Remember to ask the witness to acknowledge his or her signature on a signed document. Again, attorneys vary in their approach. Many attorneys routinely hand the document to the witness at the time the impeachment commences and simply ask: "Is that your signature?" Other attorneys, in the belief that the witness may be reluctant to admit the signature once it is clear that the document is being used for impeachment, ask for identification of a signature on an impeaching document at a time when the cross-examination relates to a subject other than the impeaching matter. During impeachment they then remind the witness that of the earlier testimony that the document bears his or her signature. In most civil litigation in federal court, the issue of the authenticity of a signature on a particular document will either be stipulated in the pretrial submission or developed during discovery, and ordinarily will not present a tactical dilemma.

Counsel generally will choose to read the prior inconsistent statement into the record to provide the necessary emphasis, rather than asking the witness to read it.

[8] Using Pleadings for Impeachment

Pleadings are another type of prior written statement. Because they are filed in the lawsuit, the jury will perceive them as important documents and may give them more credence than other written statements of the witness. Prior statements may be found in complaints or filings in proceedings other than traditional lawsuits. For example, a party who sues for breach of an implied employment contract may be impeached by statements in an earlier complaint to a state agency in which the party claimed age discrimination, but did not mention an employment contract.

Statements made in signed or verified pleadings are admissions that may be read and introduced into evidence under the Federal Rules of Evidence. However, under some circumstances a more dramatic effect can be achieved by confronting the witness with the inconsistent pleading during cross-examination than by introducing the statement as evidence.

[9] Using an Omission in a Prior Statement for Impeachment

A witness also may be impeached on the basis of an omission in a prior statement when the prior statement was made under circumstances rendering it incumbent on the witness to state the fact or when it was natural or likely for him or her to have included that fact in the prior report or testimony. n9

Impeachment by omission is a common technique that can be used effectively with respect to written statements and deposition testimony. The technique is essentially the same as that used with respect to prior statements. However, the emphasis obviously is on the fact that the statement made at trial was not made at the time of the previous statement and that, if the statement is as significant as the witness has suggested on direct, why was it not previously disclosed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentPrior Inconsistent StatementsEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyPresentation of EvidenceEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionMemory AidsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 613(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Marks, 816 F.2d 1207 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Notes of Advisory Committee, 56 F.R.D. 278-279 (1972).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Evid. 613(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Gong v. Hirsch, 913 F.2d 1269 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Dugan v. EMS Helicopters, Inc., 915 F.2d 1428 (10th Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Evid. 613(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Evid. 803(7).

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

142 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
B Impeaching Witnesses on Cross-Examination

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.26

§ 35.26 Impeaching a Witness by Highlighting Inconsistency With Other Witnesses

If two witnesses called by the opponent testify inconsistently, there may be no better way to make use of the inconsistency than confronting one of the witnesses with it. This will emphasize the contradiction and create some suspicion as to the adversary's case. Remember to also re-emphasize the inconsistency in closing argument. To be effective, however, this type of impeachment must be directed at significant inconsistencies.

Generally, it is not a good idea to confront an opponent's witness with an inconsistency between his or her testimony and the testimony of a witness favorable to the examiner. The witness likely will say that the favorable witness is mistaken. If the witness being cross-examined offers credible support for his or her version, attempted impeachment may serve only to bolster the adversary's case. This type of impeachment will be effective only if the witness being confronted has made a poor impression with the jury, or if his or her story is inherently improbable or if counsel can later offer strong corroboration for the favorable witness' version. Consequently, the better approach in most cases would be to lay a foundation during cross-examination and later introduce independent evidence showing the falsity of the testimony.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentPrior Inconsistent StatementsEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityRehabilitationEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyPresentation of Evidence

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
B Impeaching Witnesses on Cross-Examination

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.27

§ 35.27 Impeaching a Witness by Relying on Bad Character, Bias, or Interest

[1] Using Evidence of Bad Reputation or Character for Impeachment Purposes

Counsel may, for impeachment purposes, use evidence that the witness has a poor reputation for veracity or that the witness has committed acts that put into question his or her veracity. Evidence of bad reputation or character of a witness often has no bearing on the substantive issues in the case and is admissible only to attack the veracity of the witness. If the proof is being admitted only with respect to character or reputation for veracity, n1 that means that the proof itself has no material connection with the trial. As a result, attacking a witness with such proof tends to divert the trial from the issues that are central to the case.

The credibility of a witness may be attacked or supported by evidence in the form of opinion or reputation, but subject to both of the following limitations: n2

- The evidence may refer only to character for truthfulness or untruthfulness
- Evidence of truthful character is admissible only after the character of the witness for truthfulness has been attacked by opinion or reputation evidence or otherwise

Specific instances of the conduct of a witness, for the purpose of attacking or supporting the witness' character for truthfulness, other than conviction of crime as provided in Rule 609, may not be proved by extrinsic evidence. They may, however, in the discretion of the court, if probative of truthfulness or untruthfulness, be inquired into on cross-examination of the witness concerning the following: n3

- The witness' character for truthfulness or untruthfulness
- The character for truthfulness or untruthfulness of another witness as to whose character the witness being cross-examined has testified

The giving of testimony, whether by an accused or by any other witness, does not operate as a waiver of the accused's or the witness' privilege against self-incrimination when examined with respect to matters that relate only to character for truthfulness. n4

There are no fixed rules on the types of conduct that are probative of truthfulness or untruthfulness. Generally, however, acts probative of untruthfulness include forgery, perjury and fraud. n5 On the other hand, seeking discharge in bankruptcy does not show a disregard for truth that would cast doubt on a witness' veracity. n6

Untruthfulness cannot necessarily be inferred from the unethical activities in a business or profession. For example, an accountant's borrowing from clients, while ethically questionable, has been found to be irrelevant to his truthfulness as an expert witness. n7 On the other hand, disbarment because of misappropriation of client funds has been held to be probative of untruthfulness. n8

In deciding whether to permit impeachment through specific instances of the witness' conduct, the court will consider the length of time that has passed since the incident. Acts that are remote in time may be only weakly probative of the witness' current credibility. n9 For example, the Fifth Circuit has held that the probative value of evidence of false statements to immigration officials sixteen years before trial was outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. n10 Similarly, the Eleventh Circuit has ruled that the probative value of an accountant's sanction for over reliance on his partner's work 23 years before trial was outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. n11

Proceed with caution when trying to prove bad reputation or bad character. The exercise may backfire because the jury may conclude that counsel is mudslinging out of a sense of desperation. If the evidence is of dubious admissibility or questionable relevance, refrain from the attacks. If an evaluation of the jury suggests that evidence of bad character may be ill received, it is better not to resort to such evidence. If the attack fails, the jury may question counsel's ethics, resent the effort and sympathize with the witness.

[2] Using Evidence of Criminal Acts for Impeachment Purposes

It is well-settled that evidence of a prior conviction is admissible in a civil case for impeachment purposes. n12

For the purpose of attacking the credibility of a witness, the following evidence is admissible: n13

- Evidence that a witness other than an accused has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted, subject to Rule 403, if the crime was punishable by death or imprisonment in excess of one year under the law under which the witness was convicted, and evidence that an accused has been convicted of such a crime shall be admitted if the court determines that the probative value of admitting this evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect to the accused

- Evidence that any witness has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if it involved dishonesty or false statement, regardless of the punishment

The rule protects both civil and criminal litigants from the use of a prior conviction when its prejudicial effect "substantially outweighs its probative value." Therefore, prior felony convictions may be inadmissible if they are of only limited probative value. However, prior convictions for felonies and lesser offenses that involve dishonesty or false statement are admissible without regard to the prejudicial effect on the witness. Clearly, a conviction for perjury would fall under this category. Similarly, a conviction of fraud is generally considered to be probative of a witness' credibility. n14 Counsel should research what else might be a crime of "dishonesty or false statement" in the applicable jurisdiction before seeking to introduce the evidence, because courts have taken varying approaches regarding the same crime. n15

Evidence of a conviction is not admissible if a period of more than ten years has elapsed since the date of the conviction or of the release of the witness from the confinement imposed for that conviction, whichever is the later date, unless the court determines, in the interests of justice, that the probative value of the conviction supported by specific facts and circumstances substantially outweighs its prejudicial effect. n16 However, evidence of a conviction more than 10 years old as calculated herein, is not admissible unless the proponent gives to the adverse party sufficient advance written notice of intent to use such evidence to provide the adverse party with a fair opportunity to contest the use of such evidence. n17

Evidence of a conviction is not admissible if: n18

- The conviction has been the subject of a pardon, annulment, certificate of rehabilitation, or other equivalent procedure based on a finding of the rehabilitation of the person convicted, and that person has not been convicted of a subsequent crime which was punishable by death or imprisonment in excess of one year, or

- The conviction has been the subject of a pardon, annulment, or other equivalent procedure based on a finding of innocence

Impeachment based on prior criminal convictions is fraught with danger. If the judge precludes the evidence in front of the jury, the jury may hold that against counsel. Because this area is complex, and the judge has wide discretion, counsel should consider presenting the matter to the court for a ruling before commencing impeachment.

[3] Using Evidence of Bias or Interest for Impeachment Purposes

The motivation of a witness in testifying, including possible self-interest and any bias or prejudice against a party, is one of the principal subjects for cross-examination. n19 To evaluate a witness properly, a jury must have sufficient information to make a knowledgeable appraisal of a witness' motives and bias. Therefore, it is an abuse of discretion for a trial judge to cut off cross-examination if the opportunity to present this information is not afforded. n20 The rationale for permitting this type of impeachment is to expose possible ulterior motives of the witness and thereby create suspicion as to the testimony.

Extrinsic evidence of specific instances of a witness' conduct generally is not admissible to contradict testimony on collateral matters. However, bias of a witness is not a collateral matter n21 and the cross-examiner is not bound by a witness' denials. n22 Extrinsic evidence of specific acts is admissible if the evidence tends to show bias or motive for the witness to testify untruthfully. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentBad Character for TruthfulnessGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentBad Character for TruthfulnessOpinion & ReputationEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentBad Character for TruthfulnessSpecific InstancesEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Bastow v. General Motors Corp., 844 F.2d 506, 510-11 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 608(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Ad-Vantage Tel. Dir. Consult. v. GTE Directories, 37 F.3d 1460, 1464 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ad-Vantage Tel. Dir. Consult. v. GTE Directories, 37 F.3d 1460, 1464 (11th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. Lanza, 790 F.2d 1015, 1020 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Ad-Vantage Tel. Dir. Consult. v. GTE Directories, 37 F.3d 1460, 1464 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. United States v. Jackson, 882 F.2d 1444, 1448 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Ad-Vantage Tel. Dir. Consult. v. GTE Directories, 37 F.3d 1460, 1464 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 10. United States v. Cox, 536 F.2d 65, 72 (5th Cir. 1976) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Ad-Vantage Tel. Dir. Consult. v. GTE Directories, 37 F.3d 1460, 1464 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Wilson v. Groaning, 25 F.3d 581, 586 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Evid. 609(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. American Home Assur. v. American President Lines, 44 F.3d 774, 779 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n15)Footnote 15. For example, the Fifth Circuit has admitted evidence of a prior conviction for petit larceny, whereas the Third Circuit has reached a contrary result. Compare Virgin Islands v. Toto, 529 F.2d 278 (3d Cir. 1976) , with United States v. Carden, 529 F.2d 443 (5th Cir. 1976) ; See also Altobello v. Borden Confectionary Prods., Inc., 872 F.2d 215 (7th Cir. 1989) (meter tampering conviction admissible to impeach employee who filed age-discrimination suit).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Evid. 609(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Evid. 609(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. Evid. 609(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. Henry v. Speckard, 22 F.3d 1209, 1214 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Douglas v. Owens, 50 F.3d 1226, 1230 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Harbor Ins. Co. v. Schnabel Foundation Co., 946 F.2d 930, 935 (D.C. Cir. 1991) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Although the witness' credibility is a matter left to the jury, the trial court has discretion to limit the types of evidence which will be admitted to show bias, as long as the jury is given sufficient information to appraise the witness' bias. United States v. Lew, 875 F.2d 219 (9th Cir. 1989) ; see also Kasuri v. St. Elizabeth Hosp. Medical Cent., 897 F.2d 845 (6th Cir. 1990) ; Lewy v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 799 F.2d 1281 (whether a witness actually embezzled funds was properly held inadmissible as impeachment on cross-examination where the issue was irrelevant to the case and the possible bias of the witness had been amply demonstrated).

(n23)Footnote 23. United States v. Capozzi, 883 F.2d 608 (8th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 918, 110 S. Ct. 1947, 109 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1990) .

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

144 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
B Impeaching Witnesses on Cross-Examination

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.28

§ 35.28 Impeaching Witnesses by Showing Their Version of Events to be Highly Improbable

Testimony relating the details of an occurrence may be impeached by showing that the witness' version of the story is highly improbable, or even impossible. n1 This can be done by showing that conditions were such that the witness could not have observed the events, or heard the conversation. In addition, counsel may attack the personal capacity of the witness to observe or hear.

This type of impeachment likely will fail unless there is independent evidence demonstrating the witness' poor opportunity to observe. However, if there is independent evidence to support the attack, then counsel may be able to induce the witness to insist that he or she had an excellent opportunity to observe and then discredit the witness with the independent evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentBad Character for TruthfulnessGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentMental IncapacityEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 480 U.S. 39, 51-52, 107 S. Ct. 989, 94 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1987) (the right to cross-examine includes the opportunity to show that testimony is exaggerated or unbelievable).

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
B Impeaching Witnesses on Cross-Examination

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 35.29through 35.39

[Reserved]

§§ 35.29[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
C Cross-Examining Expert Witnesses

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.40

§ 35.40 Evaluating the Importance of Expert Testimony

If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise, if: n1

- The testimony is based on sufficient facts or data
- The testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods
- The witness has applied the principles and methods reliably to the facts of the case

An expert with impressive credentials may influence the jury's verdict in the case. When testimony relates to technical matters beyond the experience of the average juror, the jury will look to the expert for guidance. Litigation often boils down to a battle of the experts. While the testimony of lay fact witnesses remains important, in the complex types of cases that increasingly dominate court dockets, experts' opinions are a critical element of the trial. n2 For example, whether the issue is medical causation in toxic tort causes, statistical discriminatory effects in civil rights and employment cases, market share and predatory pricing in antitrust cases, or misleading statements in securities and corporate takeover cases, the experts' testimony goes to the very heart of the issues that the jury must decide.

Judges are often disinclined to restrict the breadth or depth of experts' testimony, and judicial denial of expert status because of lack of qualifications seldom occurs under today's liberal rules defining who may be an expert. Thus, cross-examination of an expert assumes a pivotal role.

The jury faces a dilemma when each side has an expert. Which expert should the jury believe? Many factors influence the jury's decision, but none is more important than how the witness stands up under cross-examination.

Opening statements alert the jury to the significance of expert testimony in the case. Frequently, when expert witnesses are involved there is little dispute about the underlying facts. Cross-examination provides an opportunity to expose flaws in the expert's qualifications, personality and opinions. In many cases, cross-examination of an expert witness is the most effective way to undermine the jury's confidence in an expert.

Although expert cross-examination is important, counsel may want to consider foregoing cross-examination of an expert witness and to let one's own expert make the rejoinder. The gains from effective cross-examination may be great, but the damage from ineffective cross-examination may be even greater. Do not rush into expert cross-examination. First balance the potential benefits expected from the cross-examination against the likely harm resulting from ineffective cross. The decision regarding whether to cross-examine an expert should be made before trial on the basis of consultation with one's own expert and after thorough preparation. The dangers of a haphazard cross-examination of a witness are accentuated when the witness is an expert. If counsel does not fully understand the subject matter or has not developed a basis for effective cross-examination during trial preparation, the best cross-examination of an expert is no cross-examination at all.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExpertsGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExpertsQualificationsEvidenceTestimonyExpertsUltimate Issue

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 702.

(n2)Footnote 2. Rothblatt, Cross-Exam of A Polygraph Expert, 16 U. West. L.A. L. Rev. 55 (1984).

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
C Cross-Examining Expert Witnesses

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.41

§ 35.41 Considering Topics of Cross-Examination for Expert Witnesses

[1] Challenging the Qualifications of an Expert

At the outset, it is important to consider whether the witness' qualifications as an expert are so deficient that the witness should not be permitted to offer expert opinions. If the witness is not qualified, do not wait until the conclusion of the direct examination to discredit the expert's qualifications. It is better to prevent the jurors from hearing the expert's opinion than to try to erase it from their minds once they have heard it. Accordingly, counsel may choose to challenge the qualifications of the expert in a pretrial motion in limine, possibly eliminating the would-be expert, and perhaps shortening the trial. Or counsel may make the motion during trial outside the presence of the jury.

Another alternative is to wait until trial and voir dire the expert in front of the jury, knowing that in all probability that the expert will be deemed qualified by the court and will be permitted to testify. If the judge rules that the witness is qualified as an expert, the doubts created through the voir dire will linger in the jurors' minds while they listen to the direct testimony. Then, even though the judge allowed the expert to testify, counsel can later argue to the jury the reasons why they should discount that testimony, especially when compared to that of the opposing expert, whose qualifications are well established.

If the last approach is used, after the witness' qualifications are developed on direct examination and before any opinion evidence is offered, ask the court for an opportunity to voir dire the witness as to qualifications. The voir dire will demonstrate whether the witness is incompetent to testify as an expert. Counsel must show that the witness lacks the necessary knowledge, skill, experience, training, or expertise to render an expert opinion regarding scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge. By demonstrating affirmatively the witness' lack of credentials, the jury may be precluded from ever hearing the opinion testimony. This is tactically superior to mere cross-examination. However, assess carefully whether the proffered expert is likely to be barred from offering opinion testimony before undertaking such a challenge. n1 Nevertheless, the voir dire can effectively lay the foundation for cross-examination and plant a seed of doubt before the opinion evidence is offered.

If the voir dire does not disqualify the witness, or if voir dire will not be used, counsel should exploit the lack or weakness of the expert's qualifications during cross-examination. There are several ways to do this:

- Show that the purported expert lacks experience with the specific subject matter at issue

- Show that the purported expert lacks education or knowledge regarding the specific art or science addressed in the litigation
- Narrow the expert's field of expertise and show that it is inapplicable to the case
- Show that the witness acquired expertise only after being retained for the trial

The approach will obviously vary with the case and the qualifications of the expert. As an example, however, consider a certified public accountant who testifies in an antitrust case involving meat packing accounting.

[2] Probing for Expert Bias or Interest

Normally, the jury will assume that the expert is impartial. Counsel must bring to the jury's attention any matters that may undermine the objectivity of the expert. Those matters include the following:

- Compensation paid to the expert, including whether higher compensation is paid for testifying than for normal consultations
- Relationship with the plaintiff or the defendant
- Relationship with plaintiff's or defendant's industry or other companies in that industry
- Extent to which the expert testifies or consults in litigated matters
- Whether the expert testifies exclusively for plaintiffs or defendants
- Whether the expert offers the same opinion in every case
- Relationship to opposing counsel.
- Interest in the outcome of the case, whether philosophical (an expert who testifies for "causes" he or she supports) or economic (expert's fee is contingent)

An attack on the objectivity of an opposing expert is likely to be returned in kind by opposing counsel. Therefore, counsel should thoroughly prepare his or her own expert to withstand a similar attack.

A common but often ineffective topic of expert cross-examination relates to compensation. Nowadays, the cross-examiner rarely gets to raise that issue for the first time. Most lawyers, on direct, discuss the amount and basis of the expert's pay. The question, "Isn't it true that you are being paid to testify here today," has little impact on the jury. Jurors expect and have been prepared for the fact that experts are entitled to reasonable compensation for their time and effort. But if the compensation is not reasonable or is contingent, then the jury may link it to possible bias, especially if the substance of the expert's testimony is weak.

[3] Asking Hypothetical Questions

Hypothetical questions may be an effective means to test the validity and firmness of the expert's opinions. One approach used by lawyers is to isolate each factor relied on by the expert in rendering an opinion and then remove the factors one by one to determine what effect that would have on the expert's opinion. Alternatively, it may be possible to induce the expert to alter his or her opinion by adding additional facts to the hypothetical question asked during direct examination.

Another effective way to use hypothetical questions on cross-examination is to vary the facts relied on by the expert. Rephrase the hypothetical question asked during direct examination by using a favorable version of the facts. If the expert's opinion changes and favors the cross-examiner's case, counsel then can argue in summation that his or her own version of the facts is true and that even the opposing expert agrees. If the expert's opinion does not change, argue that the expert is not credible because he or she has a fixed, preconceived opinion.

[4] Corroborating Your Expert's Position

It may be possible to establish the foundation for the direct examination of your expert through cross-examination of the opposing expert. Ask the opposing expert to admit to essential facts on which your expert will rely. Ask the expert if he or she knows your expert or knows your expert's reputation in the field. Experts are typically generous and professional towards each other. Ask the expert if he or she recognizes as authoritative the books or papers on which your expert will rely.

[5] Impeaching Expert Witnesses

An expert who is a prolific writer or professional testifier is vulnerable to impeachment based on prior statements. This requires careful and thorough research of all trials and depositions in which the expert has testified, as well as a search of newspapers, periodicals, journals, and the professional data base wherein the expert is likely to have published, been quoted, or otherwise appeared. One's own expert or another consultant may be a valuable source of suggestions on how to track the previous pronouncements of the opposing expert. Groups such as national and state-wide trial lawyer associations track appearances by professional or industry experts. Ammunition for cross-examination may be found through these sources.

[6] Forcing Equivocation

An expert witness may readily agree that legitimate differences of opinion can and many times do exist between experts in the particular field of expertise. In appropriate cases, go one step further and point out that the expert has had differences of opinions with colleagues in the past--sometimes the expert was right and sometimes the expert was wrong.

[7] Demonstrating Lack of Thoroughness

It may be possible to demonstrate in some cases that the expert failed to do certain things or consider certain evidence needed to form a solid opinion. Thus, for example, if an expert merely inspected a product but did not test or disassemble it, the expert may be vulnerable during cross-examination. For example, in a case involving the alleged forgery of a document by assembling parts of different documents into a new, false one, the paper expert may testify that he or she examined the papers under a microscope, but did not perform a common test to chemically analyze the papers because it was a "destructive" test. The expert's credibility may be damaged if he or she admits that the "destruction" would affect a piece of each paper about the size of a period. Cross-examination regarding thoroughness is likely to be particularly effective in situations in which an expert relied on a report or statement of another person in rendering an opinion.

[8] Questioning the Expert Concerning Learned Treatises

Cross-examination of an expert is permissible on the basis of a learned treatise whether or not the treatise was relied on or is recognized as authoritative by the witness. n2 The technique is to demonstrate that the expert's opinions are inconsistent with statements in a learned treatise and therefore should not be believed. This approach is most effective if the opposing expert first admits that the "impeaching" treatise is authoritative and recognized as such in the pertinent field of expertise. n3 Some treatises are so generally accepted and widely recognized in particular disciplines that an expert who disputes their authoritativeness will damage his or her credibility by such a denial. Counsel can rely on his or her own experts to qualify the impeaching material as authoritative. If an expert relies on a treatise or paper, the entire work may be a fertile field for cross-examination, especially if another portion of the work supports a favorable theory and contradicts the expert. In a case in which a redacted AMA report was introduced as the learned treatise, the appellate court held that cross-examination must be allowed about the missing portions. n4 It is common for adverse experts in the same case to rely on the same treatises. Counsel may explore on cross-examination why the expert focused on one section, but disregarded another.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExpertsGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExpertsCredibilityImpeachmentEvidenceTestimonyExpertsQualificationsEvidenceTestimonyExpertsUltim
Issue

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. But see IMPACT, Inc. v. Firestone, 893 F.2d 1189 (11th Cir. 1990) (district court's decision not to accept testimony of defendant's expert witness on the ground that he was a political scientist and not a statistician or economist was within the court's broad discretion); United States v. Miller, 874 F.2d 1255 (9th Cir. 1989) (en banc).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 803(18).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ward v. United States, 838 F.2d 182 (6th Cir. 1988) (articles written by an expert who did not testify were properly admitted into evidence when a competent expert testified that articles were authoritative, and there was no resulting prejudice to defendant).

(n4)Footnote 4. Graham v. Wyeth Laboratories, 906 F.2d 1399 (10th Cir. 1990) .

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
C Cross-Examining Expert Witnesses

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 35.42through 35.49

[Reserved]

§§ 35.42[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
D Redirect, Rebuttal, and Surrebuttal

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.50

§ 35.50 Conducting Redirect Examination

[1] Understanding the Importance of Redirect Examination

The examination of a witness need not, and in many cases should not, conclude with cross-examination. The direct examiner has the opportunity to rehabilitate the witness during a redirect examination. The purpose of redirect examination is to repair any damage done by clarifying and explaining apparent contradictions or admissions against interest brought out during cross-examination. As such, redirect should focus on new matter brought out during cross-examination and should not merely repeat points made during direct examination.

Obviously, counsel will be in no position to conduct redirect examination unless he or she pays careful attention during cross-examination. Beyond that, though, effective redirect examination also requires advance preparation. Know each witness' story and have available any materials that can refresh the witness' recollection or explain any apparent contradiction. n1 Before trial, review all prior statements by the witness. Thoroughly prepare each witness for both direct and cross-examination. If the witness' anticipated trial testimony departs from a prior statement, press the witness for an explanation that can be explored during redirect examination. If the witness is thoroughly prepared for anticipated cross-examination, counsel will be able to refresh the witness' recollection if he or she fails to explain a statement or forgets to mention a distinguishing circumstance.

[2] Evaluating the Scope of Redirect Examination

Redirect examination is normally limited to the scope of cross-examination; however, a trial judge can, in his or her discretion, allow a new line of questioning on redirect. n2 In most situations, redirect examination should be employed to rebut or explain the effect of matters developed during cross-examination. n3 The witness properly may be examined as to all matters which were the subject of cross-examination. Cross-examination regarding a part of a transaction enables the opposing party to elicit evidence of the whole transaction on redirect examination, at least to the extent that it relates to the same subject. n4 Similarly, if opposing counsel opens the door during cross-examination regarding matters not covered during direct, counsel may conduct redirect examination on those matters even if the testimony would not have been admissible during direct examination. n5

Occasionally, counsel may forget to cover a subject during direct examination and realize the omission during the adversary's cross-examination. If the subject is not touched on during cross-examination, counsel may be met with an objection if her or she attempts to go into the forgotten area on redirect-examination. It is better to advise the court of the omission and ask for permission to inquire into that area during redirect examination. The trial court has discretion to allow such examination, and often will do so. By introducing new matters in the redirect examination, counsel is not foreclosing the adversary from cross-examination regarding them. The court generally will allow adverse parties to recross to test the truthfulness, accuracy and completeness of new matters developed during redirect examination. n6

[3] Considering Whether to Conduct Redirect Examination

As a basic rule, redirect examination should be conducted only when the witness needs rehabilitation after a damaging cross-examination or when certain testimony elicited during cross-examination needs clarification or explanation. For example, assume that a witness testifies at trial that during a meeting on December 2, 2005, Mr. Smith made a certain statement. During his deposition in the case, the witness could not recall what Mr. Smith said during that meeting. If opposing counsel emphasizes the witness' deposition testimony during cross-examination at trial in an attempt to cast suspicion on the trial testimony, counsel may want to conduct a short redirect examination to explain that prior to testifying at trial the witness reviewed certain documents which refreshed his recollection.

Do not redirect simply for the sake of having the last word. Just as the best cross-examination often is no cross-examination, the best redirect often is no redirect. Leave well enough alone; unnecessary redirect examination, even to repeat favorable testimony, may only open the door to damaging testimony. The witness may volunteer something that may either be harmful or provide opposing counsel with a new idea. The better approach is to forego such redirect examination and stress the favorable evidence during the closing argument. If counsel decides to conduct redirect, keep it short to be effective.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationScopeEvidenceTestimonyPresentation of EvidenceEvidenceTestimonyRefreshing RecollectionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See The Lost Art of Redirect, 16 Litigation 27 (Summer 1990).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Kroh, 915 F.2d 326 (8th Cir. 1990) ; United States v. Komisaruk, 885 F.2d 490 (9th Cir. 1989) ; United States v. Wiley, 846 F.2d 150 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. O'Dell v. Hercules, Inc., 687 F. Supp. 450 (E.D. Ark. 1988) , aff'd, 904 F.2d 1194 (8th Cir. 1990) ; United States v. Greybear, 883 F.2d 1382 (8th Cir. 1989) (redirect may be limited when the subject on cross-examination was collateral).

(n4)Footnote 4. United States v. Kroh, 915 F.2d 326 (8th Cir. 1990) (government's questions on redirect concerning witness' guilty plea were invited by defense counsel's line of inquiry during cross-examination); United States v. Walker, 613 F.2d 1349 (5th Cir. 1980) ; United States v. Barrentine, 591 F.2d 1069 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n5)Footnote 5. U.S. v. Catano, 65 F.3d 219, 226 (1st Cir. 1995) ; United States v. Mang Sun Wong, 884 F.2d 1537 (2d Cir. 1989) ; United States v. Foley, 683 F.2d 273 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. Eniola, 893 F.2d 383 (D.C. Cir. 1990) .

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
D Redirect, Rebuttal, and Surrebuttal

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.51

§ 35.51 Offering Rebuttal Evidence

[1] Understanding the Importance of Rebuttal Evidence

Rebuttal evidence by the plaintiff follows the close of the defendant's case. However, there are many opportunities to introduce rebuttal evidence before the rebuttal stage of the trial is reached.

