases commenced before April 1, 2007, the debt limit is $2 million.

n33

33. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 308, 1116.

n34

34. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1121(e), 1129(e).

n35

35. 11 U.S.C. § 362(n).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 1115, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 321(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)(8).

n38

38. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(15).

n39

39. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

182 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005

2008 Emerging Issues 974

Collier on Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005: Consumer Bankruptcy

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ended seven years of congressional silence on bankruptcy laws. With origins in the report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission issued in October 1997, the legislation contains some of the sharpest diversions from provisions and policies found in the 1978 Reform Act. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to consumer bankruptcy.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 n1 ended seven years of congressional silence on bankruptcy laws. n2 With origins in the report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission issued in October 1997, n3 the legislation contains some of the sharpest diversions from provisions and policies found in the 1978 Reform Act. Sparked by concern over historically high consumer filings, which were the principal impetus behind the 2005 amendments, the primary focus of the 2005 amendments was consumer bankruptcy. However, the legislation also significantly affected business bankruptcies.

In the early 1990s, when bankruptcy filings topped 1 million, members of Congress began to introduce bills designed to shift the focus in consumer bankruptcies. No longer was the relief afforded by chapter 7 to be available to all. Instead, Congress experimented with various forms of means testing, whereby a consumer's ability to pay a certain portion of his or her debts was assessed, and if a sufficiently high amount of those debts could be paid out of future income, chapter 7 relief would be denied. The changes were adopted in 2005, along with a host of other changes to consumer bankruptcy, including requiring credit counseling as a prerequisite to filing and financial education as a condition to a discharge. Many other changes were implemented, including changes to the availability of relief to serial filers, changes to the ways in which creditors are to receive notices and a change in the scope of chapter 13 relief. When added to changes in priorities for domestic support obligations, and to exemptions, the changes wrought by the 2005 amendments are the most extensive since the adoption of the 1978 Code.

Eligibility; Consumer Credit Counseling and Briefing. Under the 1978 Code, eligibility to file for bankruptcy had never been questioned or conditioned for regular individuals. The 2005 amendments, however, imposed a requirement of obtaining credit counseling within six months of filing for all individuals. n4 The counseling agency must be approved by the Executive Office for United States Trustees, n5 but may be in individual or group settings, by telephone or over the Internet. n6 The debtor must file evidence of credit counseling with the petition, n7 unless there are exigent circumstances preventing the debtor from obtaining the counseling during the five-day period immediately preceding the filing, n8 in which case the debtor must file a certification listing the exigent circumstances that precluded the obtaining of credit counseling during such five-day period. There are some exemptions, but not many, from this requirement. n9

Ability to Dismiss Chapter 7 Cases for Abuse: Means Testing. The centerpiece of the consumer bankruptcy amendments was the institution of means testing in all chapter 7 cases. Its significance can be measured by the fact that the pre-2005 version of section 707(b) contained the following sentence: There shall be a presumption in favor of granting the relief requested by the debtor. The 2005 amendments deleted that sentence. n10 The elimination of the presumption in favor of the debtor was one of the smallest changes to section 707(b). The 2005 amendments substantially revised the entire section, in large part to implement means testing through specifying sufficient grounds to dismiss a chapter 7 case. Specifically, if the means test is satisfied--in the sense that the debtor has the requisite means to provide for creditors--then there is presumed abuse and the court may dismiss the debtor's chapter 7 case, or the debtor has to attempt to convert to chapter 13. n11 In concept, the means test found in section 707(b) is simple. Its theory is that if debtors can afford to pay creditors something between $6,000 and $10,000 over five years, they should. But as with the rest of life, the devil is in the details, and Congress has packed a lot of details into the means test. In understanding the means test, it is important to recognize first that Congress used common terms such as income and expenses, but did not equate them to what debtors actually earn and spend. Rather, the section defines them by several artificial constructs designed to remove discretion.

With a high level of generality, the means test can be summarized as follows:

First, take the debtors current monthly income, a new defined term; n12

Second, subtract from that monthly income the following:

- living expenses, as calculated under certain IRS collection standards; and
- projected payments on actual secured debt, including repayment of arrears, over five years; and
- projected payments on actual priority debt, such as tax debt or domestic support obligations;
- Other and sundry expenses specified in section 707(b), such as additional expenses for education, charitable contributions, health insurance, home energy costs and projected chapter 13 administrative expenses;

Third, multiply the difference by 60. There is presumed to be abuse if the product so obtained is greater than:

- the greater of $6,000 or 25 percent of the debtor's nonpriority unsecured debt; or
- $10,000.

If a motion to dismiss the case is filed and the court finds abuse because of the presumption is not rebutted, the court may dismiss or, with the debtors consent convert, the case.

In addition, the debtor may attempt to show special circumstances in an effort to rebut any presumption of abuse. n13

The complete means test may not need to be calculated in all cases; in particular, the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules has promulgated a form that does not require calculation of the means test if annualized current monthly income is below the applicable median family income. n14 The Executive Office for United States Trustees maintains a Web site with much of the information necessary for the means test calculations, such as state medians and links to the Internal Revenue Service's National and Local Living Expense Standards. n15

Filing Obligations and Sanctions for Failure to Comply with Such Rules. The 2005 amendments also corrected what Congress viewed as a separate type of abuse: noncompliance by debtors with the rules requiring the provision of information. In this regard, Congress expanded the list of required filings from the previous schedules and statements to include copies of all payment advices or other evidence of payment received within 60 days before the date of filing from any employer. n16 In addition, the schedules have been revised to take into account other requirements, such as a statement of itemized monthly net income and a statement of any reasonably anticipated increase in income or expenditures during the year following the filing. n17 The sanction for noncompliance with the filing requirements is severe. Unless there is a valid request for an extension, or unless the court orders otherwise, the debtor's case is automatically dismissed on the 46th day after filing if any of the above requirements are not complete, n18 and any creditor may request an order confirming the dismissal. n19

Scope of Automatic Stay. The 2005 amendments have not changed the scope of the automatic stay, but they have changed the applicable exceptions. n20 Initially, the exceptions granted to holders of domestic support obligations have expanded. n21 More leeway is given to holders of such claims to seek to withhold privileges, such as professional licenses and driver's licenses, until payments are current, n22 and to request the interception of tax refunds made to the debtor to satisfy unpaid domestic support obligations. n23 Also exempted are repayments of loans taken out against retirement assets, n24 and, in some cases, the rights of landlords to evict nonpaying tenants if the landlord has obtained, prepetition, a judgment of possession for the leased premises. n25 Congress also amended section 362 to deal with the problem of serial filers. Generally speaking, if a debtor has had a case dismissed within 12 months of the filing of a new case, the stay in the new case will last only 30 days; if the debtor has had two cases dismissed within that same 12-month period, the new case will not generate a stay at all. n26 Debtors may seek to extend or impose the stay in such cases, but face fairly specific requirements to show that the latest filing was made in good faith. n27 Limited provisions for imposing an in rem order exempting certain property from the stay in a future case were added, subject to the creditor's showing that the filings were part of a scheme to hinder, delay and defraud creditors. n28 Finally, Congress linked relief from the stay to the debtors actions with respect to his or her statement of intention filed under section 521. If a chapter 7 debtor does not file a statement of intention within 30 days of the cases filing, or does not timely act on any stated intention to surrender or redeem collateral or leased goods, or reaffirm a secured debt (or assume a lease of personal property), within 30 days of the first date set for the meeting of creditors under section 341 of the Code, then the stay terminates as to the collateral or as to the leased property. n29

Exemptions. The 2005 amendments made two major changes in exemptions. First, they federalized the exempt status of retirement assets, providing an exemption for such assets to the extent that they are held in a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under various provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, including IRAs and section 401(k) plans. n30 Second, the 2005 amendments made significant changes to the treatment of homestead exemptions to the extent that federal law permits a debtor to claim a state-law based homestead. In a move to discourage moving to states with high exemptions, Congress extended the residency requirement for using a states exemption to 730 days; debtors who do not meet that requirement are relegated to the laws of the state in which they were resident for the better part of the 180 days preceding the 730-day period. n31 Third, Congress reduced the homestead exemption available to debtors on a dollar-for-dollar basis to the extent that, within the 10 years preceding filing, a debtor's equity in his or her homestead was attributable to transfers of otherwise nonexempt property that were made with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor. n32 Fourth, Congress capped the exemption at $125,000 in two situations: when the debtor has not owned the homestead for at least 1215 days preceding the date of the filing (with an exception that allows tacking of ownership for certain in-state transfers); n33 and when the debtor is liable to a creditor for securities fraud or because of the commission of a criminal act, intentional tort or wilful or reckless conduct that caused serious physical injury or death within five years of the debtor's filing. n34

Redemption and Reaffirmation. Before the 2005 amendments, courts had been mixed about whether they would allow a lease or secured obligations to ride through a consumer's bankruptcy; that is, whether the debtor, without formally reaffirming or redeeming the collateral or the lease could continue to use them, shielded by the automatic stay.

The 2005 amendments addressed this situation by linking relief from the stay with respect to specific property to a debtor's filing, and performance under, his or her statement of intention with respect to that property, n35 and by making part of the debtor's basic duties the relinquishment of possession of property in which another has an interest if the debtor does not redeem the property, or does not reaffirm the debt related to it. n36 In addition, the valuation standard for redemption was confirmed as replacement value, and the statute was clarified to provide that redemptions have to be made in a lump sum. n37 Reaffirmation practice was changed to require standardized language in the reaffirmation agreements. n38

Scope of Chapter 13. The 2005 amendments significantly cut back the scope of the chapter 13 discharge; whereas fraud and certain defalcations were dischargeable before 2005, under the amendments they are no longer dischargeable. n39 In addition, for debtors whose income is calculated to be above their state's applicable median, upon objection by the chapter 13 trustee or an unsecured creditor, their plans will have to include at least five years worth of disposable income, n40 and the amount of reasonably necessary expenses used to calculate disposable income will be taken from the test used in section 707(b) presumptive abuse cases. n41 The mechanics of how and when debtors file, confirm and make payments under their plans were also changed, n42 as were the requirements with respect to the ongoing provision of information, such as income tax returns, to the chapter 13 trustee. n43

Discharge and the Requirement of Financial Education. While the 2005 amendments did not change the scope of discharge in chapter 7, they did provide for an extension of time--six years to eight years--that a debtor must wait to obtain a second chapter 7 discharge. n44 With respect to chapter 13, the 2005 amendments put in place similar waiting periods--a chapter 13 discharge cannot issue for four years after the filing of a case in which the debtor received a discharge under chapter 7, 11 or 12, n45 or for two years after the filing of a case in which a discharge was entered under chapter 13. n46 The 2005 amendments also introduced a new concept: financial education. Discharges in chapters 7 and 13 normally will not be granted until the debtor certifies that he or she took a course in financial education from an instructor approved by the United States trustee. n47

Treatment of Domestic Support Obligations. Congress greatly enhanced the protection given to holders of claims related to domestic support obligations. The nub of these protections is a new definition of a domestic support obligation. n48 Congress used this new definition to expand the exemptions available from the automatic stay n49 and the scope of nondischargeable support obligations. n50 It also required debtors to be current on all postpetition domestic support obligations as a condition of confirming contested chapter 11 and chapter 13 plan.

For an overview of consumer and business bankruptcy changes by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005). With certain specified exceptions, the acts provisions are effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. For a detailed account of the tumultuous legislative reform initiative that culminated in the 2005 amendments, see Susan Jensen, A Legislative History of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, 79 Am. Bankr. L.J. 485.

n3

3. National Bankruptcy Review Comm'n, Bankruptcy: The Next Twenty Years (Oct. 20, 1997).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h).

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 111. In districts in which the United States trustee system does not operate, these duties are fulfilled by the bankruptcy administrator.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(1).

n7

7. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(c).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(3).

n9

9. Exemptions exist for those unable to complete the requirements due to disability, incapacity or due to active military service in a combat zone, 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(4), and in those districts in which the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) certifies that there is insufficient availability of credit counseling, 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(2). Because the counseling can be performed by telephone or over the Internet, however, no district has been the subject of a determination that credit counseling is unavailable.

n10

10. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(a)(2)(B)(ii) (2005).

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(B).

n12

12. Current monthly income is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101(10A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 102(b) (2005).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B). The statute lists a serious medical condition or a call to active military status as possible examples of special circumstances.

n14

14. See Official Form 22A. For definition of median family income, see 11 U.S.C. § 101(39A).

n15

15. These expenses are collected and published at the United States trustee's Web site: <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust>.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1)(B)(iv).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1)(B)(vi).

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 521(i)(1).

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 521(i)(2).

n20

20. For a discussion of the exceptions to the stay, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 362.05 (Matthew Bender).

n21

21. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2).

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(D).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(F).

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(19).

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(22).

n26

26. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(4).

n27

27. Id.

n28

28. 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(d)(4), 362(b)(20).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 362(h)(1) (incorporating the time limits set forth in section 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)).

n30

30. 11 U.S.C. §§ 522(b)(3)(C), 522(b)(12). With respect to regular and Roth IRAs, this amount is subject to a $1 million cap; however, this cap does not include any amounts rolled over into such IRAs from other tax-favored accounts, and may be increased if the interests of justice so require. 11 U.S.C. § 522(n).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(2). If application of these residency rules render[s] the debtor ineligible for any exemption, the debtor may elect to use the exemptions found in section 522(d). 11 U.S.C. § 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(3).

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 522(o).

n33

33. 11 U.S.C. § 522(p).

n34

34. 11 U.S.C. § 522(q).

n35

35. 11 U.S.C. § 362(h)(1) (incorporating the time limits set forth in section 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)).

n36

36. 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(6).

n37

37. 11 U.S.C. § 722.

n38

38. See 11 U.S.C. § 524(k).

n39

39. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a), as amended by Pub. L. No. 109-8 , § 314(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n40

40. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(4).

n41

41. 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(3).

n42

42. 11 U.S.C. § 1326(a).

n43

43. See 11 U.S.C. § 521(f).

n44

44. 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(8).

n45

45. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(1).

n46

46. 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(2).

n47

47. 11 U.S.C. §§ 727(a)(11), 11 U.S.C. § 1328(g).

n48

48. 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A).

n49

49. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2).

n50

50. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

183 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Appointment of a Patient Care Ombudsman

2008 Emerging Issues 975

Collier on the Appointment of a Patient Care Ombudsman

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Section 1104 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) added section 333 to the Bankruptcy Code. Section 333 contains specific provisions regarding the appointment of a patient care ombudsman within 30 days after the commencement of any health care business bankruptcy case. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to the appointment of a patient care ombudsman under the Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Section 1104 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) n1 added section 333 to the Bankruptcy Code. Section 333 contains specific provisions regarding the appointment of a patient care ombudsman within 30 days after the commencement of any health care business bankruptcy case. This ombudsman is, apparently, to serve as a patient advocate--one who can speak for the consumers of the health care businessss services who might have different interests then those of the health care businessss creditors n2--monitoring the quality of patient care, representing the interests of patients and reporting to the bankruptcy court every 60 days on the status of patient care in the debtors health care business.

The appointment of an ombudsman is mandatory unless the court finds that the appointment is not necessary for the protection of patients under the specific facts of the case. n3 Yet, the bankruptcy court has no inherent mechanism to determine whether facts exist that would argue against the appointment of an ombudsman. Thus, the bankruptcy court presumably will appoint an ombudsman unless, before the appointment, the debtor or another party in interest files a timely motion requesting a determination that the appointment is not necessary. Any hearing on the motion should be an evidentiary hearing because the bankruptcy court could not, without specific evidence, decide that the facts do not warrant the appointment of an ombudsman. Facts that warrant a decision not to appoint an ombudsman could include that the facilitys patient care is of high quality, that the debtor has adequate financial strength to maintain high-quality patient care, that the facility already has an internal ombudsman program in operation or that the situation at the facility is adequately monitored already by federal, state, local or professional association programs so that the ombudsman would be redundant.

Section 333(a)(1) uses the term for the protection of the patientsⁿ⁴ so that the determination of the bankruptcy court not to appoint an ombudsman must be tied to a decision that the patients are otherwise adequately protected. Section 333 leaves unsaid from what the patient is being protected; presumably, because the section refers to patient care, the protection being provided by section 333 is from the poor medical care because of the disruption caused by the bankruptcy filing, the business's overall financial problems or the transfer of a patient from a closing facility.

Qualifications; non-long term care facility. If the court orders the appointment of an ombudsman other than for a long-term care facility, the United States Trustee appoints the ombudsman.ⁿ⁵ Although the section specifies that the ombudsman must be disinterested,ⁿ⁶ it otherwise does not address the qualifications necessary to serve as an ombudsman. The ombudsman should have to be a person having expertise related to the type of services that the subject health care business provides and is capable of performing the tasks required of the ombudsman. For example, if the debtor were a hospital, rendering an opinion on the quality of patient care might well require a doctor or a hospital administrator, or an organization with such persons as part of the team working on the case to serve as the ombudsman.

Qualifications; long term care facility. If the debtor is a health care business that provides long-term care,ⁿ⁷ then the United States Trustee may appoint the State Long-Term Care Ombudsmanⁿ⁸ from the state in which the case is pending to serve as the ombudsman under section 333.ⁿ⁹ It is unclear how this would work in a practical sense, because the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program has different responsibilities than section 333 imposes on its ombudsman. The responsibilities of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman are set out in applicable state statutes. Those responsibilities are, in virtually every state, different from the role of the bankruptcy ombudsman, and there may well be a tension in the execution of the two roles by a single individual or entity. For example, in a bankruptcy case the ombudsman is required to be proactive in evaluating patient care and reporting on it to the bankruptcy court. In contrast, the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman programs are generally designed to advocate for patients and their families by investigating complaints and assisting patients and their families in resolving disputes with long-term care facilities. State ombudsmen are neither trained nor expected to conduct comprehensive reviews of facility programs or care, or to evaluate the quality of patient care in the absence of specific complaints or issues. Further, some state statutes limit the authority of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman to its older or elderly citizens.ⁿ¹⁰ Finally, in most states the Long-Term Care Ombudsmen's offices are primarily staffed with volunteers, some with little formal training in health care industry practices. If a long-term care facility in a bankruptcy case in such states provides services to patients who do not fall within the responsibilities of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, or if such state ombudsmen's staff is not competent to perform the responsibilities of the bankruptcy ombudsman, the bankruptcy court should not appoint the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman to serve as the ombudsman under section 333. At a minimum, the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman would have to be able to accept a position supplementary to that held under state law, which could be inconsistent with applicable nonbankruptcy law or regulations.

Another tension with the appointment of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman to serve as the ombudsman under section 333 is that the section expressly states that the United States trustee can only appoint a single person as the ombudsman.ⁿ¹¹ Because person is defined in the Bankruptcy Code as including partnerships and corporations,ⁿ¹² a corporation could be appointed and have representatives inspect facilities in multiple states. More likely a person from an organization, as is the practice with examiners, will be appointed, and that person will retain professionals to assist in the discharge of his or her responsibilities. However, the authority of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman is limited to the state that appointed the ombudsman, and the appointing state may be reluctant to have the energies and resources of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman focused, even in part, on facilities outside the state's borders. Thus, if appointed in the bankruptcy of a multistate health care business, the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman would likely not be able to discharge the bankruptcy-court imposed duties outside of the ombudsmen's home state.

If the United States trustee does not appoint a State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, the bankruptcy court is directed to notify the appropriate State Long-Term Care Ombudsman of the name and address of the person who has been appointed. This notification may well be nothing more than service of the order appointing the ombudsman.

Duties of the Ombudsman. The duties of the ombudsman are (1) to monitor the quality of patient care and (2) to represent the interests of the patients of the health care business. n13 These responsibilities are broad. Thus, section 333 provides wide authority for the ombudsman to review the operations of a health care business. The latter duty is broad enough to allow the ombudsman to review virtually every business decision a health care business debtor makes, so long as the ombudsman can articulate an interest of the patients in the outcome of the decision. Certainly the scope is broad enough that the ombudsman will be able to review and comment on decisions such as the closure of any facility, the sale of any portion of the facility and the increase or decrease in the scope of any services rendered by a health care business to its patients.

Confidentiality of Patient Information. The obligation to monitor the quality of patient care provided to patients of the debtor includes an express authorization allowing the ombudsman to interview patients and physicians. n14 However, such an authorization does not, by itself, allow the ombudsman to review confidential patient records or information. In fact, section 333 expressly provides that the ombudsman may not review confidential patient records unless the bankruptcy court approves such review in advance and imposes restrictions on the ombudsman to protect the confidentiality of such records. n15 State law and doctor-patient privilege will certainly be implicated. The ombudsman also may be required to comply with the federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), n16 which sets a national standard for privacy of protected health information (PHI), in any format, including paper, electronic and even oral. If HIPAA applies to the debtors patient records, the ombudsman would have to comply with HIPAA's requirements before obtaining any information.

If the United States trustee appoints the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, that ombudsmans access to patient records remains whatever it is under applicable nonbankruptcy law. n17 In some states, the ombudsmans access is quite limited absent patient consent; for example, numerous states appear to require patient consent prior to review of the patients records. In states with such laws, the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman has access to records only if the patient or the patients legal representative signs a valid authorization and release, or in some cases, in an emergency or pursuant to court order. n18

The Ombudsmans Reporting Obligations. The ombudsman is required to report to the bankruptcy court every 60 days after the appointment regarding the quality of patient care provided to patients of the debtor. n19 The report can be submitted in writing or presented orally at a hearing, but either means of reporting must be noticed to interested parties. The initial report on the quality of patient care of a health care business of significant size could be voluminous and costly. Subsequent reports would likely be limited to reporting only changes in patient care occurring after the previous report. Section 333 does not address immunity from prosecution for acts of the ombudsman. Thus, if the ombudsman issues a report critical of the quality of care provided by the debtor health care business and the report is publicized and results in destruction of the debtors business, the ombudsman may be liable to the estate for any errors in the report. Moreover, because such report would have to be mindful of the limits of patient confidentiality, the report may have to be vague as to the details of issues related to any specific patients care.

If the ombudsman determines that the quality of patient care provided to patients of the debtor is declining significantly or is otherwise being materially compromised, the ombudsman is directed to file either a motion or a written report, again with appropriate notice to parties in interest immediately upon making such determination. n20 If the ombudsman provides notice to interested parties, that notice should be of the filing of the motion or written report, rather than of the ombudsmans reaching the conclusion that such a report or motion is required, which is what the strict language of section 333 seems to require. Bankruptcy courts should expect that the ombudsman will, upon determining that the quality of patient care is declining significantly or is otherwise materially compromised, promptly file a motion or written report and immediately give notice of the filing to interested parties. While section 333's reference to a report in such circumstances is unremarkable, its language gives no guidance as to what relief a motion would be authorized to seek, e.g., the appointment of a trustee, an order compelling the debtor to take some specific action to remedy the situation or conversion of the case to chapter 7 from chapter 11.

Compensation for the Ombudsman. The 2005 Act provides that compensation for the ombudsman is at the expense of the estate. n21 The Act provides that the ombudsman may be awarded reasonable compensation for actual, necessary services rendered by the ombudsman and by any paraprofessional employed by the ombudsman. n22 Section 333 does not expressly state that the ombudsman can retain counsel or professionals to assist in the discharge of the ombudsmans duties, but if the ombudsman decides to file motions in accordance with the statute, or becomes involved in an evidentiary hearing defending a determination that the quality of health care is declining, representation by an attorney would be necessary and such counsel fees should be paid by the estate as a necessary expense of the ombudsman. If the health care business is large or complicated, the ombudsman could be expected to retain professionals to assist in the discharge of the ombudsmans duties.

Compensation for the ombudsman should be analogous to compensation for examiners and the their professionals, except for one difference that results from the revisions to the Bankruptcy Code and may well be a drafting error. Section 330(a)(3) provides that in determining the amount of reasonable compensation to be awarded to an examiner, trustee or professional person, the court shall consider the nature, the extent, and the value of such services, taking into account all relevant factors, including, generally, time, rates, whether the services were necessary, whether the services were performed in a reasonable amount of time and whether the compensation is reasonable. n23 The omission of ombudsmen from section 330 should not be construed as removing their compensation from the bankruptcy courts oversight under these factors. Another apparent omission from the necessary revisions to the Bankruptcy Code related to the ombudsmans compensation can be found in section 331, which permits trustees, examiners and professional persons to receive interim compensation during a bankruptcy case. n24 There is no logical reason why an ombudsman appointed under section 333 should not be entitled to interim compensation in the same manner as an examiner, and it is likely this omission is merely an oversight rather than an intentional omission by the 2005 Act.

The plain language of section 330 suggests that the estate could be liable to reimburse the State Long-Term Care Ombudsmans office for the work done by that person when serving as the estates ombudsman. Applicable state ethics laws, however, may prohibit such payments. These laws generally prohibit any state employee, officer or official from taking private funds for fulfilling their governmental duties. n25 However, payments may, in some circumstances, be made to the state directly to reimburse it for the fees and expenses incurred by the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman while fulfilling the ombudsman duties under section 333. Alternatively, states may simply not require reimbursement for such expenses.

For a complete discussion of Code section 333, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 333.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1104(a)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, 145 Cong. Rec. S14,052-14,057, 14,059, 106th Cong. (1st Session, 1999) (remarks of Senator Leahy on prior Senate bill with similar provisions: [This] amendment establishes an ombudsman to provide a voice for all health care patients, making sure that judges are well aware of all the facts in balancing the interests between the creditor and the patients.").

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 333(a)(2)(A).

n4

4. Id.

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 333(a)(2)(A).

n6

6. Id.

n7

7. Long-term care is defined as a range of medical and/or social services designed to help people who have disabilities or chronic care needs. Services may be short- or long-term and may be provided in a person's home, in the community, or in residential facilities (e.g., nursing homes or assisted living facilities)." <http://aspe.hhs.gov/daltcp/diction.shtml#LTC>.

n8

8. A State Long-Term Care Ombudsman is defined under the Older Americans Act as an individual designated by a state or a substate unit responsible for investigating and resolving complaints made by or for older people in long-term care facilities. Also responsible for monitoring federal and state policies that relate to long-term care facilities, for providing information to the public about the problems of older people in facilities, and for training volunteers to help in the ombudsman program." <http://aspe.hhs.gov/daltcp/diction.shtml#LTC>. The long-term care ombudsman program is authorized by title III of the Older Americans Act, Pub. L. No. 106 501. In 1978, Congress amended the Older Americans Act to include a requirement that each state develop a Long-term Care Ombudsman Program. There are approximately 53 State Long-Term Care Ombudsman Programs which have additional statewide networks of almost 600 regional and local programs. A good source of information on these programs is the National Long Term Care Ombudsman Resource Center, whose Web site is at <http://www.ltombudsman.org/default.cfm>. That Web site also contains information on The National Association of State Long-term Care Ombudsman Programs and the National Association of Local Long Term Care Ombudsmen.

n9

9. 11 U.S.C. § 333(a)(2)(B).

n10

10. See, e.g., Ala. Stat. § 44.21.200-240.

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 333(a)(2)(A) (If the court orders the appointment of an ombudsman the United States shall appoint 1 disinterested person to serve as such ombudsman.").

n12

12. 11 U.S.C. § 101(41).

n13

13. 11 U.S.C. § 333(a)(1).

n14

14. Id.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 333(c)(1).

n16

16. Pub. L. No. 104-191 (1996). To be a covered entity under HIPAA, a health care provider must engage in HIPAA electronic transactions, e.g., health care claims. HIPAA allows a covered entity (or a trustee standing in the shoes of the covered entity) to disclose PHI without patient authorization for health care operations, which is broadly defined to include, among other things, business management and general administrative of the entity." See 45 C.F.R. § 164.501. There is no guidance on this point, but arguably the transfer of patient records to the ombudsman in bankruptcy is part of health care operations. This position makes sense from a policy standpoint, since allowing the transfer would ensure availability of the records with the overall goal of protecting the patient's interests, although the ombudsman would have to become a covered entity under HIPAA, and would, therefore, be bound by HIPAA to protect the confidentiality of the PHI.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 333(c)(2).

n18

18. See, e.g., Ala. Code §§ 22-5A-1 through 22-5A-7.

n19

19. 11 U.S.C. § 333(b)(2).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 333(b)(3).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(1).

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(1)(A).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 330(a)(3).

n24

24. 11 U.S.C. § 331.

n25

25. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 102.04.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

184 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Disposal of Patient Records

2008 Emerging Issues 976

Collier on Disposal of Patient Records

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) added section 351 to the Bankruptcy Code. Section 351 contains specific provisions for the disposal of patient records in a bankruptcy case. In the health care industry, patients records are vitally important documents. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses issues pertaining to the disposal of patient records under section 351 of the Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) n1 added section 351 to the Bankruptcy Code. Section 351 contains specific provisions for the disposal of patient records in a bankruptcy case. In the health care industry, patients records are vitally important documents. Patient records can contain a patients entire medical history and information crucial to future care, including allergies to certain antibiotics, such as penicillin. Thus, loss or destruction of a patients records can have a devastating impact on a persons ability to obtain the best, or even appropriate, medical treatment in a particular situation. In order to manage the myriad patient-related records, providers of medical services, including doctors and hospitals, rely on traditional paper files, but with increasing frequency also rely on sophisticated electronic medical records or computer based systems. Applicable nonbankruptcy law and regulations require that these records be handled with the utmost confidentiality, and frequently require the storage of such records for long periods. n2

Section 351 of the Bankruptcy Code addresses a perceived need by providing specific requirements for the disposal of patient records that apply only if, in the bankruptcy case of a health care business, the trustee n3 has insufficient funds to pay for the storage of patient records in the manner required under applicable federal or state law. n4 Essentially, this section provides a uniform mechanism for the trustee to dispose of the records under certain circumstances, preempting applicable nonbankruptcy laws, and thereby protects trustees from potential liability under federal and state laws controlling the disposition of patient records. n5

The Scope of Patient Records. The application of section 351 is dependent on the definition of three terms: patient, patient records, and health care business. These terms were added to the Bankruptcy Code as part of the 2005 Act, so their exact scope remains subject to future judicial interpretation. However, even a cursory review of these definitions reveals imprecise language that will likely lead to confusion and litigation in the application of this section. For example, the definition of patient records appears to be written to include health care business records not related to patients at all. n6 The definition of patient includes anyone who receives services from a health care business, but those services do not have to relate to health care. n7 Although the exact scope of what is a health care business remains untested in the courts, at least one proponent of prior similar legislation thought it extended to any institution holding medical records, n8 which could include a records storage facility.

On its face, the definition of patient records includes a variety of documents unrelated to the patients medical treatments, including financial and billing records. If courts apply the definition literally, it might confuse health care business debtors because the industry has its own widely accepted definition of patient records, and health care businesses must comply with state laws that contain their own definitions of patient records. For example, the Guidelines for Defining the Health Record for Legal Purposes, created by the American Health Information Management Association (AHIMA), n9 divide health records into four categories and draw a distinction between legal-medical records, patient-identifiable source data (such as a videotape of a doctor-patient encounter), administrative records and information derived from any of those (such as statistical evaluations of a population that do not identify individual patients). On the other hand, California state law defines patient records as any records in any form or medium maintained by, or in the custody or control of, a health care provider relating to the health history, diagnosis, or condition of a patient, or relating to treatment provided or proposed to be provided to the patient Patient records does not include information given in confidence to a health care provider by a person other than another health care provider or the patient, and that material may be removed from any records prior to inspection or copying Patient records does not include information contained in aggregate form, such as indices, registers, or logs. n10

Thus, if the purpose of the legislation is to ensure that a patients medical records are not disposed of in violation of confidentiality requirements and to the detriment of continuity of medical care, section 351 is too broadly written. It will, therefore, increase the costs associated with closing a facility, because it creates a costly and cumbersome mechanism for the disposition of records which is beyond the intent of the Congress.

Procedure for the Disposition of Patient Records. Section 351 provides a detailed procedure to be followed in order for the trustee to obtain authorization to destroy patient records. Generally, it requires the trustee to publish notice of the intended disposition of the records in newspapers, give written notice directly to patients and their insurance providers and, if the records are not claimed within a year, give notice to an agency of the federal government requesting that it accept the patient records or, if the agency will not accept delivery of the records, of the trustees intent to destroy the patient records. If, after this process is completed, the records remain unclaimed, section 351 explains how the trustee is to destroy the records. Section 351 should not apply when the health care business is sold to another health care business, unless the purchaser refuses to include the patient records in the assets being purchased. If the health care business is sold to a non-health care business, or the purchaser does not purchase the patient records as part of the acquired assets, section 351 would apply.

Notice of the intended disposition must be published notice in at least one appropriate newspaper. n11 Presumably an appropriate newspaper would depend on the geographical scope of the health care business; a national newspaper would be required for a national business, while local newspapers would suffice for health care businesses operating in more limited geographical areas. Section 351 requires only a single publication. The notice must explain that patient records that are not claimed by the patient or insurer within 365 days of the publication of the notice will be destroyed. n12 This notice is not completely accurate, because, as described below, at the end of the 365 days the trustee must still give notice to appropriate federal agencies and wait for a response before the trustee can actually destroy the records. The notice must also explain that an insurance provider can claim the records as well, if applicable nonbankruptcy law permits the insurance provider to do so. n13 However, in providing this notice and, if necessary, responding to the insurance providers demand for the patient records to be turned over to it, the trustee must be cognizant of the potential application of the federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA),ⁿ¹⁴ which sets a national standard for privacy of protected health information (PHI), in any format, including paper, electronic and even oral. The general rule is that a HIPAA-covered entity should only disclose the minimum information necessary to the insurance provider. This requirement will have to be satisfied before the trustee can release the patient records to the insurance provider under HIPAA. Other than notice of the need to claim the records or have them destroyed, section 351 offers no details on what must be included in the notice to describe the patient records. For most debtors, publishing a patient list may be prohibitively expensive and time-consuming. Additionally, publishing a patient privacy list may infringe on patient privacy rights.

Within 180 days of the publication of the notice, the trustee is required to mail a notice to the patients of the health care business, at the most recent known address of that patient, or a family member or contact person for that patient, notifying the patient of the estates possession of patient records and of its intent to destroy them absent someone coming forward to claim the records.ⁿ¹⁵ The trustee is also required to mail the same notice to the patients appropriate insurance carrier.ⁿ¹⁶ While this is not overly burdensome for many debtors, in the case of a large health care business it may result in thousands of notices and a significant burden on the debtors staff to identify patients treated many years before commencement of the bankruptcy case. Because section 351 uses the term most recent known address,ⁿ¹⁷ the trustee should not be required to do any independent research to find addresses for former patients in response to returned mail. Section 351 does not discuss giving notice to state agencies, although many states have laws requiring notice from health care businesses when they are disposing of patient records.ⁿ¹⁸ Trustees should be cognizant of such requirements and comply with them.ⁿ¹⁹ Nothing in section 351 seems to preempt state laws on this issue.

If the patient records are not claimed within 365 days of the publication notice, the trustee is required to mail a written request, by certified mail, to each appropriate federal agency to request permission from that agency to deposit the patient records with that agency.ⁿ²⁰ The text of section 351 indicates that the trustee must wait until the 365-day period has expired before sending the request to the federal agency. Yet, the section does not create any requirement that a federal agency accept patient records tendered by the trustee, and does not provide any guidance to the trustee as to which federal agencies would be appropriate. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services may be a logical agency to contact. Section 351 does not indicate how long the trustee should give the federal agency to make a decision. Presumably, the appropriate time to wait for a response will be a reasonable one, as determined by the trustee. If the estate is operating on a severely limited budget, the reasonable time available to the trustee to wait for a decision may be equally limited.

Interestingly, although some states allow a health care business to deposit patient records with the appropriate state department when the business closes,ⁿ²¹ section 351 only refers to federal agencies. Thus, section 351 could be read to foreclose the trustees option of transferring the patient records to a state agency rather than destroying them. A more reasonable reading of section 351, however, is that it does not preempt that option. Rather, if the applicable state law allows the trustee to transfer the patient records to the state for storage, the cost to the estate should be minimal, and the likelihood will be low that the estate will not have sufficient funds to comply. Therefore, section 351 will not be invoked because the trustee will have sufficient funds to pay for storage of the records in the manner required under applicable Federal or State law. Thus, a viable alternative to invoking section 351 in some states may be for the trustee to dispose of patient records by delivering them to the appropriate state agency under applicable state law.

If the patient records are not claimed by a patient or an insurance provider, or accepted by a federal agency, the trustee shall destroy the records.ⁿ²² If the records are written, shredding or burning the records is required.ⁿ²³ If the records are magnetic, optical or other electronic records, the trustee must destroy those records by a means so that those records cannot be retrieved.ⁿ²⁴

Cost of Record Storage or Disposal. In order to apply section 351, the trustee must show that the estate does not have a sufficient amount of funds to pay for the storage of patient records in the manner required under applicable federal or state law.ⁿ²⁵ Because the storage time required may be lengthy, the costs of storing even modest amounts of records can be high. To determine whether the estate has sufficient funds, the trustee must first calculate the cost of storing the estate's patient records. These costs can include labor, storage boxes, transportation costs, storage and retrieval costs for the required retention period.

The trustee must then decide the priority to which payment of the storage fees is entitled. Section 351 does not address this issue. The most reasonable view is that storage fees should be considered an administrative cost, as an actual, necessary cost of preserving the estate under section 503(b)(1)(A).ⁿ²⁶ This argument is bolstered by the application of 28 U.S.C. § 959, which requires debtors to comply with applicable state law when operating in bankruptcy.ⁿ²⁷ If state law requires the trustee to store the patient records postpetition, presumably compliance with that law is an actual and necessary expense of preserving the estate.ⁿ²⁸ This status would require the trustee to pay the storage costs pari passu with other costs of preserving the estate, and ahead of all other types of administrative expenses, including professional fees.

Section 351 is silent on whether the trustee is to seek bankruptcy court review and approval of the determination that section 351 can be invoked. However, a prudent trustee is likely to file a motion seeking approval of the determination to invoke section 351 and the form of the proposed notice. Notice of this motion should be served, at a minimum, on appropriate federal and state agencies.

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 amended section 503 to allow as an administrative expense the costs and expenses incurred in disposing of patient records in accordance with section 351 by a trustee or a federal, state or municipal government, but only if that disposal was part of the actual, necessary costs and expenses of closing a healthcare business.ⁿ²⁹ This change was necessary to respond to rulings that suggested that if governmental entities or trustees incurred costs in closing a health care business, such costs, because they were incurred in the act of closing the facility, were not entitled to treatment as a expense of the administrative of the estate.ⁿ³⁰ Section 503 as amended does not apply to the disposal of patient records if the health care business does not close.

For a complete discussion of Code section 351, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 351

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

ⁿ¹ 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1102(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ⁿ²

2. See Nancy A. Peterman, Intensive Care: Protecting Patients Rights in Health Care Bankruptcies, 17 Am. Bankr. Inst. J. 10, at 10 & n.3 (1998). Medicare regulations generally require that providers of Medicare services keep their records for at least five years from the date of settlement of the claim against Medicare for payment. For example, hospital medical records must be maintained for at least five years. 42 U.S.C. § 1395cc(a)(1)(I)(ii)(2005); 42 C.F.R. § 482.24(b)(1)(2005). California statutes require that certain providers of health services, if they cease operations, preserve records for a minimum of seven years after the discharge of the patient, except that records of minors must be maintained for at least one year after the minor reaches the age of 18, and in any event for no less than seven years, which can require storage for 25 years. See Cal. Health & Safety Code § 123145(a). Massachusetts requires retention of certain medical records for 30 years. See Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 111, § 70. Minnesota requires certain medical records to be retained permanently. See Minn. Stat. §§ 145.30, 145.32, 147.091.

n3

3. Although section 351 expressly refers only to a trustee, it applies equally to a debtor in possession. A debtor in possession has all the rights and powers, and performs all the duties and functions of a trustee, unless the Bankruptcy Code expressly states otherwise. See 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 351.

n5

5. See, e.g., Cal. Health & Safety Code § 123145(b) (The department or any person injured as a result of the licensee's abandonment of health records may bring an action in a proper court for the amount of damage suffered as a result thereof. In the event that the licensee is a corporation or partnership that is dissolved, the person injured may take action against that corporation's or partnership's principal officers of record at the time of dissolution.).

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 101(40B).

n7

7. 11 USC § 101(40A).

n8

8. Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, 145 Cong. Rec. S. 14052-07, 14059, 106th Cong. (1st Session, 1999) (remarks of Senator Leahy on prior Senate bill with similar provisions).

n9

9. See AHIMAs Web site at http://library.ahima.org/xpedio/groups/public/documents/ahima/pub_bokl_009223.html

n10

10. Cal Health & Safety Code § 123105(d).

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 351(1)(A).

n12

12. Id.

n13

13. Id.

n14

14. Pub. L. No. 104-191 (1996). HIPAA applies to health care providers, facilities or clearinghouses if they conduct HIPAA electronic transactions as defined in 45 C.F.R. § 160-103 (2005) (e.g., submitting health care claims). Medicare requires entities with more than 25 full-time employees to bill electronically, so HIPAA applies to all but small health care businesses. HIPAA allows a covered entity (or a trustee standing in the shoes of the covered entity) to disclose PHI without patient authorization for health care operations, which is broadly defined to include business management and general administration of the entity. See 45 C.F.R. § 164.501. There is no guidance on this point, but arguably transfer of patient records in bankruptcy is part of health care operations. This position makes sense from a policy standpoint, since allowing the transfer would ensure availability of the records, and the insurer, who would also be a covered entity under HIPAA, would be bound by HIPAA to protect the confidentiality of the PHI.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 351(1)(B).

n16

16. Id.

n17

17. Id.

n18

18. See AHIMA Practice Brief, Protecting Patient Information after a Facility Closure, Exhibit 1, available at www.ahima.org (providing a state-by-state list of laws, regulations or guidelines pertaining to facility closure and disposition of patient records).

n19

19. See 28 U.S.C. § 959(b).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 351(2).

n21

21. See Nancy A. Peterman, Intensive Care: Protecting Patients Rights in Health Care Bankruptcies, 17 Am. Bankr. Inst. J. 10, at 10 n.4 (1998); see also, e.g., Miss. Code Ann. § 41-9-79 (directing that, if no other hospital in the vicinity is willing to accept and retain the medical records, they are to be delivered to the state licensing agency); Tenn. Code Ann. § 68-11-308 (providing that if a hospital closes it must surrender its records to the Tennessee Department of Health); Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 9-2-408 (requiring that when publicly funded hospitals or nursing homes cease to operate, records are transferred to the state archives).

n22

22. 11 U.S.C. § 351(3).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 351(3)(B).

n24

24. Id.

n25

25. 11 U.S.C. § 351.

n26

26. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(A).

n27

27. 28 U.S.C. § 959(b) provides that a trustee shall manage and operate the property in his possession according to the requirements of the valid laws of the State in which such property is situated . See, e.g., MidAtlantic Natl Bank v. New Jersey Dept of Env'tl. Protection, 474 U.S. 494, 505, 106 S. Ct. 755, 761, 88 L. Ed. 2d 859, 859 (1986).

n28

28. See, e.g., Reading Co. v. Brown, 391 U.S. 471, 483-84, 88 S. Ct. 1759, 1766, 20 L. Ed. 2d 751, 758 (1968) (administrative expenses include those ordinarily incident to operation of a business, and not [solely] costs without which rehabilitation would be impossible).

n29

29. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(8)(A).

n30

30. See In re Allen Care Centers, Inc., 163 B.R. 180, 183-89 (Bankr. D. Or. 1994), affd, 175 B.R. 397, 399-400 (D. Or. 1994). In Allen Care Centers, the debtor decided to shut down one of its three nursing homes, and the state assumed responsibility for the facility during its shutdown and transfer of its patients. It then sought payment of its costs as an administrative expense. The bankruptcy court denied its request, rejecting its argument that expenses incurred by a governmental entity in assuring the public health and safety upon liquidation of Chapter 7 estate property would be entitled to an administrative priority.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

185 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Limitations on Automatic Stay Under Subsections 362(c)(3) and (4) of the Code

2008 Emerging Issues 977

Collier on Limitations on Automatic Stay Under Subsections 362(c)(3) and (4) of the Code

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: For debtors who have had prior bankruptcy filings dismissed within one year of a current filing, subsections 362(c)(3) and 362(c)(4) set some limits on the duration and effect of the automatic stay. This Emerging Issues Analysis discusses issues pertaining to the limitations on the automatic stay under 362(c)(3) and (4), including a prior dismissed case within a year of filing, and two or more dismissed cases within a year of filing.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: For debtors who have had prior bankruptcy filings dismissed within one year of a current filing, subsections 362(c)(3) and 362(c)(4) set some limits on the duration and effect of the automatic stay. Section 362(c)(3) limits the duration of the automatic stay in a case filed by a debtor who has had a prior case dismissed within the year. Section 362(c)(4) prevents the automatic stay from taking effect in a case filed by a debtor who has had two or more prior cases dismissed within the year.

Prior Dismissed Case Within Year of Filing; § 362(c)(3). Section 362(c)(3) limits the duration of the automatic stay in a case filed by a debtor who has had a prior case dismissed within the year. n1 If a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under chapter 7, 11 or 13, and the debtor has had a prior single or joint case that was pending within the preceding one-year period and was dismissed, the automatic stay provided under section 362(a) with respect to any action taken in relation to a debt or property securing such debt, or to any lease, expires with respect to the debtor on the 30th day after the filing of the later case.

There are certain limitations arising from the express wording of subsection 362(c)(3). First, the stay terminates under this provision only with respect to the debtor. As in other provisions in section 362, Congress sought in subsection 362(c)(3) to distinguish between actions taken against property of the debtor and property of the estate. n2 This intent to limit the stay termination to actions against the debtor is made abundantly clear when the language in subsection (c)(3) is compared to the much broader scope of the parallel stay termination provision in subsection 362(c)(4) n3 for a debtor who has had two dismissed cases within the prior year, particularly since both provisions were enacted at the same time as part of the 2005 amendments. n4 Thus, if there has been a stay termination based on the operation of subsection (c)(3) in a case filed within a year of a prior dismissal, the automatic stay provided under section 362(a) continues to apply in that case as to actions taken against property of the estate, but not as to actions against the debtor or property of the debtor that is not property of the estate. n5 Second, as a result of the absence in the 2005 amendments of any express or implied limitation on section 1301, subsection 362(c)(3) does not prevent the application of the codebtor stay in a chapter 13 case. Thus, the stay provided under section 1301 applies irrespective of subsection 362(c)(3) as to any consumer debt of the debtor with respect to actions taken against a codebtor on the debt. Third, the stay limitation under subsection 362(c)(3) does not apply in a case filed under chapter 11 or 13 following the dismissal of a prior chapter 7 case under section 707(b). Finally, the stay limitation does not apply in a case brought by a family farmer under chapter 12.

The pending but dismissed language in subsection (c)(3) has caused one court to consider when a case is no longer pending in the not uncommon situation where the clerk of the court does not complete the administrative function of closing a case until sometime after an order of dismissal. In In re Moore, n6 the debtor's previous case was dismissed prior to the one-year period, but the case remained open after dismissal and was eventually closed by the court during the one-year period. To determine whether subsection (c)(3) applied, the court referred to the definition of pending found in Black's Law Dictionary, which defines the word as remaining undecided: awaiting decision. n7 This definition, the court noted, suggests that a case is no longer pending after dismissal; once the case has been dismissed, there is nothing undecided remaining. n8 In addition, since the word pending is also used in section 109(g), the court referred to decisions that have counted the 180-day period in that section from the date of dismissal of the prior case, not the date the case is closed. n9 The court in Moore therefore concluded that the case dismissal date, rather than the closing date, is controlling for purposes of applying subsection (c)(3).

In a further parsing of the statutory language, the court in In re Paschal n10 sought to determine the type of actions which are no longer stayed if subsection (c)(3) is applicable, based on the phrase with respect to any action taken. By comparing Congress's varying use of the word act n11 and action n12 in section 362, the court concluded that Congress must have intended a different and more limited meaning for the words action taken. Thus, the court held that subsection (c)(3) terminates the automatic stay only as to creditors who have taken a specific action against the debtor, which must be some formal judicial, administrative or similar undertaking. n13 In addition, since the word taken is used, which the Paschal court construed as meaning an action in the past, the court found that the creditor's formal action which is stayed under subsection (c)(3) must occur before the filing of the petition. n14

Section 362(c)(3)(B) provides that upon motion of a party in interest, and after notice and hearing completed within the 30-day period before the expiration of the stay, the court may continue the automatic stay if such party demonstrates that the later case has been filed in good faith as to the creditors stayed by the filing. In determining whether the case has been filed in good faith, the court shall consider whether the presumption set out in section 362(c)(3)(C) that the case was not filed in good faith is applicable, and, if so, whether the moving party has rebutted the presumption with clear and convincing evidence to the contrary. Section 362(c)(3)(C)(i) provides that the later case is presumed to be filed not in good faith, as to all creditors in the case, if:

-- more than one previous case under chapter 7, 11 or 13 filed by or against the debtor was pending within the preceding one-year period;

-- the prior chapter 7, 11 or 13 case was dismissed within the preceding one-year period after the debtor failed to (a) file or amend without substantial excuse the petition or any required documents, (b) provide adequate protection ordered by the court, or (c) perform the terms of a confirmed plan; or

-- there has not been a substantial change in the debtor's financial or personal affairs since the dismissal of the prior case, or there has not been any other reason to conclude that the later case will be concluded either with a discharge if it is a chapter 7 case or with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed if it is a chapter 11 or 13 case.

The presumption under this subsection arising due to a prior dismissal following the debtor's failure to file or amend the petition or other required documents is applicable only if the debtor's actions are without substantial excuse.

n15 This provision states that mere inadvertence or negligence on the part of the debtor shall not be a substantial excuse, unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney. In addition, section 362(c)(3)(C)(ii) provides that the later case is presumed to be filed in bad faith as to any creditor who sought relief from the automatic stay in the prior case of the debtor and the stay relief motion was, at the time of dismissal of the prior case, pending before the court or resolved with an order terminating, conditioning or limiting the stay. The presumption created by section 362(c)(3)(C), however, does not apply if the prior case is dismissed because the debtor has entered into a debt repayment plan. Section 362(i) provides that if a case filed under chapter 7, 11, or 13 is dismissed due to the creation of a debt repayment plan, any subsequent case shall not be presumed to have been filed by the debtor with a lack of good faith. n16 Unlike the prepetition credit counseling requirement for individual debtors found in section 109(h), or the claim reduction provision found in section 502(k), section 362(i) does not require that the debt repayment plan be proposed or negotiated by an approved nonprofit budgeting and credit counseling agency. n17 This provision also does not require that the debt repayment plan be successfully completed by the debtor.

Two or More Dismissed Cases Within Year of Filing; § 362(c)(4). Section 362(c)(4) prevents the automatic stay from taking effect in a case filed by a debtor who has had two or more prior cases dismissed within the year. n18 If a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under any chapter of title 11, and the debtor has had two or more single or joint prior cases that were pending within the preceding one-year period and were dismissed, the automatic stay provided under § 362(a) shall not go into effect upon the filing of the later case. For this stay limitation to apply, at least two prior cases filed under any chapter must have been pending and subsequently dismissed during the one-year period. In contrast with section 362(c)(3), and due to an apparent drafting error, this subsection applies to cases other than a case refiled under section 707(b). The meaning of this phrase is unclear since cases are not filed under section 707(b). It was likely intended to provide, as under section 362(c)(3), that the subsection's stay limitation does not apply in a case filed under a chapter other than chapter 7 following the dismissal of a prior chapter 7 case under section 707(b).

In practice, section 362(c)(4) operates much as a stay exception does under section 362(b), in that it prevents the stay from taking effect upon the commencement of the case. However, unlike the stay exceptions in section 362(b), there is an explicit substantive right and statutory procedure contained within the subsection for a party in interest to seek the imposition of the stay, without the need to invoke the court's injunctive power under section 105. Section 362(c)(4)(B) provides that upon motion of a party in interest filed within 30 days after the filing of the later case, and after notice and hearing, the court may order the automatic stay to take effect as to any or all creditors, subject to conditions or limitations that the court may impose, if such party demonstrates that the later case has been filed in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed by the filing. A stay imposed under section 362(c)(4)(B) shall be effective on the date such an order is entered.

As under section 362(c)(3), a presumption that a case was not filed in good faith may arise under this subsection, subject to rebuttal by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary. Section 362(c)(4)(D) lists the criteria under which the presumption arises, and these criteria are similar to those set out in section 362(c)(3)(C). n19 Section 362(c)(4)(D)(i) states that the later case is presumed to be filed not in good faith, as to all creditors in the case, if:

-- two or more previous cases filed by or against the debtor under any chapter of title 11 were pending within the preceding one-year period;

-- a previous case was dismissed within the preceding one-year period after the debtor failed to (a) file or amend without substantial excuse the petition or any required documents, (b) provide adequate protection ordered by the court, or (c) perform the terms of a confirmed plan; or

-- there has not been a substantial change in the debtor's financial or personal affairs since the dismissal of the prior case, or there has not been any other reason to conclude that the later case will not be concluded either with a discharge if it is a chapter 7 case or with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed if it is a chapter 11 or 13 case. n20

The presumption under this subsection arising if a previous case is dismissed due to the debtor's failure to file or amend the petition or other required documents is applicable only if the debtor's actions are without substantial excuse. n21 This provision states that mere inadvertence or negligence on the part of the debtor shall not be a substantial excuse, unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney. In addition, section 362(c)(4)(D)(ii) provides that the later case is presumed to be filed in bad faith as to any creditor who sought relief from the automatic stay in a previous case of the debtor and the stay relief motion was, at the time of dismissal of such previous case, pending before the court or resolved with an order terminating, conditioning or limiting of the stay.

For a complete discussion of Code section 362, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1) (against the debtor), 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(2) (against the debtor or against property of the estate), 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3) (property of the estate or of property from the estate), 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(4) (against property of the estate), 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(5) (against property of the debtor), 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(6) (against the debtor).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4

4. See In re Moon, 339 B.R. 668, 671 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2006) (Had the drafters of this provision intended that the whole of the automatic stay would terminate, they could have easily just referenced § 362(a) as they did in § 362(c)(4)(A) (the stay under subsection (a) shall not go into effect upon the filing of the later case).).

n5

5. In re Jones, 339 B.R. 360 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2006); In re Johnson, 335 B.R. 805 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn.2006).
But see In re Jupiter, 344 B.R. 754 (Bankr. D.S.C. 2006).

n6

6. In re Moore, 337 B.R. 79 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2005).

n7

7. 337 B.R. 79, 81 (citing Black's Law Dictionary 1169 (8th ed. 2004)).

n8

8. Id.

n9

9. Id. (citing In re Carty, 149 B.R. 601 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1993); In re Richardson, 217 B.R. 479 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1998)).

n10

10. 337 B.R. 274 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2006).

n11

11. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3), (a)(4), (a)(5), (a)(6), (c)(1), (c)(2).

n12

12. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(b)(1), (b)(2)(A), (b)(4), (b)(14), (b)(16), (b)(25)(A)(B), (c)(3)(C)(ii).

n13

13. 337 B.R. 274 , 280.

n14

14. Id.

n15

15. 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(C)(i)(II)(aa), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 362(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n17

17. See 11 U.S.C. § 111, added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n18

18. 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n19

19. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(C).

n20

20. In contrast with section 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(C)(i)(III), and due to an apparent drafting error, the word not was added to section 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(D)(i)(III), creating a double negative that affects the meaning of the provision, and produces a result likely not intended by Congress.

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(D)(i)(II), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

186 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Succession of Trustee to Rights to Unsecured Creditor under Section 544(b)

2008 Emerging Issues 979

Collier on Succession of Trustee to Rights to Unsecured Creditor under Section 544(b)

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code subsection 544(b) gives the trustee the right to avoid any transfer of the debtor or any obligation incurred by the debtor that is voidable under applicable law by a creditor holding an unsecured claim that is allowable under the Bankruptcy Code or by a creditor holding an unsecured claim for reimbursement or contribution that is not allowable only because of section 502(e) of the Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code subsection 544(b) gives the trustee the right to avoid any transfer of the debtor or any obligation incurred by the debtor that is voidable under applicable law by a creditor holding an unsecured claim that is allowable under the Bankruptcy Code or by a creditor holding an unsecured claim for reimbursement or contribution that is not allowable only because of section 502(e) of the Code. Excluded from this avoidance power are charitable contributions n1 to qualified religious or charitable entities or organizations to the same extent that they would be excluded from avoidance were the action brought under section 548. n2 The burden is on the trustee seeking to take advantage of this provision to demonstrate the existence of an actual creditor with a viable cause of action against the debtor which is not time barred or otherwise invalid. n3

Need for an Actual Creditor. Under section 544(b), the trustee succeeds to the rights of an unsecured creditor in existence at the commencement of the case who may void the transfer under applicable law. n4 The unsecured creditor need not exist at the time the action is filed; n5 so long as the trustee pleads the existence of a creditor who could have avoided the transfer, n6 the trustee need not identify a specific creditor by name. n7 If there are no creditors against whom the transfer is voidable under the applicable law, the trustee is powerless to act under section 544(b). n8 Thus, if a state can invoke the defense of sovereign immunity against a debtors creditor, the trustee may not pursue an alleged fraudulent transfer made to the state. n9 It is not necessary, however, that there be more than one such creditor. n10 Nor is it requisite that the creditor whose rights the trustee seeks to assert has reduced its claim against the debtor to a judgment, or has issued execution and had it returned unsatisfied as long as the creditor is unsecured. n11

The creditor whose rights the trustee invokes must be one holding an unsecured claim that is allowable under section 502 of this title or that is not allowable only under section 502(e) of this title. The requirement found in former

Section 70e, the predecessor of section 544(b), that the creditor whose rights are being relied upon by the trustee be the holder of a provable claim, has been eliminated from this section, as has the entire concept of provability been eliminated from the Code. n12 It is not necessary that the creditor be just a simple contract creditor or a general creditor. The trustee may assert the rights of a judgment creditor where the judgment has not given rise to a lien. n13 The drafters of section 544(b) made it clear that this section overrules those cases that hold [former] Section 70e gives the trustee the rights of secured creditors. n14 A debtor may use the section 544(b) powers after confirmation even though all of the unsecured creditors have been paid. n15

State Law. Although federal law provides the trustee with the rights of an actual unsecured creditor, the extent of the rights is determined entirely by the applicable state or local law. n16 Under section 544(b) the trustee may exercise the rights of creditors under state fraudulent transfer law, n17 or preferential transfer laws. n18 However, the trustee may not pursue every action that may be brought by a debtors creditors. For example, a trustee may not recover treble damages and attorney fees if a voidable transfer violates state criminal law. n19 The trustee may also use the right of any existing creditor to avoid a bulk transfer in violation of state law. n20 The applicable state law limitations period applies to actions brought under section 544(b). n21 The trustee is, as previously noted, also subject to the statute of limitations of section 546(b) of the Code. n22 Thus, the trustee must bring a section 544 action within the applicable state law limitation period, plus any extension provided by section 108 of the Code, but is also subject to the section 546 limitation period. Moreover, if state fraudulent transfer law allows attorneys fees to be awarded to the prevailing party in an avoidance action, a successful defendant may claim its attorneys fees from the bankruptcy estate as an administrative expense. n23

Trustee Subject to Defenses. The general rule is that section 544(b) confers upon the trustee no greater rights of avoidance than the creditor would have if it were asserting invalidity on its own behalf. n24 Consequently, if the creditor is deemed estopped to recover upon a claim, or is barred from recovery because of the running of a statute of limitations prior to the commencement of the case, the trustee is likewise estopped or barred. n25 The general viewpoint has been stated in Davis v. Willey, n26 in which the court declared:

It is well established that the effect of this section is to clothe the trustee with no new or additional right in the premises over that possessed by a creditor, but simply puts him in the shoes of the latter, and subject to the same limitations and disabilities that would have beset the creditor in the prosecution of the action on his own behalf; and the rights of the parties are to be determined, not by any provision of the [former] Bankruptcy Act, but by the applicable principles of the common law, or the laws of the state in which the right of action may arise. In other words, the [former] Bankruptcy Act merely permits the trustee the rights which the creditor could assert but for the pendency of the bankruptcy [case], and if, for any reason arising under the laws of the state the action could not be maintained by the creditor, the same disability will bar the trustee. n27

Thus, an election by the creditor prior to commencement of the case to treat the transfer as valid, n28 or an admission in a proceeding prior to commencement of the case with respect to the validity of an obligation, n29 have been held to estop the creditor and in turn the trustee claiming in the creditors stead from asserting any rights under the predecessor of section 544(b). Similarly, a trustee in a proceeding to set aside a fraudulent transfer may be barred by the states three-year statute of limitations where it appears that the creditor acquired knowledge of the facts showing the fraud more than three years before the petition was filed. n30 This will generally be fatal to the trustees chances if that creditor is the only creditor who may have rights of avoidance, but if there are many such creditors asserting the rights of other creditors, of course, the estoppel or the barring of one will not affect the trustees right to proceed. So, also, estoppel not be ruinous where a single creditor appears in two capacities, and the estoppel runs against only one of these. For example, where a secured creditor against whom an estoppel might be invoked in that capacity had renounced the security and claimed as a general creditor, the basis for the estoppel was cut away, and a trustee asserting the creditors rights was not denied recovery on that ground. n31 In no event will the waiver or admission after the commencement of the case by the debtor create an estoppel that may be used against the trustee under section 544(b). n32 Similarly, a judgment against the debtor will not bar the trustee from pursuing any remedy against a transfer that would still be available to a creditor holding an unsecured claim that is allowable. n33 Even if there is time under state law to assert the claim, the trustee is subject to the limitations period in section 546 applicable to the commencement of avoidance actions generally. n34

Assignee of Creditor. The fact that the creditor whose rights are invoked is an assignee or successor in interest of the original creditor against whom a transfer was invalid will not bar the trustees action, so long as the assignee has an allowable claim and succeeds to the assignors rights of avoidance under state law. n35

Extent to Which Transfer May Be Avoided. As under Moore v. Bay, n36 the entire transfer is avoided to the extent necessary to benefit the estate. n37 As a result, all creditors holding unsecured claims share in the recovery, not merely those creditors whose rights are asserted. n38 Before the enactment of the Bankruptcy Code of 1978, the decision in Moore v. Bay, written by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., was one of the most controversial in the entire field of bankruptcy law. Interpreting Section 70e of the former Bankruptcy Act, the predecessor to section 544(b), the decision allowed the trustee to avoid a transfer entirely without regard to the size of the claim of the creditor whose rights and powers the trustee was asserting, with the recovery to be retained for the benefit of the entire estate. Accordingly, under Moore v. Bay, the right of the trustee to recover is dependent upon just one creditor with a cause of action and not dependent at all upon the size of that creditors claim against the debtor. In other words, an entire transfer can be set aside even though the creditors claim is nominal n39 and even though the avoidance may provide more funds than necessary to pay the creditors and the administrative expenses of the case. n40 Moreover, the recovery of the trustee is for the benefit of all creditors including those who had no right to avoid the transfer.