In preparing the case for trial, anticipate the adversary's proof and plan to counter that proof along strategic lines best suited for the case. Counsel may decide to hold rebuttal evidence for the rebuttal (or surrebuttal) stage of the trial or may anticipate the adversary's proof by introducing rebuttal evidence during the case-in-chief in the hope of softening the blow of the adversary's proof. As a general rule, hold rebuttal evidence until a later stage in the trial. First, the anticipated evidence may never materialize or may surface in a favorable manner. Second, if counsel reveals the matter too quickly, it provides the opponent with an opportunity to reevaluate the proof and work around weaknesses in his or her case. Strategically, counsel should permit the adversary to go out on a limb before sawing it off.

[2] Evaluating the Scope of Rebuttal

Either party may introduce rebuttal evidence. Any evidence that explains, counteracts or disproves the adversary's proof is admissible as rebuttal evidence, even if that evidence supports one's own case-in-chief. n1 However, counsel cannot, as a matter of right, offer evidence as rebuttal which should have been introduced as a part of the case-in-chief. n2

Therefore, avoid the temptation to sandbag an adversary by "saving" evidence for rebuttal that properly belongs in the case-in-chief. While the trial court has the discretion to admit rebuttal evidence that properly should have been introduced during the case-in-chief, the court may not allow such evidence without a good cause showing as to why such evidence was not offered at the proper time. Also, the adversary may rest, or present a very limited case, thereby preventing the introduction of the evidence saved for rebuttal. Moreover, from a strategic point of view, the case will be most persuasive if the best and most direct evidence is presented during the case-in-chief.

[3] Considering the Extent of Rebuttal

In a long, complex case, the jurors may grow tired, inattentive, and anxious for the trial to end. An extensive rebuttal may be resented by the jury, or they may not be as attentive as they were during the other parts of the case. Generally, rebuttal should be brief and directed at contradicting new, important matters developed by the opponent. Do not call a witness in rebuttal merely to repeat points made during the case-in-chief. Moreover, to dispute every point made by the adversary may overload the case with unnecessary issues, overshadow the important issues, and dignify insignificant matters.

On the other hand, do not lightly forego rebuttal. All defensive proof that bears on the fundamental issues in the case should be rebutted if possible. Exercise judgment in selecting those matters that can be effectively rebutted. Keep in mind that rebuttal evidence may be the last evidence heard by the jury. This can work either for or against counsel. Jurors will remember rebuttal evidence better than the middle parts of the trial, but if the attempted rebuttal fails, counsel may simply highlight the strength of the adversary's case.

[4] Selecting Rebuttal Witnesses

Any witness may be used in rebuttal whether or not the witness testified during the case-in-chief. n3 In selecting rebuttal witnesses, consider whether the witnesses, though good for rebuttal, otherwise have information that may be harmful. If a witness is unfavorable on other matters, there is the chance that he or she will do more harm than good. Do not rely on the trial court to limit cross-examination to the subjects brought out during direct.

Witnesses who will be called for the first time in rebuttal should be kept available so that the rebuttal stage of the case begins promptly. During the direct case counsel should anticipate the need for rebuttal witnesses. Do not excuse a witness who has testified during the case-in-chief unless satisfied that he or she will not be needed for rebuttal. If the adversary presents a witness who testifies about the same meeting that was the subject of examination with a favorable witness, ask the court not to excuse the witness. If the witness is excused over objection, make sure that the record reflects the objection and the court's action.

[5] Considering Rebuttal Techniques

A witness who is recalled in rebuttal need not be sworn again. In many courts, the judge or the court clerk will routinely advise the recalled witness that the prior oath is binding. If the judge neglects to do so, consider reminding the witness of that fact with a question such as "Mr. Witness, do you understand that you are still under oath?"

The examination of a rebuttal witness proceeds in the same way as examination of a witness who is part of a direct case. When there is no need to direct the witness' attention to the matters being rebutted, leading questions are as objectionable as during direct examination. Leading questions can and should be used, however, to steer the witness to the precise point of the rebuttal testimony. Moreover, to fix the jury's attention clearly on the point of reference, specifically refer to the matters to be rebutted.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityRehabilitationEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationScopeEvidenceTestimonyPresentation of Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. If evidence is truly rebuttal evidence, the fact that it might have been offered in chief does not preclude admission of that evidence as rebuttal. Datamatic Servs., Inc. v. Barton, 909 F.2d 1029 (7th Cir. 1990) ; United States v. Braxton, 877 F.2d 556 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Bhaya v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 922 F.2d 184 (3d Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1217 (1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. But see Dave Kolb Grading, Inc. v. Terra Venture Bridgeton Proj., 85 F.3d 351, 354-355 (8th Cir. 1996) (court affirmed trial court's exclusion of rebuttal witness when plaintiff had made no offer of proof on the issue about which the witness was to testify, and the defense, which had no prior knowledge of the witness, as he was not listed in pre-trial filings, was prejudiced by the lack of opportunity to depose the witness).

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 35 Cross-Examination *
D Redirect, Rebuttal, and Surrebuttal

2-35 Federal Litigation Guide § 35.52

§ 35.52 Understanding the Importance of Surrebuttal

Defendant's reply to rebuttal is referred to as surrebuttal. The scope of surrebuttal is limited to the plaintiff's rebuttal and defendant's direct case. The defendant has no right to raise matters beyond those necessary to contradict, explain, or qualify the rebuttal evidence. Moreover, the same rules which apply to rebuttal are equally applicable to surrebuttal. Thus, for example, the defendant cannot present matters in surrebuttal which properly should have been introduced in defendant's case-in-chief. If plaintiff in rebuttal has attacked the credibility of one of defendant's witnesses, the defendant can attempt to rehabilitate this witness in surrebuttal. Proof that was not properly admissible in the defendant's direct case may be admissible in surrebuttal. n1

The tactical considerations on surrebuttal track those concerning rebuttal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral
OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityRehabilitationEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationGeneral
OverviewEvidenceTestimonyExaminationCross-ExaminationScopeEvidenceTestimonyPresentation of Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Sanchez-Robles, 927 F.2d 1070 (9th Cir. 1991) .

* This chapter was rewritten in 2006 by Andrew E. Westley whose law office is located in San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide 36.syn

§ 36.syn Synopsis to Chapter 36: Closing Argument *

§ 36.01 Overview of Chapter.

§ 36.02 The Nature of Closing Argument.

§ 36.03 Mechanics of Preparation and Presentation.
[1] Preparation.
[2] Presentation.
[3] Length, Order and Division of Time.

§ 36.04 The Ingredients of an Effective Closing Argument.

§ 36.05 Meeting and Enforcing Formal and Substantive Limitations on Closing Argument.

§ 36.06 Bibliography.
[1] Law Reviews and Periodicals.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter examines the structure and style of the closing argument made to the jury. Initially the chapter focuses on the nature and importance of closing argument. It continues with a discussion of the mechanics of the preparation and presentation of the closing argument. Also explored are local court rules in many federal districts which control the length of closing arguments and permissible division of time.

Next the necessary ingredients for an effective closing argument are examined. Among such ingredients are good organization, a central theme, and a recitation of the evidence presented at trial.

Lastly, the chapter deals with limitations on closing argument and their enforcement.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.01

§ 36.01 Overview of Chapter.

Closing argument is your second, and last, chance to speak directly to the jury. It is the vehicle by which you must reestablish the framework and momentum of your case, if those qualities have been lost or blurred. It is your best opportunity to address emotional or motivational issues, including the credibility of witnesses, and it is your only opportunity to discuss the law of the case. n1

The best closing argument will reflect careful preparation but it will also speak to the case as it has actually unfolded. In preparing closing argument, you should draw on your opening statement, your day-to-day trial notes and the views of others associated with your case. You must also be sure that all of the exhibits, transcripts and physical materials which you plan to use in closing argument are both available and in proper order. Finally, you must be aware of and resolve any problems that may exist concerning the order, time and division of argument.

Good organization that is effectively communicated to the jury, a clear theme or themes, candid confrontation of the difficult issues in the case, and specific (though selective) discussion of the evidence are all ingredients of an effective closing argument. Comments concerning peripheral matters are usually unnecessary and unwise. This is particularly true of comments concerning adversary counsel or counsel's conduct. Forensic style will vary widely from lawyer to lawyer, but more cases are won with hard facts and quiet fervor than with loud or exaggerated oratory.

The number of formal and substantive limitations on closing argument are relatively few, and many of these can be obviated by the manner in which an argument is presented. n2 Improper closing argument rarely leads to a reversal of the case or to a new trial. n3 As a result, your principal weapons against improper argument are objections and requests for cautionary instructions. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsImproper RemarksCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Although most of the principles applicable to closing argument in a jury case are also relevant to closing arguments to the court in a bench trial, the primary focus of this chapter is on closing argument to a jury. Special considerations affecting closing argument to the court are considered in § 41.04[6] infra .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Carlson, Arguments to the Jury: Passion, Persuasion, and Legal Controls, 33 St. Louis U. L.J. 787 (1989).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Conde v. Starlight I, Inc., 103 F.3d 210, 213 (1st Cir. 1997) (appellate court normally presumes that jury followed instructions to disregard improper argumentation); Kehr v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc., 736 F.2d 1283 (9th Cir. 1984) ; Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1982) .But, see Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 980 F.2d 171 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Pappas v. Middle Earth Condominium Ass'n, 963 F.2d 534 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1982) (any improper influence references to settlement may have had adequately corrected and dissipated by reprimand to counsel and curative instruction).

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.02

§ 36.02 The Nature of Closing Argument.

Closing argument is the vehicle by which you cement a victory already won, wins a case that hangs in the balance, and sometimes retrieves a case otherwise lost. Closing argument is an opportunity to clarify or explain any confusion or adverse developments which have occurred during the trial and to reestablish the basic framework on which your case depends. It is your only meaningful opportunity to discuss such subjective or emotional issues as motivation and suffering. It is also your only opportunity to directly discuss the law of the case and its application to the facts.

An effective closing argument will be a unique blend of the facts, law and background of a particular case and of the style and strengths of the lawyer who delivers the argument. For that reason, of all the subjects dealt with in this volume, closing argument is the most subjective and the least amenable to specific analysis and advice. In addition to profiting from your own experience, study the closing argument technique of lawyers you admire. Read examples of good closing arguments. n1 A number of observations and recommendations can, however, be made, and the discussion contained in the balance of this chapter is best considered in light of the fundamental nature of closing argument.

Perhaps the most common misunderstanding about closing argument is the belief that in it you are to summarize the evidence. It is important to distinguish between "summation" and "final argument." n2 The jury does not need to hear a summary of the evidence or an overview of the trial. The task of persuasion is to focus on the central, disputed issues and resolve problems in the case for the jury.

It is often said that closing argument is less important than opening statement, that juries will almost always have made up their minds before closing arguments are reached, and that cases can be lost but are rarely won in closing argument. While there may be a measure of truth in each of these points, none of them should affect the care and vigor with which closing argument is prepared and given. This is true for a number of reasons.

First, while opening statements are indeed critical in the formation of the jury's first impression of the case and juries in many cases have made up their minds before closing arguments are delivered, it is also true that many cases hang in the balance to the very end.

Second, while, in realistic terms, the ultimate outcome of a majority of cases may have been determined prior to closing argument, both general experience and a number of surveys have shown that most juries are initially divided on at least one of the issues in the case. In the great majority of cases, your job in closing argument is to provide the jurors initially inclined in your favor with the ammunition they will need to resist and ultimately change the opinions of the other jurors.

Third, even if the jury has resolved the fundamental issues of the case in favor of one party or another, another large majority of cases will include "discretionary" issues (e.g., damages), and closing argument can have a substantial effect on such issues.

Fourth, and in a similar vein, closing argument is the only vehicle by which emotional and motivational issues can be fully addressed and innuendos drawn.

Fifth, closing argument is the trial lawyer's only opportunity to discuss the law and to relate the law to the facts.

Elaboration of several of these points may be helpful. The evidentiary process is a formal one, foreign to the average juror. It often requires that evidence be introduced in a fragmented, non-sequential manner, and often leaves large gaps in the jury's understanding. Opening statements should be logical and coherent and should explain the relationship of the facts to the issues presented. Opening statements should also directly or indirectly forewarn the jury of the more or less haphazard process that will follow. Opening statements should, inshort, provide the jury with the overall framework to which it can relate the evidence as it comes in. n3 This, however, is the ideal, and is seldom the fact. In all but the shortest and simplest of cases, the jury will not have followed all of the evidence and will not have appreciated fully its relevance to the issues. It will also be a rare case which has not had some adverse development or in which some confusion as to the operative facts has not arisen. Closing argument is the vehicle by which you must clarify that confusion, must explain the damaging events, and must in general reestablish the favorable framework on which your case depends.

Opening statements will also have alluded to such subjective matters as pain and suffering and will also have mentioned what the objective facts may suggest or imply concerning issues of motivation or intent. However, the formal "what-I-expect-the-proof-to-show" limitation on opening statements generally precludes detailed discussion of such issues, and the evidentiary process itself will, at best, have given you an opportunity to suggest, not argue, such matters. Only in closing argument can you pose and answer the questions: what does this fact mean; what does it suggest as to the intent or motivation of the parties? Only in closing argument can you cast the case in the broader social or policy terms it may possess. Only in closing argument can you candidly address the human elements of the case.

The importance of closing argument as the only opportunity to directly discuss the law and its relationship to the facts cannot be over-emphasized. The fundamental principles of law and their application to the facts will usually have been identified in opening statement and may, in the course of argument over objections, have been mentioned in the jury's presence. However, they will not have been discussed in depth or in an analytical fashion. Most significantly, when closing arguments are given, the court's instructions on the law will have been settled, and you will, for the first and only time, be able to refer to, and preferably quote from, those instructions which are favorable to your case. Closing argument is also the best chance to address those instructions which appear to favor the opposing party and argue why they do not apply.

In these and other respects, the closing argument is your second, and final, opportunity to speak directly to the jury. It is your last opportunity to win the case that hangs in the balance or to retrieve a case which may, at the moment, be lost. In its most benign form, it is the vehicle by which you must preserve a victory already won.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsImproper RemarksCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjections

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Touhy, Effective Final Argument for the Plaintiff, 8 Litig. 41 (Spring 1982).

(n2)Footnote 2. McElhaney, Trial Notebook: Solving Problems with Final Argument, 9 Litig. 43 (Winter 1983).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Herman, The Opening Statement: Using it to Maximum Advantage, 25 Trial 72 (Aug. 1989).

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.03

§ 36.03 Mechanics of Preparation and Presentation.

[1] Preparation.

It is seldom practical, and usually unwise, to prepare a complete closing argument in advance of trial. On the other hand, effective closing arguments are rarely if ever "thrown together" the night before they are delivered. They should never be delivered extemporaneously with no special preparation. If the trial ends unexpectedly in the morning or mid-day and the judge is determined to proceed with closing arguments, ask for a recess in order to finalize your argument.

The best closing arguments are usually a product of careful forethought, updated, more or less to the last minute, to reflect the trial as it has actually occurred. Thus, the you should have closing argument in mind from the very earliest stages of the case and may even outline that argument prior to trial. However, you should keep both the details and format of your closing argument flexible, adding nuances and fragments to that argument both during the trial and at the conclusion of all the evidence. Striking a balance between a well organized argument and one that nevertheless speaks, in spontaneous and contemporary terms, to the case and the evidence as they have unfolded requires preparation. Preparation will reduce the likelihood that you will fall back on hackneyed legal jargon in explaining the case. Jargon is more of a crutch when a lawyer is thinking for the first time and speaking about a subject. Some attention to the mechanics of preparation is warranted.

The structure of closing argument will rarely be a problem. The basic points to be covered will normally be self-evident and will usually correspond to the legal and factual issues of the case. The sequence in which particular issues should be discussed may change as the trial unfolds but the mechanics of arranging or rearranging the discussion of those issues will normally be limited to a reshuffling of your notes, together with a mental revision of your introductory and transitional remarks.

Moreover, in the rare case when organization is difficult, that problem will normally have been faced and resolved in the preparationof opening statement. Indeed, as noted below, the opening statements of both parties are important starting or reference points in the preparation of every closing argument.

In all cases, you should prepare an outline of your closing argument during your normal trial preparation. The outline can be as sparse or as detailed as the circumstances require; the most important point is that it should remain flexible. In the alternative, you might prepare a checklist of points to be covered in closing argument, especially as to points which will not be dealt with in opening statement.

Particular portions of a closing argument can be drafted in advance of trial, and that might be advisable if the case presents complex or difficult issues where either a very precise explanation must be made or a narrow line walked between conflicting facts or considerations. And, of course, detailed work on any issue, at any point in the case, may suggest a desirable approach or formulation for closing argument. These thoughts should be noted and filed in your "closing argument file" for later evaluation. In a simple case, that "file" may just be the last page of a legal pad. In a more complex case, you should keep a separate file folder for notes on closing argument. In it you should keep notes you jot down every time you think about the case, including analogies, figures of speech, and other details which may make the closing argument more powerful.

Evaluation is, however, the key word. Almost every case of any complexity evolves, its focus shifting, both in advance of and during trial. Few if any preliminary drafts of a closing argument will adequately address the case as actually tried; a large percentage will be scrapped entirely.

Some parts of the opening statement may be closely paraphrased in closing argument. Also, in many cases, it will be advisable to address the issues in the same sequence as they were discussed in opening statement; the jury will thus hear your evaluation of the evidence and the law in a context with which it is already measurably familiar. One of the most effective ways to organize closing argument is to review for the jury the claims you made in your opening statement, point by point, and relate the proof on those claims to the facts and legal issues that justify a verdict in your favor. At a minimum, you should carefully review your opening statement to be sure that you have not omitted any significant issue or item of evidence.

You should also carefully review your recollection and notes of your adversary's opening statement. That review will remind you of your opponent's emphasis and overall approach to the case. It may also remind you of areas in which statements made by your opponent in opening statement have not been borne out by the evidence. You should be sure to point these out to the jury.

For obvious reasons, you must also carefully review the court's proposed instructions to determine which instructions can or should be used offensively and which will probably be relied upon by your opponent and thus must be dealt with defensively.

If you keep them properly, your day-to-day notes of the trial will be the most fertile source for the real meat--the evidentiary flesh and blood--of your closing argument. Each day of the trial will produce a half dozen or more pieces of evidence--and will also likely suggest as many or more points of advantage or disadvantage not directly related to the evidence--that are candidates for inclusion, exploitation or explanation in closing argument. n1 Many such points will disappear, being neutralized or explained as the trial progresses. Many will, on reflection at the end of the case, seem trivial or even irrelevant. On the other hand, many will remain. In addition, innumerable small but nevertheless important points will be lost if some note of them is not made as the case progresses. If you keep detailed notes of the trial, you should adopt some form of simple notation--e.g., a marginal asterisk--to indicate particular points or pieces of evidence that are candidates for discussion in closing argument. If you do not keep detailed notes of the evidence you should make separate, and contemporaneous, notes of all such points and file them in your "closing argument" folder.

It is not wise to defer these notations until the end of the trial day. Ideally, each night, as you prepare for the next day of trial, you should review the day's notes and modify your on-going outline of closing argument to reflect important developments while they are still fresh in your mind. Too often, however, the time for looking back over the day's events is not taken. Even when it is, many important points will have been lost in the heat--sometimes chaos--of the trial day unless you have made some contemporaneous note of them.

It should also be obvious that all of the lawyers representing a particular party should listen to the evidence, and take notes, withclosing argument in mind. Indeed, if you are the lawyer who will deliver the closing argument you are most likely to be preoccupied with the day-to-day conduct of the trial and the lawyer or paralegal sitting "second chair" should take special responsibility for noting issues or evidence which should be dealt with in closing argument.

It necessarily follows that you should listen to the suggestions of co-counsel and others on your "trial team" and should give those suggestions considerable weight. You should also seek the views of client representatives and others, laypersons as well as lawyers, who have observed any substantial part of the trial. Those individuals, being removed from the forefront of the case, may have a better perspective as to what evidence has been effective or ineffective and as to what issues require special attention in closing argument. These reliable bystanders can serve as a "shadow jury" and can provide feedback that may suggest a more effective approach to certain difficult areas. n2

The substance of closing argument will usually be dictated by the facts and issues of the case and by the more general considerations discussed in a later paragraph. n3 To a certain extent identifying the substantive issues to be considered, and in what depth, is a mechanical process which should include consideration of at least the following questions:

1. What issues require the most extensive or careful treatment? These will not necessarily be the most important issues in the case, but rather those which have been the most sharply controverted or the ones on which the jury is most likely to be in doubt. They may also be the issues, large or small, by which the jury decides whether a particular witness or party is "good" or "bad," truthful or untruthful.

2. What points will your adversary argue most strongly, and to greatest effect? Your response to those points should be carefully prepared. As plaintiff's counsel you should anticipate the defendant's arguments in your initial presentation; you should do so in depth and as nearly as possible in the terms that the points are likely to be made by the defendant, leaving for rebuttal only such incidental points as may be suggested by the defendant's argument. As defendant's counsel you will have the advantage of hearing the plaintiff's argument before you takes your feet, but your response to the plaintiff's argument will be more effective if it is carefully thought out in advance. Remember that the plaintiff normally will have the last word in rebuttal. As defense counsel you must be able to anticipate every point that the plaintiff may be planning to elaborate on during those final moments before the jury. While it sounds like whining to complain that the plaintiff has the last word, it is a good tactic to ask the jury to look for the plaintiff's response to a certain point or answer to a certain argument in the rebuttal.

3. What issues in the case are likely to be confusing or troubling either to individual jurors or to the jury as a whole? This question might also be framed: If I was a juror, what subjects would I want the lawyers to address, and what aspects of the case would I like to have explained? The answers to these questions will often parallel the points which you would cover in any event. Frequently, however, especially if they are provided by non-lawyers on your team, they will suggest a particular approach which should be taken in closing argument. They may also suggest subsidiary points which, though not critical in their own right, may have either a favorable or an adverse effect on more important issues.

4. What facts or issues in the case have either emotional or unifying value? In a sense, this question searches for a "theme" for the closing argument, a subject discussed in more detail below. n4 It is also a way to identify the human elements in the case which may have a critical impact on the jury's decision.

5. How can the case be personalized to the jury? This does not necessarily mean an appeal to the jury's emotions, though such an appeal may well be proper. On the contrary, it is a question particularly appropriate for commercial or other technical cases that lack human or emotional content. The apt analogy or the down-to-earth explanation that converts complex financial or other issues into ordinary terms may carry great weight in the jury's deliberations. n5 It has already been suggested that the most effective closing argument will be one which is not finally "set" until all of the evidence is in. The peril of this approach of course is that closing argument may not be adequately prepared and will therefore lackorganization, thoroughness, or both. Trials and the work associated with them frequently accelerate as the case nears its conclusion: instructions must be argued; rebuttal evidence must be collected and presented; the court is frequently impatient with the progress of the trial and "forces" its conclusion. You must anticipate these possibilities. The fundamental outline of the closing argument should be formulated and revised as the case progresses; daily notes of points to be covered in closing argument should be organized and allocated to the portions of the argument to which they relate; at a minimum, a major portion of the evening prior to the day on which closing argument will be delivered should be devoted to polishing and, if necessary, reorganizing the argument.

In a long or complicated case, it is reasonable to ask for a recess of a half or even a full day to prepare for closing argument. Such a request should be made as early as possible and in any event several days before you expect the trial to be completed. Most judges will, in an appropriate case, recognize the need for such a recess and will be more likely to grant it if they have advance notice of the request and are able to schedule matters in other cases, such as motions or pretrial conferences, during the recess.

If you are going to make the closing argument and are assisted by other counsel, you may shift the responsibility for conducting the last few days of the trial to your assistant counsel. In particular, the burden of arguing instructions, renewed motions for directed verdict and other similar matters can often be delegated to assistant counsel, thus freeing lead counsel to spend more time on closing argument.

[2] Presentation.

Both the formal and substantive aspects of the actual presentation of closing argument are discussed in a later paragraph. n6 However, to the extent that documents, exhibits, trial testimony or similar materials are to be used in closing argument, those materials must be prepared and collected.

Documents which have been introduced into evidence are the most common subject of direct reference in closing argument. If the literal language of an exhibit is important and the excerpt is short, reading that language will almost always be more effective than paraphrasing it. It will also be more effective for you to read from the exhibit itself, and let the jury see that you are reading from the exhibit, than to read the quoted language from your notes. If the jurors have notebooks of copies of exhibits, ask the jurors to read along with you.

Even if the document or its critical language is too long to be quoted directly, you can hold the document itself up, face forward, so that the jurors can see and be better able to recognize it during their deliberations. In the case of genuinely decisive documents, you may specifically urge the jurors to read and consider the effect of the document during their deliberations. Both in that and in more routine situations, you should give the exhibit number of the document to the jury.

If the document is genuinely critical to the case, and especially if it in substance destroys some element of your opponent's case--for example, if it contains a crushing admission by the adversary party--an enlargement, or "blow-up," of the exhibit can be very effective. The jury not only sees the language of the admission but sees it in enlarged, and subliminally more effective, type. n7

Such enlargements must obviously be prepared well in advance of closing argument. In addition, if there is any question as to whether the enlargement is unfairly selective (showing the jury only part of a document and arguably omitting explanatory language), selection of the portion of the document to be enlarged should err in favor of inclusiveness. If this is not possible (as in the case of a very long document), the arguably exculpatory language should be mentioned and explained to the jury. Of course, your opponent has an equal chance to highlight the portions of documents which favor the other side. But if your opponent does not take advantage of that opportunity, the only enlarged portion of an exhibit or testimony will be yours.

In a similar vein, if particular testimony is critical to the case, it will usually be more effective to quote that testimony directly to the jury rather than paraphrasing it, and reading the testimony from a typedtranscript will almost always be preferable to a reading based on your notes, however accurate they may be. n8

Partial transcripts of the evidence can sometimes take several days to obtain and are best arranged by a request to the court reporter at the first recess after, or at the end of the day on which, the critical testimony is given.

If one or more of the court's instructions are to be argued to the jury, it is not only more effective but safer to read the exact language of the instruction. Copies of the entire charge will normally be available to the attorneys at the time of closing argument. n9 If they are not, you should try to obtain a copy of the particular instruction you plan to discuss and should always be sure that you are reading from the final version of the instructions.

If demonstrative exhibits--charts, graphs, models, etc.--have played an important role in the case, use them effectively in closing argument. The logistics of their use should be carefully planned. More than one easel may be helpful (or necessary, if two or more charts are to be compared), and their physical management should, if possible, permit you to move freely from chart to chart (and from rostrum to chart) without requiring or enabling opposing counsel to create the visual diversion of moving about the courtroom in order to follow the argument.

Use your associates or paralegals to stage manage the display and removal of demonstrative material in order to minimize the distractions. If you will be replaying a portion of a video or audio tape during closing argument, do not permit yourself to suffer any embarrassing delays while the equipment is being set and tested. Have the technology ready to go.

A technique which is rarely used but can sometimes be very effective, particularly in complex or multiple-issue cases, is to prepare a chart reflecting a point-by-point outline of a closing argument. For example, counsel for a defendant in a case involving multiple claims might (and perhaps logically should) organize closing argument to correspond to the various elements of the plaintiff's proof. A chart listing those elements will (a) help the jury to follow and remember defense counsel's argument, (b) underscore the variety of issues on which the plaintiff bears the burden of proof, and (c) enable defense counsel to emphasize the number of issues on which that proof has failed.

Such "outline charts" will not normally be objectionable, but they should use neutral, shorthand terms such as "intent," "causation" or "material misrepresentation," and should, in any doubtful case, be shown to adversary counsel and/or the court before they are displayed to the jury.

As a final and perhaps obvious matter, all of the materials to be used in closing argument must be carefully collected and arranged prior to the argument so that the flow and momentum of that argument is not lost in fumbling for (and perhaps not finding) a critical item. You should personally check both the availability and proper order of the materials you plan to use as carefully as you would review the substance of the argument itself.

[3] Length, Order and Division of Time.

Generally, matters relating to the conduct of the trial, such as time allotted for opening statement and closing argument, are reserved to the broad discretion of the trial judge. n10 It is necessary to consult the local rules, however, as they may control one or more aspects of closing argument in many federal districts. n11 Generally, those rules speak to formal matters of the type considered in this subparagraph, but a few of them relate to substantive issues. n12 Rules relating to formal matters can and usually will be waived or modified to accommodate special circumstances, but the fact that the local rules in a given district speak to a particular subject may suggest an underlying philosophy or attitude on the part of the judges in that district which you should consider in formulating your argument.

For example, a local rule limiting closing argument to one hour per side will usually be waived by the trial court in a complex case. The existence of that rule, however, suggests a concern by the local judges as to the length of closing argument; if you genuine need additional time you should limit your request to the additional time actually required, and if you can summarize your case in substantially less than an hour, you should probably do so. The existence of the rule also means that if you need more time you must ask for it before beginning your argument. If you must beg for more time when the clock runs on your argument, you will convey the impression that you have not managed your time well. Similarly, while local rules prohibiting lawyers from "arguing law" presumably do not prohibit you from discussing the application of the court's instructions to the facts of the particular case, they do suggest that discussion should be most carefully limited to the law as announced by the instructions.

Length of argument.

In general, the trial court has broad discretion in determining the length of counsel's oral argument. n13 While local rules in at least five districts limit closing argument to one hour, or to one hour per side, n14 several of these rules also state that the allotted time can be shortened or lengthened in the trial court's discretion, and this, in practical terms, is undoubtedly the case in all jurisdictions.