As a result of the Report of the Commission on the Bankruptcy Laws of the United States n41 a Commission Bill was introduced n42 in which § 4-604(b) overruled Moore v. Bay. An opposing bill, n43 introduced by the National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges, retained the rule of Moore v. Bay. These bills and succeeding bills were the subject of considerable debate during the following three years, much of it focusing on Moore v. Bay. The National Bankruptcy Conference said:

We endorse the proposal of the Commission that the recovery of the trustee should be limited to the amount which the particular creditor whose rights are asserted could have recovered. This conclusion is based on the proposition that it is unfair to permit a trustee to set aside a large transaction involving substantial sums when under state law the creditor whose claim is being asserted by the trustee could have recovered from the transferee no more than the amount of his claim. As to the question of whether the recovery should be for the benefit of the estate rather than for the benefit solely of the particular creditor whose rights are being asserted, the NBC recommends that the recovery should be for the benefit of all creditors. n44

The Bankruptcy Code when enacted was silent with regard to the rule of Moore v. Bay. However, the Committee Reports state that the intention was to retain the rule of that case. n45

For a complete discussion of Code section 544, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 544.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. The term charitable contribution is defined in section 548(d)(3). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 548.05[6][b].

n2

2. Section 548 was amended by the Religious Liberty and Charitable Donation Protection Act of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105-183 (1998), to add section 548(d)(3) in order to exclude charitable contributions from bankruptcy avoidance powers of a trustee under both sections 548 and 544(b). In general, the amendments establish a safe harbor from both sections 548 and 544(b) for aggregate contributions of up to 15 percent of the debtor's gross income. An even greater amount may be excluded from the trustee's avoidance power if that amount is consistent with the debtor's practice of making charitable contributions. The Act was held to be constitutional in Miller v. Grace Fellowship, Inc. (In re Witt), 231 B.R. 92, 92-99 (Bankr. N.D. Okla. 1999).

n3

3. In re 9281 Shore Road Owners Corp., 187 B.R. 837 (E.D.N.Y. 1995); Tabas v. Gigi Advertising Partnership (In re Kaufman & Roberts, Inc.), 188 B.R. 309 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1995); In re International Loan Network, Inc., 160 B.R. 1 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1993).

n4

4. In re Turner, 78 B.R. 166 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1987). The existing actual unsecured creditor holding an allowable unsecured claim who could avoid the transfers at issue has been called the golden creditor. Turner v. Phoenix Fin., LLC (In re Imageset, Inc.), 299 B.R. 709, 715 (Bankr. D. Me. 2003). The Seventh Circuit has twice stated that the trustee need not identify a specific creditor so long as the unsecured creditor exists. Leibowitz v. Parkway Bank & Trust Co. (In re Image Worldwide, Inc.), 139 F.3d 574, 577 (7th Cir. 1998); In re Leonard, 125 F.3d 543, 544 (7th Cir. 1997). The unsecured creditor need not exist at the time the action is filed.

n5

5. Stalnaker v. DLC, Ltd. (In re DLC, Ltd.), 295 B.R. 593 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003).

n6

6. Leibowitz v. Parkway Bank & Trust Co. (In re Image Worldwide, Inc.), 139 F.3d 574, 577 (7th Cir. 1988); In re Leonard, 125 F.3d 543, 544 (7th Cir. 1997); Freeland v. Enodis Corp. (In re Consol. Indus. Corp.), 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79620, at *20 (N.D. Ind. Oct. 31, 2006) (a trustee need not identify the specific creditor that creates standing under 11 U.S.C. § 544(b) so long as he shows that at least one creditor exists).

n7

7. Giuliano v. U.S. Nursing Corp. (In re Lexington Healthcare Group, Inc.), 339 B.R. 570, 576 (Bankr. D. Del. 2006); Brandt v. Hicks, Muse & Co. (In re Healthco Int'l, Inc.), 35 C.B.C.2d 1345, 195 B.R. 971, 980 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1996).

n8

8. Heffron v. Duggins, 115 F.2d 519 (9th Cir. 1940); Bumgardner v. Simms, 151 B.R. 978, 983 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1993); Weibolt Stores Inc. v. Shottenstein, 20 C.B.C.2d 776, 94 B.R. 488, 506 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1988). Bankruptcy courts differ as to whether the trustee succeeds to state avoidance powers where the state law limits such avoidance powers to receivers and assignees. Compare Dubis v. B.W. Supply (In re Delta Group), 300 B.R. 918 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2003) (the trustee does not succeed to state avoidance powers limited to an assignee or a receiver even though creditors exist), with Copter, Inc. v. Gladwin Leasing, Inc., 725 F.2d 37, 9 C.B.C.2d 1155 (3d Cir. 1984) (the trustee will not succeed to state avoidance powers where there is no existing assignee for the benefit of creditors), and with Zimmerman v. Fren Corp. (In re Kenval Marketing Corp.), 69 B.R. 922, 930 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) (where there are no creditors, the trustee will succeed to the avoidance powers of an existing assignee for creditors).

n9

9. Grubbs Constr. Co. v. Florida Dep't of Revenue (In re Grubbs Constr. Co.), 321 B.R. 346 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2005) (even though the state instrumentality by filing a proof of claim had waived sovereign immunity).

n10

10. United Const. Co. v. Milam (In re Diamond Block Asphalt Corp.), 124 F.2d 670 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 317 U.S. 642, 63 S. Ct. 33, 87 L. Ed. 517 (1942); First Presbyterian Church v. Rabbitt, 118 F.2d 732 (9th Cir. 1940).

n11

11. See, e.g., Adler v. Hill, 981 F.2d 1474 (5th Cir. 1993); In re Baumgartner, 55 F.2d 1041, 1046 (7th Cir. 1931) (An execution returned unsatisfied is not a prerequisite to the right of action of the trustee; but in the exercise of that right he may file a bill to avoid any transfer by the debtor of his property, which any creditor might have avoided had not bankruptcy intervened.); Barr v. Roderick, 11 F.2d 984 (9th Cir. 1925).

n12

12. See 11 U.S.C. § 502(c).

n13

13. See, e.g., Adler v. Hill, 981 F.2d 1474 (5th Cir. 1993); In re Morris, 204 F. 770 (2d Cir. 1913); Macken v. Gass, 23 F. Supp. 320 (W.D.N.Y. 1938). If the judgment of the creditor gives rise to a lien, however, the trustee is not subrogated to the rights inhering in the security, unless the lien arose within the appropriate time period and otherwise is subject to attack under section 547. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.01.

n14

14. See Analysis of H.R. 8200, H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 370 (1977), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 4(d)(i); Analysis of S. 2266, S. Rep. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 85 (1978), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 4(e)(i).

n15

15. In re Acequia, Inc. 34 F.3d 800, 808, 31 C.B.C.2d 1197 (9th Cir. 1994); Stalnaker v. DLC, Ltd. (In re DLC, Ltd.), 295 B.R. 593 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2003), aff'd, 376 F.3d 819 (8th Cir. 2004).

n16

16. Havee v. Belk, 775 F.2d 1209 (4th Cir. 1985). Section 544 may allow the trustee to reach back to transfers made more than one year before the bankruptcy filing, because the statute of limitations from the state or applicable non-bankruptcy law applies. In re Estate of Graven, 64 F.3d 453, 456 at n.5 (8th Cir. 1995); see also In re Levine, 134 F.3d 1046 (11th Cir. 1998) holding that a trustee's action to avoid a transfer of nonexempt assets to exempt annuities was governed by the two year Florida fraudulent transfer limitation and not the 30 day limitation on objection to exemptions in Rule 4003. In Brock v. Draper (In re Draper), 56 C.B.C.2d 42, 355 B.R. 607, 610 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2006), the court allowed a trustee to set aside a fraudulent transfer made fourteen months before the commencement of the case noting that under Kentucky Revised Statute § 378.020 a fraudulent transfer action is not barred until five years from the time the cause of action accrued or ten years from the time the fraud was perpetrated. See also Ackerman v. Ventimiglia (In re Ventimiglia), 362 B.R. 71, 80 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2007) (setting aside under state law a fraudulent transfer made more than six years before the commencement of the case).

n17

17. E.g., Butler v. Nationsbank, N.A., 58 F.3d 1022 (4th Cir. 1995) (applying North Carolina fraudulent conveyance law); In re Jones, 184 B.R. 377 (Bankr. D.N.M. 1995) (applying New Mexico law); In re McFarland, 170 B.R. 613 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1994) (applying Ohio law and finding actual intent to hinder creditors).

n18

18. Four states have preferential transfer statutes which may be available to the trustee. Ohio's law (Ohio Rev. Code § 1313.56) has a reach-back period of 6 or 10 years. Cf. Buckley, The Use of Ohio's Preference Law in Bankruptcy: An Alternative to Section 547 With a Longer Reach Back Period, 20 Cap. Univ. L. Rev. 863, 894 (1991). Both Kentucky (Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 378.060, 378.070) and New Mexico (N.M. Stat. Ann. §§ 56-9-1, 56-9-2) have six-month reach-back periods. However, a Kentucky court has held that under section 546 of the Code the trustee has two years to bring an action under section 544(b). Castlen v. Ohio Valley Nat'l Bank (In re Wilson), 106 B.R. 125 (Bankr. W.D. Ky. 1989). The Maryland preference law (Md. Com. Code Ann. § 15-101) has a reach-back period coextensive with federal law.

n19

19. Kleven v. Stewart (In re Myers), 320 B.R. 667 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 2005) (in addition, 11 U.S.C. § 550(a) limits the trustee's recovery to either the property transferred or the value of such property.)

n20

20. In re Verco Indus., 704 F.2d 1134, 8 C.B.C.2d 554 (9th Cir. 1983).

n21

21. In re Luis Elec. Contracting Corp., 149 B.R. 751 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1992) (applying New York's six year limitations period for fraudulent transfers).

n22

22. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 544.02; cf. In re Commercial W. Fin. Corp., 761 F.2d 1329, 12 C.B.C.2d 1177 (9th Cir. 1985).

n23

23. Krommenhoek v. A-Mark Precious Metals, Inc. et al. (In re Bybee), 945 F.2d 309, 316 (9th Cir. 1991) (awarding attorney's fees); In re Good Taste, Inc., 317 B.R. 112, 120-21 (Bankr. D. Alaska 2004) (allowing defendant's attorney's fees as an administrative expense).

n24

24. See Heffron v. Duggins, 115 F.2d 519 (9th Cir. 1940); Grubbs Constr. Co. v. Florida Dep't of Revenue (In re Grubbs Constr. Co.), 321 B.R. 346 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2005) (although the state waived sovereign immunity by filing a proof of claim, the state could assert sovereign immunity against any creditor and so the trustee was barred from claiming under the rights of a creditor); In re Luis Elec. Contracting Corp., 149 B.R. 751 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1992); In re Lyons, 130 B.R. 272 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991). So in United States v. Field (In re Abatement Environmental Resources, Inc.), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11989 (D. Md. May 27, 2003), the trustee was unable to recover tax payments made by the debtor to IRS because Maryland's voluntary payment doctrine afforded immunity to taxing authorities.

n25

25. See, e.g., Harris v. Huff (In re Huff), 160 B.R. 256 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1993); see also McKey v. McKean, 384 Ill. 112, 51 N.E.2d 189 (1943), where an action to avoid a conveyance to the debtor's wife on the ground of its alleged fraud on creditors, brought nearly four years after recordation of the conveyance, was held barred by laches. See 11 U.S.C. § 546(a).

n26

26. 263 F. 588 (N.D. Cal. 1920), aff'd, 273 F. 397 (9th Cir. 1921).

n27

27. 263 F. 588, 589 (citing Collier on Bankruptcy (10th ed.), 1042 (f) & (g)); Manning v. Evans, 156 F. 106, 19 Am. B.R. 217 (D.C. N.J. 1907); In re Mullen, 101 F. 413, 4 Am. B.R. 224 (D.C. Mass. 1900); Holbrook v. International Trust Co., 220 Mass. 150, 33 Am. B.R. 808, 107 N.E. 665 (1915).

n28

28. Lane v. Eggleston 284 F. 743 (5th Cir. 1922); Durrett v. Harris, 148 Ark. 4, 228 S.W. 386 (1921).

n29

29. Smith v. Litton, 167 Va. 263 (1936). This case represents one of the preliminary skirmishes in the series of legal maneuvers that culminated in the well known case of Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 60 S. Ct. 238, 84 L. Ed. 281 (1939). The Supreme Court held that although the trustee was estopped to challenge Litton's judgment in an independent proceeding for avoidance (Smith v. Litton, 167 Va. 263 (1936)), the bankruptcy court when later presented with the judgment claim for allowance was entitled to look behind the judgment in order to determine the essential validity of the claim with respect to fraud or collusion.

n30

30. Heffron v. Duggins, 115 F.2d 519 (9th Cir. 1940). Under the California law the burden of proof that the fraud was not discovered until within such time as would save the creditor's right of action is upon the trustee.

n31

31. Buffum v. Peter Barceloux Co., 289 U.S. 227, 234, 53 S. Ct., 539, 542, 77 L. Ed. 1140, 1145 (1933).

n32

32. See Craddick v. Cotta Gear Co., 306 Ill. App. 459 (1940).

n33

33. See, e.g., Saper v. Long, 121 F. Supp. 65 (S.D.N.Y. 1954) (res judicata and collateral estoppel rejected as defenses to suit brought by trustee under predecessors to sections 544(b), 547 and 548); see also In re Hill, 981 F.2d 1474 (5th Cir. 1993).

n34

34. Viscount Air Servs., Inc. v. Cole (In re Viscount Air Servs., Inc.), 232 B.R. 416, 432 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1998).

n35

35. See, e.g., Macken v. Gass, 23 F. Supp. 320 (W.D.N.Y. 1938); Barr v. Roderick, 11 F.2d 984 (N.D. Cal. 1925); In re Putnam Props., Ltd. P'ship, 134 B.R. 477 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1991). An assignee for the benefit of creditors, however, is not such a creditor. In re Komfo Prod. Corp., 247 F. Supp. 229 (E.D. Pa. 1965) (citing Treatise); see 550.02 infra, on trustee's right to recover transferred property.

n36

36. 284 U.S. 4, 52 S. Ct. 3, 76 L. Ed. 133 (1931).

n37

37. In a chapter 11 case where the avoidance would provide more funds than necessary to pay not only the creditors but also the administrative expenses of the case, the court in Coleman v. Community Trust Bank (In re Coleman), 426 F.3d 719, 726-27 (4th Cir. 2005), nevertheless held that deeds of trust could be voided in their entirety, finding that the words for the benefit of the estate in section 550(a) of the Code did not limit the section 544 avoidance power.

n38

38. In re Xonics Photochemical, Inc., 841 F.2d 198, 18 C.B.C.2d 711 (7th Cir. 1988). In re Galbreath, 207 B.R. 309, 316 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1997).

n39

39. Acequia, Inc. v. Clinton (In re Acequia, Inc.), 34 F.3d 800, 809-10 (9th Cir. 1994) (As several courts have noted, under section 544(b) [a] transaction that is avoidable by a single, actual unsecured creditor may be avoided in its entirety, regardless of the size of the creditor's claim.) (quoting Harris v. Huff (In re Huff), 160 B.R. 256, 261 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1993)); see also Abramson v. Boedeker, 379 F.2d 741, 748 n.16 (5th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 389 U.S. 1006, 88 S. Ct 563, 19 L. Ed 2d 602 (1967) (If the transfer is avoidable at all by any creditor, it is avoidable in full for all creditors regardless of the dollar amount of the prevailing claim.).

n40

40. Coleman v. Community Trust Bank (In re Coleman), 426 F.3d 719, 726-27 (4th Cir. 2005).

n41

41. House Doc. 93-137, Part II, 93d Cong, 1st Sess., July 1973.

n42

42. H.R. 31, 94th Cong., 1st Sess., January 14, 1975.

n43

43. The Judges Bill, H.R. 32, 94th Cong., 1st Sess., January 14, 1975.

n44

44. Statement of Leon S. Forman on Behalf of the National Bankruptcy Conference, Hearings before the Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights of the Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. March 19, 1976, Serial No.27, Part 3, p. 1839.

n45

45. H. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 370 (1977); S. Rep. No. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 85 (1978).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

187 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Limitation of Avoiding Powers Based on Sellers Right of Reclamation

2008 Emerging Issues 982

Collier on Limitation of Avoiding Powers Based on Sellers Right of Reclamation

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 546(c) defines a sellers right to reclamation under the Bankruptcy Code. This section states the trustees rights and powers under sections 544(a), 545, 547 and 549 of the Bankruptcy Code are subject to the sellers right to reclaim goods sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of the sellers business if the debtor received such goods while insolvent and within 45 days before the start of the debtors bankruptcy case.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Overview and Application. Bankruptcy Code section 546(c) defines a sellers right to reclamation under the Bankruptcy Code. n1 This section states that the trustees rights and powers under sections 544(a), n2 545, n3 547 n4 and 549 n5 of the Bankruptcy Code are subject to the sellers right to reclaim goods sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of the sellers business if the debtor received such goods while insolvent and within 45 days before the commencement of the debtors bankruptcy case. n6 To effectuate reclamation under section 546(c), the seller must make written demand for reclamation of the goods not later than 20 days after the date of commencement of the bankruptcy case. n7 If a seller fails to provide notice within this prescribed time limit, the seller may nevertheless assert a right to an administrative expense under section 503(b)(9) of the Bankruptcy Code. n8

The avoiding powers expressly set forth in section 546(c) are subject to the sellers right of reclamation which is, in turn, subject to the prior rights of a holder of a security interest in such goods or the proceeds thereof. n9 The trustee may defeat a right to reclamation under other avoidance sections, e.g., state fraudulent transfer law n10 or fraudulent transfer law in section 548 of the Bankruptcy Code. n11

Section 546(c) applies only to reclamation; it in no way precludes a sellers right to pursue other nonbankruptcy remedies, such as the right to stop goods in transit. n12 Of course, these remedies are not protected under section 546(c) and may be subject to avoidance by the trustee as well as the automatic stay of section 362(a).

Operation of Section 546(c). Section 546(c) is the exclusive reclamation remedy in bankruptcy. Once a bankruptcy case has been commenced, a seller may exercise reclamation rights only if the requirements of section 546(c) are met. n13 The seller has the burden to prove all elements of its right to reclamation by a fair preponderance of the evidence. n14

One significant issue stemming from the 2005 amendments to section 546(c) is whether the statute now contains a new federal right of reclamation or whether the statute continues to incorporate state law reclamation rights and practices. In In re Dana Corp., n15 the court expressly held that amended 546(c) does not create a new federal right of reclamation. The court's conclusion was based on several considerations, including: (1) section 546(c)'s placement in the Bankruptcy Code under the heading limitation on avoiding powers, which implies the section provides for an exception rather than an independent fount of rights; (2) the failure of section 546(c) to create a coherent comprehensive federal scheme for reclamation that precisely defines the contours of the right and any defenses to the right; (3) Congress's failure to include in the 2005 Acts legislative history any discussion of an intent to effect a major change to pre-2005 practices; (4) the fact that a new federal right would arguably lead to the absurd result of allowing a seller to reclaim goods that have already been sold to consumers or to other good faith purchasers; and (5) the general principle that the filing of a bankruptcy petition, by itself, should not function to enhance the rights of one set of creditors at the expense of other creditors.

While Congress did not provide specific discussion of its intent in the 2005 Acts legislative history, it is unclear what purpose could be served by deleting the phrase any statutory or common law before the word right and replacing it with the definite article the other than uncoupling state law reclamation rights from the bankruptcy process. Moreover, amended section 546(c) does unquestionably provide some detail about the extent of reclamation rights in bankruptcy, such as the expanded 45- and 20-day periods. Additionally, one could argue that, if section 546(c) does create a federal right of reclamation, it remains appropriate to reference state law reclamation principles, as well as the case law applying those principles, in order to fill in any gaps in the statute pursuant to the Supreme Court's teaching in United States v. Kimbell Foods. n16

Requirements for Right to Reclamation under Section 546(c).

Goods Must Be Sold in Ordinary Course of Sellers Business. Section 546(c) establishes the reclamation rights of sellers who sell goods in the ordinary course of [their] business. n17 Courts generally apply the definition of the word goods contained in the Uniform Commercial Code n18 in determining the application of section 546(c). n19

Debtor Must Have Been Insolvent When Goods Were Received. Section 546(c) protects a seller's reclamation rights only if the debtor was insolvent when it received the goods. n20 An entity, other than a municipality, is insolvent under the Bankruptcy Code if its liabilities exceed its assets at a fair valuation. n21 As in section 546(c), section 2-702(2) of the Uniform Commercial Code requires that the debtor be insolvent when it receives the goods to be reclaimed and the seller must discover such insolvency after delivery of the goods. An insolvent person under the Uniform Commercial Code is one who either has ceased to pay his [or her] debts in the ordinary course of business or cannot pay his [or her] debts as they become due or is insolvent within the meaning of the federal bankruptcy law. n22 This definition incorporates the definition of insolvent under the Bankruptcy Code, n23 but also provides alternative grounds for a finding of insolvency based on the debtor's payment of debts. Proof of insolvency based solely on these alternative grounds is not sufficient to meet the insolvency requirement in section 546(c), which requires proof of insolvency based on the Bankruptcy Code definition. n24

Debtor Must Have Received Goods Within 45-Day Period Before Bankruptcy Case Commenced. Section 546(c) provides that the debtor must have received the goods within 45 days before the date of the commencement of the debtor's bankruptcy case. n25 The 45-day period should be calculated in accordance with Rule 9006(a) of the Federal

Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. n26

Timely Written Demand Requirement. The seller must act promptly to protect its interests by making a timely written demand for reclamation. n27 This demand is mandatory and may not be altered under equitable principles. n28 Demand must be made by the seller, as opposed to third parties, such as a warehouseman or bailee of the seller, n29 and must be clear on its face that the seller is seeking to reclaim goods. n30 Under section 546(c)(1), written demand must be made either (1) not later than 45 days after the date of the debtors receipt of the goods, n31 or (2) not later than 20 days after the petition date, if the 45-day period expires after the petition date. n32 Since a sellers right to reclamation only covers goods received by the debtor within 45 days of the commencement of the debtors case, the phrases not later than 45 days after the date of receipt of such goods by the debtor in section 546(c)(1)(A) and if the 45-day period expires after the commencement of the case in section 546(c)(1)(B) appear to be meaningless. Using with Rule 9006 to compute the time periods within which the debtor must receive the goods and the seller must assert its reclamation right, the 45-day period referenced in section 546(c)(1)(B) expires on or after the petition date in every instance.

Notwithstanding the one limited instance in which the sellers right to assert reclamation technically expires on the petition date, section 546(c)(1) should be read in every instance to give the seller 20 days after the petition date to assert its reclamation right. If, for example, the debtor receives goods on April 1, and the debtor files bankruptcy on May 15 (which is 44 days after the debtors receipt of the goods computed under Rule 9006 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure), the seller has 45 days within which to assert its reclamation right. Using Rule 9006, the date on which the buyer receives the goods is not counted in computing the period within which the seller must act, so the sellers 45-day clock to make written demand for reclamation starts running the following day and expires one day after the date the debtor files its petition, thereby triggering the not later than 20 days after the date of commencement of the case limitation. If, for example, the debtor receives goods on March 31 (one day earlier), and the debtor files bankruptcy on May 15 (which is 45 days after the debtors receipt of the goods computed under Rule 9006 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure), the sellers right to assert reclamation lapses on the petition date. Section 546(c)(1) should not be read, however, to require the seller to assert its reclamation right on the date the debtor files bankruptcy. Such a reading would defeat one of the purposes of section 546(c)(1) to give a seller a reasonable period of time within which to assert its reclamation right n33 and would, at a minimum, be impractical because the seller likely will not have notice of the debtors bankruptcy filing. The better and more logical reading is to give the seller, whose shipped goods have been received at any time within 45 days of the petition date, 20 days after the petition date to assert its reclamation right under section 546(c)(1). n34 In determining the date by which written demand must be made, one must first determine the day on which the debtor received the goods. n35 That day is not included in calculating the demand period. n36 If the last day of the demand period is a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, the time period should run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday. n37 Demand is effective upon mailing. n38

Date of Receipt of Goods. Determining the date of the debtors receipt of goods is important in analyzing several elements of section 546(c). The seller must show that the debtor was insolvent on the date goods were received. n39 In addition, the time period for written demand set forth in section 546(c)(1)(A) runs from the date of the debtors receipt of goods. n40 Courts generally rely on the definition of the word receipt set forth in section 2-103 of the Uniform Commercial Code to determine the date the goods were received by the debtor for purposes of section 546(c). n41 Section 2-103 of the Uniform Commercial Code defines receipt of goods as taking physical possession of them. n42

Goods Must Be in Debtors Possession and Identifiable. The seller must establish that the goods to be reclaimed are in the debtors possession when reclamation was sought, n43 and the goods must be identifiable. n44 The seller may not reclaim raw goods if they have been converted into a finished product. n45

Reclamation Rights Subject to Prior Rights of Secured Creditors. Section 546(c)(1) provides in relevant part that subject to the prior rights of a holder of a security interest in such goods or the proceeds thereof, the rights and powers of the trustee under sections 544(a), 545, 547 and 549 are subject to the right of a seller of goods to reclaim such goods under certain circumstances. n46 It is not clear what the phrase subject to prior rights of a holder of a security interest modifies--i.e., whether it modifies the trustees avoidance powers or the sellers reclamation rights. Using prior versions of section 546(c)(1) as a guide, this provision appears intended to state that the sellers reclamation rights remain subject to the secured creditors rights as well. n47 A sellers reclamation rights may, for example, be subject to the rights of a creditor with a floating lien on the debtors inventory. n48 Yet it remains unclear precisely what subject to means.

In the case of a secured creditor, the sellers right to reclaim is subordinated to the secured creditors claim. Thus, the seller may be given possession of the goods, but the seller must pay the secured creditor the value of its lien prior to obtaining possession. Several courts have held that the secured creditors lien may arise from either a pre- or postpetition transaction, and may encompass both pre- and postpetition collateral. n49 In courts that apply the broad prior lien defense, the existence, as of the time of reclamation, of liens on the goods to be reclaimed functionally renders otherwise valid reclamation claims valueless if the amount of the liens exceeds the value of the goods. n50 Alternatively, if the goods are not returned to the seller, the seller may seek alternative remedies. n51 The seller may seek an administrative expense claim for certain amounts under section 503(b)(9). n52 A reclaiming seller whose right is subject to that of a secured creditor may not invoke the equitable principle of marshalling or a similar principle to require a senior secured creditor to look to assets in which the seller has no interest. n53

Operation of Section 546(c)(2). Section 546(c)(2) provides that [i]f a seller of goods fails to provide notice in the manner described in paragraph (1), the seller still may assert the rights contained in section 503(b)(9). n54 Section 503(b)(9), in turn, provides that [a]fter notice and a hearing, there shall be allowed, administrative expenses, including the value of any goods received by the debtor within 20 days before the date of commencement of a case under this title in which the goods have been sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of such debtors business. n55 Thus, if the seller fails to satisfy the notice and timing requirements of section 546(c)(1), the seller may nonetheless seek recovery of the value of any goods the debtor received in the 20 days before the debtors bankruptcy case was commenced. In addition to the 20-day window, the seller must show that the goods received by the debtor were sold by the seller to the debtor in the ordinary course of the debtors business. n56 Unlike section 546(c)(1), however, there is no requirement under section 546(c)(2) or 503(b)(9) that the debtor be insolvent when it received the goods from the seller. n57 Moreover, based on the construction and wording of sections 546(c)(2) and 503(b)(9), a sellers right to assert an administrative expense priority claim does not appear to be subject to the rights and claims of secured creditors, n58 nor does the seller appear to need an independent right to reclamation.

Right to Reclaim Proceeds. Section 546(c) applies to reclamation of goods, but not to proceeds of the goods. n59

Procedure for Reclamation under Section 546(c). Sellers may assert reclamation rights by commencing an adversary proceeding. n60 Service of the sellers complaint on the trustee will constitute written demand required under section 546(c)(1). n61 However, a separate written demand can preserve the reclamation right prior to commencement of an action to enforce it. At least one court has held that the burden is on the seller to pursue its claim after demand by filing a motion or adversary proceeding. n62

For a complete discussion of Code section 546, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 546.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

n1 1. Under section 1227 of the 2005 Act, Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, Congress deleted the phrase any statutory or common law from the sentence in section 546(c) that previously provided as follows: Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, the rights and powers of a trustee are subject to any statutory or common law right of a seller of goods that has sold goods to the debtor to reclaim such goods . This alteration in the language of section 546(c) suggests that a seller's reclamation rights in bankruptcy may now be derived exclusively from section 546(c) of the Bankruptcy Code and not from any nonbankruptcy statutory provision or common law, such as Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code. See In re Dana Corp., 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007) (analyzing and rejecting the contention that amended section 546(c) creates a new federal right of reclamation); Davis v. Par Wholesale Auto, Inc. (In re Tucker), 329 B.R. 291, 298 n.8 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2005) (discussing this possibility).

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. § 544(a) (trustee's powers as lien creditor and as successor to certain creditors and purchasers); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 544. This limitation applies only to the trustee's rights under subsection (a) of section 544. The trustee's rights and powers as successor to creditors under paragraph (b) of that section are not limited by this provision.

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 545 (power to avoid statutory liens); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 545.

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 547 (power to avoid preferential transfers); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547.

n5

5. 11 U.S.C. § 549 (power to avoid postpetition transfers); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 549.

n6

6. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1)(B). The 2005 Act substantively amended section 546(c) of the Bankruptcy Code with respect to reclamation rights. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n8

8. See 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9). The 2005 Act amended section 503(b) of the Bankruptcy Code to provide that the value of any goods sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of the debtor's business and received by a debtor not later than within 20 days prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy case is an allowed administrative expense. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n9

9. This latter restriction was codified by the 2005 Act, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10

10. 11 U.S.C. § 544(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 544. 0

n11

11. 11 U.S.C. § 548; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 548.

n12

12. See, e.g., National Sugar Refining Co. v. C. Czarnikow, Inc. (In re National Sugar Refining Co.), 27 B.R. 565 (S.D.N.Y. 1983); In re Fabric Buys, 9 C.B.C.2d 995, 34 B.R. 471 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983); see also Montello Oil Corp. v. Marin Motor Oil, Inc. (In re Marin Motor Oil, Inc.), 740 F.2d 220, 225, 11 C.B.C.2d 28, 34 (3d Cir. 1984) (right to stop goods in transit is different right); Mayer Pollack Steel Corp. v. London Salvage & Trade Co. (In re Mayer Pollack Steel Corp.), 157 B.R. 952 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993) (same).

n13

13. Initially, there was some confusion about the exclusive nature of section 546(c). Some commentators stated that section 546(c) was not an exclusive remedy, but rather provided a safe harbor for a seller whose reclamation rights were otherwise avoidable. Thus, although the seller was not precluded from asserting reclamation rights solely under state law, if the seller did not comply with the procedures set forth in section 546(c), its right to reclamation was subject to avoidance. However, almost every court that has addressed this issue has rejected this view, holding section 546(c) to be an exclusive remedy in bankruptcy. See, e.g., Oakland Gin Co. v. Marlow (In re Julien Co.), 44 F.3d 426, 32 C.B.C.2d 1437 (6th Cir. 1995); Flav-O-Rich, Inc. v. Rawson Food Serv., Inc. (In re Rawson Food Serv., Inc.), 846 F.2d 1343 (11th Cir. 1988); In re MGS Mktg., 22 C.B.C.2d 1258, 111 B.R. 264 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1990); Hitachi Denshi Am., Ltd. v. Rozel Indus., Inc. (In re Rozel Indus., Inc.), 74 B.R. 643 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1987) (collecting cases); In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp., 56 B.R. 899 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986).

Under earlier versions of section 546(c), the seller must have had a right to reclamation under nonbankruptcy law to assert such a right under section 546(c). See 11 U.S.C. § 546(c). However, the 2005 Act deleted the phrase any statutory or common law, thereby arguably abrogating and replacing the seller's right to reclamation under nonbankruptcy law with the right arguably granted under section 546(c). See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; Davis v. Par Wholesale Auto, Inc. (In re Tucker), 329 B.R. 291, 298 n.8 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2005). But see In re Dana Corp., 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007) (analyzing and rejecting the contention that amended section 546(c) creates a new federal right of reclamation).

n14

14. See, e.g., Flav-O-Rich, Inc. v. Rawson Food Serv., Inc. (In re Rawson Food Serv., Inc.), 846 F.2d 1343 (11th Cir. 1988); In re Adventist Living Ctrs., Inc., 171 B.R. 310 (N.D. Ill. 1994), aff'd, 52 F.3d 159 (7th Cir. 1995).

n15

15. 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007).

n16

16. 440 U.S. 715, 99 S. Ct. 1448, 59 L. Ed. 2d 711, 20 C.B.C.2d 1 (1979).

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c).

n18

18. U.C.C. § 2-105(1). Section 2-105(1) states that [g]oods means all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than the money in which the price is to be paid, investment securities (Article 8) and things in action. Id. Goods also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops and other identified things attached to realty as described in the section on goods to be severed from realty (Section 2-107). Id.

n19

19. See In re GIC Government Sec., 64 B.R. 161 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1986) (court applied U.C.C. definition of goods).

n20

20. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c).

n21

21. 11 U.S.C. § 101(32). In the case of municipalities, section 101 defines insolvent as generally not paying debts as they become due or unable to pay debts as they become due. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101. In addition, exempt assets and assets that have been transferred, concealed or removed with intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors are not considered in determining whether insolvency exists. Id.

n22

22. U.C.C. § 1-201(23) (emphasis added).

n23

23. 11 U.S.C. § 101(32); see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101.

n24

24. See, e.g., Oakland Gin Co. v. Marlow (In re Julien Co.), 44 F.3d 426, 431-32, 32 C.B.C.2d 1437, 1444-1446 (6th Cir. 1995); In re Video King of Ill., Inc., 100 B.R. 1008 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989); Lawrence Pharm. Inc. v. Best Buy Drugs, Inc. (In re Best Buy Drugs, Inc.), 89 B.R. 997 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1988); Pike Tool & Grinding v. Storage Tech. Corp. (In re Storage Tech. Corp.), 48 B.R. 862 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1985); But see Ambico, Inc. v. AIC Photo, Inc. (In re AIC Photo, Inc.), 14 C.B.C.2d 95, 57 B.R. 56 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1985)

(strongly criticizing limiting definition of insolvent to section 101 of Bankruptcy Code and applying definition found in U.C.C. § 1-201(23)).

n25

25. See 11 U.S.C. § 546(c). The 2005 Act added the 45-day receipt of goods requirement. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n26

26. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 9006.

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1); cf. U.C.C. § 2-702(2) (demand, but not written demand, is required).

n28

28. See In re Lockwood Enters., Inc., 54 B.R. 829 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1985) (debtor's failure to list creditor in bankruptcy schedules, so that creditor did not receive notice of pending chapter 11 case, provided no basis for court to extend reclamation demand time period; equitable ground arising from conduct of parties cannot supersede statutory mandate).

n29

29. Oakland Gin Co. v. Marlow (In re Julien Co.), 44 F.3d 426, 432 n.4, 32 C.B.C.2d 1437, 1445 n.4 (6th Cir. 1995).

n30

30. Montello Oil Corp. v. Marin Motor Oil, Inc. (In re Marin Motor Oil, Inc.), 740 F.2d 220, 11 C.B.C.2d 28 (3d Cir. 1984).

n31

31. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1)(A).

n32

32. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1)(B).

n33

33. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n34

34. Such a reading also comports with similarly worded provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. The language in section 546 that the debtor must have received the goods within 45 days is slightly different from the language in other sections of the Bankruptcy Code. Section 547, for example, provides that the trustee may avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property made on or within 90 days before the date of the filing of the petition. The absence or omission of the word on in section 546(c)(1) is not explained in the legislative history or commentary to the 2005 amendments.

n35

35. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 546.04[2][b][iv].

n36

36. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9006(a).

n37

37. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9006(a); see In re Dixie Enters., Inc., 22 B.R. 855 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982).

n38

38. See Montello Oil Corp. v. Marin Motor Oil, Inc. (In re Marin Motor Oil, Inc.), 740 F.2d 220, 225, 11

C.B.C.2d 28, 34 (3d Cir. 1984); In re Bill's Dollar Stores, Inc., 164 B.R. 471 (Bankr. D. Del. 1994); In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp., 56 B.R. 899 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986).

n39

39. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c); see Flav-O-Rich, Inc. v. Rawson Food Serv., Inc. (In re Rawson Food Serv., Inc.), 846 F.2d 1343 (11th Cir. 1988); United States v. Westside Bank, 732 F.2d 1258 (5th Cir. 1984); Allstate Fabricators Corp. v. Flagstaff Foodservice Corp. (In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp.), 56 B.R. 899 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1986). But see Eagle Indus. Truck Mfg., Inc. v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (In re Continental Airlines, Inc.), 125 B.R. 415 (Bankr. D. Del. 1991) (insolvency at time of delivery); In re Penthouse Travelers of Aripeka, Inc., 120 B.R. 226 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990) (same); In re Video King of Ill., Inc., 100 B.R. 1008 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989) (same).

n40

40. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1)(A).

n41

41. See Montello Oil Corp. v. Marin Motor Oil, Inc. (In re Marin Motor Oil, Inc.), 740 F.2d 220, 11 C.B.C.2d 28 (3d Cir. 1984) (applying U.C.C. definition); In re Bill's Dollar Stores, Inc., 164 B.R. 471 (Bankr. D. Del. 1994) (goods that arrived at debtor's yard but were left in truck were received when they arrived, not when unpacked); Aventura Sportswear, Ltd. v. Maloney Enter. (In re Maloney Enter.), 37 B.R. 290 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 1983) (receipt of goods occurs when debtor takes actual, physical possession of them, not when they are delivered to carrier).

n42

42. U.C.C. § 2-103(1)(c).

n43

43. See In re Adventist Living Ctrs., Inc. 52 F.3d 159, 162 (7th Cir. 1995) (supplied goods were perishable foodstuffs); Pester Refining Co. v. Ethyl Corp. (In re Pester Refining Co.), 964 F.2d 842, 26 C.B.C.2d 1663 (8th Cir. 1992) (citing Griffin Retreading Co. v. Oliver Rubber Co. (In re Griffin Retreading Co.), 795 F.2d 676 (8th Cir. 1986)); Flav-O-Rich, Inc. v. Rawson Food Serv., Inc. (In re Rawson Food Serv., Inc.), 846 F.2d 1343 (11th Cir. 1988) (collecting cases); Collingwood Grain, Inc. v. Coast Trading Co. (In re Coast Trading Co.), 744 F.2d 686, 692, 11 C.B.C.2d 790, 796 (9th Cir. 1984); Graphic Prods. Corp. v. WWF Paper Corp. (In re Graphic Prods. Corp.), 32 C.B.C.2d 879, 176 B.R. 65 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1994).

n44

44. See, e.g., Archer Daniels Midland Co. v. Charter Int'l Oil Co., 60 B.R. 854 (M.D. Fla. 1986); Eagle Indus. Truck Mfg., Inc. v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (In re Continental Airlines, Inc.), 125 B.R. 415 (Bankr. D. Del. 1991); In re Penthouse Travelers of Aripeka, Inc., 120 B.R. 226 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1990); McCain Foods, Inc. v. Flagstaff Foodservice Co. (In re Flagstaff Foodservice Co.), 9 C.B.C.2d 9, 14 B.R. 462 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1981).

n45

45. See Bethlehem Steel Corp. v. Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. (In re Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.), 74 B.R. 656 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1987).

n46

46. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1).

n47

47. Prior to the 2005 amendments, section 546(c)(1) provided that a seller needed reclamation rights under applicable nonbankruptcy law to establish a right to reclamation under section 546(c). Under nonbankruptcy law, mainly the applicable provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code, a seller's reclamation rights were subject to the rights of a secured creditor. The 2005 amendments deleted the reference to the trustee's avoidance powers being subject to any statutory or common law right of a seller of goods to reclaim such goods. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Given the tendency to protect the rights of properly perfected, prior secured creditors throughout other provisions in the 2005 Act, however, the same intent likely applies to section 546(c)(1). Regardless, the 2005 amendments to section 546(c)(1) foreclose the prior minority position that an Article 9 security interest cannot be senior to a reclamation right. See, e.g., In re Reliable Drug Stores, Inc., 70 F.3d 948, 949 (7th Cir. 1995) (suggesting that an Article 9 secured creditor may not qualify as a good faith purchaser under Article 2, and thus may not have priority under section 2-702(2) of the Uniform Commercial Code).

n48

48. See, e.g., Pester Refining Co. v. Ethyl Corp. (In re Pester Refining Co.), 964 F.2d 842, 26 C.B.C.2d 1663 (8th Cir. 1992) (citing cases); McLouth Steel Prods. Corp. v. Quaker Chem. Co. (In re McLouth Prods. Corp.), 213 B.R. 978, 989 (E.D. Mich. 1997); Lavonia Mfg. Co. v. Emery Corp., 52 B.R. 944 (E.D. Pa. 1985); Sandoz Pharm. Corp. v. Blinn Wholesale Drug Co. (In re Blinn Wholesale Drug Co.), 164 B.R. 440 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1994); United States Trust Co. v. Raritan River Steel Co. (In re American Spring Bed Mfg. Co.), 153

B.R. 365 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1993); Isaly Klondike Co. v. Sunstate Dairy & Food Prods. Co. (In re Sunstate Dairy & Food Prods. Co.), 145 B.R. 341 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1992); In re Diversified Food Serv. Distrib., Inc., 130 B.R. 427 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991). But see In re Reliable Drug Stores, Inc., 70 F.3d 948 (7th Cir. 1995) (acknowledging Pester and other cases, but, without deciding issue, recognizing views of legal scholars who disagree with view that secured creditor is equivalent of good faith purchaser).

n49

49. See, e.g., Auto Auction Assocs. of Mont., Inc. v. Incredible Auto Sales LLC (In re Incredible Auto Sales LLC), 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1024 (Bankr. D. Mont. Mar. 26, 2007) (looking to state law to determine the rights of a secured creditor and concluding that the creditor's liens on pre- and postpetition inventory trumped another creditor's reclamation rights); Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. Advanced Mktg. Servs. (In re Advanced Mktg. Servs.), 360 B.R. 421 (Bankr. D. Del. 2007) (holding that the express language of amended section 546(c)(1) makes clear that a seller's reclamation rights may be subordinate to both pre- and postpetition liens on a debtor's inventory).

n50

50. See, e.g., In re Dana Corp., 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007) (describing and applying the so-called Prior Lien Defense); In re Dairy Mart Convenience Stores, Inc., 302 B.R. 128 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003) (holding that a secured lender's prior floating lien on inventory rendered reclamation claims valueless). But see In re Phar-Mor, Inc., 301 B.R. 482 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2003) (concluding that the establishment of a postpetition DIP facility released prepetition liens on certain goods, and thus had no impact on the value of rights to reclaim those goods).

n51

51. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(2); see also 11 U.S.C. §§ 503(b)(9), 507(a)(2); Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 503 and Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 507.

n52

52. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9).

n53

53. Galey & Lord, Inc. v. Arley Corp. (In re Arlco, Inc.), 42 C.B.C.2d 1539, 239 B.R. 261, 274-77 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999).

n54

54. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(2). The 2005 amendments revised section 546(c)(2) substantially. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. Section 546(c)(2) previously provided that the bankruptcy court had discretion to deny the seller reclamation. If the court did so, however, it was required to protect the seller either by granting it an administrative expense priority claim or by securing the seller's claim with a lien. These alternative remedies under section 546(c)(2) were only available if the seller satisfied the other reclamation requirements under section 546(c).

n55

55. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9). New subsection (9) of section 503(b) was added by the 2005 Act, Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1227(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n56

56. 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9).

n57

57. 11 U.S.C. §§ 546(c)(2), 503(b)(9).

n58

58. 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(2). Section 546(c)(2), unlike section 546(c)(1), is not modified by the terms subject to the prior rights of a holder of a security interest in such goods or the proceeds thereof. Compare 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(2), with 11 U.S.C. § 546(c)(1).

n59

59. See, e.g., In re MGS Mktg., 22 C.B.C.2d 1258, 111 B.R. 264 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1990); Monfort, Inc. v. Kunkel (In re Morken), 182 B.R. 1007 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1995); In re Diversified Food Serv. Distrib., Inc., 130 B.R. 427 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991); Action Indus., Inc. v. Dixie Enters., Inc., 22 B.R. 855 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982); see also Collingwood Grain, Inc. v. Coast Trading Co. (In re Coast Trading Co.), 744 F.2d 686, 11 C.B.C.2d 790 (9th Cir. 1984) (discussing right to proceeds under U.C.C. § 2-702(2) and collecting cases); McCain Foods, Inc. v. Flagstaff Foodservice Corp. (In re Flagstaff Foodservice Corp.), 9 C.B.C.2d 9, 14 B.R. 462 (Bankr.

S.D.N.Y. 1981) (recognizing that proceeds are not subject to reclamation under U.C.C. § 2-702(2)).

n60

60. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7001(1); see In re Realty Southwest Assocs., 140 B.R. 360 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1992); In re Summit Airlines, Inc., 94 B.R. 367 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988), aff'd, 102 B.R. 32 (E.D. Pa. 1989).

n61

61. See discussion in Collier on Bankruptcy, 546.04[2][b][iii].

n62

62. McLouth Steel Prods. Corp. v. Quaker Chem. Co. (In re McLouth Prods. Corp.), 213 B.R. 978, 987 (E.D. Mich. 1997).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

188 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Exemption for Avoidance of Contemporaneous Exchanges

2008 Emerging Issues 984

Collier on Exemption for Avoidance of Contemporaneous Exchanges

By Collier

November 16, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis details the exemption for avoidance of contemporary exchanges under section 547(c)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code, including issues such as the requirement that the parties have the requisite intent that the transaction is substantially contemporaneous; the requirement that the exchange is, in fact, contemporaneous; and when payment to a creditor may be exempt from avoidance as a preference.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Section 547(c)(1) provides:

The trustee may not avoid under this section a transfer--

(1) to the extent such transfer was--

(A) intended by the debtor and the creditor to or for whose benefit such transfer was made to be a contemporaneous exchange for new value given to the debtor; and

(B) in fact a substantially contemporaneous exchange[.]

Thus, under section 547(c)(1) a transfer that would otherwise be considered preferential is insulated from attack by the trustee if (1) the preference defendant extended new value to the debtor, n1 (2) both the defendant and the debtor intended the new value and reciprocal transfer by the debtor to be contemporaneous and (3) the exchange was in fact contemporaneous. n2

The purpose of the contemporaneous exchange exception, like that of the other section 547(c) exceptions, is to encourage creditors to continue to deal with troubled debtors without fear that they will have to disgorge payments received for value given. If creditors continue to deal with a troubled debtor, it is possible that bankruptcy will be avoided altogether. n3 Section 547(c)(1) protects transfers only to the extent that the creditor can show that the value given to the creditor equals the value the debtor received. Thus, if the debtor transfers $50,000 to the creditor in exchange for the release of a lien of $30,000, the difference of $20,000 is not protected from avoidance under the contemporaneous exchange exception. n4

Creditors have often argued that the protections of the contemporaneous exchange exception could extend to creditors who fail to meet the 30-day perfection rule under the enabling loan exception in section 547(c)(3). n5 Enabling lenders who do not timely perfect their security interests have claimed that their loan to the debtor and the perfection of the security interest were nevertheless substantially contemporaneous. n6 Although earlier bankruptcy court decisions often permitted these creditors to utilize section 547(c)(1), n7 the better rule holds that section 547(c)(1) is not available to creditors who fail to meet the time requirement of section 547(c)(3). n8 The sparse legislative history of section 547(c)(1) shows that it was meant to protect exchanges of property that might be considered credit transactions when the transactions were contemporaneous transfers. n9

Parties to Transaction Must Have Requisite Intent. The requirement that subsection 547(c)(1)(A) the parties intend the transaction to be substantially contemporaneous codifies the judicially created rule established by National City Bank v. Hotchkiss. n10 There, defendant bank made an unsecured loan in the morning. Upon learning later that same day that the borrower was having financial difficulties, it requested and immediately received security for the loan. Although only a few hours had passed from the time of the loan to the time the security interest was given, the transaction was found to be preferential. n11 Transactions that appear at first glance to be a contemporaneous exchange for new value will not be so considered under subsection 547(c)(1)(A) absent a showing that the parties actually intended the exchange to be contemporaneous. For example, a vendor who conditions continued deliveries to the buyer on the buyers payment of old invoices will not be protected by section 547(c)(1) from attack by the buyer's trustee, even though the buyer's payment to the vendor and the vendors transfer of property to the buyer occurred contemporaneously. n12

Courts have held that a transaction concededly intended to be a contemporaneous exchange for new value is not, in fact, contemporaneous if the debtor purchased goods within the preference period with a check that is subsequently dishonored. For example, in Goger v. Cudahy Foods Co. (In re Standard Food Services, Inc.), n13 the seller, upon receiving a check for goods delivered that was dishonored, warned the buyer that no further deliveries would occur until full payment for the prior delivery was received. The debtor replaced the dishonored check with a cashiers check, which was delivered 11 days after the debtors receipt of goods. Despite the parties obvious intent to effect a cash transaction, the court rejected the sellers argument that the transaction was substantially contemporaneous, and thus not a voidable preference, holding that when the check bounced, the transaction became a credit transaction. n14

Exchange Must in Fact Be Contemporaneous. Under subsection 547(c)(1)(B), the exchange of new value between the debtor and the defendant must in fact be substantially contemporaneous. n15 This subsection preserves the rule of Dean v. Davis. n16 There, the Supreme Court held that a transfer was not preferential if both parties to the transfer intended to make a secured loan, but the mortgage on the debtors real property securing the loan was not signed and recorded until one week after the loan was made. There was no preference because the concept of [p]reference implies paying or securing a pre-existing debt of the person preferred. The mortgage was given to secure [the creditor] for a substantially contemporary advance. n17 Intention that an exchange be contemporaneous is not relevant to a courts determination whether the exchange is in fact contemporaneous. n18

New Value May Be Paid by Third Party. Payment to a creditor may be exempt from avoidance as a preference if the debtor receives contemporaneous new value from a party other than the creditor. For example, in Gulf Oil Corp. v. Fuel Oil Supply & Terminaling, Inc. (On re Fuel Oil Supply & Terminaling, Inc.), n19 a creditor released letters of credit upon receipt of payment from the debtor. The bank that had issued the letters of credit then released its collateral to the debtor. The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held that the payment to the creditor was exempt from preference avoidance because the three-party transaction was a contemporaneous exchange for new value. The courts decision is correct because the payment did not diminish the debtors estate. If the payment had not occurred, the creditor would have drawn down on the letter of credit and the bank would have been reimbursed through liquidation of its collateral. On the facts presented, payment to the creditor did not diminish the debtors estate because the bank was fully secured. If the bank had not been fully secured, however, the debtors payment to the creditor might have been preferential. n20

For a complete discussion of Code section 547, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 547.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

Return to Text

n1 1. New value is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 547(a)(2). See Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.02[2]. Release of a valid materialmens lien constitutes a transfer of new value, even when the property on which the lien formerly existed ultimately proves valueless to the estate. See Stevenson v. Leisure Guide of Am., Inc. (In re Shelton Harrison Chevrolet, Inc.), 202 F.3d 834 (6th Cir. 2000) (a Manufacturers Statement of Origin delivered to the purchaser of a new vehicle more than a week after the purchaser pays for the vehicle did not itself have new value); Harrison v. Brent Towing Co. (In re H&S Transp. Co.), 939 F.2d 355, 360 (6th Cir. 1991) (chapter 11 trustee could not recover payments made to fuel suppliers by debtor as preference, as payments made by debtor to fuel supplier were in exchange for new value, in that payments were made in order to purchase new fuel during the preference period); In re Kumar Bavishi & Assocs., 906 F.2d 942 (3d Cir. 1990) (prepetition payments of antecedent debts owed by debtor partnership to limited partners in exchange for limited partners guarantee of loan to debtor constituted transfers for new value when debtor partnership would not have been able to secure the loan without the guarantees); Energy Coop., Inc. v. SOCAP Intl, Ltd. (In re Energy Coop., Inc.), 832 F.2d 997, 1003, 17 C.B.C.2d 1215, 1222 (7th Cir. 1987) (a release from contractual obligations and continued credibility and goodwill is not new value, and court agreed with trustee that the release and goodwill do not fall within § 547(a)(2)s definition of new value. To hold otherwise would be inconsistent with the contemporaneous exchange exceptions purpose.); cf. Tyler v. Swiss American Securities, Inc. (In re Lewellyn & Co., Inc.), 929 F.2d 424, 427 (8th Cir. 1991) (The parties intended the transfer of Safeguard shares to be a contemporaneous exchange for new value, that the exchange was in fact contemporaneous, and that the $8 million in cash stock purchases SASI made for Lewellyn constituted new value for the Safeguard shares.); Gulf Oil Corp. v. Fuel Oil Supply & Terminating, Inc., 837 F.2d 224 (5th Cir. 1988) (payment from debtor to beneficiary of letter of credit may constitute a contemporaneous exchange for new value, when issuer of letter of credit consequently reduced its encumbrances on property of debtor); Kenan v. Fort Worth Pipe Co. (In re Rodman, Inc.), 792 F.2d 125, 14 C.B.C.2d 1230 (10th Cir. 1986) (bankruptcy court erred in undertaking valuation of property at time of adversary proceeding since no such valuation requirement could be gleaned from the statute or its legislative history). But see Cimmaron Oil Co. v. Cameron Consultants, Inc., 71 B.R. 1005, 1009 (N.D. Tex. 1987) ([F]orgoing the right to perfect a lien is not the exchanging of new value [because such] waiver does not fit within the definition of new value as set forth by Congress.).

n2 2. See Ray v. Security Mut. Fin. Corp. (In re Arnett), 731 F.2d 358, 362 (6th Cir. 1984); see also Pine Top Ins. Co. v. Bank of Am. Natl Trust & Savings Assn, 969 F.2d 321 (7th Cir. 1992) (involving state preference statute relating to insolvent insurers; transfer of collateral to creditor two to three weeks after standby letter of credit was issued was substantially contemporaneous when both debtor-purchaser and bank-issuer intended letter of credit to be secured, and delay in transfer of collateral was reasonable under the circumstances).

n3 3. See Jones Truck Lines, Inc. v. Central States, S.E. and S.W. Areas Pension Funds (In re Jones Truck Lines, Inc.), 130 F.3d 323, 326 (8th Cir. 1997) (Contemporaneous new value exchanges are not preferential because they encourage creditors to deal with troubled debtors and because other creditors are not adversely affected if the debtor's estate receives new value.). Purchase money lenders may use only section 547(c)(3) as a defense, not section 547(c)(1). See In re Dorholt, Inc., 224 F.3d 871, 873 (8th Cir. 2000) ([A] transaction is not a preferential transfer, even if made on the eve of bankruptcy, if creditor provides new value in exchange for debtor's contemporaneous transfer. Other creditors are not adversely affected by such an exchange because the debtor's estate has received new value. Moreover, this exception encourages creditors to continue dealing with a troubled company, which may allow the company to escape bankruptcy altogether.).

n4

4. See Lowrey v. U.P.G., Inc. (In re Robinson Bros. Drilling, Inc.), 877 F.2d 32, 21 C.B.C.2d 403 (10th Cir. 1989); Florida, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc. (In re Jet Florida Sys., Inc.), 861 F.2d 1555, 1558-59, 20 C.B.C.2d 33, 37 (11th Cir. 1988) (Section 547(c)(1) protects transfers only to the extent the transfer was a contemporaneous exchange for new value. [A] creditor seeking [its] protection must prove with specificity the new value given to the debtor.).

n5

5. The number of days allowed for perfecting an enabling loan under section 547(c)(3) was extended from 20 days to 30 days by the 2005 amendments. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1222 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6

6. See Pine Top Ins. Co. v. Bank of Am. Natl Trust and Savings Assn, 969 F.2d 321, 328 (7th Cir. 1992) (federal court decision applying state preference statute relating to insolvent insurers. Contemporaneity is a flexible concept which requires a case-by-case inquiry into all relevant circumstances, (e.g., length of delay, reason for delay, nature of the transaction, intentions of the parties, possible risk of fraud) surrounding an allegedly preferential transfer; a two to three week delay in transfer of collateral in connection with issuance of secured standby letter of credit was substantially contemporaneous). But see Ray v. Security Mut. Fin. Corp. (In re Arnett), 731 F.2d 358, 362 (6th Cir. 1984) (to fall under this exception, the exchange must in fact be substantially contemporaneous; 33 days held not to be contemporaneous).

n7

7. See Jahn v. First Tenn. Bank of Chattanooga (In re Burnette) 14 B.R. 795 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981) (holding the two sections not mutually exclusive and 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(3) only one type of contemporaneous exchange); see also General Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Martella (In re Martella), 22 B.R. 649 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982) (applying 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(1) to enabling loan perfected after 10 days).

n8

8. Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. v. Bringle (In re Holder), 892 F.3d 29, 31 (4th Cir. 1989) (section 547(c)(1) does not apply to purchase-money security transactions perfected more than 10 days after the debtor receives possession of the collateral); Union Bank & Trust Co., Erie v. Baker (In re Tressler), 771 F.2d 791, 794 (3d Cir. 1985) (contemporaneous exchange exception may not be used to prevent the avoidance of a purchase-money security interest perfected beyond the 10-day period permitted in section 547(c)(3)); Gower v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Davis), 734 F.2d 604, 607 (11th Cir. 1984) (If 547(c)(1) applied to all such cases, the ten day grace period would serve as little more than an evidentiary presumption.). But see Jahn v. First Tenn. Bank of Chattanooga (In re Burnette), 14 B.R. 795 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981) (holding the two sections not mutually exclusive and 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(3) only one type of contemporaneous exchange); see also General Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Martella (In re Martella), 22 B.R. 649 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1982) (applying 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(1) to enabling loan perfected after 10 days).

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-394 (enacted on October 22, 1994, effective in cases commenced on or after the date of enactment), reprinted in Collier on Bankruptcy, App. Pt. 9(a), changed the perfection period to 20 days, the intention of Congress being to conform bankruptcy law to the practice in most states. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.LH.

n9

9. H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 177, 373 (1977); The [contemporaneous exchange] exception is a simple one, excepting a transfer that is really not on account of an antecedent debt No doubt a purchase by the debtor of goods or services with a check, if deemed to be on credit by state law, would be insulated by this exception. Though strictly speaking the transaction may be a credit transaction because the seller does not receive payment until the check is cleared through the debtor's bank, it is generally considered and intended to be a contemporaneous transaction, and assuming the check is promptly deposited and cleared, is in fact substantially contemporaneous. See Countryman, The Concept of a Voidable Preference in Bankruptcy, 38 Vand. L. Rev. 713, 759-67 (1985). The 2005 amendments lengthen from 20 to 30 days the period of protection for an enabling loan. . Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1222 (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n10

10. 231 U.S. 50, 34 S. Ct. 20, 58 L. Ed. 115 (1913).

n11

11. National City Bank of N.Y. v. Hotchkiss, 231 U.S. 50, 34 S. Ct. 20, 58 L. Ed. 115, 120 (1913). But see Dean v. Davis, 242 U.S. 438, 37 S. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419 (1917).

n12

12. See, e.g., McClendon v. Cal-Wood Door (In re Wadsworth Bldg. Components, Inc.), 711 F.2d 122, 8 C.B.C.2d 1166 (9th Cir. 1983). In Wadsworth, the seller shipped goods to the buyer on credit, and subsequently received the buyers check for the full amount owing, which was dishonored. Based on the buyer's assurances that the check would be paid in full, the seller shipped additional goods to the debtor. The previously dishonored check was paid upon redeposit, but the seller was never paid for the last shipment. The buyer's bankruptcy trustee recovered as preferential the amount paid the seller for the earlier shipment. The court held that the parties intended the check to be payment for pre-existing debt rather than a contemporaneous exchange of new value by the seller. The court rejected defendant's contention that the debtor's payment was at least partially for the extension of new credit, and therefore satisfied the new value requirement. See also Tyler v. Swiss American Securities, Inc. (In re Lewellyn & Co., Inc.), 929 F.2d 424, 427 (8th Cir. 1991) (The existence of intent, contemporaneousness, and new value are questions of fact.); In re Lee and Ota, 33 C.B.C.2d 1360, 179 B.R. 149 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995) (contemporaneous exchange defense unavailable when initial check is dishonored by bank); Remes v. Acme Carton Corp. (In re Fasano Harriss Pie Co.), 43 B.R. 871 (Bankr. W.D. Mich. 1984); Thompson v. McMaster (In re Fritz-Mair Mfg. Co.), 16 B.R. 417, 420 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1982) (parties intended transfer of title to be contemporaneous exchange although consideration for transfer was paid in advance).

n13

13. 723 F.2d 820 (11th Cir. 1984).

n14

14. Goger v. Cudahy Foods Co. (In re Standard Food Servs., Inc.) 723 F.2d 820, 821 (11th Cir. 1984). The court recognized that checks should be considered contemporaneous exchanges. The court, however, quoted the following additional portions of the legislative history to support its view that the customary rules regarding checks did not obtain when the check was dishonored: Contrary to the language contained in the House report, payment of a check is equivalent to a cash payment unless the check is dishonored. Payment is to be considered to be made when the check is delivered for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(1) and (2). 124 Cong. Rec. H11,097 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); 124 Cong. Rec. S17,414 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978). For a discussion of when a transfer is deemed made for purposes of section 547 if payment is by check, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 547.05[4]; see also Endo Steel, Inc. v. Janas (In re JWJ Contracting Co., Inc.), 371 F.3d 1079 (9th Cir. 2004) (because Endo had given JWJ an unconditional release of the bond claim in exchange for what turned out to be a dishonored check, the subsequent payment that replaced the dishonored check was given in exchange for what had become an unsecured debt, and did not result in a contemporaneous exchange for new value); Hall-Mark Elecs. Corp. v. Sims (In re Lee), 179 B.R. 149, 163 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995) (A contemporaneous exchange defense cannot involve a dishonored check. Dishonor changes the nature of the transaction from one intended for a contemporaneous cash exchange to a credit transaction (citations omitted)).

n15

15. In re Dorholt, Inc., 224 F.3d 871, 873 (8th Cir. 2000) (transfer of nonpurchase-money security interest may be substantially contemporaneous, even if security interest is not perfected within 10 days; modifier substantial makes clear that contemporaneity is a flexible concept which requires a case-by-case inquiry into all relevant circumstances); Pine Top Ins. Co. v. Bank of America National Trust & Savings Assn, 969 F.2d 321, 328 (7th Cir. 1992) (contemporaneity is a flexible concept which requires a case-by-case inquiry into all relevant circumstances (e.g., length of delay, reason for delay, nature of the transaction, intentions of the parties, possible risk of fraud) surrounding an allegedly preferential transfer; two-to-three week delay in transfer of collateral in connection with issuance of secured standby letter of credit was substantially contemporaneous); Ray v. Security Mut. Fin. Corp. (In re Arnett), 731 F.2d 358, 362 (6th Cir. 1984) (to fall under this exception the exchange must in fact be substantially contemporaneous; 33 days held not to be contemporaneous); Telecash Indus., Inc. v. Universal Assets (In re Telecash Indus., Inc.), 104 B.R. 401, 404 (Bankr. D. Utah 1989) (issue of contemporaneous exchange is one of fact; contemporaneous exchange not precluded as a matter of law when defendant perfected security interest more than 10 days after loan transaction, despite section 547(e)(2)); Gropper v. Samuel Kunstler Textiles, Inc. (In re Fabric Buys of Jericho, Inc.), 22 B.R. 1013, 1016 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1982) (over 90 days; not contemporaneous); Jahn v. First Tenn. Bank of Chattanooga (In re Burnette), 14 B.R. 795 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1981) (20 days contemporaneous); In re Hall, 14 B.R. 186, 188 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1981) (90 days not contemporaneous); Steinberg v. Natl Bank & Trust Co. (In re Independence Land Title Corp.), 9 B.R. 394, 396 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1981) (two months not contemporaneous); Brown v. Callaway Bank (In re Meritt), 7 B.R. 876, 880 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 1980) (eight months not contemporaneous).

n16

16. Dean v. Davis, 242 U.S. 438, 37 S. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419 (1917).

n17

17. 242 U.S. 438, 443, 37 S. Ct. 130, 131, 61 L. Ed. 419, 421.

n18

18. See, e.g., Butz v. Pingel (In re Pingel), 17 B.R. 236, 238 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1982) (perfection of transfer nine days before bankruptcy petition, but over one year after parties intended the transfer to occur, held not to be contemporaneous in fact).

n19

19. 837 F.2d 224, 331, 18 C.B.C.2d 462, 470 (5th Cir. 1988) (We hold that under these circumstances, new value received by a debtor need not be provided by the creditor to whom the transfer was made but may be provided by the fully secured third party.).

n20

20. Gulf Oil Corp. v. Fuel Oil Supply & Terminaling, Inc. (In re Fuel Oil Supply & Terminaling, Inc.), 837 F.2d 224, 228, 18 C.B.C.2d 462, 468 (5th Cir. 1988); see In re Powerine Oil Co., 59 F.3d 969, 972-74, 33 C.B.C.2d 1778, 1782 (9th Cir. 1995) (payment voidable to the extent letter of credit reimbursement obligation unsecured; also rejected rule of reason defense that creditor should have no preference liability because it allowed letter of credit to expire in reliance on the receipt of payment); Resnick, From the Bankruptcy Courts: Expiration of Letter of Credit After Payment Leaves Creditor Vulnerable to Preference Risk, 28 U.C.C. L.J. 414 (1996) (issuer's contingent reimbursement claim may become unsecured and letter of credit may expire when underlying debt is repaid without providing for recourse against issuer in event creditor is required to disgorge payment as preferential).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Expert Commentary was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

189 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Prepetition Credit Counseling Eligibility Requirement Under the Bankr. Code

2008 Emerging Issues 918

Collier on the Prepetition Credit Counseling Eligibility Requirement Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 12, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 109(h)(1) provides that an individual may not be a debtor under any chapter unless the individual has, within the 180 days before the petition date, received an individual or group briefing that outlined credit counseling opportunities and assisted the individual in performing a related budget analysis. This Emerging Issues Analysis addresses the issues relating to the prepetition credit counseling requirement.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Prepetition Briefing for Individual Debtors. Bankruptcy Code section 109(h)(1), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n1 provides that an individual may not be a debtor under any chapter unless the individual has, within the 180 days before the petition date, received an individual or group briefing that outlined credit counseling opportunities and assisted the individual in performing a related budget analysis. The briefing must have been provided by a nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency approved by the United States trustee or, if the case is in North Carolina or Alabama, by the bankruptcy administrator pursuant to new Code section 111, also enacted in 2005. n2

The requirement applies to all individual debtors, n3 regardless of their financial circumstances and their ability to pay their debts. It applies to debtors who are proposing a chapter 13 repayment plan paying all or most of their debts, and even to debtors who have unsuccessfully attempted a credit counseling repayment plans in the past. And it applies to individual debtors who have solely business debts.