All other things being equal, a shorter argument will usually be more effective than a longer one. However, counsel should obviously seek as much time for argument as the circumstances of the case require and should normally, as a matter of prudence, ask for at least a little more time than you actually expect to use. The attorney whose case is relatively simple and whose opponent's argument will require more extensive discussion (for example, a breach of contract case in which the plaintiff primarily relies upon the fact of the breach and the defendant urges a variety of defenses) might suggest a shorter allocation of time, but the purpose of that suggestion will usually be transparent.

Division of argument for a single party.

Rules in several districts provide that only one counsel for any party may argue the case to the jury without leave of court. n15 Rules in other districts provide that no more than two attorneys for each party may argue, n16 and others provide that if more than one attorney argues, one must open and one must close. n17 While these rules are an understandable effort to avoid "tag team" closing argument, most courts will modify them on a prior request for any good reason. As a matter of strategy, you rarely should divide the closing argument. It is hard enough to build an atmosphere of trust between the jury and one lawyer per side, much less two. Rarely are two or more lawyers equally skilled at closing argument. The lawyer who worked on certain substantive aspects of the case and handled witnesses on those issues may want to address the jury about them, but that lawyer is not necessarily the best suited to do so. He or she may know too much about the substance and become bogged down in details, rather than carry the burden of persuading the jury.

The circumstances in which counsel for a party should divide their argument in chief will be relatively few. Closing argument should reflect a consistent philosophy, and this is more likely to be accomplished if the lawyer with the best forensic skills and the broadest grasp of the case makes the entire argument. Exceptions do, of course, exist. For example, if one counsel is substantially more adroit in the extemporaneous argument, required in rebuttal, and if the philosophy of the case is well understood by both counsel, a division between the argument-in-chief and rebuttal might be considered.

Division of plaintiff's time.

Local rules in at least two districts state that the plaintiff (or other party entitled to open the argument) may reserve not more than one-third of its time for rebuttal, n18 and rules in two other districts provide that the plaintiff must use (or will be charged with the use) of at least one-half of the allotted time in the opening argument. n19 Rules in many districts require that plaintiff's counsel make a full statement of the case in the opening argument and/or prohibit the plaintiff from arguing new matter in rebuttal. n20 A rule in one district provides that opening argument cannot be waived, n21 and the rule in another district provides that the plaintiff has no right to rebuttal if the defendant has offered no evidence. n22 These rules are designed to reduce "sandbagging" where the plaintiff is tempted to save the best arguments or illustrations for rebuttal.

These rules reflect general practice. They also reflect sound strategy. The plaintiff or other party entitled to open the argument normally has the burden of proof on most if not all issues but, as compensation, has the substantial advantages of setting the framework of the jury's thinking and of placing the adversary on the defensive. These advantages should be fully exploited. In addition, reserving substantial points for discussion in rebuttal runs the risk that discussion will be deemed "new matter" and thus not be allowed. The tactical advantage of saving a "big" argument for rebuttal is illusory. It is not worth the risk that an impatient judge will sustain your opponent's objection to your argument. That mistake would be the last image of you in the jurors' minds, and you will have lost the chance to use your "big" argument.

Sequence of argument.

In general, the party bearing the burden of proof has the right to open and close the argument. n23 Rules in a number of districts make it clear that the party with the burden of proof on all issues is entitled to open and close. n24 The trial court determines which party carries this burden and, thus, who is entitled to open and close. n25 In general, this means the plaintiff opens and closes the argument. However, there will be instances where the burden of proof is placed on a defendant or respondent, thereby giving him or her the right to open and close the argument. n26 Some local rules also provide that if the burden of proof is divided between the parties, the court may determine the sequence of argument. n27 Remarkably, the local rules in two districts provide that the plaintiff is entitled to (or must) argue last and that no rebuttal will be allowed to either side. n28

The party with the burden on all or a preponderance of the issues should obviously take advantage of or seek the right to open and close. The existence of the burden will be known to the jury or will be clearly indicated in the court's instructions; nothing will be gained by trying to suggest otherwise, and the substantial advantage of opening and closing the argument should not be foregone.

If the defendant is presenting a counter-claim, rebuttal should allowed limited to that claim, after the plaintiff's final closing argument on its case in chief. With additional parties, counter- andcross-claims, and third parties, the order and allocation of argument will become more complex. Cogent reasons why a particular order or limitation is fair should persuade the trial judge to allow a non-traditional order in the presentation of arguments.

Multiple party cases: allowed time.

Serious problems as to the time available for closing argument can be presented in multiple party cases. This is especially true if there is only one plaintiff and multiple defendants, or vice versa. Do local rules limiting argument to one hour "per side" require that multiple plaintiffs or defendants divide that hour? In the absence of any rule, if a plaintiff has sued five defendants, will the defendants collectively be allowed to argue five times longer than the plaintiff? The court is vested with broad discretion in determining whether multiple attorneys may argue and the length of their arguments. n29

However, only one district appears to address these problems by rule, and then in ambiguous terms, stating merely that, in cases involving multiple parties, "additional time allotments should be made to insure adequate opportunities to all parties." n30

In general, the trial court will strike a suitable balance, having in mind all of the facts and circumstances of the case. In spite of this, a single plaintiff or defendant may still be confronted with situations in which multiple adversaries will be allowed more aggregate time than the single party is allowed, and multiple plaintiffs or defendants may be forced to allocate various aspects of the case among themselves.

A third party defendant should and normally will be considered a separate party entitled to the full allotment of time.

n31

Multiple party cases: sequence of argument.

Rules in two districts specifically provide for the sequence of argument in cases involving third party defendants. n32 That sequence, generally followed in other districts, is:

Plaintiff

Defendant and third party plaintiff (responding to plaintiff and stating its case-in-chief against third party defendant)

Third party defendant

Defendant and third party plaintiff (responding only to the third party defendant)

Plaintiff

The sequence in which multiple plaintiffs or defendants may speak does not appear to be established by any local rule. Most judges will expect the parties to settle that matter among themselves, and they should obviously attempt to do so. While parties seeking to control the case will want to speak first or last, other parties who are small actors or have only limited exposure may gladly squeeze in the middle or take less time. A party with a "bit part" may rely on the strategy that if the jury doesn't remember it well or it appears to have a minor role in the lawsuit, the jury will overlook it or quickly dismiss it as a factor during deliberations. In the absence of agreement, the trial court will normally establish the sequence of argument in some arbitrary fashion--for example, the order in which the parties are named in the pleadings or the order in which their evidence was presented. n33 In most cases, the order in which parties are named in the lawsuit is a good indication of their importance. If that is not true, a minor party who is named first should seek to be further down in the batting order for all parts of the trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocationEvidenceTestimonyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Lubet, The Trial as a Persuasive Story, 14 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 77 (1990).

(n2)Footnote 2. For a discussion of the use of shadow juries, see Erlich, Shadow of a Verdict, Cal. Law. 36 (Aug. 1991).

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 36.04 infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 36.04 infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Levitt, Rhetoric in Closing Argument, 17 Litig. 17 (Winter 1991).

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 36.04 infra.

(n7)Footnote 7. The alternative of distributing copies of a particular document to the jury during closing argument will usually be awkward and might be deemed objectionable by some judges. The increasingly common practice of giving the jurors individual copies of a compilation of all the exhibits ensures fairer consideration of both parties' closing arguments. You may seek permission to use juror notebooks, especially in more complex or lengthy cases.

(n8)Footnote 8. A local rule in one federal district prohibits reading from deposition or trial transcripts. Middle District of Florida, Rule 5.03(b)(15). This prohibition is not generally observed in other districts.

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51: "The court shall inform counsel of its proposed action upon the requests prior to their arguments to the jury. ..."
If you are not familiar with the standard parts of a judge's charge, it will be furnished to you on request. It is becoming the practice for federal judges give counsel a complete copy of the instructions before closing argument.

(n10)Footnote 10. Glenn v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 32 F.3d 1462, 1464 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. The citation and references to local rules contained in this chapter do not purport to be exhaustive.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 36.05 infra.

(n13)Footnote 13. Glenn v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 32 F.3d 1462 (10th Cir. 1994) ; Cleveland v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 985 F.2d 1438, 1449 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 114 S. Ct. 291, 126 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1993) .

(n14)Footnote 14. One hour: District of New Hampshire, Rule 33(f); District of Rhode Island, Rule 17(f).

One hour per side: District of Maryland, Rule 4; Eastern District of Michigan, Rule 24(f); District of North Dakota, Rule 8(f). The New Hampshire and Rhode Island rules probably mean, but do not say, one hour per side.

(n15)Footnote 15. District of Arizona, Rule 44(e); District of Maine, Rule 25; District of Maryland, Rule 4; District of New Hampshire, Rule 33(f); Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Rule 38.

(n16)Footnote 16. Eastern District of Tennessee, Rule 17; Middle District of Tennessee, Rule 12(e); District of Utah, Rule 10(a)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. District of Idaho, Rule 10-104; Eastern District of Michigan, Rule 24(f).

(n18)Footnote 18. District of Nebraska, Rule 28(f); District of Utah, Rule 10(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. Northern District of West Virginia, Rule 1.07(b); Southern District of West Virginia, Rule 1.10(b).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Eastern District of Michigan, Rule 24(f); Eastern District of Tennessee, Rule 17.

(n21)Footnote 21. Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Rule 38.

(n22)Footnote 22. Eastern District of North Carolina, Rule 27.04.

(n23)Footnote 23. Martin v. Chesebrough-Pond's, Inc., 614 F.2d 498, 501 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g., District of Arizona, Rule 44(d); District of Nebraska, Rule 28(f); Middle District of North Carolina, Rule 8; District of North Dakota, Rule 8(f); District of Utah, Rule 10(c); Northern District of West Virginia, Rule 1.07(a); Southern District of West Virginia, Rule 1.10(a).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Commercial Iron & Metal Co. v. Bache Halsey Stuart, Inc., 581 F.2d 246, 250 (10th Cir.

1978) , cert. denied, 440 U.S. 914 (1979) (no abuse of discretion to deny defendant's pretrial motion that the parties be realigned, i.e., that it be designated the plaintiff and given the right to open first and close last). See also Fernandez v. Corporation Insular De Seguros, 79 F.3d 207, 210 (1st Cir. 1996) (no abuse of discretion for district court to deny plaintiff "right" of rebuttal, as decision is procedural matter within discretion of court and rarely provides grounds for appeal).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Ridgeway v. Montana High School Ass'n, 633 F. Supp. 1564, 1569, n. 5 (D. Mont. 1986) , aff'd, 858 F.2d 579 (9th Cir. 1988) (in action by high school girls and their parents alleging sex discrimination in high school athletics programs, defendants had burden of proof and right to open first).

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Middle District of North Carolina, Rule 8; Eastern District of New York, Rule 44; Southern District of New York, Rule 44.

(n28)Footnote 28. District of New Hampshire, Rule 33(f); District of Rhode Island, Rule 17(f). By report: (1) though not reflected in a local rule, this unusual practice is also generally followed in Massachusetts, at least to the point of permitting or requiring the defendant to open; (2) some Massachusetts judges commonly provide opportunity for reply; (3) at least one Rhode Island judge follows the normal practice of allowing the plaintiff to open and close.

(n29)Footnote 29. See EEOC v. G-K-G, Inc., 39 F.3d 740, 745 (7th Cir. 1994) (in case in which appellate court found E.E.O.C. should have been allowed to pursue action along with individual plaintiff, the court stated that "[t]he breadth of the district court's managerial discretion ... precludes any suggestion that the E.E.O.C. has an absolute right...to make lengthy opening and closing arguments").

(n30)Footnote 30. Eastern District of Michigan, Rule 24(f).

(n31)Footnote 31. Cf. Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Rule 38; Middle District of Pennsylvania, Rule 38.

(n32)Footnote 32. Id.

(n33)Footnote 33. See Martin v. Chesebrough-Pond's, Inc., 614 F.2d 498, 501 (5th Cir. 1980) (where multiple parties are involved, the order of their opening statement and closing arguments as among themselves rests in the sound discretion of the trial court).

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.04

§ 36.04 The Ingredients of an Effective Closing Argument.

An effective closing argument will be well organized, will have a central, well articulated theme or themes, will deal with the hard issues in the case, including damages, and will refer to the evidence inspecific terms. Discussion of peripheral matters, including the conduct or good faith of adversary counsel, will usually be unwise, improper, or both. Strong, even emotional arguments do not require "noisy" oratory, and several frequently used tactical ploys, though usually effective, nevertheless require careful evaluation.

The uniquely subjective and personal nature of an effective closing argument has already been noted. That uniqueness flows from the style and strengths of the individual advocate. It also commonly flows from the particular facts and nuances of the case. It may depend on a variety of other considerations, including the length of the trial, its complexity or simplicity, the extent to which the case possesses emotional or motivational issues, and the apparent intelligence of the jury.

In spite of those variables, there are a few basic ingredients which every closing argument will possess. There are also ingrained lawyer habits to avoid. In most cases, you should avoid the customary bowing and scraping which frequently serves as the introduction to closing argument. A simple thank you to the jury for their time and attention is acceptable. But any extended recitation of their admirable attention, extraordinary patience, high standards of personal grooming, etc., will be seen as fawning condescension. Jurors are doing a job. So are you. Get on with it.

There are also guidelines which, if followed, will contribute to the strength of closing argument. Finally, there are certain specific techniques which may be advisable in the context of a particular argument.

Though it does not, per se, constitute advocacy, good organization is an essential threshold ingredient to any effective closing argument. An otherwise effective argument will inevitably lose force, and may fail, if it is not well organized.

Good organization is not an accident; it requires careful thought, particularly in complex cases. Also, while the sound organization of a closing argument will normally follow a logical progression of the factual or legal issues of the case, the closing argument based on a pure issue-by-issue analysis is not always the most effective. Other facts should be considered. A good closing argument should begin and end on a strong point. It should exploit those emotional or psychological issues in the case favorable to the client's cause. It will usually have to deal with unfavorable facts or inferences. It must also normally include some discussion of the law as applied to the facts. Any one of these or other considerations may suggest an effective organization that does not follow the strict logic of the case.

Good organization is of no value if the jury does not understand that organization. Thus, at or near the beginning of closing argument, you should almost always explain the manner and sequence in which you plan to deal with the issues. If it is not apparent, a brief explanation of the rationale of that sequence should be given. Thereafter, you must be sure that the fundamental structure of your argument is clear to the jury as you proceeds from point to point. This should not be difficult. The you may, for example:

1. First, tell the jury that you will first address the four issues which the jury must consider on the subject of liability;

2. Next, tell the jury what those four elements are;

3. As you complete your discussion of each point, you will usually summarize that portion of your argument in a sentence or two;

4. Your next statement can then introduce the next subject of argument, as, for example: "Turning now to the second point which you must consider on the issue of liability ..."

5. At the conclusion of your discussion of the liability issues, you might well summarize your arguments on all of those issues and point out that you are now turning to the subject of damages.

In short, though a good closing argument must have real meat, the "skeleton" on which that meat is hung must be apparent to the jury as the argument proceeds.

An effective closing argument should have a central theme. In most cases, that theme will be obvious. In a personal injury case, the seriousness of the defendant's wrong and of the plaintiff's injury will normally be twin motifs which will permeate every aspect of the plaintiff's argument. In a contract case, a defendant's central theme might be the unforeseen nature of the events which required breach of the literal terms of the contract.

Other themes, however, may be more subtle and may only be parallel to, or implicit in, the formal issues in the case. Thus, if the defendant's plea of justifiable breach is strong, plaintiff's counsel may wish to stress the extent of the plaintiff's reliance on the defendant's promised performance and may also wish, at a more abstract level,to suggest the social and economic importance of enforcing contracts. In a libel case, the defendant may wish to stress the importance of freedom of the press, the public policy underlying the defense of fair comment, or the rationale of some other privilege justified the defendant's settlement.

These more subtle themes will be more difficult to establish and will often form the "backdrop" of an argument, rather than its overt rationale. For example, now that video-taped instances of police misconduct have been universally broadcast, those images lurk in the back of the jurors' minds in every civil rights suit against law enforcement officers. The argument that "every cop beats people, therefore, these cops beat the plaintiff" would not get far if it was verbalized, but there is no reason to verbalize it. A fleeting reference to videotaped beatings will call up those images, but even that brief reference may be unnecessary.

Most themes can be clearly sounded at the beginning and at the end of argument and at other critical points between. Thus, to suggest the policy underlying the defense of fair comment, defendant's initial statement in closing argument might be: "Members of the jury, in its broadest aspect, this case presents the fundamental question of whether a newspaper can, without fear of retribution, fairly comment on the conduct of a public official." At this point or, perhaps preferably, in the summation of the argument, defendant's counsel can discuss the reasons why the defense of fair comment exists. Counsel might also directly or indirectly suggest the social and political value of a free press.

Counsel must, of course, pursue these points without invading the court's prerogative to define and discuss the law of the case. However, the advancement of an indirect, or "second level," theme is more often a matter of phraseology or nuance than of direct assertion. Thus, as opposed to merely stating the fact of the publication of the article in issue, defendant's counsel might argue: "At this point, members of the jury, believing and relying on the information he possessed, and believing that his readers had a right to know about these charges, my client published the article which plaintiff claims to be libelous." More overtly, but still within proper bounds, defendant's counsel might introduce the summation of the fair comment defense by saying: "I am not trying to tell you what the defense of fair comment is; the court will do that. I do, however, invite you to consider the importance of that defense, to all of us and to the free society in which we live, and to consider the reasons why that defense exists."

An effective closing argument will always deal with the hard issues in the case. Never appear defensive or apologetic when discussing the hard issues. If one of your witnesses has been irreparably impeached, admit it, but link such an admission with all the other proof of the same facts about which that witness testified. You have strong, affirmative reasons why you should win, even if you don't have the burden of proof. That same affirmative attitude will also be the best approach to countering your opponent's best arguments.

Preferably you will address the hard issues as early as possible in the argument. This will serve the dual purpose of (1) avoiding the impression that you are afraid of the difficult issues and (2) enabling you to conclude your argument on more positive matters.

Damages will normally be discussed by plaintiff's counsel after the liability issues are considered. This is logical and, in practical terms, inevitable. However, even plaintiff's counsel should generally review the liability issue in something more than a summary way after discussing damages. This is especially so if the plaintiff's damage case is weak; returning to the liability part of the case will remind the jurors of the seriousness of the defendant's wrong and thus remind or suggest to them why substantial damages should be awarded.

Defendant's counsel should discuss damages as fully as the circumstances of the case warrant. The fear that the jury might believe that by discussing damages defendant's counsel has conceded liability can be dispelled by at least two techniques. First, when turning to the damage issue, defendant's counsel can and should specifically state that, by discussing the damage issue counsel is in no way suggesting that the plaintiff has proved its case on liability or that the jury will have occasion to consider the damage issue. This explanation can usually be brief but it can, if necessary, be expanded to include the concept that the lawyer is discussing damages solely because his duty to his client requires him to do so. Second, like, but to a greater degree than, plaintiff's counsel, defendant's counsel should normally return, after the discussion of damages, to a substantive, and substantial, discussion of the liability issues.

A much more difficult problem is faced by the attorney who represents a large corporation or other wealthy party and who fears that fact will adversely affect the jury's deliberations. The tactic ofdirectly addressing this issue in closing argument--the only point at which it can properly or meaningfully be addressed--poses serious risks. Any mention of the issue will emphasize the wealth of the party or the abstract character of the corporation will be emphasized. The jurors may be offended that their impartiality has been questioned. And, discussing a party's size or wealth may be construed as a waiver of the normal rule that the financial worth of a party may not be discussed in closing argument. n1

Despite these problems, if a party's wealth or corporate identity poses a serious risk of jury bias, the issue should usually be directly, and candidly, discussed. The corporate plaintiff or defendant will almost always be entitled to the standard federal pattern jury instruction to the effect that the law makes no distinction between corporations and individuals and that both are entitled to the same fair treatment by the jury. If you represent such a corporation you can tell the jury that you have confidence in their good faith and in their ability to follow the court's instruction. You can also, as appropriate, point out that corporations, like individuals, have character and that character is reflected in the personalities and conduct of the individuals--the shareholders, officers and employees--of which the corporation consists. You can also stress the ways in which the evidence may have shown the character of the corporate or other client to be commendable. Or you might simply remind the jurors of the instruction and that they should not hold the deep pocket defendant to a higher standard than any other defendant in the same circumstances.

Any risk that the jurors may feel that their impartiality is being impugned can be dispelled by the manner in which these or similar points are made. Also, discussion of these issues by the attorney representing a corporation or other wealthy party should not have the effect of opening those issues up to the adversary. The purpose of the attorney representing such a party is to neutralize the size or corporate issue; the purpose of the adversary can only be to exploit it.

An effective closing argument should generally avoid a detailed recitation of all the evidence, but it should discuss the important evidence in specific terms. Witnesses should be referred to by name; critical testimony should be read or closely paraphrased; important documents should be specifically mentioned and, as appropriate, directly quoted. The wisdom of the jury system is that, while no one juror remembers everything, or even as much as an attorney would, collectively the jurors remember everything and they remember much more than an attorney can. Therefore, your accurate specificity on any one point may only impress the jurors who happen to remember that point well, but on another point you will impress other jurors similarly. Cumulatively you will convince most of the jurors that your argument about the facts was true and complete.

To the extent possible, the evidence and the witnesses referred to should be personalized. A client or a friendly witness should be referred to by their full name--e.g., Ralph Jones, not Mr. Jones--and perhaps thereafter by their first name alone, if the judge allows such informality. Some federal judges will require you to refer to all witnesses by their full names or as Mr. or Mrs. Jones. Endearing or admirable qualities of particular witnesses can be pointed out. For example: "Ralph Jones, the driver of the passing vehicle who could have gone about his business but didn't, who stopped to see if there was any way he could help. ..."

Events of the trial unrelated to the merits of the case can, be discussed in closing argument. Thus, if adversary counsel has, in objections to evidence or otherwise, questioned your conduct or good faith, the conduct or matter in issue might be discussed. As a general proposition, however, it is best to assume that the jury has understood the adversarial process and will confine itself to the real issues of the case. In particular, it is unwise to attack the conduct or good faith of adversary counsel. If that conduct was improper, the jury is likely to have recognized and remembered it as such; if it was not, your suggestion of impropriety will not only detract from your arguments on the merits, but may well draw a valid objection. It is also a waste of time to compliment your learned opponent. The jury may take it as sarcasm, which cannot help you. If you mean it sincerely, it may make your opponent seem more credible, to the detriment of your case.

It may, however, be appropriate to disclaim any personal animosity toward the adversary party or witnesses. Thus, if your cross-examination of a witness was particularly sharp, your discussion of that witness' testimony in closing argument might include the statement: "Now, I know I may have seemed hard on Mr. Smith when I cross-examined him, but I did that for a reason, and I think that reason must be apparent to you." Or, if you must attack the merits of thetestimony of an honest or sympathetic witness, your closing argument might include the statement: "Please understand: I am not attacking Mr. Smith personally; I believe, as you probably do, that he was sincere; I am simply suggesting that he spoke to an issue on which he is not qualified to speak."

The bias or lack of bias of particular witnesses should also be freely discussed and compared. n2 It is by such fundamental standards that questions of credibility are normally resolved, and closing argument is your only opportunity to address those matters. You can argue bias without attacking the honesty or integrity of the witness. When the witness was sympathetic, you certainly want to avoid sounding harsh. You might say "You know, based on Mr. Smith's relationship with the plaintiff over the last twenty years, it would be only natural for him to want to help the plaintiff in this case."

The oratorical style in which a lawyer delivers closing argument will be highly individualized. This is particularly true in the treatment of moral and emotional issues such as bad faith or fraud, pain and suffering, or mental anguish. As a general proposition, however, the era of bombast and hyperbole is past. Chiefly through the vehicle of television,

Americans are accustomed to having public events and other news items, of whatever character, reported in calm and analytical fashion. Even politicians generally manage to be eloquent without being loud and to buttress emotional arguments with hard facts. In the courtroom, strong arguments are usually best made with quiet words.

The decision whether to speak from a rostrum or while standing at the counsel table and whether, from time to time, to move about the courtroom will also depend on the preference of the individual attorney. Speaking from the counsel table will require your delivery to be largely extemporaneous. If you must rely heavily on your notes, you will be better off at the rostrum. However, a closing argument should never be read; even if it has been prepared on a word-for-word basis, a closing argument should be delivered with the appearance of spontaneity. If you are required or choose to stand at a rostrum, at least stand to the side of it, so that the jury can see your body language and know that you are not hiding from them.

Too much--and especially pointless--movement about the courtroom can be distracting. Also be careful not to approach the jury box too closely. Scenes which show the lawyer leaning on or over the rail in front of the jury box occur largely in movies; many judges prohibit that practice, and many jurors will feel that the lawyer's proximity is overbearing.

A good closing argument will speak not only to the things that have been proved but also to the things that have not been proved. A frequently effective technique for this purpose is to remind the jury of the claims made by one or both sides in opening statement. Thus, you might remind the jury that, in your opening statement, you promised that the proof would show certain facts and then discuss the evidence which has indeed established those facts. You might also remind the jury that your opponent promised the jury that certain facts would be established and then point out either that the record is silent on those facts or that they have been affirmatively disproved.

Before employing the latter element of this technique, however, you should be very sure that your adversary's proof is as deficient as you think it is, and should consider whether certain facts may have been proved by inference. In cases of doubt, and particularly if the issues involved are not central to the case, you should avoid giving your adversary the opportunity to score a largely forensic point to which the jury might attribute undue significance.

The technique of specifically challenging an adversary to respond to certain arguments can sometimes be effective but also carries considerable risk. If the point or argument on which the adversary is challenged is strong, the jury will normally recognize it as such and will wait, without benefit of the challenge, to see whether, and how well, the adversary responds to it. If the point or argument is not persuasive or is subject to a plausible answer, the challenge will merely underscore its defects or lend force to the adversary's response.

Defendant's counsel is usually wise to mention the fact that he will have no opportunity to respond to the plaintiff's rebuttal argument. But, any extended discussion of the plaintiff's advantage in speaking last may sound to the jury like whining. Counsel must, however, be sure to anticipate that rebuttal argument as fully as possible.

Objections to improper argument should normally be made. n3 Failure to object in a timely fashion will waive the issue for appeal. Thus,appellate court review will be limited to "plain error" where an objection has not been made. n4 However, many judges take a very broad view of the permissible scope of closing argument, and most judges frown on objections which are not based on some clear breach of the applicable rules. If a judge allows unseemly conduct during the trial, it will undoubtedly be allowed during closing argument. In one case where the lawyers waged a sixteen-day war with "constant acrimonious and quarrelsome conflicts regarding anything and everything that could imaginably be challenged," repeating charges during closing argument was held not to have created prejudice. n5 In addition, the party who successfully objects to certain types of argument must remember that an opponent's objection to similar arguments will also likely be sustained.

A defendant may have greater latitude to object to plaintiff's rebuttal argument than either attorney has with respect to an opponent's argument-in-chief. In particular, defendant should object if the plaintiff's rebuttal argument raises new matter or deals with issues not discussed by the defendant in closing argument. Depending on the judge, the defendant may also have greater freedom to object to the factual or legal foundation of arguments made by the plaintiff in rebuttal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsImproper RemarksCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsEvidenceTestimonyGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentGeneral OverviewEvidenceTestimonyCredibilityImpeachmentBias, Motive & Prejudice

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 36.05 infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Littlefield v. McGuffey, 954 F.2d 1337 (7th Cir. 1992) (counsel is permitted to characterize a party as dishonest by pointing out a lack of corroboration; the missing witness rule does not preclude arguments regarding the credibility of testimony).

(n3)Footnote 3. See the discussion of the limitations on closing argument in § 36.05 infra .

(n4)Footnote 4. Johnson v. National Sea Products Ltd., 35 F.3d 626 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Baker v. Connecticut Bank & Trust Co., 125 F.R.D. 25 (D. Conn. 1988) .

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

158 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.05

§ 36.05 Meeting and Enforcing Formal and Substantive Limitations on Closing Argument.

Though real, several apparently substantive limitations on closing argument, such as the prohibition against Golden Rule arguments, limitations on "per diem" or "unit of time" arguments, and the rule that an attorney may not express personal opinion as to the merits of the case or the credibility of witnesses, are largely matters of form. Other limitations on closing argument are few in number and generally straightforward. "[I]t is rare that improper comments made during closing argument rise to the level of reversible error." n1 Although cases are sometimes reversed or new trials awarded because of an improper closing argument, counsel's principal weapons against such an argument are objections coupled with requests for cautionary instructions to the jury and/or admonitions to adversary counsel. n2 Where, however, other misconduct has occurred during the course of the trial, the improper closing argument remarks may significantly increase the risk of reversal on appeal. n3

A lawyer engages in improper argument when he or she seeks to introduce any extraneous matter which has a reasonable probability of improperly influencing the jury's verdict. n4 Reversal will occur where counsel's remarks are such as to deny the opposing party its "substantial rights to a fair trial." n5 In practical terms, however, thesubstantive limitations on closing argument are few, and several apparently substantive limitations are in fact limitations upon the form or manner in which an otherwise proper argument can be ma

A good example is the prohibition against a Golden Rule n6 argument directed to damage issues. A Golden Rule argument asks the jurors to place themselves in the position of a party in the case and "do unto him as they would have them do unto them under similar circumstances." n7 It is said that this argument is "universally recognized as improper as it encourages the jury to depart from neutrality and to decide the case on the basis of personal interest and bias rather than on the evidence." n8 It has also been held that a Golden Rule argument is made when counsel states that he is not going to ask the jurors to place themselves in a party's position. n9

Although as to all other factual matters, the jury is expected to apply its judgment and common sense, n10 Several circuits have held that the Golden Rule argument is impermissible under any circumstances because "the jury's departure from its neutral role is equally inappropriate regardless of the issue at stake." n11

Beyond this, however, it is important to note that the prohibition against the Golden Rule argument is violated, not when the attorney seeks to arouse the jury's sympathy for a client's condition--every attorney representing a party who has suffered severe physical or even financial injury will seek to do that--but when, and only when, the attorney takes the final step of asking the jury to place itself in the client's position. An attorney may properly ask the jury to imagine the length and level of the client's suffering and to consider the ways in which the client's life will be affected by a permanent disability. n12 The attorney may also remind the jury of the client's testimony or other testimony concerning those subjects, and he may properly ask the jury to observe or recall the ways in which the client's appearance reflects that injury or disability. In short, the attorney has great latitude in argument, but is not allowed to ask the jury to think of the client as they would of themselves.