The new provision does not further elaborate on what the briefing must entail or its contents. Nor does it clarify exactly to what the budget analysis is related. Is it related to credit counseling or to the briefing generally? Such questions may be answered by standards that will probably be developed under section 111 for approval of nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies. It is clear that the briefing may be provided over the telephone or on the Internet, n4 which would make it much more convenient for debtors who might otherwise have to travel to a distant agency, incurring travel expenses and possible loss of employment income.

Although a few courts have held to the contrary, n5 the better view is that the credit counseling briefing may occur on the same day as the bankruptcy petition is filed, as long as it occurs before the petition is filed. n6 The word date in section 109(h) should be read to connote a day and time. There is no indication in any of the legislative history that Congress intended to require debtors to wait until the day after they received the briefing before they filed their petitions.

A corresponding amendment added to section 521(b) requires an individual debtor to file with the court a certificate from the nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency that provided a briefing to the debtor describing the services the debtor received. n7 The debtor must also file a copy of any debt management plan developed under section 109(h). n8 However, section 109(h) does not require the development of a debt management plan. The requirement that a debtor file a certificate from the counseling agency provides a mechanism for the court and the parties to verify the debtor's eligibility for relief. In light of the timing requirement, the certificate will have to state the date on which the briefing was provided to the debtor.

Interim Bankruptcy Rule 1007(c), prepared by the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules and adopted as a local rule in each district, provides that the certificate must be filed within 15 days after the petition unless the court orders otherwise. Exhibit D to the Voluntary Petition, Official Form 1, requires the debtor to state whether the debtor has received the credit counseling briefing and, if so, whether the certificate is being filed with the petition. n9 Alternatively, the debtor may state on the Exhibit that the debtor is seeking a deferral for exigent circumstances under section 109(h)(3) n10 or an exemption from the requirement under section 109(h)(4). n11

Courts have differed about the consequences when the credit counseling requirements are not met. Some courts have held that a case need not be dismissed. n12 These courts have weighed the circumstances of individual cases and concluded that sections 707(a) and 1307(a) grant discretion to courts when there are grounds for dismissal. Other courts have stricken petitions when the debtor failed to obtain the prepetition briefing. n13 In any event, because eligibility for relief is not jurisdictional, n14 it should be clear that the automatic stay is brought into effect by the petition. n15

Districts in Which Services Not Available. The requirement of a prepetition briefing does not apply if the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator determines that the approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies for the district are not reasonably able to provide adequate services for all potential debtors who would need them. n16 If such a determination is made, it must be reviewed no later than one year thereafter and no less frequently than annually after that. n17 In addition, a nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency may be disapproved at any time, which conceivably could lead to a determination that adequate services are not available.

The United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator will have to decide whether adequate services are available if the only services available to some debtors are over the telephone or on the Internet. Not all debtors have access to the Internet and some debtors do not have a telephone or are unable to use a telephone due to hearing problems. Debtors in this situation may also find it difficult or impossible to travel to a distant agency due to the expense involved or for other reasons. Lack of services in a language the debtor can speak should be another reason for finding that services are unavailable, at least for debtors in that situation. n18 It may be that agencies in some parts of a district could become overwhelmed by the demand for services and unable to provide them to all who request them. It is not clear whether a determination can be made that services are reasonably available in some parts of a district but not others.

Although section 521(b) contains no exception for debtors who reside in districts in which services have been found not to be reasonably available, because such debtors are not required to obtain a briefing they should not have to file a certificate showing they received one.

Emergency Bankruptcy Petitions. Section 109(h)(3)(A) creates a limited exception to the prepetition counseling requirement for debtors who must file a bankruptcy case very quickly to forestall imminent harm. Such a debtor must submit to the court a certification that describes the exigent circumstances that merit a waiver of the requirement and states that the debtor requested credit counseling services from an approved agency but was unable to obtain the services during the five-day period beginning on the date the debtor made the request. The inability to obtain services may be caused by the counseling agency not having services available, but it might also be caused by the debtor's inability to travel, or a temporary illness or disability. A debtor's incarceration as a prisoner, for example, may make it impossible for the debtor to gain access to services. n19 The certification must also be satisfactory to the court. If the debtor files such a certification, the debtor may defer the counseling until after the petition is filed.

The language of this provision is somewhat unclear. It appears to require the debtor to have made a request for services to one approved agency. It also states that the debtor must have been unable to obtain the services referred to in section 109(h)(1) within five days after the request. This language could be read to mean that a debtor who had to file a petition one day after the request was made to forestall harm such as a foreclosure, repossession, or utility shutoff, but who could obtain services in three days, would not be able to obtain a waiver of the counseling requirement and would not be eligible to file a petition. In view of the obvious intent to protect debtors facing just that sort of harm, a better reading would be to construe services referred to in paragraph (1) to mean prepetition counseling services, which such a debtor would not have been able to obtain. In any event, if services are available over the Internet and by telephone, there will rarely be a situation in which a debtor cannot obtain the necessary briefing within hours of seeking it, so this issue may be primarily academic.

The requirement that the certification be satisfactory to the court raises another potential issue. Once the debtor has filed the petition and certification, what will happen if the certification is not satisfactory? Must the petition be dismissed? It is unclear whether the court can permit the debtor, who by the time of the determination may have obtained counseling postpetition, to continue with the case. Because eligibility requirements are not jurisdictional, n20 they may be waivable by the court if the debtor made the unsatisfactory certification in good faith, and certainly should not apply if no entity moves to dismiss the case. Again, such situations may occur only rarely, because a court would have little reason to find a good faith certification to be unsatisfactory.

If the debtor is exempted from the prepetition counseling requirement under this provision, the debtor must still obtain the briefing after the petition is filed. Section 109(h)(3)(B) provides that the exemption for such a debtor expires when the debtor obtains a postpetition briefing, but in no event later than 30 days after the petition, unless the court, for cause, allows the debtor an additional 15 days. Such cause might include, for example, a temporary illness or disability.

Permanent Exemption from Prepetition Counseling Requirement. In very limited circumstances a debtor may be completely exempted from the prepetition counseling requirement of section 109(h)(1), even if adequate services are available in the debtor's judicial district. Section 109(h)(4) provides that the debtor need not obtain the briefing if the court finds, after notice and a hearing, that the debtor is unable to meet the requirement because of incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a combat zone.

The provision goes on to define incapacity as impaired by reason of mental illness or mental deficiency so that [the debtor] is incapable of realizing and making rational decisions with respect to financial responsibilities and disability as so physically impaired as to be unable, after reasonable effort, to be unable to participate in an in person, telephone, or Internet briefing . By excepting such individuals from the requirement, section 109(h) avoids the absurd situation in which a debtor would be required to obtain a briefing even if suffering from Alzheimer's disease or some other disability that would make the briefing meaningless or even impossible. n21 Thus, for example, the briefing requirement has been waived for debtors who were deaf or so dependent on multiple medications that they could not participate meaningfully in a briefing. n22

Unless, a determination of disability or incapacity can be made before the bankruptcy case is filed, which may not be possible since there would not yet be a case in which the court could make a ruling, the court's determination on this issue must be made after the petition is filed. This likelihood again raises the issue of whether the case must be dismissed if the court denies the request for an exemption. Because such requests will be relatively infrequent, and because they will probably be uncontested in almost all cases, this situation may be extremely rare. In such cases, especially in view of the serious consequences of dismissal, n23 the court should find a way to allow a good faith case to proceed despite this nonjurisdictional defect.

For a complete discussion of Code section 109, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. 11 U.S.C. § 111; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 111 (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. For a discussion of involuntary debtors, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.02[8] (Matthew Bender).

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(1).

n5

5. E.g., In re Cole, 347 B.R. 70 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2006).

n6

6. First Shore Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Hudson (In re Hudson), 352 B.R. 391 (Bankr. D. Md. 2006); In re Warren, 339 B.R. 475 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2006).

n7

7. 11 U.S.C. § 521(b)(1), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(d)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n8

8. 11 U.S.C. § 521(b)(2), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(d)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9. Official Form 1.

n10

10. See Emergency Bankruptcy Petitions infra.

n11

11. See Permanent Exemption from Prepetition Counseling Requirement infra.

n12

12. In re Manalad, (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2007) (collecting cases regarding whether such petitions must be dismissed); In re Bricksin, 346 B.R. 497 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2006); In re Hess, 347 B.R. 489 (Bankr. D. Vt. 2006).

n13

13. E.g., In re Thompson, 344 B.R. 899 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 2006); In re Elmendorf, 345 B.R. 486 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.), appeal dismissed, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81591 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.01[2] (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. In re Thompson, 344 B.R. 899 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 2006). But see In re Elmendorf, 345 B.R. 486 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.), appeal dismissed, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81591 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

n16

16. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(2)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n17

17. 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(2)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n18

18. In re Petit-Louis, 344 B.R. 696 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 2006).

n19

19. In re Star, 341 B.R. 830 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 2006).

n20

20. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.01[2] (Matthew Bender).

n21

21. A debtor who is disabled or incapacitated may still be eligible for relief. A petition may be filed on behalf of an infant or incompetent by a representative or next friend. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1004.1. If the debtor is an infant, the debtor will still have to obtain credit counseling, unless the debtor is deemed mentally deficient.

n22

22. In re Tulper, 345 B.R. 322 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006); see also In re Hall, 347 B.R. 532 (Bankr. N.D. W. Va. 2006) (waiving postpetition education requirement due to limited mental capacity of elderly debtor).

n23

23. See e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

190 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on "Public Access to Papers" Under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 919

Collier on "Public Access to Papers" Under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 12, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis details the right to public access to papers and dockets under Section 107(a), examines the mandatory exceptions to the right of access under Section 107(b), and discusses the courts broad general discretion to protect an individual with respect to information filed in a paper with the court under Section 107(c).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 107(a) of the Bankruptcy Code codifies the general right of the public to inspect and copy judicial records, which are to be available for examination at reasonable times without charge. n1

Section 107(b) contains exceptions to this general rule. On request of a party in interest, the court must protect an entity with respect to confidential commercial information or with respect to scandalous or defamatory matter. n2 The court must also protect an entity with respect to disclosure of such items on its own motion.

Section 107(c), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n3 gives the court broader discretion to protect for cause any information in a paper filed or to be filed in a title 11 case. It provides for exceptions permitting governmental units, the United States trustee, a bankruptcy administrator, a trustee or an auditor serving under section 586(f) of title 28 to have access to such material.

Public Access to Papers and Dockets; 11 U.S.C. § 107(a)

Bankruptcy Code section 107(a) is derived from former Rule 508 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. It codifies the public's general right under common law to inspect and copy public documents, including judicial records. As the Supreme Court recognized in Nixon v. Warner Communications, Inc., n4 the basis for this right to access is not a proprietary interest in the information but, rather, the public's interest in monitoring the workings of the judicial system. n5 The existence of such rights has been called fundamental to a democratic state. n6 Section 107(a) provides that, subject to exceptions in section 107 and section 112, all papers filed in a case under title 11 and the dockets of a bankruptcy court are public records and open to examination by an entity at reasonable times without charge.

Definition of Docket, Entity, Paper and Filed. The term docket is not defined in the Bankruptcy Code. Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 5003(a) requires the clerk of the court to keep a docket in each case and that the clerk shall enter thereon each judgment, order, and activity in the case. n7 Rule 5003(b) requires the court to also keep a claims register, which is sometimes colloquially called the claims docket. n8 Clearly, the claims register is a type of docket that must be open to examination by the public. Indeed, the legislative history states that the term docket in section 107 includes the claims docket, the proceedings docket and all papers filed in a case. n9 There is no indication in the history of Rule 5003 that its drafters intended that the listing of claims not be encompassed within the public access provisions of section 107 and, in any event, the rules could not narrow the applicability of the Code's provisions.

The term entity, as it is defined in section 101, is given its broadest interpretation, to include persons, estates, trusts, governmental units and the United States trustee. n10

The term paper includes documents that are filed electronically pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 5005(a)(2). n11 Thus, if documents are filed electronically pursuant to that rule, the clerk must establish a mechanism to permit the public to view those documents at reasonable times and at no charge in the clerk's office.

In considering the scope of section 107, it is important to keep the definitions and the language of the section in mind. Section 107 does not extend to papers that are not filed in a case, such as pretrial discovery material and other materials that are not filed, n12 or the documents an examiner may review in making a report to the court. n13 Other statutes or rules may apply to disclosure of such information, but section 107 does not. n14

In addition, under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1007(f), certain information is submitted to the clerk rather than filed in order to protect the debtor's privacy. n15 That rule requires an individual debtor to submit, rather than file, a verified statement that sets out the debtor's Social Security number or that the debtor does not have a Social Security number. As the Advisory Committee Note makes clear, the purpose of this procedure is to prevent the Social Security number from becoming a part of the filed papers that are in the case file available to the general public. n16

Relation to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2013.

The purposes of section 107 are further carried out by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2013. That rule requires the clerk of the court to create and maintain a separate public record listing fees awarded by the court to trustees, attorneys, accountants, appraisers, auctioneers and other professionals employed by trustees, as well as fees awarded to examiners. n17

This record must be kept chronologically and, like records within the scope of section 107, must be open to the public without charge. n18 At the close of each year, the clerk must prepare a summary of the record listing the total fees awarded to each individual or firm during the year. n19

Mandatory Exceptions to the Right of Access

The common law right of access to public documents is not absolute, and confidentiality may be warranted if access is sought for an improper purpose. n20 Section 107(b) follows former Bankruptcy Rule 918 in recognizing exceptions to the right of access. If a party in interest so requests, the bankruptcy court shall (1) protect an entity with respect to a trade secret or confidential research, development, or commercial information; or (2) protect a person with respect to scandalous or defamatory matter contained in a paper filed in a case under this title. Section 107(b) also explicitly authorizes the court on its own motion to protect such information. n21

Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1007(j) and Rule 9018 set forth the procedures for application of section 107. n22 Rule 1007(j) requires a motion to be filed by the party seeking to have the court direct the impounding of a list of creditors or of equity security holders. The movant must show cause for the impoundment, and upon a showing of cause the court may refuse to permit inspection by any entity, or permit only limited inspection on terms prescribed by the court.

Rule 9018 permits the court, on motion or on its own initiative, to make any order that justice requires:

- . to protect the estate or any entity with respect to a trade secret, or confidential research, development or commercial information;
- . to protect any entity against scandalous or defamatory matter contained in any paper filed in any case; or
- . to protect governmental matters that are made confidential by statute or regulation.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(c), made applicable to adversary proceedings in bankruptcy by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7026 and to contested matters by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9014, also authorizes the issuance of a protective order with respect to discovery for good cause shown." n23

Application of the Exceptions. Any limitation on the public's right of access, however, must be viewed as an extraordinary measure that is warranted only under rare circumstances. n24

Trade Secrets, Confidential Research or Commercial Information. The first exception requires a party seeking to limit access to show something more than simply a desire for confidentiality or a prior agreement to keep information confidential. Thus, the court in In re Itel Corp. n25 did not apply the commercial information exception of section 107(b)(1) to a list of debenture holders where the debtor feared the list would be used by investors to identify and purchase the debtor's debentures at depressed prices. The court denied impoundment of the creditor list under both section 107(b)(1) and Rule 1007(j). Quoting extensively from a case decided under the predecessor to Rule 1007(j), the Itel court noted that impoundment was too drastic a step when the objections to dissemination were general and to the effect that the reorganization would run more smoothly without outside interference. n26 Similarly, in In re Bell & Beckwith, n27 the court held that a generalized fear that some of the debtor's securities business customers might not want their transactions disclosed was insufficient to overcome the strong policy in favor of disclosing the creditors who were to receive distributions in the case.

In In re Nunn, n28 however, the debtor's customer list, which the court found to be the debtor's sole asset, was found to warrant protection under section 107(b)(1). The Nunn court specifically distinguished the case from Itel, emphasizing that dissemination of the debtor's customer list would clearly have an adverse effect on the debtor. The court in In re Frontier Group, LLC n29 came to a similar conclusion, ordering that a list of creditors be sealed because it named some or all of the physicians contracting with the debtor referral agency and was the debtor's primary asset. In In re Global Crossing Ltd., n30 the court invoked section 107, as well as Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9018, to protect confidential commercial information that could have been used to prejudice the ability of the debtor to sell assets for the benefit of unsecured creditors.

In In re Orion Pictures Corp., n31 the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that information need not be both commercial information and a trade secret to be protected, since section 107 is written in the alternative. The court also held that the good cause standard of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(c) was not applicable, although it did not state a specific alternative test.

Scandalous or Defamatory Matter. The second exception has also been construed narrowly, in light of the general public policy that court records should be open for public inspection. Mere embarrassment, or harm to reputation based on non-scandalous, non-defamatory information disclosed is not sufficient cause to restrict public access. n32 Section 107(b)(2), by its terms, applies only to scandalous or defamatory information; the dissemination of merely prejudicial material cannot be enjoined under the provision. n33

The meaning of scandalous or defamatory was discussed at length by the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in Gitto v. Worcester Telegram & Gazette Corp. (In re Gitto Global Corp.). n34 The court held that the party seeking protection need not prove in every case that the material in question is false, but that there must be a showing that it is material that would cause a reasonable person to have a less favorable opinion of the party and that either (1) the material is untrue or (2) the material is potentially untrue and irrelevant or included within a bankruptcy filing for an improper end.

Whether Exception Applies Is a Question of Fact. Whether or not specific information will warrant the bankruptcy court's protection is a question of fact to be determined according to the judicial guidelines established for the particular jurisdiction. For example, in In re Halkin, n35 the court held that before a restriction on the public's First Amendment right to know may be imposed the harm posed by dissemination must be substantial and serious; the restraining order must be narrowly drawn and precise; and there must be no alternative means of protecting the public interest which intrudes less directly on expression. n36

These criteria were later recognized by the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Krause v. Rhodes. n37 Other courts, without establishing an explicit set of criteria, have generally emphasized the same considerations, namely the seriousness of the harm threatened by dissemination n38 and the lack of a less drastic safeguard. n39

Once the court has determined that the information involved fits within the parameters of section 107(b), it must still decide on the appropriate action. The language of the section provides that the court shall protect the party filing a request, requiring that some protective steps be taken, n40 but does not say how such protection is to be granted. Filing a document under seal, in and of itself, does not prevent the public from having the right of access, and if a motion is made to unseal the document, the court could not avoid deciding whether it should remain under seal merely by ordering the document stricken. n41

Ultimately, the decision under section 107 is closely bound to the factual findings about the nature and seriousness of the threatened harm. The decision regarding what type of protection to give is committed to the discretion of the bankruptcy court, and should be reversed only for an abuse of discretion. n42

Request Must Be Made by a Party in Interest. Protection is mandatory when requested by a party in interest, a term left undefined by the Code. It seems clear that a creditor is a party in interest and therefore is entitled to request protection from the court, even if the creditor's claim is not formally filed or formally allowed in the case. n43 The debtor, of course, is a party in interest within the meaning of the phrase n44 but a debtor owing money to the estate has been held not to come within the meaning of the term. n45 Nor is a non-creditor a party in interest when it seeks access to the debtor's papers for use in a suit against a company associated with the debtor, even though the non-creditor agreed to pay the estate a percentage of any recovery made in the suit. n46 It has been said, though, that a person using what would have been an allowable claim as a setoff to a debt owed to the estate is sufficiently interested to demand the right granted to such parties. n47

Such protection in the case of potentially scandalous or defamatory matter contained in a paper filed in a case under title 11 extends only to a person. Section 101 defines person to include an individual, partnership and corporation but does not include a governmental unit, except under certain circumstances for purposes of section 1102. n48 Protection with respect to a trade secret or confidential research, development, or commercial information extends to an entity.

Pursuant to section 101, entity includes person, estate, trust, governmental unit and United States trustee. n49

Discretionary Protection of Information for Cause

Obtaining Protection. Section 107(c), added by the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, n50 gives the court broad discretion to protect an individual with respect to any information, including identifying information, in a paper filed or to be filed with the court to the extent that the court finds that disclosure of the information would create an undue risk of identity theft or unlawful injury to the individual or the individual's property.

The types of information that can be protected by the court are unlimited. Although section 107(c)(1)(A) refers to means of identification, as defined in section 1028(d) of title 18, United States Code, n51 section 107(c)(1)(B) refers to any other information contained in a paper that is filed or to be filed. For example, a court can enter an order permitting a victim of domestic violence to keep her address and other identifying information confidential, perhaps by excusing the individual from having to include such information in the papers filed. There are strong arguments that the debtor's Social Security number should never be disclosed in a public record, arguments bolstered by policies already adopted by the courts to protect debtors' social security numbers from disclosure. n52 This would require either barring disclosure of or redacting social security numbers from tax returns or transcripts filed with the court pursuant to section 521. n53 In light of the many other confidential matters that may be revealed in such documents, and the general policy of protecting confidentiality of tax returns, the Judicial Conference should use the authority it is given under section 315(c) of the 2005 legislation n54 to prohibit the disclosure of any tax returns or transcripts that are filed, except for cause. However, individual courts may also protect confidential tax information by entering general orders protecting such information in all cases under section 107(c).

Unlike section 107(b), section 107(c) requires a showing of cause. It does not require a request to the court; although most orders under the section will be initiated in that manner, the court can act sua sponte. There is also no requirement that a request be made by a party in interest. However, the protection of the subsection extends only to individuals, n55 and only to prevent injury to the person or property of individuals.

As with section 107(b), the method of protection is determined by the bankruptcy court. A court may enter an order, for example, that a document need not be filed, that a document be redacted, that the document be submitted to the clerk, but not filed, as is the practice with the Statement of Social Security Number required by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1007(f), or that a document be provided to certain parties who are prohibited from disclosing it to others.

Access for Governmental Units. Section 107(c)(2) provides that an entity acting under the police and regulatory powers of a domestic governmental unit n56 may be provided access to documents that are protected under section 107(c)(1). Such access, which is not further defined, must be granted upon an ex parte application of the entity, but only if the entity demonstrates cause. However, if the protection granted under section 107(c)(1) was to excuse the filing of the paper, the court may not be able to later grant access to it.

Access to United States Trustee, Bankruptcy Administrator, Trustee or Auditor. A broad exception to section 107(c)(1) is created for United States trustees, bankruptcy administrators, n57 trustees and auditors appointed under section 586(f) of title 28, United States Code. These individuals involved in administration of bankruptcy cases are given full access to all information in papers filed or submitted in bankruptcy cases. However, they are not permitted to disclose any information that has been specifically protected by the court. Thus, they may have some difficulty in using some of the information that they acquire through their broader access to the extent such use might require disclosure in a pleading or to another entity. Presumably, they may request that the court amend its order protecting the information to permit limited disclosure if such disclosure does not create any danger of the harms that the original protection was intended to prevent.

For a complete discussion of Code section 107, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 107 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1 See Public Access to Papers and Dockets infra.

n2

2 See Mandatory Exceptions to the Right of Access infra.

n3

3 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 234(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4

4 435 U.S. 589, 597-98, 98 S. Ct. 1306, 1312, 55 L. Ed. 2d 570, 580 (1978).

n5

5 See also In re Continental Illinois Securities Litig., 732 F.2d 1302, 1308 (7th Cir. 1984).

n6

6 In re Inslaw, Inc., 51 B.R. 298 (Bankr. D.D.C. 1985) (citing numerous cases).

n7

7 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 5003.01 (Matthew Bender).

n8

8 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 5003.02 (Matthew Bender).

n9

9 H.R. Rep. No. 595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 317-318 (1977); S. Rep. No. 989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 30 (1978).

n10

10 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 5005(a)(2), as amended by the 2006 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, effective December 1, 2006. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 5005.02 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12 In re Handy Andy Home Improvement Centers, Inc., 199 B.R. 376 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996) (finding section 107 inapplicable but granting protection under Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9018, which is broader).

n13

13 101 B.R. 92 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1989).

n14

14 E.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c), incorporated in Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7026; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9018.

n15

15 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(f), as amended by the 2003 amendments to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

n16

16 2003 Advisory Committee Note to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1007(c) & (f).

n17

17 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2013(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2013.04 (Matthew Bender).

n18

18 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2013(a); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2013.04 (Matthew Bender).

n19

19 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2013(b); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 2013.04 (Matthew Bender).

n20

20 See Nixon v. Warner Communications, 435 U.S. 589, 597-98, 98 S. Ct. 1306, 1312, 55 L. Ed. 2d 570, 580 (1978).

n21

21 See In re Itel Corp., 6 C.B.C.2d 942, 17 B.R. 942 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982).

n22

22 See (Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 1007 and ch. 9018 (Matthew Bender).

n23

23 See 6 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 26.10126.105 (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

n24

24 See In re Analytical Sys., Inc., 83 B.R. 833, 835 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1987); In re Epic Assocs. V, 13 C.B.C.2d 952, 954, 54 B.R. 445, 448 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985); see also In re Buppelmann, 269 B.R. 341 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 2001) (expungement of bankruptcy petition filed fraudulently without debtor's authority denied because expungement reserved for rarest of circumstances).

n25

25 6 C.B.C.2d 4, 17 B.R. 942 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982).

n26

26 6 C.B.C.2d 4, 10, 17 B.R. 942, 946 (quoting Delatour v. Meredith, 144 F.2d 594 (2d Cir. 1944)); see also In re Epic Assocs. V, 13 C.B.C.2d 952, 955, 54 B.R. 445, 449 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985); In re Reliable Investors, Corp., 11 C.B.C.2d 1103, 1105, 44 B.R. 904, 906 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1984).

n27 27 44 B.R. 661 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1984).

n28

28 12 C.B.C.2d 1158, 1161, 49 B.R. 963, 965 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985).

n29

29 256 B.R. 771 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2000).

n30

30 In re Global Crossing Ltd., 295 B.R. 720 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003) (citing In re Farmland Industries, 290 B.R. 364 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. 2003)).

n31

31 21 F.3d 24 (2d Cir. 1994).

n32

32 In re Analytical Sys., Inc., 83 B.R. 833 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1987); see also In re Continental Airlines, 150 B.R. 334 (D. Del. 1993) (sealing of the fee examiner's report was abuse of discretion when it did not contain defamatory material).

n33

33 See In re Hemple, 295 B.R. 200 (Bankr. D. Vt. 2003) (denying request to seal settlement documents based upon generalized desire of parties for confidentiality and allowing parties to present more specific reasons); In re MUMA Servs., 279 B.R. 478 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002) (court should not seal documents simply because of a party's agreement to keep information confidential); In re Whitener, 14 C.B.C.2d 395, 398, 57 B.R. 707, 709 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1986).

n34

34 422 F.3d 1, 54 C.B.C.2d 1308 (1st Cir. 2005).

n35

35 598 F.2d 176 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

n36

36 598 F.2d 176, 191-92.

n37

37 671 F.2d 212, 219 (6th Cir. 1982); see also In re De Lorean Motor Co., 8 C.B.C.2d 1089, 1091, 31 B.R. 53, 55 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 1983).

n38

38 See, e.g., In re Epic Assocs. V, 13 C.B.C.2d 952, 54 B.R. 445 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985).

n39

39 See In re Whitener, 14 C.B.C.2d 395, 399, 57 B.R. 707, 710 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1986) (debtor who discharged his debts in a chapter 7 case but then voluntarily proceeded to satisfy all prepetition obligations was not entitled to have record of his bankruptcy expunged; court instead issued order declaring bankruptcy petition null and void); In re Nunn, 12 C.B.C.2d 1158, 49 B.R. 963 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985).

n40

40 Gitto v. Worcester Telegram & Gazette Corp. (In re Gitto Gloval Corp.), 422 F.3d 1, 54 C.B.C.2d 1308 (1st Cir. 2005); In re Global Crossing Ltd., 295 B.R. 720 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003); In re Frontier Group, LLC, 256 B.R. 771 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2000).

n41

41 See Copley Press, Inc. v. Peregrine Sys. (In re Peregrine Sys.), 311 B.R. 679 (D. Del. 2004).

n42

42 In re Orion Pictures Corp., 21 F.3d 24 (2d Cir. 1994).

n43

43 See In re Epic Assocs. V, 13 C.B.C.2d 952, 54 B.R. 445 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985); In re Nunn, 12 C.B.C.2d 1158, 49 B.R. 963 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1985).

n44

44 See In re Itel Corp., 6 C.B.C.2d 4, 17 B.R. 942 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982); In re Whitener, 14 C.B.C.2d 395, 57 B.R. 707 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1986).

n45

45 See In re Sully & Co., 152 F. 619 (2d Cir. 1907).

n46

46 See In re Transatlantic & Pac. Corp., 216 F. Supp. 546 (S.D.N.Y. 1963).

n47

47 In re Waters-Colver Co., 212 F. 761 (E.D.N.Y. 1914).

n48

48 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n49

49 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender). United States trustee was added to the definition of entity by the Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-554. The amendment became effective in a judicial district when a United States trustee was appointed in that district. Except for the districts in Alabama and North Carolina, all districts now have United States trustees.

n50

50 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 234(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n51

51 See 18 U.S.C. § 1028(d) for definition of means of identification.

n52

52 See, e.g., Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1005 (requiring only last four digits of debtor's social security number in caption of petition); 2003 Advisory Committee Note to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1005; Collier on Bankruptcy, 1005.01 (Matthew Bender).

n53

53 11 U.S.C. § 521(f), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 315(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 521 (Matthew Bender).

n54

54 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 315(c) (2005), requires the Judicial Conference to establish procedures to protect confidentiality of tax information by October 17, 2005. Section 315(c) specifically provides that the procedures for safeguarding the confidentiality of tax information shall include restrictions on creditor access to tax information that is required to be provided under [section 521(a)(1)].

n55

55 Individual is not defined in section 101, but the term implicitly excludes partnerships and corporations, which are listed, along with individuals, in the definition of person in section 101.

n56

56 Governmental unit is defined in section 101; see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

n57

57 The bankruptcy administrator is a court official who, in districts that do not have a United States trustee, performs the duties performed by the United States trustee. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 6.33[1] (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

191 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Constitutionality of Bankruptcy Code Section 106

2008 Emerging Issues 920

Collier on the Constitutionality of Bankruptcy Code Section 106

By Collier

November 12, 2007

SUMMARY: The Supreme Court decided Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, Congress and most courts, including the Supreme Court itself, had assumed that a valid congressional abrogation of sovereign immunity was required in order for bankruptcy proceedings to be brought against states or their agencies without their waiver or consent. Section 106(a) was enacted to accomplish that abrogation for states and all other governmental units.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Section 106(a) of the Bankruptcy Code clearly expresses the congressional intent to abrogate the sovereign immunity of federal, state, local and foreign governmental units with respect to certain enumerated sections of the Bankruptcy Code. n1 Until the Supreme Court decided Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, n2 Congress and most courts, including the Supreme Court itself, had assumed that a valid congressional abrogation of sovereign immunity was required in order for bankruptcy proceedings to be brought against states or their agencies without their waiver or consent. Section 106(a) was enacted to accomplish that abrogation for states and all other governmental units. Prior to the Katz decision, however, much litigation ensued over whether Congress had the constitutional authority under the Bankruptcy Clause to abrogate the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity. Similar constitutional questions were raised concerning subsections 106(b) and (c), which permit counterclaims and setoffs against state (and other) governmental units that have claims against bankruptcy estates. The following sections highlight the constitutional issues that were raised concerning the application of section 106 to state governments and how those issues were resolved by Katz.

Seminole Tribe v. Florida

The 1996 decision of the Supreme Court in Seminole Tribe v. Florida n3 was widely interpreted as rendering section 106(a) unconstitutional as applied to the states. In that nonbankruptcy case, the Court held, in a five-to-four decision, that Congress lacks the power under the Indian Commerce Clause in Article I of the U.S. Constitution to override the Eleventh Amendment and subject unconsenting states to suits in federal court for violations of federally created rights. In so holding, the Court overruled Pennsylvania v. Union Gas Co., n4 a plurality decision finding that the Interstate Commerce Clause granted Congress the power to abrogate state sovereign immunity. The Union Gas decision had been the only Supreme Court decision holding that Congress may abrogate sovereign immunity pursuant to its Article I powers. n5 In overruling Union Gas, the Court continued to recognize, however, that Congress does have the power to abrogate state sovereign immunity when it acts pursuant to section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. n6

Although the ruling in Seminole Tribe did not directly address Congress's power under the Bankruptcy Clause in Article I, section 8, clause 4 of the Constitution, the decision held that state sovereignty under the Eleventh Amendment overrides congressional power under Article I of the Constitution. According to the Supreme Court, even when the Constitution vests in Congress complete law-making authority over a particular area, the Eleventh Amendment prevents congressional authorization of suits by private parties against unconsenting States. The Eleventh Amendment restricts the judicial power under Article III, and Article I cannot be used to circumvent the constitutional limitations placed upon federal jurisdiction. n7

The federal statute at issue in Seminole Tribe was the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (the IGRA"), enacted by Congress pursuant to the Indian Commerce Clause in Article I of the Constitution. The IGRA imposes a duty on state governments to negotiate in good faith with Indian tribes that seek to engage in gaming activities. Under the IGRA, a tribe may sue a state in federal court in order to compel observance of that duty. The Seminole Tribe sued the State of Florida and its governor in Florida district court, alleging that they violated the IGRA by refusing to engage in any negotiations. The defendants moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the suit violated Florida's sovereign immunity. The district court denied the motion, n8 but the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit reversed the district court's decision. n9

The Supreme Court rejected the Tribe's contention that because the IGRA authorizes only prospective injunctive relief, rather than monetary damages, the Eleventh Amendment did not bar the suit. The Court concluded that the type of relief sought by a plaintiff suing a state is irrelevant to the question of a state's sovereign immunity. n10

After the overruling of Union Gas, it appeared that there were only two circumstances in which an individual could sue a state. First, Congress could authorize such a suit in the exercise of its power under section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Second, a state could waive its sovereign immunity by consenting to suit. n11 In two recent decisions, however, the Supreme Court has held that Congress has greater authority to subject states to suits in connection with bankruptcy cases than it has with regard to most other areas of substantive federal law. First it held that if a court renders a decision affecting state interests in an in rem proceeding, the state may be bound despite its lack of consent because the proceeding is not viewed as a suit against the state to which sovereign immunity applies. n12 Then, the Supreme Court held more broadly that the states surrendered their immunity from suit by agreeing to the Bankruptcy Clause of the Constitution. In ratifying that provision, the States acquiesced in a subordination of whatever sovereign immunity they might otherwise have asserted in proceedings necessary to effectuate the in rem jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts." n13

Section 106(a); Constitutional Doubts Raised by Seminole Tribe and Resolved by Katz

The dissenting opinion of Justice Stevens in Seminole Tribe described the consequences of the Court's decision as follows:

The majority's opinion does not simply preclude Congress from establishing the rather curious statutory scheme under which Indian tribes may seek the aid of a federal court to secure a State's good-faith negotiations over gaming regulations. Rather, it prevents Congress from providing a federal forum for a broad range of actions against States, from those sounding in copyright and patent law, to those concerning bankruptcy, environmental law, and the regulation of our vast national economy. n14

Justice Stevens was thus concerned that the majority's conclusion that the Eleventh Amendment shields states from being sued under federal law in federal court would mean that persons harmed by state violations of bankruptcy law would be without a remedy.

The majority opinion responded to Justice Stevens's concern by labeling his conclusion as exaggerated in both substance and significance. According to the majority, as a substantive matter, there exist several other means available to individuals to ensure that a state is complying with federal law. First, the federal government can bring suit in a federal court against a state; second, an individual can bring suit against a state officer under the doctrine of Ex parte Young; n15 and third, the Supreme Court is empowered to review questions of federal law arising from state court decisions where a state has consented to suit in state court. Moreover, according to the majority, it has not been widely thought that the federal antitrust, bankruptcy, or copyright statutes abrogated the States' sovereign immunity: This Court never has awarded relief against a State under any of those schemes. Although the bankruptcy laws have existed practically since our Nation's inception, there is no established tradition in the lower federal courts of allowing enforcement of [bankruptcy] statutes against the States. n16

The Supreme Court later reconsidered the assumption of both the majority and the dissenting opinions in Seminole Tribe that the holding of that case was applicable to bankruptcy proceedings. Writing for the Court in Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, Justice Stevens explained that [c]areful study and reflection have convinced us that that assumption was erroneous. n17 The Court went on to hold that the Bankruptcy Clause gives Congress authority to subject states to suit in proceedings necessary to effectuate the in rem jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts. n18 Thus, unlike other Article I powers, the Bankruptcy Clause itself eliminates the states' sovereign immunity, and no statutory abrogation is required. n19

Federal Sovereign Immunity. Seminole Tribe did not alter a debtor's ability to sue and recover from federal governmental units, including the IRS, in bankruptcy courts. Congress has the exclusive authority to waive the federal government's sovereign immunity; n20 and section 106(a) unequivocally expresses Congress's intent to do so. Thus, section 106(a) is constitutionally valid insofar as it applies to suits against the United States and its agencies. n21

State Sovereign Immunity. After the Seminole Tribe decision, numerous courts considered the constitutionality of section 106. Most courts, including the courts of appeals for six circuits, found that, as applied to state governmental units, section 106(a) was unconstitutional. n22 These courts held that Congress lacked the power under the Bankruptcy Clause to abrogate states' sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment. The Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, however, disagreed, n23 concluding that the text of the Constitution and other evidence of the Framers' intent demonstrate that under the Bankruptcy Clause of Article I, section 8, Congress has the power to abrogate state sovereign immunity, n24 and that Congress clearly exercised that power in 11 U.S.C. § 106(a). n25 Ultimately, the Sixth Circuit's conclusion--that the Bankruptcy Clause authorizes Congress to subject states to suit in bankruptcy proceedings--was upheld by the Supreme Court, in Central Virginia Community College v. Katz. n26 The Supreme Court's reasoning, however, differed somewhat from the Sixth Circuit's. Rather than concluding that section 106(a) is a valid congressional abrogation of the states' sovereign immunity, the Supreme Court held that the states gave up their immunity when they ratified the Bankruptcy Clause. Thus Congress's authority to enact bankruptcy legislation that treats states in the same way as other creditors arises from the Bankruptcy Clause itself; the relevant abrogation' is the one effected in the plan of the Convention, not by statute." n27

Katz arose out of the bankruptcy of Wallace's Bookstores, Inc., which operated a nationwide chain of college bookstores. Katz was appointed as the liquidating supervisor for the estate and brought preference actions against the petitioners, public institutions of higher education in Virginia. As such, they were considered to be arms of the state. Katz filed the preference actions in a bankruptcy court within the Sixth Circuit, and, following circuit precedent, the lower courts rejected the colleges' sovereign immunity defense. The Supreme Court granted certiorari in the case in order to determine whether section 106(a) constituted a valid abrogation of state sovereign immunity. In the end, however, the Court concluded that the enactment of that provision was not necessary to authorize the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction over these preference avoidance proceedings. n28

The Court, in a five-to-four decision written by Justice Stevens, relied heavily on the history surrounding the ratification of the Bankruptcy Clause of the Constitution. The Court's review of this history convinced it that the provision was included in Article I in order to provide a uniform federal response to the existing problem of divergent state insolvency and bankruptcy laws and the resulting lack of enforceability of state court discharge orders in other states. n29 The primary goal of the Framers was to prevent competing sovereigns' interference with the debtor's discharge. n30 The Court further concluded that, in giving Congress the authority to enact uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States, states agreed not to assert their sovereign immunity in proceedings authorized by Congress pursuant to the Bankruptcy Clause. This conclusion was evidenced by the fact that Congress in the early years following the ratification of the Constitution considered and eventually enacted legislation that permitted federal courts to issue writs of habeas corpus requiring the release of debtors from state prisons. Despite this federal subordination of state sovereignty, the Court found no record of any objection based on an infringement of sovereign immunity. n31

The Katz majority read this history as support[ing] the view that the Bankruptcy Clause of Article I simply did not contravene the norms this Court has understood the Eleventh Amendment to exemplify. n32 In giving the federal government the power to enact uniform bankruptcy legislation, the states understood that they were giving Congress the power to subordinate state sovereignty, albeit within a limited sphere. n33 Thus, the Court concluded that the States agreed in the plan of the Convention not to assert any sovereign immunity defense they might have had in proceedings brought pursuant to Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies.' n34 This cession of immunity, according to the Court, extended to in rem bankruptcy proceedings and ancillary proceedings necessary to effectuate the in rem jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts. n35 Because the states have given up their immunity, when Congress does enact bankruptcy legislation that allows states to be sued, the issue is not one of abrogation but only whether Congress' determination that States should be amenable to such proceedings is within the scope of its power to enact Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies.' n36 That preference recovery actions come within the scope of such power is beyond peradventure, said the Court. n37

Katz thus seems to put an end to the debate about the constitutionality of section 106(a). According to the Court, so long as Congress has not exceeded the scope of its legislative authority under the Bankruptcy Clause, the states acquiesced in this exercise of congressional authority to render them subject to suit in bankruptcy proceedings. The constitutionality of the Bankruptcy Code sections listed in section 106(a) is not in doubt, and thus there is no reason to believe Congress exceeded its authority under the Bankruptcy Clause in including states within the coverage of those provisions. The only reason to worry that the constitutional issue might reemerge at some point is that Katz was decided by a five-to-four vote, with the decisive vote being cast by Justice O'Connor one week before she stepped down from the Court. Because state sovereign immunity in recent years has been an unstable area of the law in which the Supreme Court has been closely divided, the possibility remains that Katz may not be the Court's last word on the impact of state sovereign immunity in bankruptcy.

Application of Section 106(a) to Municipalities and Their Agencies. The Eleventh Amendment does not generally apply to municipalities. n38 In most cases, therefore, it has not been doubted that section 106(a) is valid in its application to municipalities and municipal agencies and that bankruptcy courts may exercise jurisdiction over suits against those authorities. The Supreme Court's Katz decision now makes clear that, even when municipal and local authorities are deemed to be arms of the state, n39 section 106(a)'s authorization of suit against them is constitutionally valid, since the states gave up their sovereign immunity in ratifying the Bankruptcy Clause. n40

Section 106(b)

Bankruptcy Code section 106(b) provides that a governmental unit is deemed to have waived sovereign immunity with respect to claims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as a claim filed by the governmental unit. For a number of years, it appeared that two Supreme Court decisions concerning state sovereign immunity, Seminole Tribe v. Florida n41 and College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Education Expense Board, n42 presented concerns about the constitutionality of this provision. Under Seminole Tribe, state sovereign immunity is not eliminated just because Congress (acting pursuant to its Article I powers) declares it to be waived. That enactment is merely another form of abrogation, n43 which Congress lacks authority under Article I to accomplish. n44 And under College Savings Bank, state sovereign immunity is not eliminated just because the state files a proof of claim after being put on notice by Congress that it will lose its sovereign immunity by doing so. That situation involves constructive waiver, which the Court disallowed. n45 Thus it seemed that the constitutionality of section 106(b) depended on the extent to which a state in fact voluntarily waives its sovereign immunity by filing a proof of claim in a bankruptcy case. On that issue the lower courts were divided. n46

Any question about the constitutionality of this provision as it applies to states, however, has been eliminated by the Katz decision. There, the Supreme Court declared that States agreed in the plan of the Convention not to assert any sovereign immunity defense they might have had in proceedings brought pursuant to Law on the subject of Bankruptcies.' n47 Acting pursuant to its Bankruptcy Clause authority, Congress has declared that states are subject to compulsory counterclaims when they seek to recover from bankruptcy estates. Accordingly, when a state files a proof of claim in a bankruptcy case and the estate asserts a compulsory counterclaim against it, no waiver is necessary because the state previously surrendered its immunity.

Section 106(c)

Section 106(c) permits, notwithstanding any assertion of sovereign immunity, a setoff against a governmental unit's claim of any claim that the estate has against that governmental unit. Before the Supreme Court decided Katz, there was some uncertainty about the constitutionality of this provision insofar as it applies to states. Since the provision requires no action to be taken by the state, n48 there may be no basis for finding a voluntary waiver of the state's immunity. Moreover, because the two claims that are set off do not have to be factually related, the provision may go beyond the permissible scope of any waiver that results from the filing of a proof of claim. n49

Any constitutional concerns, however, have been eliminated by Central Virginia Community College v. Katz. n50 The states surrendered their sovereign immunity in ratifying the Bankruptcy Clause. They thereby gave Congress the authority to subject them to suit in connection with resolving claims to the res that comprises the bankruptcy estate. n51

For a complete discussion of Code section 106, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 106 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Hardy v. United States (In re Hardy), 97 F.3d 1384, 1388 (11th Cir. 1996); In re Lovato, 203 B.R. 742, 749 (Bankr. D. Wyo. 1996); Field v. Montgomery County (In re Anton Motors, Inc.), 177 B.R. 58, 62 (Bankr. D. Md. 1995).

n2

2. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1002, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006).

n3

3. 517 U.S. 44, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199 (1996).

n4

4. 491 U.S. 1, 109 S. Ct. 2273, 105 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1989).

n5

5. 517 U.S. 44, 59, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1125, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 268, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1209.

n6

6. 517 U.S. 44, 59, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1125, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 268, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1208-09 (citing Fitzpatrick v. Bitzer, 427 U.S. 445, 96 S. Ct. 2666, 49 L. Ed. 2d 614 (1976)).

n7

7. 517 U.S. 44, 72-73, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1131-32, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 277, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1216.

n8

8. 801 F. Supp. 655 (S.D. Fla. 1992).

n9

9. 11 F.3d 1016 (11th Cir. 1994).

n10

10. Seminole Tribe v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44, 58, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1124, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 268, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1208 (1996)

(Eleventh Amendment does not exist solely in order to preven[t] federal court judgments that must be paid out of a State's treasury.'--quoting Hess v. Port Auth. Trans-Hudson Corp., 513 U.S. 30, 48, 115 S. Ct. 394, 404, 130 L. Ed. 2d 245, 260 (1994); it also serves to avoid the indignity of subjecting a State to the coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties,'--quoting Puerto Rico Aqueduct & Sewer Auth. v. Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., 506 U.S. 139, 146, 113 S. Ct. 684, 689, 121 L. Ed. 2d 605, 614 (1993)).

n11

11. College Sav. Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Educ. Expense Bd., 527 U.S. 666, 670, 119 S. Ct. 2219, 2223, 144 L. Ed. 2d 605, 613 (1999).

n12

12. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. v. Hood, 541 U.S. 440, 124 S. Ct. 1905, 158 L. Ed. 2d 764, 51 C.B.C.2d 627 (2004).

n13

13. Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006); see Constitutionality of Section 106*infra*.

n14

14. 517 U.S. 44, 77, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1134, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 280, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1218-19 (1996) (Stevens, J., dissenting).

n15

15. 209 U.S. 123, 28 S. Ct. 441, 52 L. Ed. 714 (1908).

n16

16. Seminole Tribe v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44, 73, n.16, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1132, n.16, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 277, n.16, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1216, n.16 (1996). But see Hood v. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. (In re Hood), 262 B.R. 412, 424 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 2001) (contrary to the dicta in Seminole Tribe, the Supreme Court has traditionally recognized that the States' sovereignty is limited in the area of bankruptcy), aff'd, 319 F.3d 755 (6th Cir. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 541 U.S. 440, 124 S. Ct. 1905, 158 L. Ed. 2d 764, 51 C.B.C.2d 627 (2004); In re Barrett Refining Corp., 221 B.R. 795, 806 n.16 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1998) (disagreeing with statement in Seminole opinion that there is no tradition of allowing the bankruptcy courts to enforce bankruptcy laws against the states); O'Brien v. Vermont Agency of Natural Resources (In re O'Brien), 216 B.R. 731, 736, 39 C.B.C.2d 685, 690 (Bankr. D. Vt. 1998) (same).

n17

17. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 996, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006).

n18

18. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 963.

n19

19. 546 U.S. 35, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 964 (the relevant abrogation' is the one effected in the plan of the Convention, not by statute); see Constitutionality of Section 106 infra.

n20

20. United States v. Lee, 106 U.S. 196, 1 S. Ct. 240, 27 L. Ed. 171 (1882).

n21

21. Liebersohn v. IRS (In re C.F. Foods, L.P.), 265 B.R. 71, 85 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2001) (Although the constitutionality of § 106 may sometimes be in dispute with respect to abrogating a state governmental unit's sovereign immunity defense, there is no question that Congress can abrogate the federal government's sovereign immunity. (citing Thibodaux v. United States (In re Thibodaux), 201 B.R. 827, 832 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 1996)).

n22

22. E.g., Georgia Higher Educ. Assistance Corp. v. Crow (In re Crow), 394 F.3d 918, 921 (11th Cir. 2004) (we join five of the six circuits that have considered the issue in holding that § 106(a)'s purported abrogation of Eleventh Amendment immunity in bankruptcy proceedings, which is clear and specific, is nonetheless invalid in light of Seminole Tribe of Florida v. Florida); Nelson v. La Crosse County Dist. Attorney (In re Nelson), 301 F.3d 820, 832, 49 C.B.C. 2d 101 (7th Cir. 2002) (Congress did not validly abrogate State sovereign immunity when enacting Section 106(a) pursuant to its Article I legislative power. [W]e find no reason to distinguish Congress' power under the Indian Commerce Clause, that it purported to exercise in Seminole Tribe, from its power under the Bankruptcy Clause for purposes of State sovereign immunity.); Mitchell v. California Franchise Tax Bd. (In re Mitchell), 209 F.3d 1111 (9th Cir. 2000); Sacred Heart Hosp. of Norristown v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Pub. Welfare (In re Sacred Heart Hosp. of Norristown), 133 F.3d 237, 245, 32 C.B.C. 2d 238 (3d Cir. 1998); Department of Transp. & Dev. v. PNL Asset Mgm't Co., LLC (In re Estate of Fernandez), 123 F.3d 241, 246, 38 C.B.C. 2d 1249 (5th Cir. 1997); Schlossberg v. Maryland (In re Creative Goldsmiths of Washington, D.C., Inc.), 119 F.3d 1140, 1147, 38 C.B.C.2d 574 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1075, 118 S. Ct. 1517, 140 L. Ed. 2d 670 (1998); Elias v. United States (In re Elias), 39 C.B.C. 2d 782, 218 B.R. 80 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1998), aff'd, 216 F.3d 1082 (9th Cir. 2000); Quesada v. Puerto Rico (In re Arecibo Community Health Care), 233 B.R. 625, 629 (D.P.R. 1999) (Because we find that Congress enacted § 106(a) pursuant to its Article I powers, rather than pursuant to its faculties under the Fourteenth Amendment, we must also find that § 106(a) is an unconstitutional abrogation of the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity.), aff'd on other grounds and remanded, Arecibo Community Health Care v. Puerto Rico, 270 F.3d 17, 21 (1st Cir. 2001) (The parties to this appeal do not challenge the lower court's conclusion that Congress lacks the authority to abrogate Puerto Rico's Eleventh Amendment immunity pursuant to § 106(a).), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 813, 123 S. Ct. 73, 154 L. Ed. 2d 15 (2002); In re LTV Steel Co., Inc., 264 B.R. 455, 464-65 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2001); Askey v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Public Welfare (In re Askey), 261 B.R. 160 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2001); Peterson v. Florida Dep't of Revenue (In re Peterson), 254 B.R. 740 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2000); IRS v. Gosselin, 252 B.R. 854, 858 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (holding that [a]lthough the First Circuit has not yet addressed the issue of the constitutionality of section 106 of the Bankruptcy Code, the abrogation of the state's Eleventh Amendment immunity in section 106 is invalid because Congress does not have the power to abrogate sovereign immunity under its Article I powers); DeAngelis v. Laskey (In re DeAngelis), 239 B.R. 426 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1999); Snyder v. Board of Regents (In re Snyder), 228 B.R. 712 (Bankr. D. Neb. 1998); United States v. Nebraska Dep't of Revenue (In re Doiel), 228 B.R. 439 (Bankr. D.S.D. 1998); Justice v. Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation (In re Justice), 224 B.R. 631 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1998); Koehler v. Iowa College Student Aid Comm'n (In re Koehler), 37 C.B.C.2d 460, 204 B.R. 210 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1997).

n23

23. Hood v. Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. (In re Hood), 319 F.3d 755 (6th Cir. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 541 U.S. 440, 124 S. Ct. 1905, 158 L. Ed. 2d 764, 51 C.B.C.2d 627 (2004); accord Gray v. Fla. State Univ. (In re Dehon, Inc.), 327 B.R. 38 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2005).

n24

24. 319 F.3d 755, 762.

n25

25. 319 F.3d 755, 759.

n26

26. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006).

n27

27. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 964.

n28

28. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 995, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 952.

n29

29. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 999-1000, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 958.

n30

30. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1002, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 960.

n31

31. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1003, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 961-62.

n32

32. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1003, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 962.

n33

33. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1004, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 963.

n34

34. Id.

n35

35. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 963.

n36

36. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 1005, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 964.

n37

37. Id..

n38

38. Mt. Healthy City Sch. Dist. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 280, 97 S. Ct. 568, 572, 50 L. Ed. 2d 471, 479 (1977) (The bar of the Eleventh Amendment does not extend to counties and similar municipal corporations.); see also Hadley v. North Ark. Community Technical College (In re Hadley), 76 F.3d 1437, 1438 (8th Cir. 1996) (Eleventh Amendment immunity does not extend to independent political subdivisions created by the State, such as counties and cities.); D'Orio v. Town of East Haddam (In re D'Orio), 58 B.R. 263, 266 (Bankr. D. Conn. 1985).

n39

39. See Franceschi v. Schwartz, 57 F.3d 828, 831 (9th Cir. 1995); Christy v. Pennsylvania Turnpike

Comm'n, 54 F.3d 1140, 1144-45 (3d Cir. 1995); Belanger v. Madera Unified School Dist., 963 F.2d 248 (9th Cir. 1992); AJ Contracting Co. v. City of New York (In re AJ Contracting Co.), 300 B.R. 182 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003).

n40

40. Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, U.S., 126 S. Ct. 990, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006); see Constitutionality of Section 106 supra.

n41

41. 517 U.S. 44, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199 (1996).

n42

42. 527 U.S. 666, 119 S. Ct. 2219, 144 L. Ed. 2d 605 (1999).

n43

43. See Schlossberg v. Maryland (In re Creative Goldsmiths of Washington, D.C., Inc.), 119 F.3d 1140, 1147, 38 C.B.C.2d 574 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1075, 118 S. Ct. 1517, 140 L. Ed. 2d 670 (1998) ([E]ven the language of 11 U.S.C. § 106(b) itself--that a state is deemed to have waived sovereign immunity'--amounts to language of abrogation.).

n44

44. 517 U.S. 44, 72-73, 116 S. Ct. 1114, 1131-32, 134 L. Ed. 2d 252, 277, 34 C.B.C.2d 1199, 1216.

n45

45. 527 U.S. 666, 683, 119 S. Ct. 2219, 2229, 144 L. Ed. 2d 605, 621 (1999).

n46

46. See, e.g., Ossen v. Connecticut Dep't of Soc. Servs. (In re Charter Oak Assocs.), 361 F.3d 760, 770 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 955, 125 S. Ct. 408, 160 L. Ed. 2d 316 (2004); Arecibo Cmty. Health Care, Inc. v. Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, 270 F.3d 17, 28 (1st Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 813, 123 S. Ct. 73, 154 L. Ed. 2d 15 (2002); Schlossberg v. Maryland (In re Creative Goldsmiths of Washington, D.C., Inc.), 119 F.3d 1140, 1148, 38 C.B.C.2d 574 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1075, 118 S. Ct. 1517, 140 L. Ed. 2d 670 (1998); Jones v. Yorke (In re Friendship Med. Ctr., Ltd.), 710 F.2d 1297, 1301 (7th Cir. 1983).

n47

47. Central Virginia Community College v. Katz, U.S., 126 S. Ct. 990, 1004, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 963, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006).

n48

48. See Duties of Trustee or Debtor in Asserting a Right to Offset a Claim infra.

n49

49. See Schlossberg v. Comptroller of Treasury (In re Creative Goldsmiths of Washington, D.C., Inc.), 119 F.3d 1140, 1148, 38 C.B.C.2d 574 (4th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1075, 118 S. Ct. 1517, 140 L. Ed. 2d 670 (1998); Richard H. Fallon et al., Hart and Wechsler's The Federal Courts and the Federal System, 1037 (5th ed. 2003) (noting uncertainty about whether filing of proof of claim permits a claim against the state that does not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as the state's claim).

n50

50. 546 U.S. 356, 126 S. Ct. 990, 163 L. Ed. 2d 945, 54 C.B.C.2d 1233 (2006).

n51

51. See Constitutionality of Section 106 supra.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

192 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Bad Faith Involuntary Bankruptcy Filings Under Sect. 303(b) of the Bankr. Code

2008 Emerging Issues 904

Collier on Bad Faith Involuntary Bankruptcy Filings Under Section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 9, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code Section 303(b) does not expressly refer to good faith filings. However, since section 303(i) specifically refers to bad faith filings, it is generally agreed that involuntary filings must be in good faith and that consequences flow if they are not. This Emerging Issues Analysis illustrates the five tests for determining what constitutes bad faith and provides specific examples of bad faith.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Collier on Creditors Bad Faith Involuntary Filings

Bankruptcy Code Section 303(b) does not expressly refer to good faith filings. However, since section 303(i) specifically refers to bad faith filings, n1 it is generally agreed that involuntary filings must be in good faith and that consequences flow if they are not. Dismissal is one possible consequence. If there has been bad faith, a debtor may be awarded damages, including punitive damages, under section 303(i)(2). n2 However, an award under section 303(i) does not always follow a finding of bad faith. If only dismissal is the court's preferred remedy, section 303(i) is not implicated. In addition to section 303(i), new section 303(l), added in 2005, n3 specifically addresses additional consequences for filing an involuntary case against an individual (as distinguished from a corporation or partnership) based on materially false, fraudulent or fictitious statements.

In addition to dismissal, these added consequences include a prohibition on the reporting of information related to the filing to a credit reporting agency. Moreover, the 2005 amendments also add language to 18 U.S.C. § 157 to ensure that fraudulent filings constitute a bankruptcy crime. n4

Bad faith for purposes of section 303(b) is not defined within the Code, although the legislative history to new subsection (l) is illustrative. n5 Numerous acts and omissions have been considered as bad faith, and courts have developed differing tests for determining whether creditors are exhibiting bad faith. Once the legal standard is known, a finding of bad faith is based on a factual determination. There is a presumption in favor of good faith filings, and the burden is on the debtor to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the filing is in bad faith. n6

Tests for Determining Bad Faith. There have been a wide range of tests applied by the courts for determining bad faith. n7 There are now five identifiable standards: (1) the subjective test; (2) the improper purpose test; (3) the objective test; (4) the improper use test; and (5) the combined objective and subjective test, sometimes referred to as the Rule 9011 test. One court has suggested a sixth approach: the nose test.

The subjective test looks at what the petitioning creditor in question believed, n8 focusing on the petitioning creditor's motivation in filing an involuntary case. n9 For example, if the creditor's motive in filing was simply to harass the debtor rather than to collect an unpaid obligation, there would be subjective evidence of bad faith.

Other courts adopt an improper purpose test, which is similar to the subjective test and assesses why the creditor sought to file the involuntary case in the first instance. n10 Examples include ruining and destroying the debtor and maliciously seeking to undermine the debtor's business.

Other courts utilize an objective standard, assessing what a reasonable person in the creditor's position would have done. n11 This calls for an assessment of the reasonableness of the creditor's action in filing an involuntary petition.

Still other courts create an improper use test which looks at whether the creditor's conduct takes disproportionate advantage of other creditors. n12 Examples include using the bankruptcy to acquire corporate control, reducing an obligation on a guaranty or treating the bankruptcy process as if it were the creditor's own private collection agency.

Other courts utilize a test that contains both objective and subjective elements. n13 This is considered a broad, inclusive test. n14 The combined test has been likened to the test utilized in Bankruptcy Rule 9011. One court has criticized this approach because Rule 9011 deals with careless omissions that do not rise to the level of bad faith. n15

Finally, the smell test, which is actually the broadest of all the standards, looks to all of the foregoing tests and operates on the premise that if it smells like bad faith, it can be fit into any, indeed all, of the above-listed tests. n16 This is akin to a totality of the circumstances test. n17 There is clearly some overlap among the tests.

The test which has gained the greatest acceptance is that which combines the objective and subjective elements, namely the Rule 9011 standard. Under this test, the following specific questions can be framed. n18 Answering one or more of the first three questions in the negative and the fourth question in the affirmative can lead to dismissal of the petition:

. Did the petitioning creditor make a reasonable inquiry into relevant facts and pertinent law before commencing the involuntary filing? Was the involuntary filing well grounded in fact?

. Was the involuntary filing warranted by existing law or by a good faith argument for change in the current law?

. Was the filing undertaken for an improper purpose such as harassment, delay or an effort to increase costs to obtain advantage?

Considering the variety of available tests, and in view of the treatment of other issues of good and bad faith under the Code, n19 the Rule 9011 test is best suited to resolving the issues, although the addition of subsection (I) changes the calculus for cases involving fraudulent statements in cases filed against individual debtors.

The smell test is not as predictable and is harder to apply consistently. The other tests, while capturing part of the inquiry, can miss key aspects of a situation.