While counsel will seek to evoke sympathy on behalf of his or her injured client, an outright appeal for sympathy is not proper as it seeks to distract the jurors from the actual issues in the case. Thus, stating "I'm asking, I'm begging for your sympathy for this man... They [plaintiffs] are begging for your sympathy." during summation was found to be "plainly improper" and, having no legal relevance to any of the real issues, "per se" objectionable. n13

A "per diem" or "unit of time" argument is one in which counsel suggests a specific damage amount for a unit of time and then urges the jury to multiply that amount by the expected duration of the client's suffering. While per diem arguments are not generally prohibited,many courts have emphasized the necessity of carefully controlling them, particularly if the dollar or unit of time calculations suggested by counsel are arbitrary or artificial. n14 And, some courts of appeal have stated that if a per diem argument is employed, the trial court should give a cautionary instruction to the effect that "the dollar figures advanced by counsel do not constitute evidence but merely represent argument which the jury is free to disregard in its deliberations." n15 As a matter of tactics, however, the attorney who makes a per diem argument can usually avoid an objection, and may even avoid the necessity of a cautionary instruction if care is taken to qualify the argument by expressly stating that the figures are intended only as suggestive, that the jury is entitled to make its own determination, and that the jury may well conclude that a lower or even a higher number is appropriate. n16 It may be improper to put a specific price tag on intangible damages. n17 Instead the attorney might state what the plaintiff is seeking and argue why that figure or a higher figure is a reasonable amount based on the evidence.

The rule that an attorney may not express a personal opinion as to matters in issue, including the justness of the client's cause and the credibility of particular witnesses, is expressed in the local rules of at least one district, n18 in the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility n19 and by a number of federal cases. n20 This prohibition includes injecting counsel's own credibility into the case. Thus, in Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., n21 the court found that the following colloquy by the plaintiff's trial counsel exceeded the bounds of propriety:

I have a certain calmness about me today because of you, that is because I trust you. I have come to know you over almost three months and I think I know what type of people you are and I know, I don't think, I don't hope, but I just know that you're going to do the right thing.

* * *

I could show you all the documents... [o]r, I said to myself, hopefully, by now after three months you trust me enough that if I tell you something that I've not lied to you yet, that I'm not about to start now. And I thought I could shorten it up a great deal on the hope that you will trust me, ...you will trust me enough that I will be straight with you... that's one of the reasons why yesterday I spent a lot of time on the credibility of the people who were talking up here, myself and[defense counsel].

Though important, the principle implicit in the rule against injecting personal opinion is in practice achieved, and lawyers enabled to survive as advocates, through a very subtle difference in the form of the attorney's statements. This difference is suggested by the concluding language of the ABA Disciplinary Rule which states that the attorney may, "on his analysis of the evidence," n22 argue for any position or conclusion with respect to the relevant issues. Thus, the critical difference is between "I believe ..." and "the evidence proves ..."; between, "I ask you to base your verdict on my opinion ..." and "I submit to you that, under the evidence, and as reasonable jurors, you are compelled to find. ..."

It should also be noted that the rule against the expression of counsel's personal opinion does not apply to collateral statements concerning the trial proceedings. There, the personal pronoun "I" isessentially unavoidable. It is likewise clear that counsel is free to comment on facts which might affect the credibility of witnesses, including financial bias, n23 and may also comment upon the adversary's failure to call an available witness whose testimony might naturally be expected to be favorable to that party. n24 If the comment is harsh, but fair, courts will permit it. n25

However, it is improper to refer to a party's failure to call an "available" witness where the witness' bias made it extremely unlikely that testimony favorable to that party would have been brought forth. n26

"[J]ustice is not dependent upon the wealth or poverty of the parties and a jury should not be urged to predicate its verdict on a prejudice against bigness or wealth." n27 Unless the financial worth of a party is relevant to some issue in the case, such as punitive damages, references to the size of a company, or to the financial status of a party, or to the disparity in the financial condition of the parties, are, therefore, improper. n28 Such argument is especially objectionable if the jury would not otherwise have been aware of the party's financial situation. n29

Specific references to a party's financial condition are generally unwise. The adversary will almost certainly object, and if the reference is gratuitous, the trial court may give a strong cautionary instruction concerning the equality of all parties, large and small, in the eyes of the law.

Appeals to the jurors' self-interests are improper when made during the course of a trial. These interests are not at issue and should not be a consideration during deliberations. The appellate court found the following appeal to the jurors' interests as consumers of insurance during summation to be highly inflammatory: n30

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, if you were outside the confines of this formal setting of this courtroom, if you were reading the paper and you read the facts of this case, this is the type of case, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, you would look at and you would read the facts and say: Why didn't somebody do something about this? That's why my insurance premiums are so high. Well, that somebody is you six people. And, ladies and gentlemen of the jury we're grown up enough to know...

And the following appeal to the jurors' self-interest as taxpayers was found improper in City of Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co.: n31

I respectfully request that you discharge your responsibility in your own conscience as best you can and that you find for the City of Cleveland and that you make us whole and hold Peter Kiewit responsible for the damage that they have caused to the taxpayers of the City of Cleveland.

Discussions of the law must be limited to the court's instructions as applied to the facts of the case, n32 and the local rules in two districts expressly prohibit counsel from reading to the jury from any legal textbook or reported decision, from instructing the jury on any matter of law and from arguing "law" to the jury. n33

The local rule in one district prohibiting counsel from reading from a deposition or trial transcript n34 is contrary to general practice. On the other hand, the provision of the same rule, prohibiting counsel from suggesting to the jury that they should request a transcript or the reading of testimony by the reporter, would probably be followed by most courts.

Otherwise, and in very general terms, a lawyer may not refer in closing argument to evidence which has not been admitted in the case, n35 criminal laws not implicated in the case, n36 to the adversary's indemnity protection n37 insurance coverage, n38 to a party's settlement with other parties, n39 or to other litigation which is not part of the record. n40

Available responses to improper closing argument range from silence at one extreme to motions for mistrial and

reversal on appeal at the other. It must be recognized, however, that even clear violations of the rules governing closing argument will rarely result in a new trial or reversal on appeal. n41 For example, violations of the prohibition against Golden Rule arguments are typically found to be harmless error. n42 As a result, the attorney confronted with improper argument must recognize that the principal weapon is to object to that argument and to seek appropriate precautionary instructions. The attorney must also recognize that the failure to object to improper argument will usually constitute waiver of it. n43 This is particularly so if an objection would not have magnified the prejudice, n44 if the lack of an objection reflected a "deliberate sandbagging tactic," or if the lack of objection reflected a "tactically sound assessment by the person best able to judge the matter that though technically objectionable, the comment threatens no significant prejudice." n45 When closing argument is so prejudicial as to violate notions of substantial justice, however, a party's failure to object does not constitute waiver and the district court has the discretion to grant a new trial. n46

This does not mean that objection should be made to every improper argument. In many cases, even a successful objection will merely magnify the opponent's argument in the jury's mind, and an unsuccessful objection may have serious adverse consequences. Genuinely egregious conduct should, of course, be protested, and the objection should, if possible, be fully stated in the jury's presence. In addition, improper argument worthy of an objection will usually also merit a cautionary comment by the court. Such comments are of two varieties: an instruction to the jury to disregard the improper matter and an admonition to the offending counsel not to repeat the improper argument. The latter admonition will not usually be given in connection with a first, or minor, infraction but should be sought and givenif the improper argument is serious or repeated. If the conduct is truly egregious, the attorney should object for the record every time the impropriety is repeated, even if the objection is overruled. This will preserve for appeal an argument based on the cumulative effect of the improper statements.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsImproper RemarksCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Marshall v. Porter Co. Plan Comm'n, 32 F.3d 1215, 1221 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 1111, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1076 (1995) .

> See also Kehr v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc., 736 F.2d 1283 (9th Cir. 1984) ; Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1982) ; Johnson v. Ford Motor Co., 988 F.2d 573 (5th Cir. 1993) ; Williams v. Fermenta Animal Health Co., 984 F.2d 261 (8th Cir. 1993) ; Ramsey v. American Air Filter Co., 772 F.2d 1303, 1311 (7th Cir. 1985) ; Loughman v. Consol-Pennsylvania Coal Co., 740 F. Supp. 1114 (W.D. Pa. 1990) (curative instructions); Lamborn v. Dittmer, 688 F. Supp. 113 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (counsel's use of sarcasm in closing argument was well within boundaries of acceptable conduct).
>
> But see Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 980 F.2d 171 (3d Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1285, 122 L. Ed. 2d 677 (1993) ; Pappas v. Middle Earth Condominium Ass'n, 963 F.2d 534 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1982) (any improper influence references to settlement may have had adequately corrected and dissipated by reprimand to counsel and curative instruction).

> But see Draper v. Airco, Inc., 580 F.2d 91 (3d Cir. 1978) (when considering closing argument as a whole, curative instructions were insufficient to cure the prejudice caused by objectionable statements).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Outley v. City of New York, 837 F.2d 587 (2d Cir. 1988) (improper remarks by counsel, beginning with opening statement and continuing on through testimony and summation, denied the plaintiff a fair hearing on his claims); City of Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., 624 F.2d 749 (6th Cir. 1980) (curative instructions insufficient to remove the probability of prejudice where improprieties permeated entire trial).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 980 F.2d 171 (3d Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1285, 122 L. Ed. 2d 677 (1993) (new trial required where summation contained improper conduct such that a strong probability existed that the verdict had been influence by the improper conduct); Morrissey v. Welsh Co., 821 F.2d 1294 (8th Cir. 1987) (argument designed to elicit sympathy for plaintiffs or to call for defendant's punishment for irrelevant matters constitute grounds for reversal); Ayoub v. Spencer, 550 F.2d 164, 170 (3d Cir.) , cert. denied, 432 U.S. 907, 97 S. Ct. 2952, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1079 (1977) ; Vanskike v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 725 F.2d 1146, 1149 (8th Cir. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Bufford v. Rowan Cos., Inc., 994 F.2d 155 (5th Cir. 1993) (plaintiffs' substantial rights to fair trial impaired as a result of actions by judge and defendant's counsel).See also Gruca v. Alpha Therapeutic Corp. 51 F.3d 638, 644 (7th Cir. 1995) ("Improper remarks during a closing argument warrant reversal of the judgment only if the remarks " 'influenced the jury in such a way that substantial prejudice resulted to" the opposing party...Statements made during closing argument must be plainly unwarranted and clearly injurious to constitute reversible error.' "(citations omitted)--improper remarks and district court's erroneous instruction substantially prejudiced plaintiffs, compelling new trial); Outley v. City of New York, 837 F.2d 587 (2d Cir. 1988) (improper remarks by counsel, beginning with opening statement and continuing on through testimony and summation, denied the plaintiff a fair hearing on his claims).

(n6)Footnote 6. "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law of the prophets." Matthew 7:12.

(n7)Footnote 7. Ivy v. Security Barge Lines, Inc., 585 F.2d 732, 741 (5th Cir. 1978) , rev'd on other grounds, 606 F.2d 524 (5th Cir. 1979) (en banc).

(n8)Footnote 8. Id.; Edwards v. City of Philadelphia, 860 F.2d 568 (3d Cir. 1988) . See Forrestal v. Magendantz, 848 F.2d 303 (1st Cir. 1988) ("Golden Rule" argument did not require new trial where adequate curative instruction was given); Joan W. v. Chicago, 771 F.2d 1020 (7th Cir. 1985) ("Golden Rule" appeal is error, but not reversible error, where trial court instructs the jury on the requirement of impartiality, and reasonably rules that this argument did not sway the jury).

(n9)Footnote 9. Loose v. Offshore Navigation, Inc., 670 F.2d 493, 496 (5th Cir. 1982) ("I'm not going to ask you to put yourself in Mr. Loose's position, having to work and live the rest of his life with ... the loss of that ... elbow").
Objections to closing argument, not raised at the time, are waived on appeal, even if remarks complained of would otherwise have resulted in reversal, unless plain error is committed. Associated Business Tel. Sys. v. Greater Capital Hotel Corp., 729 F. Supp. 1488 (D.N.J. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Johnson v. Celotex Corp., 899 F.2d 1281 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 111 S. Ct. 297, 112 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1990) ; Stuckey v. Northern Propane Gas Co., 874 F.2d 1563 (11th Cir. 1989) (counsel was free to ask the jury to "send a message" because even compensatory damages may serve as a deterrent). See also Shultz v. Rice, 809 F.2d 643 (10th Cir. 1986) (defense counsel asked jury to judge the reasonableness of defendant's actions at the time they were made).

(n11)Footnote 11. Edwards v. City of Philadelphia, 860 F.2d 568 (3d Cir. 1988) ; Joan W. v. City of Chicago, 771 F.2d 1020 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Smith v. Piedmont Airlines, Inc., 728 F. Supp. 914 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Arnold v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186, 194-200 (4th Cir. 1982) (while statements were objectionable, when viewed in the context of the entire trial and plaintiff's injuries, were "a foolish redundancy rather than an independent source of prejudice").

(n14)Footnote 14. Murphy v. National Railroad Passenger Corp., 547 F.2d 816, 818 (4th Cir. 1977) ; Mileski v. Long Island R.R. Co., 499 F.2d 1169, 1174 (2d Cir. 1974) ; Waldron v. Hardwick, 406 F.2d 86, 89 (7th Cir. 1969) ; Baron Tube Co. v. Transport Ins. Co., 365 F.2d 858, 864 (5th Cir. 1966) ; Rush v. Cargo Ships & Tankers, Inc., 360 F.2d 766, 769 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 842 (1966) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Baron Tube Co. v. Transport Ins. Co. 365 F.2d 858, 864-65 (5th Cir. 1966) (when per diem arguments are permitted by the trial court, a cautionary instruction is not discretionary).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Rush v. Cargo Ships & Tankers, Inc., 360 F.2d 766 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 842 (1966) .

(n17)Footnote 17. E.g., Waldorf v. Shuta, 896 F.2d 723 (3d Cir. 1990) . But see Queen v. Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth., 901 F.2d 135 (D.C.Cir. 1990) (counsel's statement that he thought "a million dollars" was adequate compensation was not reversible error in the absence of a showing of prejudice).

(n18)Footnote 18. Middle District of Florida, Rule 5.02(b)(15).

(n19)Footnote 19. D.R. 7-106(C)(4). Model Rule of Professional Responsibility 3.4(e). 7-106(C)(4).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Guaranty Serv. v. American Employers' Ins., 893 F.2d 725 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Polansky v. CNA Ins. Co., 852 F.2d 626 (1st Cir. 1988) (opinion of plaintiff's counsel as to credibility of defense witnesses was improperly included in closing argument); Canada Dry Corp. v. Nehi Beverage Co., 723 F.2d 512, 526 (7th Cir. 1983) ; Smith v. Piedmont Airlines, Inc., 728 F. Supp. 914 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) ; Johnson v. Trueblood, 476 F. Supp. 90, 96 (E.D. Pa. 1979) , vacated on other grounds, 629 F.2d 302 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n21)Footnote 21. 980 F.2d 171 at 209 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Model Code of Professional Responsibility, DR 7-106(C)(4). See also Lamborn v. Dittmer, 688 F. Supp. 113, 117 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ("[t]here can be no valid cause for complaint when an opponent uses trial testimony as part of his closing argument").

(n23)Footnote 23. Fund of Funds, Ltd. v. Arthur Anderson & Co., 545 F. Supp. 1314, 1370 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) . See also Rosenburg v. Lincoln Am. Life Ins. Co., 883 F.2d 1328 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See McQuaig v. McCoy, 806 F.2d 1298 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Probus v. K-Mart, 794 F.2d 1207 (7th Cir. 1986) (on closing, defense counsel's remarks as to plaintiff's expert's failure to testify on rebuttal, although harsh and derisive, did not amount to reversible error).

(n25)Footnote 25. Id.; Mills v. Beech Aircraft Corp., Inc., 886 F.2d 758 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Tyler v. White, 811 F.2d 1204 (8th Cir. 1987) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Draper v. Airco, Inc., 580 F.2d 91, 95 (3d Cir. 1978) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Kehr v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. 736 F.2d 1283 (9th Cir. 1984) ; Garcia v. Sam Tanksley Trucking, Inc., 708 F.2d 519, 522 (10th Cir. 1983) ; Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., 624 F.2d 749, 757 (6th Cir. 1980) ; Draper v. Airco, Inc., 580 F.2d 91, 95 (3d Cir. 1978) ; Mason v. Texaco, Inc., 741 F. Supp. 1472 (D. Kan. 1990) ; Associated Business Tel. Sys. v. Greater Capital Hotel Corp., 729 F. Supp. 1488, 1498 (D.N.J. 1990) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., 624 F.2d 749, 757 (6th Cir. 1980) (the jurors would have been unaware of defendant's size without plaintiff's repeated reference to it since the Kiewit name is not, among the general public, synonymous with a "corporate giant"). See also Lockley v. Deere & Co., 927 F.2d 1430 (8th Cir. 1991) ; Lamborn v. Dittmer, 688 F. Supp. 113 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (remarks about the defendant's power and wealth which were supported by the record were not improper).

(n30)Footnote 30. Allstate Ins. Co. v. James, 845 F.2d 315, 318 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n31)Footnote 31. 624 F.2d 749, 755 (6th Cir. 1980)

(n32)Footnote 32. Baron Tube Co. v. Transport Ins. Co. 365 F.2d 858, 861 (5th Cir. 1966) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Eastern District of Louisiana, Rule 14.3; Middle District of Louisiana, Rule 16A.3.

(n34)Footnote 34. Middle District of Florida, Rule 5.03(b)(15).

(n35)Footnote 35. Draper v. Airco, Inc., 580 F.2d 91 (3d Cir. 1978) (improper for counsel to refer to his having met and talked with deceased's children, none of whom had testified).

(n36)Footnote 36. Pitchford v. Pepi, Inc., 531 F.2d 92, 106 (3d Cir. 1975) , cert. denied, 426 U.S. 935 (1976) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Griffin v. Hilke, 804 F.2d 1052 (8th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 107 S. Ct. 3184 (1987) (closing argument which implied the government would indemnify individual police defendants constituted reversible error).

(n38)Footnote 38. Bozark Farms, Inc. v. Ozark Border Elec. Co-op, 849 F.2d 306 (8th Cir. 1988) ; Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., 624 F.2d 749, 758 (6th Cir. 1980) ("while mention of the contractually-mandated insurance may have been inevitable, it was prejudicial error for counsel for the City to inject into the trial the idea that Kiewit had insurance which would cover any damages the defendant would be obligated to pay").

(n39)Footnote 39. Arnold v. Eastern Airlines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186, 196 (4th Cir. 1982) ; Kuzniak v. Taylor Supply Co., 471 F.2d 702, 703 (6th Cir. 1972) .

(n40)Footnote 40. O'Rear v. Fruehauf Corp., 554 F.2d 1304 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Marshall v. Porter Co. Plan Comm'n, 32 F.3d 1215, 1221 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 115 S. Ct. 1111, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1076 (1995) ("[I]t is rare that improper comments made during closing argument rise to the level of reversible error."); United States v. North, 910 F.2d 843, 897 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (even when the defendant was compared to Hitler, the D.C. Circuit said: "Our unwillingness to reverse a conviction [for improper statements during closing argument] has been particularly pronounced when the trial judge issues curative instructions").

(n42)Footnote 42. Edwards v. City of Philadelphia, 860 F.2d 568 (3d Cir. 1988) ; Joan W. v. City of Chicago, 771 F.2d 1020 (7th Cir. 1985) . Spray-Rite Serv. Corp. v. Monsanto Co., 684 F.2d 1226, 1246 (7th Cir. 1982) , aff'd, 465 U.S. 752, 104 S. Ct. 1464, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775 (1984) (plaintiff's request to the jury to place itself in plaintiff's position "was clearly improper, but we are not convinced that it was so prejudicial that it deprived Monsanto[defendant] of a fair trial"); Lacaze v. Olendorff, 526 F.2d 1213, 1223 (5th Cir. 1976) (the trial court's instruction to ignore the "Golden Rule" appeal cured any possible error).

(n43)Footnote 43. Johnson v. National Sea Products Ltd., 35 F.3d 626 (1st Cir. 1994) (where no timely objection to closing argument remarks, issue waived on appeal and review, therefore, limited to "plain error"); Associated Business Tel. Sys. v. Greater Capital Hotel Corp., 729 F. Supp. 1488 (D.N.J. 1990)

(n44)Footnote 44. Bryant v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 672 F.2d 217, 218 (1st Cir. 1982) (the court also noted that counsel had ample opportunity to speak to the court about the allegedly improper remarks outside of the jury's presence); Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 351 F.2d 702, 714 (5th Cir. 1965) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Arnold v. Eastern Airlines, Inc., 681 F.2d 186, 200 (4th Cir. 1982) ; Skogen v. Dow Chem. Co., 375 F.2d 692, 703 (8th Cir. 1967) . See also Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 351 F.2d 702, 714 (5th Cir. 1965) (waiting 9 days after the jury's verdict to raise an objection regarding opposing counsel's conduct during closing arguments indicated counsel did not consider the argument objectionable at the time but made the claim as an afterthought); Bergland v. Martin Marietta Aluminum, Inc., 74 F.R.D. 635, 636 (D. St. Croix 1977) (while inaction at time of trial does not preclude the seeking of post-trial relief, it does manifest the fact that, at the time of trial, no one was "taken aback" by the improper statements made during the course of argument).

(n46)Footnote 46. McWhorter v. City of Birmingham, 906 F.2d 674 (11th Cir. 1990) .

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 36 Closing Argument *

3-36 Federal Litigation Guide § 36.06

§ 36.06 Bibliography.

[1] Law Reviews and Periodicals.

Bergan, Thoughts About Closing Argument, 12 Litig. 36 (Summer 1986).

Bernard, Cohen & Lupfer, The Influence of Juror's Level of Moral Reasoning and the Nature of Closing Arguments in Determining the Verdict in a Civil Case: A Report of Two Experiments, 9 Law & Psychology Rev. 93 (Spring 1985).

Carlson, Arguments to the Jury: Passion, Persuasion, and Legal Controls, 33 St. Louis U. L.J. 787 (1989).

Carlson & Imwinkelried, The Three Types of Closing Arguments, 18 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 115 (Summer 1994).

Carroll & Clark, Reversible Error-- Opening and Closing Statements, 19 Trial Law. Q. 28 (Summer 1988).

Furman, Error in Closing Argument, 24 Colo. Law. 33 (1995) .

Gibbins, Closing Argument: Consolidating Your Theme, 26 Trial 83 (1990).

Gonzalez, Trial Tips: Closing Argument, 68 Fla. B.J. 69 (May 1994).

Goodman, Crisis in Closing Arguments, 74 Ill. B.J. 120 (1985).

Handley, Opening Statement and Closing Argument: A Golden Opportunity and the Last Chance, 34 For the Def. 16 (December 1992).

Levitt, Rhetoric in Closing Argument, 17 Litig. 17 (Winter 1991).

Lubet, The Trial as a Persuasive Story, 14 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 77 (1990).

McCarter, Closing Argument in Civil Cases, 46 J. Mo. B. 31 (1990).

Ramsey, A Practical Guide: Final Arguments in Civil Cases, 49 Tex. B.J. 632 (1986).

Redfearn, Closing Argument, 57 UMKC L. Rev. 735 (1989).

Ring, Effective Closing Arguments in Civil Trials (Trial Techniques), 29 Trial 61 (October 1993).

Stone, Staging a Persuasive Closing Argument, 6 Nat'l Trial Law. 75 (March 1994).

Tanford, Closing Argument Procedure, 10 Am. J. Trial Advoc. 47 (Summer 1986).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsImproper RemarksCivil ProcedureTrialsClosing ArgumentsObjectionsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewReversible Errors

* Chapter 36 revised in 1995 by Prof. Seymour Moskowitz, Valparaiso University School of Law, Valparaiso, Indiana, Linda D. Moskowitz, Esq., Sharon Sowa Vandercoy, Esq.

160 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide 37.syn

§ 37.syn Synopsis to Chapter 37: Objections *

§ 37.01 Evaluating the Purposes of Objections

§ 37.02 Deciding Whether To Object

§ 37.03 Objecting on the Record

§ 37.04 Considering Jury and Court Reactions to Objections

§ 37.05 Using Motions in Limine as an Alternative to Objections

§ 37.06 Raising Objections During Testimony

§ 37.07 Objecting to Form of Question
[1] Addressing the Style of the Question
[2] Rephrasing Question as to Form
[3] Common Objections to Form of Question

§ 37.08 Objecting to Substance of Evidence

§ 37.09 Evaluating Differences Between Form and Substance Objections
[1] Form of Question
[2] Substance of Evidence

§ 37.10 Timing of Objections
[1] Objecting When Ground First Becomes Apparent
[2] Objecting Before Trial
[3] Objecting During Trial
[4] Preserving Issue for Appeal

§ 37.11 Moving to Strike
[1] Striking Unavoidable Testimony
[2] Considering Disadvantages of Striking Testimony
[3] Making Timely Motion to Strike

§ 37.12 Restating Objections

§ 37.13 Stating Grounds for Objection

§ 37.14 Determining Where to Object

§ 37.15 Failing to Object

§ 37.16 Understanding Offers of Proof
[1] Making Known the Substance of Excluded Evidence
[2] Timing of Offer of Proof
[3] Considering Logistics of Offers of Proof

§ 37.17 Admitting Evidence for Limited Purpose

§ 37.18 Objecting During Nontestimonial Portions of Trial
[1] Objecting During Voir Dire of Jurors
[2] Objecting During Opening Statement and Closing Argument
[3] Objecting to Jury Instructions

§ 37.19 Obtaining a Ruling on the Record

§ 37.20 Considering Common Objections

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter examines objections to the introduction of evidence at trial. Objections are the formal means by which an attorney challenges an opponent's evidence, arguments, or conduct. The chapter discusses the purposes of objections, factors to consider in determining whether to object, the methods of objecting, and how to deal with an opponent's objections. In addition to coverage of the practical treatment of evidentiary objections at trial, the chapter also deals with motions in limine, issues of waiver, limiting instructions, and the preservation of arguments in the record on appeal.

The chapter concludes with a list of the most frequently made objections at trial.

For expanded coverage of trial objections, see Weinstein's Federal Evidence, Ch. 103, Rulings on Evidence (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.01

§ 37.01 Evaluating the Purposes of Objections

A working knowledge of objections is indispensable to successful trial advocacy. Objections are used to oppose the introduction of improper evidence or argument, and they can also be used to protest improper conduct and procedures during the trial.

The primary purpose of objections is to exclude harmful matters from consideration by the jury. Objections must be made promptly and must indicate to the trial judge the specific nature of the impropriety. n1 Another important purpose of objections is to make a record to preserve rights for appellate review. A claimed error in the admission of evidence ordinarily will not be reviewed on appeal if the appealing party failed to object when the disputed evidence was offered. n2

In addition to making objections to exclude evidence and to protect the record, objections can be used effectively to control or shape the opponent's evidentiary presentation. For example, an objection on the basis of the "best evidence rule" can preclude a witness from testifying as to the contents of a particular document. The document itself, rather than the witness's interpretation, may then be offered as evidence to the jury. Under some circumstances, permitting the jury to examine the document may be less damaging than testimony regarding the document.