The complexities of determining what constitutes bad faith under section 303(b) are clarified somewhat by the addition of subsection (I) in 2005. n20 This new section provides that if dismissal occurs when a petition is false or contains materially false, fictitious or fraudulent statements with respect to an individual debtor, additional consequences flow. n21 The identification of this specific subcategory of acts--namely, falsity or materially false, fictitious or fraudulent statements--signals that these acts are evidence of bad faith. This is further supported by the H.R. Report 109-31, which specifically addresses cases filed against public officials that were dismissed for being in bad faith; some of these cases had been filed as part of obstreperous litigation tactics or what is termed paper terrorism. n22

Specific Examples of Bad Faith. If a petitioning creditor actually knows that it has a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount with the debtor, that creditor's good faith can be challenged. n23 If a single petitioning creditor knows that the debtor has more than 11 creditors, the filing can be challenged on the basis of bad faith. n24 Actual or constructive knowledge of the other creditors should be sufficient. n25 Reckless disregard of information can be evidence of bad faith. n26 A creditor is required to conduct such inquiry as a reasonable person would conduct to determine the number of creditors a debtor has; that does not mean the creditor's search must be perfect or complete. The fact that the debtor and petitioning creditors are engaged in state court litigation does not support a finding of bad faith. n27 The filing in the latter instance may be necessary to preserve assets or because of the condition of the debtor's business. Bad faith can also be evidenced by filing a case solely to create havoc, as a form of protest or to harass public officials or private individuals. n28

The examples of bad faith noted by courts reveal their concern over improper involuntary cases. As expressed by one court, an allegation of bankruptcy can leave a permanent scar even if properly dismissed. n29 Some of the concerns expressed by courts will be addressed by new subsection (l), added in 2005. n30 Recognizing the difficulty of creating a clean slate for a case improperly filed against an individual, the new legislation prohibits the reporting of false or fraudulent filings to credit reporting agencies. n31 In addition, there are provisions for sealing records and eventually expunging the involuntary petition from the debtor's records when there is no longer a need for them in a criminal case, as these convictions may contain information with respect to the wronged debtor. n32 It should also be noted that, even if there is the subsequent intervention of a good faith creditor, bad faith is usually not considered purged, and the involuntary petition should be dismissed. n33

For a complete discussion of Code section 303, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 303 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.15[5].

n2 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.15[5].

n3 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.18.

n4 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n5 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.18. Section 332 of the 2005 Act, which created new subsection (l) of section 303, was based on a previously passed bill titled The Involuntary Bankruptcy Improvement Act, passed on June 10, 2003, by the House as H.R. 1529. The legislation was intended to respond directly to a rash of involuntary filings against public officials in Ozaukee County, Wisconsin.

n6 In re Alta Title Co., 55 B.R. 133 (Bankr. D. Utah 1985). Absent extraordinary circumstances, a debtor (and a nonfiling general partner of a partnership debtor) are the only entities authorized to contest the involuntary petition under Rule 1011(a) (i.e., by filing a responsive pleading or seeking dismissal under section 303(j)). In re Blutrich, Herman & Miller, 227 B.R. 53 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998). Even a government agency, such as the Federal Trade Commission, lacks standing to so move. FTC v. American Inst. for Research and Dev., 219 B.R. 639, 647 (D. Mass 1998). However, a court can sua sponte dismiss under section 305(a) to prevent abuse of the bankruptcy system. Id.

n7 See, e.g., In re Wavelength, Inc., 61 B.R. 614 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1986).

n8 Basin Elec. Power Coop. v. Midwest Processing Co., 47 B.R. 903 (D.N.D. 1984), aff'd, 769 F.2d 483, 13 CBC2d 500 (8th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1083, 106 S. Ct. 854, 88 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1986).

n9 In re Fox Island Square P'ship, 106 B.R. 962 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989).

n10 See, e.g., In re Salmon, 128 B.R. 313 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1991).

n11 In re Crown Sportswear, Inc., 575 F.2d 991 (1st Cir. 1987); In re Midwest Processing Co., 41 B.R. 90 (Bankr. D.N.D. 1984).

n12 In re Nordbrock, 772 F.2d 397 (8th Cir. 1985); In re Westerleigh Dev. Corp., 141 B.R. 38 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1992); In re F.R.P. Indus., 73 B.R. 309 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 1987).

n13 In re United States Optical, Inc., 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 6960 (4th Cir. Apr. 1, 1993) (unpublished); In re Petrallex Stainless, Ltd., 78 B.R. 738 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987).

n14 In re Dino's Inc., 183 B.R. 779 (S.D. Ohio 1995).

n15 In re Val W. Poterek & Sons, Inc., 169 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

n16 In re Better Care, Ltd., 97 B.R. 405 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989).

n17 In re Mundo Custom Homes, Inc., 179 B.R. 566 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1995).

n18 See In re K.P. Enter., 135 B.R. 174 (Bankr. D. Me. 1992).

n19 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.15[5].

n20 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.18.

n21 See 11 U.S.C. § 303(l).

n22 See Jeff Cole, "Paper Terrorist" Gets Five Years in Prison, Milwaukee J. Sentinel, Jan. 18, 2003, at 1B.

n23 In re Laroche, 969 F.2d 1299 (1st Cir. 1992).

n24 In re Dino's, Inc., 183 B.R. 779 (S.D. Ohio 1995).

n25 Downers Grove Nat'l Bank v. Fox (In re Fox), 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12471 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 1, 1994).

n26 In re Dino's, Inc., 183 B.R. 779, 783 (S.D. Ohio 1995).

n27 Subway Equip. Leasing Corp. v. Sims (In re Sims), 994 F.2d 210, 29 C.B.C.2d 443 (5th Cir. 1993); In re Everett, 32 C.B.C.2d 1565, 178 B.R. 132 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1994).

n28 See, e.g., In re Kennedy, No. 02-26100-MDM (Bankr. E.D. Wis. May 21, 2002).

n29 In re Dino's, Inc., 183 B.R. 779, 783 (S.D. Ohio 1995).

n30 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005; see Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.18.

n31 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.18.

n32 Id. The legislative history related to subsection (l) of 303 specifically notes the difficulties of wiping the slate clean for those who have been damaged by wrongfully filed involuntary cases. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 84 -86 (2005).

n33 In re Norriss Bros. Lumber Co., Inc., 25 C.B.C.2d 1571, 133 B.R. 599 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

193 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Debtor Reporting Requirements under Section 308 of the Bankr. Code

2008 Emerging Issues 906

Collier on Debtor Reporting Requirements under Section 308 of the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 9, 2007

SUMMARY: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 mandates uniform reporting requirements for "small business debtors." Reporting requirements are nothing new even before the passage of the 2005 Act, debtors in possession have been required to file periodic reports in almost all chapter 11 cases. This Emerging Issues Analysis details the reporting requirements for small business debtors under Section 308 of the Bankruptcy Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Overview of Section 308

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (the 2005 Act) n1 mandates uniform reporting requirements for small business debtors. n2 Reporting requirements are nothing new. Even before the passage of the 2005 Act, debtors in possession have been required to file periodic reports in almost all chapter 11 cases.

These reports are required by local bankruptcy rules, or by guidelines adopted by the United States Trustee or bankruptcy administrators in districts in Alabama and North Carolina. n3 The reports assist United States Trustees and bankruptcy administrators in monitoring a debtor in possession's progress toward reorganization; they also provide financial information that is used by United States Trustees and bankruptcy administrators in assessing the feasibility of debtors' plans. n4

The periodic reports are especially useful in smaller chapter 11 cases in which creditors' committees typically do not function. Although periodic reports have been required in almost all courts, there has been no national consistency with respect to what the reports must contain.

The 2005 Act will ensure uniform reporting requirements. It states that the Judicial Conference of the United States shall prepare rules and prescribe forms that direct small business debtors to file periodic reports relating to 1) the debtor's profitability; 2) the debtor's cash receipts and disbursements; and 3) whether the debtor is timely filing tax returns and paying taxes and other administrative expenses when due. n5

The uniform reporting requirements for small businesses in chapter 11 cases are to be implemented by Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Official Forms. The rules and forms must be designed to achieve a practical balance among 1) the reasonable needs of the bankruptcy court, the United States Trustee, creditors, and other parties in interest for reasonably complete information; 2) a small business debtor's interest that required reports be easy and inexpensive to complete; and 3) the interest of all parties that the required reports help such debtor to understand such debtor's financial condition and plan such debtor's future. n6

The requirement in section 308 that small business debtors file periodic reports does not take effect until 60 days after the necessary rules and forms have been prescribed under 28 U.S.C. § 2075. n7

Periodic Reports

Section 308(b) requires small businesses to file periodic financial and other reports, but it does not specify either what period of time the report is to cover or when and how often the report must be filed. Section 586(a)(7)(A)(iii) of title 28 provides that one of the United States Trustee's duties is to explain the debtor's obligations to file monthly operating reports and other required reports, but the scope and timing of the reports will be left to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and perhaps also to scheduling orders entered in connection with status conferences held pursuant to section 105(d)(1).

Uncertainty about the definition of a small business debtor may cause difficulty for some chapter 11 debtors in determining whether or not they must file the periodic reports required by section 308. A chapter 11 debtor's status as a small business debtor as that term is defined in section 101, n8 depends in part on whether or not a creditors' committee is appointed and on whether or not an appointed committee is sufficiently active and representative to provide oversight of the debtor. Creditors' committees are, pursuant to section 1102(a)(1), supposed to be appointed in every chapter 11 case, but in actual practice the committees are rarely established in smaller cases.

Small businesses in chapter 11 cases are frequently reorganized on a fast track, and that practice, which no doubt will continue under the 2005 Act, may determine how often periodic reports must be filed. n9 For example, if the court required a small business debtor to file a plan within 90 days after the order for relief, monthly reports would be more appropriate than quarterly reports because a quarterly report of the debtor's postpetition activities might not be due until after the conclusion of the confirmation hearing.

The court has discretion with respect to distribution and publication of reports. Rule 2015(d) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure provides that in a chapter 11 case the court may direct that copies of reports, such as those required by section 308, be mailed to creditors, equity security holders, and indentured trustees, and that summaries of the reports be published. n10

Required Financial Reports for Small Business Debtors

Profitability Report. Section 308(b)(1) of title 11 requires a small business debtor to file a report regarding the debtor's profitability, defined loosely in section 308(a) as the amount of money that the debtor has earned or lost during current and recent fiscal periods. There are many levels of profitability analysis, but given the preference expressed in section 435 of the 2005 Act for forms that are easy and inexpensive to complete, the requirement will probably be simply a basic profit and loss statement reflecting total sales or revenue less cost of goods sold less operating expenses. n11 In section 308 the current and recent fiscal periods to be covered by the profitability report are not specified. It is not yet clear whether the reports should include prebankruptcy activity or will be limited to the debtor's postpetition operations.

Cash Receipts and Disbursements Reports. Subsections 308(b)(2) and (3) require the debtor to file periodic reports that include reasonable approximations of the debtor's projected cash receipts and cash disbursements over a reasonable period and comparisons of actual cash receipts and disbursements. Although section 435(a) requires the Judicial Conference of the United States to propose bankruptcy rules and official forms directing a small business debtor to file periodic reports that include the debtor's cash receipts and disbursements, sections 308(b)(2) and 308(b)(3) do not specifically require the filing of a report of actual cash receipts and disbursements, except as part of a comparison with the debtor's projected cash receipts and disbursements. The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure may further require a report of actual cash receipts and disbursements for a period before which projections are made, or may require that projections be filed with or shortly after the petition is filed. n12

Other Required Financial Reports. Pursuant to Code section 521(a)(1)(B)(ii), all debtors must file, unless the court orders otherwise, a schedule of current income and current expenditures. The 2005 Act amended section 521 to require all debtors to file, unless otherwise ordered by the court, a statement of the amount of monthly net income, itemized to show how the amount is calculated and a statement disclosing any reasonably anticipated increase in income or expenditures over the 12-month period following the date of the filing of the petition. n13 Although this subsection presumably was intended to apply only to consumer debtors in chapter 7 and 13 cases, its application will extend to debtors in possession in chapter 11 as well. n14 The 2005 Act also amended title 28 to require the Attorney General to issue rules and uniform forms for periodic reports by debtors in possession or trustees in cases under chapter 11 of title 11, including periodic reports showing cash receipts, cash disbursements and profitability of the debtor for the most recent period and cumulatively since the date of the order for relief. n15

Reports of Compliance

Statement of Material Compliance with Postpetition Requirements. A small business debtor must file a periodic report stating that it is in compliance in all material respects with requirements imposed by the Bankruptcy Code and by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. n16 The requirements would include both those required of small business debtors under section 1116, and those imposed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure to implement the uniform reporting requirements of section 308(a). Additionally, the small business debtor must file a periodic report stating that it is timely filing tax returns and other required government filings.

What is meant by required government filings is not clear, but it could include such things as statutorily required payments toward workers' compensation insurance. The statute appears to contemplate required filings that, like tax returns, involve payments of some kind. However, depending on the nature of the debtor's business operations, other types of filings will often be required as a condition of operation by federal, state or municipal authorities. For example, documentation of compliance with environmental or health care statutes and regulations will be necessary for a debtor doing business as a chemical manufacturer or a health care provider. There can be little disagreement that some required government filings are more important than others, given the purposes they serve, but the obligation to file does not make exceptions for required government filings that the debtor may consider to be insignificant.

The compliance report must also state whether the debtor is paying taxes and other administrative expenses when due. Paying taxes entitled to an administrative priority is one of a small business debtor's duties under section 1116(6)(B), and failure to pay taxes is cause for dismissing a case or converting the case to chapter 7 under section 1112(b)(4)(I). Paying administrative expenses, however, is not an enumerated duty of a small business debtor under section 1116, and it is not specifically identified as a cause for dismissing or converting a case to chapter 7 under section 1112(b).

Disclosure of Noncompliance and Debtor's Plans for Cure. If a debtor is not in compliance with the debtor's requirements under the Bankruptcy Code or Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, or is not filing tax returns and other required government filings or paying taxes and other administrative expenses, the debtor must identify the failures and state how, at what cost, and when the debtor intends to remedy the failures. n17

Other Required Compliance Reports. The 2005 Act amended title 28 to require the Attorney General to issue rules and uniform forms for periodic reports by debtors in possession or trustees in cases under chapter 11 of [this title], including periodic reports showing compliance with title 11, [and] whether or not tax returns and tax payments since the date of the order for relief [have] been timely filed and made. n18

Disclosure of Matters in the Best Interests of the Debtor and Creditors, and in the Public Interest

Section 308(b)(4)(C) requires a small business debtor to file a periodic report regarding such other matters as are in the best interests of the debtor and creditors, and in the public interest in fair and efficient procedures under chapter 11 of this title. n19 This requirement is so vague as to be useless. Because failure to comply may have severe consequences, n20 the requirement may lead to unnecessary litigation.

The specifics of what must be disclosed under this subsection may be the subject of scheduling orders crafted for the needs of each case. Periodic reports under this subsection might include an aging of a manufacturer's accounts receivable, a listing of a construction company's new construction contracts, or the progress of litigation.

Privacy Implications of Periodic Reports

All the reports required by section 308(b) are filed with the court, not merely with the United States trustee or the bankruptcy administrator. They consequently become part of the public record and are open to examination. n21 An entity may be protected, however, at the discretion of the court with respect to a trade secret or confidential research, development or commercial information. n22 A debtor when filing the reports also must observe the privacy protections afforded by the Bankruptcy Code. n23

For a complete discussion of Code section 308, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 308 (Mathew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Pub. L. No. 109-8 (2005).

n2 Small business debtor is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 101(51D), added by Pub. L. No. 108-9, § 432(a) (2005).

n3 See 3 United States Trustee Manual, Chapter 11 Case Administration (1998); United States Bankruptcy Administrator, E.D.N.C., Discussion of Duties of Chapter 11 Debtor in Possession under Local Bankruptcy Rule No. 4002-1(b), EDNC, available at www.nceba.uscourts.gov; E.D.N.C. Local Bankr. R. 4002-1 (listing debtor duties).

n4 The United States Trustee has the obligation to supervise the administration of chapter 11 cases, 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(3), and in small business cases must review and monitor diligently the debtor's activities, to identify as promptly as possible whether the debtor will be unable to confirm a plan, 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(7)(C). The United States Trustee must take these actions to ensure that all of debtor's reports are properly and timely filed. 28 U.S.C. § 586(a)(3)(D). The bankruptcy administrators in North Carolina and Alabama supervise the administration of cases under chapters 7, 11, 12 and 13 of title 11. 3 Admin. Office of the Courts, Guide to Judiciary Policies & Procedures, § A, ch. 9, part E, ex. E-1 § 3.01 (1992).

n5 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 435(a) (2005).

n6 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 435(b) (2005).

n7 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(b) (2005); see Collier on Bankruptcy 308.07 (Matthew Bender)

n8 See Collier on Bankruptcy 101.51D (Matthew Bender)

n9 The National Bankruptcy Review Commission specifically recommended that in addition to enactment of uniform filing and confirmation deadlines through the process of bankruptcy reform, bankruptcy judges also should continue to use modern case-management techniques in all small business cases to further reduce cost and delay. National Bankruptcy Review Comm'n, Bankruptcy: The Next Twenty Years--National Bankruptcy Review Commission Final Report (1997).

n10 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2015(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy ch. 2015 (Matthew Bender)

n11 This is the type of profitability report that has been required by United States Trustees and by bankruptcy administrators. See 3 United States Trustee Manual, Chapter 11 Case Administration (1998); United States Bankruptcy Administrator, E.D.N.C., Discussion of Duties of Chapter 11 Debtor in Possession under Local Bankruptcy Rule No. 4002-1(b), EDNC, available at www.nceba.uscourts.gov.

n12 Section 1116(1)(A), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 436(a) (2005), and effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005, requires a debtor in possession in a small business case to file, with its petition, the debtor's most recent cash-flow statements. United States Trustees and bankruptcy administrators routinely require chapter 11 debtors in possession to file monthly reconciliations of their bank accounts. See 3 United States Trustee Manual, 3-2.7; United States Bankruptcy Administrator, E.D.N.C., Discussion of Duties of Chapter 11 Debtor in Possession under Local Bankruptcy Rule No. 4002-1(b), EDNC, available at www.nceba.uscourts.gov.

n13 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1)(B)(v) & (vi), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 315(b)(1) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n14 Section 315 of the 2005 Act, which amended section 521 to include these reports, is entitled Giving Creditors Fair Notice in Chapters 7 and 13.

n15 28 U.S.C. § 589b(a)(2) & (4), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 602(a) (2005).

n16 11 U.S.C. § 308(b)(4)(A)(i), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a) (2005).

n17 11 U.S.C. § 308(B)(4)(B), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a) (2005).

n18 28 U.S.C. § 589b(a)(2) & (5), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 602(a) (2005).

n19 11 U.S.C. § 308(b)(4)(C), added by Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 434(a) (2005).

n20 The unexcused failure to timely file a report constitutes cause for the dismissal or conversion of the case. 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(4)(F). Grounds for dismissal or conversion of a chapter 11 case are also grounds for appointing a trustee or examiner. 11 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(3).

n21 11 U.S.C. § 107(a).

n22 11 U.S.C. § 107(b)(1).

n23 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 112, 332, 351. The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure also address privacy concerns and the additional rules that will be implemented in connection with the new sections and with the E-Government Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-347 (2002).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

194 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Fraudulent Involuntary Bankr. Filings under Section 303(l) of the Bankr. Code

2008 Emerging Issues 907

Collier on Fraudulent Involuntary Bankruptcy Filings under Section 303(l) of the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 9, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 303(l), added in 2005, is designed to address a specific category of involuntary filings that are improper--those filed against public officials or private individuals. This new section, together with changes to 18 U.S.C. § 157, makes it clear that wrongful involuntary filings against individuals will lead to serious consequences for the offenders and deter such filings.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE:

Bankruptcy Code section 303(l), added in 2005, n1 is designed to address a specific category of involuntary filings that are improper--those filed against public officials or private individuals. Since the Code was enacted in 1978, some people have used section 303 as a means of harassment; this was an effective technique in the sense that even if the wrongful cases were dismissed (after effort to be sure), they resulted in serious consequences for the victim of the wrongful filing. n2 Those consequences included the listing of the bankruptcy filing on credit reports and in other public databases, including those of the bankruptcy courts. This new section, together with changes to 18 U.S.C. § 157, makes it clear that wrongful involuntary filings against individuals will lead to serious consequences for the offenders n3 and deter such filings.

Background. Section 303(i) provides that entities wronged by involuntary filings can seek relief, including costs and in appropriate circumstances, punitive damages. n4 However, section 303(i) is limited to monetary recovery. With the growth of access to public records and the serious consequences that can flow from the data in these records, the remedies in section 303(i) were determined to be inadequate to address wrongful involuntary case filings. The amendments to 18 U.S.C. § 157 also make it clear that wrongful involuntary filings should be punished. Two recent trends--information access and use of litigation to terrorize--militated in favor of the 2005 amendments to section 303 and title 18.

Requirement for Sealing. Section 303(l) provides that the records of a fraudulent involuntary filing and all references thereto can be sealed if certain requirements are met. n5 First, pursuant to section 303(l)(1)(A), sealing can occur only in cases in which the filing was false or there were materially false, fictitious or fraudulent statements. Second, pursuant to section 303(l)(1)(B), sealing can only occur in cases in which the victim of the wrongful filing is an individual. Records of false filings or in cases with false, fictitious or fraudulent statements in filings involving corporate or partnership debtors will not be sealed, at least pursuant to section 303(l). n6 This presents a situation similar to that which exists under section 362(k)(1) in which actions for willful violations of the automatic stay give rise to actual damages and punitive damages only in cases involving individuals. Some courts, despite the delimiting language in section 362(k)(1), have permitted recovery by corporate debtors who have been wronged by willful stay violations. n7 Although it is too early to tell, a similar result could occur in section 303(l), permitting corporate and other nonindividual debtors to seal records. n8 With the advent of online filing and increased public access to information through the Internet, a wrongful filing can also negatively impact nonindividuals. n9 Other protections with respect to data that may harm an individual are contained in new section 107(c). n10 These are in addition

To the sealing provisions in section 303(l).

The third requirement for sealing, contained in section 303(l)(1)(C), provides that the offending case must be dismissed. Also, the desired remedy--sealing of records--can occur only upon a motion of the debtor. This effort will cost the debtor money for attorney's fees which perhaps will be part of any recovery awarded under section 303(i). The limitation on who can move for relief under section 303(l) means that others related to the debtor or impacted by the wrongful filing against the debtor cannot be movants. One can picture a scenario in which a separated spouse or an adult child with the same name might want, and be fiscally able, to move for a sealing of the records. However, the latter is not permitted under section 303(l).

The key operative words within section 303(l)(1), namely, false, fictitious and fraudulent, are not defined. Courts will then turn to definitions of these terms under state law.

Section 303(l)(1) permits the sealing of more than the petition itself. References to the wrongful petition can also be sealed. This was intended to include reference to docket sheets and other pleadings that might have been filed, including motions to dismiss or answers to the involuntary petition.

Prohibition of Consumer Credit Reporting of Dismissed Case. Section 303(l)(2) provides an additional remedy for those individuals harmed by a wrongful involuntary filing, n11 namely the nonreporting to a consumer credit reporting agency as that term is defined in section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA"). More specifically, subsection (2) only applies in cases involving individual debtors. Next, dismissal by the court of the wrongful case is a prerequisite to nonreporting. The nonreporting is discretionary; a court is permitted, but not required, to order a prohibition on reporting. It is not specified who can be the movant under this situation, although it is not limited to the debtor as is the case in section 303(l)(1).

The value of nonreporting cannot be underestimated. Section 605 of the FCRA permits cases filed under title 11 of the United States Code to appear on consumer reports (as that term is defined in section 603 of the FCRA) n12 for 10 years from the order for relief or the date of adjudication. n13 That has generally been determined to mean that all bankruptcy cases can remain on an individual's credit report for 10 years from the date of discharge. The FCRA does not require that the report designate the chapter under which relief was sought or whether the relief was sought voluntarily or involuntarily. This means that a person reviewing a credit report cannot distinguish between the bankruptcy of an individual who voluntarily sought debt relief and the victim of a wrongful involuntary filing.

There are additional implications of an improper bankruptcy on a credit report. A recent bankruptcy on a credit report, without full information, can affect one's credit score negatively. This is significant because a credit score is that all important number that determines the price consumers pay for credit, and it also has applicability in terms of obtaining insurance and employment. n14 Until recently, many individuals did not know about credit scoring, and until 2002, credit scores were not generally available to individuals. So, many individuals did not find out about the credit-scoring consequences of improper involuntary bankruptcy filings until they sought and were denied new credit.

With the increasing access to credit scores and the issuance of free credit reports annually to those individuals who request them pursuant to the amendments to the FCRA--namely, the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act signed into law in December 2003 (FACTA)--individuals are able to determine the credit consequences of bankruptcy filings. n15

Nonreporting, the action contemplated by section 303(l)(2), is different from expungement or even sealing. Consumers are entitled to dispute inaccurate information in their credit reports pursuant to section 611 of the FCRA. However, this correction procedure, even through improved by the FACTA amendments, is still a difficult process. n16 It is also time consuming and costly, particularly if one needs legal representation to vindicate one's rights. Moreover, by the time the erroneous entries are fixed, the needed loan or job may have evaporated. Even if credit reporting agencies were to expunge data with respect to improper bankruptcy filings, the erroneous data existed in the system (even if briefly) and there are numerous credit reporting agencies that may have incorporated the information into their own databases. Although there are certain major credit reporting agencies that are now well-known (Experien, Equifax and Trans Union), there are myriad other reporting agencies, making expungement of released data a practical nightmare. n17 Section 303(l)(2) permits nonreporting, then, which remains an unusual step in that most matters of public record can and are disclosed on credit reports. But, it is not as good as solution as it might appear.

Despite the well-meaning nature of this aspect of section 303(l), it does not completely fix the problem of credit reporting of improper involuntary bankruptcy filings. This is because it is possible for there to be reporting before the improper case is dismissed and/or the records sealed pursuant to section 303(l)(1). Both paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (l) require dismissal before the designated remedy may be sought. By the time dismissal occurs, the data may already be in the credit reporting system. This is in part a problem of electronic filing of all bankruptcy records. As soon as a case is filed electronically, which most cases will be in the federal bankruptcy court system, the information will be accessible. n18 One suggestion to ameliorate this problem would be for the courts to agree that involuntary filings should not enter the electronic database system of PACER until a decision has been made as to whether the case should be dismissed or an order for relief entered. This would protect information from being released. How this could work as a practical matter is another issue but it must be remembered that there are actually very few involuntary cases which would ease the practical burden.

Amendments to Title 18. The 2005 Act also amended 18 U.S.C. § 157, one of the bankruptcy crimes provisions. In particular, section 157 was amended to reference fraudulent involuntary bankruptcy petitions in each of the section's three separate provisions. n19 Arguably, section 157 already covered fraudulently filed involuntary cases within its ambit. Hence, the legislative change may provide more in the way of emphasis than change. What is interesting is that subsections (1) and (2) of section 157 address the wrongs of the person who files the fraudulent petition or a fraudulent document in conjunction with a fraudulent petition, activities that seem to be targeted to the actual wrongdoer--the petitioning creditors. However, subsection (3) of 157 can be read more broadly. It seeks to punish a person who makes a false statement or fraudulent representation including with respect to a fraudulent involuntary petition. This could extend the potential criminal activity beyond the person actually filing documents with the court, such as a petitioning creditor's lawyer or other coconspirator.

Expungement. New section 303(l)(3)²⁰ provides for expungement of bankruptcy records resulting from a violation of sections 152 and 157 of title 18 but only upon expiration of the criminal statute of limitations (which is five years under section 3282 of title 18). The expungement can be ordered only by the court if sought by the debtor and for good cause shown. This is something of an odd section in that individual debtors can move to get their records sealed without any time limitations but for expungement they must wait five years. Perhaps this is because expungement is a more serious and permanent remedy than sealing. It is worth observing that expungement may be a better way of purging databases of information related to an involuntary filing, although the practicalities of expungement are complex. This section is ambiguous in its wording and references expungement of any records related to a petition filed under section 303(l). The question is whether any "only relates to bankruptcy records or whether it could be read more broadly to reference any other records that mention the fraudulent filing (such as employment records, divorce records or any other official record in existence).

For a complete discussion of Code section 303, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 303 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005. While designated as (l), it would have been more correctly designated as (k), since original subsection (k) was repealed by the 2005 amendments. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.17 (Matthew Bender).

n2 This is reflected in the legislative history to section 332, creating section 303(l) of title 11. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. 84 -86 (2005). This legislative history notes an earlier, but not identical, initiative passed by the House of Representatives in 2003. See H.R. 1529, 108th Cong. (2003).

n3 See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n4 See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.15 (Matthew Bender).

n5 Subsection (l) was added in 2005. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n6 Such relief could, however, be sought under section 105.

n7 See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n8 As noted, such relief may be available under section 105.

n9 See Peter C. Alexander & Kelly Jo Slone, Thinking About the Private Matters in Public Documents:

Bankruptcy Privacy in an Electronic Age, 75 Am. Bankr. L.J. 437 (2001); J. Rich Leonard, Having Thought About Private Matters: The Federal Courts' Initial Response, 77 Am. Bankr. L. J. 9 (2003).

n10 Section 107(c) was added in 2005. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 234(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n11 Subsection (l) was added in 2005. See Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n12 15 U.S.C. § 1681a.

n13 The Fair Credit Reporting Act appears at 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 -1681t.

n14 For a detailed discussion of the role of both credit scoring and credit reporting in today's consumer financial markets, see Evan Hendricks, Credit Scores and Credit Reports: How the System Really Works, What You Can Do (2004).

n15 Pub. L. No. 108-159 (2003).

n16 See Peter C. Alexander, Identity Theft and Bankruptcy Expungement, 77 Am. Bankr. L.J. 409 (2003).

n17 For a sample of the large number of credit reporting agencies, see www.creditworthy.com/providers/agency.asp?ID=15.

n18 See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 5005(a)(2). According to the Administrative office of the United States, most bankruptcy courts have implemented or are in the process of implementing the case management/electronic case filing system. See http://www.uscourts.gov/cmefc/cmefc_faqs.html.

n19 Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 332(c) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

195 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on Partnership Bankr. Filings Under Section 303(b)(3) of the Bankr. Code

2008 Emerging Issues 911

Collier on Partnership Bankruptcy Filings Under Section 303(b)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 9, 2007

SUMMARY: Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)(3) contains very specific provisions regarding partnership filings. In section 303(b), paragraph (3) differs from paragraphs (1) and (2) in that it eliminates the requirements regarding the number, amount and nature of the claims of petitioning entities.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)(3) contains very specific provisions regarding partnership filings. As a general matter, a partnership is an eligible debtor under section 303(a) based on the definition of the term person. n1 When state law provides that a partnership dissolves when a bankruptcy petition is filed against one of its partners, that partnership in dissolution should still be considered a person for the purposes of an involuntary bankruptcy petition filing. n2 Otherwise, dissolved partnerships could never file chapter 7 or 11 cases (although there is conflicting authority regarding a chapter 11 petition seeking reorganization). The term partnership, unlike the term corporation, n3 is not specifically defined in the Code. The definition of corporation includes a small category of partnerships, but the statutory language and the legislative history make it very clear that limited and general partnerships are not corporations. n4 However, if the partnership fits within the definition of farmer, it will be ineligible. n5

In section 303(b), paragraph (3) differs from paragraphs (1) and (2) in that it eliminates the requirements regarding the number, amount and nature of the claims of petitioning entities. This makes involuntary filings easier under paragraph (3), since there are fewer threshold requirements to be alleged and proved by the petitioners. However, elimination of the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) does not eliminate the need for the petitioning entities to satisfy the requirements of section 303(h). n6 The petitioning entity would still need to allege and prove that the debtor was not generally paying its debts as they became due. The requirement of a bona fide as to liability or amount dispute would reappear under section 303(h), although it need not be addressed under section 303(b)(3).

General Requirements under Subsection (b)(3)

Subsection (b)(3) provides that an involuntary case can be filed by (a) fewer than all the general partners or (b) if all the general partners are in bankruptcy, a general partner, trustee of the general partner or holder of a claim against the partnership. These specific provisions do not preclude an involuntary filing by a partnership's creditors if those creditors satisfy the requirements of section 303(b)(1) or (2). Under Bankruptcy Rule 1004, a filing under section 303(b)(3) requires that the petitioning partners or creditors cause a copy of the petition to be sent or served on nonpetitioning general partners. The failure to effect service means an order for relief cannot be entered because there is no personal jurisdiction. n7 Rule 1004 does not address partnership filings under section 303(b)(1) and (2). However, a prudent course of conduct is to send or serve the involuntary petition on the general partners.

General Partners as Petitioners

Under section 303(b)(3)(A), if all the general partners do not consent to a voluntary filing, a filing by fewer than all of the general partners is treated as an involuntary case. This provision is particularly useful when there is disagreement among the general partners. A general partner may want to file a petition when that partner believes the other partners have committed acts detrimental to the partnership and its creditors, particularly if those acts could result in personal liability of the petitioning partner. The petitioning partner would want the filing so that there could be an orderly liquidation and administration of the partnership, including the recovery of avoidable transfers and invalidation of liens; all of this would serve to increase the size of the distributable estate. The legislative history indicates that such a filing is permissible notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary between partners or because of state or local law. n8 Of course, the general partner must actually be a general partner; otherwise, standing to bring the involuntary can be challenged. n9 The determination is based on the underlying agreements among the parties, as governed by state law. n10 Moreover, purchase of an interest in a partnership does not make the acquirer a substitute partner for purposes of filing an involuntary case. n11 The non-joining general partner may contest the involuntary filing. n12 A filing under section 303(b)(3)(A) does not eliminate the requirement that the filing general partner satisfy the requirements of section 303(h), namely that the partnership is generally not paying its debts as they become due and those debts are not subject to bona fide disputes as to liability or amount. On occasion, the actual filing is commenced as a voluntary case but it is treated as an involuntary petition under section 303(b)(3)(A). n13

A word of caution to lawyers counseling a failing partnership: If one of the partners determines to file an involuntary case after the lawyer has conferred with the partners about filing a voluntary bankruptcy case, then that lawyer cannot represent the petitioning partner; to do so is a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. n14

When All of the General Partners Are Debtors

Under section 303(b)(3)(B), if an order for relief has been entered against all of the general partners, an involuntary case can be commenced by one of three entities: a general partner of the partnership; the trustee of the general partner; or a holder of a claim against the partnership. Subparagraph (B) differs from section 303(b)(3)(A) in that it addresses the situation in which general partners are in bankruptcy. The petitioning entity must still prove the requirements of section 303(h). However, the petitioning partners do not need to satisfy the requirements of subsections 303(b)(1) and (2).

Intersection of Partnership and Bankruptcy Law

The intersection between the Bankruptcy Code and state partnership law is by no means clear, and there are many open issues involving partnership bankruptcies. n15 Involuntary partnership cases raise the tension and even conflict between federal bankruptcy law and state partnership law (as well as the underlying partnership agreements). The problems become evident in the context of section 303 if the petitioning general partner is a debtor.

Debtor General Partner. There is a question whether a debtor general partner is eligible to file an involuntary petition against the partnership under section 303. (By its terms, section 303(b)(3)(B) permits such a filing if all of the general partners, as distinguished from one general partner, are in bankruptcy.) State partnership law (or the underlying partnership agreement) could restrict the power of a bankrupt general partner. That general partner's bankruptcy would cause the dissolution of the partnership, under either or both state partnership law or the terms of the partnership agreement. This arguably would divest the bankrupt petitioning general partner of all authority over the partnership. This was the position of the court in In re Sunset Developers.ⁿ¹⁶ There is authority that a debtor general partner cannot file an involuntary case against the partnership.ⁿ¹⁷

There is a powerful counter-argument. Nothing in the Bankruptcy Code precludes a petitioning general partner who is in bankruptcy from commencing a case. Indeed, section 303(b)(3)(B) explicitly contemplates a situation in which all of the general partners are in bankruptcy. Paragraph (B) seems to recognize that, at least when all of the general partners are in bankruptcy, there would need to be some entity capable of putting the partnership into bankruptcy. There is case law supporting the position that a general partner's bankruptcy does not divest that partner of all authority with respect to the partnership.ⁿ¹⁸ There is also case law explicitly permitting a debtor general partner to file an involuntary case against the partnership.ⁿ¹⁹

While it is true that bankruptcy law controls who may file an involuntary petition, state partnership law controls who has the power to file. Under state law, partnership dissolution may not actually terminate the partnership, suggesting that a bankruptcy filing would still have meaning. The process of liquidating (as distinguished from running) the partnership remains. On the other hand, if state partnership law provides that a general partner ceases to be a general partner if that partner is in bankruptcy, the Bankruptcy Code could be seen as, in essence, usurping state partnership law. The question in that instance is whether the cessation" as a general partner is designed to prohibit prospective business activity, namely, acting as a manager; if so, state partnership law does not necessarily preclude the winding-up.ⁿ²⁰

Looking to Sections 365 and 541 for Guidance. The Supremacy Clause argument does not completely answer the question of whether a debtor general partner can file against the partnership. If state law specifically addresses who is an eligible petitioner and that provision conflicts with the Bankruptcy Code, the Code would prevail as federal law would preempt state law. However, bankruptcy law cannot create state substantive partnership rights, vesting parties with powers they would not otherwise have. The question then is what power does a general partner have when that partner is a debtor? Sections 365 and 541 are instructive in answering this question. There is general consensus that a partnership agreement is an executory contract under section 365.ⁿ²¹ That suggests that the debtor general partner's estate may have an interest in the partnership. If it does, then that general partner should be able to preserve that interest, either in its own name or through a trustee, for the benefit of its estate. Moreover, the restrictions based on the general partner's bankruptcy would be unenforceable under section 541(c).ⁿ²²

However, even if a partnership agreement is an executory contract, the nature of that contract raises two key issues that affect the scope of the property interest: (1) Can the partnership agreement be assumed or is it a personal service contract (which would preclude assumption); and (2) Is the bankruptcy termination provision of the partnership agreement an unenforceable ipso facto clause under section 365(e)?ⁿ²³ If the partnership agreement cannot be assumed and the ipso facto clause is enforceable, the scope of the debtor general partner's property interest is virtually nil. Since current case law has not resolved these issues as yet under sections 365 and 541, uncertainty remains in section 303. Once resolved, these questions will help resolve the question of a debtor general partner's power to file an involuntary case against the partnership.

Resolution Options. There are clearly merits to both sides of the argument. In resolving the tension between partnership law and bankruptcy law, the better argument is that while partnership law should govern who has the power to act on behalf of a partnership outside of bankruptcy, the debtor general partner should have the power to file a petition against the partnership. If it cannot, then the bankruptcy of the general partner would effectively preclude, at least in some situations, a partnership bankruptcy. If the partnership is in financial difficulty, then recourse to the federal bankruptcy laws should not be precluded by virtue of the bankruptcy status of the general partner and state partnership laws. The power of the general partner, however, remains a thorny issue and one with respect to which legislative change may be the only workable solution.

Limited Liability Partnerships

Limited liability partnerships (LLPs²⁴), introduced into the legal system in the early 1990s, afford partners at least some degree of limited liability protection. Generally, LLPs are formed by partnerships of attorneys, accountants or other professionals. State law treats LLPs as general partnerships. n24 LLP status is granted to the partnership when the partners in a general partnership register with the secretary of state as an LLP. n25 The nature and extent of the limitation on liability of partners varies from state to state, but generally includes protection from liability for the professional negligence of the other partners. In some states, partners in an LLP enjoy full vicarious liability protection from partnership debts similar to the protection given to shareholders of a corporation, and in some states a partner is not a proper party to a suit against the partnership. n26

A question that may arise is whether fewer than all general partners in an LLP may file an involuntary petition against a partnership under section 303(b)(3). Though they were not in existence at the time the Bankruptcy Code was drafted, LLPs in states that grant partners full limited liability protection, similar to the liability limitations afforded shareholders of a corporation, fall within the Code's definition of corporation, which includes a partnership association organized under a law that makes only the capital subscribed responsible for the debts of such association. n27 It could be argued that, by defining corporation to include such partnerships, Congress intended that they should not be treated as partnerships under the Code. Moreover, in view of its purpose, which is to protect general partners who are exposed to personal liability for partnership obligations by enabling them to preserve the value of partnership assets through bankruptcy, section 303(b)(3) should not be available to LLP partners who are not personally liable for partnership debts. In this context, it would not make sense to distinguish partners in an LLP from shareholders in a corporation.

However, in states where LLP partners are protected from liability only with respect to vicarious liability for malpractice claims of other partners, or protection from liability is otherwise not as extensive as that afforded shareholders of a corporation, the LLP should be treated under the Code as a partnership, not as a corporation. A 1994 amendment to section 723(a) of the Code supports the argument that, at least where partners do not have the same kind of limited liability as that enjoyed by corporate shareholders, the LLP should be treated under the Code as a partnership. The amendment clarified that, in a chapter 7 case of a partnership in which the partnership property is insufficient to pay all partnership debts, the trustee shall have a claim against general partners to the extent that under applicable nonbankruptcy law such general partner is personally liable for such deficiency. n28 The legislative history of the amendment states that the purpose of the amendment was to clarify that a partner of a registered LLP would be liable under section 723(a) only to the extent the partner would be personally liable for a deficiency according to the applicable LLP statute. n29 Because section 723(a) is a provision that deals only with partnerships, it appears that Congress understood and intended that LLPs in which partners have liability for at least some debts of the partnership would be treated as partnerships under the Code.

For these reasons, if an LLP is registered in a state that grants its general partners the same type of limited liability afforded to shareholders of a corporation, rather than merely protecting them from vicarious liability for negligence or other acts of wrongdoing by another partner, section 303(b)(3) should not be applicable. However, if the applicable LLP statute affords general partners a more limited form of protection so that partners would be personally liable for at least some debts of the partnership, section 303(b)(3) should be applicable so that fewer than all general partners may file an involuntary petition. n30

Limited Liability Companies

Most states have enacted statutes that permit the formation of limited liability companies (LLCs), a relatively new type of entity whose popularity has been increasing. LLCs are hybrids of partnerships and corporations, having certain features of both. n31 LLCs are not mentioned in the Bankruptcy Code, which is not surprising because state statutes permitting their formation did not exist at the time the Code was drafted. Nonetheless, LLCs are persons eligible for relief under the Code. n32

An important feature of an LLC is that it is owned by members, rather than partners or shareholders, and the members enjoy the same general limited liability protection as that afforded to shareholders of a corporation. Though a few bankruptcy courts have analogized members of an LLC to partners of a partnership in certain contexts, such as when considering the effect of a member's bankruptcy on its continued exercise of membership rights, n33 LLCs are not partnerships and members are not general partners. n34 Therefore, section 303(b)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code, which provides that fewer than all general partners may file an involuntary petition against a partnership, should not be available to members of an LLC. Moreover, it would not further the purpose of section 303(b)(3), which is to protect general partners who are personally liable for debts of the partnership, to make it available to LLC members who have limited liability protection similar to that afforded shareholders of a corporation. n35

Trustee of a Partnership and the General Partner

Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 303(b) permit a creditor to file an involuntary case against a partnership, assuming the requirements of those paragraphs are satisfied. n36 Creditors are also permitted to file an involuntary case against a general partner under paragraphs (1) and (2), again assuming the requirements of those paragraphs are satisfied. However, if a trustee of a debtor general partnership seeks to file an involuntary petition against a general partner, the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) n37 would need to be met and that could prove to be an insurmountable hurdle. As trustee of the partnership, the trustee would hold a claim against the partner that could be administered outside of bankruptcy. However, it may be more expeditious to administer the general partner's assets under the bankruptcy law. If the debtor general partner has more than 11 creditors, other creditors may be unwilling to join the involuntary petition. It is also possible that the trustee's claim is the subject of a bona fide dispute. Arguably, it may be contingent as to liability in some situations. One possible area of legislative change is to create a new subsection within section 303 relating specifically to trustees of a partnership and enabling them to commence an involuntary case against a general partner without satisfying the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2). However, the requirements of section 303(h) would still need to be satisfied.

For a complete discussion of Code section 303, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 303 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n2

2. In re Hagerstown Fiber L.P., 226 B.R. 353 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998); In re Shea & Gould, 38 C.B.C.2d 1453, 1461, 214 B.R. 739, 745-46 n.3 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997). But see C-TC 9th Ave. P'ship v. Norton Co., 113 F.3d 1304, 38 C.B.C.2d 115 (2d Cir. 1997) (partnership in dissolution may not file a chapter 11 petition for reorganization; presumably an involuntary petition for the same purpose may not be filed against it, at least in the Second Circuit); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.05 (Matthew Bender).

n3

3. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n4

4. 11 U.S.C. § 101; H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 309-310 (1977); S. Rep. No. 95-989, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 22-23 (1978).

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.02[4][a] (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.14 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. In re Blutrich, Herman & Miller, 227 B.R. 53 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998).

n8

8. 124 Cong. Rec. H11,091 (daily ed. Sept. 28, 1978); 124 Cong. Rec. S17,407 (daily ed. Oct. 6, 1978).

n9

9. In re Pallet Reefer Co., 233 B.R. 687 (Bankr. E.D. La. 1999).

n10

10. Id.

n11

11. Sable v. Morgan Sangamon P'ship, 280 B.R. 217 (N.D. Ill. 2002).

n12

12. 11 U.S.C § 303(d); see Collier on Bankruptcy, 303.10 (Matthew Bender).

n13

13. See In re The Food Gallery at Valleybrook, 222 B.R. 480 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1998).

n14

14. In re Jones & McClain, LLP, 271 B.R. 473 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2001).

n15

15. See generally Calton J. Eibl, Strategies for Partners Under the Bankruptcy Code When the Partnership is Insolvent, 61 Am. Bankr. L.J. 37 (1987); Frank R. Kennedy, Partnerships and Partners Under the Bankruptcy Reform Act and the New (Proposed) Bankruptcy Rules, 27 St. Louis U. L.J. 507 (1983); Note, Partner Bankruptcy and Partnership Dissolution: Protecting the Terms of the Contract and Ensuring Predictability, 59 Fordham L. Rev. 619 (1991).

n16

16. 69 B.R. 710 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1987); see Phillips v. First City, Texas-Tyler, N.A. (In re Phillips), 966

F.2d 926 (5th Cir. 1992); Turner v. Lee (In re Minton Group), 27 B.R. 385 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983), aff'd, 11 C.B.C.2d 1442, 46 B.R. 222 (S.D.N.Y. 1985).

n17

17. Phillips v. First City, Texas-Tyler, N.A. (In re Phillips), 966 F.2d 926, 929-30 (5th Cir. 1992); In re Sunset Developers, 69 B.R. 710, 711-12 (Bankr. D. Idaho 1987).

n18

18. In re Clinton Court, 160 B.R. 57 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1993); In re Cardinal Indus., Inc., 116 B.R. 964 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990); In re Safren, 16 C.B.C.2d 315, 65 B.R. 566 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1986).

n19

19. In re BC & K Cattle Co., 84 B.R. 69 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1988); In re Corky Foods Corp., 18 C.B.C.2d 1087, 85 B.R. 903 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1988); see also In re Pallet Reefer Co., 233 B.R. 687 (Bankr. E.D. La. 1999).

n20

20. In re Cardinal Indus., Inc., 116 B.R. 964 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1990).

n21

21. Breeden v. Catron (In re Catron), 158 B.R. 624 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1992), aff'd, 158 B.R. 629 (E.D. Va. 1992), aff'd, 25 F.3d 1038 (4th Cir. 1994).

n22

22. In re Daugherty Constr. Inc., 188 B.R. 607 (Bankr. D. Nev. 1988); In re DeLuca, 194 B.R. 65 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996); JTB Enterprise L.C. v. D & B Venture, L.C. (In re DeLuca), 194 B.R. 79 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996).

n23

23. Summit Inv. and Dev. Corp. v. LeRoux, 69 F.3d 608 (1st Cir. 1995) (holding that it is not a personal service contract); Breeden v. Catron (In re Catron), 158 B.R. 624, 625 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1992) (holding that it is a personal service contract).

n24

24. See Larry E. Ribstein, Possible Futures for Unincorporated Firms, 64 U. Cin. L. Rev. 319, 343 (1996).

n25

25. Limited liability partnerships (LLPs) are formed when a general partner of a limited partnership files a similar certificate. This discussion of LLPs with respect to involuntary petitions and the applicability of section 303(b)(3) to LLPs would also apply to the filing of an involuntary petition against an LLP by fewer than all general partners.

n26

26. See Robert R. Keatinge et al., Limited Liability Partnerships: The Next Step in the Evolution of the Unincorporated Business Organization, 51 Bus. Law. 147 (1995); Larry E. Ribstein, Possible Futures for Unincorporated Firms, 64 U. Cin. L. Rev. 319, 343 (1996).

n27

27. 11 U.S.C. § 101(9)(A)(ii).

n28

28. 11 U.S.C. § 723(a).

n29

29. 140 Cong. Rec. H 10,767 (Oct. 4, 1994) (This section clarifies that a partner of a registered limited liability partnership would only be liable in bankruptcy to the extent a partner would be personally liable for a deficiency according to the registered limited liability statute under which the partnership was formed.).

n30

30. In at least one case, fewer than all general partners filed an involuntary petition against an LLP where the partners were personally liable for debts of the partnership, but the application of section 303(b)(3) was not questioned. See In re Jones & McClain, LLP, 271 B.R. 473 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 2001).

n31

31. See Michael D. Fielding, Preventing Voluntary and Involuntary Bankruptcy Petitions by Limited Liability Companies, 18 Bankr. Dev. J. 51 (2001); The Committee on Bankruptcy and Corporate Reorganization of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, Limited Liability Companies and Bankruptcy, 51 The Record 46 (1996); Jonathan R. Macey, The Limited Liability Company: Lessons for Corporate Law, 73 Wash. U.L.Q. 433 (1995); Thomas Blakemore, Limited Liability Companies and the Bankruptcy Code: A Technical Overview, 13 Am. Bankr. L.J. 12 (1994).

n32

32. In re ICLNDS Notes Acquisition, L.L.C., 259 B.R. 289 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2001); see 101.09, 301.04.

n33

33. See In re Deluca, 194 B.R. 65 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1996).

n34

34. Even if LLCs were considered partnerships, they would fall within the Code's definition of corporation, which includes a partnership association organized under a law that makes only the capital subscribed responsible for the debts of such association. 11 U.S.C. § 101.

n35

35. See Thomas F. Blakemore, Limited Liability Companies and the Bankruptcy Code: A Technical Review, 13 Am. Bankr. Inst. L.J. 12 (1994); Sally S. Neely, Partnerships and Partners and Limited Liability Companies and Members in Bankruptcy, 71 Am. Bankr. L.J. 271 (1997). For a fuller discussion of these issues, see Karen Gross, Kathryn R. Heidt & Lois R. Lupica, Legislative Messages and the Bankruptcy Code, U. Pitt. L. Rev. (forthcoming 2005).

n36

36. In re Elsub Corp., 15 C.B.C.2d 1256, 66 B.R. 172 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1986).

n37

37. In re Lamb, 10 C.B.C.2d 1298, 40 B.R. 689 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1984).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

196 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Collier on the Pre-Bankruptcy Counseling Requirement under the Bankruptcy Code

2008 Emerging Issues 912

Collier on the Pre-Bankruptcy Counseling Requirement under the Bankruptcy Code

By Collier

November 9, 2007

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis details the pre-bankruptcy counseling requirement under the Bankruptcy Code.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

ARTICLE: Who Must Obtain Counseling

Section 109(h), added as part of the 2005 Act, n1 provides that an individual (unless subject to one of the specified exceptions) may not be a debtor unless the individual has received, within 180 days preceding a bankruptcy filing, budget and credit counseling from an approved budget and credit counselor. Section 521(b), added as part of the 2005 Act n2 and addressing additional debtors' duties, provides, among other things, that an individual debtor filing for bankruptcy relief must file with the court a certificate describing the services received from an approved budget and credit counselor. The form of that certificate has not been determined. The minimum elements, if any, that must be contained within the form, have also not been identified.

Individual Debtors. The only debtors obligated to receive the prescribed pre-bankruptcy credit counseling are individuals. It does not matter under which chapter an individual is seeking relief; the counseling requirement is a prerequisite to relief in all chapters. No distinction is made among individual debtors to determine whether they would benefit from the mandated counseling; it is assumed that all individuals can benefit from this new ticket to access the bankruptcy process. n3

It is useful to consider why, if counseling is deemed so useful, it is not required of businesses, at least small businesses run by individuals who may lack financial acumen and a thorough sense of alternatives for their financial distress. One has to wonder whether the rationale for requiring this counseling has been consistently applied. Perhaps the real reason for the requirement is to curb the number of individuals who can access the bankruptcy system in the first instance by requiring that they receive counseling and, perhaps through counseling, pursue a non-bankruptcy alternative. The effectiveness of debt management plans, the option offered by many, although not all, consumer credit counseling agencies, has been questioned on more than a few occasions. It is possible that the requirement of credit counseling may delay the bankruptcy filing of some consumers and by the time they actually seek access to the bankruptcy system, dollars that could have been distributed to creditors will have been paid to the credit counseling agencies for their fees and expenses. n4 Some consumers in debt management plans may actually be in worse financial shape post-counseling than before they entered such a program.

Exceptions. In an earlier version of the 2005 Act, counseling was required of all individual debtors (unless there were insufficient approved counselors or exigent circumstances). n5 However, when the Senate considered S. 256 in 2005, a new provision was added that describes certain individual debtors who are not required to obtain the certificate of completion of pre-bankruptcy counseling. Under section 109(h)(4), a court can determine that because of incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a military combat zone, the requirements of section 109(h) should be deemed inapplicable. n6 Section 109(h)(4) defines incapacity and disability very narrowly.

Incapacity is defined as being incapable of realizing or making rational decisions by reason of mental illness or mental deficiency. Whether such an incapacitated person could be a debtor in the first instance, without a custodian acting on the person's behalf, is questionable. n7 Disability is defined as physical impairment of such a level that the individual cannot participate, after reasonable effort, in counseling in person or by telephone or through the Internet. n8 Because counseling is permitted in these alternative venues, an individual would have to be extraordinarily impaired to be incapable of even telephone or Internet counseling. Reasonable efforts is not a defined term and case law will need to flesh out its meaning. The final exception relates to those in active military duty--but only if they are in a combat zone. This, then, is a very limited exception.

Perhaps the most problematic feature of section 109(h)(4) is that individual debtors cannot obtain an exception without a court order. This suggests that a debtor would need to bring a motion to obtain an exception--which would likely require counsel. Consider, then, how difficult it might be for an incapacitated or disabled person or someone on active military duty in a combat zone to satisfy this requirement and what it would cost them to do so. In other words, there are exceptions but garnering their benefits seems to be onerous.

Providers of Credit Counseling

Section 111 provides that credit counseling can be conducted only by approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies. Section 111(a)(1) provides that the clerks of court are required to maintain a list of eligible approved agencies. This list must be publicly available, although section 111(a)(1) does not clarify the means by which it will be available. One would hope that the list of approved providers will be accessible at the courthouse as well as online and perhaps even via a telephone hotline.

Approval Process. The approval process rests in the hands of the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) pursuant to sections 111(b) and (c). The legislation does not clearly indicate who will make the approvals, namely the Executive Office for United States Trustees or the regional offices or some combination thereof (the most likely result). n9 A later reference specifically to the Executive Office for United States Trustees in section 111(d)(1)(D) suggests that when that office was implicated, it was specifically referenced. Nor is it clear within the statute whether approvals, by whoever made, will be done on a court-by-court basis, a region-by-region basis or a national basis. However, there is a suggestion in section 111(b)(3) that listings will on a district basis since that section speaks to entities not appearing on the initial district list. This suggests that whoever makes the decisions, those agencies approved will be listed by district; although not defined specifically, it appears that district means judicial district. For example, Web site listings for the offices of the United States trustee program are done by region and within the regions by judicial districts based on location. These are relevant questions in that there may be providers of credit counseling who have a broad national reach, and it is unclear whether, as a practical matter, they have to get approval from each court or each region or district (which would be cumbersome) or whether there can be some nationwide approval process. One can also anticipate a thorny issue if a credit counselor is approved by one district or one region but not approved by another.

Section 111(b) identifies three specific steps that must be followed by the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) in the context of approving nonprofit budget and credit planners. First, pursuant to section 111(b)(1), the United States trustee must have thoroughly reviewed the qualifications of the applicants for whom it can require additional information. While some of the specific qualifications are identified in section 111(c)(2), it is unclear what other qualifications might be assessed and what particular information might be solicited. n10 Neither the nature of what will be reviewed nor the relative weight given to various obtained information is specified. n11 One can assume that the Executive Office for United States Trustees will create some sort of checklist for its regional offices, unless all of the decisions, including initial vetting, are to be made at the national level.

Second, section 111(b)(2) provides that the United States trustee must have determined that the provisions contained more generally in section 111 have been met. For providers of pre-bankruptcy counseling, these are the requirements set forth in subsections 111(c)(1) and (2). The statutory language says the requirements must be fully satisfied, suggesting that the identified requirements are mandatory, not discretionary.

Third, section 111(b)(3) provides, in somewhat awkward language, that if a nonprofit budget and credit counselor does not appear immediately on the initial approved district list, the entity can have provisional approval for a period not to exceed six months. Although it is not explicitly stated, these agencies must still be approved under subsections 111(b)(1) and (2). Section 111(b)(4) then provides that this provisional period can be extended for successive one-year periods if the applicable agency has demonstrated that it has met the applicable standards and can meet them in the future. Section 111(b)(4) is clear in terms of the length of approvals; they cannot exceed one year, suggesting that there will be some ongoing evaluation process of the approved agencies. The mechanisms for ongoing evaluation have not been determined.

The legislative history to this section suggests that all approvals are probationary and that, in addition, none can be for a period in excess of one year. n12 Although the statute itself is not as clear as it should be on this point, all approvals for agencies should proceed under sections 111(b) and (c), not section 111(a); section 111(a) should apply only to the maintenance of lists, not who gets approved and for what time period. Section 111(b)(3) speaks about agencies that did not appear on the approved list required under section 111(a). The language in section 111(b)(3) is hard to decipher and states, in relevant part, that if an agency did not appear on the approved list for the district under subsection (a) immediately before approval under this section [section 111(b)(3)], approval under this subsection shall be for a probationary period not to exceed six months. Section 111(b)(4) then specifically cross-references section 111(b)(3). This suggests that the term of approval is a probationary six months, following by one year approvals, only for those approved under section 111(b)(3), not those approved initially. This is because the limitation of term (either probationary or one year) does not cross-reference sections 111(a)(1) or 111(b)(1) and (2), which contain the list of those approved. Thus, there is a seeming gap in terms of the length of term for those who appear on the initial list. In an entity is approved initially, the term of that approval should both be probationary and not exceed one year thereafter. While at first blush, it would appear to make a significant difference if an agency appeared on the initial or subsequent lists, that position cannot be supported. The statutory gap is eliminated if all approvals are treated as covered by sections 111(b) and (c). Thus, all approvals, whether initial or subsequent, should be for a probationary period followed by a one-year term and any permitted renewals.

There is also some ambiguity in terms of how an agency gets approved immediately as opposed to approved in a probationary manner. The Executive Office for United States Trustees will need to provide some initial approval process, and the criteria in sections 111(b) and (c) will need to be satisfied. By its terms, just as noted, section 111 suggests those who get approved and listed initially will have benefits not available to those approved later, but that distinction should not be permitted. It is unclear how many agencies will get approved initially and how many will be approved for a probationary period. Nor is it clear whether the question of immediate or probationary approval is based on the differing qualities of the applicants or timing alone.

Review Process. Section 111(b)(5) provides that within 30 days after final decisions are made under section 111(b)(4), they can be reviewed by an appropriate district court. Appeals can be brought by any interested person, a term not defined in the Code, although the term party in interest is defined in section 1109. One could posit several groups that might be particularly interested in appealing a decision on a credit counseling agency: the party denied approval under section 111(b)(4) or a group or a person that believes that an approval under section 111(b)(4) was improvidently granted. It is unclear why approvals or denials under section 111(b)(4) are the only ones referenced in section 111(b)(5). Suppose that someone objected to an entity approved pursuant to section 111(b)(1); does the specificity in section 111(b)(4) preclude an interested party from seeking judicial review under section 111(b)(5)? The authority to review these decisions is housed in the district court; this could reflect an effort to comply with 28 U.S.C. § 1334, but one can assume that the reviews would then be delegated, at least in most instances, to the bankruptcy court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157, which contemplates a referral from the district court to the bankruptcy court. Another possibility is that these types of decisions would fall within the purview of the Administrative Procedures Act. It is also not evident how interested parties would know of the decision under section 111(b)(4) in sufficient time to have it reviewed, unless they participated in the approval process itself. This issue may be resolved by internal procedures established by the Executive Office for United States Trustees. One could assume that positive decisions might be made public somehow (perhaps by the name of the approved agency appearing on the public list referenced in section 111(a)(1)). It is unclear how parties (other than the one directly affected) would hear about negative decisions.

To make the review process meaningful, the Executive Office for United States Trustees should disclose the names and addresses of those entities seeking to be approved in some readily available publication or Web site; this will facilitate a monitoring of the applicants by interested parties and then facilitate their objecting to the decisions made. Another by-product of this approach is that it would enable commenting by interested parties before a decision is actually rendered and those comments could be considered by the Executive Office as it makes its decisions.

The question of when and how one can review decisions of the United States trustee is not unique to this situation. In the case of appointments to a creditors' committee in a chapter 11 case, section 1102(4), added by the 2005 Act, provides that a court (in this instance usually a bankruptcy court) may change the membership of a committee appointed by the United States trustee. The court can enter its order following a request of a party in interest (as opposed to the interested party referenced in section 111(b)(5)) and after notice and a hearing.

Section 111(e) adds that the district court can review the qualifications of nonprofit agencies currently listed as approved under section 111(a) and request needed documentation. As with new section 111(b)(5), one likely possibility is that the district courts will refer these decisions to the bankruptcy courts pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157, unless this is treated as an administrative decision governed by the Administrative Procedures Act. Moreover, the section provides that the court may remove an agency from the approved list if the agency does not meet the qualifications in section 111(b). There is a question as to whether the section under which approval is sought (under section 111(b)(1) and (2) with a listing in section (a) or, alternatively, under section 111(b)(3)) affects a district court's (or bankruptcy court's) review. It would seem that the court should be able to review all approvals, whether under sections (b)(1) and (2) or (b)(3) and (4). Notably absent is any reference to section 111(c), which details the qualifications of nonprofit budget and credit counselors. One can posit that the requirements in section 111(c) apply to all appointments--whether immediate or probationary.

General Requirements. Section 111(c)(1) sets forth general criteria that must be satisfied before a budget and credit counselor can be approved. These are less specific than the mandatory minimum requirements set forth in section 111(c)(2). Section 111(c)(1) requires that nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies demonstrate that they will (1) provide qualified counselors, (2) maintain protections for client funds, (3) provide adequate counseling with respect to their clients' credit problems, and (4) deal responsibly and effectively with other matters relating to the quality, effectiveness and financial security of the service provided.

None of these four criteria is fleshed out in the statute. n13 For example, what constitutes qualified counselors--a critical issue if the budget and credit counseling is to be useful to consumers--is not detailed. It is not specified whether these counselors need to have college degrees, whether they need specialized initial and ongoing training and, if so, by whom, whether they need to belong to an accrediting or membership organization and whether there is some standardized measure of quality. At least in non-English speaking communities, qualification might include the ability to communicate in a language other than English. Whether some nationwide accrediting system will be created is unknown, although that is the approach that Canada has adopted. n14 The dangers of unqualified counseling are real; poor counseling can lead to individuals losing property or legal rights.

The general requirement that approved agencies must maintain protections for client funds is also not detailed. It is worth noting, ab initio, that it is presumed that approved agencies will actually have client funds, which presumes that approved agencies will be creating, or have the potential to create, debt management plans for their clients. Whether a nonprofit budget and counseling agency could be approved if it does not have that capacity or is not desirous of creating such plans is an important issue and arises again in the context of section 111(c). n15 It is also important to note that some states have fiscal requirements for budget and credit counselors, including bonding requirements. It is unclear whether the Executive Office for United States Trustees will look to state laws to determine criteria for approval. n16 It is also unclear whether nonprofit budget and credit agencies approved for purposes of the bankruptcy system will also need to comply, independently, with state licensing requirements. In some states, licensing is needed only if there is access to client funds, and so the issue of whether approved agencies in bankruptcy must at least offer debt management plans will impact on licensing obligations.

The other two general requirements lack specificity as well. It is unclear how determinations will be made as to whether counseling is adequate and what measures, empirical or otherwise, will be put into place to make that determination. Section 111(c)(2)(E) does detail aspects of counseling adequacy, n17 given that specificity, one has to assume that the more general requirement means something more than what is specified in section 111(c)(2)(E). What other measures need to be put into place to insure quality, effectiveness and financial security is also undetermined. One would hope, at a minimum, that there will be meaningful guidelines put into place to insure that individual debtors are getting value for their money and will not lose property or legal rights due to ineffective counseling. An entry level counseling requirement for accessing the bankruptcy system that is ineffective and of low quality or risks the consumer's money, property and rights is not worth having. Given current issues within the credit counseling industry, there is every reason to take these generalized requirements seriously so that they are not in name only.

Specific Qualifications. To be considered for approval, a nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency must satisfy eight minimum requirements. The use of the word minimum suggests that other requirements may be added or taken in account. These requirement minimums are set forth in section 111(c)(2)(A). All agencies providing counseling, regardless of whether they are approved under section 111(a) or (b), must be approved. For approval, a nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency must at least:

- . have a board of directors, the majority of which is not employed directly by the agency and will not benefit financially (directly or indirectly) from the outcome of the services; n18
- . charge a fee, if any, that is reasonable and provide services without regard to fees; n19
- . provide safekeeping and payment of client funds, including annual audits and employee bonding; n20
- . make disclosures to the clients related to, among other things, funding sources, counselor qualifications, possible impact on credit reports and any other costs of the program and how they will be paid; n21
- . provide adequate counseling that includes an analysis of the client's current financial condition, factors that caused that financial condition and how such client can develop a plan to address these problems without incurring a negative amortization of debt; n22
- . provide no bonuses or commissions based on the outcomes of the counseling for the trained counselors who must have experience and have been adequately trained to provide counseling and handle the above-described matters; n23

- . demonstrate adequate experience and background in providing credit counseling; n24 and

- . have adequate financial resources to provide continuing support services for budget plans over the life of the plan. n25

There is no detailed discussion of these minimum requirements in the legislative history. The requirement in section 111(c)(2)(A) appears to preclude an attorney or law firm from creating a nonprofit credit counseling agency if the lawyers creating it sit on the board of that entity and obtain some financial benefit from the services provided. Since the benefit could be indirect (referring clients for bankruptcy assistance), lawyers who have a counseling agency that refers bankruptcy clients to them certainly benefit. Perhaps lawyers will form such nonprofit agencies but not serve on their boards. If they are not on the board, they are not precluded explicitly from benefiting from the counseling services. Another approach would be for lawyers to set up different nonprofits but agree that they would each sit on one another's boards. The counseling agencies could refer, then, only to the non-board member lawyers. Whether attorney-run credit counseling agencies will be approved by the United States trustee is certainly open to question; they may also have trouble obtaining nonprofit status. This section does suggest the importance of questioning the ownership structure of the nonprofit credit counseling agencies applying for approval.