Objections can be raised at any stage of litigation, including discovery, pretrial and post-trial motions, or during trial. This chapter focuses on objections made during trial. Objections can relate to the form or substance of questions put to a witness or to the substance of the answers given. Objections can relate to the foundation for testimony or exhibits as well. The competency of a witness to testify to certain facts, or to testify at all, may have to be determined in response to an objection. In addition, objections can relate to the improper conduct or remarks of attorneys, of the judge, of witnesses, or of jurors.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofObjectionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsRulings on Evidence

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid 103(a); see also United States v. Parikh, 858 F.2d 688, 697 (11th Cir. 1988) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.02

§ 37.02 Deciding Whether To Object

Deciding whether to object is a critical component of trial advocacy. To automatically object whenever possible does not generally result in effective advocacy, and restraint should be a controlling consideration. In short, no objection should be made unless there is reason to believe that the objection will do more good than harm. Among the factors that counsel should consider in deciding whether to object are:

- The need to keep out harmful evidence
- The need to protect the record for appellate purposes
- The need to control the flow of testimony
- The strength of the legal authority for the objection
- Possible jury and court reactions to objections made on the record

Although counsel may have only a split second between the question and the answer to weigh these factors and come to a decision, many objectionable questions may be anticipated. Counsel should plan beforehand whether to object aggressively during a particular examination and should further plan how to specifically react to a particular line of questioning that may be anticipated.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofObjectionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofTimelinessEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsRulings on Evidence

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.03

§ 37.03 Objecting on the Record

Claimed error in the admission of evidence ordinarily will not be reviewed on appeal unless the appealing party objects on the record when the disputed evidence is offered. n1 The purpose of Rule 103 is to expedite finality and economy in litigation by requiring parties to object at trial or risk waiving the right to raise the error on appeal. n2

The plain error rule set forth in Federal Rule of Evidence 103(d) provides an exception to the general rule that objections must be made on the record. Under Rule 103(d), the admission of highly prejudicial or fundamentally unfair evidence affecting substantial rights may be reviewed on appeal without the need for objection at trial. n3 Counsel should note, however, that because a showing of plain error requires "extraordinary circumstances," a party invoking the doctrine bears a heavy burden of proof in convincing the appellate court to reverse the decision below, and the appellate court may award sanctions if an appeal on these grounds is deemed frivolous. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a); see also United States v. Parikh, 858 F.2d 688, 697 (11th Cir. 1988) (finding the trial court committed "no error in admitting into evidence relevant documents ... to which no objection was made"; citing Rule 103); Ward v. United States, 838 F.2d 182, 187 (6th Cir. 1988) (two articles written by a medical specialists were admitted into evidence; plaintiffs failed to object at trial; court found plaintiffs' objection was waived on appeal under Rule 103); Shepp v. Uehlinger, 775 F.2d 452, 454 (1st Cir. 1985) (Defendant waived his objection to testimony by failing to object until the day after the testimony was heard; court noted that counsel "must object to the admission of evidence as soon as the ground becomes apparent ... [usually] as soon as the question is asked.").

(n2)Footnote 2. Morrow v. Greyhound Lines, Inc., 541 F.2d 713, 724 (8th Cir. 1976) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(d); see also United States v. West, 898 F.2d 1493 (11th Cir. 1990) ; United States v. Castiello, 915 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1990) ; Snyder v. Whittaker Corp., 839 F.2d 1085 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Stringel v. The Methodist Hosp. of Indiana, Inc., 89 F.3d 415, 423 (7th Cir. 1996) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.04

§ 37.04 Considering Jury and Court Reactions to Objections

The effect that an objection has on the jury may be more important than the exclusionary results obtained. The manner of objection, the frequency of objections, and the perceived intent of raising objections can either enhance or reduce rapport and credibility with the jury and the court. Although jury reactions must be considered before objecting to evidence, the possibility of adverse jury response should never cause counsel to forgo sound objections which might provide the necessary foundation for a mistrial motion or a successful appeal. Even if it is likely that an objection will be overruled, the objection should be made to preserve the issue for appeal. But when the record is not at stake, the jury's anticipated reaction may be a controlling factor in the decision whether to object. Even a single objection that is overruled may have an adverse impact on the jury. Objecting implies to jurors that counsel does not want evidence to be heard, and they will likely assume that the evidence under objection is damaging. The judge's overruling of an objection tells the jury that the evidence is proper and that it must be considered. Not only will jurors likely consider the evidence, they may even give it more weight than if no objection had been made.

Judges may become impatient with a series of technically correct but trivial objections, especially objections to the form of questions rather than the substance of the evidence proffered. Although sound, such objections may be viewed as an unnecessary delay of the trial. In this situation, counsel's careful judgment is needed. The benefits to be gained from raising a proper objection must be weighed against the detrimental effects of being in disfavor with the judge. Other situations require similar assessment. For example, if the opponent has failed to lay a sufficient foundation for an exhibit to be admitted, counsel must weigh forgoing an objection against the likelihood that the opponent will properly lay a foundation by supplemental questions.

Raising even sound objections may also unintentionally result in an unfavorable jury reaction. An objection may serve to call special attention to the very matter that counsel seeks to have excluded. Even though the objection is sustained, the jury may speculate about what the witness's answer might have been, and its assumptions may be much worse than the excluded testimony. Although preliminary instructions from the court and comments in the opening statement explaining the need for objections under the rules of evidence are intended to prevent the jury from drawing such adverse inferences, these caveats may have only a limited preclusive effect. Consequently, careful judgment is once again needed. Counsel should consider forgoing a well-founded objection if the harmful matter is not central to the case and if the jury seems not to have given special notice to its admission. Similarly, a sound objection should be waived if the defect may be curable. If the opponent can simply rephrase the question, an objection to the form should not be made.

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

166 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.05

§ 37.05 Using Motions in Limine as an Alternative to Objections

Motions in limine are appropriate for many of the preliminary questions the court must decide under Federal Rule of Evidence 104(a). n1 The motion in limine is not expressly provided for in either the Federal Rules of Evidence or the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n2 Nevertheless, such motions are widely used, and may often aid the trial process by enabling the court to rule in advance of trial on the relevance of certain anticipated evidence. Motions in limine are usually confined to very specific evidentiary issues of an extremely prejudicial nature. n3 The motion should be specific, giving the trial context, the character of the evidence, and the proponent's theory as to why the evidence should be excluded. n4

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 103(a), once the court makes a definitive ruling on the record admitting or excluding evidence, either at or before trial, a party need not renew an objection or offer of proof to preserve a claim of error for appeal. n5 If the trial court has deferred ruling on a motion in limine, the mere making of the motion will not preserve a claim of error; counsel must object during trial and secure a ruling. n6

A pretrial motion in limine, even though not renewed at trial, will be preserved for appeal if the following three factors are met: n7

- The issue was fairly presented to the district court
- The issue is the type that can be finally decided in a pretrial hearing
- The issue was unequivocally decided by the trial judge

The safest procedure, particularly when an objection made pursuant to a motion in limine has not been clearly delineated and determined, is to renew the objection at trial. n8

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 104.

(n2)Footnote 2. Banque Hypothecaire du Canton De Geneve v. Union Mines, Inc., 652 F. Supp. 1400 (D. Md. 1987) (the motion "is not a creature of the Federal Rules of Evidence or of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure."). Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(C) does provide that the parties may seek advance rulings on evidence from the court at the pretrial conference.

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Certain Land Situated in City of Detroit, 547 F. Supp. 680 (E.D. Mich. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Black v. M & W Gear Co., 269 F.3d 1220 (10th Cir. 2001) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a); See Bandera v. City of Quincy, 344 F.3d 47, 54 (1st Cir. 2003) ; Micro Chemical, Inc. v. Lextron, Inc., 317 F.3d 1387, 1391 (Fed. Cir. 2003) ; Mathis v. Exxon Corp., 302 F.3d 448, 459, n.16 (5th Cir. 2002) ; see also Weinstein's Federal Evidence, Ch. 103, Rulings on Evidence (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

(n6)Footnote 6. See United States v. Ellis, 121 F.3d 908, 918-919 (4th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1068 (1998) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Black v. M & W Gear Co., 269 F.3d 1220, 1230 (10th Cir. 2001) , citing United States v. Mejia-Alarcon, 995 F.2d 982, 986 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Black v. M & W Gear Co., 269 F.3d 1220, 1230 (10th Cir. 2001) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.06

§ 37.06 Raising Objections During Testimony

The discovery provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure were designed to eliminate surprise at trial. Following discovery, counsel generally will have a good idea of the testimony that will be offered by witnesses at trial. Regardless of the basis of an objection, counsel should not object if it is likely that the answer will be neutral or favorable. But if the answer, though neutral or favorable, is a predicate to offering substantially harmful evidence, counsel should strongly consider objecting immediately.

Even if the answer will almost certainly be unfavorable, counsel should consider two additional factors before you assert your objection. First, permitting the admission of objectionable evidence may open the door for the admission of other favorable evidence which might otherwise have been excluded, since opening the subject matter may allow for the submission of rebuttal evidence. n1 If rebuttal evidence outweighs or overshadows an adversary's objectionable evidence, counsel may want to refrain from objecting. Second, the objectionable testimony may present an opportunity to effectively impeach the witness. If objectionable testimony is a potential source of impeachment, it may be the best strategy to allow the testimony and then attack the credibility of the witness.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Gleason, 766 F.2d 1239, 1246 (8th Cir.) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1058, 106 S. Ct. 801, 88 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1985) ("Cross- examination may embrace any matter germane to direct examination, qualifying or destroying it, or tending to elucidate, modify, explain, contradict, or rebut testimony given by the witness.").

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.07

§ 37.07 Objecting to Form of Question

[1] Addressing the Style of the Question

There are two general categories of objections: objections to the form of the question and objections to the substance of the evidence offered. Many tactical decisions during trial will involve consideration of the type of objection that is involved. During the courtroom interrogation of a witness, counsel may frame questions in ways that are objectionable regardless of the content of the answers being elicited. The objection in this case is to the form of the question, not to the substance of the answer sought, and it addresses the phraseology or style of the question. An objection "to the form of the question" is a general objection, however, and it may not be sufficient to preserve the matter for review on appeal. To avoid waiver, the specific grounds for the objection always should be stated. n1

[2] Rephrasing Question as to Form

Generally, counsel may correct the impropriety of the form of a question by rephrasing it, thus allowing the substantive evidence to be admitted. For example, the question, "Was the defendant driving and had he previously been told not to do so?" may be objectionable on the ground that it is "compound" or "multiple" in presenting two or more questions at once. These questions are objectionable because the answer usually will be ambiguous or confusing in court or on review of the record. By separating the question into two queries, asked separately, you will have cured the improper form.

The relative ease with which improper form is cured and the objection thus overcome is one of the primary differences between objections to form and objections to substance. Inasmuch as the substantive evidence is eventually admitted once the question is properly framed, counsel may safely avert further objections to it. The opponent's ability to cure an improper question always must be considered before the objection is made. However, counsel may have difficulty in ascertaining the proper form to use in any given court because of the significant role the judge's discretion traditionally plays.

[3] Common Objections to Form of Question

Counsel may object to the form of a question during direct or cross-examination, or during the taking of depositions. During direct examination, probably the most frequent objection to form is that the question is "leading." Inasmuch as a witness's testimony must be based on knowledge of facts that he or she claims are true, the witness should be asked to state these facts without assistance during direct examination. A leading question is improper because it suggests an answer to the witness or because it contains factual details that could and should originate with the witness.

The general tendency to forgo objections to the form of a question should not be observed in the case of leading questions. If an attorney is leading a witness on direct examination, it is for one of three reasons:

- Witness has to be led
- Attorney does not know better
- Attorney recognizes how effective the use of leading questions can be in giving a precise and persuasive narrative

Although the natural assumption is that the form of a question is most often a problem on direct examination, it is the cross-examiner who most often yields to the temptation to frame unfair or argumentative questions. On cross-examination, the accuracy and sufficiency of the witness's knowledge and the truth of the facts to which he or she has just testified may be fully tested, but counsel may not ask the witness to speculate or to engage in conjecture. Thus, during cross-examination, the proponent for the witness may object on the following grounds:

- "Ambiguous question"
- "Badgering"
- "Lack of specificity"
- Improper implications of fact

Counsel also may object to form on the following grounds:

- Confusing question
- Compound question
- Repetitious question ("asked and answered")
- Misleading question
- Assumes a fact not in evidence, that is, a fact not testified to by the witness

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.08

§ 37.08 Objecting to Substance of Evidence

The pleadings mark the limits of evidence that is admissible. A fact not in issue need not and should not be proved. Thus, the first thing that a court must do in order to make rulings on objections to substance is determine what issues are created by the pleadings. Once the issues have been determined, counsel may make objections to substance based on:

- Materiality
- Relevancy
- Competence

When evidence of a fact is offered, it must be material and relevant to the issues raised by the pleadings. Witnesses and real or demonstrative evidence must be competent to offer proof of that fact. Although all three concepts--materiality, relevancy, and competence--determine the substantive nature of objections, they are not synonymous and must be carefully used as the basis for objections. Whether the subject matter of a particular question is in issue will also determine rulings on objections to substance. That is, the same question may be objectionable or not depending on the issues in the case. The list of possible objections to the substance of evidence is seemingly endless. A few examples are objections to hearsay, improper impeachment, lack of proper foundation, irrelevancy, incompetency, and violation of privileged communication.

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.09

§ 37.09 Evaluating Differences Between Form and Substance Objections

[1] Form of Question

Although objections to the form of a question involve the law of evidence, finding the rules that define the proper form of a question is a difficult task. Despite their practical impact on litigation, objections to form rarely are analyzed in case law or found in codified law. Most jurisdictions, however, generally accept the governing principle of Federal Rule of Evidence 611(a), giving the judge power to exercise reasonable control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence as to: n1

- Make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of the truth
- Avoid needless consumption of time
- Protect witnesses from harassment or undue embarrassment

[2] Substance of Evidence

Objections to the substance of evidence involve the entire law of evidence. Although the law of evidence originally was based mainly on decisional law, it has been increasingly codified. In the federal courts, the codification contained in the Federal Rules of Evidence creates most of the grounds for objections. The codified evidentiary rules of many states are based on the federal model, but you always should consult them for disparities. In both state and federal courts, additional objections to the substance of the evidence may have a basis in local rules of trial practice, rules of civil procedure, and relevant case law as well.

In addition, common sense and fairness often can be the basis for substantive objections, due to the broad discretion given the judge in deciding rulings on evidentiary issues. Not all judges recognize all objections; contrary rulings from different judges should be expected. Indeed, the effective trial lawyer may have to assert those objections that the judge does recognize rather than argue the validity of other discretionary objections.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 611(a).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.10

§ 37.10 Timing of Objections

[1] Objecting When Ground First Becomes Apparent

Counsel must promptly inform the court of objections to evidence for the trial judge to take appropriate preventive or corrective action. Consequently, counsel is not allowed to gamble on the possibility of a favorable response to an objectionable question. Rather, counsel must make an objection when the ground for objection first becomes apparent. n1

Federal Rule of Evidence 103 does not define "timely." n2 The general rule is that an objection is timely if made as soon as the ground of objection becomes apparent. n3 This requirement avoids unfairness to the proponent of the evidence, who otherwise might rely on the admission and forgo offering additional proof on the same point, only to find that this substitute is no longer available at a later time. A timely objection gives the proponent a chance to cure the mistake.

[2] Objecting Before Trial

An objection to an impropriety during a deposition that might be obviated if raised during the course of the deposition ordinarily must be raised at that time or be deemed waived. n4 Sometimes raising objections to an evidentiary issue before trial may not preserve the matter for appeal if the issue should arise again at trial. n5 There is a split among the circuits as to whether an objection made by a motion in limine without subsequent contemporaneous objection at trial is sufficient to preserve an evidentiary ruling for appeal. Also, a proposed rule amendment may affect this issue. The safest course is to always raise an objection at trial, even if the objection has been the subject of an earlier pretrial motion.

In courts that employ the procedure of pre-marking exhibits before trial, counsel may advantageously object at that time so as to avoid bringing in unnecessary witnesses and to allow the parties to meet unforeseen objections. If the jury may be unduly influenced by viewing a prejudicial exhibit prior to the time it is offered at trial, object at the time the exhibit is marked, or as soon as the risk is known. Ordinarily though, objections to real evidence will be made when the evidence is offered at trial.

[3] Objecting During Trial

The requirement of timeliness usually is applied to objections made during trial. n6 Timeliness during trial may vary with the circumstances. Usually the ground for an objection will be apparent as soon as the question is asked, assuming the question shows that it calls for inadmissible evidence. When this is the case, counsel must state the objection before the witness answers. Although courtesy usually requires that the opponent be allowed to complete the statement or question without interruption, if the question itself is prejudicial, interruption with an objection is necessary. On the other hand, sometimes the ground for an objection will not be apparent until after the answer or evidence has been given, and in that event, a motion to strike is called for.

[4] Preserving Issue for Appeal

A timely and specific objection usually is required in order to preserve the issue for review on appeal. n7 However, the "plain error" exception may apply in some situations, and objections to the calling of witnesses or interrogation by the court can be postponed until the first opportunity when the jury is not present. n8

Moreover, timeliness, by itself, is not sufficient to preserve an objection on appeal. Federal Rule of Evidence 103 also requires that the objection be specific. n9 Thus, a timely objection made on the wrong grounds will preclude the objecting party from raising an objection on proper grounds on appeal. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See United States v. Heinemann, 801 F.2d 86, 96 (2d Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1094 (1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 103.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., McKnight v. Johnson Controls, Inc., 36 F.3d 1396, 1407-1408 (8th Cir. 1994) (error not preserved because grounds became apparent during direct examination but objection not made until after close of direct examination).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(b), (d).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Porter-Cooper v. Dalkon Shield Claimants Trust, 49 F.3d 1285, 1287 (8th Cir. 1995) (party's pretrial designation of expert witness did not constitute offer of proof sufficient to preserve alleged error of exclusion of expert's testimony).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See United States v. Davis, 261 F.3d 1, 62, n.24 (1st Cir. 2001) (defendant's failure to object at trial to testimony of two witnesses precluded his argument on appeal that that evidence was insufficient to establish certain routine practice); Colon v. Howard, 215 F.3d 227, 234-235 (2d Cir. 2000) (neither plaintiff nor his attorney objected when evidence first introduced at trial, nor when defendant had document read aloud during trial; however, even if objection had been preserved, evidence would be admissible); Forklifts of St. Louis v. Komatsu Forklift, USA, 178 F. 3d 1030, 1035 (8th Cir. 1999) (because specific objections to expert opinion on damage estimates were not made to direct testimony at trial, issues were not preserved for appeal).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Evid. 103(d), 614(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Prymer v. Ogden, 29 F.3d 1208, 1213-1214 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1057 (1994) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.11

§ 37.11 Moving to Strike

[1] Striking Unavoidable Testimony

Despite the general rule that counsel may not await the witness's answer before objecting to the question, it is generally acknowledged that this requirement is not always feasible. In a number of situations it may be impossible to object before the inadmissible evidence has come to the attention of the jury. A witness may blurt out an answer before counsel has a chance to object, or a question that is not objectionable may elicit an objectionable unresponsive answer that you could not have foreseen. Testimony that is apparently proper when given later may appear inadmissible in light of subsequently developed facts. Moreover, the court may admit evidence conditionally upon the offering party's assurance that a proper foundation will later be established, and the party may fail to do so. In all such cases, make a motion to strike the inadmissible evidence, and request that the jury be instructed to disregard the evidence. n1 If the witness gives an unresponsive answer, it is generally agreed that only the questioning attorney may make the motion to strike.

[2] Considering Disadvantages of Striking Testimony

A motion to strike and request for instruction may serve only to remind the jury of harmful evidence, the impact of which has been abated by subsequent events at trial. Counsel must make an assessment of whether it is best to exercise restraint. If the initial fight over the admissibility of the evidence was waged in the presence of the jury, and counsel lost face in the process, it would generally be best to renew the objection by moving to strike, if it is likely the objection would now be sustained.

[3] Making Timely Motion to Strike

As with an objection, a motion to strike must be timely in order to preserve rights on appeal. n2 Accordingly, the motion should be made immediately following an objectionable answer. Thus, a motion to strike inadmissible hearsay that is not made until the close of all the evidence will be untimely and will be denied. n3 The exclusion of inadmissible evidence by striking it usually has only the effect of avoiding waiver since the testimony will have already been heard by the jury.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Terrell v. Poland, 744 F.2d 637, 639 (8th Cir. 1984) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.12

§ 37.12 Restating Objections

If an objection is sustained, counsel should repeat the objection if the opponent offers similar testimony by the same or another witness. An objection should also be repeated if an initial objection is overruled, and the opposing side asks further questions in the same vein. Although some courts hold that counsel does not need to repeat an objection, the sound approach is to raise a "continuing objection" for the record. n1 The effect of a continuing objection is not only that the first overruled objection remains good and is not waived, but also that its reach extends to all similar evidence subject to the same objection. n2 When a continuing objection is used, the best approach to ensure that the record is protected is to renew the objection at the close of the witness's testimony with an additional motion to strike the testimony and to have the jury instructed to disregard it. n3 If the testimony is extremely prejudicial, a motion for mistrial should also be made.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Clay v. Ford Motor Co., 215 F.3d 663, 667 (6th Cir. 2000).

(n2)Footnote 2. See United States v. Fortenberry, 919 F.2d 923, 924 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Clay v. Ford Motor Co., 215 F.3d 663, 667 (6th Cir. 2000) (motion to strike expert testimony in its entirety, after continuing objection regarding admissibility of expert testimony throughout examination of expert).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.13

§ 37.13 Stating Grounds for Objection

A specific ground for an objection must be stated if the objection is to be preserved for appeal. n1 Such a specific objection is in contrast to a general objection, which assigns no particular grounds and which is typically phrased by saying, "Objection," "Your Honor, I object," or by stating the objection in other general terms. The requirement of specificity is enforced primarily on appeal, and consequently, there is no per se ban on the use of general objections at trial. n2 Indeed, many trial judges prefer them because they do not encourage colloquy between counsel. However, specificity in objections serves several valuable functions.

A specific objection enables the trial judge to make an informed ruling on the asserted violation. n3 It affords the proponent of the evidence an opportunity to contest the objection or to take corrective action. In addition, a specific objection may increase the jury's understanding so that counsel's interruption is not viewed as a dilatory or spurious tactic. Whenever feasible, a specific objection should be made.

Under Federal Rule of Evidence 103(a)(1) and similar rules in most jurisdictions, specificity is required for appellate review unless the ground for exclusion is apparent from the context in which the objectionable evidence is given. n4 If the ground is not obvious, and a general objection is overruled, counsel will be deemed to have waived the correct specific objection. n5 Conversely, if counsel's general objection is sustained, although only a specific objection could properly raise the issue, the ruling will also generally be upheld, if any ground in fact existed for the exclusion. In this situation, the appellate court assumes that the evidence was excluded for the proper reason. In effect, the correct specific objection is not waived. This rule is usually applied, and makes practical sense, when the target of the specific objection could not have been corrected and when it would be pointless to reverse because counsel would be sure to assert the correct specific ground upon retrial.

The risk of waiver arises also when counsel makes the wrong specific objection. Because specific objections implicitly waive all other grounds for objection to the evidence, if counsel makes an incorrect specific objection that is overruled, he will be deemed to have waived the correct specific objection. To reduce the risk of waiver, counsel should make sure to include all possible bases of exclusion in his objection. These grounds should be stated at the same time and should be enumerated, as for example, "Your Honor, I object on three grounds: first, relevancy, second, hearsay and lastly, privilege." This way, even if the objection is overruled, the correct specific objection may be preserved for review of error. This is also safe practice because counsel may never know which ground will persuade the court to rule favorably. Although the correct specific objection will be waived when counsel's untenable objection is overruled, this may not be the case if the objection is sustained. In most circumstances, the appellate court will uphold the ruling if there is any possible ground for doing so, even though a different and incorrect specific ground was urged below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1). The rule governs treatment of rulings on appeal and motions for a new trial and thus does not ban the use of general objections at trial.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Collins ex rel. Kay v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 675 F.2d 1185, 1194 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Bandera v. City of Quincy, 344 F.3d 47, 55 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. Akitoye, 923 F.2d 221, 223-224 (1st Cir. 1991) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.14

§ 37.14 Determining Where to Object

Not only should objections be timely and specific, they should also be made to the appropriate audience. Counsel should always consider whether to make or argue an objection outside the presence of the jury. Although both parties should be prepared to argue the merits of an objection, there will often be no opportunity for argument when an objection runs to the form of a question. Most courts will rule prior to hearing from the questioner. However, when an objection is aimed at the substance of the evidence, most courts afford the proponent of the evidence at least an opportunity to state whether the objection is contested. Often, the proponent can defend the offer with arguments before the objecting counsel provides the reasoning for the objection.

Typically, it will be advantageous for the jury to hear an objection when counsel wants to reveal unfairness in the opponent's manner of conducting his examination or when counsel is confident that the objection will be sustained. It is particularly appropriate for the jury to hear an objection that is aimed at the form of a question rather than at impermissible substantive evidence. Counsel's specification of the reasons supporting the objection will demonstrate that it is not a dilatory tactic but a necessary intervention to prevent leading questions or other harmful practice. Finally, all objections should be directed to the court and not opposing counsel, since only the court can rule on the objection.

Federal Rule of Evidence 103(c) gives the court authority to grant hearings on objections outside the hearing of the jury. n1 When an objection is aimed at excluding inadmissible evidence rather than merely correcting the form of a question, it may be necessary to state the basis for the objection outside of the jury's hearing. The objecting party will usually be unable to state the reasons as to why particular evidence is prejudicial or otherwise defective without disclosing, to some degree, the nature of the inadmissible evidence. This unavoidable disclosure can adversely influence the jurors. The jurors may understand enough to surmise the entire testimony or they may believe that something worse is being concealed. Once exerted, this influence may be difficult or impossible to erase. In addition, objecting in the jury's presence will often highlight the very matter that counsel seeks to exclude.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(c).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

176 of 181 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.15

§ 37.15 Failing to Object

The failure to raise an objection or to make a sufficiently timely, specific and proper objection to inadmissible evidence waives any ground of complaint on appeal. n1 But this failure has another effect, equally important, which counsel should always bear in mind. If the inadmissible evidence is received without objection, it becomes part of the record and is usable as proof for whatever rational persuasive power it may have. However, the failure to object will not affect the relevancy of any admitted evidence. n2 If the admitted evidence has no probative worth or insufficient probative worth to support the proposition for which it is offered, the lack of an objection does not affect its value. The admitted evidence will still be irrelevant and will not support a finding.

The failure to object to inadmissible evidence does not, of itself, preclude the trial judge from excluding the evidence on his or her own motion. If a witness is incompetent or evidence is inadmissible and the interests of justice require the exclusion, the trial judge has discretion to do so. The Federal Rules of Evidence grant the judge broad powers to make such exclusions. Rule 611(a) permits the judge to control the presentation of the evidence so as to "make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of the truth." n3 This provision, coupled with the "plain error" doctrine of Rule 103(d), affords the basis for the judge's exclusionary power. n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Evid 401.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Evid 611(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid, 103(d).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.16

§ 37.16 Understanding Offers of Proof

[1] Making Known the Substance of Excluded Evidence

When the court sustains an objection to a question or other offer of evidence, counsel who asked the question or offered the evidence can respond in either or both of two ways. Of course, counsel should never argue with the judge, but should try to reformulate the question so that the evidence might be admitted in a different form. When correction is not possible, counsel should make an offer of proof. n1

The purpose of an offer of proof is to make known to the trial and appellate courts the substance of the excluded evidence. The offer of proof also permits the trial judge to reconsider the claim for admissibility and may persuade the judge to change the ruling. n2 Offers of proof are important to establish the purported relevance of the excluded evidence. n3 The procedure is primarily important, though, for appellate review. When evidence is excluded, the only way in which the appellate court can determine whether a substantial right of a party has been affected is to see the excluded evidence. The offer of proof makes this possible. As a general rule, error may not be predicated on a ruling that excludes evidence unless an offer of proof is made. n4 Under Federal Rule of Evidence 103(a)(2), an offer of proof is required unless the nature of the excluded evidence is apparent from the context. n5 Once the court makes a definitive ruling on the record admitting or excluding evidence, either at or before trial, a party need not renew an objection or offer of proof to preserve a claim of error for appeal. n6

[2] Timing of Offer of Proof

Although Federal Rule of Evidence 103(a)(2) does not require explicitly that the offer of proof be "timely," it is generally made immediately after the court has ruled on the opponent's objection. n1 In some courts, counsel may indicate his or her intention to make an offer immediately--by a brief statement at the side bar--but the actual detailed offer is made at the next recess or some other convenient time. n2 Usually, this postponement must be requested. This method is advantageous because it prevents delays in the proceedings and thus eliminates the possibility of unfavorable jury reaction toward offering counsel. It also gives the court a better opportunity to augment the record.

Whatever the method followed, counsel should explain on the record the theory under which counsel is making the offer of proof. n3 If the opponent has any objections to counsel's offer of proof, they must be made in a timely fashion like any other objections. Failure to do so will waive the objection for review of error on appeal. In order to protect the record, offering counsel should make sure that the court rules on these objections. An offer of proof should always be made outside the hearing of the jurors in order to prevent the disclosure of inadmissible evidence. Federal Rule of

Evidence 103(c) requires that this be done to the extent practicable. n4

In addition, when an objection to direct examination is sustained, counsel should consider requesting that the opponent's offer be made outside the hearing of the witness. A witness who is allowed to hear a narrative offer of proof may have his or her memory refreshed. Should the trial judge later reverse the ruling and admit the testimony, the witness may be tempted to modify it to conform to the offer--to the detriment of counsel's case. Similarly, if an objection to counsel's cross-examination is sustained, counsel should conduct the offer of proof outside the witness's presence. Otherwise, the witness will be forewarned of counsel's proposed cross-examination. If counsel is permitted to proceed after the offer, this advance preparation will be disadvantageous.

[3] Considering Logistics of Offers of Proof

If an objection to counsel's offer of real evidence has been sustained, counsel should request that the exhibit be retained by the court clerk as an offer of proof. Above all, counsel must be sure that the exhibit has been marked for identification. The exhibit then becomes part of the record for the reviewing court. To preserve the issue for appeal, counsel's offer of proof must be reasonably specific; it also must state the purpose and theory of the offered evidence if they are not apparent. n5 Ordinarily, the offer can be made in either narrative or question and answer form. n6 However, the court can require that the latter method be used. n7

In the narrative method, counsel states to the court, out of the jury's presence, what counsel expects to prove by the witness. If the expected testimony raises a question as to its materiality or relevancy, or as to the competence of the witness, counsel must indicate the facts on which admissibility of the testimony depends. The offer will be improper if it contains inadmissible conclusions or if it goes beyond the scope of the question asked or testimony desired. In the question and answer method, counsel also must establish any facts on which admissibility depends. Here, however, counsel questions the witness on the stand, outside the jury's presence, and the questions and answers are recorded. This method is the most reliable because the witness answers as if actually testifying to the jury. It is also the most time-consuming and disruptive. Unless the court permits the postponed offer discussed earlier, it is probably best to use the question and answer method only for critical aspects of the case.