A related issue is whether any of the language in section 111(c)(2)(A) affects the ability of a legal aid clinic or other similar organization to provide counseling and then, if appropriate, assist the client with a bankruptcy filing. Indeed, some existing organizations already do just this: they counsel clients as to their financial problems and then are in a position to offer needed legal assistance. Nothing in this language would seem to require a change in how legal service organizations handle their debtor clients; these entities could perform both counseling and lawyering since they are nonprofits and are not direct fee-for-services entities. Since legal aid providers generally have guidelines for client eligibility (based on both income levels and geographic locale), they would not be able to accept clients who do not meet their own internal guidelines; one would hope that these limitations would not preclude legal aid providers from qualifying as approved agencies. Also, there are nonprofit budget and credit counselors that provide bankruptcy legal services. In these agencies, the nonprofit determines the best approach for the client, and if bankruptcy is warranted, the individual is referred to the in-house bankruptcy lawyer. This structure, if done correctly, is also not prohibited by the language of the statute. Whether one stop fits all" nonprofits will be approved by the United States trustee is an open question.

There are presently no guidelines in terms of what constitutes a reasonable fee for the required pre-bankruptcy counseling services, although they will likely be forthcoming from the Executive Office for United States Trustees. The credit counseling mandate is unfunded (in terms of government resources); so, its costs must be borne directly by individual debtors. The legislation does suggest that approved providers must provide services without regard to ability to pay, but the criteria for entitlement to free counseling are not prescribed. The language could be read very broadly, suggesting that counseling is free if a debtor does not want to pay. The statute does not make clear whether approved counselors can turn away non-fee paying clients and whether there will be cherry picking among potential clients based on ability to pay. For example, it is unclear whether approved agencies can do an initial screening to determine ability to pay and accept only a certain percentage of nonpaying clients. The language in section 111(c)(2)(B) does contemplate approved agencies that will provide the counseling service for free, evidenced by the word if before a fee. There is another issue for legal service organizations that provide services for free--but only for those who meet their income and geographic guidelines: these entities are not in a position to provide services to those who do not meet their guidelines. One important unanswered question is whether the reasonableness of price will be set by the Executive Office for United States Trustees or by the market. It is useful to note that in the Canadian system, which has mandatory counseling, the fees are regulated by the government and there is a different (and larger fee) for individual as opposed to group counseling. n26 That approach seems to have affected the type of counseling offered; since individual counseling pays the counselors more money, that approach appears to be the norm. n27 Under section 109(h), counseling can either be done individually or in a group, and that choice may affect price. The failure of nonprofit agencies to provide services to those in need should be a basis for denying or revoking their approval.

Section 111(c)(2)(C) requires the safekeeping and payment of client funds. The section then provides for, at a minimum, annual audits of trust funds and appropriate employee bonding requirements. The requirements in section 111(c)(2)(C) will be expensive for approved agencies. n28 These are also similar to requirements that some states have in place for their budget and financial planners. n29 These specific requirements respond to the more general requirement in section 111(c)(1) that approved agencies provide financial security with respect to services. These requirements create the inference that approved agencies will have client funds, again raising the issue whether agencies that are unwilling to perform debt management plans or keep client monies will be able to qualify. The lead-in to this requirement does not contain the word if, leading to the conclusion that all agencies--whether or not they have client funds--will need annual audits. The word appropriate does appear before the word employee bonding, suggesting that if there is no employee handling of monies, no bond is needed. This also suggests that some approved agencies will not have client funds in their possession.

Section 111(c)(2)(D) is a disclosure requirement, signaling the need for approved agencies to provide their clients with the specified information. The agency is to provide full disclosures to a client, including funding sources, counselor qualifications, possible impact on credit reports, and any costs of such program that will be paid by such client and how such costs will be paid. By use of the word including, the five identified items will need to be disclosed and other items will need to be disclosed if they are necessary for full disclosure. n30 This requirement reflects the concerns of many that most consumer credit counseling agencies have gotten at least some portion of their funding from selected credit card companies pursuant to what is known as a fair share. This fair share has enabled credit card companies to set the parameters of the arrangements they will accept with the counseling agencies' clients. Clients, then, were often unaware of the fact that their counselor was paid by the credit industry and that the terms of the payouts were, at least in part, dictated by creditors. n31

Several additional aspects of this disclosure requirement merit attention. First, if counseling can be done by telephone and through the Internet, it is not clear how the disclosure will be made. With in-person counseling, the client can receive any needed disclosures in writing or orally. Whether the client would need to click to reflect that the disclosure was seen and read. With telephonic counseling, the disclosure could be read to the consumer, but that could be lengthy and difficult to understand. If a telephonic provider offered to send the disclosure after the counseling, that would not be adequate either as the individual would have already paid for the service before seeing the disclosure that, if known, might have dissuaded the person from using this particular counselor.

Second, some potential disclosure that is needed but not specifically enumerated relates to the relationships between approved credit counselors and lawyers. If there are fee arrangements or other relationship that dictate payments or referrals, then these matters would need to be disclosed. n32

Third, it must be recognized that the presence of disclosure may not protect consumers fully. Even if consumers see, read or hear the disclosure, that does not mean they understand it; moreover, even if they understand it that does not mean that they will act on it. Hence, even the best disclosure may not protect individual debtors. n33

Section 111(c)(2)(E) addresses the requirement that the counseling must be adequate and then includes the basic aspects of adequacy. This section serves, then, to outline the minimum requirements of the content of the counseling itself. n34 Subparagraph (G) contains a similar requirement, namely that the agency approved have adequate experience and background in credit counseling. This latter provision suggests that new entrants in the field may have trouble getting approved. Subparagraph (G) does not address the experience of the individual counselors; that is addressed in subparagraph (F). Whether an agency can circumvent its own lack of history by hiring experienced personnel or having experienced ownership is unknown. n35 However, it is already clear that new counseling entities are now being created and these entities hope to be approved by the Executive Office for United States Trustees. It is not, then, altogether clear whether existing credit counseling agencies will want to handle this new bankruptcy related counseling or whether new entities will be created to perform the needed tasks.

Section 111(c)(2)(F) speaks to the requirement that the counselors have adequate experience and be trained. What levels of experience or training will be needed is undefined at present. n36 This suggests the creation of another new industry--those who will train the credit counselors--unless we turn to the creation of a nationwide certification process. One option to consider is an array of potential programs that qualify as training programs. Counselors who need approval under section 111 would need to attend one of these identified programs annually or biannually. This section also provides that counselors cannot be paid on a commission or bonus basis. Although this is also not addressed explicitly in the legislative history, there is literature suggesting that some credit counselors may have encouraged debt management plans for clients not because the plans were suitable but because the counselor reviewed financial incentives for putting clients in such plans. n37

Section 111(c)(2)(H) provides that the approved agencies must have adequate financial resources to provide continuing support services for budgeting plans over the life of that plan. This provision suggests, yet again, the expectation that approved providers will have debt management plans within their agencies. One could argue that the requirement is only applicable if the agency has such services but should not be read to require such services. This is similar to the argument with respect to section 111(c)(2)(C) pertaining to safeguarding of client funds.

There are both positives and negatives in reading the legislation to require approval only of agencies that provide debt management plans. On the positive side, a required debt management option would mean that expensive telephone-only counseling, with no other services and little true counseling, would be insufficient. One has to wonder whether short and expensive telephone counseling can produce positive results, although the legislation clearly contemplates telephone counseling, and it may be appropriate in some circumstances if well-priced and of high quality. An expensive and impersonal Internet counseling session is also problematic, although well-priced quality Internet programming may be feasible. On the other hand, pushing debtors into agencies that then push debt management plans is also unwise. These plans are not always useful, and counselors that do not provide plans will not be tempted to urge this alternative, particularly since they will have no remuneration connected to it. n38 What is problematic and worth further evaluation is the combination of linked telephone counseling and debt management plans or linked Internet counseling and debt management plans, because it is hard to picture consistent, adequate and individualized counseling for a debt management plan by telephone or through the Internet. The best solution seems to be to de-link counseling and debt management plans. One can posit the possibility of true quality counseling taking place (whether in person, by telephone or through the Internet) but with no debt management plans offered by the counselors. For example, counseling done through an educational institution, such as a law school, business school or graduate school specializing in Family Economics would be precluded from occurring. If debt management plans are required, one must offer to be an approved counselor under section 111. The Executive Office for United States Trustees will ultimately need to make a decision on this important issue as it will provide the structure for all counselors seeking approval.

There is another way to read the various financial requirements placed on approved credit counselors. If these counselors tried to negotiate settlements of the debts, other than in a formal debt repayment plan, monies might flow from the debtor to the nonprofit counselor. This possibility is raised by section 502(k), which references alternative repayment schedules. Although it is unclear whether this was meant to mean debt management plans, failure of a creditor to accept a reasonable settlement option presented on the debtor's behalf by an approved agency under section 111 will result in a reduction of that creditor's claim in bankruptcy. n39 One possibility is that the language in section 502(k) creates an incentive for debtors at least to try to enter into debt repayment plans; otherwise, they forego the ability, if it is rejected, to reduce the rejecting creditor's claim. This argument would favor linking approved credit counseling and debt management plans. An alternative and better argument based on the wording of the statute is that any type of settlement offered to a creditor by an approved agency, whether or not it is an official debt management plan, will--if rejected--lead to a reduced creditor's claim. Thus, approved agencies may want to try to negotiate repayments and in that context, they may--but would not necessarily need to--have access to client monies. This position ensures that counseling could be provided by approved agencies that do not have debt management plans.

These agencies could, however, attempt to negotiate settlements of clients' debts. One can suppose, however, that there could be excellent counseling that did not actually carry out such negotiations on the debtor's behalf. For example, some quality counselors could note the possibilities of negotiating with creditors without actually participating in the negotiations. Some debtors may be willing to forgo the reduction contemplated in section 502(k), although it seems wise for some debtors to pursue this opportunity.

Further support for the contemplation of some sort of monetary flow between approved agencies and individuals appears in section 547(h), added by the 2005 Act. ⁿ⁴⁰ This section provides that a transfer made as part of an alternative repayment schedule created by an approved agency cannot be avoided (without a time limitation). If an avoidance action is considered, a payment must have been made. This is the same language used in section 502(k). Whether the language alternative repayment schedule means the same thing as debt management plan is unclear, but alternative repayment schedules are potentially more flexible.

Removal. Section 111(f) provides that the United States trustee or a bankruptcy administrator is required to notify the court clerk if a previously approved nonprofit budget and credit counselor is removed from the list maintained pursuant to section 111(a).

There are several ways in which removal can occur. First, the United States trustee can decide not to renew the term of a formerly approved agency renewed pursuant to section 111(b)(4). Second, the district court may order removal pursuant to section 111(e). In both instances, the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) would notify the appropriate clerk. It is hard to anticipate how frequently removal will occur and whether maintenance of lists will be cumbersome. If the lists are not accurate, an individual contemplating bankruptcy could unknowingly receive counseling from an unapproved agency. If that were to occur, even though the agency had been on the list, it would appear that that individual would not be eligible for relief under section 109(h) since the counseling would not have been from an approved agency. The resultant hardship would be significant, and one has to posit that if the counseling is received in good faith, there might be an equitable argument raised under section 105 to permit the individual to have access to the bankruptcy system.

Should this problem occur, the best approach would be for the consumer to be deemed to have received approved counseling as long as the counselor's name appeared on the required list, even if that list was inaccurate or not updated in a timely fashion at the time the debtor received the counseling.

Content of the Credit Counseling

The requisite counseling is described very generally in section 109(h)(1) as individual or group briefings, whether in person, by phone or through the Internet, that outline the opportunities for available credit counseling and assist the debtor in performing a related budget analysis. The length of the counseling is not referenced, although the use of the word briefing suggests that it can be short in duration. That said, one wonders how quality counseling and budgeting can necessarily be done in a short session.

The very general content description in section 109(h)(1) is augmented, at least indirectly, in sections 111(c)(1) and (2). These sections relate to the criteria to be employed to approve nonprofit budget and credit counselors. Within the criteria are indicators with respect to the content of the counseling. Section 111(c)(1) refers to the need for qualified counselors who can provide adequate counseling with respect to client credit problems. This seems to be broader than the language in section 109(h); client credit problems can span a wide range of issues, and counseling as to available credit counseling and budget analysis may not be enough to address credit problems. The suggested expansion of role in section 111(c)(1) is reinforced by the language in section 111(c)(2), most particularly subparagraph (E). This subparagraph specifically requires credit counselors, at a minimum, to provide counseling on credit problems--the terminology used in section 111(c)(1)--including an analysis of such client's financial problems, factors that caused such financial condition and how such a client can develop a plan to respond to the problems without a negative amortization of debt. These are not easy topics on which to counsel individuals in debt. The last requirement, namely assistance in developing a plan, appears to be a reference, albeit vague, to debt management plans. Perhaps it could also be read to reference alternative repayment schedules as identified in section 502(k). The opprobrium against negative amortization is targeted at loans, for example, certain home equity loans, that lead to further debt because the monthly payments do not even reduce the accruing interest. Similarly, a traditional debt management plan could be so costly and the payments could be so small that the indebtedness actually grows rather than diminishes, resulting in negative amortization. Obviously, counseling that places individuals further in debt is unwise.

Regardless of content, no attention has been paid to the need to have that content translated into multiple languages or at least, if the counseling is telephonic, conducted by counselors who are multilingual. The absence of multilingual counseling should be an indicator that a specific district lacks adequate counseling. n41

Timing of Counseling

Section 109(h)(1) provides that individuals must obtain counseling within 180 days prior to filing for bankruptcy relief. Yet, despite this timing mandate, it does not require any minimum time period between the counseling and the filing, as long as the counseling occurs within 180 days. The counseling briefing could be 180 days or it could be several hours before the petition is filed. For example, there is nothing to preclude individuals from obtaining the counseling through the Internet and then proceeding to file for bankruptcy relief immediately, as long as the Internet provider was approved as a nonprofit budget and credit counselor. This means that for some individuals, the counseling is right on the heels of the bankruptcy filing, rather than vice versa and there will be no debt management plan. This possibility suggests that the intended counseling by the approved agencies will be brief (perhaps an hour or even less). On the other hand, there seems to be a disincentive for those who actually enter into debt management plans. For consumers who have the approved counseling, it is possible for them to enter into a debt management plan and then file, as long as they do so within 180 days. If they spend a longer time in the plan or their plan fails after six months (which could easily occur), then the individuals would, presumably, need to repeat the counseling before seeking bankruptcy relief. This creates a disincentive on briefings that encourage debt management plans, as entry into them may require, in addition to other things, re-counseling if the 180-day period is missed.

Exception Due to Unavailability of Counseling. Despite the mandatory time period, the Code does have certain explicit exceptions. Section 109(h)(2)(A) provides that for a debtor who resides in a district for which it has been determined by the United States trustee (or bankruptcy administrator) that there are insufficient approved agencies to provide adequate services, the requirement for mandatory counseling in section 109(h)(1) shall not apply. n42 It is not clear how the determinations as to the unavailability of adequate counseling will be made. Suppose that there are no in-person providers and the debtor wants in-person as opposed to Internet or telephone counseling. This would not seem to qualify for the exception. Alternatively, suppose there are approved nonprofit budget and credit counselors but they are more than an hour away by car and not accessible by public transportation. Or suppose that the counselors are available but appointments will take 30 days to arrange. A related issue relates to counseling in a particular language. If such counseling is not available, then its absence fits within this provision, meaning that the debtor would be exempted from the requirements of section 109(h)(1). Answers to some of these questions will hinge on the positions taken by the United States trustee and the inevitable litigation.

Exception Due to Exigent Circumstances. A further exception is housed in section 109(h)(3). This exception has three subparts. First, pursuant to section 109(h)(3)(A)(i), individuals must certify to the court that there are exigent circumstances and they cannot obtain the counseling required in section 109(h)(1). What will constitute exigent circumstances sufficient to warrant a waiver of counseling will need to be determined by the courts. Second, pursuant to section 109(h)(3)(A)(ii), the debtor has to have requested and been unable to obtain counseling from an approved agency within five days of requesting the counseling. Today, it has been reported that there is a two-day wait period for counseling at some agencies. With the increase in pre-bankruptcy filings, this time period may increase. Debtors making the request should, no doubt, indicate the dates they sought counseling and the first date for services that they were offered in response. Whether this can be obtained in writing or by taping a telephone conversation is unknown. Given that counseling can occur by telephone and through the Internet, it is unclear how many individuals will be unable to receive counseling. If an individual does not have a computer or phone and there are no in-person counselors, then it would be easier to satisfy these standards. Another situation to consider is how this exception applies to individuals who need immediate bankruptcy assistance and cannot wait out the five days for counseling--even if it were to be available. For example, suppose a debtor needed to file immediately (posit a foreclosure scheduled for the next day). Assume counseling was available only two days into the future (one beyond the foreclosure date). For this debtor, the availability of counseling within the five-day window is not adequate; the individual needs counseling today or tomorrow. Would that individual be able to obtain bankruptcy relief under this subsection, particularly since the person could get counseling immediately after seeking bankruptcy relief and this delayed receipt of counseling is permitted under section 109(h)(3)(B)?ⁿ⁴³ In other words, the person would still get counseling within five days but they would also have sought bankruptcy relief. While section 109(h)(3)(A)(ii) does not appear to cover this situation, it could be so extended; otherwise, individuals who need counseling and cannot wait five days to get it would be excluded from accessing the bankruptcy system, which is an unacceptable result. The third requirement, contained in section 109(h)(3)(A)(iii), is that the debtor's certification must be satisfactory to the court. This suggests, as a pragmatic matter, that debtors who need to seek relief immediately and who have not obtained a counseling certificate, will need to file a certification with their petition to satisfy the requirements of section 109 and section 521.

Despite the counseling reprieve for qualifying debtors under section 109(h)(3)(A), section 109(h)(3)(B) provides that the counseling exemption ceases to apply as soon as the requirements of section 109(h)(1) are met (namely obtaining counseling). In no event may the counseling exemption exceed 30 days after the debtor has sought relief, except that for cause, the court may grant an additional 15-day extension. What this means is that even individuals who filed without counseling because there were exigent circumstances must still obtain the counseling within 30 days (subject to any extension). Note that the type of counseling that would be needed once the debtor is within the bankruptcy system differs from the ordinary pre-bankruptcy counseling, particularly on the issue of whether bankruptcy is a suitable option. If a debtor receives counseling post-filing based on criteria set up for pre-bankruptcy counseling, it is unclear whether that counseling will be at all meaningful. What if the counselor determines that the debtor would have been better served by not accessing the bankruptcy system? Should the debtor then seek to have the case dismissed? This possibility is raised by the 2005 addition of section 362(i), which contemplates a filing followed by a debt management plan and dismissal.ⁿ⁴⁴

The exigent circumstances provisions do require court involvement at two stages. First, the certification must be satisfactory to the court under section 109(h)(3)(A)(iii). Then, if an extension is needed, court approval is required. These are but two of the instances in which the courts will become increasingly involved in consumer bankruptcy cases.

Consequences of Failure to Obtain Mandated Counseling or Comply with Related Requirements

The primary consequence of noncompliance with the credit counseling mandate is that the individual debtor's case can be dismissed or the debtor's plan of reorganization can fail to be confirmed. These are harsh consequences, signaling the importance of complying with the mandates.

Dismissal of Case or Failure to Confirm Plan. Section 707(a)(3) provides that failure to comply with the requirements of section 521 can be the basis for dismissal of a chapter 7 case. Section 707(a)(3) does not reflect the re-lettering and renumbering in section 521; the requirement for a pre-filing certificate is in section 521(b), not section 521(1). Despite this gaff, it is clear that Congress intended the failure to obtain a certificate of completion of approved pre-bankruptcy counseling to be a basis for discharge. Absent a technical amendments bill, an argument could be made that failure to obtain a certificate is not a basis for dismissal, although that argument is unlikely to convince a court.

Under section 521(b)(1), the debtor is required to submit to the court the certificate describing the approved credit counseling obtained. Assuming its applicability, according to section 707(a)(3), the actual document can be submitted after filing, but the counseling itself must have been received, absent an exception, before the petition is filed.

Section 1307(c)(9) provides that a case may be dismissed for failure to file the information requested in section 521(2); however, that subsection no longer exists. Section 521(a)(2) references the statement of intention, not the other requirements such as a certificate of completion of pre-filing approved counseling (which is referenced in section 521(b)(1)). Although it appears to have been intended that failure to complete pre-bankruptcy approved counseling would be a basis for dismissal, the Code does not so explicitly provide. Even if the statute had the correct alphabetical and numerical cross-referencing, no similar dismissal provision appears in either chapters 11 and 12; although one would posit that noncompliance with section 521 would be cause for dismissal under section 1112(b) and section 1208(c).

Section 1325(a)(1) provides that a plan cannot be confirmed if it does not comply with the law, and failure to have completed pre-bankruptcy counseling would be noncompliance with the law. However, once a chapter 13 plan is confirmed, confirmation has res judicata effect with respect to chapter 13 eligibility. ⁿ⁴⁵ Similar provisions exist in section 1129 and section 1225(a)(3).

Duty to Submit Debt Management Plan. Section 521(b)(2), added by the 2005 Act, ⁿ⁴⁶ also provides that individual debtors must submit to the court a copy of a debt repayment plan, if any, developed under section 109(h). This requirement recognizes that debt management plans may be developed pre-bankruptcy but recognizes that they will not be utilized by all debtors, as exemplified by the use of the words if any. The addition of the words if any do not answer the larger question of whether credit counselors must at least be in a position to offer such plans, even if a debtor determines not to participate in such an option. Given the cross-referencing errors, it is unclear whether failure to submit this copy will be the basis for dismissal of a debtor's case, although dismissal is likely the intended consequence.

The more significant question raised by section 521(b)(2) is the purpose of the court having a copy of the debt management plan into which a debtor has entered. One reason is that this plan will be utilized to determine the size of payments debtors were making, perhaps as a basis for determining prospective plan payments in a chapter 13 case or the determination of income and expenses for the means test calculations under section 707(b). Use of a debt management plan for either of these purposes is immensely problematic in that the criteria used to determine payment amounts in a debt management plan are not the same as those used in a chapter 13 plan. Moreover, the counseling with respect to debt management plan payments may not reflect other payments that would be made in a chapter 13 plan but that are not calculated in a debt management plan. For example, some debt management plans do not include payments to nonparticipating creditors like doctors and hospitals, payments that would be made in a chapter 13 plan. Moreover, there are additional costs in a chapter 13 plan as well as priority payments, none of which are reflected in a debt management plan. Further, if the counseling is not adequate and the debtor is given bad advice--even if the counselor is approved--this could lead to a faulty and inaccurate debt management plan. A debtor should not be saddled with a counselor's bad judgments in a subsequent bankruptcy case. Hence one has to question the utility of a debt management plan in determining chapter 13 plan payments.

Using the debt management plan as a proxy for income and expenses in either chapter 7 or chapter 13 is also unwise in that not all income and expenses are necessarily included when one determines payments under a debt management plan. In addition, circumstances may have changed in the last several months since the debt management plan was entered into, a fact evidenced by the conclusion that the plan must have failed--otherwise, the debtor would not now be seeking bankruptcy relief. Thus, it would make no sense to use the figures that led to a failed debt management plan. It is unclear whether United States trustees will undertake this type of review.

One of the best uses of this provision would be for the United States trustee (and perhaps the debtor's lawyer as well) to use the information in the debt management plans to determine whether the individual debtors who entered into them were well-served by them and if not, the plans would be the basis for removing an approved nonprofit counseling agency from the list of permitted providers under section 111(a). If, for example, a plan had negative amortization or the fees charged were excessively high compared to the benefits gained, then the United States trustee under subsections 111(b)(4) and (f) would have a basis for removing the approved agency from the list in section 111(a) and the court would have a concrete basis upon which to move for removal of an approved credit counseling agency under section 111(e). It would also provide other parties in interest, perhaps the debtor's own lawyer, grounds to object to an approval or renewal under section 111(b)(5). Once again, effectuating this suggestion requires added district court time and access to the debt management plan from a debtor's file.

The fact that these plans will be submitted to the court should set up a cautionary signal for both debtors entering into such plans and the agencies arranging them. Debtors should be aware that they may be used to determine eligibility for chapter 7 or plan payments in a chapter 11 or 13 plan. Nonprofit agencies providing plans should know that those plans could, indeed should, be scrutinized to determine whether they were in the individual debtor's best interest. Moreover, attorneys representing consumer debtors should evaluate those plans before filing a petition to determine how the numbers used in the debt management plan were derived. Since the plan may have been arranged telephonically (if permitted), the developer will have less information than would be available to an attorney actually reviewing all the debtors' books and records pre-filing.

There is an additional, albeit somewhat unrelated, change in section 362. Section 362(i) provides that if a case is dismissed due to the creation of a debt management plan, any subsequent case dismissed shall not be presumed to be filed in bad faith (and hence not subject to stay termination under new section 362(c)(3)).ⁿ⁴⁷ This 2005 addition does stress the likelihood of debt management plans intersecting with bankruptcy, something also suggested by section 111. And the provision further suggests that a debtor within the bankruptcy system could then enter into a debt management plan and move to dismiss the filing. The timing seems odd in that the pre-bankruptcy counseling is where the issue would arise unless this provision is geared to an individual who had exigent circumstances and could not obtain counseling pre-bankruptcy.

Costs and Fees

Section 111(c)(2)(B) states that, to be approved, a nonprofit agency's fees must be reasonable.ⁿ⁴⁸ There are no guidelines presently in place for what constitutes reasonable. Since counseling can occur in person, by telephone or through the Internet, one would expect that the fees would be different depending on how the counseling is delivered. Moreover, one might expect that there could be different types of approved counseling and that fees might depend on the nature of that counseling. For example, a short phone call with limited counseling time would be different from an intensive hour-long in-person session.ⁿ⁴⁹ In Canada, which has mandatory counseling, individual sessions are more expensive than group sessions.ⁿ⁵⁰

Fees raise a serious concern about a race to the bottom. With more than two million individuals in need of counseling providing that counseling will be a growth industry. However, it is likely that there will be considerable effort among providers to provide the cheapest counseling to increase their clientele. Providers with perhaps higher quality products and thus somewhat higher (but still reasonable) fees may be driven from the market, a problematic outcome.

It is also possible that fees will be different in different parts of the country. Counseling in cities may be more expensive given higher overhead costs. It is also possible to imagine a cost-adder if the counseling is needed immediately. Thus, consumers who need immediate counseling might have to pay more for the same counseling they would receive in three weeks if they were in a position to wait. One can also foresee added costs if the counseling is needed in a language other than English. If the fee for pre-bankruptcy counseling is linked to post-filing financial management education, then there could be one composite fee that might be higher than counseling alone but less than that charged if one went to two separate entities for these needed services; this type of bundled services and bundled fees is problematic. n51 Guidance on all of these issues will be needed from the United States trustee, and aspects of this may be litigated. Excessive or inappropriate fees are and should be utilized as a basis for denying approval or renewal to an agency or removing an already approved provider from the list. Again, the United States trustees and interested parties will need to remain vigilant on this issue, and district courts, which have removal power under section 111(e), will need some mechanism for tracking fees, in addition to parties, bringing it to their attention.

In an effort to keep fees reasonable and to secure approval, one could imagine approved nonprofit agencies providing the required course for a low fee and then providing added and more complex services for a higher and additional fee. Thus, consumers would be offered a bare-bones course and then, if they wanted more detailed and individualized counseling, they would need to pay more. This type of marketing of services can be difficult for individuals to untangle, and consumers could well purchase additional services that are not needed or required, without being aware of exactly what they are purchasing and why. The Executive Office for United States Trustees will need to be especially vigilant to determine if approved providers are also providing other services and consumers are being offered package deals where services are bundled together. Moreover, if packaging is permitted, which practice should be scrutinized, then there should be disclosure made as to what is required by law to access the bankruptcy system and why added services are needed. n52 One can easily picture providers who will provide the cheaper service to acquire a list of individuals in need to whom they can market other products and services. n53

Fee Waivers. Section 111(c)(2)(B) does provide that approved agencies must provide counseling without regard to ability to pay. This wording can lead to several interpretations. n54 What is unclear is how many nonpaying clients an agency must take. For example, no budget and credit counseling agency, unless grant supported or supported by outside contributions, could survive if all of its clients were nonpaying. That said, it is unclear how determinations will be made as to who should be paying for their counseling.

Section 111(c)(2)(B) recognizes the possibility of approved agencies that provide counseling without any fees at all to the individual. For example, legal aid offices, if they are permitted to do counseling, could provide it to their clients without charge. Typically, such clients will fit within prescribed income guidelines. Hence, it would not be possible for legal services organizations to provide services, free or otherwise, to clients who do not comply with their own guidelines. There may be others willing to provide counseling without charge; however, the requirements for approval are sufficiently onerous that this may discourage pro bono counseling efforts. In particular, if approved counselors must be able to provide debt management plans, this will discourage many pro bono efforts. Excessive bonding requirements could also prove problematic for certain potential providers. Given the liability provisions in section 111(g), counselors will likely carry insurance in the event of losses.

Referral Fees. An unaddressed issue in the statute is whether approved nonprofit agencies can pay fees to lawyers referring clients to them. n55 For example, one can imagine contractual or informal relationships between approved nonprofit counselors and lawyers pursuant to which all of the lawyers' clients are directed to a particular agency in exchange for a fee paid by the agency to the lawyer. One can also imagine the inverse, namely, approved agencies that refer cases to particular lawyers when a bankruptcy filing is needed based on the results of the counseling. Section 155 of title 18 does not appear to cover this type of situation, since that section references payments made from property of the estate. n56 Pre-bankruptcy, there is no property of the estate, and the payments would be made by the counselors and the lawyers, not the debtor or the estate. If the payments were being shared among lawyers (for example if a credit counseling agency were lawyer-owned), section 504 would need to be considered. n57 It is unclear whether Code section 504 would prohibit fee sharing between a lawyer-owned credit counseling agency and a lawyer doing bankruptcy-related work. Section 504 appears to address fees among professionals entitled to compensation under section 503(b), and whether the pre-bankruptcy counseling could fit into this section is unresolved.

If there were such fees running either from the lawyers to the counselors or the counselors to the lawyers, a strong argument could be made that, at a minimum, these fees must be disclosed pursuant to section 111(c)(2)(D). That section specifically mentions funding sources as something that must be disclosed to the individual debtor. If such an arrangement were uncovered, a court could also move for removal of the agency from the approved list pursuant to section 111(e). One would hope that the United States trustee would issue guidelines that explicitly prohibit such arrangements. n58

Tying Arrangements. Section 111 does not explicitly address whether there can be a relationship between an approved nonprofit budget and credit counselor and lawyers of a law firm. While the statute does make clear that no one on the board of an approved credit counseling agencies can benefit economically, there is nothing to preclude benefits where there are no board members. n59 This would permit lawyers and counselors to have arrangements whereby they would provide services to each other's clients. Even if there were no referral fees among the professionals, there could be an expectation of such cooperation. From the perspective of the consumer, this would affect--if the consumer was aware of this--the choice of counselor or lawyer. If the client were first to visit the counselor, then the counselor would arguably be required to make disclosure of the fact that all its clients in need of bankruptcy assistance are referred to a single firm or lawyer. Such a disclosure requirement would be found in section 111(c)(2)(D). If the counseling were telephonic, it is unclear how disclosure would occur. It is also unclear whether, even if disclosure were made, it would affect consumer decision-making. n60 If post-filing debtor education courses, also required, were added as part of these referrals, the issue gets even more complex, as does the needed disclosure. n61

An additional but different type of tying would involve entities that provide both pre- and post-filing services for individual debtors. For example, an approved budget and credit counselor might also provide post-filing debtor education if the counseled individual accessed the bankruptcy system. One can imagine a situation in which the fees would also be tied together. In other words, for a single fee, an individual would receive the pre-bankruptcy counseling and, if necessary, the additional course needed to obtain a discharge for little or no additional money. This would ensure that the approved counselors would have a tie to the individual client going forward.

Credit Reporting Prohibition

Section 111(g)(1) provides that budget and credit counseling agencies are prohibited from reporting that individuals sought or received personal financial management instruction. It is unclear whether this prohibition relates only to reporting with respect to post-filing financial management courses, required to obtain a discharge, or whether it includes any financial education received pre-bankruptcy through the nonprofit budget counselors. It is the choice of the word instructions that is problematic. It is clear that the post-filing financial management courses would fit within the term instruction. However, it is ironic that those cannot be reported to credit reporting agencies, since these courses can actually work to a consumer's benefit. Indeed, at least one of the newer credit reporting agencies is noting completion of financial management courses in its database and using the information to create consumer achievement scores. n62 Thus, the prohibition with respect to post-filing courses is, it seems, the inverse of what it should be.

On the other hand, it is credit counseling advice that, if reported, can hurt consumers and potentially lower their credit score. But it is unclear if the prohibition covers pre-bankruptcy counseling, although it should clearly be read to do so. Moreover, although it is not stated, one has to assume that the prohibition relates only to approved nonprofit agencies. Whether the activities of credit counselors qualify as instructional is certainly open to debate, particularly since that word does not appear in any of the references to the activities of the counselors in section 109(h) and section 111(c). One solution would be for credit counselors to label at least some portion of their counseling as instruction and then to reference it in the certificate that the debtor is obligated to present to the court under section 521(b). If this were done, there is a strong argument that the counseling obtained cannot be reported to a credit counseling agency. Clarification of the section is needed, and this is an instance in which the statutory language should be corrected.

Compliance with Applicable State Credit Counseling Laws

There is an open issue whether approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agencies will be required to comply with applicable state laws for budget and credit counselors. n63 This is an important issue. There is no explicit waiver in the 2005 Act and, hence, it would appear that if the activities of the approved agencies fit within the activities for which state law requires licensing, such licensing would be needed. One can suppose that states could amend their respective statutes to exempt entities approved pursuant to section 111, but that would be a slow process. Absent federal legislation, a rule or directive from the United States trustee would not solve this problem. It would appear that if licensing is required, existing budget and credit counselors will be at an advantage. This is because, at least in some jurisdictions, licensing for these types of activities is not easy and requires, among other things, satisfaction of various financial requirements. It is also unclear how licensing will operate for national approved counselors and which state laws apply. There may be entities like legal aid and educational institutions that cannot be licensed, either because they do not have the ability to meet the needed state requirements or their leadership does not want to incur the added liability. This would discourage some potentially very worthy counselors from participating--even if they were approved by the United States trustee. It is also possible that the United States trustee or the Executive Office for United States Trustees will require compliance with state law as a pre-condition for approval, something that could be one of the added requirements that are permitted under section 111(c)(2). n64

Agency Noncompliance

Section 111(g)(2) provides that if an agency willfully or negligently fails to comply with any of the requirements of this title, that entity can be subjected to actual damages sustained by the debtor as well as court costs and reasonable attorney's fees incurred in an action to recover those damages. Several features of this provision are noteworthy. First, the standard willful or negligent is lower than others within the Code. For example, in section 523(a)(6), the standard is willful and malicious. n65 In section 362, the standard is willfulness. n66 Second, the potential actual damages to a debtor could be significant and might include items such as defamation of credit. Attorney's fees and costs are also recoverable but this does suggest that a debtor will need to find an attorney willing to take the case. Third, only actual, as distinguished from punitive, damages are covered, which means that some of the remedial power of the section is curtailed. For example, section 303(i) permits punitive damages, so it would not have been unusual to have provided for them. n67 Fourth, the potential causes of action relate to the entire Code, evidenced by the language under this title. Clearly, this was intended to cover the many sections that deal with pre-bankruptcy counseling and financial management courses. n68 It could also be read more broadly, to cover other harms done under title 11 but not specifically sections referring to counseling or post-filing education. Suppose, for example, that a debtor received inadequate counseling from an approved credit counselor and that counselor suggested a bankruptcy filing that in turn led to a job loss and loss of credit worthiness. Resultant damages could be significant. How frequently this new section will be invoked is a relevant issue.

Implementation

There are enormous issues with respect to implementing a nationwide pre-bankruptcy counseling mandate. Each step of the process--from the providers to the content of the programming to the removal of unsatisfactory providers--is complex. Moreover, in addition to the initial steps, there will need to be thoughtful ongoing monitoring of this entire aspect of the bankruptcy system. Courts will also need to be apprised of the details of this program since they will have to address many of these issues and, indeed, can raise some on their own. There will need to be opportunities for the participants in the system to provide their input. The pilot debtor education program referenced in Section 105 of the 2005 Act specifically requires that the Executive Office for United States Trustees consult with those with experience in financial management education. One would hope that this consultative obligation would extend to pre-bankruptcy counseling and the non-pilot aspects of financial management courses. It would make little sense to limit consultancy to a pilot initiative. With major implementational issues and the key rights that could be affected thereby, the Executive Office should consult with recognized experts on consumer credit counseling and financial management education.

Empirical Assessment

The 2005 Act has some provisions related to empirical assessment. For example, section 159 was added to title 28 and relates to bankruptcy statistics. Section 589(b) was created in title 28 to gather increased information about the bankruptcy system, encouraging transparency. Section 105 of the 2005 Act requires a pilot financial management program in six regions of the country with a study of its effectiveness. There is no similar mandate with respect to pre-bankruptcy credit counseling, which is a shortcoming in that there are myriad issues to be assessed. Such issues include an assessment of the effectiveness of the counseling, the effect of the counseling on bankruptcy filing rates, the success of the debt repayment programs into which more individuals may be directed, and the relative success of the three different types of delivery systems for counseling (in person, by telephone or through the Internet). At present, there are no specific mandates or funding to study these important issues.

For a complete discussion of Code section 111, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 111 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy, research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 1. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(a) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n2

2. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(d)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n3

3. Recent empirical work questions whether all individuals accessing the bankruptcy system have the same profile in terms of behavior and hence, further research is needed to establish whether a one-size-fits-all mandate is wise for both pre-bankruptcy counseling and post-filing debtor education. See Richard L. Wiener et al., Unwrapping Assumptions: Applying Social Analytic Jurisprudence to Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Policy, 79 Am. Bankr. L.J. (forthcoming 2005). For two pieces wary with respect to the value of credit counseling based on the Canadian experience where there is mandatory consumer credit counseling, see Saul Schwartz, The Effect of Bankruptcy Counseling on Future Creditworthiness, 77 Am. Bankr. L.J. 257 (2003); Iain Ramsay, Mandatory

Counseling: The Canadian Experience, 7 Fordham J. Corp. & Fin. L. 525 (2002).

n4

4. See Memorandum of Professor Michael Greenfield to the Consumer Debt Counseling Drafting Committee dated May 8, 2005, and available at www.law.upenn.edu/bll/ulc/UCDC/oct2003memo.htm.

n5

5. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.05[2] and 1110.05[3] (Matthew Bender).

n6

6. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 109.09 (Matthew Bender).

n7

7. See Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 1004.1, which addresses petitions by incompetent persons. Clearly, pre-bankruptcy counseling would not be required of the guardian, conservator or other appointed representative of the incompetent person.

n8

8. Section 109(h)(1) provides that counseling can be done in person, by telephone or through the Internet, and individually or in groups.

n9

9. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office suggest that the Executive Office itself will be taking the laboring oar. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01 (Matthew Bender). Indeed, on October 4, 2005, the Executive Office announced approval of 41 credit counseling agencies. According to the press release, available at <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>, [t]here are approved credit counseling agencies serving all federal judicial districts for which the United States Trustee Program is responsible. A list of approved agencies can be found on the Program's Web site, <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>, and will be updated as more agencies are approved.

n10

10. One possibility is that if there is bundling of services in ways that are inappropriate, that could be a basis for denying approval. See Tying Agreements infra. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n11

11. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n12

12. See H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, 109th Cong., 1st Sess. (2005).

n13

13. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n14

14. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.02[1], note 3 (Matthew Bender).

n15

15. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.03[4] and 111.04 (Matthew Bender).

n16

16. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n17

17. The forms promulgated by the Executive Office for United States Trustees hint at how these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n18

18. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(A)(i)(ii).

n19

19. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(B).

n20

20. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(C).

n21

21. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(D).

n22

22. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(E).

n23

23. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(F).

n24

24. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(G).

n25

25. See 11 U.S.C. § 111(c)(2)(H).

n26

26. Fees in Canada are established by Canadian Reg. 368 Bankruptcy and Insolvency General Rules. Rule 131 sets the fees for individual counseling at $85 per session and $25 per group session. These fees are not inflation linked and have not changed since they were instituted. These can be accessed at <http://strategis.ic.gc.ca/epic/internet/inbsf-osb.nsf/en/home>.

n27

27. In Canada, counseling is done by trustees. Although data are not available, the majority of counseling appears to be individual in Canada and occurs as part of the routine pursuant to which trustees meet with individual clients. Some trustees do contract out the counseling portion of their duties to credit counseling agencies.

n28

28. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n29

29. By way of example, Part 402 of the New York State Banking Laws, as amended by Part 404, sets forth a myriad of criteria for budget planners in New York. For a state-by-state summary, see National Consumer Law Center, Credit Counseling in Crisis Update: Poor Compliance and Weak Enforcement Undermine Laws Governing Credit Counseling Agencies (Nov. 2004), available at www.nclc.org/initiatives/credit_counseling/content/cc_enforcement.pdf.

n30

30. Bundling of services, with a lawyer and/or an approved financial management course provider, would be an example of information that should be disclosed to the individual debtor. See Tying Agreements infra. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n31

31. See Consumer Federation of America & National Consumer Law Center, Credit Counseling in Crisis: The Impact on Consumers of Finding Cuts, Higher Fees and Aggressive New Market Entrants (Apr. 2003), available at www.consumerfed.org/credit_counseling_report.pdf; see also Testimony of Deanne Loonin, November 20, 2003, before the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Oversight, titled Non-Profit Credit Counseling Organizations and available at www.consumerlaw.org/initiatives/test_and_comm/credit_counseling.shtml.

n32

32. See Costs and Fees infra.

n33

33. See Richard Wiener, Susan Block-Lieb, Karen Gross & Corinne Donovan, Unwrapping Assumptions: Applying Social Analytic Jurisprudence to Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Policy, 79 Am. Bankr. L.J. (2005).

n34

34. See Content of the Credit Counseling infra.

n35

35. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n36

36. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n37

37. For an example of a lawsuit making this claim, see Missouri v. Ameridebt, available at <http://ago.missouri.gov/lawsuits/2003/091103ameridebt.pdf>.

n38

38. See 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(1); see also Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 109 (Matthew Bender) and Costs and Fees infra.

n39

39. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 (Matthew Bender).

n40

40. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 201(b) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n41

41. See Timing of Counseling infra.

n42

42. On October 4, 2005, the Executive Office for United States Trustees announced a temporary waiver of the credit counseling requirement in areas affected by Hurricane Katrina. According to the press release announcing the waiver, available at <http://www.usdoj.gov/ust/>:

The [2005 Act] permits United States Trustees to waive the credit counseling requirement within a judicial district where approved credit counseling agencies are not reasonably able to provide adequate services to bankruptcy filers. The United States Trustee for Region 5 made this determination with respect to the Eastern, Middle, and Western Districts of Louisiana, and the Southern District of Mississippi.

n43 43. See Timing of Counseling infra.

n44

44. See Duty to Submit Debt Management Plan infra.

n45

45. See Binding Effect Extends to All Issues Determined by Confirmation Order infra.

n46

46. Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 106(d)(2) (2005), effective in cases commenced on or after October 17, 2005.

n47

47. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n48

48. See Specific Qualifications supra.

n49

49. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at counseling being a minimum of 90 minutes. How length will affect pricing is unknown. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n50

50. See Specific Qualifications supra.

n51

51. See Tying Agreements infra.

n52

52. For a discussion of this issue in the context of financial management courses, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.18[4] (Matthew Bender).

n53

53. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n54

54. See Specific Qualifications supra.

n55

55. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n56

56. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 504 (Matthew Bender).

n57

57. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 504 (Matthew Bender).

n58

58. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n59

59. See Specific Qualifications supra.

n60

60. See Specific Qualifications supra.

n61

61. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.17[3] and 111.17[4] (Matthew Bender).

n62

62. For an example of a credit reporting agency that does consider financial management programs, see PayRent Build Credit's Achiever's 100+ score which takes into account consumer completion of approved courses. See <http://prbc.com/partners/achievers.php?>.

n63

63. The Forms promulgated by the Executive Office hint at how some of these issues will be resolved. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 2 (Matthew Bender).

n64

64. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.01, note 1 (Matthew Bender).

n65

65. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 523 (Matthew Bender).

n66

66. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 362 (Matthew Bender).

n67

67. See Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 303 (Matthew Bender).

n68

68. For the potential causes of action with respect to financial management courses, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 111.21 (Matthew Bender).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Collier on Bankruptcy. This Emerging Issues Analysis was adapted from material appearing in Collier on Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). Written and edited by leading scholars and practitioners, Collier on Bankruptcy is the preeminent treatise in the bankruptcy field. Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, and available both in print and online, Collier is an indispensable resource for any firm with a substantial bankruptcy practice. Cited in hundreds of opinions each year, Collier is a benchmark authority. For more information on Collier on Bankruptcy, consult the online LexisNexis bookstore.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

197 of 197 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

2008 Emerging Issues 866

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

By Henry J. Sommer

November 5, 2007

SUMMARY: In Marrama v. Citizens Bank, the Supreme Court held that a debtor who has acted in bad faith does not have an absolute right to convert a chapter 7 case to chapter 13. In his expert commentary, Henry J. Sommer, the editor-in-chief of Collier on Bankruptcy, limns the Court's reasoning and suggests that in practice it is not always easy to determine the "plain meaning of the Code."

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: Supreme Court Rules That Chapter 7 Debtor Does Not Have an Absolute Right to Convert to Chapter 13

The Supreme Courts decision in Marrama v. Citizens Bank resolved a split among the courts of appeals concerning whether a chapter 7 debtor who has not previously converted from another chapter of the Bankruptcy Code has an absolute right to convert a case to chapter 13 if the debtor met the chapter 13 eligibility requirements of section 109 of the Code.

In Marrama, the debtor filed a voluntary petition under chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code. In his attached and verified schedules, the debtor made a number of misleading or inaccurate statements about his principal asset, which was a house in Maine. Specifically, he listed its value as zero, when it fact it had considerable value. Further, he denied that he had transferred any property other than in the ordinary course of the business during the year preceding the filing of the petition, whereas he had transferred the house into a newly created trust for no consideration. After the trustee indicated that he would attempt to recover the Maine house as an asset of the estate, the debtor filed a notice of conversion to chapter 13. The trustee and principal creditor opposed the conversion on the ground that the request was made in bad faith and would constitute an abuse of the bankruptcy process. In response, the debtor explained that the misstatements on the Maine property were a result of scriveners error and that he had filed under chapter 7 because he was unemployed at the time. The bankruptcy court rejected these arguments and denied the request for conversion on the ground of debtors bad faith. The Court of Appeals for the First Circuit upheld the denial of the right to convert, ruling that the right is not absolute and that a court could deny conversion if the debtor had acted in bad faith.

Affirming, the Supreme Court ruled that a debtor who in bad faith has concealed significant assets, whose case under chapter 13 would be subject to immediate dismissal under section 1307(c), does not have the right to convert to chapter 13 in the first instance. Such a debtor, the Court held, comes within the description in section 706(d) of debtors who do not have a right to convert because the debtor is not someone who may be a debtor under such chapter. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 964-66.]

The Court also found authority for its decision in section 105, because conversion of a case from chapter 7 to chapter 13 by a debtor whose chapter 13 case would be immediately dismissed or reconverted to chapter 7 could be an abuse of process of the type courts may prevent under section 105(a). [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966-67.] In particular, the Court discussed the possibility that a debtor could gain control of assets once a case is converted to chapter 13 and dissipate them before the case could be reconverted to chapter 7. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 967 n.13.]

The Court emphasized that denial of the right to convert to chapter 13 should be limited to extraordinary cases of bad faith and should not apply to other cases. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966 n.11.] It also suggested that the showing of bad faith necessary to deny conversion should be very clear, and more than might be required for denial of plan confirmation under section 1325(a)(3). [Id.]

The Court rejected the position of four dissenting justices that the plain language of the Code provides for an alternative procedure to handle bad faith conversions, namely the dismissal or reconversion of the case after it is converted to chapter 13, and that the right of a statutorily eligible debtor to convert to chapter 13 is absolute. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 967-69.] The dissent also argued that section 105(a) could not be used to contravene the Code's plain language, although it could have served as authority to enter orders to prevent actions, such as dissipation of property, that the majority feared could occur in a bad faith conversion. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d 956, 971-72.]

The decision once again shows that, although the Court frequently espouses the plain meaning approach to interpreting the Bankruptcy Code, it may not always follow that approach, at least as it is interpreted by Justice Scalia, its foremost proponent, who joined the dissent. [But see BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 114 S. Ct. 1757, 128 L. Ed. 2d 556, 30 C.B.C.2d 345 (1994), in which Justice Scalia seemingly ignored the plain meaning of the word value and found it to be the amount realized for a property at a foreclosure sale.] At a minimum, the decision demonstrates that in practice it is not always easy to determine the plain meaning of the Code.

Perhaps even more intriguing is the Court's use of section 105(a) as an alternative basis for its decision. The Court suggests that the broad authority of that provision is surely adequate to short-circuit the usual procedure of conversion followed by a reconversion if that is necessary to prevent an abuse of process. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966-67.] In light of many lower court holdings that section 105(a) cannot be used to circumvent the specific provisions of the Code, it will be interesting to see if courts now will rely on this language in taking actions that appear contrary to the Code's standard procedures.

For further discussion of conversion from chapter 7 to chapter 13, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed. rev., 706.02, and Collier Consumer Bankruptcy Practice Guide, 24.03.

For further discussion of the bankruptcy courts' power under Code section 105, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed. rev., ch. 105.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Henry J. Sommer is Supervising Attorney at the pro bono Consumer Bankruptcy Assistance Project in Philadelphia. He has litigated many major cases involving bankruptcy, consumer law, civil rights, and other issues. Previously, he was the head of the Consumer Law Project at Community Legal Services in Philadelphia, where he worked for over 21 years. Mr. Sommer has also served as a Lecturer-in-Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Mr. Sommer is Editor-in-Chief of Collier on Bankruptcy and the entire Collier line of bankruptcy publications. He is the author of Collier Consumer Bankruptcy Practice Guide (Matthew Bender) and Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice, (Natl Consumer Law Center, 8th ed. 2006) and the coauthor of Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code (Matthew Bender). Mr. Sommer is a former member of the Federal Judicial Conference Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules and a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference. He is a Fellow of the American College of Bankruptcy, a member of the American Law Institute, and a former member of the Federal Reserve Board Consumer Advisory Council. He is also President of the National Association of Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys (NACBA). He has been asked to testify many times before the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, as well as the National Bankruptcy Review Commission, on bankruptcy and consumer law issues. Mr. Sommer was the first recipient of the National Consumer Law Centers Vern Countryman Consumer Law Award. He received his A.B. degree from Harvard College, magna cum laude and his J.D. degree from Harvard Law School, cum laude.

1 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Prof. Kenneth N. Klee. All Rights Reserved.

Klee on Hamilton v. Lanning

2010 Emerging Issues 5116

Professor Kenneth N. Klee on the Supreme Court's Holding in Hamilton v. Lanning, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 4568 (2010)

By Prof. Kenneth N. Klee

June 14, 2010

SUMMARY: In this Emerging Issues Analysis, Professor Klee comments on the Court's ruling in Hamilton v. Lanning. Even when a statute contains a detailed and precise definition of a term or concept, the Court will construe the statute pragmatically to preserve judicial discretion to depart from the definition in circumstances when mechanical application of the definition would produce senseless results that Congress did not intend.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: 2010 Kenneth N. Klee, All Rights Reserved.

The Lesson To Be Learned:

Even when a statute contains a detailed and precise definition of a term or concept, the Court will construe the statute pragmatically to preserve judicial discretion to depart from the definition in circumstances when mechanical application of the definition would produce senseless results that Congress did not intend. Such an approach accommodates not only the language but the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code: Debtors are not required to fund amounts that their incomes no longer support, and creditors need not fear debtor manipulation by timing the filing the chapter 13 petition shortly before an expected increase in monthly income.

Legal Background:

A chapter 13 debtor typically is required to commit "projected disposable income" to the repayment of creditors over 3 to 5 years under a repayment plan. See 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(1) (2010). In calculating the amount of projected disposable income required, some courts take a mechanical approach by averaging the debtor's monthly income during a 6-month look-back period, generally preceding the date of the filing of the bankruptcy petition. See 11 U.S.C. § 101(10A)(A)(i) (2010). Other courts use a forward-looking approach which adopts the mechanical approach result as a starting point and, in unusual cases, takes "into account other known or virtually certain information about the debtor's future income or expenses." The Court pragmatically opts to uphold the forward-looking approach.

Facts and Proceedings Below:

Debtor Stephanie Lanning received a substantial one-time buyout from her former employer, causing her average current monthly income for the six months before her bankruptcy filing to increase substantially to $5,343.70, exceeding her State's median income. Under a mechanical approach, she would have been required to pay $750 per month to her creditors over the 60-month life of her chapter 13 plan. Based on Lanning's income from her new job, however, she had actual total monthly income of $1,922, well below her State's median income. Deducting actual monthly expenses of $1,772.97 from her income left Lanning monthly disposable income of $149.03. Thus, she proposed a plan to pay creditors $144 per month for 36 months.

Hamilton, the chapter 13 trustee, objected to confirmation on the basis that Lanning's plan did not devote "projected disposable income" to the repayment of creditors as required by the statute. Because Lanning's actual income was insufficient to pay disposable income calculated under the mechanical approach and her actual monthly income had decreased substantially, the bankruptcy court declined to use the mechanical approach. Instead, the bankruptcy court used the forward-looking method to compute projected disposable income based on Lanning's actual income level and confirmed a plan requiring payment of $144 per month over a 60 month period. The bankruptcy court concluded that the word "projected" in Bankruptcy Code § 1325(b)(1)(B) required consideration of Lanning's actual income as reported in her bankruptcy schedules (In re Lanning, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1639, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) P80927 (Bankr. D. Kan. May 15, 2007)).

The Tenth Circuit BAP affirmed, noting that although Congress, in 2005, had amended the Bankruptcy Code to define "disposable income," it did not define the pre-existing term "projected disposable income." Thus the bankruptcy judge correctly continued the pre-2005 practice of considering the debtor's actual income and expenses (In re Lanning, 380 B.R. 17, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 4107 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2007)).

Hamilton appealed to the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit which likewise affirmed. The Tenth Circuit panel reasoned that a bankruptcy court should start with the amount generated by a mechanical application of the statute. Although this amount is presumed correct, the debtor may rebut it based on actual income. Because Lanning proved a substantial change in circumstances, she rebutted the presumption and the bankruptcy court was correct in using an amount of projected disposable income based on her then-current income (Hamilton v. Lanning (In re Lanning), 545 F.3d 1269, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 23563 (10th Cir. Kan., 2008)).

The Court granted certiorari to resolve whether a bankruptcy court should use the mechanical approach or the forward-looking approach in determining projected disposable income (Hamilton v. Lanning, 130 S. Ct. 487, 175 L. Ed. 2d 343, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 7655 (U.S. 2009)).

Analysis:

Writing for a majority of eight Justices, Justice Alito authored an opinion holding "that when a bankruptcy court calculates a debtor's projected disposable income, the court may account for changes in the debtor's income or expenses that are known or virtually certain at the time of confirmation." The forward-looking approach is supported by the ordinary meaning of the term "projected." Moreover, in a legislative context, Congress rarely has used "projected" to refer to simple multiplication. In the Bankruptcy Code, when Congress wants to mandate simple multiplication, it uses the term "multiply." See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(b)(2), 707(b)(6), and 1325(b)(3) (2006). Furthermore, the forward-looking approach continues the pre-2005 amendment approach used by the courts to determine projected disposable income in which courts exercised judicial discretion to account for known or virtually certain changes in the debtor's income. Absent a clear indication that Congress intended to change pre-2005 amendment practice, the Court will not interpret the Bankruptcy Code to erode past practices.

By comparison, the mechanical approach's retrospective focus clashes with the express terms of Bankruptcy Code § 1325 which refers to disposable income "to be received in the applicable commitment period." See 11 U.S.C. § 1325

(b)(1)(B) (2006). Moreover, Bankruptcy Code § 1325(b)(1) requires the bankruptcy court to determine projected disposable income "as of the effective date of the plan." If the retrospective mechanical approach were correct, the amount would be determinable on the date of the filing of the petition and would not have to be determined as of the effective date of the plan.

Finally the mechanical approach produces senseless results when the debtor's actual disposable income is substantially lower or higher than the amount averaged during the 6 month look-back period. Under circumstances when the debtor's income has declined, the mechanical approach will preclude confirmation of chapter 13 plans. On the other hand, when the debtor's income has greatly increased, the mechanical approach would permit the debtor to confirm a plan that substantially underpays creditors. Thus, the Court rejects the mechanical test and adopts the more pragmatic and sensible forward-looking test to determine projected disposable income.

Practice Tips:

Creditors learning of a chapter 13 debtor's increased regular monthly income will be able to ask the bankruptcy court to increase projected disposable income at or before confirmation instead of relying exclusively on post-confirmation plan modification. Debtors filing at the nadir of their monthly earnings cannot expect to game the system by repaying creditors a low level of income based on the mechanical approach.

By the same token, debtors whose prepetition income is above the level of current income will be able to propose and confirm a feasible chapter 13 plan based on projections grounded in actual current income. The law does not require debtors to be stuck with a mechanical approach that requires them to commit to repay income at levels they cannot sustain based on circumstances changing at or shortly before the filing of the chapter 13 petition.

Return to Text

n1 Justice Scalia dissented. Using a textualist approach, he would have applied the mechanical test based on the plain meaning of the statute. By refusing to hold that Congress meant what it said, Justice Scalia contends that the Court deprives Congress of the ability to mean what it says in the future. He would trust Congress to correct the law if what it previously prescribed is wrong.

RELATED LINKS: For additional information, see Kenneth N. Klee's

■ 1-1 Bankruptcy and the Supreme Court 1.syn

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Kenneth N. Klee is a nationally recognized expert on bankruptcy law. He is a tenured professor at the UCLA School of Law and a founding partner of Klee, Tuchin, Bogdanoff & Stern LLP, specializing in corporate reorganization, insolvency, and bankruptcy law. From 1974 to 1977, Professor Klee served as associate counsel to the Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. House of Representatives, where he was one of the principal drafters of the 1978 Bankruptcy Code. He served as a consultant on bankruptcy legislation to the U.S. Department of Justice in 1983-1984. From 1992-2000, he served as a member of the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules to the Judicial Conference of the United States. From 2000-2003, and previously from 1988-1990, Professor Klee served as a lawyer delegate to the Ninth Circuit Judicial Conference. From 2005 to 2008 he served as member of the executive committee of the National Bankruptcy Conference, a capacity in which he previously served from 1985 to 1988, and 1992-1999. He also served as chair of the NBC's legislation committee from 1992 to 1999. Professor Klee is a past president and member of the board of governors of the Financial Lawyers Conference. From 2003-2008 he was named by the Daily Journal as one of California's Top 100 Lawyers. In the February 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 editions of Los Angeles Magazine, he was named one of the Top 10 Super Lawyers for Los Angeles County. Law Dragon has included him among the top 500 lawyers in the United States in 2005, 2007, and 2008. In March 2005, he was named by the Century City Bar as Bankruptcy Lawyer of the Year. In November 2006, the Central District of California Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys Association bestowed on him the Calvin Ashland Award as consumer bankruptcy attorney of the year. In October, 2007 he received the Excellence in Education Award from the Endowment for Education of the National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges. Professor Klee has recently authored Bankruptcy and the Supreme Court (2009). He also has co-authored Business Reorganization in Bankruptcy (with Scarberry, 1995, 2d ed. 2001, 3d ed. 2006) and Fundamentals of Bankruptcy Law (4th ed., with Treister, 1996), and has authored or co-authored numerous articles on bankruptcy law. Professor Klee's Bankruptcy and the Supreme Court was published in 2008 by LexisNexis.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

2 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

The New COD Deferral Election

2009 Emerging Issues 3651

The New COD Deferral Election

By Carl M. Jenks, Candace A. Ridgway, John D. Currivan and Carolyn Joy Lee

May 28, 2009

SUMMARY: In this Emerging Issues Analysis, four partners from the law firm of Jones Day offer their perspective on new section 108(i) of the Internal Revenue Code. The new provision creates a mechanism that will allow many borrowers to substantially reduce or avoid the adverse tax consequences that may be generated by exchanges or deemed exchanges of old debt for new debt, as well as repurchases or other retirements of debt at a discount.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Overview

The American Recovery and Reinvestment Tax Act of 2009 ("ARRTA")ⁿ¹ inserted a new section 108(i) into the Internal Revenue Code. That new section permits corporations and certain non-corporate borrowers to elect to defer cancellation of debt ("COD") income for up to five years, followed by ratable inclusion of the COD income over the next five years. In the simple case in which an obligor (or a related party) buys back or settles its own debt for less than face, this new election will allow borrowers to postpone reflecting COD income on their tax returns for a substantial period of time, thereby obtaining a time value benefit. More importantly perhaps, this election will often permit borrowers who have syndicated bank debt outstanding to negotiate significant modifications to that debt without running the risk that COD income will be generated as a result.

Background

When borrowing money, a taxpayer does not have taxable income, because the cash received is precisely offset by an obligation to repay that amount to the lender, thereby generating no net accretion to the borrower's wealth. If, however, the taxpayer is released from some or all of its repayment obligation, taxable income generally results because at that time the taxpayer's net wealth has increased.ⁿ² Despite this rather obvious principle of income taxation, Congress has over the years lent a sympathetic ear to suggestions that it is unfair to impose tax on various types of taxpayers who have incurred COD income.ⁿ³ After all, COD income is often associated not with prosperity or economic well-being, but with a deterioration in the taxpayer's economic fortunes. Imposing a tax on someone who has suffered such a financial reversal seems harsh.

For many years, the Internal Revenue Code and applicable case law have displayed some sympathy for this point of view by excluding from taxable income COD income triggered by a Title 11 bankruptcy discharge or when (and to the extent that) the obligor is insolvent. n4 The price exacted for the exclusion of COD income in these situations is a requirement that the borrower reduce its tax attributes (principally its net operating loss carryforwards and its tax basis in assets) in the rather complicated fashion outlined in sections 108(b) and 1017.

The current economic crisis has created severe financial problems for many businesses, but also some opportunities to work out of those difficulties. Unfortunately, in many cases the COD rules work against those opportunities. The opportunities arise because much business debt is currently trading at well below par, n5 because of the general loss of market confidence in the creditworthiness-or ability to reliably assess creditworthiness-of many, if not most, borrowers. Historical investors in such debt are now more interested in trying to purge their portfolios of doubtful debts than in investing in more. This presents a great opportunity for debtors-or their owners-with sufficient resources to strengthen their balance sheets by buying back their debt at substantial discounts. But they are inhibited from doing so by the COD rules that would impose significant current or future tax, through recognition of current taxable income or loss of valuable tax attributes, on the debtors' COD income resulting from such a debt buyback.

In addition, and much to the surprise and dismay of many borrowers that have been negotiating changes to their syndicated bank lines of credit, those changes might produce COD income even if the changes being negotiated neither reduce the face amount of the debt nor result in a reduction in the net present value of future debt service obligations. This surprising COD income results from the interaction of two different parts of the tax law: the "deemed exchange" rules set forth in the regulations governing exchanges of debt instruments, and the "issue price" rules set forth in the original issue discount ("OID") regulations. n6 Under current market conditions, the situation is materially exacerbated by the potential application of the so-called AHYDO (applicable high-yield debt obligation) limitations on interest deductions. n7

Consider the following example.

Example 1

Debtor owes its bank syndicate $100 million. The debtor's repayment obligation is secured by inventory, and bears a 9% interest rate. The debtor has made all debt service payments as they have come due, but is in covenant default. After negotiations between the debtor and the syndicate's agent bank, the debtor and lenders agree to modify the terms of the debt by adding the corporate headquarters to the collateral, increasing the interest rate from 9% to 10%, and paying $1 million in fees. Under the "deemed exchange" regulations, the existing debt has been "significantly modified," thus resulting in a deemed exchange of a new debt for the old. The debtor will have COD income if the issue price of the new debt is less than the adjusted issue price of the old debt. If the debt is not treated as publicly traded, the issue price will be the face amount, thereby generally avoiding COD income. However, if the debt is treated as publicly traded either before or after the modifications, the issue price of the "new" debt will be fair market value-generally the price at which the debt trades at or about the time of the modification-which under current market circumstances is likely to be less than face. Thus, the result of the modification would be COD income to the borrower.

"But My Debt's Not Publicly Traded."

Upon hearing this analysis, the normal reaction from corporate CFOs and tax directors is that, since their company's debt is not listed on a securities exchange, it is not publicly traded and thus there cannot be a COD issue. That reaction, while completely understandable, is not necessarily accurate in this context. An extremely expansive definition of public trading applies in this area, and there exist a variety of online quotation or trading platforms specializing in otherwise unlisted debt (including syndicated bank debt). In order to be treated as publicly traded for this purpose, a debt need not be listed on a securities exchange: it is enough that trades and/or offering prices for that debt are being reported on a readily available (including through subscription) debt quotation or trading reporting services that provide a reasonable basis for determining fair market value. n8

In simpler times, bank lines of credit were retained by the lending bank, in much the same way that home mortgages used to be retained by the banks or savings and loans advancing the funds. In more recent times, however, bank lines of credit are frequently syndicated among several financial institutions, just as home mortgages have been packaged and syndicated to outside investors. While the borrower will always know who the original members of the lending syndicate are, syndicate members may be able to transfer their positions to other qualified institutions once the line has been established, and if that happens the borrower may or may not be kept aware of those changes in syndicate membership. If changes in syndicate membership take place, and if the prices at which those transactions occur become known to other participants in the debt market (through proprietary online quote services or otherwise), the debt in question may be treated as publicly traded for these purposes, regardless of whether the borrower has had any involvement in the trading, or is even aware that it is taking place.

"But the Modifications We Are Considering Aren't Significant."

Once convinced that there is at least some concern that their companies' debt is publicly traded, CFOs and tax directors may question whether the changes under consideration are "significant," especially when they don't change the basic terms of the debt, such as its principal amount or maturity. Once again, however, the detailed rules that apply will tend to result in a modification being treated as "significant" even though it might not strike a layman as such.

The "deemed exchange" regulations lay out a number of specific rules governing when particular types of changes are or are not "significant."

- significant. n9
- significant if more than the greater of $\frac{1}{4}$ % (25 basis points) or 5% of the old debt's annual yield. n10
- significant if it results in a material deferral. n11
- automatically significant if the debt is recourse; not significant if the debt is nonrecourse. n12
- significant if it results in a change of payment expectations. n13
- automatically significant if the debt is nonrecourse; significant if the debt is recourse and the modification results in a change of payment expectations. n14
- significant if it results in a change in payment expectations. n15
- automatically significant. n16
- i.e., Equity) -- automatically significant. n17

These rules generally reflect the approach taken by the U.S. Supreme Court in the Cottage Savings case, where an exchange of one set of mortgages for another set of basically identical mortgages was treated as a taxable event for each party (thus allowing them both to recognize their tax loss), even though the two sets of mortgages were of equal value and even though the transaction was treated as a non-event for regulatory accounting purpose. n18 The basic impact of the Cottage Savings decision and the "deemed exchange" regulations was to increase the likelihood that a given change to a debt instrument would result in a deemed exchange of new debt for old.

"But Isn't the COD Income Offset by OID Deductions?"

It is true that, if a debt modification results in a deemed exchange that generates COD income, the new debt will generally be treated as issued with an equal amount of OID, which will in turn generate OID deductions over the life of the new debt. The creation of OID may not fully neutralize the cost of the borrower's COD income, however. While the COD income is generally recognized and taxed immediately, the OID deductions are only claimed over the remaining life of the instrument, and on a back-end loaded (yield-to-maturity) basis, so that the present value of the tax savings from the OID deductions may be significantly less than the current tax cost of the COD income.

In addition, because prevailing interest rates are now so low, the new debt may be treated as subject to the AHYDO rules if its remaining maturity is more than five years and the debtor is a corporation. As a result, interest deductions claimed on the new debt's OID may be postponed until actual payment (if the yield to maturity on the new debt is 500 basis points over the applicable federal rate ("AFR"), which is currently in the neighborhood of 2% for mid-term debt) or disallowed altogether (to the extent that the yield to maturity on the new debt exceeds the AFR by more than 600 basis points).

Example 2

Debtor Corp. borrows $100 million from its bank syndicate in 2007. The loan bears interest at 9%, is due in 2011, and is issued without any original discount. In 2009, the terms of the loan are modified significantly enough for a deemed exchange to occur: the interest rate is raised from 9% to 10% (an increase of more than 5% of the original rate) and the maturity is extended to 2016. Since the old debt has been quoted regularly on publicly available websites at 70 cents on the dollar, the new debt may be deemed to have an issue price of $70 million, thereby generating $30 million of OID. In that case, since the debt as modified has a remaining term of six years, it may be subject to the AHYDO rules because the yield to maturity (interest rate plus OID) exceeds the mid-term AFR by more than 500 basis points. Thus, the accrued OID will not be deductible until paid, and the amount in excess of a yield to maturity of the AFR plus 600 basis points will be disallowed altogether. The lenders, however, will still generally include the OID as interest income as it accrues, although they may be eligible for the "dividends received deduction" with respect to the AHYDO-disallowed portion of the OID. n19

The Impact of ARRTA

ARRTA creates a mechanism that will allow many borrowers to substantially reduce or avoid the adverse tax consequences that may be generated by exchanges or deemed exchanges of old debt for new debt, as well as repurchases or other retirements of debt at a discount. n20 However, the new election will not always produce the best tax result, and considerable complexity will arise where the borrower is a pass-thru entity like a partnership or an LLC. State and local tax complications also abound.

ARRTA permits taxpayers to elect to defer COD income arising from an acquisition of business debt by the debtor or certain related parties in 2009 or 2010, in a variety of contexts: where the debt is bought back by the issuer (or a related party); where there is an actual or a deemed exchange of new debt for old; where there is a taxable exchange of debt for stock or an interest in an entity treated as a partnership; where debt is contributed to capital; and where debt is completely forgiven. In lieu of current inclusion, the debtor may irrevocably elect to include the COD income ratably over five years beginning in 2014.

If a debtor elects to defer COD income in the case of a debt exchange that results in new debt with OID, the debtor's OID deductions will be deferred to the same extent as the COD income. n21 In addition, high rates of OID resulting from such transactions in 2009 will be exempted from the deduction limitations set forth in the AHYDO rules if the new debt was exchanged for a debt that was not itself an AHYDO debt. n22 As a result of these provisions, if the remaining life of the new debt is between five and ten years, the combination of the deferred and later OID deductions will offset or more than offset the deferred COD income, potentially causing the deemed exchange to produce a small net deduction to the borrower on a present value basis.

The deferral election is in lieu of other exclusions currently available under section 108. Thus, a taxpayer that is insolvent or in bankruptcy at the time of the COD event or the later income inclusion will give up its existing rights of exclusion under 108 if it elects to defer the COD income under section 108(i). n23 Each situation must be examined on an individual basis, taking all relevant facts into account, before one can decide whether making the deferral election would be wise.

Example 3

Debtor expects to generate $30 million in COD income in connection with several planned modifications to its syndicated bank debt. Debtor has $35 million in NOL carryforwards that will expire in 2010, 2011, and 2012. Debtor may conclude, after examining its ability to utilize its NOL carryforwards before they expire, that it would be better to recognize the COD income currently in order to use up the expiring NOLs, and to allow the OID deductions generated by the deemed exchange to be taken over the remaining life of the new debt instead, as long as the AHYDO limitations on those OID deductions can be avoided by having the new debt come to maturity within five years of the date of deemed issuance.

The new section 108(i) election is available to any corporate debtor, and to any non-corporate person that incurred the debt in connection with the conduct of its trade or business. In the context of a partnership, this rule raises a number of issues. For example, it appears from the language of the statute that the partnership itself must be engaged in a trade or business. n24 This requirement could be a problem for some partnerships, such as a private equity partnership whose only activity is holding the stock of corporations in which it invests, or a real estate partnership whose only asset is vacant land. Such partnerships may be treated as engaged in an investment activity rather than in a trade or business.

Another interesting issue is whether a partnership that is not engaged in a trade or business, but has a C corporation as a partner, will be eligible for any relief under the new legislation. In the context of the AHYDO rules, the tax law looks through the partnership to its corporate partners. n25 As a result, even though the AHYDO rules by their terms apply only to corporations, n26 if a partnership with a corporation as a partner issues high yield debt, the portion of the debt attributable to the corporation is subject to the AHYDO rules. Whether a similar approach will be taken in the context of COD deferral remains to be seen.

Although the deferral election is irrevocable once made, it can be made on a debt-by-debt- including, in the case of a bond issuance, on a bond-by-bond-basis. n27

The deferral ends (and all remaining COD income is recognized) upon the occurrence of a number of events, such as the death of the taxpayer, the liquidation or sale of substantially all the assets of the taxpayer (including in a Title 11 or similar case), and the cessation of business by the taxpayer. Acceleration is also required in the case of the sale or exchange or redemption of an interest in a partnership, S corporation, or other pass-thru entity by a partner, shareholder, or other person holding an ownership interest in such entity at the time the COD occurred. n28

As a technical matter, the debtor's election to defer its COD income (thereby deferring its OID deductions as well) has no impact on the timing of the lender's recognition of OID income. At least in the case of an exchange or deemed exchange of debts constituting "securities" (which would be treated as a transaction resulting in no gain or loss to the lender, and a transfer of its basis in the old debt to the new debt), the "acquisition premium" rules n29 will generally eliminate the timing-mismatch problem. Absent these rules, the lenders would have to include OID income as it accrues, and only recognize the ultimate loss on the debt upon its maturity, creating a tax cost with a present value that could be significant. (Lenders participating in an exchange that is not nontaxable would receive their deductible tax loss up front, although there still may be an unfortunate mismatch of character-capital loss, followed by ordinary income.) In the case of the nontaxable exchange participants, however, the difference between their carryover basis in the debt and its deemed issue price is treated as acquisition premium, and the acquisition premium rules reduce OID in the ratio that the acquisition premium bears to the discount. In the typical exchange or deemed exchange in which the principal amount has not been reduced, the acquisition premium will equal the discount, which will in turn eliminate all OID income that would otherwise be recognized by the holder.

Pass-Thru Entities

A number of complications can arise when the borrower is a pass-thru entity, such as a partnership, an LLC that is treated as a partnership for tax purposes, or an S corporation. One such complication relates to the election itself. If a partnership or other pass-thru entity wishes to take advantage of the opportunity for deferral of COD income, the election must be made by the entity, not by its members. n30 On the other hand, in the case of a partnership, the availability of various exclusions from recognition of COD income, such as bankruptcy and insolvency, is determined at the partner level. n31 This rule can place the decision maker in a very uncomfortable position, because those exclusions become unavailable if the deferral election is made. n32 For example, a partnership might have one partner that is bankrupt or insolvent, and another that is not eligible for any exclusion of COD income. The partnership may be viewed as favoring one partner over the other depending on whether the partnership makes the deferral election or not.

Another complication relates to the effects of the deferral election. When a partnership borrows money, the partners' respective shares of debt are treated as deemed contributions to the partnership for purposes of determining their basis in their partnership interests ("outside basis"). n33 Similarly, when partnership debt is reduced, the reductions in the partners' shares of debt are treated as deemed distributions, which can reduce the partners' outside basis. n34 If the deemed distribution to a partner exceeds the partner's outside basis, the partner recognizes gain to the extent of the excess distribution. n35 When the cause of the deemed distribution is the forgiveness of partnership debt, normally the resulting COD income is allocated among the partners, thus increasing their outside basis and offsetting the effect of the deemed distribution. n36 If the partnership elects to defer the recognition of COD, however, then there is no allocation of COD income to increase a partner's outside basis, and the partner may recognize gain as a result of the deemed distribution.

To address this problem, the new legislation includes a provision that suspends the deemed distribution to the extent that it would trigger gain. n37 The partner's basis is thus reduced to zero, and any further distribution of cash to the partner will trigger gain unless there is a corresponding allocation of income. Later, when the deferred COD income is recognized, the partner takes the suspended distribution into account at the same time and in the same amount as the deferred income that is recognized, until the suspended distribution is eliminated. n38

Example 4

A and B contribute cash of $100 million each to form a partnership. The partnership allocates all profits and losses and all liabilities equally to A and B. The partnership borrows $800 million from an unrelated lender. Each partner's outside basis is thus $500 million (the sum of the cash contribution of $100 million and the partner's debt share of $400 million). The partnership experiences losses of $700 million, which it allocates equally to A and B, reducing the outside basis of each partner to $150 million. In 2009, the partnership works out an arrangement with the lender under which the amount of the debt is reduced from $800 million to $300 million. This reduction gives rise to $500 million of COD income for the partnership, and a $500 million deemed distribution to the partners. If the partnership does not elect to defer the COD income, then each partner's allocation of COD income of $250 million will offset that partner's deemed distribution in the same amount, and each partner's outside basis will be unchanged. On the other hand, if the partnership elects to defer the COD income, then the deemed distribution of $250 million to each partner has the potential to trigger $100 million of gain to each, since each partner's outside basis prior to the deemed distribution was only $150 million. Accordingly, for each partner, only $150 million of the deemed distribution is currently taken into account. Each partner's outside basis is reduced to zero, and no gain is triggered. The remaining $100 million of the deemed distribution for each partner is suspended. In 2014, the first year of the partnership's five-year inclusion period, $100 million of the deferred COD income is recognized, and is allocated $50 million to each partner. Although the language of the statute is not crystal clear on this point, it appears that $50 million of each partner's suspended deemed distribution will be taken into account in 2014. Thus, the partners' suspended deemed distributions will be fully taken into account over a two-year period even though the COD income is recognized over a five-year period.

Another issue that arises in the context of pass-thru entities is the treatment of transfers of interests. As noted above, the recognition of all deferred COD income is triggered when certain events occur, such as death, liquidation, sale of substantially all assets, and cessation of business. For pass-thru entities, this acceleration rule also applies on a sale or exchange or redemption of an interest in the entity. n39 The statute does not specify whether a sale or exchange of one member's interest causes all the deferred COD income of the entity to be recognized, or just the member's share of that income. Although a definitive answer will have to await further guidance from Treasury, it seems that triggering only the member's share of deferred COD income would be the most sensible approach, particularly in light of the way the allocations are required to be made in partnerships.

The rule for allocating deferred COD income in a partnership is not a model of clarity. The rule tells us that the deferred COD income must be allocated to the partners in the partnership immediately before the discharge in the same manner as that income would have been allocated if the deferred COD income had been recognized at that time. Although the meaning of this is not entirely clear, the rule seems to suggest that the partnership must perform a pro forma allocation of the COD income to the partners at the time of the discharge, and then keep track of each partner's suspended COD income amount. It is not clear whether these amounts are reflected in the partners' capital accounts. The language of the statute can be read to suggest that they are not so reflected. n40 However, if they are not reflected anywhere on the balance sheet, it would seem that the balance sheet will not balance, n41 and including them in the partners' capital accounts may be a sensible solution. If the partnership's membership remains unchanged until the five-year inclusion period or an earlier event that triggers full inclusion, then allocation of the deferred COD income will be done in accordance with the partners' suspended COD income amounts. On the other hand, if a partner sells its interest in the interim, that sale presumably triggers the recognition of the portion of the deferred COD income reflected in that partner's suspended COD income amount.

There are many other unanswered questions in the context of partnerships and other pass-thru entities, such as how the rules will work in the context of tiered partnerships, and how partial transfers or redemptions of interests will be treated. Answers to these questions will have to await further guidance.

State and Local Tax Implications

As is evident from the foregoing, the new section 108(i) election has a variety of moving parts. When overlaid on the basic federal analysis, these can make the analysis of the state and local tax benefits of the election rather complex.

The first and most basic question is whether states will conform to the new federal provision, or instead decouple, needing the immediate revenues for strained state and local coffers. If, as has been suggested, some states are unwilling to follow the new federal rules, then there will be no state benefit from the section 108(i) election.

At its core, the election represents a deferral event. COD that might otherwise arise in 2009 or 2010 is instead delayed, and reflected serially in the five tax years commencing with 2014. Because taxpayers' state and local positions can change significantly from year to year, and because the attributes available at the state and local level can differ from those available federally, the state and local tax perspective on the elective deferral can differ markedly from the federal analysis.

For example, where COD arises from a simple write-down of outstanding indebtedness, section 108(i) operates to defer income, but at the price of forgoing the attribute reduction otherwise available to taxpayers who are in bankruptcy or are insolvent. Evaluating the state and local costs and benefits of that basic trade-off requires comparing the current year's state tax posture to the posture expected in future years, not necessarily an easy thing to predict.

Where, by contrast, the COD in question results from a debt modification, or a deemed modification resulting from the acquisition of debt by a related party, then the borrower has both COD and OID. Coordinating the timing of those mirrored tax items involves different considerations, particularly if there is a related party in the picture accruing interest income.

Partnerships and similar entities present other unique problems. While these may be "pass-thrus" for federal purposes, there are numerous state and local tax provisions that treat these as substantive taxpayers—for example, imposing withholding in respect of partners. Partners tasked with choosing whether a partnership should choose to make the election may well need to take into consideration not only the differing situations of the partners, but also the very practical concerns of coming out of pocket to pay taxes in respect of partners' non-cash income.

In short, addressing the world of state and local taxes, as applied to this election, may well require looking at the available options from a completely different angle.

Summary

The potential tax costs to debtors of modifying, exchanging, repurchasing, or otherwise settling their outstanding debt to relieve financial distress (and ultimately rationalize the debt market) have significantly inhibited such activities, to the detriment of the economy as a whole. Provisions in ARRTA have been designed to provide short-term relief for these tax costs and to encourage debt workouts. These provisions include optional four-to-five-year deferral of COD income resulting from debt workouts, with inclusion in the succeeding five years, an OID-matching provision, and a provision providing relief from the AHYDO restrictions on deductibility for certain exchanges occurring in 2009. These provisions may substantially reduce or even eliminate the adverse tax consequences to debtors of engaging in debt workout transactions. Every taxpayer considering such a transaction must, however, carefully evaluate whether, in its particular situation, the general tax rules or the special rules under ARRTA provide the better tax answer.

Return to Text

n1 Pub. L. No. 111-5.

n2 See, e.g., United States v. Kirby Lumber Co., 284 U.S. 1 (1931).

n3 For example, in 2007, Congress enacted sections 108(a)(1)(E) and 108(h), which exclude from taxable income COD income generated with respect to certain types of home mortgage indebtedness. (Unless otherwise noted, section references herein are to sections of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.) Similar exclusions have been adopted at various times with respect to certain types of farm indebtedness and real property business indebtedness. See 26 U.S.C. § 108(a)(1)(C), (D), (c), (g).

n4 26 U.S.C. § 108(a)(1)(A)-(B), (3). Both exclusions arise from the judicially-developed concept that the "accretion to wealth" necessary for taxable income does not occur unless and until the taxpayer becomes solvent -- i.e., has positive net worth-as a result of the COD. See, e.g., Lakeland Grocery Co., 36 B.T.A. 289 (1937); Haden Co. v. Comm'r, 118 F.2d 285 (5th Cir. 1941); Texas Gas Distributing Co., 3 T.C. 57 (1944). See generally James Eustice, Cancellation of Indebtedness and the Federal Income Tax: A Problem of Creeping Confusion, 14 Tax L. Rev. 225, 246-48 (1959):

n5 See, e.g., Alan Rappeport, U.S. Economy Shrinks at Rate of 6.1%, Financial Times, Apr. 29, 2009, available at <http://www.ft.com/cms/s/0/06299c8e-3437-11de-9eea-00144feabdc0.html>.

n6 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3; Treas. Reg. § 1.1273-2.

n7 26 U.S.C. § 163(e)(5).

n8 Treas. Reg. § 1.1273-2(f).

n9 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e); applies to all changes than those specifically listed (below), if separately or together they are "economically significant".

n10 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(2).

n11 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(3); a safe harbor of five years or 50% of original term applies.

n12 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(4)(i), (ii). This does not apply if the change occurs pursuant to certain "step-into-the-shoes" transactions, such as reorganizations, to which section 381 applies.

n13 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(4)(iii). Note that the circumstances in which a "change in payment expectations" has occurred is fairly narrow: the debtor's debt repayment capacity must change from "adequate" to "primarily speculative"-or vice versa-as a result of the modification.

n14 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(4)(iv). Substitution of fungible collateral (such as government securities) does not count for this purpose, nor does substitution of a similar commercially available credit enhancement contract.

n15 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(4)(v).

n16 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(5)(ii). This does not apply if the debt continues to be secured only by the original collateral (or its fungible equivalent) and the modification does not result in a change in payment expectations.

n17 Treas. Reg. § 1.1001-3(e)(5)(i). For this purpose, however, a deterioration in the debtor's ability to pay is generally not taken into account.

n18 Cottage Savings Ass'n v. Comm'r, 499 U.S. 554 (1991).

n19 26 U.S.C. § 163(e)(5)(B).

n20 26 U.S.C. § 108(i).

n21 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(2)(A)(i).

n22 26 U.S.C. § 163(e)(5)(F). This suspension of the AHYDO rules applies whether or not the exchange occurs by reason of a significant modification of the debt instrument, and also applies to successive exchanges. The suspension does not apply (i) to certain newly issued contingent debt instruments described in section 871(h)(4) (without regard to the grandfather exception of section 871(h)(4)(D)), or (ii) to newly issued debt instruments issued to a person related to the issuer.

N23 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(B)(iii).

n24 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(3)(A)(ii).

n25 Treas. Reg. § 1.701-2(f), Example 1.

n26 26 U.S.C. § 163(e)(5)(A).

n27 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(B)(ii).

n28 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(D)(ii).

n29 Treas. Reg. § 1.1272-2(a), (b)(4).

n30 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(B)(iii).

n31 26 U.S.C. § 108(d)(6).

n32 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(C).

n33 26 U.S.C. § 752(a).

n34 26 U.S.C. § 752(b).

n35 26 U.S.C. § 731(a)(1).

n36 The allocation of COD income increases a partner's outside basis under section 705(a)(1)(A). The deemed distribution under section 752(b) is treated as an advance or drawing of money under Treas. Reg. § 1.731-1(a)(1)(ii) to the extent of the partner's distributive share of income for the partnership taxable year. Rev. Rul. 94-4, 1994-1 C.B. 196. Since it is possible for the allocation of COD income under section 704 to be different from the allocation of debt under section 752, one should not assume that the allocation of COD income will always match the deemed distribution.

n37 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(6) (second sentence).

n38 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(6) (third sentence).

n39 26 U.S.C. § 108(i)(5)(d)(ii).

n40 The first sentence of section 108(i)(6) requires that the deferred COD income be allocated among the partners "in the manner such amounts would have been included in the distributive shares of such partners under section 704 if such income were recognized at such time." This sentence, including the reference to section 704, suggests that the deferred COD income is not included in the partners' distributive shares at the time of discharge, and that the capital accounts are therefore not credited with that income.

n41 In Example 4, if the partnership elected deferral, its balance sheet would have shown assets of $300 million, debt of $300 million, and capital accounts with total negative balances of $500 million.

RELATED LINKS: For discussion of discharge of indebtedness and IRC section 108 relief, see ■ Collier on Bankruptcy Taxation, ch. TX6.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Carl M. Jenks is a partner in the New York and Cleveland offices of Jones Day, and is the coordinator of the New York tax group. His practice covers a wide range of federal income tax areas, including bankruptcy, mergers and acquisitions, and tax controversies. His practice also involves extensive representation of privately held companies and venture capital firms, both in Cleveland and in New York. Mr. Jenks serves on the Board of Editors of Collier on Bankruptcy and is one of the principal authors of the BNA tax portfolio on corporate bankruptcy. A frequent speaker on tax topics at tax institutes and seminars around the country, Mr. Jenks is a member of the American Law Institute and the International Insolvency Institute, a Fellow of the American College of Tax Counsel and the American College of Bankruptcy and a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference. He is listed in The Best Lawyers in America. He is a graduate of Carleton College (B.A.), Duke University (M.A.; Ph.D.), and Harvard Law School (J.D.).

Candace Ridgway is a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Jones Day. Her practice encompasses corporate and general business tax law, with extensive experience in advising on the most tax-efficient structures for corporate transactions, including reorganizations and other transactions by corporations in bankruptcy. Ms. Ridgway has spoken and written on corporate transactional tax issues, particularly relating to spin-offs. She is author of two BNA tax portfolios and is one of the principal authors of the BNA tax portfolio on corporate bankruptcy. In addition, she has authored a number of Tax Management Memoranda and other articles on spin-offs and corporate reorganization and bankruptcy issues. Ms. Ridgway is a graduate of the University of Connecticut (B.A.), Arizona State University (M.B.A.), Cornell University (J.D.), and Georgetown University (LL.M. in Taxation).

John Currivan is a partner in the Cleveland office of Jones Day and is the coordinator of the tax group in that office. He has wide experience in the taxation of partnerships and limited liability companies, including a variety of venture capital transactions, private equity fund formation, corporate joint ventures, partnership acquisitions and dispositions, and complex restructurings of debt and equity interests. He also has substantial experience in tax-free exchanges involving real estate and personal property. Mr. Currivan is one of the principal authors of the BNA tax portfolio on corporate bankruptcy. He is also coauthor of a book on Ohio limited liability companies and the principal author of an article on contingent obligations in partnerships. He is a frequent speaker at the Cleveland Tax Institute, has chaired the Institute and currently serves on its Executive Committee. He also has been a speaker at the Tax Executives Institute. He is a graduate of Cornell University (B.S.; J.D.), the University of West Florida (M.S.) and the University of California, Berkeley (M.S.).

Carolyn Joy Lee is a partner in the New York office of Jones Day and is widely recognized for her extensive experience in state and local taxation. Ms. Lee's transactional practice encompasses a broad variety of planning, including in the contexts of corporate mergers and acquisitions, structured finance, asset sales and acquisitions, workouts and bankruptcies, internal structuring for issues of nexus, combination and apportionment, state and local tax planning for high net worth individuals, and the taxation of special entities such as utilities. She also has an active practice handling federal, state, and local tax audits, controversies, and litigation and advising clients considering voluntary disclosure agreements, amnesties, and financial reporting issues relating to state and local tax compliance. Ms. Lee has served as chair of the Tax Section of the New York State Bar Association and as chair of the State and Local Tax Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. She is the coauthor of a BNA tax portfolio on New York sales and use taxes and writes and speaks frequently on topics relating to state and local taxation. She is a graduate of the Johns Hopkins University (B.A.) and Columbia University (J.D.).

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

3 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

2010 Emerging Issues 4930

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

By Publisher's Editorial Staff

January 9, 2009

SUMMARY: This Emerging Issues Analysis contains links to documents related to Marrama v. Citizens Bank of Massachusetts.

ARTICLE: Choose an option below to search Marrama v. Citizens Bank of Massachusetts documents.

RELATED LINKS: To view the decision of the United States Supreme Court,
■ click here.

To view briefs filed with the United States Supreme Court,
■ click here.

To view the opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit,
■ click here.

To view the opinion of the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the First Circuit,
■ click here.

To view recent news concerning the Supreme Court's decision,
■ click here.

To view the transcript of the oral arguments before the United States Supreme Court,
■ click here.

To view the Emerging Issues Analysis, "Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank,"
■ click here.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

4 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Fifth Amendment Privilege in Bankruptcy Proceedings

2008 Emerging Issues 3181

Overview of Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings

By Publishers Editorial Staff 2008

December 18, 2008

SUMMARY: Invocation of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination can be a challenge for bankruptcy practitioners but being prepared to handle such an issue can make the difference between a debtors discharge and his or her incarceration. This Emerging Issues Analysis examines the possible issues arising from use of the privilege, including forfeiture, immunity, adverse inferences and denial of discharge.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Introduction

Although the privilege against self-incrimination provided for in the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution is rarely invoked in bankruptcy cases, bankruptcy practitioners and trustees should recognize and be prepared to address the various issues that can arise when a witness claims the privilege. A witness can claim the privilege against self-incrimination whenever he or she has a reasonable belief that compelled testimony will result in disclosing information that may tend to incriminate the witness. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). There are many instances during a bankruptcy case when the privilege can be claimed, from preparing and filing the bankruptcy schedules to trial in an adversary proceeding.

The issues arising in bankruptcy, and addressed in this commentary, include invocation of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, forfeiture of the privilege, use and derivative use immunity under 11 USCS § 344, and the consequences of relying on the privilege, such as adverse inferences and denial of discharge. Practitioners representing debtors and creditors would do well to be familiar with the privilege against self-incrimination in the bankruptcy context. Many decisions, such as whether to claim the privilege or seek an order compelling testimony withheld under the privilege, must be made early in the proceedings.

Failure to understand and properly use the Fifth Amendment privilege can result in adverse consequences for debtors and creditors. Bankruptcy cases can be dismissed and debtors can face incarceration for contempt. The administration of the bankruptcy estate can be much harder when the privilege is claimed.

The Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts noted that 967,831 bankruptcy petitions were filed in the 12-month period from July 1, 2007, to June 30, 2008. During the previous 12-month period, only 751,056 petitions were filed. Bankruptcy Filings up 28.9 Percent, Consumer Bankruptcy News (Sept. 25, 2008). With the nearly 30 percent increase in the number of bankruptcy filings, the chance that a practitioner will face the use of the Fifth Amendment privilege in a bankruptcy case also increases. The prudent practitioner will pay heed and be responsive to the claim of privilege when it arises.

Discussion

Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in General

The Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution provides the privilege against self-incrimination:

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation. USCS Const. Amend. 5 (emphasis added).

The Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination is available in any proceeding, criminal, civil, administrative, judicial, investigatory or adjudicatory, to protect a witness from being compelled to give testimony that might tend to show that the witness committed a crime. The Fifth Amendment privilege protects a witness's compelled disclosure that is testimonial and incriminatory. All three elements, (1) compelled (2) testimonial (3) self-incrimination, must exist simultaneously before the Fifth Amendment privilege can be validly claimed. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997).

Claiming the Privilege against Self-Incrimination

Only an individual can claim the privilege against self-incrimination. Corporations, partnerships, and other legal persons have no privilege against self-incrimination, even if the testimony will incriminate an officer of the entity. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.03. The individual must claim the privilege in a timely way. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). That is, when a witness is asked a question that would require a self-incriminating answer, the witness must claim the privilege. An attempt to claim the privilege at a later time, such as during a contempt hearing based upon the witness's failure to answer questions during the deposition, fails. Id.

Further, a witness may not claim a blanket Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination as to all questions during a deposition or other compelled examination. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.03. The witness must claim the privilege each time the witness refuses to answer a particular question where the answer might tend to be self-incriminating. Allan B. Diamond & Erin E. Jones, Avoiding Litigation Pitfalls: An Introduction to the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 27-3 ABIJ 20 (Apr. 2008). This permits a court to determine if the privilege is justified in each instance. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997).

If the claim of Fifth Amendment privilege is challenged, the witness has the burden to present a reasonable basis for his or her belief that the witness's testimony could result in self-incrimination. Id. Of course, the ultimate burden of persuasion with respect to the validity of the claim of privilege rests with the party opposing the claim. However, the presumption exists that the claim of privilege is valid.

Forfeiting the Privilege against Self-Incrimination

The Fifth Amendment privilege can be forfeited or waived by a witness. The witness can voluntarily waive the Fifth Amendment privilege if granted immunity from criminal prosecution for doing so. Id. The privilege may also be waived when the witness voluntarily offers testimony on his or her own behalf or answers incriminating questions. Allan B. Diamond & Erin E. Jones, Avoiding Litigation Pitfalls: An Introduction to the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 27-3 ABIJ 20 (April 2008). The privilege is forfeited if it is not invoked or if it is invoked inconsistently. Id. Waiver of the Fifth Amendment privilege is limited to the particular proceeding in which the waiver occurs. Id. There is no requirement that the waiver of the privilege be knowing and intelligent. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). As with the claim of the privilege, a blanket waiver of the privilege is not permitted.

Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy

As noted, the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination is available in any criminal or civil proceeding. This includes bankruptcy proceedings. Whenever a witness is compelled to provide testimony that might be incriminating, the privilege against self-incrimination may be claimed. For example, a debtor can claim the Fifth Amendment privilege rather than answer a creditor's question during a deposition.

A claim of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination by a witness in a bankruptcy proceeding can delay or prevent the administration of a bankruptcy estate. It can also lead to a variety of consequences from a stay of the bankruptcy case to its outright dismissal. Failure to claim the Fifth Amendment privilege may also have dire consequences for the debtor, such as a jail sentence. Therefore, a debtor's bankruptcy counsel should determine as early as possible whether and when the debtor will claim the privilege against self-incrimination. Once the claim is made, counsel for both the debtor and creditors should be vigilant that the debtor's use of the privilege is consistent. An inconsistent use of the privilege waives it.

The Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination may be raised in a number of bankruptcy proceedings, such as a debtor's testimony at any examination or deposition. When the privilege is claimed during a USCS Bankruptcy R 2004 examination, best practice dictates that the examining party should not end the examination just because the witness has indicated an intention to assert the privilege against self-incrimination as to any and all questions. To validly claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, a witness must take the oath and listen to each of the examiner's questions. The witness must specifically invoke the privilege for each particular question because there is no right to a blanket claim of the privilege. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.03. However, counsel for the witness can indicate to the examiner that the witness will continue to invoke the privilege as to all questions regarding a certain subject matter. Further, the privilege can be forfeited if it is not claimed or if it is claimed inconsistently.

11 USCS § 341 Meeting of Creditors

The Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination may also be claimed during the 11 USCS § 341 meeting of creditors. The practitioner must be cautioned that at least one bankruptcy court has ruled that a debtor's testimony in a creditors' meeting conducted pursuant to 11 USCS § 341 was not a waiver of the privilege, which the debtor later claimed in response to certain interrogatories propounded in a fraudulent transfer adversary proceeding. In Krasney v. Nam (In re Nam), 245 B.R. 216 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2000), the bankruptcy court found that the debtor had not testified to incriminating facts during the creditors' meeting.

A witness's waiver of the privilege against self-incrimination in one proceeding is not a waiver of the right in a separate proceeding. The bankruptcy court in In re Nam discussed at length the separate proceeding doctrine in the context of bankruptcy proceedings. Bankruptcy trustees and counsel should carefully consider whether the 11 USCS § 341 meeting and the adversary proceeding are two phases of one proceeding rather than separate proceedings for purposes of claiming or waiving the Fifth Amendment privilege.

Preparation and Filing of 11 USCS § 521(a)(1) Documents

The Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination may also be claimed in the preparation and filing of the 11 USCS § 521(a)(1) schedule of assets and liabilities, the schedule of current income and current expenditures, and the statement of financial affairs. 4-521 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 521.08. The debtor can claim the privilege and refuse to produce documents only if the act of authenticating the documents is incriminating. The debtor cannot be compelled to comply with 11 USCS § 521(a)(1) if he or she claims the privilege where preparing in writing the list of creditors, the schedule of assets and liabilities, and the statement of financial affairs could result in information that might be incriminating.

Other Opportunities to Claim the Privilege

Naturally, a debtor can, if applicable, claim the Fifth Amendment privilege in response to questions posed in depositions upon oral examination, USCS Bankruptcy R 7030; in depositions upon written request, USCS Bankruptcy R 7031; and in interrogatories, USCS Bankruptcy R 7033. Further, the Fifth Amendment privilege is available to the debtor in response to requests for admission, USCS Bankruptcy R 7036.

Likewise, a debtor can claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination in response to a complaint either to determine the dischargeability of a debt or to deny the debtor's discharge; in the debtor's efforts to confirm a plan of reorganization; in the debtor's preparation and filing of periodic operating reports; in response to a motion to convert or dismiss the bankruptcy case; in response to a motion to appoint a trustee or an examiner or to remove the debtor as debtor in possession; and in objection to a creditor's proof of claim.

Conversely, a Chapter 7 trustee can claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination in response to a motion to remove the trustee.

Use and Derivative Use Immunity

A debtor can voluntarily waive the Fifth Amendment privilege if granted immunity for doing so. A grant of immunity is not automatic. In a bankruptcy proceeding, immunity is governed by 11 USCS § 344, which provides that [i]mmunity for persons required to submit to examination, to testify, or to provide information in a case under this title [11 USCS §§ 101 et seq.] may be granted under part V of title 18 [18 USCS §§ 6001 et seq.].

The immunity provided to a bankruptcy witness under 11 USCS § 344 is use and derivative use immunity. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05 This immunity prohibits the use of the witness's compelled testimony in any way, directly or indirectly, which could result in criminal penalties. It does not provide immunity from criminal prosecution.

The United States Supreme Court, in Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441 (U.S. 1972) reh den 408 U.S. 931 (U.S. 1972), held that the immunity from use and derivative use provided by 18 USCS § 6002 is coextensive with the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination found in the Fifth Amendment. The Supreme Court also reaffirmed its decisions upholding the constitutionality of immunity statutes.

In Doe v. United States, 487 U.S. 201 (U.S. 1988), the Supreme Court noted that the prohibition from use and derivative use assumes that the debtor's initially compelled communication was testimonial.

As a result of use and derivative use immunity under the federal witness immunity statute, 18 USCS § 6002, the witness may not rely on the Fifth Amendment privilege against self incrimination. The witness must testify regarding the withheld matter because the grant of immunity removes the dangers against which the Fifth Amendment privilege protects.

Procedure for Grant of Immunity

The four-step procedure to be followed for a request of immunity is set out in 18 USCS § 6003. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05. First, a debtor must claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination in a bankruptcy proceeding. The debtor may remain silent unless the bankruptcy court determines that the claim is invalid. Second, if the claim of privilege is valid and a party in interest wants the withheld information produced in the bankruptcy case, someone must contact the United States Attorney for the district in which the bankruptcy case is pending and request an application for an order of immunity. In re Minton Group, Inc., 43 B.R. 705 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984); 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05.

Nothing in 18 USCS § 6003 provides a format for the request to the United States Attorney. Further, 18 USCS § 6003 does not state who may make the request. Given the potential adverse consequences of proceeding without immunity, the debtor's counsel should consider making the request on the debtor's behalf rather than hoping that someone else does.

Third, the United States Attorney has discretion in making an application to the district court for an order under 18 USCS § 6003(a) requiring a witness to give testimony or provide other information that was withheld under a claim of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. 18 USCS § 6003(b) provides that the United States Attorney may apply for an order of immunity if he or she determines that (1) the testimony or other information from such individual may be necessary to the public interest; and (2) such individual has refused or is likely to refuse to testify or provide other information on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination. There is no automatic immunity. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.04. There is no guarantee that the United States Attorney will file an application for an order of immunity. In re Minton Group, Inc., 43 B.R. 705 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984)

Fourth, only the United States district court can grant an order of immunity. As noted in In re Sealed Case, 253 U.S. App. D.C. 8 (D.C. Cir. 1986), district courts have no discretion to deny a request by a United States Attorney for an order under 18 USCS § 6003(a) compelling testimony as long as the request complies with the statute's jurisdictional and procedural requirements. The bankruptcy court has no power under 18 USCS § 6003 to issue such an order. However, the bankruptcy judge communicates the district court's order of immunity, if granted, to the debtor. Under the order of immunity, the debtor must testify regarding the withheld information upon penalty of contempt. In re Minton Group, Inc., 43 B.R. 705 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1984)

Pursuant to 18 USCS § 6002, the debtor's testimony and any information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony may only be used against the debtor in a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order of immunity. The debtor, however, is protected from 'taint' in future criminal proceedings. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05. The testimony can be used in the bankruptcy case and may aid the debtor in avoiding the dismissal of his or her case and other adverse consequences.

If the debtor is granted immunity but still refuses to testify, the bankruptcy court has discretion to issue a civil contempt order, to incarcerate the debtor, or deny the debtor discharge of his or her debts. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05. If no order of immunity is granted, the debtor may still claim the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination in the bankruptcy proceeding. Allan B. Diamond & Erin E. Jones, Avoiding Litigation Pitfalls: An Introduction to the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 27-3 ABIJ 20 (April 2008).

Consequence of Adverse Inferences

The Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination neither bars nor mandates the drawing of an adverse inference in any bankruptcy case. 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.04. The bankruptcy court may draw an adverse inference regarding certain facts from a witness's refusal to answer a question after claiming the privilege. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). That is, the bankruptcy court could decide that the testimony the witness would have given, except for the privilege, was against the witness's interests in the bankruptcy case. An adverse inference is not an admission of fact. Id. The drawing of adverse inferences is dependent upon the circumstances of the case. Id.

The bankruptcy court's discretion to draw an adverse inference is not unlimited. Allan B. Diamond & Erin E. Jones, Avoiding Litigation Pitfalls: An Introduction to the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 27-3 ABIJ 20 (Apr. 2008). The court should determine whether the adverse inference is trustworthy and whether it will advance the search for the truth. To assess the adverse inference's trustworthiness, the bankruptcy court may consider whether it is corroborated by independent and admissible evidence. Id. For example, a debtor's books and records could sufficiently support drawing an adverse inference from the debtor's silence regarding the debtor's transfer of an asset to a nonparty.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in LiButti v. United States, 107 F.3d 110, 123-125 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997), set out the following four, nonexclusive factors to guide a court in determining whether an adverse inference is appropriate under the circumstances when a witness, who is not a party to the proceeding, invokes the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination:

- (1) the nature of the relationship between the party and the nonparty;
- (2) the degree to which the party controls the nonparty;
- (3) the compatibility of interests of the party and nonparty in the outcome of the litigation; and
- (4) the role of the nonparty witness in the litigation. LiButti at 124-125.

A party in the bankruptcy case may request that the bankruptcy court draw an adverse inference from a witness's silence, but the inference alone will not meet the party's burden of proof in the case. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). While the bankruptcy court can give significant weight to an adverse inference in ruling on a case, independent evidence is needed before the court will draw inferences against a party who has claimed the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Gaumer & Nail, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497

An inference against a debtor is permissible as long as he or she remains silent. In LiButti v. United States, 178 F.3d 114, 120 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999), the Second Circuit noted that silence when one would be expected to speak is a powerful persuader. A practitioner representing a witness claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege must balance the consequences of advising the witness to claim or to forfeit the privilege. Silence that is not immunized may not be golden in the long run.

Use of an Adverse Inference

A debtor may be denied a discharge under 11 USCS § 727 if he or she conceals property or records; knowingly and fraudulently gives a false oath or account; fails to explain a loss of assets; or refuses to obey a lawful order of the court. An adverse inference drawn against a debtor in a bankruptcy case after the debtor has claimed the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination can be used to deny the discharge.

For instance, if a debtor, claiming the privilege, fails to produce documents that were shown to have been in his or her possession, a negative inference can arise that the documents would have been damaging to the debtor. See Leonard v. Coolidge (In re Nat'l Audit Def. Network), 367 B.R. 207 (Bankr. D. Nev. 2007). The bankruptcy court can use that inference to deny the debtor's discharge on the ground that the debtor is concealing records. If the bankruptcy court has ordered that the documents be produced and the debtor fails to comply, discharge can also be denied under 11 USCS § 727.

Other Consequences of Claiming Privilege

A debtor claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination faces more than adverse inferences if he or she remains silent. The bankruptcy case could be dismissed for cause under 11 USCS § 707(a). The bankruptcy court could also deny discharge to the debtor under 11 USCS § 727(a)(5) on the ground of failure to explain satisfactorily a loss of assets or for transferring, removing, destroying, mutilating, or concealing property of the debtor or of the estate, or permitting such property to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997).

Further, a bankruptcy court could determine that a particular creditor's claim against the debtor is nondischargeable. Id. Confirmation of the debtor's plan of reorganization in Chapters 11, 12, and 13 could be denied. Id. The court could strike or bar evidence presented by the debtor. Id. The debtor could be held in contempt for refusing to testify after being ordered to do so by the bankruptcy court. Id.

Stay of Bankruptcy Proceedings

Discovery in the bankruptcy proceedings can be stayed as the parties deal with issues related to a witness's claim of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997). As noted in White v. Mapco Gas Products, Inc., 116 F.R.D. 498, 501-502 (E.D. Ark. 1987), a court deciding whether to order a stay of discovery must weigh the competing interests of the party requesting the stay and the party who wants to proceed. In balancing the competing interests, the court listed five issues that should be considered:

(1) the interest of the plaintiff in continuing expeditiously with the litigation, and the prejudice to the plaintiff due to any delay caused by the stay;

(2) the burden the stay would impose on the defendants;

(3) the efficient use of judicial resources and convenience to the court;

(4) the interests of other persons who were not parties to the litigation; and

(5) the interest of the public in both the pending criminal and civil litigation. Id. at 502.

In In re Ahead By A Length, Inc., 78 B.R. 708 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987), the federal government, which was prosecuting two defendants in a criminal case related to an adversary proceeding brought by a bankruptcy trustee to avoid fraudulent transfers of a debtor's property, requested, among other relief, a protective order staying discovery in the adversary proceeding while the criminal case was pending. After considering the five factors set out in White v. Mapco Gas Products, Inc., 116 F.R.D. 498, 501-502 (E.D. Ark. 1987), the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York stayed for six months not only the discovery but the adversary proceeding.

The need for the stay was initiated by a witness's claim of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination in a deposition taken by the defendants in the adversary proceeding. A stay of discovery or an adversary proceeding is just another unforeseen development that can result from the use of the privilege in the bankruptcy context. Practitioners should take heed.

Conclusion

As bankruptcy filings increase, so do the chances that a bankruptcy practitioner will face a claim of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Bankruptcy proceedings can be very complex without the addition of issues related to the Fifth Amendment privilege. However, by understanding 1) when the privilege can be claimed, waived, or forfeited, 2) what use immunity and derivative use immunity are, and 3) the consequences of reliance on the privilege, bankruptcy practitioners are better prepared to handle those issues in bankruptcy cases.

Further, the bankruptcy practitioner should be prepared to recognize the times during a bankruptcy case when a client needs to be counseled on claiming the privilege, for instance, to prevent its forfeiture. When the privilege is claimed, the practitioner must be able to advise the client on the possibility of an order of immunity and on the consequences, such as an adverse inference or the dismissal of the case.

Finally, being prepared to address the claim of privilege allows the practitioner to protect the client's interests in the bankruptcy proceedings. Whether the client is a party or a nonparty to the proceedings, the practitioner's advice and subsequent decisions regarding the claim of privilege can prevent consequences that could jeopardize the client.

Need more information on this topic? Want to request a chart covering your specific issue? LexisNexis now offers custom charts. Simply call 1-800-227-9597 x55441 to learn more.

RELATED LINKS: For a discussion of the Fifth Amendment Privilege in Bankruptcy, see

- 2-35 Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide P 35.05.;
- 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.04;
- 3-344 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 344.05;
- 4-521 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 521.08;
- 10-7056 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 7056.02.

Allan B. Diamond & Erin E. Jones, Avoiding Litigation Pitfalls: An Introduction to the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings,

- 27-3 ABIJ 20 (Apr. 2008).

Craig Peyton Gaumer & Charles L. Nail, Jr., Truth or Consequences: The Dilemma of Asserting the Fifth Amendment Privilege against Self-Incrimination in Bankruptcy Proceedings,

- 76 Neb. L. Rev. 497 (1997).

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

5 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2009, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hedge Funds, Private Equity, and Corporate Restructuring

2008 Emerging Issues 3182

The Effect of Hedge Fund and Private Equity Lending on Corporate Restructuring

By Publishers Editorial Staff 2008

December 18, 2008

SUMMARY: During the housing market boom, hedge funds and private equity groups capitalized on opportunities to invest in distressed companies, causing bankruptcy filings to drop to an all-time low. However, the housing bubble has burst, bringing with it a credit crunch, and cautious investors. This article examines the current financial environment and analyzes the likely effect it will have on Chapter 11 filings.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

ARTICLE: Introduction

Times were good for the U.S. economy in 2006; corporate profits grew, credit was plentiful, and consumer spending was strong. Marie Beaudette, Chapter 11 Filings Seen Rising, The Wall Street Journal (Jan. 4, 2007). A strong economy also meant a slow year for corporate restructuring, as Chapter 11 filings dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade. Id. This drop in bankruptcy filings was due in part to the ability of distressed companies to easily obtain financing from non-traditional sources such as private equity groups (private investment funds that are exempt from the requirement to register with the Securities Exchange Commission under 15 USCS § 80a-3(c)(1), (7); 1-7 Investment Advisers: Law & Compliance § 7.10) and hedge funds (lightly regulated, privately held investment vehicles typically open only to select wealthy investors, Peter M. Gilhuly et al, Living on the [H]edge: New Ethical Challenges, 2007 National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges (2007)), who would lend money generally at a higher interest rate and subject to tighter conditions. Aleksandrs Rozens, Fasten Your Seatbelts: Harvey Miller, the Godfather of Bankruptcy, Says It's Going to be a Bumpy Ride. Why This Wave of Restructurings will be Different, Investment Dealers Digest (Mar. 3, 2008).

It is undeniable that in recent years hedge funds and private equity groups have had a tremendous impact on the corporate restructuring process. However, with the collapse of the subprime mortgage market and the subsequent credit crunch, a loss of funding has occurred as investors shy away from funds relying on risky instruments like collateralized debt obligations. As the economy worsens and more companies suffer from the effects of the housing market breakdown, it seems likely that the inability of hedge funds and private equity groups to finance distressed companies will lead to an increase in Chapter 11 bankruptcy filings.

This article's review of the effect of hedge fund lending on corporate restructuring is divided into three substantive sections. First, it will review how hedge funds and private equity groups have been able to prevent companies from having to seek Chapter 11 protection by various funding strategies, as well as the impact that investment in distressed companies has had on the bankruptcy process. Second, it will discuss how the subprime mortgage crisis has negatively impacted the liquidity and ability of hedge funds and private equity groups to offer financing to distressed companies by highlighting recent events, including the collapse of high-profile hedge funds and private equity groups, and discussing recent proposals for increased federal regulation. Finally, this article will examine whether this confluence of events will lead to an increase in Chapter 11 filings, concluding that a new wave of corporate restructurings is likely.

Discussion

1. Hedge Funds and Private Equity Groups Contributed to a Lull in Corporate Restructuring

During the private equity boom, lenders anxious to get into the business were willing to excise covenants that provided for some control and oversight over their borrowers' operations. Aleksandrs Rozens, Fasten Your Seatbelts: Harvey Miller, the Godfather of Bankruptcy, Says It's Going to be a Bumpy Ride. Why This Wave of Restructurings will be Different, Investment Dealers Digest (Mar. 3, 2008). If a distressed company began to suffer a liquidity crisis, a hedge fund or other lender would offer refinancing to prevent bankruptcy and the accompanying exposure of the company's financial troubles. Id. Private equity firms also got into the act, seeking to finance ailing businesses, help restore them to profitability, thus realizing a return on their investment. Jonathan Stempel, The Owner of Chrysler gets a Harsh Reassessment, The International Herald Tribune (Feb. 26, 2008). This period also saw tremendous growth in the area of distressed debt investing, in which so-called vulture funds would buy bonds no other investor would touch at a steep discount in hopes of realizing a profit when the distressed firms emerged from Chapter 11. The Vultures Take Wing; Investing in Distress, The Economist (Mar. 31, 2007).

One of the most notable private equity bailouts of ailing companies has been the purchase and subsequent privatization of Chrysler by Cerberus Capital Management, which had already become famous for earning big returns on investments in troubled companies like Vanguard Car Rental, Netherlands-based AerCap Holdings, and Montreal-based Teleglobe International. Jonathan Stempel, The Owner of Chrysler gets a Harsh Reassessment, The International Herald Tribune (Feb. 26, 2008); Andrew Ross Sorkin, A Savior for Chrysler? Read on, The New York Times (Feb. 19, 2008). Before Cerberus appeared, Chrysler had been in a failing nine-year partnership with German automaker Daimler-Benz. Joann Muller, Chrysler's Last Stand, Forbes Asia (Dec. 10, 2007). Cerberus has made headlines with the pace of the changes that it implemented: billion-dollar decisions that once took months to make occur in minutes, with engineers being told to speed up quality improvements. Id. With Chrysler, Cerberus hoped to realize the same kinds of returns as it did with AerCap, where it invested $370 million and realized a $1.5 billion return when it took the company public again.

Other private equity transactions have helped distressed companies avert financial trouble. They include an infusion of $ 7 billion into Washington Mutual by private equity firm TPG and other investors in order to boost the bank's capital at a time when it has been hard-hit with rising delinquencies and defaults in subprime mortgages, of which it was one of the largest originators in 2006, Donna Block, TPG to Lead WaMu's $7B Recap, Daily Deal/The Deal (Apr. 9, 2008); a $60 million investment by private equity firm Sun Capital Partners into the subprime lending subsidiary of investment bank Friedman, Billings, Ramsey Group, FBR Moves to Limit Subprime Exposure by Selling Majority Stake in First NLC, The Associated Press (Jul. 26, 2007); a $1.1 billion deal between H&R Block and private equity firm WL Ross & Company for the Option One mortgage servicing company, Lou Whiteman and Luisa Beltran, Ross Buys H&R Block Subprime Unit, Daily Deal/The Deal (Mar. 18, 2008); and a deal by private equity group Warburg Pincus to purchase any preferred convertible stock not publicly purchased at a $750 million offering by bond insurer MBIA and an option to purchase up to $300 million in additional shares, Peter Moreira, MBIA Races to Raise Cash, Daily Deal/The Deal (Feb. 8, 2008).

Hedge funds, which are generally exempt from regulation with the SEC and from federal disclosure requirements, have also become significant investors in distressed companies. Peter M. Gilhuly et al, Living on the [H]edge: New Ethical Challenges, 2007 National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges (2007). Like private equity firms, hedge funds approached distressed companies and offered financing when no other lender would in order to help stave off bankruptcy. Aleksandrs Rozens, Fasten Your Seatbelts: Harvey Miller, the Godfather of Bankruptcy, Says It's Going to be a Bumpy Ride. Why This Wave of Restructurings will be Different, Investment Dealers Digest (Mar. 3, 2008). The extraordinary buildup of liquidity in the economy over the last several years helped to prevent defaults from happening and to keep companies that might otherwise fail out of bankruptcy. Liz Peek, Rising Default Prospects Yield Opportunities, The New York Sun (Jan. 10, 2008). In many cases, it was not that companies were performing better, but rather the easy availability of funding from hedge funds, which pushed other potential investors out of the market that contributed to the lull in corporate restructurings. Id.

In addition to contributing funding to keep companies out of bankruptcy, hedge funds have also participated in the bankruptcy process itself, becoming pervasive and active participants in corporate bankruptcy proceedings. Eric B. Fisher and Andrew L. Buck, Hedge Funds and the Changing Face of Corporate Bankruptcy Practice, American Bankruptcy Institute Journal (Jan. 2007). Hedge funds often acquired multiple different stakes in a bankrupt debtor, such as publicly traded bonds and secured bank debt, purchased at a discount prior to the bankruptcy filing, unsecured trade claims acquired at a discount after the bankruptcy filing, and short positions in the debtor's stock. Id.

Such investors added new complexity to the Chapter 11 process. Unlike traditional vulture investors, who focused on a particular segment of a debtor's capital structure, hedge funds often acquired holdings at multiple levels, presenting strategic alternatives that sometimes put them at odds with the interests of more conventional creditors. Id.

Unlike banks and private equity groups, who typically got involved early in the bankruptcy process in order to obtain long-term benefits through restructuring, many hedge funds required short-term strategies in order to maintain liquidity, making them more likely to seek short-term returns that were not necessarily aimed at a successful reorganization, such as forcing a sale of the debtor's assets to realize quick gains on its acquired debt. Id. Unlike traditional creditors, hedge funds were not necessarily interested in transacting future business with the debtor and thus could be unconcerned about returning the debtor to profitability. Id. Finally, hedge funds with short positions on stock might not be interested in maximizing the value of the bankruptcy estate for all constituencies, but rather in maximizing returns only on their particular holdings, even if such actions were adverse to the interests of equity holders. Id. Hedge funds in such situations could actually benefit from poor returns to equity holders. Id. These positions often placed hedge funds in conflict with the Bankruptcy Code's traditional emphasis on the rehabilitation and reorganization of debtors as a going concern. Id.

Hedge funds may also become involved in bankruptcy reorganizations to obtain control over distressed companies. H. Slayton Dabney and Richelle Eisendrath, When Hedge Funds Compete, American Bankruptcy Institute Journal (Jan. 2008). This may arise out of pre-petition trading strategies that turn on control of the debtor or through post-petition efforts to provide exit financing and new equity investments as hedge funds with limited pre-petition involvement and the support of debtor management struggle for control with hedge funds that have purchased significant pre-petition interests. Id.

One highly publicized example of how hedge funds have impacted the reorganization process involved auto parts manufacturer Delphi, which had filed a reorganization proceeding in 2005. Id. At least three groups, each led by hedge funds, made competing investment proposals for the troubled auto parts supplier. Id. In December 2006, Delphi agreed to an equity commitment and purchase agreement and a pre-plan framework providing that the plan investors would agree to buy about $220 million in common stock and $12 billion in preferred stock as part of a rights offering to existing shareholders. In return, the parties would agree to support plan terms related to distributions to creditors and shareholders, treatment of claims, pension funding, and the control of the reorganized corporation. Id. One of the leading proponents of this agreement was a hedge fund affiliated with private equity group Cerberus. Id.

Another hedge fund, the second largest beneficial owner of Delphi, objected to the approval of the original framework agreement on behalf of itself and related entities. Id. The fund also submitted a December 2006 proposal to Delphi offering to buy up to $4.7 billion of the reorganized Delphi's stock subject to terms identical to the original Cerberus proposal. Id.

Delphi sought an extension of its statutory right to develop its own reorganization plan without interference from creditors for a limited period of time, a provision designed to allow companies to retain control over the restructuring process. Patrick Fitzgerald, Potential Investor Objects to Extending Delphi's Control over its Bankruptcy Reorganization, The Associated Press (Jan. 5, 2007).

The second hedge fund accused Delphi of trying to limit plan development to the original proposal. Id. Ultimately, Delphi elected to accept yet a third proposal offered by two other hedge funds, one of which was affiliated with the original proposal. H. Slayton Dabney and Richelle Eisendrath, When Hedge Funds Compete, American Bankruptcy Institute Journal (Jan. 2008).

It is clear that in recent years, market conditions were such that private equity groups and hedge funds were able to provide financing to distressed companies both inside and outside of the bankruptcy process, and that as a result of the ready supply of liquidity, the number of corporate reorganizations remained low. However, the ability of such firms to continue to provide financing in the same way as they had in prior years has grown increasingly unlikely as the economic turmoil has accelerated.

2. The Subprime Mortgage Crisis Dramatically Affected the Availability of Financing for Distressed Companies from Hedge Funds and Private Equity by Freezing Up the Availability of Credit

During rosier economic times, hedge funds often relied on leverage, the practice of borrowing money to supplement funds provided by investors, to generate above-market returns. Mila Getmansky et al, Do Hedge Funds Increase Systemic Risk? Economic Review Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta (4th Qtr. 2006). Extensive leveraging expands both the opportunity for profit and the risk of loss, so when changes in market prices reduce the value of collateral, the fund's credit evaporates and the subsequent forced liquidation of large positions over short periods of time can wipe out substantial amounts of paper wealth. Id. The less liquid and the more extensively leveraged the fund's portfolio is, the more vulnerable its capital is to a decline in market conditions. Id.

When the subprime mortgage market collapsed, the loss of value of mortgage-backed securities and collateralized debt obligations devastated many highly-leveraged funds who had invested extensively in securities backed by subprime mortgages. Maria Chan, Subprime Fallout May Stretch to $200USb, South China Morning Post (Nov. 6, 2007). The subprime market collapse led to a collapse in leverage and the resulting death of a number of hedge funds with exposure to subprime loans. Id. The resulting tightening of credit standards further exacerbated the problem. Id. Some notable hedge funds that found themselves collapsing as a result of the subprime mortgage fallout include:

- The $1 billion Basis Capital Yield Alpha Fund, managed by Australian manager Basis Capital Funds Management, had over $50 million in US assets and unsuccessfully sought bankruptcy protection. Patrick Fitzgerald, Federal Judge Denies Bankruptcy Protection for Basis Fund, The Associated Press (Jan. 16, 2008); Ross Kelly, Loans Scare Investors, The Daily Telegraph (Australia) (Jul. 23, 2007).
- Britain's Cheyne Capital Management was forced to sell one of its structured investment vehicles (SIV's), which sold commercial paper and bought longer-dated assets like mortgage-backed securities and collateralized debt obligations, to investment firm Goldman Sachs as SIV holdings shrank by over $100 billion in 2007 because investors became exposed to the subprime market collapse, drying up credit markets and causing a loss of liquidity as asset-backed securities lost value. Bill McIntosh, Cheyne SIV Agrees to Goldman Sale, Daily News (Dec. 24, 2007).

■ Swiss bank UBS suffered over $37 billion in subprime mortgage-related writedowns due to its rush to set up its Dillon Read Capital Management hedge fund in 2005. Cheap funding and an ambitious growth strategy that emphasized the importance of making profits on short-term investments made the situation worse. Much of UBS' subprime writedowns also stemmed from heavy investment in collateralized debt obligations that lost their value as homeowners whose mortgages formed the basis of the securities defaulted on their loans. Christine Seib, UBS Reveals the Failures that led to its $37bn Sub-Prime Writedowns, The Times (London) (Apr. 22, 2008); Martin Wolf, Why Today's Hedge Fund Industry May Not Survive, Financial Times (London, England) (Mar. 19, 2008).

One of the most dramatic illustrations of the impact that the subprime mortgage crisis has had involves the sudden death of investment bank Bear Stearns. Before its fall, Bear Stearns was the fifth-largest investment bank in New York, with renowned trading house, brokerage, advisory, and asset management businesses. David Victor-Smith, What Bear Stearns' Fall Could Mean for Economy, Students, University Wire (Mar. 27, 2008). Bear Stearns maintained two hedge funds: the High-Grade Structured Credit Fund and the High-Grade Structured Credit Enhanced Leveraged Fund, which invested in complex debt instruments like collateralized debt obligations and borrowed extra money to do so. Id.

As the housing market collapsed, the Bear Stearns funds lost all of their value and collapsed by mid-2007. Id. On March 14, Bear Stearns' stock lost more than 47 percent of its value, ending up with a loss of $5.7 billion in value in a matter of minutes. Id. At the same time, the bank's liquidity, which had consisted of over $21 billion in cash at the beginning of March after pressure from the SEC convinced the bank to increase its cash resources, plummeted, ending at only $2 billion by mid March, including a loss of over $10 billion in one day, and prompting calls for an emergency bailout. More Than $10bn of Bear's Liquidity Evaporated in One Day, Congress Hears, Guardian Unlimited (Apr. 3, 2008).

In order to prevent the collapse of the bank itself, rival JP Morgan agreed to buy Bear Stearns under the condition that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York guaranteed approximately $30 billion of the bank's riskiest assets. Id. After Bear Stearns' stock had reached a high price of $170 per share in December 2007, JP Morgan agreed to a final sale price of only $10 per share. David Victor-Smith, What Bear Stearns' Fall Could Mean for Economy, Students, University Wire (Mar. 27, 2008).

The collapse of Bear Stearns was so sudden and dramatic that Federal Reserve and SEC officials felt that they were forced to put up public funds to guarantee the JP Morgan purchase in order to prevent an abrupt and disorderly bankruptcy that would have threatened the nation's financial stability, according to testimony given before Congress. More Than $10bn of Bear's Liquidity Evaporated in One Day, Congress Hears, Guardian Unlimited (Apr. 3, 2008). Federal Reserve officials testified that increased risk-taking, the invention of elaborate derivatives such as subprime-mortgage-backed collateralized debt obligations, and a deterioration in underwriting standards contributed to the collapse. Id.

Dean Foster at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and Peyton Young of Oxford University and the Brookings Institution explain how the inherent characteristics of hedge fund business, combined with the sudden collapse of the subprime mortgage industry, so drastically affected financial institutions like Bear Stearns and UBS. Martin Wolf, Why Today's Hedge Fund Industry May Not Survive, Financial Times (London, England) (Mar. 19, 2008). The investment strategies of highly-leveraged hedge funds led to a high probability of modest gains and a low probability of massive losses. Id. Funds that borrow massively in short-term money markets to buy higher-yielding paper and correctly estimate the risk can, with sufficient leverage make profits for years; but such a fund is also very likely to be wiped out, at some point, if market conditions deteriorate, as they did when the subprime mortgage industry collapsed. Id.