Another method is for counsel to ask the court for leave to make a written offer of proof with an attached affidavit of the witness. This should be submitted before the objecting counsel rests. This method may be more advantageous than dictating the offer into the record, because the judge can study the document and may be influenced to change his or her ruling. This writing should be marked for identification and introduced into the record for use on appeal.

An offer of proof generally is not made until after an objection is made. However, by excluding one or a few questions that open a line of questioning, the judge may cut off the entire line, thereby saving time and reducing the risk of exposing the jury to inadmissible material. The offer of proof that counsel makes at such a time should encompass the entire line of questioning. n8 Similarly, if several witnesses, who are not in court, will testify to the same line of facts, and the judge's rulings indicate an inclination to exclude this line of testimony, usually counsel will not have to produce each witness before the jury. If there is nothing in the record to indicate bad faith or inability to produce the proof, a sufficiently specific offer of proof will be acceptable. Counsel should name the witnesses and indicate the particulars that each would prove. The narrative method can be used, or counsel can make a statement describing the questions counsel would have asked and the specific factual or admissible opinion testimony that the witnesses would have given.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Weir v. Crown Equip. Corp., 217 F.3d 453, 459 (7th Cir. 2000) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See New York v. Microsoft Corp., 209 F. Supp. 2d 125, 130 (D.D.C. 2002) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Moses.com Sec., Inc. v. Comprehensive Software Sys., Inc., 406 F.3d 1052, 1059 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Glover v. Johnson, 198 F.3d 557, 561-562 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a).

(n7)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 2. See New York v. Microsoft Corp., 209 F. Supp. 2d 125, 130-132 (D.D.C. 2002) (when evidence has multiple uses, some permissible and some impermissible, a more detailed explanation of use of evidence is appropriate; motion to reconsider exclusion of evidence denied, based in part on party's failure to articulate all justifications for offering the evidence in question).

(n9)Footnote 3. See Price v. Seydel, 961 F.2d 1470, 1475 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(c).

(n11)Footnote 5. See Price v. Seydel, 961 F.2d 1470, 1475 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 6. See Tiller v. Baghdady, 244 F.3d 9, 13, n.3 (1st Cir. 2001) (offer of proof not required to be in any particular form).

(n13)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(b).

(n14)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Evid. 103 advisory committee's note.

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.17

§ 37.17 Admitting Evidence for Limited Purpose

Evidence that relates to a number of issues in a case may be admissible for a particular purpose or as to one party, but inadmissible for another purpose or against another party. In this situation, the normal practice is to admit the evidence despite an objection, but to restrict its scope by instructing the jury to consider it only for the allowable purpose. n1 Federal Rule of Evidence 105 and similar rules in most jurisdictions provide for this procedure and require that a request for a limiting instruction be made to the court. n2

The party against whom the judge rules on an objection has the burden of calling the limited purpose of the evidence to the court's attention. If counsel objects to proffered evidence and the objection is sustained, the opponent will have to show that the evidence is properly admissible for some purpose. If, on the other hand, counsel's objection is overruled, counsel will have the burden of showing that the evidence has only limited admissibility.

Generally, when counsel decides that the offered evidence has only limited admissibility, counsel should not point this out in the objection. Rather, counsel should object to the entire evidence as being inadmissible and leave the burden of establishing limited admissibility to the other side. If the objection is sustained, and there has been no offer of a limited purpose, the exclusion of the evidence will not be reversed on appeal. If counsel indicates the limited purpose in counsel's objection, counsel will only aid the opponent by suggesting a ground for admitting the evidence. When counsel's objection is overruled, counsel must request the court to give limiting instructions to the jury.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Rinehimer v. Cemcolift, Inc., 292 F.3d 375, 382 (3d Cir. 2002) (limiting instruction under Fed. R. Evid. 105).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 105.

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.18

§ 37.18 Objecting During Nontestimonial Portions of Trial

[1] Objecting During Voir Dire of Jurors

Since voir dire is used to determine any bias, prejudice or interest of prospective jurors relative to the pending case, it is objectionable to argue or discuss the law during this process. Most judges, though, permit some general questions concerning the law. Similarly, counsel cannot argue or draw conclusions from the facts of the case during jury selection. Nor can counsel ask jurors to hypothesize questions assuming the facts of the case. Such objectionable discussions of the details of the case may be attempted by the opponent under the pretense of trying to ascertain a juror's attitude toward certain evidence. While counsel needs to make informed challenges, too much disclosure of the case is unfair. The court must rule carefully on objections of this sort.

Inadmissible evidence cannot be mentioned for obvious reasons of prejudice. Hearsay testimony, the remarriage of the surviving spouse in wrongful death cases, or subsequent repairs will be objectionable if mentioned. Similarly, specific mention of a party's insurance against liability is not allowed, although some jurisdictions permit general inquiries on insurance matters in order to determine a juror's bias or interest. n1 Other objectionable conduct during jury selection includes making prejudicial or inflammatory comments, asking humiliating or embarrassing questions, protracting the examination, misstating the law, and using improper form in questioning.

[2] Objecting During Opening Statement and Closing Argument

Since the opening and closing are counsel's two opportunities to give structure to the trial, considerable latitude is often permitted. As a general rule, restrictions consistent with fairness are imposed. The failure to object during opening statements or closing arguments may have undesirable consequences. If counsel reads from a proposed exhibit during the opening statement, counsel's adversary, by not objecting then and there, may be deemed to have waived any objection to receipt in evidence of the exhibit. n2

Objections should usually be made when the opponent has completed his or her statement or argument; n3 otherwise, the jury may view counsel's conduct as bad manners or obstructive--especially if the objection is overruled. However, some judges may require the objection to be made when the improper remark is stated, in order to be timely. Once again, it is important to know the preferences of the trial judge. The opening statement and closing argument are particularly vulnerable to the opponent's tactic of posing objections simply to disrupt the continuity of presentation. Since these parts of trial are often the most effective times to focus and shape the attention of the jurors, an unbroken rapport with them is crucial during the opening and closing. Special consideration of how to respond to disruptive tactics is thus advisable.

[3] Objecting to Jury Instructions

A party who objects to a jury instruction or the failure to give an instruction must do so on the record, stating distinctly the matter objected to and the grounds of the objection. n4 An objection is timely if a party that has been informed of an instruction or action on a request before the jury is instructed and before final jury arguments, as provided by Rule 51(b)(1), objects at the opportunity for objection required by Rule 51(b)(2); n5 or a party that has not been informed of an instruction or action on a request before the time for objection provided under Rule 51(b)(2) objects promptly after learning that the instruction or request will be, or has been, given or refused. n6

A party may assign as error an error in an instruction actually given if that party made a proper objection under Rule 51(c); n7 or a failure to give an instruction if that party made a proper request under Rule 51(a), and, unless the court made a definitive ruling on the record rejecting the request, also made a proper objection under Rule 51(c). n8 A court may consider a plain error in the instructions affecting substantial rights that has not been preserved as required by Rule 51(d)(1)(A) or (B). n9

To preserve objections to a charge, counsel must object as required under the rule. Rule 51 has been stringently enforced to the extent that a district court judge cannot waive it even with the acquiescence of counsel. n10

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed R. Evid. 411.

(n2)Footnote 2. See United States v. Benitez, 920 F.2d 1080, 1087-1088 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., United States v. Abboud, 438 F.3d 554, 586 (6th Cir. 2006) (prosecutor's improper statement during closing did not require reversal because it was not flagrant and defense did not object at trial).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(2)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(2)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1)(A).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. Babcock v. GMC, 299 F.3d 60, 64-66 (1st Cir. 2002) (district court alerted counsel that to preserve objections to charge, they had to object as required under Rule 51; counsel nevertheless failed to object).

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.19

§ 37.19 Obtaining a Ruling on the Record

The trial judge has the obligation to rule on all objections, and such rulings should be a part of the trial record. The responsibility for obtaining rulings rests with trial counsel. If the trial judge reserves a ruling on certain evidence, the objecting party must renew the objection before the case is concluded. n1

If the judge fails to make a ruling, then you must request a ruling and if no ruling is forthcoming, you should object to the court's failure to rule. The judge's rulings on evidence must be unambiguous. The term "sustained" or "overruled" should appear in the ruling. If the court renders a ruling without using these magic words, you can politely say to the court, "Your Honor, do I understand correctly that you are overruling (sustaining) my objection?" If the trial judge comments informally in chambers that he will admit or refuse certain evidence, a record must be made of that action if it is to form a basis of appeal.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Douthit v. Jones, 619 F.2d 527 (5th Cir. 1980) .

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 37 Objections *

3-37 Federal Litigation Guide § 37.20

§ 37.20 Considering Common Objections

It may be impossible to formulate an exhaustive list of all possible objections that can be made at trial. The types of objections that can be made at trial are limited only by the fertile imagination of trial counsel. Counsel should review the Federal Rules of Evidence, the substantive law, and the relevant federal or state statutes for objections to be made at trial. The law of evidence is intended to be changing and flexible. Therefore, the grounds for objections are not static, and grow and change with the law. What follows is a checklist of some of the most frequent objections. The basis for an objection is always context-specific, and more or fewer types of objections may be relevant in a particular circumstance.

1. Form of the question

    a. Leading

    b. Argumentative

    c. Confusing

    d. Compound

    e. Vague, unintelligible or ambiguous

    f. Assumes a fact not in evidence

    g. Misleading; misquotes testimony or an exhibit

    h. Narrative answer requested

    i. Previously asked and answered

    j. Beyond the scope of direct (cross, redirect, etc.)

    k. Insufficient foundation for hypothetical question

2. Exhibits or Testimony

a. Immaterial

b. Irrelevant

c. Non-responsive

d. Best evidence rule

e. Parol evidence rule

f. Document speaks for itself

g. Cumulative

h. Hearsay

i. Speculation

j. Narrative answer

k. No basis for opinion

l. Lack of foundation

m. Witness reading from notes or prepared testimony

n. Privileged matter

o. Incompetence of witness

p. Relevance outweighed by prejudice, confusion, or waste of time

3. Opening Statements

a. Arguing case

b. Improper discussion of law

c. Misstatement of law

d. Addressing juror by name

e. Inflammatory or prejudicial matter

f. Violates prior court order regarding excluded evidence; inadmissible matters

g. Describes adversary's evidence

4. Closing Argument

    a. Misstatement of law

    b. Excluded matters referred to

    c. Misstatement of evidence

    d. Prejudicial or inflammatory statements

    e. Personal beliefs

    f. Juror addressed by name

    g. Personal attack on party or his counsel

    h. Request for jurors to put themselves in the place of a party

5. Conduct of Counsel

    a. Arguing

    b. Coaching witness in objections

    c. Interrupting questions

    d. Interrupting answers

    e. Blocking counsel's view

    f. Display of excluded exhibits

    g. Personal communications with jurors

    h. Communications with the press

    i. Harassing witnesses

    j. Improper remarks when objecting

    k. Grandstanding

6. Conduct of Judge

    a. Prejudicial statements

    b. Off-the-record statements

    c. Bias

d. Defamatory remarks about a party or counsel

e. Excessive interrogation

f. Gestures, expressions or signs of disbelief or belief

g. Summarizing evidence

7. Jury Instructions

a. Not the law

b. Misstates the law

c. Ambiguous or unclear

d. Confusing

e. No evidence to support

f. Omits issue

g. Manner of instructing emphasizes certain matters

h. Technical terms not defined or wrongly defined

* Revised in 1992 by S. Frank Harrell, Cotkin, Collins & Franscell, Santa Ana, California.

1 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide 38.syn

§ 38.syn Synopsis to Chapter 38: Dispositive Trial Motions 1

§ 38.01 Moving for Judgment as a Matter of Law Under Rule 50(a) in Jury Trial

§ 38.02 Judgment as Matter of Law Replaces Directed Verdict and Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

§ 38.03 Rule 50 Motions Required to Challenge Sufficiency of Evidence at Trial and on Appeal

§ 38.04 Judgment as Matter of Law Speeds Litigation and Avoids Unnecessary Retrial

§ 38.05 Alerting Court and Opposing Party to Evidentiary Insufficiencies While Remedy Possible

§ 38.06 Rule 50(a) Does Not Violate Seventh Amendment Right to Jury Trial

§ 38.07 JMOL Applicable Only in Civil Cases Tried by Jury With Power to Return Binding Verdict

§ 38.08 JMOL May Be Rendered Against Plaintiffs and Defendants

§ 38.09 JMOL May Be Rendered on Evidentiary or Legal Grounds

§ 38.10 JMOL May Be Rendered as to Nondispositive Issues or Defenses

§ 38.11 Moving for JMOL Before Submission of Case to Jury

§ 38.12 Tactical Considerations in Timing of Motion

§ 38.13 Moving for JMOL After Opening Statement

§ 38.14 Moving for JMOL After All Evidence on Discrete Issue

§ 38.15 Moving for JMOL After Close of Opponent's Evidence

§ 38.16 Moving for JMOL After Close of All Evidence

§ 38.17 Failure to Make Motion at Close of All Evidence May Waive Right to Renew Motion

§ 38.18 Specifying Judgment Sought and Basis for JMOL Motion

§ 38.19 JMOL Motion May Be Written or Oral

§ 38.20 Nonmovant Must Be "Fully Heard" Before Court Grants Motion

§ 38.21 Hearing Motion Outside Jury's Presence

§ 38.22 Court Granting JMOL Need Not Make Findings of Fact

§ 38.23 Decision Not to Grant Motion Automatically Submits Action to Jury Subject to Later Determination of Motion

§ 38.24 Evaluating the Standard for Granting JMOL
[1] Judgment Proper When No Legally Sufficient Evidentiary Basis Exists for Reasonable Jury to Find for Nonmovant
[2] Courts Apply Diverse Formulations But Same Rule
[3] Judgment Improper if Reasonable Jurors Could Differ

§ 38.25 Defeating JMOL Motion With Substantial Evidence

§ 38.26 Appealing JMOL Orders

§ 38.27 Proper Pre-Verdict and Renewed Motions for Judgment Are Prerequisites to Review

§ 38.28 Ruling on Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law Reviewed De Novo

§§ 38.29 through 38.39 [Reserved]

§ 38.40 Moving for Judgment on Partial Findings in Nonjury Trials

§ 38.41 Entering Judgment on Partial Findings Requires Full Hearing on Critical Issue

§ 38.42 Invoking Judgment on Partial Findings

§ 38.43 Comparing Rule 52(c) to Predecessor, Rule 41(b)

§ 38.44 Court Has Discretion Regarding Timing

§ 38.45 Court Must Make Findings and Conclusions to Enter a Judgment on Partial Findings

§ 38.46 Comparing Judgment on Partial Findings to JMOL

§ 38.47 Appealing Judgment on Partial Findings

2 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses dispositive trial motions made under Rule 50(a) and Rule 52(c).

Discussions of both the Rule 50(a) motion for judgment as a matter of law in a jury trial and the Rule 52(c) motion for judgment on partial findings in a nonjury case are presented. Particular emphasis is placed on the following:

- The evidentiary standard applicable to each motion
- When each motion may or must be made
- Tactical considerations
- The form each motion should take

For expanded coverage of dispositive trial motions, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 50, Judgment as a Matter of Law in Actions Tried by Jury; Alternative Motion for New Trial; Conditional Rulings , and Ch. 52, Findings by the Court; Judgment on Partial Findings (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

3 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.01

§ 38.01 Moving for Judgment as a Matter of Law Under Rule 50(a) in Jury Trial

If a party has been fully heard on an issue during a trial and the court finds that a reasonable jury would not have a legally sufficient evidentiary basis to find for the party on that issue, the court may: n1

- Resolve the issue against the party, and n2

- Grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, can be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue n3

A motion for judgment as a matter of law may be made at any time before the case is submitted to the jury. The motion must specify the judgment sought and the law and facts that entitle the movant to the judgment. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

4 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.02

§ 38.02 Judgment as Matter of Law Replaces Directed Verdict and Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

Rule 50 uses the term "judgment as a matter of law" to encompass both of the former terms "directed verdict" and "judgment notwithstanding the verdict" (also known as judgment non obstante verdicto, often abbreviated as "j.n.o.v."). n1 The change in terminology, adopted by amendment in 1991, does not alter the substance of the law under preexisting Rule 50. n2

A party's mistaken use of the rule's prior language in denominating a motion under Rule 50 is merely a "formal error." Thus, a motion using the former terminology should be treated as a motion for judgment as a matter of law in accordance with the current rule. n3

This chapter uses current terminology unless discussing or quoting cases employing the former terminology.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991); Coastal Fuels of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Caribbean Petroleum Corp., 79 F.3d 182, 199 n.14 (1st Cir.) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 927 (1996) (the term "judgment as a matter of law" refers to directed verdict and JNOV).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991); Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Weible, 92 F.3d 108, 111-113 (2d Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1091 (1997) (standard is unaltered by name change).

(n3)Footnote 3. American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. Bolt, 106 F.3d 155, 157 (6th Cir. 1997) (court treated motion for directed verdict as JMOL motion).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

5 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.03

§ 38.03 Rule 50 Motions Required to Challenge Sufficiency of Evidence at Trial and on Appeal

A party challenging the sufficiency of an opponent's evidence in a civil jury trial must raise claimed deficiencies in a motion for judgment as a matter of law (JMOL) before submission of the case to the jury. n1 If the trial court does not grant a pre-verdict motion for judgment, and elects to submit the case to the jury, the moving party may renew the motion for judgment as a matter of law after the jury reaches or fails to reach a verdict; n2 the failure to renew properly the motion for judgment after the jury reaches or fails to reach a verdict generally precludes a party from challenging the sufficiency of evidence on appeal. Thus, the failure to assert properly both pre-verdict and post-verdict motions for judgment as a matter of law may result in the waiver of the right to object to the sufficiency of an opponent's evidence on appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

6 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.04

§ 38.04 Judgment as Matter of Law Speeds Litigation and Avoids Unnecessary Retrial

Judgment as a matter of law operates as a tool for speeding litigation of civil jury trials and for preventing unnecessary retrials. n1 Under Rule 50(a), federal trial courts have a procedure for avoiding the time and expense of a jury trial on issues or claims for which there is insufficient proof as a matter of law. If the trial court decides there is insufficient evidence to find for a party on an issue, the court may: n2

- Resolve the issue against the party, and n2.1
- Grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, may be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue n2.2

Further, a trial court may render a pretrial judgment as a matter of law on its own motion. n3

Rule 50(b) avoids unnecessary retrials when a judgment as a matter of law is held improper on appeal because it permits reinstatement of the original verdict. n4 Rather than grant a pre-verdict motion for judgment, a trial judge may allow the case to go to the jury while reserving a decision on the legal issues raised in the motion for judgment as a matter of law. If the moving party properly renews the motion for judgment, the court may reconsider the legal issues raised in the motion after the jury reaches or fails to reach a verdict. n5 If the jury verdict is not supported by the evidence, the trial court may render judgment as a matter of law. n6

An appellate court reviewing the trial court's decision may reinstate the original jury verdict if it finds the trial court erred in granting the post-verdict motion for judgment. n7 If, on the other hand, the trial court grants a pre-verdict motion for judgment, an appellate court must order a new trial if it finds the trial court erred in granting the motion for judgment. For this reason, appellate courts have often indicated that in general the better and safer practice is for trial courts to wait for a verdict and rule on the sufficiency of the evidence in a post-verdict motion for judgment. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight &

Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, 311 U.S. 243, 250, 61 S. Ct. 189, 85 L. Ed. 147 (1940) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 "was adopted for the purpose of speeding litigation and preventing unnecessary retrials"); Teneyck v. Omni Shoreham Hotel, 365 F.3d (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 2.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 4. Therrell v. Georgia Marble Holdings Corp., 960 F.2d 1555, 1569 (11th Cir. 1992) (original verdict may be reinstated without new trial if reviewing court finds trial court erred in granting post-verdict motion for judgment).

(n7)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(3), (c).

(n9)Footnote 7. Futrell v. J.I. Case, 38 F.3d 342, 350 (7th Cir. 1994) (reversing district court's decision to grant Rule 50(b) motion and remanding with directions to reinstate verdict).

(n10)Footnote 8. Mattivi v. South African Marine Corp., 618 F.2d 163, 166 n.2 (2d Cir. 1980) (better, safer practice is to wait until jury renders verdict).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.05

§ 38.05 Alerting Court and Opposing Party to Evidentiary Insufficiencies While Remedy Possible

Pre-verdict motions for judgment provide notice to the trial court and to opposing counsel of any deficiencies in the opposing party's case before it reaches the jury, while deficiencies still may be corrected. n1 Under Rule 50(a)(2), pre-verdict motions for judgment must specify the judgment sought and the law and facts on which the moving party bases the motion. Movants must provide nonmoving parties with specific notice of the alleged proof defects at a time when nonmovants still may augment their proof. This pre-verdict notice requirement, then, prevents movants from waiting until after the case is submitted to the jury to inform the court and opposing parties of any evidentiary defects, thereby preventing movants from gaining an unfair advantage through surprise. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Brokerage Concepts, Inc. v. United States Healthcare, Inc., 140 F.3d 494, 519 n.18 (3d Cir. 1998) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a) ensures party bearing burden of proof has opportunity to buttress its case before it goes to jury).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lynch v. City of Boston, 180 F.3d 1, 13 n.9 (1st Cir. 1999) (rule is designed to prevent unfair surprise); Brokerage Concepts, Inc. v. United States Healthcare, Inc., 140 F.3d 494, 519 n.18 (3d Cir. 1998) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a) ensures that party bearing burden of proof has opportunity to buttress its case before it goes to jury and that moving party will not gain unfair advantage through surprise); see Ross v. Rhodes Furniture, Inc., 146 F.3d 1286, 1288-1289 (11th Cir. 1998) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 is designed to protect party's Seventh Amendment right to cure evidentiary deficiencies before case goes to jury).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

8 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.06

§ 38.06 Rule 50(a) Does Not Violate Seventh Amendment Right to Jury Trial

Judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(a) has been held not to violate the right to a jury trial under the Seventh Amendment to the United States Constitution. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsTrial by Jury in Civil ActionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Galloway v. United States, 319 U.S. 372, 389, 63 S. Ct. 1077, 87 L. Ed. 1458 (1943) (upholding constitutionality of pre-verdict judgment as matter of law under former Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.07

§ 38.07 JMOL Applicable Only in Civil Cases Tried by Jury With Power to Return Binding Verdict

Rule 50(a) provides that a court may grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law during a jury trial. n1 Courts have interpreted this language to mean that motions for judgment as a matter of law are available only in civil cases tried by a jury with the power to return a binding verdict. n2 Accordingly, Rule 50 does not apply to cases or matters in which the trial court acts as finder of fact, n3 or to cases tried to the court with an advisory jury. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsTrial by Jury in Civil ActionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ortloff v. United States, 335 F.3d 652, 660 (7th Cir. 2003) ; Granite State Ins. Co. v. Smart Modular Techs., Inc., 76 F.3d 1023, 1030-1031 (9th Cir. 1996) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a) applies only to issues tried by jury, not to issue of equitable estoppel, which must be tried by court).

(n3)Footnote 3. Geddes v. Northwest Mo. State Univ., 49 F.3d 426, 429 n.7 (8th Cir. 1995) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 does not apply in case in which district court acted as finder of fact).

(n4)Footnote 4. Schlitt v. Florida, 749 F.2d 1482, 1483 (11th Cir. 1985) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 "does not apply to cases tried before a court with an advisory jury").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.08

§ 38.08 JMOL May Be Rendered Against Plaintiffs and Defendants

Judgment as a matter of law may be entered against both plaintiffs and defendants. n1 However, granting judgment as a matter of law for a party who bears the burden of proof is an extreme step that may be taken only when the evidence favoring the movant is so one-sided that, absent adequate evidentiary response by the nonmovant, it could not be disbelieved by a reasonable jury. n2 Therefore, judges faced with motions for judgment as a matter of law by parties carrying the burden of proof must test the body of evidence, not for its insufficiency to support a finding, but rather for its overwhelming effect.

Potential use against defendants is one of the fundamental differences between Rule 50 motions for judgment as a matter of law and Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Motions under Rule 12(b)(6), by their nature, may be brought only as a defense to claim. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1993); Bristol Steel & Iron Works, Inc. v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 41 F.3d 182, 187 (4th Cir. 1994) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 equally applicable to plaintiffs and defendants).

(n2)Footnote 2. Weese v. Schukman, 98 F.3d 542, 547 (10th Cir. 1996) ("The test is a strict one, and a directed verdict for the party having the burden of proof may be granted only where he has established his case by evidence that the jury would not be at liberty to disbelieve").

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.09

§ 38.09 JMOL May Be Rendered on Evidentiary or Legal Grounds

Judgment as a matter of law is appropriate when there is an absence of evidence on an issue or claim essential to a nonmoving party's cause of action or defense or, if the movant bears the initial burden of production, the evidence in favor of the movant is so overwhelming that reasonable persons could not arrive at a contrary verdict. n1

In deciding a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the court is not to resolve legitimately disputed issues of fact already decided by the jury, and even if the court finds the evidence unpersuasive, or that it would have reached a different result if it were sitting as a fact-finder, that is not a basis for overturning the jury's verdict and granting judgment as a matter of law. n1.1

In addition, when appropriate, judgment as a matter of law may be granted on purely legal issues unrelated to the sufficiency of evidence at trial. n2 This situation will arise where no real dispute exists over the relevant facts and the only dispute between the parties concerns question of law that were not made evident on the face of the pleadings. For example, a moving party may assert entitlement to judgment as a matter of law based on qualified or official immunity. n3 In this type of case, the parties may dispute whether or not the defendant is entitled to immunity as a matter of law, but once the court resolves that legal issue the outcome of the suit on the facts is clear.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Pitt v. District of Columbia, 404 F. Supp. 2d 351, 354 (D.D.C. 2005) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n3)Footnote 2. K & T Enters., Inc. v. Zurich Ins. Co., 97 F.3d 171, 175 (6th Cir. 1996) ("motion for judgment as a matter of law ... can also be made on purely legal grounds ...").

(n4)Footnote 3. Tamez v. City of San Marcos, Tex., 118 F.3d 1085, 1091-1092 (5th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1125 (1998) (court reviewed trial court's post-verdict judgment as matter of law on qualified immunity grounds despite movant's failure to renew motion formally post-verdict).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

12 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.10

§ 38.10 JMOL May Be Rendered as to Nondispositive Issues or Defenses

Trial courts may render judgment as a matter of law with respect to issues ordefenses that are wholly dispositive of a claim or defense. n1 A party may appropriately move for judgment on a discrete legal issue, such as whether the terms of a contract govern the rights and liabilities of the parties, even though granting the motion would not completely dispose of a claim or defense. n2 Similarly, a party may move for judgment as a matter of law on an issue-by-issue basis. n3 A granted motion for judgment as a matter of law need not dispose of an entire case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawConditional RulingsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1993).

(n2)Footnote 2. Chesapeake Paper Prods. Co. v. Stone & Webster Eng'g Corp., 51 F.3d 1229, 1236 (4th Cir. 1995) (party may appropriately move for judgment on discrete legal issues because Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 permits judgments with respect to issues not wholly dispositive of claim or defense).

(n3)Footnote 3. Hammond v. T.J. Litle & Co., Inc., 82 F.3d 1166, 1172 (1st Cir. 1996) ("A party may move for judgment as a matter of law on an issue by issue basis; it does not have to be all or nothing").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.11

§ 38.11 Moving for JMOL Before Submission of Case to Jury

Motions for judgment as a matter of law may be made at any time before submission of the case to the jury. n1 Federal courts interpret Rule 50(a) to require parties to assert the motion sometime beforesubmission of the case to the jury. n2 However, motions for judgment as a matter of law are inappropriate before a jury trial begins. n3 In general, a district court may not grant a Rule 50 motion prior to the presentation of any evidence in a case because a party must be afforded the opportunity to present evidence, and the court must evaluate that evidence in order to grant a Rule 50 motion. n4 Most commonly, the motion is asserted after the close of the opponents' case or before submission to the jury.

The failure to move for judgment as a matter of law within the time required under Rule 50(a)(2) may result in waiver of the right to file a renewed motion for judgment under Rule 50(b), which in turn may result in waiver of the right to challenge the sufficiency of evidence on appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2); Galdieri-Ambrosini v. National Realty & Dev. Corp., 136 F.3d 276, 286 (2d Cir. 1998) (party may move for JMOL during trial at any time prior to the submission of the case to the jury).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States ex rel. Wallace v. Flintco Inc., 143 F.3d 955, 960 (5th Cir. 1998) (challenge to sufficiency of evidence must be raised in pre-verdict motion for judgment before submission of case to jury).

(n3)Footnote 3. In re M & L Bus. Mach. Co., 181 B.R. 530, 532 (D. Colo. 1995) (movant cannot assert pretrial motion for judgment as matter of law).

(n4)Footnote 4. See McSherry v. City of Long Beach, 423 F.3d 1015, 1019 (9th Cir. 2005) .

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.12

§ 38.12 Tactical Considerations in Timing of Motion

Within the broad rule requiring a pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law before the case is submitted to the jury, Rule 50 does not designate a specific time for filing the motion. n1 Courts may consider motions for judgment as a matter of law at any time during the trial, as soon as it is apparent that either party is unable to carry the burden of proof on an issue of fact that is essential to that party's case. n2 Stated differently, a motion for judgment as a matter of law is appropriate after a party has completed its presentation of evidence on a factual issue that is essential to the case. However, in no event may a court enter judgment against a party who has not been apprised of the materiality of the dispositive fact and been afforded an opportunity to present any available evidence bearing on that fact. n3

Typically, the opportunity to file a motion for judgment as a matter of law arises in four situations:

- After the opponent's opening statement if it is clear that no question exists for the jury.
- After the presentation of all evidence on a discrete legal issue.
- After the close of the opponent's evidence.
- After the close of all evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Galdieri-Ambrosini v. National Realty & Dev. Corp., 136 F.3d 276, 286 (2d Cir. 1998) (party may move for JMOL at any time before case is submitted to jury).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Vahlco Corp., 720 F.2d 885, 889 (5th Cir. 1983) (court has power to direct verdict at any point in trial when there is complete absence of any question for jury).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.13

§ 38.13 Moving for JMOL After Opening Statement

Judgment as a matter of law may be granted following an opponent's opening statement if that opening statement embraces all operative facts expected to be proven at trial and those facts are insufficient to sustain a claim for relief under any legal theory. n1 However, despite the existence of authority supporting this conclusion, district courts should exercise restraint. If the court entertains any doubt as to the propriety of granting a pre-verdict motion, the court should wait until both sides have presented their evidence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Brown v. United Missouri Bank, 78 F.3d 382, 387 (8th Cir. 1996) (JMOL should rarely be granted after opening statements and rarely sustained).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Vahlco Corp., 720 F.2d 885, 889 (5th Cir. 1983) (decided under pre-1991 rule; although generally disapproving of irregularity in granting JMOL before nonmoving party had chance to present evidence, court found no reversible error).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

16 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.14

§ 38.14 Moving for JMOL After All Evidence on Discrete Issue

Judgment as a matter of law may be granted during an opponent's case in chiefafter all evidence has been presented on a discrete issue. The issue need not be wholly dispositive of a claim or defense. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawConditional RulingsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Hammond v. T.J. Litle & Co., Inc., 82 F.3d 1166, 1172 (1st Cir. 1996) (party may move for JMOL on issue by issue basis).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

17 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.15

§ 38.15 Moving for JMOL After Close of Opponent's Evidence

Judgment as a matter of law may be appropriate at the close of an opponent's case. n1 However, if the court entertains any doubt as to the propriety of granting a pre-verdict motion, the court should wait until both sides have presented their evidence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawConditional RulingsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. McClaran v. Plastic Indus., Inc., 97 F.3d 347, 360 (9th Cir. 1996) (motion for JMOL at close of plaintiff's case).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Vahlco Corp., 720 F.2d 885, 889 (5th Cir. 1983) (decided under pre-1991 rule; authority to render directed verdict should be exercised with great restraint).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.16

§ 38.16 Moving for JMOL After Close of All Evidence

A party may seek judgment as a matter of law following the close of all the evidence. n1 Further, to preserve the right to seek a post-verdict judgment as a matter of law, a party should move for judgment at the close of all the evidence. As a practical matter, however, most courts will decline to grant the motion at this point in time, submit the case to the jury, and await the jury's verdict. Following the verdict, the court may then evaluate the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the jury's verdict in a post-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawConditional RulingsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. General Elec. Co., 45 F.3d 135, 139 (6th Cir. 1995) (JMOL appropriate at close of all evidence).

(n2)Footnote 2. Therrell v. Georgia Marble Holdings Corp., 960 F.2d 1555, 1568-1569 (11th Cir. 1992) (better to pass on sufficiency of evidence in context of post-verdict motion).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.17

§ 38.17 Failure to Make Motion at Close of All Evidence May Waive Right to Renew Motion

Most courts interpret Rule 50(b) to require movants to make pre-verdict motions for judgment at the close of all the evidence as a prerequisite to filing a renewed motion for judgment under Rule 50(b). n1 As a result, a party who moves for judgment after an opponent's opening statement or at the close of the opponent's evidence must ordinarily reassert the motion at the close of all the evidence or risk waiving the right to renew the motion under Rule 50(b) and the right to appellate review of the sufficiency of an opponent's evidence. Although some courts permit post-verdict motions for judgment despite the movant's failure to reassert a previously made Rule 50(a) motion at the close of all the evidence, the safest course is to reassert the motion at the close of all the evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Zachar v. Lee, 363 F.3d 70, 74 (11th Cir. 2004) .

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.18

§ 38.18 Specifying Judgment Sought and Basis for JMOL Motion

In making a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the moving party must specify the judgment sought and the law and facts on which the moving party is entitled to judgment. n1 However, the rule does not provide guidance as to the degree of specificity required for pre-verdict motions. n2 Some courts hold that at a minimum, however, the motion must identify the specific element of the opponent's case that the movant contends lacks sufficient support. n3 Generalized or conclusory language in a motion for judgment as a matter of law is usually deemed inadequate. n4 Thus, for example, blanket supporting statements such as "there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for" a party, absent more specific factual allegations, are widely deemed to be insufficient, n5 as are motions stating little more than "defendants move for a directed verdict." n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Galdieri-Ambrosini v. National Realty & Dev. Corp., 136 F.3d 276, 286 (2d Cir. 1998) (Rule 50(a) does not define how specific the motion must be).

(n3)Footnote 3. Waters v. Young, 100 F.3d 1437, 1441 (9th Cir. 1996) (motion must inform responding party of dispositive facts on which it must introduce evidence).

(n4)Footnote 4. Galdieri-Ambrosini v. National Realty & Dev. Corp., 136 F.3d 276, 286-287 (2d Cir. 1998) (generalized challenge is inadequate).

(n5)Footnote 5. Williams v. Runyon, 130 F.3d 568, 572 (3d Cir. 1997) ("blanket statement ... is obviously insufficient").

(n6)Footnote 6. Piesco v. Koch, 12 F.3d 332, 341 (2d Cir. 1993) (conclusory statement inadequate).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

21 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.19

§ 38.19 JMOL Motion May Be Written or Oral

Because movants assert pre-verdict motions for judgment during trial, n1 they need not be in writing. n2 Thus, movants may make oral pre-verdict motions for judgment. n3 However, as a prudential matter, the better practice is to file a written motion for judgment. n4 In any event, the moving party should ensure that oralmotions and any accompanying argument are on the record. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsRule Application & InterpretationCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States ex rel. Wallace v. Flintco Inc., 143 F.3d 955, 962 (5th Cir. 1998) (appellate court noted that moving party neither made nor insisted on right to make written or oral pre-verdict motion).

(n4)Footnote 4. Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Weible, 92 F.3d 108, 111-113 (2d Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1091 (1997) (prudence suggests that written motion is better practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. Ross v. Rhodes Furniture, Inc., 146 F.3d 1286, 1289 (11th Cir. 1998) ("Rule 50 motions must be made on the record").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.20

§ 38.20 Nonmovant Must Be "Fully Heard" Before Court Grants Motion

Before a trial court may grant judgment as a matter of law, under Rule 50(a), the nonmoving party must be fully heard during a trial on the issue on which judgment may be granted. n1 The Rule, however, does not define what is meant by "fully heard." Several circuits have interpreted this language to place an overlapping responsibility on trial courts to inform nonmovants of deficiencies in their proof, and afford nonmovants an opportunity to correct any such deficiencies before granting judgment as a matter of law against them. n2 Meeting the "fully heard" requirement is particularly important in cases in which the motion for judgment falls short of the specificity requirement of Rule 50(a), n3 and in cases involving pro se litigants. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of Protection

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Echeverria v. Chevron USA Inc., 391 F.3d 607, 610 (5th Cir. 2004) ; Francis v. Clark Equip. Co., 993 F.2d 545, 555 (6th Cir. 1993) ("before a Rule 50(a) motion may be granted, a party must have been 'fully heard' ").

(n2)Footnote 2. Waters v. Young, 100 F.3d 1437, 1442 (9th Cir. 1996) (trial court has overlapping responsibility to inform nonmoving party of deficiencies in proof and to afford party opportunity to correct deficiency).

(n3)Footnote 3. Waters v. Young, 100 F.3d 1437, 1441 (9th Cir. 1996) (when pre-verdict motion fails to identify deficiencies in proof, trial court may not rule on motion until it apprises nonmovant of materiality of dispositive fact).

(n4)Footnote 4. Waters v. Young, 100 F.3d 1437, 1441-1442 (9th Cir. 1996) (particular need for trial court to observe requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 when pro se litigants are involved).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.21

§ 38.21 Hearing Motion Outside Jury's Presence

Ordinarily, courts hear motions for judgment as a matter of law outside the presence of the jury. n1 However, it is not necessarily an abuse of discretion for courts to hear such motions without excusing the jury. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Andrade v. Jamestown Hous. Auth., 82 F.3d 1179, 1185 (1st Cir. 1996) (court considered Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 motion after excusing jury).

(n2)Footnote 2. Womble v. J. C. Penney Co., 431 F.2d 985, 988 (6th Cir. 1970) (trial court did not abuse its discretion in hearing motion for directed verdict without excusing jury).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.22

§ 38.22 Court Granting JMOL Need Not Make Findings of Fact

A trial court granting a pre-verdict motion for judgment under Rule 50(a) is not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law justifying or explaining its action. n1 Although findings of fact are required in actions tried on the facts without a jury or tried with an advisory jury under Rule 52, that Rule intimates that findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary with regard to motions for judgment under Rule 50(a). n2 However, before ruling on the motion, the trial court should specify the materiality of the dispositive issue and controlling law to identify the nonmovant's failure to carry the burden of proof with regard to an issue. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Williams v. Mueller, 13 F.3d 1214, 1216 (8th Cir. 1994) (trial court in nonjury case mistakenly treated defendants' motion for partial findings as motion for judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 and made no findings of fact).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a),(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Francis v. Clark Equip. Co., 993 F.2d 545, 555-556 (6th Cir. 1993) (trial court magistrate's decision to grant defendant's JMOL motion reversed when magistrate did not give plaintiff an opportunity to be fully heard).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

25 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.23

§ 38.23 Decision Not to Grant Motion Automatically Submits Action to Jury Subject to Later Determination of Motion

If a court does not grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law made under Rule 50(a), the court is considered to have submitted the action to the jury subject to the court's later deciding the legal questions raised by the motion. n1 Therefore, the court is not required to actually rule on the motion. n2 If the jury reaches a verdict contrary to that sought by the moving party in the initial motion for judgment, the moving party may renew the motion. n3 Thus, a trial court's decision not to grant a pre-verdict motion for judgment automatically operates to reserve a decision on legal issues raised in the pre-verdict motion until after the jury reaches or fails to reach a verdict. n4 Even the denial of a pre-verdict motion for judgment results in reservation of a decision on the motion. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawConditional RulingsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Pro Football Weekly, Inc. v. Gannett Co., 988 F.2d 723, 726 (7th Cir. 1993) (court took "matter under advisement," rather than expressly ruling on motion).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Neely v. Martin K. Eby Constr. Co., 386 U.S. 317, 321, 87 S. Ct. 1072, 18 L. Ed. 2d 75 (1967) ("Under Rule 50(b), if a party moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence and if the trial judge elects to send the case to the jury, the judge is 'deemed' to have reserved decision on the motion").

(n5)Footnote 5. Samuels v. Air Transp. Local 504, 992 F.2d 12, 14 (2d Cir. 1993) (trial court denial of motion for directed verdict at close of all evidence deemed to have submitted action to jury subject to later determination of legal questions raised by motion).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.24

§ 38.24 Evaluating the Standard for Granting JMOL

[1] Judgment Proper When No Legally Sufficient Evidentiary Basis Exists for Reasonable Jury to Find for Nonmovant

If a party has been fully heard on an issue during a trial and the court finds that a reasonable jury would not have a legally sufficient evidentiary basis to find for the party on that issue, the court may: n1

- Resolve the issue against the party, and n1.1

- Grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, may be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue n1.2

In short, judgment as a matter of law is proper if there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for the nonmovant under controlling law. n2 Stated differently, judgment as a matter of law must be granted when, under governing law, there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the verdict. n3

Rule 50(a)(1) makes clear that courts have a duty to enforce controlling law without intruding on the jury's responsibility for fact determinations as dictated by the Seventh Amendment or by federal law. n4 It is important to emphasize that in deciding whether or not to grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law the trial court is not resolving legitimately disputed issues of fact. Rather, it is deciding only whether such issues actually exist.

Thus, the fact that the court finds the nonmovant's evidence merely unpersuasive or would have reached a different result sitting as the factfinder does not automatically lead to the conclusion that it should grant the motion for judgment as a matter of law. Rather it is only if the court finds that, under controlling principles of law, the nonmovant's evidence is so insufficient that a reasonable finder of fact could not possibly find for the nonmovant that granting the motion is appropriate. n5

[2] Courts Apply Diverse Formulations But Same Rule

In articulating the criteria for granting motions for judgment as a matter of law, Rule 50(a)(1) has been construed to effect no change in the standard as expressed in long-standing case law. n6 What that standard is exactly, however, is not entirely clear. Though Rule 50 does not on its face provide a controlling standard for decision, courts have uniformly framed the guiding principle in terms of what a reasonable jury could conceivably find. Despite this broad uniformity of standard, however, when the decisions adhering to that standard are deconstructed they reveal a sharp diversity in approach. Federal courts have employed diverse formulations of the standard through the years. n7

Thus, despite articulation of the standard in Rule 50(a)(1), the diversity of approach in applying the standard continues. Most courts require "substantial evidence" in support of the verdict sought or obtained by the nonmoving party in order to avoid judgment as a matter of law. However, a few courts apply a more lenient "any evidence" test.

[3] Judgment Improper if Reasonable Jurors Could Differ

The standard applicable to judgments as a matter of law employs a "reasonable jury" test for determining the propriety of granting judgment as a matter of law. n8 If reasonable minds could differ in viewing the evidence presented at trial, judgment as a matter of law is improper. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (standard for summary judgment "mirrors" that "under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 50(a), which is that the trial judge must direct a verdict if, under the governing law, there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the verdict"); Merrill Lynch Interfunding, Inc. v. Argenti, 155 F.3d 113, 120 (2d Cir. 1998) (judgment "appropriate where 'there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for' a party").

(n5)Footnote 3. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250-251, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) (standard for summary judgment "mirrors" that "under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 50(a), which is that the trial judge must direct a verdict if, under the governing law, there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the verdict").

(n6)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991).

(n7)Footnote 5. This is Me, Inc. v. Taylor, 157 F.3d 139, 142 (2d Cir. 1998) (motion granted only when "evidence is such that, without weighing the credibility of the witnesses or otherwise considering the weight of the evidence, there can be but one conclusion as to the verdict that reasonable [persons] could have reached").

(n8)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991).

(n9)Footnote 7. The following citations provide a sampling rather than an exhaustive survey of the different formulations of the standard under Rule 50:
Golden Rule Ins. Co. v. Atallah, 45 F.3d 512, 516 (1st Cir. 1995) (motion granted "only if the facts and inferences 'point so strongly and overwhelmingly in favor of the movant' that a reasonable jury could not have reached a verdict against that party"); This is Me, Inc. v. Taylor, 157 F.3d 139, 142 (2d Cir. 1998) (motion granted only when "evidence is such that, without weighing the credibility of the witnesses or otherwise considering the weight of the evidence, there can be but one conclusion as to the verdict that reasonable [persons] could have reached"); Stratton v. Department for the Aging, 132 F.3d 869, 878 (2d Cir. 1997) (courts grant motion only if there is "such a complete absence of evidence supporting the verdict that the jury's findings could only have been the result of sheer surmise and conjecture"); Keith v. Truck Stops Corp. of Am., 909 F.2d 743, 745 (3d Cir. 1990) (court must "determine whether the record contains the 'minimum quantum of evidence from which a jury might reasonably afford relief' "); Konkel v. Bob Evans Farms Inc., 165 F.3d 275, 279 (4th Cir. 1999) ("Rule 50(b) motion should be granted if a district court determines ... substantial evidence does not support the jury's findings"); Travis v. Board of Regents of Univ. of Tex. Sys., 122 F.3d 259, 263 (5th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1148 (1998) ("court should grant a Rule 50(a) motion not only when the non-movant presents no evidence, but also when there is not a sufficient 'conflict in substantial evidence to create a jury question' "); American & Foreign Ins. Co. v. Bolt, 106 F.3d 155, 157 (6th Cir. 1997) (evidence is sufficient to go to jury "unless, when viewed in light of those inferences most favorable to non-movant, there is either a complete absence of proof on the issues or no controverted issue of fact upon which a reasonable person could differ"); Klunk v. County of St. Joseph, 170 F.3d 772, 775 (7th Cir. 1999) (JMOL entered when evidenceis so one-sided that one party must prevail as matter of law); Sanjuan v. IBP, Inc., 160 F.3d 1291, 1298 (10th Cir. 1998) (renewed motion for judgment "must be granted if ... all the evidence and the inferences to be drawn from it are so clear that reasonablepersons could not differ in their conclusions"); Bryan v. James E. Holmes Reg'l Med. Ctr., 33 F.3d 1318, 1333 (11th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1019 (1995) (judgment may be granted only when "there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the proper judgment"); Smith v. United States, 894 F.2d 1549, 1552 (11th Cir. 1990) ("[t]he moving party is entitled to a directed verdict if the nonmoving party failed to make a showing on an essential element of his case with respect to which he had the burden of proof").

(n10)Footnote 8. Caruso v. Forslund, 47 F.3d 27, 32 (2d Cir. 1995) (judgment "proper under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 'only if ... there can be but one conclusion as to the verdict that reasonable [persons] could have reached' ").

(n11)Footnote 9. Winant v. Bostic, 5 F.3d 767, 774 (4th Cir. 1993) (court must deny motion for judgment if "reasonable minds could differ as to the conclusion to be drawn from the facts under the applicable law").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.25

§ 38.25 Defeating JMOL Motion With Substantial Evidence

Most federal courts construe the reasonableness test to require "substantial evidence" in support of the claim or defense of a nonmoving party having the burden of production in order to avoid judgment as a matter of law. n1 Substantial evidence is typically defined as evidence of such quality and weight that reasonable and fair-minded jurors may reach different conclusions. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Transgo, Inc. v. Ajac Transmission Parts Corp., 768 F.2d 1001, 1014 (9th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1059 (1986) ("... (JNOV) is proper when the jury verdict is not supported by substantial evidence").

(n2)Footnote 2. Krystek v. University of So. Miss., 164 F.3d 251, 255 (5th Cir. 1999) ("Substantial evidence is defined as 'evidence of such quality and weight that reasonable and fair minded men in the exercise of impartial judgment might reach different conclusions' ").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

28 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.26

§ 38.26 Appealing JMOL Orders

Entry of judgment on a trial court's grant or denial of a motion for judgment as a matter of law results in a final judgment for purposes of appeal. Specifically, if the trial court grants the motion for judgment, the nonmoving party may appeal from entry of judgment on the order granting the motion. n1 If the trial court denies the motion for judgment as a matter of law, the jury verdict stands and the movant may appeal from the judgment entered on the verdict. n2 However, a district court order determining the issue of liability but leaving damages to be determined is not a final appealable order. n3

The proper way to appeal trial court rulings on motions for judgment as a matter of law is to appeal from the entry of judgment on the order or verdict. This type of appeal allows the appellant to challenge all prior nonfinal orders and all rulings producing the judgment. n4 A notice of appeal is technically defective if it appeals from grant or denial of the motion for judgment.

As a general rule, a party has 30 days to file a notice of appeal after the judgment or order appealed from is entered. n5 A timely post-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law on the ground of insufficient evidence suspends commencement of the appeal period until the day after the order deciding the motion. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Johnson Enters. of Jacksonville, Inc. v. FPL Group, Inc., 162 F.3d 1290, 1308 (11th Cir. 1998) (review of district court's grant of JMOL motion).

(n2)Footnote 2. Orchard Group, Inc. v. Konica Med. Corp., 135 F.3d 421, 424 (6th Cir. 1998) (review of denial of motion for judgment on requirements of contract and apparent authority issues); Vining ex rel. Vining v. Enterprise Fin. Group, Inc., 148 F.3d 1206, 1212-1213 (10th Cir. 1998) (appeal from district court denial of motion for judgment as matter of law).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cook v. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp., 867 F.2d 1266, 1267 (11th Cir. 1989) (district court judgment granting plaintiffs' motion for judgment that determined liability but left amount of damages for future determination is not final appealable order).

(n4)Footnote 4. Grubb v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 868 F.2d 1151, 1154 n.4 (10th Cir. 1989) (proper appeal from trial court rulings on motions for judgment is from entry of judgment on order or verdict, allowing appellant to challenge all prior nonfinal orders and all rulings producing judgment).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A)(i); Harrell v. Dixon Bay Transp. Co., 718 F.2d 123, 126 (5th Cir. 1983) (timely motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) suspended commencement of appeal period until day after order deciding motion).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

29 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.27

§ 38.27 Proper Pre-Verdict and Renewed Motions for Judgment Are Prerequisites to Review

Proper pre-verdict and renewed motions for judgment as a matter of law are prerequisites to appellate review of the sufficiency of evidence supporting a verdict. n1 Thus, a party's failure to properly assert pre-verdict and renewed motions for judgment on the basis of insufficient evidence ordinarily waives the right to challenge sufficiency of the evidence on appeal. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewSubstantial EvidenceSufficiency of Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Miller v. Eby Realty Group LLC, 396 F.3d 1105, 1114 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Pahuta v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 170 F.3d 125, 129 (2d Cir. 1999) ("In the absence of a Rule 50(b) renewed motion or extraordinary circumstances, an 'appellate court [i]s without power to direct the District Court to enter judgment contrary to the one it had permitted to stand' ").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.28

§ 38.28 Ruling on Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law Reviewed De Novo

In general, appellate courts review district court action on a motion for judgment as a matter of law on a de novo basis, applying the same standard the district court applied in ruling on the motion. n1 In "de novo" review, the appellate court reviews the record in light of its own independent judgment without giving special weight to the decision under review. If the appellate court finds, after drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmovant and making all credibility assessments in the nonmovant's favor, that sufficient evidence permits a rational juror to find for the nonmovant, the appellate court must overturn the judgment as a matter of law. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Konkel v. Bob Evans Farms Inc., 165 F.3d 275, 279 (4th Cir. 1999) (denial of post-verdict motion for JMOL reviewed de novo).

(n2)Footnote 2. This is Me, Inc. v. Taylor, 157 F.3d 139, 142 (2d Cir. 1998) (stating de novo standard).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
A. Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 38.29 through 38.39

[Reserved]

§§ 38.29 [Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.40

§ 38.40 Moving for Judgment on Partial Findings in Nonjury Trials

In nonjury trials, Rule 52(c) allows the court to enter a judgment on partial findings, the nonjury equivalent of the Rule 50(a) judgment as a matter of law, at any time the court can make a dispositive finding of fact based on all the evidence bearing on an issue. Rule 52(c) provides:

(c) JUDGMENT ON PARTIAL FINDINGS. If a party has been fully heard on an issue during a nonjury trial and the court finds against the party on that issue, the court may enter judgment against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, can be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue. The court may, however, decline to render any judgment until the close of the evidence. A judgment on partial findings must be supported by findings of fact and conclusions of law as required by Rule 52(a).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral Overview

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

33 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.41

§ 38.41 Entering Judgment on Partial Findings Requires Full Hearing on Critical Issue

A district judge may enter a judgment as a matter of law before the end of a non-jury trial on any claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, third party claim, or defense, provided: n1

- The court has decided against the party as to a particular issue;
- The claim cannot be maintained or defeated absent a favorable finding on that issue; and
- The party has been fully heard with respect to that issue.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c); Granite States Ins. Co. v. Smart Modular Techs., Inc., 76 F.3d 1023, 1031 (9th Cir. 1996) (offer of proof was appropriate means for court to receive and consider parties' proffered evidence; court was not required to receive live evidence in order to provide the party with an adequate opportunity to be fully heard before granting judgment under Rule 52(c)).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

34 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.42

§ 38.42 Invoking Judgment on Partial Findings

A judgment on partial findings may be invoked when: n1

- The party pursuing the claim has not demonstrated the elements of the claim either in fact or in law; or

- The evidence of the party pursuing the claim has established one of the opposing party's defenses as a matter of fact or law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Eberhardt v. Comerica Bank, 171 B.R. 239, 243 (E.D. Mich. 1994) .

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

35 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.43

§ 38.43 Comparing Rule 52(c) to Predecessor, Rule 41(b)

The addition of subsection (c) to Rule 52 replaced a portion of Rule 41(b), which had permitted the district court to dismiss at the close of the plaintiff's case if the plaintiff failed to sustain the burden of proof on an essential matter. The cases that were decided under the predecessor statute, Rule 41(b), are often used by courts as precedent for cases decided under Rule 52(c).

Rule 52(c) is broader than its predecessor because it is not limited to the plaintiff. Judgment may be entered against either the plaintiffor defendant with respect to issues that may or may not be wholly dispositive of a claim or defense. n1 Furthermore, it allows a judgment to be entered at any time after the affected party has been fully heard with respect to the issue. The court no longer must wait until the conclusion of that party's case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c) (this point was clarified in a 1993 technical and stylistic amendment to the Rule). See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52 advisory committee note (1993).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.44

§ 38.44 Court Has Discretion Regarding Timing

The court in its discretion may enter a judgment on a claim after all the evidence on the crucial issue is heard, or the court may wait and render a judgment at the close of all the evidence. n1 The court may enter judgment upon its own motion or following a motion by a party. A judge who decides to wait until all the evidence has been heard will not be found to have committed an abuse of discretion. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. International Union of Operating Eng'rs, Local Union 103 v. Indiana Constr. Corp., 13 F.3d 253, 257 (7th Cir. 1994) (trial court's decision to reserve ruling until the close of all the evidence "was certainly not an abuse of discretion in this case").

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.45

§ 38.45 Court Must Make Findings and Conclusions to Enter a Judgment on Partial Findings

A decision to enter a judgment on partial findings must be supported by findings of fact and conclusions of law. n1 Of course, these findings are subject to all the requirements of clarity and completeness that are applicable to the findings that are required in any non-jury trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(c); Martinez v. United States Sugar Corp., 880 F. Supp. 773, 775 (M.D. Fla. 1995) , aff'd, 77 F.3d 497 (11th Cir. 1996) (district court must weigh all evidence presented and set forth findings of fact and conclusions of law).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gibbs v. King, 779 F.2d 1040, 1046 (5th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1117 (1986) (district court must enter findings on order of dismissal, and unclear or incomplete findings may require reversal).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.46

§ 38.46 Comparing Judgment on Partial Findings to JMOL

A trial court's evaluation of a motion for judgment on partial findings in a non-jury case or a case with an advisory jury must be distinguished from the court's consideration of a motion for judgment as a matter of law. Specifically, when issuing a judgment on partial findings the trial judge is not required to draw any special inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. n1 The judge may sustain a motion for judgment on partial findings even when the moving party has established a prima facie case. However, the court usually will not sustain the motion unless the prima facie case has been impeached in some way. n2 A trial judge who is deciding whether to order a judgment on partial findings must evaluate and weigh all the evidence, make determinations regarding credibility, and resolve the case on the basis of the preponderance of the evidence. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Geddes v. Northwest Mo. State Univ., 49 F.3d 426, 429 n.7 (8th Cir. 1995) (in deciding whether to enter judgment against plaintiff in civil rights action for failure to renew employment contract, trial court did not have to consider evidence in light favorable to non-moving party).

(n2)Footnote 2. Holmes v. Bevilacqua, 794 F.2d 142, 147 (4th Cir. 1986) (referring to predecessor Rule 41(b), judge may sustain defendant's motion even though prima facie case may have been presented).

(n3)Footnote 3. International Union of Operating Eng'rs, Local Union 103 v. Indiana Constr. Corp., 13 F.3d 253, 257 (7th Cir. 1994) (court should weigh evidence, resolve any conflicts, and decide where preponderance lies).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

39 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 38 Dispositive Trial Motions 1
B Motion for Judgment on Partial Findings

3-38 Federal Litigation Guide § 38.47

§ 38.47 Appealing Judgment on Partial Findings

A district court's findings in support of a judgment on partial findings are reviewed in the same manner as the findings made in any other non-jury case. Thus, an appellate court that reviews a judgment made on partial findings may not set aside the findings of fact unless they are clearly erroneous, i.e., a review of the evidence leaves the court with a firm belief that a mistake has been made. n1 Conclusions of law are reviewed de novo. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Southern Travel Club, Inc. v. Carnival Air Lines, Inc., 986 F.2d 125, 128-129 (5th Cir. 1993) (in contract dispute, findings of district court supporting judgment for defendant on partial findings were not clearly erroneous).

(n2)Footnote 2. Williams v. Fab-Con, Inc., 990 F.2d 228, 230 (5th Cir. 1993) (conclusions of law are reviewed de novo).