The financial troubles caused by falling home prices and the resulting losses on mortgage-backed securities were exacerbated by poor oversight and lax practices at Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, the government sponsored housing finance giants now under government control. Committee Holds Hearing on Causes and Effects of Lehman Brothers Bankruptcy, States News Service (Oct. 8, 2008). Accused of playing a game of high-stakes musical chairs in Congressional testimony, firms like Lehman Brothers found themselves without solid financial footing when housing prices stopped rising and the foreclosures started. Id.

The packaging of investments like subprime mortgages into complex derivatives concentrated large amounts of risk into the hands of a few derivatives dealers, and created a situation where trouble for one could quickly impact the rest, wrote Warren Buffett to Berkshire Hathaway shareholders in 2003. Peter S. Goodman, The Reckoning Taking Hard New Look at a Greenspan Legacy, The New York Times (Oct. 9, 2008). Although prevailing wisdom considered the derivatives market to be a stabilizing factor due to the sharing of risk among multiple parties, that perceived stability turned infectious when the housing crisis grew and mortgages went bad. Id. Derivatives actually worsened the financial downturn because firms like Bear Stearns and Lehman Brothers, as well as their customers, were so closely linked to each other by their investments in derivatives. Id.

Collapses like that of Lehman Brothers have had a further effect on highly leveraged hedge funds. Their liberal use of borrowed money makes them reliant on entities like Lehman Brothers in order to obtain the short-term loans needed to cover margin calls. The Next Moment of Truth, Financial Armageddon (Oct. 6, 2008). Hedge funds have also seen record withdrawals of money, as investors flee to less risky vehicles. Id. In addition, the sudden loss of access to cash caused by collapses of prime brokers like Lehman Brothers, whose bankruptcy has effectively frozen billions of dollars in hedge fund trades, recent bans on short selling (a common hedge fund tactic of profiting from stocks that decline), volatile markets, and the shortage of credit caused by loss of liquidity resulting from the subprime mortgage crisis have forced additional fund liquidations and are likely to result in the collapse of many small and mid-sized hedge funds. Kate Walsh, Bonfire of the Hedgies, The Sunday Times (Oct. 5, 2008). Lehman Brothers' bankruptcy has embroiled it in a dispute with PricewaterhouseCoopers, its bankruptcy administrator, over whether the investment bank improperly transferred billions of dollars to a subsidiary shortly before its bankruptcy filing. Landon Thomas, Funds Try to Lose Ties to Lehman, The New York Times (Oct. 2, 2008). The resulting inability of hedge funds to get their money out of Lehman Brothers has turned into life or death struggle for some highly exposed funds. Id. The funds, who argue that Lehman Brothers should have segregated their money instead of making it part of routine cash transfers, are caught between Lehman Brothers, prospective buyer Barclay's Capital, and the United States Bankruptcy Court. Gerelyn Terzo, Hedgies To Lehman: Not So Fast, Investment Dealers' Digest (Sep. 29, 2008). If the hedge funds cannot recover their money, they will have to borrow money to cover their exposure, which is more difficult than ever. Id.

Finally, hedge funds themselves are vulnerable to sudden declines in the value of their assets because they themselves traded in repackaged collateral fund obligations, which are similar to the collateralized debt obligations that have brought down so many banks. Grace Ng, Hedge Funds: Next in Line? The Straits Times (Oct. 4, 2008). As ratings agencies downgrade the value of these assets, hedge funds may find themselves forced to write them down, further contributing to a departure of funds from the industry triggering fears of a collapse. Id. Indeed, the hedge fund industry, once known for its reputation for large gains, has suffered losses of 10 percent in the past year, leaving managers facing a potential run on cash as risk-adverse investors seek safety and placing underperforming hedge funds in danger of collapse. Hedge Funds at Risk of Mass Withdrawal, The Irish Times (Oct. 3, 2008).

3. The Availability of Easy Funding Before the Subprime Mortgage Collapse Delayed the Onset of a Wave of Corporate Restructuring Through Bankruptcy, But the Collapse and Its Impact on Credit Markets Has Set the Stage for a New Wave of Reorganizations

In response to the fallout from the subprime mortgage crisis, the United States Treasury Department has proposed a blueprint for regulating private equity firms and hedge funds traditionally accustomed to light regulation. Joshua Boak, Proposal Targets Private' Funds: Many Would Move Overseas, Some Fear, Chicago Tribune (Apr. 1, 2008). Under this long-term plan, the Federal Reserve would serve as a forensic accountant, entitled to review the detailed financial information of firms like Bear Stearns, whose investments could have a significant impact on the economy. Id. The blueprint proposes allowing the Federal Reserve to allow previously lightly regulated hedge funds and private equity groups to disclose information about their financial positions and would empower the Fed to force firms to correct problems with their financial stability. Id. This is a clear signal that times are changing and that regardless of the outcome, there will be an impact on companies that previously would have been able to avoid bankruptcy by obtaining easy financing from a hedge fund or a private equity group.

The subprime mortgage collapse and its broader impact on the economy has led to an increase in business bankruptcy filings, which rose 44 percent to 28,322 in 2007, up from 19,965 in 2006. Bankruptcy Filings up 38 Percent Last Year Amid Weak Economy, The Associated Press (Apr. 16, 2008). Among the businesses that have sought or may seek bankruptcy protection are The Sharper Image, Lillian Vernon, Levitz Furniture, Wickes Furniture, and Linens and Things. Michael Barbaro, Retailing Chains Caught in a Wave of Bankruptcies, The New York Times (Apr. 15, 2008).

The combination of a slowing economy, a credit crunch, and a lack of liquidity resulting from the subprime mortgage collapse, combined with high energy costs and decreased consumer spending is setting the stage for significant increase in corporate restructuring filings. A Wave of Corporate Restructuring is About to Hit; Savvy Turnaround Investors Reposition Their Portfolios, Business Wire (Aug. 20, 2007). As banks try to preserve cash supplies, short-term financing has become increasingly expensive, which makes it difficult for businesses to carry on their operations.

The collapse of hedge funds and private equity firms precipitated by the subprime mortgage crisis has, despite interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve, significantly reduced available liquidity in the market. The era of easy money is ending. Ingrid Bagby and Sheryl Saleeby, Bankruptcy Trends: What's Next in the Restructuring World? 2008 may be Remembered as the Year Bankruptcy Became Active Once Again, Commercial Lending Review (Nov. 1, 2007). The increasing cost of new loans as a result of the volatile credit market and increasingly discriminating lenders has deprived companies of ready access to inexpensive capital and force them to restructure. Further, subprime lenders themselves have sought bankruptcy protection as early payment defaults forced them to buy back loans they had resold to other investors, indicating a growing intolerance for risk in the market. Id.

This has had an impact on the broader market as well. Investors have become more discriminating, squeezing leveraged products. Id. Until the wave of subprime bankruptcies settles, they are likely to continue to impact the broader credit market. Id. The subsequent tightening of credit is likely to result in continued tightening of consumer spending, which will in turn impact companies that depend on discretionary spending to thrive, such as retail and consumer products. Id.

Conclusion

It is likely that current trends are forming the beginning of a new wave of corporate bankruptcies and restructuring. Aleksandrs Rozens, Fasten Your Seatbelts: Harvey Miller, the Godfather of Bankruptcy, Says It's Going to be a Bumpy Ride. Why This Wave of Restructurings will be Different, Investment Dealers Digest (Mar. 3, 2008). Times have changed from a few years ago, when lenders were anxious for business and willing to forego traditional contractual protections in order to book new business, confident that the level of liquidity in the market brought about by aggressive hedge funds and private equity groups would enable distressed companies to refinance if they got in trouble. Id. The market conditions that have put off a natural uptick in bankruptcy filings are gone, and as a result, companies are finding themselves without the safety net of hedge fund or private equity financing, due in significant part to the subprime mortgage fallout. Id. As investors continue to shy away from complex products like collateralized debt obligations and mortgage backed securities, credit has become harder to obtain and private equity transactions have slowed down. Ingrid Bagby and Sheryl Saleeby, Bankruptcy Trends: What's Next in the Restructuring World? 2008 may be Remembered as the Year Bankruptcy Became Active Once Again, Commercial Lending Review (Nov. 1, 2007). The recent lull in corporate restructuring depended in large part on the ready availability of financing from groups like hedge funds and private equity. Aleksandrs Rozens, Fasten Your Seatbelts: Harvey Miller, the Godfather of Bankruptcy, Says It's Going to be a Bumpy Ride. Why This Wave of Restructurings will be Different, Investment Dealers Digest (Mar. 3, 2008). As the subprime mortgage collapse has destroyed major sources of that funding by contributing to the collapse of a number of major hedge funds and the fall of Bear Stearns, that safety net is gone. Further troubles such as the collapse of Lehman Brothers have compounded the problem by tying up money that hedge funds had placed there in order to obtain the short-term financing that they need to do business. Landon Thomas, Big Hedge Funds Chasing Assets Held by Lehman, The International Herald Tribune, (Oct. 2, 2008). Without easy access to credit, companies finding themselves in financial distress may have no choice but to restructure. Ingrid Bagby and Sheryl Saleeby, Bankruptcy Trends: What's Next in the Restructuring World? 2008 may be Remembered as the Year Bankruptcy Became Active Once Again, Commercial Lending Review (Nov. 1, 2007).

Need more information on this topic? Want to request a chart covering your specific issue? LexisNexis now offers custom charts. Simply call 1-800-227-9597 x55441 to learn more.

RELATED LINKS: For a discussion of Hedge Funds, Private Equity, and Corporate Reorganization individually, see

- 1-3 Regulation of Investment Companies § 3.02;
- 1-3 Regulation of Investment Companies § 3.07;
- 1-7 Investment Advisers: Law & Compliance § 7.10;
- 7-1100 Collier on Bankruptcy-15th Edition Rev. P 1100.01 through 1100.10.

PDF LINK: Click here for enhanced PDF of this Emerging Issues Analysis at no additional charge

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

6 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

2008 Emerging Issues 866

Sommer on Marrama v. Citizens Bank

By Henry J. Sommer

November 5, 2007

SUMMARY: In Marrama v. Citizens Bank, the Supreme Court held that a debtor who has acted in bad faith does not have an absolute right to convert a chapter 7 case to chapter 13. In his expert commentary, Henry J. Sommer, the editor-in-chief of Collier on Bankruptcy, limns the Court's reasoning and suggests that in practice it is not always easy to determine the "plain meaning of the Code."

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: Supreme Court Rules That Chapter 7 Debtor Does Not Have an Absolute Right to Convert to Chapter 13

The Supreme Courts decision in Marrama v. Citizens Bank resolved a split among the courts of appeals concerning whether a chapter 7 debtor who has not previously converted from another chapter of the Bankruptcy Code has an absolute right to convert a case to chapter 13 if the debtor met the chapter 13 eligibility requirements of section 109 of the Code.

In Marrama, the debtor filed a voluntary petition under chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code. In his attached and verified schedules, the debtor made a number of misleading or inaccurate statements about his principal asset, which was a house in Maine. Specifically, he listed its value as zero, when it fact it had considerable value. Further, he denied that he had transferred any property other than in the ordinary course of the business during the year preceding the filing of the petition, whereas he had transferred the house into a newly created trust for no consideration. After the trustee indicated that he would attempt to recover the Maine house as an asset of the estate, the debtor filed a notice of conversion to chapter 13. The trustee and principal creditor opposed the conversion on the ground that the request was made in bad faith and would constitute an abuse of the bankruptcy process. In response, the debtor explained that the misstatements on the Maine property were a result of scriveners error and that he had filed under chapter 7 because he was unemployed at the time. The bankruptcy court rejected these arguments and denied the request for conversion on the ground of debtors bad faith. The Court of Appeals for the First Circuit upheld the denial of the right to convert, ruling that the right is not absolute and that a court could deny conversion if the debtor had acted in bad faith.

Affirming, the Supreme Court ruled that a debtor who in bad faith has concealed significant assets, whose case under chapter 13 would be subject to immediate dismissal under section 1307(c), does not have the right to convert to chapter 13 in the first instance. Such a debtor, the Court held, comes within the description in section 706(d) of debtors who do not have a right to convert because the debtor is not someone who may be a debtor under such chapter. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 964-66.]

The Court also found authority for its decision in section 105, because conversion of a case from chapter 7 to chapter 13 by a debtor whose chapter 13 case would be immediately dismissed or reconverted to chapter 7 could be an abuse of process of the type courts may prevent under section 105(a). [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966-67.] In particular, the Court discussed the possibility that a debtor could gain control of assets once a case is converted to chapter 13 and dissipate them before the case could be reconverted to chapter 7. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 967 n.13.]

The Court emphasized that denial of the right to convert to chapter 13 should be limited to extraordinary cases of bad faith and should not apply to other cases. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966 n.11.] It also suggested that the showing of bad faith necessary to deny conversion should be very clear, and more than might be required for denial of plan confirmation under section 1325(a)(3). [Id.]

The Court rejected the position of four dissenting justices that the plain language of the Code provides for an alternative procedure to handle bad faith conversions, namely the dismissal or reconversion of the case after it is converted to chapter 13, and that the right of a statutorily eligible debtor to convert to chapter 13 is absolute. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 967-69.] The dissent also argued that section 105(a) could not be used to contravene the Code's plain language, although it could have served as authority to enter orders to prevent actions, such as dissipation of property, that the majority feared could occur in a bad faith conversion. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d 956, 971-72.]

The decision once again shows that, although the Court frequently espouses the plain meaning approach to interpreting the Bankruptcy Code, it may not always follow that approach, at least as it is interpreted by Justice Scalia, its foremost proponent, who joined the dissent. [But see BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 114 S. Ct. 1757, 128 L. Ed. 2d 556, 30 C.B.C.2d 345 (1994), in which Justice Scalia seemingly ignored the plain meaning of the word value and found it to be the amount realized for a property at a foreclosure sale.] At a minimum, the decision demonstrates that in practice it is not always easy to determine the plain meaning of the Code.

Perhaps even more intriguing is the Court's use of section 105(a) as an alternative basis for its decision. The Court suggests that the broad authority of that provision is surely adequate to short-circuit the usual procedure of conversion followed by a reconversion if that is necessary to prevent an abuse of process. [Marrama, 166 L. Ed. 2d at 966-67.] In light of many lower court holdings that section 105(a) cannot be used to circumvent the specific provisions of the Code, it will be interesting to see if courts now will rely on this language in taking actions that appear contrary to the Code's standard procedures.

For further discussion of conversion from chapter 7 to chapter 13, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed. rev., 706.02, and Collier Consumer Bankruptcy Practice Guide, 24.03.

For further discussion of the bankruptcy courts' power under Code section 105, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed. rev., ch. 105.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Henry J. Sommer is Supervising Attorney at the pro bono Consumer Bankruptcy Assistance Project in Philadelphia. He has litigated many major cases involving bankruptcy, consumer law, civil rights, and other issues. Previously, he was the head of the Consumer Law Project at Community Legal Services in Philadelphia, where he worked for over 21 years. Mr. Sommer has also served as a Lecturer-in-Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Mr. Sommer is Editor-in-Chief of Collier on Bankruptcy and the entire Collier line of bankruptcy publications. He is the author of Collier Consumer Bankruptcy Practice Guide (Matthew Bender) and Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice, (Natl Consumer Law Center, 8th ed. 2006) and the coauthor of Collier Family Law and the Bankruptcy Code (Matthew Bender). Mr. Sommer is a former member of the Federal Judicial Conference Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules and a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference. He is a Fellow of the American College of Bankruptcy, a member of the American Law Institute, and a former member of the Federal Reserve Board Consumer Advisory Council. He is also President of the National Association of Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys (NACBA). He has been asked to testify many times before the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, as well as the National Bankruptcy Review Commission, on bankruptcy and consumer law issues. Mr. Sommer was the first recipient of the National Consumer Law Centers Vern Countryman Consumer Law Award. He received his A.B. degree from Harvard College, magna cum laude and his J.D. degree from Harvard Law School, cum laude.

7 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Dana Corp.

2008 Emerging Issues 867

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Dana Corp.

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 5, 2007

SUMMARY: One of the outstanding questions created by the 2005 bankruptcy legislation is whether Code section 546 provides an independent federal right of reclamation to sellers who provide goods to insolvent buyers. A leading bankruptcy court has now ruled on the issue. In his expert commentary, the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey describes the decision and its context, and trenchantly parses the court's reasoning, concluding that the issue will not be definitively settled until there is further judicial action.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: S.D.N.Y. Bankruptcy Court Holds That Revised Section 546(c) Does Not Create A New Federal Right Of Reclamation In Bankruptcy

One of the many questions created by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 (BAPCPA) is whether the modifications to section 546(c) of the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C.) give rise to a new federal right of reclamation. Bankruptcy Judge Burton R. Lifland, of the Southern District of New York, is the first judge squarely to address this question. In In re Dana Corp., 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007), he expressly held that amended section 546(c) does not create a federal right of reclamation.

Framing the Debate. In late 2005, the Bankruptcy Code was substantially amended by BAPCPA. Among the many changes to the Code was an overhaul of the reclamation provisions contained in section 546(c). The substantive effect of many of the changes was clear; among other things, BAPCPA (1) extended the reclamation reach-back period from 10 to 45 days, (2) expanded the postpetition grace period from 10 to 20 days, and (3) created an entirely new kind of administrative expense claim for parties that sell goods to a debtor within 20 days of the petition date.

Among the more confusing changes to section 546(c) is Congress's decision to remove the phrase any statutory or common law before right of a seller of goods that has sold goods to the debtor and replace it with the word the. It was common practice under pre-BAPCPA doctrine for courts and parties to reference state law, most often section 2-702 of the Uniform Commercial Code, to define the contours of any right a seller of goods that has sold goods to the debtor may have under section 546(c). See, e.g., In re Coast Trading Co., 744 F.2d 686 (9th Cir. 1984). Such a practice was clearly appropriate because a reclamation right arising under section 2-702 of the U.C.C. is a statutory or common law right. BAPCPA's use of the definite article the instead of statutory or common law gives rise to substantial questions about whether it remains appropriate to reference the U.C.C. or other state law when analyzing reclamation issues in bankruptcy. See generally Sally S. Neely, How BAPCPA Affects the Rights of Unpaid Prepetition Sellers of Goods, 32nd Lawrence P. King & Charles Seligson Workshop on Bankruptcy and Business Reorganization, at 12-24 (Sept. 27-29, 2006) (discussing various issues arising from amended section 546(c), including a number of arguments for and against the proposition that amended section 546(c) creates a new federal right). As noted in the Dana opinion: Congress provided no explanation in the legislative history of section 546(c) for what it intended by this deletion. 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466, at *17. Thus, a critical issue facing courts after BAPCPA is whether Congress modified section 546(c) so as to give rise to a new fount of reclamation rights--a locus wholly detached from the U.C.C. and other applicable nonbankruptcy law.

The Facts and Posture of Dana. The underlying debtors in Dana (the Debtors) were part of a sizeable family of corporations and entities that manufactured and supplied various equipment used in the automotive industry. Soon after the Debtors filed for bankruptcy, Judge Lifland entered an order establishing procedures for reclamation claims. The Debtors then received over 450 letters from various parties (the Reclamation Claimants) demanding the return of certain goods and asserting putative reclamation claims of nearly $300,000,000.

In response to the many reclamation demands, the Debtors (1) filed a notice reconciling the reclamation claims and (2) argued that a so-called Prior Lien Defense rendered the claims valueless. Specifically, the Debtors maintained that the existence of significant prepetition secured indebtedness, which debt was secured by liens on substantially all of the Debtors assets, including the goods sought to be reclaimed, functioned to reduce the value of all the reclamation claims to zero. (These liens were not only the product of prepetition contracts, but also stemmed from postpetition replacement liens approved by the court in connection with a debtor-in-possession credit facility.)

The Reclamation Claimants countered the Debtors Prior Lien Defense by arguing that the prepetition debt was satisfied by a source other than the underlying goods (i.e., the debtor-in-possession financing), which meant that the prior lien on the goods was released, and thus the reclamation claims could be valued in full. As legal authority for their position, the Reclamation Claimants relied upon In re Phar-Mor, Inc., 301 B.R. 482 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2003). In the alternative, the Reclamation Claimants asserted that the post-BAPCPA version of section 546(c) created a new federal right of reclamation that is not subject to previous case law interpreting and applying the pre-BAPCPA version of section 546(c).

The Dana Opinion. The courts substantive opinion proceeded in three stages. The court began its analysis by providing a brief overview of reclamation law prior to BAPCPA and of the changes effected by the BAPCPA. See 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1466, at *11-16. The court then turned its attention to the Reclamation Claimants argument that the deletion of the reference to state law in the amended section 546(c) no longer incorporates the state law right of reclamation, and instead creates a brand new federal bankruptcy law right. Id. at *17. The court disagreed for numerous reasons.

First, the court found section 546(c)s placement in the Bankruptcy Code significant. Specifically, section 546(c) is grouped with the other provisions of section 546 under the heading Limitations on avoiding powers. Consequently, section 546 is not a section dedicated to granting an independent federal right of reclamation nor does it create a coherent comprehensive federal scheme for reclamation. Id. at *19. Furthermore, the court also noted how if amended section 546(c) was a new federal reclamation right arising under the Bankruptcy Code, it would not be subject to the avoiding powers. Id. at *20.

Second, the court cited several Supreme Court cases to support a framework of interpretation that requires clear congressional intent to alter past bankruptcy practice via a statutory change. See id. at *21. This principle, when combined with the absence of any legislative history and the fact that Congress did not use the language of creation in BAPCPA, further supported the conclusion that section 546(c) does not give rise to a new federal right. See id. at *19-21.

Third, the court discussed several problems arising from the fact that section 546(c) does not create a coherent comprehensive federal scheme for reclamation. Foremost on the court's mind was the fact that, while section 546(c) explicitly addresses the prior rights of a secured creditor, it does not deal with the rights of other purchasers or buyers of goods. Id. at *21-22. As a result, any federal right of reclamation would arguably give a reclaiming seller broad rights superior to those of buyers in the ordinary course of business, lien creditors or good faith purchasers. Id. at *22. The court thought that such a result would be absurd and could not have been intended by Congress. Id. The court was further troubled by the fact that section 546(c) contains no reference to long-established defenses to reclamation, including those arising when (1) the goods have already been paid for, (2) the seller was aware of the debtor's insolvency, (3) the goods have been commingled, or (4) the goods are no longer in the debtor's possession. Id. at *23-24. At bottom, the court simply seemed to believe that the text of amended section 546(c) is too scant to give rise to a distinct, substantive right. Id. at *24-25 (stating that the use of the definite article the . . . indicates that the right already exists and concluding that the only available referent for such prior rights is nonbankruptcy law).

Fourth and finally, the court concluded that a new bankruptcy-specific reclamation right would be at odds with the general principle that the filing of a bankruptcy petition, by itself, should not serve to enhance the rights of one set of creditors at the expense of other creditors. Id. at *25-26; see also generally Thomas H. Jackson, The Logic and Limits of Bankruptcy Law (1986) (developing the proposition that the proper role of bankruptcy law is to provide a collective forum that overlays, rather than supplants, the substantive rights created by nonbankruptcy law).

After concluding that the amended 546(c) does not create a new federal right of reclamation, id. at *26, the court turned to the Debtors Prior Lien Defense. Here, the court faced a conflict between the decisions in In re Dairy Mart Convenience Stores, Inc., 302 B.R. 128 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003), and In re Phar-Mor, Inc., 301 B.R. 482 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2003). The court ultimately concluded that Dairy Mart is the better decision, thereby rejecting the reasoning of Phar-Mor. More specifically, the court noted how prepetition liens arising from secured credit can be integrated with postpetition liens arising from a debtor-in-possession facility and the related adequate protection provided to a prepetition secured creditor. Id. at *33-34. Hence, if the goods securing the prepetition credit either are used to satisfy the prepetition indebtedness or are used as collateral for the debtor-in-possession facility, the functional effect is that the goods are used to satisfy the prepetition debt. The net result of such a process is that any reclamation claims smaller than the prior lienholders' claim are rendered valueless pursuant to the Prior Lien Defense. Id. at *34.

Commentary on the Dana Opinion. Although the discussion of the Prior Lien Defense in Dana is interesting and adds to a growing body of jurisprudence on the subject, the Dana opinion is particularly noteworthy because it is among the first decisions squarely to address the nature of reclamation rights in bankruptcy following BAPCPA.

The four core points on which Judge Lifland based his rejection of a federal right of reclamation are cogent and compelling. Nevertheless, the Dana opinion is unlikely to resolve fully all questions about the nature of the rights referenced by, or arguably created by, section 546(c). After all, while Congress may not have provided specific discussion of its intent in the BAPCPA's legislative history, it is unclear what purpose could be served by deleting the phrase any statutory or common law before the word right and replacing it with the other than uncoupling state law reclamation rights from the bankruptcy process. Moreover, amended section 546(c) plainly provides some detail about the extent of reclamation rights in bankruptcy, such as the expanded 45 and 20-day periods. These expanded time periods presumably could not be narrowed or eliminated by contrary state legislation due to federal preemption principles. Thus, section 546(c) unquestionably contains some definition of the extent to which a reclamation right will be countenanced in bankruptcy. It is not an extreme analytic leap to conclude that it is therefore appropriate to wrap the entirety of reclamation in bankruptcy in the cloak of federal law. As such, Dana arguably does not reach the right result.

It may be the case, however, that the debate about whether reclamation is a product of state law, such as the U.C.C., or of federal bankruptcy law is in some respects about a distinction without a difference. This conclusion flows from the Supreme Court's opinion in United States v. Kimbell Foods, Inc., 440 U.S. 715, 59 L. Ed. 2d 711 (1979), which involved the question of how to fix the priority of liens arising under a federal lending program. The Court ultimately held that while the issue was one of federal law, the readymade body of state law should be adopted as the proper federal rule of decision until Congress strikes a different accommodation since there were no concrete reasons for rejecting well-established commercial rules which have proven workable over time. 440 U.S. at 740. The rationale for incorporating generally applicable state law principles of commercial law into the federal law was aptly stated by Judge Richard A. Posner when he observed that the federal courts have neither the time nor the specialized knowledge to forge a new body of commercial law; by doing so they would simply be adding to the already excessive complexity of American law. United States v. Stump Home Specialties Mfg., Inc., 905 F.2d 1117, 1119 (7th Cir. 1990). Under these principles, then, it seems appropriate to look to case law interpreting section 2-702 of the U.C.C. to fill the many gaps remaining in the post-BAPCPA version of section 546(c). As a result, the substantive nature of any federal right of reclamation may mirror the nature of such a right under applicable state law. While problems could arise if the underlying state law is some non-uniform variant of section 2-702 of the U.C.C., much of the force of the federal right vs. non-federal right dispute seems to dissipate in light of Kimball Foods.

In sum, Dana is a well-reasoned decision that provides a comprehensive analysis of various issues flowing from the BAPCPA's changes to section 546(c) of the Bankruptcy Code. Nevertheless, uncertainty about the true nature of section 546(c) will likely persist until there is further judicial (and perhaps appellate) review.

For a complete discussion of Code section 546, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 546 (Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

8 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Fortune Natural Resources Corp.

2008 Emerging Issues 868

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Fortune Natural Resources Corp.

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 5, 2007

SUMMARY: A bankruptcy court in Louisiana turned down a request for compensation from members of a debtor companys board of directors for services rendered during the companys bankruptcy case. As the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey explains in his expert commentary on the case, the court took the minority position and determined that the board members were acting as professionals and should have sought appointment under Code section 327.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: As Professionals, Members of Board of Directors Were Required to Apply for Compensation under Code Section 327; Their Work Did Not Qualify as an Administrative Expense under Code Section 503(a)(1)(B)

In April 2007, the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana considered a request by members of a board of directors for allowance of compensation as an administrative expense under Bankruptcy Code section 503(b)(1)(A). The bankruptcy court denied the request, finding that the directors were professionals under Bankruptcy Code section 327, and were consequently precluded from obtaining compensation under Bankruptcy Code section 503(b)(1)(A). In re Fortune Natural Resources Corp., 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1350 (Bankr. E.D. La. Apr. 12, 2007). Facts. On April 10, 2006, the Bankruptcy Court confirmed the reorganization plan (the Plan) filed by Fortune Natural Resources Corporation (the Debtor). Shortly after confirmation, the Debtors former directors (the Directors) filed a motion under Bankruptcy Code section 503(b)(1)(A) seeking allowance of an administrative claim in the amount of $275,000 for services rendered to the Debtor during the bankruptcy case. The Unsecured Creditors Committee and the Plans Disbursement Trustee filed oppositions to the Directors motion.

Courts Legal Analysis. Bankruptcy Code section 503(b)(1)(A) provides that [a]fter notice and a hearing, there shall be allowed administrative expenses . . . including . . . the actual necessary costs and expenses of preserving the estate.

In reviewing the Directors motion, the bankruptcy court initially referred to controlling Fifth Circuit authority on administrative claims, which maintains that in order to qualify as an actual and necessary cost under section 503(b)(1)(A), a claim against the estate must have arisen post-petition and as a result of actions taken by the trustee that benefited the estate. Total Minatome Corp. v. Jack/Wade Drilling, Inc. (In re Jack/Wade Drilling, Inc.), 258 F.3d 385, 387 (5th Cir. 2001). The bankruptcy court also pointed out that the Directors had the burden of proving that their claim was for actual and necessary costs and that the words actual and necessary were to be narrowly construed to mean that the debt must benefit the estate and its creditors. See In re Transamerican Natural Gas Corp., 978 F.2d 1409, 1415 (5th Cir. 1992). Finally, the bankruptcy court stated that the Directors request was subject to heightened scrutiny, since the Directors were fiduciaries and there was no independent trustee in the case.

Generally, a debtors corporate officers and directors do not need court approval to continue their employment and obtain compensation for their professional services. See Collier on Bankruptcy 330.03[5] (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender); In re All Seasons Indus., 121 B.R. 822 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1980). However, according to the Fortune court, this presumption applies only if the terms and conditions of the postpetition employment and compensation are identical to the prepetition terms and conditions. In Fortune, before filing for bankruptcy protection, the Debtor compensated the Directors through payment of warrants or shares of the Debtor. However, in their motion, the Directors sought payment of cash. Therefore, the Court found that the Directors could not rely on the precedent set forth in All Seasons and other cases to obtain payment of fees.

In considering the Directors request, the Bankruptcy Court analyzed the actions performed by the Directors during the case and placed them in two categories: (1) actions that would be expected from the directors of a company in bankruptcy; and (2) activities that would be performed by professionals that need their employment to be approved by the bankruptcy court under Bankruptcy Code section 327(a). The activities in the second category included (i) filing a chapter 11 petition, (ii) negotiating DIP financing, (iii) working with consultants to build financial models, (iv) negotiating bids for the Debtors assets, (v) preparing schedules, (vi) evaluating litigation claims, (vii) negotiating with the Committee, (viii) drafting settlement agreements, (ix) preparing objections to claims and settling claims and (x) drafting the plan. Given that the second group of activities consist[ed] entirely of activities the court would expect a professional person approved by the court under § 327 to perform, the court concluded that the Directors were professional persons who needed to obtain court approval of their employment.

The court then held that bankruptcy professionals cannot utilize section 503(b)(1)(A) to obtain approval of compensation claims. In support of this assertion, the court cited a bankruptcy court decision from the Southern District of Georgia:

The . . . question is whether an individual who serves as a professional within the meaning of Section 327 . . . may . . . receive compensation under 503(b)(1) for actual and necessary services rendered to preserve the estate. While some cases authorize payments to professionals who fail to meet the requirements of Section 327, the majority, and better reasoned cases do not. The rationale is clear. To apply Section 503(b)(1) to professional compensation would make the language of Section 503(b)(2) superfluous. Congress enacted Sections 327, 330(a), and 503(b)(2) to provide the exclusive method for a debtors retention of professionals, subject to numerous safeguards, including the requirement of disinterestedness. A court should not circumvent the limitations placed on retention of professionals by compensating a disqualified professional under Section 503(b)(1)(A). Instead, Section (b)(1)(A) is properly applicable only to authorize priority treatment of non-professional employee claims, including wages, salaries, and commissions.

In re Concrete Prods., 208 B.R. 1000, 1010 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

Applying the law to the facts before it, the bankruptcy court denied the motion. Since the Directors were professionals, they were obligated to file employment applications under Code section 327. The Directors failure to file such applications precluded them from obtaining any compensation from the Debtors bankruptcy estate.

Commentary. The most notable part of the Fortune opinion is the bankruptcy courts decision that the Directors were professionals under Code section 327. The Fortune decision represents the minority view on whether directors and officers are professionals who must obtain bankruptcy court approval of their employment. Generally, courts do not require debtors to seek approval to compensate officers and directors, because courts are reluctant to become involved in the day-to-day administration of the debtors estates. As stated in Collier on Bankruptcy: The employment and compensation of officers of the debtor should be considered within the ordinary course of the debtors business subject to oversight by other parties in interest. Collier on Bankruptcy, 330.03[5] (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender).

The Fortune court initially suggests that it would have approved the Debtors postpetition compensation of the Directors on the same terms that existed prepetition without a court order. However, this proposition conflicts with the courts later statements that all professionals seeking compensation must obtain approval under Code section 327. The safest reading of the Fortune decision (and those courts taking the minority position) is that officers and directors who engage in tasks that are intimately involved in the administration of the debtors estate must first obtain a court order authorizing their employment and compensation.

But if directors determine that they must seek a court order authorizing their employment as professionals, they cannot rely on section 327(a). To be employed under section 327(a), a professional must show that he or she is disinterested. Pursuant to Code section 101(14), an individual can be disinterested only if the individual is not an insider under section 101(31)(b). However, the definition of insider includes directors. Accordingly, a director can never be disinterested, and consequently can never properly be employed under section 327(a).

Rather, a director must obtain employment approval under Code section 327(b), which states that [i]f the [debtor in possession] is authorized to operate the business of the debtor . . . and if the debtor has regularly employed attorneys, accountants, or other professional persons on salary, the [debtor in possession] may retain or replace such professional persons in the operation of such business. Hence, if a director is planning to take responsibility for tasks that are central to the administration of the bankruptcy estate, it should file an application for employment under Code section 327(b) and Rule 2014 at the commencement of the debtors bankruptcy case.

However, some bankruptcy courts have adopted local rules and United States Trustee Guidelines that eliminate the need for court approval of employment under Code section 327(b).

For example, in the Central District of California, certain procedures for payment to insiders that were promulgated by the Office of the United States Trustee (OUST) have been adopted by the bankruptcy courts. At the inception of a bankruptcy proceeding in the Central District of California, a debtor must file a Notice of Setting/Increasing Insider Compensation for each director (the Insider Notice) with the OUST. The Insider Notice is served on the debtors secured creditors and the creditors committee or the 20 largest unsecured creditors (if no committee has been appointed). Parties have 15 days to object to the Insider Notice, and if an objection is filed, the Bankruptcy Court must resolve the issue at a hearing. However, if there are no objections to the Insider Notice, the debtor is authorized to pay the proposed compensation to the director without a court hearing. Obviously, before filing a chapter 11 petition, debtors should review the Local Bankruptcy Rules and Local OUST Guidelines in order to ensure compliance with the appropriate procedure for compensation of officers and directors.

The implication of Fortune is that one person may wear two hats, that of a director and that of a professional. In those cases, compensation must be sought under two different regimes.

For a discussion of the employment of professional persons, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 327 (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender) and Collier Compensation, Employment and Appointment of Trustees and Professionals in Bankruptcy Cases, ch. 1, (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of compensating the officers of the estate, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 330 (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the allowance of administrative expenses, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 503 (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

9 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on VFB LLC v. Campbell Soup Co.

2008 Emerging Issues 869

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on VFB LLC v. Campbell Soup Co.

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 5, 2007

SUMMARY: The Third Circuit has held that market data are a more reliable measure of market value than expert witness testimony. In his expert commentary, the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey suggests that, although VFP LLC v. Campbell Soup Co. will be much cited in all valuation disputes involving publicly traded companies, a close reading of the decision indicates that its impact should be circumscribed.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: The Third Circuit Prefers Market Capitalization Data Over Expert Witness Testimony in Determining Reasonably Equivalent Value

In VFB LLC v. Campbell Soup Co., 482 F.3d 624 (3d Cir. 2007), the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit relies on an objective rule for determining value in the context of fraudulent transfer litigation involving a publicly traded company. Although the case arose out of litigation premised on New Jersey's version of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, the Third Circuit's rationale for preferring market capitalization data over hindsight expert witness testimony is applicable to other valuation disputes involving publicly traded companies. Based on the continuing popularity of the District of Delaware as a venue for chapter 11 cases, the Third Circuit's decision in VFB will be much cited.

Facts. The case arose out of a plan by Campbell Soup Co. to improve its stock price by disposing of certain underperforming subsidiaries and product lines. To implement its strategy, Campbell Soup created a wholly owned subsidiary in 1998, Vlastic Foods International, Inc., to spin off those underperforming divisions and product lines. In what is described as a leveraged spin transaction, Vlastic Foods paid $500 million to Campbell Soup for those assets, the funding for which came from a loan secured by all of Vlastic Foods newly acquired assets. Campbell Soup then distributed the stock of Vlastic Foods to its own shareholders as an in-kind dividend.

The terms of the leveraged spin transaction were negotiated by Campbell Soup and a group of high-ranking Campbell Soup employees, who eventually became the future management of Vlastic Foods. According to the testimony of the future Vlastic Foods managers, Campbell Soup dictated the terms of the negotiations. The businesses to be transferred to Vlastic Foods and the Vlastic Foods initial debt level (i.e., the amount Campbell Soup got paid) were not negotiable. The future Vlastic Foods managers also testified that they were not given sufficient resources to analyze and research the transaction and, as a result, the transaction contained various terms unfavorable to Vlastic Foods. Nevertheless, the deal closed on March 30, 1998, after the transaction was approved on Vlastic Foods side by pre-spin directors, who were also Campbell Soup executives and who understood their sole task to be approving the transaction and then resigning. Essentially, through the leveraged spin transaction, Campbell Soup removed underperforming businesses from its balance sheets and received $500 million in cash without encumbering any of its remaining valuable assets.

Soon after the closing of the transaction, it was discovered that Campbell Soup had inflated earnings for the businesses transferred to Vlastic Foods prior to the spin-off by, among other things, giving bulk discounts and other promotions to increase short term sales. This had the effect of decreasing later sales. As a result, by June 1998, just three months after the closing, Vlastic Foods had to lower its earnings estimates from $143 million to $70 million for the fiscal year 1998. Nevertheless, because the earnings inflation was generally known in the market, the price of Vlastic Foods shares on the New York Stock Exchange remained essentially steady for a time, and its market capitalization did not drop below $1.1 billion until January 1999. Vlastic Foods business continued to struggle. The entity took on more debt in hopes of surviving, in the form of $200 million in unsecured bonds sold to institutional investors. These measures were unavailing, and Vlastic Foods filed chapter 11 bankruptcy in 2001.

Before and during the chapter 11 bankruptcy case, Vlastic Foods sold its assets piecemeal, generating $504 million. This price may be discounted back to $385 million as of the time of the spin-off--meaning the assets were sold for $115 million less than Vlastic Foods paid for them in March of 1998.

Under its plan of reorganization, Vlastic Foods assigned all of its legal claims and causes of action against Campbell Soup to VFB, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company, whose members were the impaired unsecured creditors of Vlastic Foods bankruptcy estate. VFB initiated an adversary proceeding against Campbell Soup, alleging that the leveraged spin transaction was a constructive fraudulent transfer under Bankruptcy Code section 544(b) and New Jerseys version of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act.

The District Courts Decision. A key issue at trial before the district court was whether the assets acquired by Vlastic Foods in March 30, 1998, were in fact worth the $500 million that Vlastic Foods paid for them. The parties presented the district court with three types of evidence on reasonably equivalent value: (1) market capitalization data based on the price at which Vlastic Foods shares were trading on the New York Stock Exchange; (2) various valuations prepared before and soon after the spin-off; and (3) testimony from expert witnesses. The first and second types of evidence generally showed that the divisions and product lines spun off to Vlastic Foods were worth above $500 million, meaning Vlastic Foods received reasonably equivalent value. VFB, therefore, relied on the third type of evidence, expert testimony, including discounted cash flows, to prove that the transfer of assets as part of the leveraged spin transaction was not for reasonably equivalent value.

Unfortunately for VFB, the district court concluded that both sides expert testimony was flawed, primarily due to hindsight bias--in this case the use of assumptions by the expert witnesses that were not publicly available at the time of and soon after the spin-off. Instead, the district court believed that the market capitalization evidence, produced by one of the most efficient capital markets in the world, was dispositive evidence of the value of the assets spun off to Vlastic Foods. As a result, the district court concluded that Vlastic Foods did receive reasonably equivalent value for the assets spun off by Campbell Soup.

The Third Circuits Decision. The Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit affirmed the district courts judgment. On appeal, VFB argued that market capitalization is an unreliable measure of value because it is often based on investors expectations of future earnings, and that those expectations may be wrong. The Third Circuit rejected this argument and concluded that [e]quity markets allow participants to voluntarily take on or transfer among themselves the risk that their projections will be inaccurate; fraudulent transfer law cannot rationally be invoked to undermine that function. 482 F.3d at 631.

The Third Circuit also rejected VFBs argument that the market capitalization data were unreliable due to Campbell Soups manipulation of earnings prior to the spin-off, noting that the stock traded at a healthy market capitalization even after the manipulation became public. The Third Circuit, like the district court, assumed that the stock market is an efficient capital market--that the investors buying and selling stock on the New York Stock Exchange are well informed and rational. The Third Circuits view is exemplified in footnote 4 of the opinion, where the court assumes, without citing to any record on appeal or outside sources, that the investing public must have understood and taken into account Campbell Soups manipulation of earnings, through the product loading strategy, when they bought Vlasic Foods stock. 482 F.3d at 632 n.4.

Based on the views expressed by the Third Circuit, it is not surprising that it held that absent some reason to distrust it, market data are a more reliable measure of value than expert witness testimony.

Commentary on VFB. The Third Circuit is not the first court to apply an objective standard in the context of fraudulent transfer litigation, although it is true that most courts have applied the totality of the circumstances test to determine reasonably equivalent value or fair consideration. See In re Morris Communications NC Inc., 914 F.2d 458, 466 (4th Cir. 1990); In re Ozark Restaurant Equip. Co., 850 F.2d 342, 344 (8th Cir. 1988); In re North Babylon Estates, Inc., 30 F.2d 372, 374 (2d Cir. 1928); Folsom v. Seapy, 10 F.2d 322, 326 (8th Cir. 1925). Still, in the limited context of fraudulent transfer litigation arising out of state-regulated foreclosure sales, the Supreme Court of the United States held that, absent collusion or procedural irregularity, the price obtained at the foreclosure sale is, as a matter of law, reasonably equivalent value. BFP v. Trust Resolution Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 545, 114 S. Ct. 1757, 128 L. Ed. 2d 556 (1994).

Unlike the Supreme Courts very focused holding in BFP, however, the VFB reasoning is not limited to constructive fraudulent transfer litigation. The Third Circuits trust in market data could apply to any valuation dispute involving publicly traded equity or debt. Indeed, because valuation disputes are central to many bankruptcy cases, the Third Circuits reasoning in VFB may have widespread impact. Discounted cash flow and weighted average cost of capital analyses performed by expert witnesses have long been the major currency for valuing assets and businesses both in and out of bankruptcy cases. The Third Circuits decision in VFB may undermine reliance on those methods where public markets are involved.

There are, however, two good reasons for subsequent courts to circumscribe the impact of VFB.

First, the Third Circuits holding is simply that the district court did not commit clear error in its weighing of the evidence and its approbation of market capitalization. Moreover, the district court had other valuation evidence contemporaneous with the transaction (and Campbell Soups expert testimony) to sustain on appeal its view of Vlasic Foods value. Further, VFB, according to the Third Circuit, failed adequately to rebut the finding of reasonably equivalent value: [VFB] never engages with the relevant numbers in any detail, explaining by how much Campbells various manipulation techniques affected its statistics, or by how much the statistical inflation affected VFIs market capitalization. 482 F.3d at 634. Given this procedural and factual posture, it would be a step too far to say that the Third Circuit establishes a rebuttable presumption in favor of market capitalization as the trump card in valuation disputes.

Second, the Third Circuits reasoning that [a]bsent some reason to distrust it, the market price is a more reliable measure of the stocks value than the subjective estimates of one or two expert witnesses, id. at 633, deserves careful scrutiny. Certainly the stocks value, or the value of marketable debt, is the price someone will pay for it. But that price, particularly in distressed circumstances, is a function of short sales, hedging, arbitrage, maneuvering for confirmation advantage, balancing of inconsistent investment positions, disparate information between buyer and seller, and rank speculation--as well as a nod to the value of the underlying assets. At a time when trading in distressed equities and debt is both vocation and avocation, these markets are chiefly efficient in their complexity and opacity. Cf. In re Northwest Airlines Corp., 363 B.R. 701 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007). To this state of affairs may be added recent economic theory that emphasizes the subjective human element at play in markets. These forces serve to attenuate the connection between a troubled enterprises underlying economic value and the price of its equities and debt. In order to stabilize the flutter on the traders screen, courts may still favor EBITDA over market data.

For a discussion of Bankruptcy Code section 544(b)(1) and the ability of a trustee to stand in the shoes of an existing unsecured creditor, see Collier on Bankruptcy, 544.09 (15th ed. rev. Matthew Bender).

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the lexis.com bankruptcy area of law page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal. He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official premerger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun LexisNexis Expert Commentaries Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on VFB LLC v. Campbell Soup Co. Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness). Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C. Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

10 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Adbox

2008 Emerging Issues 831

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Adbox

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 1, 2007

SUMMARY: In a decision of great procedural importance, In re Adbox, the Ninth Circuit has refused to allow a creditors counterclaim in a trustees preference suit where the claim arose out of the debtors prepetition conduct. In his Expert Commentary, the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey concludes that, although Adbox was a chapter 7 case, the courts rationale should apply to a preference action initiated by a debtor in possession in a chapter 11 case.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: The Ninth Circuit Rules Out Most Counterclaims to Preference Suits and Holds That the Earmarking Doctrine Is Not an Affirmative Defense

When a bankruptcy trustee initiates a preference action, it is not unusual for the defendant-creditor to assert a counterclaim against the trustee based upon the debtors alleged prepetition conduct. But, Rule 13 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires that a counterclaim be asserted only against the opposing party, and a trustee in bankruptcy may not be an opposing party. Moreover, Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7013 modifies Rule 13 to state that a defendant in a preference action need not state as a counterclaim any claim that the party has against the debtor, the debtors property, or the estate, unless the claim arose after the entry of an order for relief. A creditors prepetition claim against a debtor, therefore, does not constitute a compulsory counterclaim that must be asserted in a preference action. In re PCH Assocs., 949 F.2d 585, 594-95 (2d Cir. 1991).

Unfortunately, citation to Rule 13 and Bankruptcy Rule 7013 sometimes does not dissuade a determined defendant-creditor or its counsel from trying to litigate counterclaims against a trustee who is not an opposing party. A trustees next step may be to move to dismiss the counterclaims based on well-established law that when a party sues in its representative capacity, it is not subject to counterclaims in its individual capacity. See In re Casale, 62 B.R. 899, 900 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1986) (It is fundamental that in an action brought by a party in a representative capacity, a counterclaim cannot be asserted against the [trustee] in his individual capacity.). Although generally successful, not all bankruptcy courts protect a trustee or the bankruptcy estate by dismissing counterclaims based on this well-established law. See American Fabricators, Inc. v. v. Florida Power Corp., 186 B.R. 526, 529 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1995).

The Ninth Circuit's recent decision in Adbox strengthens Bankruptcy Rule 7013. Although the Adbox decision did not completely foreclose the possibility of a preference defendant asserting a counterclaim, the holding would eliminate most of these counterclaims.

In Adbox, the Ninth Circuit for the first time also held that the earmarking doctrine applied to a preference is not an affirmative defense but a challenge to a trustee's claim that the funds constituted property of the estate to begin with. Accordingly, a defendant does not waive the earmarking defense as a result of failing to plead it as an affirmative defense in the answer to a complaint. Because the earmarking defense is actually part of a trustee's affirmative case, the Ninth Circuit also held that the burden of proof is initially borne by the trustee to prove that the funds came from the debtors property.

Facts. Donald and Janet Metcalf and Christer Wernerda formed Adbox, Inc. in 1992. The Metcalfs were the primary financial backers for Adbox and agreed to pay the company's expenses until it became self-sufficient. Wernerda, for his part, agreed to run the business. The Metcalfs and Wernerda operated Adbox under this arrangement until 1998, when they agreed to separate. Wernerda agreed to pay $200,000 for the business and $115,139.36 for consulting services to the Metcalfs and become the sole owner of Adbox. Instead of paying the full amount, Wernerda sued the Metcalfs in state court, alleging, among other things, usury, and seeking a declaratory judgment that the consulting agreement was unenforceable. During the litigation, Wernerda paid $200,000 to the Metcalfs for the business but disputed the consulting fees owed to the Metcalfs. Following a bench trial, the state court found for the Metcalfs on the consulting fees but in an amount less than requested, and both parties appealed. The trial court also denied the Metcalfs' request for attorneys' fees as the prevailing party. Ultimately, on appeal, the Metcalfs prevailed and were awarded the full amount of their consulting fees, plus $612,684 in attorneys' fees and costs.

At the conclusion of the appeal, Adbox did not have sufficient funds to satisfy the judgment obtained by the Metcalfs. Wernerda obtained a loan from another company interested in Adbox, which was first deposited into his personal account and then transferred to Adbox's bank account. Adbox then wired $21,035.58 (the amount outstanding for consulting fees but not including the award of attorneys' fees and costs) to its attorney, who then sent the amount to the Metcalfs. Less than 90 days later, Adbox filed a chapter 7 bankruptcy case, and Jeffrey I. Golden was appointed as the chapter 7 trustee.

In his capacity as trustee, Golden initiated a preference action pursuant to Bankruptcy Code sections 547 and 550(a) to recover $21,035.58 from the Metcalfs. In response, the Metcalfs filed a counterclaim against Golden alleging that Adbox's conduct before bankruptcy constituted tortious interference with prospective economic advantage, fraudulent transfer under California law, and conspiracy to commit those acts. Golden moved to dismiss the counterclaims and also moved for summary judgment on the preference action. After a hearing on the motion to dismiss the counterclaims, the bankruptcy court construed it as a motion for summary judgment and granted it. The bankruptcy court, after a separate hearing, also granted Golden's motion for summary judgment on the preference action. The Metcalfs appealed to the U.S. District Court, which affirmed both rulings. The Metcalfs then appealed to the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Bankruptcy Rule 7013 and Dismissal of Counterclaims. The Ninth Circuit first addressed the dismissal of the Metcalfs' counterclaims against Golden. The court started with the plain language of Rule 13, adopted by Bankruptcy Rule 7013, which requires that a counterclaim be against an opposing party. Accordingly, a party sued by a trustee may assert a counterclaim only if the trustee is an opposing party within the meaning of Rule 13. In the context of the Adbox case, the Ninth Circuit framed the question as whether the trustee is an opposing party when the trustee brings a preference action that belongs to the bankruptcy estate, not the debtor, and the counterclaim alleges causes of action that could have been brought against the debtor prior to its bankruptcy filing. In holding that Golden was not an opposing party under Rule 13, the Ninth Circuit looked to well-established law that when a trustee sues in its official capacity, it is not subject to counterclaims in its individual capacity. See Pioche Mines Consol., Inc. v. Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co., 206 F.2d 336, 337 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 346 U.S. 899 (1953). Although the Metcalfs counterclaimed against Golden in his official capacity as the chapter 7 trustee, because the Metcalfs' counterclaims were based solely on Adbox's prepetition conduct, the Ninth Circuit held that Golden would have to stand in the shoes of the debtor, Adbox, to defend the counterclaims. Such a position would be a representative capacity different from the representative capacity of a trustee who brings a preference action because a preference action belongs specifically to the bankruptcy estate and could not have been brought by Adbox before its bankruptcy filing. Moreover, if the Metcalfs' allegations in the counterclaims were true, Golden could pursue fraudulent transfers for the benefit of all creditors. In the preference action, Golden was suing for the benefit of all creditors, except the Metcalfs. Accordingly, the Ninth Circuit held that Golden was not an opposing party within the meaning of Rule 13 and affirmed the dismissal of the counterclaim.

Earmarking Doctrine. The court next addressed the granting of Golden's motion for summary judgment on the preference action. The Metcalfs' key defense to the motion for summary judgment was the earmarking doctrine. The earmarking doctrine is a court-made exception to a preference that applies when a third party or a lender loans or advances money to the debtor subject to an agreement requiring that the debtor use the funds to pay off another creditor. Adams v. Anderson (In re Superior Stamp & Coin Co.), 223 F.3d 1004, 1007 (9th Cir. 2000). In short, the Metcalfs claimed that the $21,035.58 they received was borrowed by Adbox from a third party for the sole purpose of paying off their claim and was never property of the debtor.

The Metcalfs, however, did not plead the earmarking doctrine as one of their affirmative defenses in the answer to the complaint, and Golden argued that the Metcalfs waived it. The Ninth Circuit noted that it had not previously addressed whether the earmarking doctrine is an affirmative defense and also noted that out-of-circuit cases reach conflicting conclusions. Compare Shubert v. Lucent Techs. Inc. (In re Winstar Commns, Inc.), 348 B.R. 234, 273 (Bankr. D. Del. 2005) (earmarking is an affirmative defense and waived because not pled in the answer), with Stingley v. AlliedSignal, Inc. In re Libby Intl, Inc., 247 B.R. 463, 467 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2000) (The earmarking doctrine is not strictly an affirmative defense under section 547(c)).

After surveying the existing cases, the Ninth Circuit agreed with the Eighth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel in Libby International that the earmarking doctrine is not one of the enumerated affirmative defenses in Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The court held that, properly understood, the earmarking doctrine is a challenge to a trustee's claim that the funds in question were property of the debtor under Bankruptcy Code section 547(b). Therefore, the court held, the Metcalfs did not waive the earmarking doctrine by failing to raise it as an affirmative defense.

The court next asked who bears the burden of proof of the earmarking doctrine. Once again, the Ninth Circuit noted substantial confusion among courts on the issue and held that the trustee, as the plaintiff, bears the initial burden of establishing that a transfer is an avoidable preference under section 547. Once the trustee establishes that the transfer of disputed funds was from one of the debtors' accounts over which the debtor ordinarily exercised total control, the burden shifts to the defendant to show that the funds were earmarked.

Ultimately, the Ninth Circuit affirmed the bankruptcy court's summary judgment in favor of Golden because the Metcalfs could not prove that the third party loaned money to Adbox for the specific purpose of paying the Metcalfs.

Commentary. The decision in Adbox should greatly reduce meritless counterclaims asserted against trustees in preference actions. Although the Ninth Circuit left open the possibility of a creditor bypassing the proof of claim process by filing a counterclaim under different circumstances, the fact pattern that the Ninth Circuit frowned upon in Adbox is the typical case of a counterclaim asserted in a preference action. After Adbox, at least in the Ninth Circuit, a creditor who is sued for a preference action by a trustee should not be able to assert a counterclaim based on a debtor's prepetition conduct.

Moreover, although the decision in Adbox arose out of a chapter 7 case involving a trustee, the Ninth Circuit's rationale should apply to a preference action initiated in a chapter 11 case by a debtor-in-possession. Like a trustee, a debtor-in-possession in a preference action is suing in its representative capacity for the benefit of all creditors, except the defendant-creditor. In addition, a debtor-in-possession could not have brought the preference action prior to the bankruptcy case. Moreover, Bankruptcy Rule 7013 clearly states that a defendant need not assert a counterclaim against the debtor unless the claim arose after the order for relief. Although the question was not addressed, it is, therefore, likely that the Ninth Circuit's decision in Adbox would also apply to a preference action initiated by a debtor-in-possession.

The Ninth Circuit's decision in Adbox also greatly clarifies the earmarking doctrine. The court held for the first time that the earmarking doctrine is not an affirmative defense and, as a result, is not waived if not pled in the answer. It appears that the Ninth Circuit is the first circuit level authority to address this issue, although there are lower level decisions from other circuits that are contrary. Until a circuit split develops and the Supreme Court decides the issue, the reasoning and ruling of the Ninth Circuit on this issue should carry the day in earmarking and conduit cases.

The Ninth Circuit for the first time also clarified the burden of proof on the earmarking doctrine. Its burden shifting approach flows from its decision that the earmarking doctrine is not an affirmative defense. If the earmarking doctrine is merely a challenge to a trustee's main preference allegations, it is only logical that a trustee, as the plaintiff, bears the initial burden to prove that the funds in dispute came from property of the debtor.

For further discussion of Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7013, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 7013 (Matthew Bender).

To access articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Association's Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

11 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re El Toro Materials Co.

2008 Emerging Issues 832

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re El Toro Materials Co.

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 1, 2007

SUMMARY: Code section 502(b)(6) limits a real property lessors claims against the debtor that are for damages resulting from the termination of the lease. Following a decision by the Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel, many courts have long held that this cap applies to claims for repair and maintenance. In In re El Toro Materials Co., the Ninth Circuit has overruled that precedent, reasoning that such tort claims do not flow from rejection of the lease. According to the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey in his Expert Commentary, the decision is significant because landlords in the Ninth Circuit are now free to pursue against the debtors estate the full amount of claims that exist independently of lease termination.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: The Ninth Circuit Effectively Overrules McSheridan and Holds That Bankruptcy Code Section 502(b)(6) Does Not Cap Damages Against Debtor Lessees for Waste, Nuisance, and Trespass

In Saddleback Valley Community Church v. El Toro Materials Company, Inc. (In re El Toro Materials Company, Inc.), 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22991 (9th Cir. Oct. 1, 2007), the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit analyzed a narrow question relating to claims asserted by landlords: Does Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6) limit a landlords tort claim against a debtor/lessee for the removal of waste, equipment, and other materials? In a brief but clear opinion authored by Judge Kozinski, the Ninth Circuit (1) held that the landlords tort claim was not limited by section 502(b)(6) and (2) effectively overruled an oft-cited Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel opinion, In re McSheridan, 184 B.R. 91 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995).

Facts and Procedural History. El Toro Materials Company, Inc. (the Debtor) was a lessee under a lease with Saddleback Valley Community Church (the Lessor). After filing bankruptcy, the Debtor rejected the lease and vacated the Lessors premises. The Lessor alleged that the Debtor left on the premises approximately one million tons of its wet clay goo, mining equipment, and other materials. Accordingly, the Lessor commenced an adversary proceeding against the Debtor that claimed $23 million in damages for the alleged cost of removing the goo under theories of waste, nuisance, trespass, and breach of contract.

In a partial summary judgment order, the bankruptcy court held that the Lessors damages would not be limited by Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6). On appeal, the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel of the Ninth Circuit reversed the bankruptcy court and held that the Lessors damages would be capped by Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6). The Lessor appealed the decision to the Ninth Circuit.

Legal Analysis. Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6) limits a real property lessors claim against a debtor if such claim is [a] claim . . . for damages resulting from the termination of a lease of real property.

In McSheridan, the appellate panel had held that a lessors claims for repair and maintenance were capped by Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6). The appellate panel reasoned that since the repair and maintenance claims emanated from the terms of the lease between the landlord and debtor, such claims should be limited by section 502(b)(6). McSheridan was followed by over thirteen other courts in published opinions, and was relied upon by practitioners within the Ninth Circuit for over a decade.

However, the Ninth Circuit took a different approach towards analyzing a landlords tort claims. The Ninth Circuit first noted that the specific language of section 502(b)(6) applied only to damages resulting from the rejection of the lease. The court then articulated a test to determine whether the Lessors damages resulted from the rejection of the lease: Assuming all other conditions remain constant, would the landlord have the same claim against the tenant if the tenant were to assume the lease rather than rejecting it? 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22991, at *7.

In the Lessors case, the answer was yes. The Lessor would have possessed its waste, nuisance, and trespass causes of action against the Debtor even if the Debtor had not rejected the lease. As stated by Judge Kozinski:

Here, [the Lessor] would still have the same claim it brings today had [the Debtor] accepted the lease and committed to finish its term: The pile of dirt would still be allegedly trespassing on Saddlebacks land and Saddleback still would have the same basis for its theories of nuisance, waste and breach of contract. The million-ton heap of dirt was not put there by the rejection of the lease--it was put there by the actions and inactions of El Toro in preparing to turn over the site.

Id. Accordingly, the Ninth Circuit held that the Lessors waste, nuisance, and trespass causes of action were not limited by Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6). In reaching this decision, the Ninth Circuit effectively overruled the McSheridan opinion [t]o the extent that McSheridan holds section 502(b)(6) to be a limit on tort claims other than those based on lost rent, rent-like payments or other damages directly arising from a tenants failure to complete a lease term. Id. at *9.

Commentary. The El Toro Materials opinion is a significant one. In the Ninth Circuit, debtors are now unable to limit landlords claims against them for damages arising from tortious conduct that is unrelated to the lease. While this result may initially seem inimical to the policy of limiting landlords claims in bankruptcy, it is consistent with the statutory language of Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6).

Since the 1934 amendments to the Bankruptcy Act, Congress has sought to limit the claims of landlords, since such claims are often substantial and can quickly deplete [the debtors] estate, to the detriment of other creditors. In re Best Prods. Co., 229 B.R. 673, 676 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1998). At the same time, Congress has recognized that a debtors breach of a long term lease can cause significant harm to a landlord, particularly in poor markets. Accordingly, since 1934, the Bankruptcy laws have struck a compromise--landlords are entitled to assert claims for lost future rent, but only up to a specified limit. Under the Bankruptcy Act, lessors were authorized to assert a claim for back rent to the date of abandonment of the lease, along with damages of up to one year future rent. Presently, the Bankruptcy Code limits forward lease damages to the greater of one year, or 15 percent, not to exceed three years of the remaining term of such lease.

However, the Bankruptcy Code only limits a lessors claim that result[s] from the termination of a lease of real property. Since tort claims for waste and nuisance would exist regardless of whether an underlying lease was terminated, it is appropriate, under the language of Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6), to allow a lessor to assert the full amount of such claim against the debtors estate.

While the Ninth Circuit's decision in El Toro Materials is consistent with the plain meaning of Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6), the court also cited policy in support of its decision. In stating that the section 502(b)(6) cap should not cover collateral damages, the Ninth Circuit opined, with apparent hyperbole, that [i]f the tenant's debt to the landlord already exceeded the cap then there would be no deterrence against even the most flagrant acts in violation of the lease, possibly even to the point of the tenant burning down the property in a fit of pique. 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22991, at *9. Presumably, even if the Bankruptcy Code failed to deter such behavior, debtors would be reluctant to burn or otherwise destroy leased property due to the existence of applicable criminal statutes.

Regardless, in sum, the El Toro Materials decision will certainly impact future bankruptcy proceedings, particularly ones in the Ninth Circuit. In determining whether a lessor's claim should be capped by Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(6), bankruptcy courts will now need to apply the El Toro Materials test: Assuming all other conditions remain constant, would the landlord have the same claim against the tenant if the tenant were to assume the lease rather than rejecting it?

For further discussion of section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 (Matthew Bender).

To access articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Association's Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

12 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Northwest Airlines Corp.

2008 Emerging Issues 833

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Northwest Airlines Corp.

By Ralph R. Mabey

November 1, 2007

SUMMARY: The bankruptcy court in the Northwest Airlines case refused to reconsider its previously approved rejection of the collective bargaining agreement with the flight attendants union. Rejection under Code section 1113 is a final step, the court held, and cannot be later questioned in light of changed financial circumstances. In so ruling, the court relied on what the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey calls the Second Circuits poof theory of contract rejection. Yet, as he explains in his Expert Commentary, the decision leaves unresolved the far-reaching consequences of this theory.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: Rejection of a Collective Bargaining Agreement under Code Section 1113 Is Not Reviewable for Changed Circumstances and, Unlike Rejection under Section 365, Does Not Result in a Damages Claim

The bankruptcy-court approved rejection by Northwest Airlines Corporation of its collective bargaining agreement with the Association of Flight Attendants (the AFA) was not appealed. After the approved contract changes had been implemented, however, the AFA asked the bankruptcy court to reconsider its rejection decision based upon changed circumstances. In the meantime, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit had upheld the district courts issuance of an anti-strike injunction against the AFA in Northwest Airlines Corp. v. Association of Flight AttendantsCWA (In re Northwest Airlines Corp.), 483 F.3d 160 (2d Cir. Mar. 29, 2007) (Second Circuits Northwest Decision). Based upon certain of the holdings of the Second Circuit, the bankruptcy court denied the AFAs request for reconsideration and disallowed the AFAs contract rejection damages claim.

Changed Circumstances

Nine months after the bankruptcy court issued an order (the Rejection Order) granting Northwests application to reject its collective bargaining agreement with the AFA, the AFA filed a motion for relief from the Rejection Order. In re Northwest Airlines Corp., 366 B.R. 270, 271 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007). The AFA contended that Northwests financial condition had vastly improved between the time that the Rejection Order was entered and the time the motion for relief was brought and that the court would not have issued the Rejection Order in the first place had it been based upon Northwest's since-improved condition. The Rejection Order had been entered following the court's consideration of the facts of the case at that time, and upon a determination that the equities of the case strongly favored rejection of the collective bargaining agreement as required by Bankruptcy Code section 1113.

The court disagreed with the AFAs' contention that the rejection of a collective bargaining agreement under section 1113 should be reconsidered under the facts and circumstances before it. First, the court found that Northwest's improved financial condition was largely the result of its rejection of collective bargaining agreements with various unions. Id. at 272. The court observed that reconsideration of the Rejection Order would likely lead to similar requests by other unions, many of which had already entered into new agreements with Northwest. Noting the irony of the AFAs' request, the court stated: Relief granted to AFA and the other unions would likely reverse much, if not all, of the financial improvement on which AFA relies and defeat the very foundation of its motion. Id.

The court then held that language from the Second Circuit's Northwest Decision must be read to bar the AFAs' motion for relief. The Second Circuit had recently held that Northwest's rejection of its collective bargaining agreement with the AFA meant that the agreement had been abrogated and therefore ceased to exist. Id. Since that agreement was no longer in existence, the bankruptcy court deduced that [t]here is nothing to revive pursuant to the terms of § 1113, as construed by the Circuit. Id.

In further support of its ruling, the bankruptcy court likened the rejection of a collective bargaining agreement under section 1113 to the more frequently applied rejection of an executory contract under section 365. Rejection under both provisions, according to the court, is not a tentative step to be confirmed at a later stage of the bankruptcy case, but a final act that has immediate consequences. Id. Moreover, the court found that neither provision requires a debtor to wait until the end of a chapter 11 case to reject an agreement, despite the fact that the possibility always exists that a debtor's financial condition may change. Id. Allowing reconsideration, according to the court, would undermine [a] debtor's right to seek reasonable § 1113 relief as a predicate to its ability to formulate a feasible plan. Id.

The court found further support for its holding from language in the neighboring provision of section 1114. Id. at 272-73. Section 1114 specifically allows only for modification of retiree plans, as opposed to rejection. Section 1113 allows a court to reject collective bargaining agreements, not to modify them. Therefore, the court noted, Congress intended abrogation under § 1113 to be a final step, not subject to later modification. Id. at 273.

The court was unmoved by the AFAs' appeal to equity in support of its motion. Despite an injunction affirmed by the Second Circuit, the AFA had threatened to engage in disruptive activities designed to force the Debtor to agree to improved collective bargaining terms, and, in response, the court invoked the maxim that [a] party who seeks equity must do equity. Id. at 274. In addition, the court explained that the AFAs' appeal for equitable relief was not compelling because the AFA had the option of sharing in Northwest's ongoing success by accepting a new collective bargaining agreement with Northwest. Agreements entered into by other unions had provided for substantial profit sharing and for the distribution of large and valuable proofs of claim. Id.

Commentary. The court was not faced with a question of fraud or mistake in its rejection decision. Had those facts been presented squarely, the court might well have found the elbow room to reconsider its decision.

Although the court did not discuss the language of section 1113 at length in the opinion, that section provides additional support for the court's ruling that changed circumstances do not warrant reconsideration. Section 1113(b)(1)(A) states that, before rejection of a collective bargaining agreement, a debtor in possession is obligated to make a proposal to the representative of the employees based upon the most complete and reliable information available at the time of such proposal (emphasis added). Section 1113(c) goes on to state that a court shall approve an application for rejection of a collective bargaining agreement, only if (1) the court finds that the debtor in possession made a proposal that fulfills the requirements of subsection (b)(1), (2) the employees refused to accept the proposal without good cause, and (3) the balance of the equities favors rejection.

This language of section 1113 makes clear that a court's determination of whether to reject a debtor in possession's collective bargaining agreement must be based upon the most reliable information available at the time the debtor in possession submits its proposal to the employees. Section 1113 does not state that the debtor in possession has a duty to make a new proposal whenever circumstances change, or even that the court should consider whether the facts of a case have changed between the time the proposal was made and the time that the court considers the application for rejection. Of course, the court could consider such changes in balancing the equities before the entry of an order. But nothing in section 1113 suggests that a court can or should reevaluate its decision to reject a collective bargaining agreement based upon changed circumstances following the entry of an order.

Of much greater interest, however, is the bankruptcy court's reliance upon the Second Circuit's (majority opinion) poof theory of contract rejection (my term). It has generally been understood that rejection of an executory contract constitutes a breach of the contract, not its vaporization or, to use J.K. Rowling's term, its disappearance. Because the rejected contract survives rejection as a breached contract, it has, among other things, been accepted that the innocent party is entitled to damages under section 502(g) and may be entitled to enforce certain provisions of the rejected contract such as non-compete clauses, nondisclosure provisions, and the like.

As the bankruptcy court correctly points out, however, the majority in the Second Circuit's Northwest Decision holds that a rejected contract under section 1113 is abrogated and therefore ceases to exist--it just goes poof. As a result, there is no contract upon which a motion to reconsider the rejection may be based.

In the Second Circuit's Northwest Decision, Chief Judge Jacobs concurs in the result, but not in the reasoning of the majority. The majority concluded that the debtor had not altered the status quo under the Railway Labor Act because the collective bargaining agreement, once rejected, ceased to exist and there was no status quo to alter. Second Circuit's Northwest Decision, 483 F.3d 160, 173. Because the debtor had not altered the status quo, the AFA was prohibited from striking under the Railway Labor Act. Chief Judge Jacobs found this line of reasoning impossible to explain [] to the flight attendants. Id. at 177. Instead, he accepted the traditional doctrine that a rejected labor contract continues to exist. See id. at 177-78. As a result, he concluded that the contract rejection may breach the status quo that is protected by the Railway Labor Act, but--on these facts--did not do so unilaterally (because of the protective statutory procedures surrounding section 1113). This reasoning led C.J. Jacobs to determine that the AFA may not strike and he, therefore, concurred in the result.

The poof theory of labor contract rejection adopted by the Second Circuit's majority has far-reaching consequences, as we see below.

No Damage Award for Rejection

The AFA filed two proofs of claim in the case, both in the amount of $1.2 billion, for damages allegedly resulting from the Rejection Order. Northwest Airlines Corp., 366 B.R. at 271. The AFA also sought damages resulting from the court's authorization of interim changes to the collective bargaining agreement under section 1113(e). Id. at 275. The bankruptcy court agreed with Northwest that the claims filed by the AFA for damages resulting from the Rejection Order were not allowable. Id.

In denying the AFAs requests for damages, the bankruptcy court relied almost exclusively on the Second Circuit's Northwest Decision. Specifically, the court interpreted the Second Circuit's holding to expressly exclude[] the possibility of damages for the lawful rejection of a collective bargaining agreement pursuant to § 1113. Id. This conclusion followed from the court's explanation that the Second Circuit had held that the rejection of a collective bargaining agreement pursuant to section 1113 abrogated (without breaching) the existing collective-bargaining agreement between AFA and Northwest, which thereafter ceased to exist. Id. Since there was no collective bargaining agreement, there was no breach of it and there were no damages. Id.

In support of its holding the Second Circuit majority cited In re Blue Diamond Coal Co., the only prior decision to hold that section 1113 does not provide for, and therefore excludes, the possibility of a proof of claim for rejection damages. In re Blue Diamond Coal Co., 147 B.R. 720, 732 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 1992), affd, 160 B.R. 574, 576-77 (E.D. Tenn. 1993); see also ONeill v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (In re Continental Airlines), 981 F.2d 1450, 1460 (5th Cir. 1993) (pre-section 1113 decision generally discussing whether a union should have a claim for breach of a rejected collective bargaining agreement).

The court finally determined that in light of the Second Circuits holding, there was no need to consider whether damages for rejection of a collective bargaining agreement are so inherently speculative and non-quantifiable that they should be disallowed as a claim for that reason. 366 B.R. at 276.

Commentary. The bankruptcy courts analysis of the AFAs proofs of claim for damages resulting from the rejection of the collective bargaining agreement is wholly consistent with the Second Circuit majoritys reasoning that the collective bargaining agreement ceased to exist once it was rejected. But the correctness of that reasoning is an open question whose answer has far-reaching implications. If a rejected collective bargaining agreement ceases to exist, what happens to the hundreds of provisions in that agreement that the debtor does not seek to alter? Are they open to renegotiation? Can they now be ignored without any risk of liability even for damages? Under the National Labor Relations Act, in cases where the Railway Labor Act does not apply, what duties and rights do the parties have absent a contract? What happens to pension and other rights contained in or dependent upon the former collective bargaining agreement?

The bankruptcy court addressed two consequences of the Second Circuits Northwest Decision: Reconsideration of the rejection of a collective bargaining agreement is not possible, and the union has no claim for damages. Other consequences remain unaddressed.

To access articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabeys service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

13 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Gencarelli

2008 Emerging Issues 781

Hon. Ralph R. Mabey on In re Gencarelli

By Ralph R. Mabey

October 23, 2007

SUMMARY: The allowance of prepayment penalties can significantly affect the ultimate distribution of funds in a bankruptcy, but there is little case law on the subject. The First Circuits decision in In re Gencarelli is therefore of great interest. In allowing an oversecured creditor to collect prepayment penalties as an unsecured claim, the court touched upon the relationship between sections 502 and 506(b), the vitality of the solvent debtor doctrine, and possible solutions to the analytic problem remaining after the Supreme Courts Travelers decision. In his Expert Commentary, the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey finds that the opinion not only reaches the correct result, but is judiciously crafted and provides meaningful guidance.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: First Circuit Affirms the Validity of the Solvent Debtor Doctrine in the Context of a Dispute over Prepayment Penalties

The enforceability of so-called prepayment penalties in bankruptcy has traditionally been a contentious and difficult issue. In a recent decision with significant implications for all debtors, but particularly for solvent debtors, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit held that an oversecured creditor may collect prepayment penalties--to the extent those penalties are enforceable under the applicable nonbankruptcy law--as an unsecured claim under the rubric of Bankruptcy Code section 502, even if such penalties do not meet the reasonableness test of section 506(b). UPS Capital Business Credit v. Gencarelli (In re Gencarelli), 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20751, at *18-19 (1st Cir. Aug. 30, 2007).

Framing the Debate. A common feature of many loan agreements is a provision regarding the borrowers ability to repay the debt before its scheduled maturity. This sort of provision goes by a variety of names--prepayment penalty, prepayment provision, yield maintenance premium, etc.--but the substantive function is the same: The lender wishes to allocate the costs of a decline in interest rates to the borrower, thereby allowing the lender to take comfort in some minimal profit margin on the loan. Thus, the prepayment clause serves to compensate the lender for its loss of the regular income stream provided by the loan, which necessarily occurs whenever a borrower satisfies the debt before maturity.

The enforcement of a prepayment provision can significantly affect the distributions received by the various constituencies in bankruptcy, which likely explains why disputes over such provisions have arisen in several recent cases, including Northwest Airlines, Calpine, and NRG Energy. Notwithstanding the economic importance of the issue, there is surprisingly little case law to guide the analysis, and some of the existing decisions seem inconsistent. ⁿ¹ Gencarelli is an important addition to the doctrine.

The Facts and Posture of Gencarelli. In early 2002, the Bess Eaton Donut Flour Company and its sole shareholder, Louis A. Gencarelli, Sr., borrowed approximately $7,000,000 on a secured basis from UPS Capital Business Credit. The underlying loan documentation, which was to be governed by Rhode Island state law, provided for a floating rate of interest over the life of the agreement. The loan documentation also provided that the debt could be repaid at any time, provided that the borrowers satisfied certain prepayment penalties.

Approximately two years later, both Bess Eaton and Gencarelli filed for bankruptcy, and the two cases were consolidated. The cases ended in a section 363 sale of Bess Eatons operating assets, which fetched a far higher price than had been anticipated--so much higher that the bankruptcy estates wound up with funds sufficient to pay all creditors in full (including interest), while also leaving a multimillion dollar surplus for Gencarelli. 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20751, at *3.

Meanwhile, UPS filed timely proofs of claim in which it asserted rights to the outstanding principal and accrued interest on the debt, as well as the prepayment penalties. Based upon the formulas in the loan documents, the penalties were approximately $200,000. Gencarelli filed an objection to UPSs prepayment penalties, arguing that although UPS was oversecured, the penalties were not reasonable under section 506(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, and thus could not be the basis for an allowable claim. The U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Rhode Island agreed with Gencarellis legal construct and factual analysis, and thus found the penalties unreasonable in amount and disallowed UPSs claims for them in their entirety. Id. at *4-5.

UPS then appealed to the U.S. District Court for the District of Rhode Island. Although most of the briefing was devoted to whether the prepayment penalties were reasonable under section 506(b), UPS also argued that a finding that fees, costs, or charges are unreasonable under § 506(b) means only that they cannot be allowed as a secured claim, and instead must be treated as an unsecured claim. Id. at *5. The district court was not convinced; it agreed that section 506(b) governed and that an oversecured creditor can recover charges, such as prepayment penalties, only if they are reasonable, and also concurred with the bankruptcy courts determination that UPSs penalties were not reasonable. Id. at *5-6 (citing UPS Capital Bus. Credit v. Gencarelli, No. 1:05-cv-00039, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94760 (D.R.I. Nov. 3, 2006)).

UPS appealed again, arguing to the First Circuit that section 506(b)s reasonableness standard is not relevant to the question of whether an oversecured creditor is entitled to a contractually-based prepayment penalty from a solvent debtor. Id. at *6. Gencarelli responded that this argument (i) was not preserved for appeal, (ii) is an incorrect reading of the Bankruptcy Code, and (iii) ignores the lower courts findings of unreasonableness.

The Gencarelli Opinion. The First Circuit, in an unanimous opinion written by Senior Circuit Judge Bruce M. Selya, began its analysis by examining the interrelationship between sections 502 and 506(b) of the [Bankruptcy] Code. Id. at *7. Upon doing so, the court concluded that UPSs statutory interpretation argument was correct, reasoning that:

As a matter of bankruptcy law, the lower courts should not have disallowed the claims for prepayment penalties in toto based solely upon a finding that they were not entitled to priority under section 506(b). Section 502, not section 506(b), affords the ultimate test for allowability, and any claim satisfying that test is, at the very worst, collectible as an unsecured claim. Leading commentators, case law from other circuits, and common sense all conduce to this result.

Id. at *9 (emphasis added).

Thus, the proper mode of analysis begins with section 502 in order to determine whether the creditor has any allowable claim in the first instance. If such a claim exists, one should then turn to section 506(b) in order to determine whether that claim meets the conditions necessary to be included as part of the oversecured creditors secured claim. A claim that falls outside of section 506(b), including one that is not reasonable, remains a valid claim, but should be classified as unsecured. See id. at *10-12. The First Circuit emphasized that the opposite framework, which was adopted by the lower courts and defended by Gencarelli, would def[y] common sense and create an uneven playing field by uniquely penalizing the oversecured creditor: [I]t makes sense that oversecured creditors should not be allowed to prioritize unreasonable fees, costs, and charges; it does not make sense that oversecured creditors should be penalized by disallowing those fees, costs, and charges altogether--especially when unsecured creditors can collect them. Id. at *12-14.

The First Circuit further grounded its conclusion in the equities of the case--i.e., the fact that the debtors were solvent and that any amount not paid to UPS would return to Gencarelli's pockets. More specifically, the court stated:

Let us be perfectly clear. This is a solvent debtor case and, as such, the equities strongly favor holding the debtor to his contractual obligations as long as those obligations are legally enforceable under applicable non-bankruptcy law. When the debtor is solvent, the bankruptcy rule is that where there is a contractual provision, valid under state law, the bankruptcy court will enforce the contractual provision.

Id. at *14 (internal citation, punctuation, and footnote omitted). Thus, because Gencarelli had willingly contracted for the prepayment penalties, it was not the place of bankruptcy courts to disturb the parties' bargain so as to provide Gencarelli with a windfall.

The First Circuit rounded out the analysis portion of its opinion with a brief procedural discussion, after which it concluded that (i) UPS arguably preserved the statutory interpretation issue for appeal, albeit barely; and (ii) even if UPS had not technically preserved the issue, the court would deem it preserved in order to avoid a difficult question that has significant ramifications for the commercial lending industry but no clear-cut answer--i.e., how section 506(b)'s reasonableness requirement applies to prepayment provisions in commercial loans. Id. at *16-18. Rather than wander into this quagmire, the court was content to allow its analysis of the interrelationship between sections 502 and 506(b) to determine the outcome of the appeal.

Having concluded that UPS would have a valid claim for the prepayment penalties under section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code if they were enforceable under applicable nonbankruptcy law, the First Circuit remanded the matter so that the bankruptcy court could determine if such penalties are permitted in Rhode Island. See id. at *19-20. Cf. River E. Plaza, L.L.C. v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 19925 (7th Cir. Aug. 22, 2007) (holding, outside the context of bankruptcy, that a treasury-flat voluntary prepayment premium was valid and enforceable under Illinois state law).

Commentary on Gencarelli. The Gencarelli decision is a well-reasoned and judiciously crafted opinion that reaches the proper result while also highlighting several important issues.

First, the First Circuit's analysis of the relationship between sections 502 and 506(b) of the Bankruptcy Code is the correct one. Section 502 is clearly drafted to be the touchstone of allowability, whereas section 506(b)--situated in the Bankruptcy Code under the header determination of secured claims--performs a far more discrete function: to provide whether an oversecured creditor may add additional amounts to increase its prepetition secured claim, such as post-petition interest, attorneys' fees, and other reasonable charges. To the extent a particular claim falls outside the scope of section 506(b) but would be enforceable against the debtor outside of bankruptcy, such claim should retain its vitality as an unsecured claim, unless it is not allowed pursuant to some provision of section 502 or other principles of bankruptcy law. See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(2) (post-petition interest not allowable in bankruptcy); In re Elec. Mach. Enters., 371 B.R. 549 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2007) (discussing several noncodified principles of bankruptcy law that could arguably serve as grounds upon which to disallow an unsecured creditor's claim for post-petition attorneys' fees). While reasonable people may differ about the extent to which equitable principles should trigger the disallowance of claims for post-petition attorneys' fees, default rate interest, and prepayment penalties in insolvent cases, the point remains that section 506(b) should never be the exclusive statutory provision guiding the analysis. This crucial point is at the core of the Gencarelli opinion.

Second, the First Circuit was correct to observe the effects of what could be called the solvent debtor doctrine on the analysis. The notion that equitable considerations weigh in favor of fully enforcing all aspects of a contract when a debtor is solvent is a sensible one that has been endorsed by numerous courts, including by appellate courts in the First, Second, Sixth, and Seventh Circuits. n2 Indeed, this concept can be traced back to the seminal decision in Vanston Bondholders Protective Committee v. Green, 329 U.S. 156, 67 S. Ct. 237, 91 L. Ed. 162 (1946). Any other rule would create improper incentives for solvent debtors to turn to the bankruptcy process--not to restructure their finances or operations, but solely to avoid otherwise enforceable obligations to the benefit of equity holders. Such a result clearly does not advance the social goals that motivate a uniform federal bankruptcy regime in the first instance.

While sensible and proper, the solvent debtor doctrine may not represent the law of the land in all circuits. For instance, the Ninth Circuit has held that a plan intended to nullify the consequences of a default (thereby avoiding the higher post default interest rate) is consistent with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code, which means it does not violate the good faith requirement of section 1129(a)(3) for a solvent debtor to propose a plan of reorganization intended solely to accomplish this result. See Platinum Capital, Inc. v. Sylmar Plaza, L.P. (In re Sylmar Plaza, L.P.), 314 F.3d 1070, 1074-75 (9th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1035 (2003). n3 Sylmar Plaza arguably is at odds with the notion that solvent debtors should fully comply with all valid contractual obligations, and thus the case may be an outlier in the solvent debtor doctrine jurisprudence.

The solvent debtor doctrine also gives rise to other complicated questions, such as whether the analysis should be performed on a debtor-by-debtor or consolidated basis (this could be a key issue in the bankruptcy cases of a large corporate family, such as in Adelphia), as well as about the appropriate methods and time for measuring solvency. It is likely that such questions may be partially addressed in the Calpine bankruptcy case, perhaps during the appeal taken from Bankruptcy Judge Liflands recent opinion. See In re Calpine Corp., 365 B.R. 392, 400-01 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007).

In any event, although the force of the solvent debtor doctrine appears to be the subject of a fermenting circuit split and creates many practical questions, it generally is an appropriate rule. Consequently, the First Circuit was correct to embrace that doctrine in Gencarelli.

Third, it is worth briefly considering two interesting footnotes in Gencarelli that suggest a possible solution to the issue raised by the Supreme Courts recent decision in Travelers Casualty & Surety Co. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co., 127 S. Ct. 1199, 167 L. Ed. 2d 178, 57 C.B.C.2d 314 (2007). Specifically, the question of unsecured creditors rights to receive post-petition attorneys fees is likely to be the subject of intense disagreement and litigation during the next wave of bankruptcies. One argument that some advance is that section 506(b) should be read, by negative implication, to preclude an award of post-petition attorneys fees to any creditors other than those that are oversecured. Such an argument often relies upon the Courts prior decision in United Savings Association of Texas v. Timbers of Inwood Forest Associates, Ltd., 484 U.S. 365, 108 S. Ct. 626, 98 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1988). The Timbers of Inwood Forest case apparently featured prominently in the parties briefing in Gencarelli, but the First Circuit brushed the decision aside via the following footnote:

Although both parties discuss at length the Supreme Courts decision in [Timbers of Inwood Forest], we regard that decision as inapposite. The case dealt with claims for post-petition interest, which--unlike the prepayment penalties at issue here--are made unavailable as unsecured claims by an explicit statutory provision. Id. [484 U.S.] at 372-73; see 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(2).

2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20751, at *12 n.2. This is an important point, one that does seem to distinguish Timbers of Inwood Forest in the context of claims not explicitly addressed by the Bankruptcy Code (including post-petition attorneys fees, prepayment penalties, and the like). One hopes it is not lost on future courts considering such issues.

At various points in Gencarelli, the First Circuit drew an analogy between prepayment penalties and post-petition attorneys fees. See, e.g., id. at *10 n.1 (there is no principled basis for treating attorneys fees differently from prepayment penalties in this context). This comparison makes the following footnote particularly meaningful:

We recognize that bankruptcy courts are courts of equity, and that the balance of the equities may be different if unsecured creditors are at risk of collateral damage. For that reason, this opinion should not be construed as speaking to the different question of whether an unsecured creditor can enforce a contractual right to post-petition fees against the estate of an insolvent debtor under section 502. See Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co., 127 S. Ct. 1199, 1207, 167 L. Ed. 2d 178 (2007) (reserving this question).

2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20751, at *15 n.3 (citation omitted). Although not answering the issue raised in Travelers, the First Circuits dictum does provide an interesting possible solution, one that would be generally consistent with other decisions that predate Travelers. See, e.g., In re Loewen Group Intl, Inc., 274 B.R. 427, 442-45 (Bankr. D. Del. 2002) (disallowing certain unsecured creditors claims for post-petition attorneys fees because, inter alia, such claims would have an unfair dilutive effect on other unsecured creditors). This possibility further underscores the import of the solvent debtor doctrine and suggests that the doctrine may have broader implications. Ultimately, however, that must remain a different issue to be resolved another day.

Taken as a whole, the First Circuits decision in Gencarelli is an interesting and well-reasoned opinion that touches on a number of issues of contemporary importance to bankruptcy law, including the relationship between sections 502 and 506(b), the vitality of the solvent debtor doctrine, the enforceability of prepayment penalties, and possible solutions to the analytic problem that remains open after Travelers. As such, it is an important decision that should provide meaningful guidance to parties who find themselves on both sides of similar disputes in future bankruptcy cases.

For complete discussion of sections 502 and 506(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 and ch. 506 (Matthew Bender).

To access articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 . See generally, e.g., Continental Sec. Corp. v. Shenandoah Nursing Home Pship, 193 B.R. 769 (W.D. Va. 1996); In re Imperial Coronado Partners, Ltd., 96 B.R. 997 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1989); In re Granite Broadcasting Corp., 369 B.R. 120 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007); In re Calpine Corp., 365 B.R. 392 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007); In re Vanderveer Estates Holdings, Inc., 283 B.R. 122 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2002); Noonan v. Fremont Fin. (In re Lappin Elec. Co.), 245 B.R. 326 (Bankr. E.D. Wis. 2000); In re Skyler Ridge, 80 B.R. 500 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1987); In re 360 Inns, Ltd., 76 B.R. 573 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1987).

n2 . See, e.g., Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Dow Corning Corp. (In re Dow Corning Corp.), 456 F.3d 668 (6th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 127 S. Ct. 1874 (2007); In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R.R. Co., 791 F.2d 524 (7th Cir. 1986) (Posner, J.); Debentureholders Protective Comm. of Contl Inv. Corp. v. Contl Inv. Corp., 679 F.2d 264 (1st Cir. 1982), cert. denied sub nom. Glen Corp. v. O.C. Assocs., 459 U.S. 894 (1982); Ruskin v. Griffiths, 269 F.2d 827 (2d Cir. 1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 947 (1960); In re 139-141 Owners Corp., 313 B.R. 364 (S.D.N.Y. 2004); Florida Asset Fin. Corp. v. Dixon (In re Dixon), 228 B.R. 166 (W.D. Va. 1998); In re Calpine Corp., 365 B.R. 392 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007); Clifftondale Oaks, LLC v. Silver Lake Enters., LLC (In re Clifftondale Oaks, LLC), 56 C.B.C.2d 13, 357 B.R. 883 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2006); In re Liberty Warehouse Assocs. Ltd. Pship, 220 B.R. 546 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998); In re Vest Assocs., 217 B.R. 696 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998); In re Consolidated Operating Partners L.P., 91 B.R. 113 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1988); In re Skyler Ridge, 80 B.R. 500 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1987).

n3

[3]. The Sylmar Plaza decision is based on the courts conclusion that its prior decision in In re Entz-White Lumber & Supply, Inc., 850 F.2d 1338 (9th Cir. 1988), remains good law. Yet the Sylmar Plaza opinion did not consider the possible ramifications of Congresss addition of section 1123(d) to the Bankruptcy Code in 1994, an event that has led other courts to question the continuing validity of Entz-White. See, e.g., Southland Corp. v. Toronto-Dominion (In re Southland Corp.), 160 F.3d 1054, 1059 n.6 (5th Cir. 1998); In re Pacific Gas & Elec. Co., 49 C.B.C.2d 446, 283 B.R. 41, 59 (N.D. Cal. 2002), revd on other grounds, 350 F.3d 932 (9th Cir. 2003); Hassen Imports Pship v. KWP Fin. VI (In re Hassen Imports Pship), 45 C.B.C.2d 679, 256 B.R. 916, 924 n.13 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2000); Hepner v. PWP Golden Eagle Tree, LLC (In re K & J Props., Inc.), 338 B.R. 450, 461 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2005). But see, e.g., Casa Blanca Project Lenders, L.P. v. City Commerce Bank (In re Casa Blanca Project Lenders, L.P.), 196 B.R. 140, 147 n.10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1996); Bank of Am., N.A. v. Garcia (In re Garcia), 276 B.R. 627, 636 n.33 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002); In re Phoenix Bus. Park Ltd. Pship, 257 B.R. 517, 520-22 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2001). Accordingly, until the effects of section 1123(d) are fully considered by the Ninth Circuit, it may be premature to assume that Entz-White remains good law (and, by implication, that the decision in Sylmar Plaza was correct).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

14 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Hot Topic: Travelers Casualty & Surety Company of America v. PG & E

2008 Emerging Issues 3054

Hot Topic: Travelers Casualty & Surety Company of America v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

By LexisNexis Hot Topics

September 22, 2007

SUMMARY: Choose an option below to search Travelers Casualty & Surety Company of America v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

RELATED CONTENT: Click here for more Emerging Issues Analysis related to this Area of Law

RELATED LINKS: For the Decision of the United States Supreme Court

■ Click Here.

For the Transcript of the Oral Arguments before the United States Supreme Court

■ Click Here.

For Briefs Filed in the United States Supreme Court

■ Click Here.

For the Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

■ Click Here.

For News concerning the Supreme Court's Decision

■ Click Here.

Information referenced herein is provided for educational purposes only. For legal advice applicable to the facts of your particular situation, you should obtain the services of a qualified attorney licensed to practice law in your state.

15 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Mabey on In re National Energy & Gas Transmission

2008 Emerging Issues 482

Mabey on In re National Energy & Gas Transmission

By Ralph R. Mabey

August 31, 2007

SUMMARY: In recovering a debt from a non-debtor guarantor, a creditor is not free to classify a payment as principal in order to collect postpetition interest, or so the Fourth Circuit has held over a vigorous dissent. The decision turns on resolution of two conflicting doctrines of bankruptcy law, and the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey explains in his expert commentary that the dissent perhaps presented the stronger argument. Certainly, from a policy perspective, the majority did not reach an optimal or efficient result.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: Over a Strong Dissent, Fourth Circuit Holds That a Creditor Cannot Apply Non-Debtor Payments so as to Circumvent Section 502(b)(2)

Most bankruptcy practitioners accept the proposition that postpetition interest cannot be collected on unsecured claims against insolvent debtors. The proposition that the Bankruptcy Code cannot affect the respective rights of non-debtor parties is more controversial but is generally accepted as the proper rule. In a recent decision, the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit had occasion to consider what happens when these two bankruptcy principles collide. By a 21 margin, the Fourth Circuit held that a creditor may not allocate a payment made by a non-debtor guarantor first to interest then principal, thus preserving the unpaid principal for collection in bankruptcy, because to do so would permit the creditor to collect an amount otherwise disallowed as post-petition interest. National Energy & Gas Transmission, Inc. v. Liberty Elec. Power, LLC (In re National Energy & Gas Transmission, Inc.), 492 F.3d 297, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 16263 (4th Cir. 2007).

Framing the Debate. It has long been a maxim of bankruptcy law that the accumulation of interest on claims against a bankruptcy estate is suspended as of the date the petition in bankruptcy is filed. See, e.g., Nicholas v. United States, 384 U.S. 678, 682, 86 S. Ct. 1674, 16 L. Ed. 2d 853 (1966). This result is codified in section 502(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, which provides that a claim against the estate shall not be allowed if such claim is for unmaturing interest. While the rule disallowing claims for postpetition interest is subject to certain exceptions, such as when a creditor is oversecured n1 or when the debtor is solvent, n2 the general rule is that postpetition interest is not allowed on unsecured claims.

While creditors rights in bankruptcy are cabined in many respects by the Bankruptcy Code, the bankruptcy process generally does not affect a creditors rights as against non-debtor parties. See generally 11 U.S.C. § 524(e) (expressly providing that discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt). This rule is observed and applied in a number of different settings. For instance, some courts allow landlords to recover amounts in excess of the section 502(b)(6) cap from non-debtor parties on the grounds that the Bankruptcy Code does not alter rights between a pair of non-debtors. n3 Likewise, inter-creditor rights, such as those arising under a subordination agreement, are generally controlled exclusively by state law. n4 Most germane to the National Energy fact-pattern is a line of cases holding that non-debtor guarantors remain liable for postpetition interest that cannot be recovered from the debtor or from its bankruptcy estate. In the words of Bankruptcy Judge Leif Clark: Section 502(b)(2) only prevents unmatured interest from becoming an allowed claim against the debtors estate. Although unmatured interest cannot be collected from the debtors estate, section 502(b)(2) does not toll the accrual of unmatured interest. Thus the obligation to pay interest vis--vis a guarantor is not tolled or eliminated by operation of section 502(b)(2). In re El Paso Refining, Inc., 192 B.R. 144, 146 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 1996) (citation omitted). n5

The interplay between these two lines of bankruptcy doctrine gave rise to National Energy.

The Facts and Posture of National Energy. The underlying debtors in National Energy were part of a corporate group that participated in the energy trading markets. One of the debtors, ET Power, was party to a prepetition electricity tolling agreement with Liberty Electric Power, LLC. Pursuant to this agreement, ET Power paid a monthly fee, as well as other variable costs, in exchange for the delivery of energy by Liberty. ET Powers contractual obligations were backed by the separate guarantees of two related entities: (1) National Energy & Gas Transmission, Inc., ET Powers corporate parent and codebtor in bankruptcy; and (2) Gas Transmission Northwest Corporation (GTN), a sister corporation that was not in any bankruptcy case. The liability of each guarantor was capped at $140 million.

The debtors filed voluntary chapter 11 petitions on July 8, 2003. Soon thereafter, the debtors sought to reject the agreement with Liberty, which rejection was approved by the bankruptcy court. Following the rejection, Liberty asserted that it was entitled to receive $140 million as a termination payment, as well as approximately $5.4 million in unpaid invoices. Libertys entitlement to the termination payment proceeded to arbitration, as a result of which Liberty was awarded the full amount it requested. The arbitration panel also awarded Liberty interest on the $140 million, to accrue from and after the date on which the debtors first rejected the agreement.

During the arbitration proceedings, GTN was sold to a Canadian corporation. An escrow of $140 million was established to fund GTNs guaranty liability to Liberty. Following the conclusion of arbitration, the entire $140 million was paid to Liberty in order to satisfy fully GTNs liability. Before this payment, approximately $17 million of postpetition interest had accrued on Libertys claim. Logically, Liberty chose to allocate the $140 million received from the GTN proceeds first to interest, and then to principal. Liberty also continued to assert the entirety of its pre-petition claim against the debtors, on the theory that the debtors remained jointly and severally liable until Liberty received final payment in full. The rub, of course, was the character of the outstanding $17 million, which Liberty argued did not represent disallowed post-petition interest but rather unpaid principal--the interest portion of the award having been paid by GTN. 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 16263, at *6.

The debtors objected to Libertys claim on the theory that it was for disguised postpetition interest. The bankruptcy court sided with Liberty, however, by allowing its claim against the debtors. The bankruptcy courts decision was affirmed by the U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland, which led the debtors to appeal to the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. The appeal was heard by Circuit Judges Dennis W. Shedd and Allyson K. Duncan, with District Judge Samuel G. Wilson, of the Western District of Virginia, sitting by designation. In a 21 decision, the Fourth Circuit reversed the allowance of Libertys claim for $17 million.

The National Energy Majority Opinion. The analysis portion of Judge Shedd's majority opinion begins with a brief discussion of New York guaranty law, pursuant to which GTN was a surety for ET Powers obligations to Liberty, and thus the value of ET Powers debt to Liberty under state law is not reduced by the $140 million received from GTN. 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 16263, at *9. Consequently, Liberty could assert a claim against the debtors for the full $140 million it was owed prepetition, even though Liberty could not ultimately collect more than the outstanding $17 million.

The court then turn[ed] to the more fundamental question presented by this appeal: whether the Bankruptcy Code bars Liberty from collecting the $17 million it now seeks. Id. The court ultimately concluded that section 502(b)(2) prevents Liberty from collecting the additional $17 million it seeks despite Libertys classification of that amount as principal. Id. at *11. This conclusion was based on two core considerations.

First*, the court applied a broad substance over form analysis, concluding that it was obligated to look behind Libertys claim here to find that the claim really constitutes post-petition interest disguised as unpaid principal. Id. at *14 (emphasis added). The court suggested a contrary result would promote gamesmanship by allowing Liberty, or any other creditor, to classify a payment on a debt from a non-debtor guarantor as non-principal, thus preserving the full value of the principal for collection in bankruptcy. *Id.

Second*, the court was concerned about the policy interests represented by § 502(b)(2)--to wit, a fair allocation of the estates limited assets between similarly situated creditors. See id. at *14-15. The court believed these interests would be thwarted by allowing Libertys claim, since allowing Liberty to collect the additional amount it seeks will have an impact on ET Powers other creditors: namely, the loss of $17 million from the estate which would otherwise be available for distribution. Id. at 15.

Thus, the majority held that section 502(b)(2) barred Liberty from asserting its claim against the debtors. The majority did note in a footnote that Liberty is free to classify GTNs payment as interest or to pursue collection from GTN at any time. See id. at *13 n.5. This result followed from the majoritys conclusion that it was merely holding that Liberty may not affect the rights of a party in bankruptcy by its classification of a payment received from a non-debtor guarantor. Id. Yet, given that GTN had already satisfied the full amount of its capped liability under the guaranty--i.e., $140 million--the functional effect of the majority opinion was to deny Liberty the ability to recover the $17 million of postpetition interest from any party.

The National Energy Dissenting Opinion. Judge Duncan dissented on the grounds that the majority advances no support for its conclusion that bankruptcy law governs the contractual relationship between a creditor and a non-debtor guarantor--and ample authority exists to the contrary. 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 16263, at *17 (Duncan, J., dissenting). Notably, Judge Duncan was troubled by the fact that the majority opinion has the effect of limiting the non-debtor guarantors liability for interest accruing after the debtors bankruptcy petition. Id. at *19-20. Judge Duncan further explained how she believed:

[T]he majority would have the bar to recovery of interest from the debtor swallow the accrual of interest on the debt across all parties liable for it. There is simply nothing in the Bankruptcy Code, applicable case law, the relevant guarantee agreement, or nonbankruptcy law to support the jettisoning of basic contract law principles in favor of an expansive reading of § 502(b)(2).

Id. at *20. Indeed, beyond the lack of any authority clearly supporting the majoritys position, Judge Duncan was also concerned that the majoritys opinion violated section 524(e) by allowing the bankruptcy filing of the debtors to dictate how Liberty accounts for its contractual payment from GTN. Id. at *21-22.

Judge Duncan finally expressed her skepticism about the majoritys policy considerations, noting how any distributional effects were the result of Liberty bargaining for a guarantee, which other creditors could have done. See id. at *22.

Ultimately, Judge Duncan would have affirmed the district court (and thus the bankruptcy court) on the grounds that neither bankruptcy law nor the contract governing Libertys relationship with the non-debtor guarantor GTN limits

Libertys rights to allocate its recovery from GTN in any manner that it wishes. Id. at *22-23.

Commentary on the National Energy Opinions. Both the majority and the dissenting opinions in National Energy cogently outline their arguments and reference relevant supporting authority. The ultimate legal issue is a thorny one, though, and neither side is obviously correct. Still, Judge Duncan may have the stronger side of the debate.

First, it is indisputable that the substance over form mode of analysis is a critical part of any bankruptcy courts equitable arsenal. Without such principles, bankruptcy courts would have difficulty distinguishing a true sale from a disguised financing or separating a lease from a security interest. n6 Indeed, the emerging doctrine of recharacterization, whereby ostensible debts are identified as disguised equity interests, n7 would crumble without such principles. None of this is new, of course; the Supreme Court long ago articulated the bankruptcy courts equitable power to sift the circumstances surrounding any claim to see that injustice or unfairness is not done in administration of the bankrupt estate. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 307-08, 60 S. Ct. 238, 84 L. Ed. 281 (1939). Thus, in some meaningful sense, the majority opinion in National Energy is consistent with the time-honed principle that parties cannot use legal formalisms to navigate around the Bankruptcy Code.

On the other hand, it is not clear that the majority opinion in National Energy does not give rise to a regime that is equally driven by formalism. After all, even the majority recognized that section 502(b)(2) should have no effect on Libertys rights vis--vis GTN. Thus, perhaps the entire dispute boils down to a timing issue. If Liberty had (1) collected one payment from GTN of $123 million, which was allocated to principal, (2) asserted a claim against the debtors for the remaining $17 million of outstanding principal, and then (3) collected a second payment from GTN of $17 million, all of which was on account of GTNs separate obligation for postpetition interest, then the National Energy case probably would have come out differently. n8 If so, then the mere formalism of using two staged payments, rather than a single combined payment, seems to alter the result, which means that parties can still contract and maneuver their way around the majoritys holding.

Second, the majority opinion ultimately turns on the trickle-down effect of the actions of two non-debtor parties on the bankruptcy estate. It is obvious that, as between each other, Liberty could allocate GTNs payment however it liked. According to the majority, however, Liberty cannot take an otherwise permissible action vis--vis a non-debtor if doing so has the ultimate effect of contravening the Bankruptcy Code. While there is some authority for such an approach, n9 it nevertheless seems that the trickle-down effect in National Energy may have been too attenuated to support the majoritys approach. After all, consider the result if GTN had guaranteed only the repayment of interest (and thus was not liable for any of the principal). The majority opinion would seem to suggest that relabeling such interest-only payments principal, at least vis--vis the debtors, is also appropriate. Contrary to Judge Wilsons concurrence, this seems to be far more than simply call[ing] a rose by another name, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 16263, *16; it seems to fundamentally alter Libertys rights. At bottom, then, the fairly attenuated nature of the non-debtor interactions vis--vis the bankruptcy estate in National Energy gives rise to real concerns about the opinions limits--at what point can non-debtors freely interact without concern that a bankruptcy court will give greater import to their actions; how much causal distance is enough? These are not easy questions, but intuition and experience seem to pull more toward Judge Duncans restrained approach.

Third, neither the majority opinion nor Judge Duncans dissent pays sufficient attention to the effects the majoritys holding may have on the ex ante costs of credit. The functional result of National Energy appears to be that Liberty will not collect the $17 million of postpetition interest it is owed from any party. As a result, Liberty will suffer a substantial ex post loss notwithstanding the fact that it obtained non-debtor guarantees. This loss, which could occur in a non-zero number of other cases, ultimately reduces the efficacy of guarantees and related forms of credit support. n10 If the legal form of such documents may be ignored by bankruptcy courts paying homage to the equitable principles undergirding the Bankruptcy Code, then those documents may cease to accomplish the very purpose for which they are used.

Guarantees and other forms of credit support can reduce the cost of credit to the primary obligor. n11 If such arrangements cease to be reliable, and may be unenforceable or ineffective in bankruptcy, then a rational lender will increase the costs of credit to the primary obligor on the front-end, which could ultimately trigger more corporate distress and insolvency. n12 Thus, it is not clear that the majority in National Energy reached an optimal or efficient result from a policy perspective.

In the final analysis, National Energy is a hard case that resulted in two interesting and well-reasoned opinions. Perhaps Liberty will petition for en banc review or certiorari to the Supreme Court, which would result in further judicial review of a difficult legal question. Even if the three-member panels opinion is the end of the road for ET Power, GTN, and Liberty, it is likely that the underlying legal question--i.e., the effects of section 502(b)(2) vis--vis non-debtor guarantors--will arise in other contexts and cases. In such an event, both sides of the dispute should find the majority and dissenting opinions in National Energy to be illuminating and important.

For a complete discussion of Code section 502, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 502 (Matthew Bender).

To access more articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

Return to Text

n1 See 11 U.S.C. § 506(b); see also, e.g., United States v. Ron Pair Enters., 489 U.S. 235, 241, 109 S. Ct. 1026, 103 L. Ed. 2d 290 (1989) (explaining that section 506(b) creates an unqualified right for an oversecured creditor to receive postpetition interest).

n2 See 11 U.S.C. §§ 726(a)(5) & 1129(a)(7)(A)(ii); see also, e.g., Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Dow Corning Corp. (In re Dow Corning Corp.), 456 F.3d 668, 677-80 (6th Cir. 2006) (holding that unsecured creditors may be entitled to postpetition interest at the contractual default rate under section 1129(b)s fair and equitable test in a solvent debtor case), cert. denied, 127 S. Ct. 1874 (U.S. 2007); Carmen H. Lonstein & Steven A. Domanowski, Payment of Post-Petition Interest to Unsecured Creditors: Federal Judgment Rate Versus Contract Rate, 12 Am. Bankr. Inst. L. Rev. 421 (2004) (reviewing the authorities and arguments regarding the appropriate rate of postpetition interest that unsecured creditors should receive in solvent debtor cases).

n3

[3] See, e.g., Kopolow v. P.M. Holding Corp. (In re Modern Textile, Inc.), 900 F.2d 1184, 1191 (8th Cir. 1990) (noting how section 502(b)(6) does not operate to cut off and extinguish the lessors claim for amounts in excess of the amount chargeable to the debtors estate, which means the liability of a guarantor for a debtors lease obligations is not altered by the Trustees rejection of the lease); Redback Networks, Inc. v. Mayan Networks Corp. (In re Mayan Networks Corp.), 306 B.R. 295, 300 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004) (observing how [s]everal cases have held that the liability of a guarantor that is not in bankruptcy is not limited by section § 502(b)(6), and endorsing such a principle in the context of a true third-party guarantor).

n4 See, e.g., 11 U.S.C. § 510(a) (subordination agreement is enforceable to the same extent that such agreement is enforceable under applicable nonbankruptcy law); Chemical Bank v. First Trust of N.Y., N.A. (In re Southeast Banking Corp.), 156 F.3d 1114 (11th Cir. 1998) (postpetition interest may accrue as between two creditors pursuant to a subordination agreement that satisfies the so-called rule of explicitness); In re Sunset Bay Assocs., 944 F.2d 1503, 1508 (9th Cir. 1991) (noting how California law provides the rules of decision for determining the parties substantive rights under a subordination agreement in bankruptcy).

n5 See also, e.g., Stollers, Inc. v. Peoples Trust Bank (In re Stollers, Inc.), 93 B.R. 628, 635-36 (Bankr. N.D. Ind. 1988) (concluding that because bankruptcy proceedings do not affect the liabilities of codebtors and guarantors, non-debtor guarantors are liable for postpetition interest and attorneys fees as allowed by the terms of their guarantee).

n6 See generally, e.g., United Airlines, Inc. v. HSBC Bank USA, N.A., 416 F.3d 609, 613-15 (7th Cir. 2005) (noting [t]he need to look through form to substance in the context of identifying a lease under section 365, and suggesting that a contrary state law that identified a lease in a formal rather than a functional manner would conflict with the [Bankruptcy] Code), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1003 (2006).

n7

[7] See, e.g., Fairchild Dornier GMBH v. Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors (In re Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors for Dornier Aviation (N. Am.), Inc.), 453 F.3d 225 (4th Cir. 2006); Cohen v. KB Mezzanine Fund II, LP (In re SubMicron Sys. Corp.), 432 F.3d 448 (3d Cir. 2006); Sender v. Bronze Group, Ltd. (In re Hedged-Invs. Assocs., Inc.), 380 F.3d 1292 (10th Cir. 2004). But see, e.g., Official Creditors Comm. v. Pioneer Commercial Funding Corp. (In re Pacific Express, Inc.), 69 B.R. 112 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1986) (holding that bankruptcy courts do not have the authority to recharacterize a transaction as an equity investment rather than as a loan).

n8

[8] If this scenario would not change the result, then Judge Duncan is correct: the majority opinion does alter the respective rights and liabilities of two non-debtor parties vis--vis each other. After all, there is no coherent reason to force Liberty to wait until the distribution date in the debtors cases before it can pursue GTN on account of GTNs separate liability under the guaranty. Thus, if Liberty must sacrifice its rights to collect the outstanding $17 million from the debtors by accepting payment from GTN, then Libertys rights do seem to be constrained in a meaningful, and probably impermissible, way.

n9 For instance, some courts apply the automatic stay in a fashion that prohibits non-debtors from trading in claims or equity interests if their doing so would have a trickle-down effect on NOLs or other property of the bankruptcy estate. See, e.g., In re Phar-Mor, Inc., 152 B.R. 924 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1993). Likewise, some courts prohibit one non-debtor from gifting its dividend to another non-debtor under a chapter 11 plan on the grounds that doing so violates the absolute priority rule. See, e.g., In re Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 432 F.3d 507 (3d Cir. 2005); cf. In re SPM Mfg. Corp., 984 F.2d 1305 (1st Cir. 1993) (approving a sharing agreement between secured and unsecured creditors that resulted in payment to the unsecured creditors, but bypassed priority tax claimants). The underlying principle that drives these decisions is the notion that the Bankruptcy Codes reach may extend to, and substantively limit, the interaction of two non-debtor parties if their behavior could undermine core bankruptcy precepts. Hard questions necessarily arise when courts are forced to define the outer limits of this broad principle. In some cases, such as National Energy, one senses that the court may have reached too far in its quest to protect the bankruptcy process.

n10

[10] This conclusion may hold true only in instances where there is some sort of cap on the guarantors liability. Such a limit could be the result of a contractual arrangement, as in National Energy, or it could result from external circumstances, such as a subsequent bankruptcy filing by the guarantor. In a scenario where the non-debtor guarantors liability is unlimited, the principal effect of the majority opinion in National Energy is likely to be a timing one--the creditor will eventually be able to recover the full amount that it is owed, but it may need to wait to pursue its postpetition interest claim against the guarantor until after it asserts (or collects?) its principal claim against the debtor.

n11

[11] See, e.g., Mueller v. Sullivan, 141 F.3d 1232, 1233 (7th Cir. 1998) (noting how borrowers received lower interest rates on the guaranteed notes than the unsecured one, and thus had to decide whether the difference in rates was worth the price of the guarantee); Fishman v. Estate of Wirtz, 807 F.2d 520, 581 (7th Cir. 1986) (Easterbrook, J., dissenting in part) (Banks might accept lower rates if the investors guarantee the loan with their other assets . . . , but the guarantee has opportunity costs of its own because assets used to secure this loan cannot be used to finance some other venture.).

n12

[12] Similar considerations were discussed by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Elliott Associates, L.P. v. Banco de la Nacion, 194 F.3d 363 (2d Cir. 1999), which involved Section 489 of the New York Judiciary Law. The nation of Peru argued, and the district court agreed, that Section 489 operated to bar the purchase of defaulted debt with the primary goal of suing to collect the amount owing. The Second Circuit ultimately reversed, and in the process it noted the likely effects of such a rule:

While the district courts rule might benefit the Debtors in the short run, the long term effect would be to cause significant harm to Peru and other developing nations and their institutions seeking to borrow capital in New York. The district courts interpretation would mean that holders of debt instruments would have substantial difficulty selling those instruments if payment were not voluntarily forthcoming. This would therefore add significantly to the risk of making loans to developing nations with poor credit ratings. The additional risk would naturally be reflected in higher borrowing costs to such nations. It could even make loans to some of them unobtainable in New York. A well-developed market of secondary purchasers of defaulted sovereign debt would thereby be disrupted and perhaps destroyed even though its existence provides incentives for primary lenders to continue to lend to high-risk countries.

Id. at 380. A parallel criticism could be levied against the majority in National Energy; although the result was helpful for ET Power, its affiliated debtors, and its non-Liberty creditors, the opinion may ultimately diminish the value of some guarantees, and thereby increase the costs of credit, for other borrowers.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.

16 of 16 DOCUMENTS

Emerging Issues Copyright 2008, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All Rights Reserved.

Mabey on In re Perrine

2008 Emerging Issues 483

Mabey on In re Perrine

By Ralph R. Mabey

August 31, 2007

SUMMARY: How does a court decide that attorney compensation was made in contemplation of a bankruptcy case and thus subject to disclosure pursuant to Rule 2016(b)? According to a bankruptcy court in California, the determination hinges on the debtors subjective intent at the time of payment. As the Hon. Ralph R. Mabey explains in his Expert Commentary on the case, this ruling is part of a trend of strict enforcement of the disclosure requirements of the compensation provisions of the Bankruptcy Code and requires the professional to read the debtors mind.

PDF LINK: Click Here for Enhanced PDF of Commentary

ARTICLE: In determining whether professional services were rendered in contemplation of bankruptcy under Code section 329(a), court considered debtors subjective state of mind and held debtors attorney accountable for the disclosure under Rule 2016(b)

Section 329(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, which is implemented by Rule 2016(b) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, requires debtors professionals to disclose fees paid or agreed to be paid within one year of bankruptcy for services rendered or to be rendered in contemplation of or in connection with the [bankruptcy] case. For many professionals representing debtors, a statement under Bankruptcy Code section 329(a) is merely an accounting exercise. In many cases, the debtor only recently engaged the professional; as a result, the only payment to disclose is the fee or the retainer actually received just prior to the bankruptcy case. But where a professional has maintained a long relationship with a client, the disclosure requirement is more complex. It is for the court, not the professional, and not the debtor, to determine what fees were in contemplation of bankruptcy. Moreover, the bankruptcy courts decision in Perrine reflects a continuing trend by courts to enforce strictly the disclosure requirement and to employ Bankruptcy Code section 329(a) and Bankruptcy Rules 2016(b) and 2017 as bases for avoiding or disgorging payments made to professionals. As with most reported decisions in this area, the Perrine case also reflects unusually bad facts.

Facts. On August 8, 2003, Eugene H. Perrine, Jr., the debtor, transferred a tract of land in Klamath Falls, Oregon, which he owned as his separate property, to the Eugene H. Perrine and Vicki L. Perrine Family Trust dated August 8, 2003. The Perrine trust was an inter vivos revocable trust in the name of Perrine and his wife, Vicki. In addition to the Oregon property, the Perrine Trust included the community property of the couple and another real property located in La Habra, California.

At the time, Perrine was also the president of Perrine Electric Company, Inc. On April 29, 2004, AAA Electrical Supply, Inc. sued Perrine for the sum of $71,167.05 based upon his personal guaranty of the debts of Perrine Electric. The Catanzarite Law Corporation represented Perrine and his company in the litigation with AAA. In connection with that representation, Perrine and his wife, individually and as the trustee of the Perrine Trust, entered into a retainer agreement with Catanzarite, whereby the Perrine Trust transferred the Oregon property to Catanzarite for a stipulated value of $30,000 for payment of accrued attorneys fees and costs and as a credit for future attorneys fees and costs to be incurred by Perrine and Vicki Perrine and also for the purpose of securing the continued representation of the [Perrine trust] and the individuals in future litigation including without limitation, with creditors and to protect the home equity of Vicki and the pension of [Perrine]. Ten days after Perrine transferred the Oregon property to Catanzarite, he stipulated to entry of a judgment in favor of AAA in the amount of $76,767, which he did not satisfy. Approximately three months thereafter, Perrine alone filed a voluntary chapter 7 bankruptcy case. Catanzarite also acted as counsel of record in Perrines bankruptcy case.

In his bankruptcy schedules, Perrine did not list any ownership interest in real property, failed to disclose his ownership interest in Perrine Electric, and also claimed he did not have an interest in a trust. In his statement of financial affairs, Perrine also failed to disclose the transfer of the Oregon property to Catanzarite within one year of the petition date, and in response to Question #9 of the statement of financial affairs, Perrine disclosed only that he paid Catanzarite $3,000 for debt counseling or bankruptcy. Catanzarite, for its part, failed to disclose the receipt of the Oregon property and listed only $3,000 in the Disclosure of Compensation of Attorney for Debtor prepared pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 329(a) and Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b).

At the meeting of creditors conducted pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 341(a) by the chapter 7 trustee appointed in the case, Perrines plans began to unravel. The trustee discovered that Perrine sold the La Habra Property prior to the petition date and transferred the funds to his wife, who was not a debtor in a bankruptcy case. His wife in turn appeared to have used the proceeds from the sale of the La Habra property to acquire other real property in her name. As a result of the meeting of creditors and independent investigation, the trustee sued Vicki to recover the proceeds from the sale of the La Habra Property as a fraudulent transfer and also initiated an adversary proceeding against Perrine to object to his discharge. In response, Perrine filed a motion to dismiss his bankruptcy case, but the bankruptcy court denied the motion, finding that dismissal would prejudice creditors.

In addition to pursuing Perrine and his wife, the trustee also sought an order compelling Catanzarite to amend its disclosure of compensation under Bankruptcy Code section 329(a) and Bankruptcy Rule 2016(b) to account for the transfer of the Oregon property to Catanzarite within one year of the petition date. In response, Perrine and Catanzarite claimed that only $3,000, as already disclosed, was incurred in contemplation of or in connection with the bankruptcy case and that the balance of the $30,000 in stipulated value for the Oregon property had been paid on account of nonbankruptcy services. Specifically, Catanzarite asserted that $12,000 had been used to satisfy an outstanding balance, $3,000 was for the bankruptcy filing, and the remaining $15,000 was used to pay fees incurred in prebankruptcy litigation related to AAA.

The bankruptcy court disagreed and found that the entire sum of $30,000 had been paid to Catanzarite in contemplation of bankruptcy. Thereupon, Catanzarite amended its disclosure of compensation, but once again provided statements that the bankruptcy court found to be inaccurate and misleading. Among other things, the bankruptcy court found that even in the amended disclosure of compensation, Catanzarite failed to provide a method for establishing the value of the Oregon property and that the accounting provided in it did not add up to $30,000. The bankruptcy court scheduled a continued hearing on the amended disclosure of compensation to consider, among other things, the disgorgement of payments made to Catanzarite.

Following the continued hearing, the bankruptcy court took the matter under submission and issued the written opinion.

The bankruptcy courts decision under section 329(a); the meaning of in contemplation of bankruptcy. The court began by stating the purpose of Bankruptcy Code section 329(a), derived from Section 60(d) of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, is to protect the debtor from overreaching by professionals and counteracts the temptation of a failing debtor to deal too liberally with his property in view of financial reverses and probable failure. See 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1432, at *18 (quoting Conrad, Rubin & Lesser v. Pender, 289 U.S. 472, 477-78, 53 S. Ct. 703, 77 L. Ed. 1327 (1933)). As implemented by Rule 2016(b), Bankruptcy Code section 329(a) requires a debtors attorney not later than 15 days after the order for relief to disclose all compensation paid or promised for services rendered in contemplation of or in connection with the case. The bankruptcy court in Perrine also ruled that section 329(a) must be read in conjunction with Bankruptcy Rule 2017(a), which, taken together, gave the court express power to review payments to attorneys for excessiveness and to restore the status quo when assets have been improvidently bartered for legal services[.] See In re Martin, 817 F.2d 175, 180 (1st Cir. 1987).

In addressing Catanzarites attempted disclosures of compensation under section 329(a), the bankruptcy court applied a two-step analysis. In the first step, the bankruptcy court determined whether the transfer of the Oregon property was actually made in contemplation of a bankruptcy case. The Perrine court acknowledged that courts apply a subjective test to determine whether payments to attorneys were made in contemplation of a bankruptcy case. See Wooton v. Dixon (In re Dixon), 143 B.R. 671, 678 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1992). More specifically, courts must try to determine the subjective state of the mind of the debtor, not the professional. Brown v. Luker (In re Zepecki), 258 B.R. 719, 724 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2001), affd, 277 F.3d 1041 (8th Cir. 2002). In other words, the subjective inquiry is whether the debtor was influenced by the possibility or imminence of a bankruptcy proceeding in making the transfer. Id.; see also Conrad, Rubin & Lesser, 289 U.S. at 477 (holding that under the predecessor of Bankruptcy Code section 329(a), the controlling question is with respect to the state of mind of the debtor and whether the thought of bankruptcy was the impelling cause of the transaction).

In the Perrine case, the bankruptcy court found that the timing of the transfer of the Oregon property, just 97 days before the petition date, bound together with the fact that Perrine stipulated to the entry of a judgment with his largest creditor, AAA, shortly thereafter evidenced an intent by Perrine to deplete his assets before filing for bankruptcy. Indeed, the bankruptcy court found that once the Oregon property had been transferred to Catanzarite, there was no other major asset to satisfy Perrines creditors, including AAA.

In the second step of the analysis, the focus shifts from the debtor to the professional. Once the court determines that section 329(a) applies because of the debtors intent in making the payment to his attorneys, the court then determines whether the disclosure of compensation by the attorney was full, candid, and complete. The bankruptcy court in Perrine summarized the existing case law under section 329(a) and concluded that:

1. Disclosure is mandatory. See Turner v. Davis, Gillenwater & Lynch (In re Investment Bankers, Inc.), 4 F.3d 1556, 1565 (10th Cir. 1993).
2. Disclosure is required regardless of the nature of services rendered, and it is immaterial that the attorney was not the bankruptcy counsel of record. See In re Keller Fin. Servs. of Fla., Inc., 248 B.R. 859, 883 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2000).
3. Failure to satisfy the disclosure requirement may result in sanctions, including disgorgement of fees. See Law Offices of Nicholas A. Franke v. Tiffany (In re Lewis), 113 F.3d 1040, 1045 (9th Cir. 1997).
4. The penalty for failing to comply with section 329(a) applies to both willful and inadvertent nondisclosure. See In re Keller Fin. Servs. of Fla., Inc., 248 B.R. 859, 885 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2000).

The Perrine court found Catanzarites disclosures to be far from full, candid, and complete. The bankruptcy court chided Catanzarite for initially hiding the receipt of the Oregon property and the subsequent attempts to characterize the transfer as a payment for nonbankruptcy services. The bankruptcy court did not find credible Catanzarites amended disclosure of compensation because, among other things, the amended disclosure of compensation failed to provide a method for arriving at the stipulated value for the Oregon property and the accounting of the money did not add up to $30,000. In addition, Catanzarites involvement in Perrines litigation with AAA implied that Catanzarite knew or should have known that the Oregon property was Perrines only major non-exempt asset. Citing the gravity of Catanzarites nondisclosure, the bankruptcy court ordered the full disgorgement of the Oregon property or the stipulated value of $30,000, at the election of the trustee.

Commentary. Doubtless the severity of the remedy imposed by the bankruptcy court in Perrine was commensurate with the conduct of Perrine and Catanzarite found by the court.

The two-step analysis used in Perrine, however, places the risk of reading the debtors mind squarely upon the professional. As explained in the decision, courts apply a subjective test to determine the debtors mind as to whether a payment was made in contemplation of bankruptcy. The professionals intent or knowledge is largely immaterial for purposes of determining the applicability of section 329(a) disclosure. If the debtor subjectively contemplated bankruptcy, the professional must disclose the fees received or agreed to within one year of the bankruptcy filing irrespective of the use of those fees. Under the Perrine analysis, it does not matter whether the nondisclosure of compensation by a professional is willful or inadvertent: If section 329(a) applies, a professionals inadvertent failure to disclose a payment as made in contemplation of bankruptcy violates the statute. This is so whether the bankruptcy professional is called in at the last minute and is unfamiliar with the decades-long work for the debtor of the professionals thousand-member firm, or whether the professional is simply mistaken--or duped--by the debtors intentions respecting a future bankruptcy.

On the other hand, the nondisclosure sanctions imposed upon a professional, though remedial, are flexible and equitable. They should take account of the professionals circumstances and understanding.

Finally, the professional has a section 329(a) disclosure safe harbor reachable without tacking or jibing: Disclose all fees received or agreed to within one year of the bankruptcy filing whether or not you are employed as a bankruptcy professional.

For a complete discussion of Code section 329, see Collier on Bankruptcy, ch. 329 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of compensation generally, see Collier Bankruptcy Practice Guide, ch. 7 and ch. 28 (Matthew Bender).

To access more articles on recent bankruptcy developments, search the Mega News, Bankruptcy Law file on lexis.com.

For a one-stop source for all bankruptcy research, see the bankruptcy area of law page on lexis.com.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR(S):

Ralph R. Mabey is Senior of Counsel to Stutman Treister & Glatt P.C., www.stutman.com, Professor of Law at the S. J. Quinney College of Law, University of Utah, and a Contributing Author to Collier on Bankruptcy. He received his law degree from Columbia University, where he served on the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review. Judge Mabey served with distinction as a United States Bankruptcy Judge before returning to private practice and teaching. His judicial opinions have been cited frequently by courts and scholars.

Judge Mabey is the past President and Chair of the American College of Bankruptcy. He served as an appointee of the Chief Justice of the United States to the U.S. Judicial Conferences Advisory Committee on the Bankruptcy Rules. He also served as the managing editor of the Norton Bankruptcy Law Adviser and on the Editorial Advisory Board of the American Bankruptcy Law Journal.

He is a member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, the American Law Institute, and the American Bar Associations Select Advisory Committee on Business Reorganization (SABRE).

Judge Mabey's service in complex workout, bankruptcy, reorganization, and litigation matters includes A.H. Robins Company (as examiner with expanded powers); Dow Corning (as counsel for certain bondholders); Columbia Gas System (as equity committee counsel); Federated Department Stores (as counsel for the official pre-merger bondholders committee); TWA (as counsel for the pilots); American Airlines (as counsel for the pilots); Enron (as special counsel for the debtor); Cajun Electric Power Cooperative (as chapter 11 trustee); Boston Chicken (as an expert witness); and At Home/Excite (as an expert witness).

Courts, parties, and the Department of Justice (U.S. Trustee Program) have appointed Judge Mabey to serve as mediator, arbitrator, examiner, or trustee in Alaska, Arizona, California, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Judge Mabey is a member of the New York and Utah Bars.