1 Chapter 38 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

40 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide 39.syn

§ 39.syn Synopsis to Chapter 39: Jury Instructions *

§ 39.01 Providing Jury With Instructions Under Rule 51

§ 39.02 Submitting Proposed Instructions in Timely Manner
[1] Avoiding Waiver of Right to Instruction
[2] Filing Proposed Instructions

§ 39.03 Beginning Drafting Process At Onset of Litigation

§ 39.04 Governing Law Depends on Type of Case
[1] Governing Law in Diversity Cases
[2] Governing Law in Federal Cases

§ 39.05 Evaluating Sources for Proposed Instructions
[1] Using Standardized Instructions
[2] Incorporating Statutory Language Into Instructions
[3] Incorporating Case Law Into Instructions
[4] Incorporating Restatements Into Instructions

§ 39.06 Drafting Proposed Jury Instructions
[1] Drafting Instructions on all Issues Presented
[2] Written Instructions Required
[3] Form of Instructions
[4] Using Clear Language
[5] Stating Law Correctly in Proposed Instructions

§ 39.07 Drafting General Instructions

§ 39.08 Drafting Case-Specific Instructions

§ 39.09 Objecting to Proposed Instructions
[1] Objecting After Court Advisement
[2] Purpose of Objection Right
[3] Attending Instructions Conference

[4] Objecting on the Record
[5] Raising Timely Objection
[6] Making Specific and Distinct Objections
[7] Submission of Alternative Instruction Not Sufficient to Preserve Objection
[8] Court's Rejection of Request on Record Preserves Right to Appeal

§ 39.10 Excusing Failure to Object Based on Intervening Change of Controlling Law

§ 39.11 Choosing Jury Instructions is Within Court's Discretion

§ 39.12 Charging the Jury
[1] Giving Instructions During Trial to Limit Confusion
[2] Providing the Jury with Written Instructions
[3] Giving Additional Jury Instructions During Deliberations
[4] Giving Additional Instructions in Presence of Counsel

§ 39.13 Evaluating Standard of Appellate Review Regarding Jury Instruction Errors
[1] Considering Instructions in Context of Entire Trial
[2] Failing to Object Limits Review to Search for Plain Error

§ 39.14 Applying Law as It Exists at Time of Appeal on Review of Instructions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers every aspect of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 51, which governs issues relating to jury instructions. The chapter provides discussion of the following topics:

- Drafting proposed jury instructions
- Submitting proposed instructions in a timely manner
- Evaluating sources for proposed instructions such as standardized and pattern instructions
- The acceptance or denial of jury instructions by the court
- The trial court's duties with respect to informing the parties of the content of the jury instructions before the charge
- Attending the charge conference and objecting to the court's proposed instructions on the record to preserve error
- Charging the jury
- The standard of appellate review for jury instruction errors

The chapter also discusses the trial court's discretion in fashioning instructions and the law to be applied in diversity actions and in cases brought under federal law.

Particular attention is paid to the requirement that objections be timely and specific, to the exceptions to the objection requirement, and to the standard of appellate review of both preserved and unpreserved instruction errors.

For examples of both general and substantive instructions for use in federal court, see Sand et al., Modern Federal Jury Instructions.

For expanded coverage of jury instructions, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 51, Instructions to Jury; Objections; Preserving a Claim of Error .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.01

§ 39.01 Providing Jury With Instructions Under Rule 51

The purpose of jury instructions is to give the jury a clear and concise statement of the law applicable to the facts of the case. n1 Jury instructions are meant to "clarify issues for the jury and to educate the jury about what factors are probative on those issues." n2

Rule 51 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure governs jury instructions and specifically addresses the following:

- Filing written requests for instructions in a timely manner n3
- The court's obligation to inform parties of proposed instructions and any action on requests, and to allow an opportunity to object on the record to the proposed instructions n4
- When the court may instruct the jury n5
- Making timely objections to instructions or the court's action on instruction requests n6
- Preserving a claim of error in instructions through proper requests and/or objections n7
- Plain error review of instructions n8

The provisions of Rule 51 not only apply to the trial court's instructions to the jury, but also to special verdicts and interrogatories under Rule 49, n9 verdict forms, n10 and instructions on the form of the verdict to be returned by the jury. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewPlain ErrorGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Christopher v. Cutter Lab., 53 F.3d 1184, 1194 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Spesco, Inc. v. General Elec. Co., 719 F.2d 233, 239 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Matei v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 35 F.3d 1142, 1146 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n10)Footnote 10. McGuire v. Davidson Mfg. Corp., 398 F.3d 1005, 1009 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Correa v. Hospital San Francisco, 69 F.3d 1184, 1195 (1st Cir. 1995) , cert. denied sub nom. Hospital S.F. v. Gonzalez, 517 U.S. 1136 (1996) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.02

§ 39.02 Submitting Proposed Instructions in Timely Manner

[1] Avoiding Waiver of Right to Instruction

A federal district court judge must instruct the jury as to the law and the burden of proof and must give reasonable guidance to the jury on the facts of the case. Apart from the plain error doctrine recognized in Rule 51(d)(2), a court is not obliged to instruct the jury on issues raised by the evidence unless a party requests an instruction. n1 If a party fails to request a certain instruction on a necessary element of its claim or defense, and does not demonstrate plain error on the court's part in failing to sua sponte formulate and give the appropriate instruction, the party will have waived any further relief with respect to that issue. n2 It is therefore incumbent on counsel to submit proposed instructions in a timely manner. n3

[2] Filing Proposed Instructions

Parties are required to file with the court and furnish to every other party written proposed jury instructions either: n4

- At the close of the evidence, or
- At an earlier reasonable time that the court directs

It is becoming increasingly common for judges to require submission of proposed jury instructions at the time that pre-trial materials are submitted to the court, which in many courts may be weeks or even months before trial. n5

After the close of evidence, a party may file requests for instructions on issues that could not reasonably have been anticipated at an earlier time. n6 In addition, a party may seek the court's permission to file an untimely request for instructions on any issue. n7

Local rules and court practices vary as to when instructions must be submitted and local rules should be consulted.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Harless v. Boyle-Midway Div. Am. Home Prods., 594 F.2d 1051, 1057 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Star City Gravel Co., 592 F.2d 455, 459 (8th Cir. 1979) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Unit Drilling Co. v. Enron Oil & Gas Co., 108 F.3d 1186, 1190 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Senra v. Cunningham, 9 F.3d 168, 170-171 (1st Cir. 1993) (Rule 16 justified pretrial order which required parties to submit all proposed jury instructions 20 days prior to trial).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(a)(2)(A).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(a)(2)(B).

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.03

§ 39.03 Beginning Drafting Process At Onset of Litigation

Because proper instructions define the elements and issues which must be proved or challenged, the drafting of instructions should start early in the preparation of the case.

The best time to finalize proposed instructions is before the trial begins, when there is time for deliberate thought. In many jurisdictions, parties are required to exchange proposed instructions and objections in advance of trial. The final pretrial order will often dictate the timing of that exchange.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesFinal Pretrial ConferencesCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.04

§ 39.04 Governing Law Depends on Type of Case

[1] Governing Law in Diversity Cases

In order to prevent the widespread abuse of diversity jurisdiction, the Supreme Court has held that" [e]xcept in matters governed by the Federal Constitution or by Acts of Congress, the law to be applied in any case is the law of the [forum] State." n1 Accordingly, a federal court exercising diversity or supplemental jurisdiction must apply state law to matters of substantive law, including the substance of jury instructions. n2 This rule applies even if the district court disagrees with the substance of the law of the forum state, or finds it ill-advised. n3

In the absence of precedent set by the forum state's highest court, however, the federal court is not required to follow the law of intermediate state appellate courts interpreting state law. Nonetheless, it generally will abide by an intermediate appellate court's interpretation of state law unless the federal court is convinced that the state's highest court would decide the issue differently. n4 Furthermore, before automatically applying the substantive law of the forum state, a federal court sitting in diversity must first apply the forum state's choice of law rules, which may or may not select the forum state's substantive law to govern the dispute. n5

While state law governs the substance of jury instructions in a federal diversity or supplemental jurisdiction action, federal law governs the procedural aspects of instructing the jury such as the timing and manner of filing of proposed instructions and the granting or denial of proposed instructions by the court. n6

[2] Governing Law in Federal Cases

Federal law governs both substantive and procedural aspects of jury instructions in actions based on federal law. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard InstructionsConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionDiversity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Salve Regina Coll. v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 231-233, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Kassel v. Gannett Co., Inc., 875 F.2d 935, 949-950 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. DePaepe v. General Motors Corp., 33 F.3d 737, 742 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. S. A. Healy Co. v. Milwaukee Metro. Sewerage Dist., 50 F.3d 476, 478 (7th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1010 (1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hardin v. Ski Venture, Inc., 50 F.3d 1291, 1293-1294 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Everett v. Carnival Cruise Lines, 912 F.2d 1355, 1358 (11th Cir. 1990) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.05

§ 39.05 Evaluating Sources for Proposed Instructions

[1] Using Standardized Instructions

A good way to begin the process of drafting jury instructions typically is to refer to standardized and pattern instructions. Such instructions often carry great weight with the court and are excellent resource tools. Some circuits, including the Fifth Circuit, the Eighth Circuit, the Ninth Circuit, and the Eleventh Circuit, have published model civil jury instructions, which are compilations of standard instructions routinely used by the courts. Model instructions typically cover introductory, evidentiary, and concluding instructions and may also include substantive instructions for certain types of cases such as patent and securities actions.

In addition, there are a variety of standardized instruction books and practice guides that contain suggested instructions with citations to relevant authorities. Many standardized instructions contain bracketed information or blanks that need to be particularized for the case at hand. The citations to relevant authorities may be helpful to tailor form instructions to a particular case, or aid in the drafting of supplemental instructions. Proposed instructions should include all relevant authorities, and some courts require a citation for the source of the published standard instructions.

State law pattern jury instructions are a valuable resource for instructions on when state law governs substantive law issues in diversity cases. n1

For a comprehensive guide to standardized and pattern instructions for use in federal court, see Sand et al., Modern Federal Jury Instructions.

[2] Incorporating Statutory Language Into Instructions

It is never error to incorporate the relevant language of a statute into an instruction and such incorporation is common practice. n2 Indeed, when statutory law governs the case, the use of statutory language may be preferred. n3 Oftentimes, however, statutory language must be tailored to the specific facts of the case at hand before it can be made meaningful to the jury. The Federal Circuit held that a court" abdicated its responsibility to inform the jury of how the statute applies to the particular case" when it merely instructed the jury as to the language of the statute. n4

[3] Incorporating Case Law Into Instructions

To avoid reversal and to attain accuracy, some judges will limit their charges to quotations from decisions of the appellate courts. Many attorneys do the same when submitting their requests for instructions. However, the language used by an appellate judge or a Supreme Court justice may not be appropriate for a jury charge; it depends on whether the words clearly and plainly communicate the applicable legal principles to the jurors. n5 The jury should not be instructed in the language of an appellate opinion where the language would be misleading. n6

An instruction which is proper under the facts of one case may be improper under inapposite facts of another case. n7 Before relying on an "approved" instruction, the facts and contentions in the case must be carefully evaluated and compared with those of the case approving the instruction.

[4] Incorporating Restatements Into Instructions

Restatements of the law can be a valuable resource for use in the drafting of proposed jury instructions. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsPeremptory InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Bersett v. K-Mart Corp., 869 F.2d 1131, 1135 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Faurote, 749 F.2d 40, 45 (7th Cir. 1984) (citing cases).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Monahan v. Flannery, 755 F.2d 678, 681 (8th Cir. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Structural Rubber Prods. v. Park Rubber, 749 F.2d 707, 723 (Fed. Cir. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. United States Lines Co. v. Williams, 365 F.2d 332, 335 (5th Cir. 1966) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Johnson v. Bryant, 671 F.2d 1276, 1280-1281 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Keeton, Trial Tactics and Methods, § 6.4 at 239-40 (1973).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Kane v. J.R. Simplot Co., 60 F.3d 688, 691 (10th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.06

§ 39.06 Drafting Proposed Jury Instructions

[1] Drafting Instructions on all Issues Presented

Because the purpose of jury instructions is to give the jury a clear and concise statement of the law that applies to the facts of the case, a litigant is entitled to an instruction on its theory of the case only if the instruction is supported both by the law and the evidence adduced at trial. n1 In this regard, a litigant is entitled to have the jury instructed on a particular claim or theory even if the evidence at trial was minimal or was presented in a piecemeal fashion. n2 Jury instructions must be formulated so that they fairly and adequately cover the issues presented, correctly state the law, and are not misleading. n3

[2] Written Instructions Required

Rule 51 offers little guidance as to the form of instructions, although it requires that requested instructions be in written form. n4

[3] Form of Instructions

Since the form of instructions may be governed by local rules, local rules must be consulted prior to drafting proposed instructions. For instance, Local Rule 51.1 for the Southern District of California requires that each instruction cover one subject in a concise manner on a separate page which includes the following information:

- The number of the instruction in consecutive order
- Subject matter of instruction
- Name of submitting party
- Citation to authorities supporting the instruction

A disposition block in the lower left corner of each instruction page (below the cited authority) is generally required. The block will typically state the following possible dispositions for the court to endorse: Given, Given as Modified, Refused, or Withdrawn. The block may also include a signature line for the judge's signature. Depending on local rules and practice requirements, jury instructions will typically also include a caption page and a table of contents with each instruction consecutively numbered.

The court also may require the submission of a clean set of instructions which include only the name of the instruction and the instruction itself, with no identifying information about the submitting party and without citations or disposition blocks. The clean copy is used for presentation to the jury.

Instructions generally should be organized in a manner consistent with presentation to the jury, beginning with introductory issues regarding the jury's general responsibilities, then covering evidentiary and burden issues, followed by substantive law instructions on the issues presented, and ending with concluding instructions regarding the manner of deliberations and the rendering of a verdict.

[4] Using Clear Language

In order to accomplish their purposes, jury instructions must be comprehensible to the jurors. Research into jurors' comprehension of instructions reveals that legalistic language and terminology often make jury instructions confusing. n5 Accordingly, the trial court's instructions should avoid legalistic terms, and present controlling principles in a clear, concise, and forthright manner. n6

[5] Stating Law Correctly in Proposed Instructions

A party should cite legal authority in support of a proposed instruction, which should correctly set forth the applicable law. n7 While the trial court may properly refuse a proposed instruction that is not correct, n8 Rule 51 does not require technical perfection. If the instruction concerns an issue crucial to the proper determination of the case, proffer of an instruction containing an error of law, but sufficient to alert the district court to the need for a particular charge, may provide the basis for a new trial if the court fails to instruct the jury on the issue. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gizoni v. Southwest Marine Inc., 56 F.3d 1138, 1141-1142 (9th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 944 (1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. BAII Banking Corp., v. UPG, Inc. 985 F.2d 685, 695 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Chuman v. Wright, 76 F.3d 292, 294 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Charrow & Charrow, Making Legal Language Understandable: A Psycholinguistic Study of Jury Instructions, 79 Colum. L. Rev. 1306 (1979).

(n6)Footnote 6. Gehring v. Case Corp., 43 F.3d 340, 345 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1159 (1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fikes v. Cleghorn, 47 F.3d 1011, 1013 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Trytko v. Hubbell, Inc., 28 F.3d 715, 725 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Bueno v. City of Donna, 714 F.2d 484, 490 (5th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.07

§ 39.07 Drafting General Instructions

The court's charge to the jury generally includes routine matters that are not case-specific. The extent of such instruction depends on the particular judge and the particular case. Almost all trial judges have a favorite set of instructions relating to routine and recurring matters, such as burden of proof, preponderance of the evidence, and credibility of witnesses.

Although the judge may disregard the parties' requests on these matters, counsel nonetheless should consider submitting requests on these issues. For example, particular types of cases require the application of special rules concerning burdens of proof, and in those cases a critical eye should be given to general burden of proof instructions to make sure they are appropriate. Form instructions regarding damages may also require special tailoring to meet the needs of the case.

Normally, the following matters should be covered in the judge's charge to the jury:

- Nature of the action
- Issues
- Province of the jury
- Burden of proof
- Elements of the plaintiff's cause of action (and of the defendant's counterclaim or affirmative defenses)
- Application of law to facts
- Inferences
- Presumptions
- Effect of rulings on objections and motions

- Preponderance of the evidence
- Weight of the evidence
- Credibility of witnesses
- Interest of witnesses
- False testimony
- Expert testimony
- Sympathy, prejudice and bias may not be considered
- Jurors may use common sense and experience in life
- Damages
- Number required for verdict
- Form of verdict

Obviously, this list is not exhaustive. What should be included depends on the particular case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

49 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.08

§ 39.08 Drafting Case-Specific Instructions

The first step to preparing case-specific jury instructions is to have an understanding of the theories of the case, the law supporting those theories, and the evidence which is expected to be adduced at trial. The primary focus will be to draft instructions relating to the issues and the theories of the case. In a case in which the law is not well settled, counsel should also prepare alternative requests, particularly when there is a primary and a secondary legal theory in support of the case. The following issues should be considered when drafting case-specific instructions:

- The legal elements of each of the relevant claims
- The legal elements of each defense and counterclaim
- Damages
- Any issue that may be unique to the case

Just as general form instructions are useful and often required resources for the submission of proposed instructions, specialized form books are a useful resource for drafting case-specific instructions, especially since form instructions can be tailored to the case at hand. It is generally good practice to indicate on the proposed instruction the source of the standardized instruction, and any modifications that have been made to the instruction with relevant authority.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.09

§ 39.09 Objecting to Proposed Instructions

[1] Objecting After Court Advisement

The court must inform the parties, before instructing the jury and before final arguments to the jury related to the instruction, of the proposed instructions as well as the proposed action on instruction requests. n1 The time limit is addressed to final jury arguments to reflect the practice that allows interim arguments during trial in complex cases. The court is further required to give the parties an opportunity to object on the record and out of the jury's hearing to the proposed instructions and actions on requests before the instructions and arguments are delivered. n2

[2] Purpose of Objection Right

The primary purpose of providing the parties with an opportunity to object to proposed instructions under Rule 51 is to ensure that litigants draw the trial court's attention to deficiencies in the jury charge, so that the court may correct errors in jury instructions before the jurors retire to deliberate. n3

Absent a distinct and timely objection, a litigant may not challenge on appeal any error in the giving, or failure to give, an instruction. n4 By ensuring that errors are brought to the trial court's attention before the jury begins to deliberate, n5 Rule 51 preserves scarce judicial resources n6 and reduces the burden on appellate courts by diminishing the number of possible appeals. n7

Additionally, the Rule "vindicates [a] powerful interest in orderliness and finality," n8 and prevents a litigant from remaining silent in the face of an incorrect instruction, hoping to obtain a favorable verdict despite the error, and planning to use the error to seek a new trial in the event of an unfavorable verdict. n9

[3] Attending Instructions Conference

Typically, the court will schedule a charge conference after conclusion of the evidence to provide the parties an opportunity to object to the court's proposed action with regard to jury instructions. In some courts it is common practice for judges to provide the parties copies of the court's proposed instructions in advance of the conference for comment. The instructions conference must be held on the record. n10

[4] Objecting on the Record

A party who objects to an instruction or the failure to give an instruction must do so on the record, stating each of the following distinctly: n11

- The matter objected to
- The grounds of the objection

Each party has the obligation and burden of voicing objections; litigants involved in multi-party suits may not rely on objections made by co-parties but may adopt a co-party's objections as their own if they do so expressly. n12 Except in certain narrowly defined circumstances, a litigant's failure to object to an error in the jury charge forfeits the ability to challenge that error on appeal. n13

To meet the objection requirement, it is not necessary that a litigant use the words "I object" or "objection." It is sufficient that the litigant give the district court the information needed for the court to avoid an error in the jury instructions. n14

[5] Raising Timely Objection

An objection is timely if: n15

- A party that has been informed of an instruction or action on a request before the jury is instructed and before final jury arguments objects under Rule 51(b)(2) when given the opportunity to do so by the court; or
- A party that has not been informed of an instruction or action on a request before the time for objection under Rule 51(b)(2) objects promptly after learning that the instruction or request will be, or has been, given or refused

[6] Making Specific and Distinct Objections

Rule 51 requires that objections be distinct, and that litigants state the grounds for their objections. n16 Litigants voicing objections to the court's charge must do so on the record and take care that the court is aware that counsel has an objection to the charge, n17 and not merely a preference for a different one, n18 counsel should make sure that the objection "bring[s] into focus the precise nature of the alleged error." n19

Just as compliance with Rule 51 does not require "surgical precision," n20 neither does it require the submission of a written instruction to preserve the issue for appeal, n21 but an objection must be sufficiently clear so that the grounds stated are obvious, plain, or unmistakable. n22 A general objection, or an objection unaccompanied by a statement of the grounds will not preserve error for appellate review. n23 Thus, a party's oblique reference to cases that might support an objection to a jury instruction is not sufficiently specific to give the district court notice of potential errors in the instruction. n24 Similarly, an objection on one ground will not preserve for appeal a claim of error on another. n25 Moreover, merely referring to requested instructions by number when voicing objections to the court's charge is insufficient to preserve any error, because such an objection fails to satisfy the specific and distinct requirements for Rule 51 objections. n26

[7] Submission of Alternative Instruction Not Sufficient to Preserve Objection

A litigant may not rely solely on the proffer of alternative instructions to preserve a claim of error for appeal. The requirements that objections to instructions given or refused be specific and that the grounds for the objection be stated distinctly mean that in addition to the proffer of instructions, a litigant must object to a specific error in the court's charge, or provide an explanation why the proffered instruction is preferable. Accordingly, the mere submission of a proposed instruction will not be considered an objection to the instruction as given. n27 It is therefore critical to specifically point out the objectionable instruction and to specify the grounds for the objection. n28

[8] Court's Rejection of Request on Record Preserves Right to Appeal

If the court has made it clear on the record that that a request has been considered and rejected on the merits, Rule 51 specifically establishes authority to review the failure to grant a timely request, despite a failure to add a formal objection. n29

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Caruso v. Forslund, 47 F.3d 27, 30-31 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Chestnut v. City of Lowell, 305 F.3d 18, 20 (1st Cir. 2002) (en banc) (per curiam); Graham v. Davis, 880 F.2d 1414, 1420 (D.C. Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, 119, 63 S. Ct. 477, 87 L. Ed. 645 (1943) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Elder v. Holloway, 984 F.2d 991, 998 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. McAdam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 896 F.2d 750, 769 n.29 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Highlands Ins. Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 27 F.3d 1027, 1032 (5th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1112 (1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Glaros v. H.H. Robertson Co., 797 F.2d 1564, 1572 (Fed. Cir. 1986) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(c)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. Osterneck v. E.T. Barwick Indus., Inc., 825 F.2d 1521, 1532-1533 (11th Cir. 1987) , aff'd on other grounds, 489 U.S. 169, 169, 109 S. Ct. 987, 103 L. Ed. 2d 146 (1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Jones v. Spentonbush-Red Star Co., 155 F.3d 587, 590 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Orix Credit Alliance, Inc. v. Taylor Mach. Works, Inc., 125 F.3d 468, 477-478 (7th Cir. 1997) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(c)(2).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(c)(1); see Taita Chem. Co., Ltd. v. Westlake Styrene, 351 F.3d 663, 668 (5th Cir. 2003) ; Negron v. Caleb Brett U.S.A., Inc., 212 F.3d 666, 671-672 (1st Cir. 2000) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Jardien v. Winston Network, Inc., 888 F.2d 1151, 1156-1157 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n18)Footnote 18. United States v. Parsons Corp., 1 F.3d 944, 945 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Westcott v. Crinklaw, 133 F.3d 658, 662 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Exxon Corp. v. Amoco Oil Co., 875 F.2d 1085, 1090 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Unit Drilling Co. v. Enron Oil & Gas Co., 108 F.3d 1186, 1190 n.5 (10th Cir. 1997) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Royal Maccabees Life Ins. Co. v. Choren, 393 F.3d 1175, 1179 (10th Cir. 2005) ; Comcoa, Inc. v. NEC Tel., Inc., 931 F.2d 655, 660 (10th Cir. 1991) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Taita Chem. Co., Ltd. v. Westlake Styrene, 351 F.3d 663, 667 (5th Cir. 2003) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Drohan v. Vaughn, 176 F.3d 17, 21 n.1 (1st Cir. 1999) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Travelers Indem. Co. v. Scor Reinsurance Co., 62 F.3d 74, 79 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Jerlyn Yacht Sales, Inc. v. Wayne R. Roman Yacht Brokerage, 950 F.2d 60, 66 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Caruso v. Forslund, 47 F.3d 27, 31 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See City of Wichita v. United States Gypsum Co., 72 F.3d 1491, 1495 (10th Cir. 1996) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1)(B).

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.10

§ 39.10 Excusing Failure to Object Based on Intervening Change of Controlling Law

On direct review, an appellate court must apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision. n1 Because the purpose of Rule 51 is to alert the trial court to instruction errors, a litigant is not required to anticipate a change in the law and object to an instruction that is correct when given but that is rendered incorrect by a subsequent change in the controlling law. n2

Accordingly, a change in the controlling law during the pendency of an appeal excuses strict compliance with the objection requirement of Rule 51, n3 and permits a challenge to the instruction, despite the absence of objection below. n4

This narrow exception to the objection requirement applies only to intervening decisions that announce a substantial departure from a previous rule of law; intervening decisions that merely clarify the law as it existed at trial will not excuse a failure to object at trial. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Hegger v. Green, 646 F.2d 22, 26 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Phillips v. Cameron Tool Corp., 950 F.2d 488, 491 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Brown v. M&M/Mars, 883 F.2d 505, 512-513 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Hegger v. Green, 646 F.2d 22, 27 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Castrignano v. E. R. Squibb & Sons, Inc., 900 F.2d 455, 460 (1st Cir. 1990) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.11

§ 39.11 Choosing Jury Instructions is Within Court's Discretion

Subject to the requirement that instructions be adequate to guide the jury's deliberations in a proper and meaningful manner, a district court judge enjoys wide latitude in choosing and fashioning instructions. n1 Accordingly, the district court is not required to use the exact wording of a litigant's proffered instructions, nor must the court give every correct instruction submitted by litigants, n2 give a redundant instruction, n3 or adhere to the forum state's pattern instructions.

Many federal judges have their own sets of standard instructions which they give to juries in civil cases. These instructions do not embrace the particular issues in every case but frequently they include a format for the presentation of those issues. Counsel must obtain these standard instructions which, of course, will vary from judge to judge, and study them, looking to see whether they are accurate and adequate. As with any other inadequate instruction, counsel must object to standard instructions issued by the court if the instructions are inadequate to properly guide the jury's deliberations. Some judges give preliminary instructions to the jury as soon as it is empaneled. Counsel must obtain and study those instructions as well. The district court, however, may properly refuse to give an instruction that is without evidentiary support. n4 It should be noted that the evidence supporting an issue need only to be minimal to entitle a litigant to an instruction. n5

The court may reject an instruction that is argumentative, n6 or contains an error of law. n7 Despite the broad discretion vested in the district court, it must be recalled that "ultimately, it is the responsibility of the court to be sure that the jury is properly instructed." n8 Accordingly, when a litigant proposes an instruction addressing an issue that is crucial to the fair presentation of the case, the district court may have an obligation to fashion an appropriate instruction on the issue, even if the tendered instruction is incorrect or deficient in some respect. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Hardin v. Ski Venture, Inc., 50 F.3d 1291, 1293 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Adams v. Sewell, 946 F.2d 757, 767-768 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Trademark Research Corp. v. Maxwell Online Inc., 995 F.2d 326, 340 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Roberts v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 7 F.3d 1256, 1258 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. BAII Banking Corp. v. UPG, Inc., 985 F.2d 685, 695-696 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. S. A. Healy Co., v. Milwaukee Metro. Sewerage Dist., 50 F.3d 476, 480 (7th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1010 (1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Mooney v. Aramco Servs. Co., 54 F.3d 1207, 1219 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Dahlgren v. United States, 553 F.2d 434, 440 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Bosse v. Litton Unit Handling Sys., 646 F.2d 689, 693 (1st Cir. 1981) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.12

§ 39.12 Charging the Jury

[1] Giving Instructions During Trial to Limit Confusion

The court may instruct the jury at any time after trial begins and before the jury is discharged. n1 Although the judge decides when to instruct the jury, counsel should urge that relevant instructions be given early and as often as necessary to minimize jury confusion. For example, certain instructions may be given at the outset of the case to place the law and facts of the case in perspective for the jury. Instructions also may be given during the presentation of evidence at trial, as when the court instructs the jury to disregard a statement, cautions the jury not to discuss the case with family or friends, or advises the jury that certain evidence is being admitted for only a limited purpose. Generally, however, jury instructions are charged at the last stage of the trial when the judge provides a comprehensive road map for the jury to use in deciding the case.

[2] Providing the Jury with Written Instructions

One way to help the jurors understand the instructions is to provide a copy for them to follow while the judge is delivering the charge or to permit them to take a copy of the instructions with them into the jury room. Although federal district judges vary as to their willingness to give copies of instructions to jurors, no rule prohibits their doing so. The trend is toward giving earlier instructions and providing copies to the jurors.

Each juror should have his or her own set of the instructions so that during deliberations, they may review the instructions together. While litigants are not entitled to the best possible instruction, n2 at a minimum the court's instructions must give the jury adequate guidance to intelligently determine the questions presented. n3

[3] Giving Additional Jury Instructions During Deliberations

The court has discretion to provide additional instructions to the jury after the jury has retired for deliberation. Any supplemental instructions must be delivered in the presence of counsel and counsel must object at that time or the objection is waived.

Once the jury has retired to deliberate, the law imposes strict rules prohibiting communication with the jury. The trial court should make a record of all communications between the court and the jury. All comments by the judge to the jury should be made in open court.

[4] Giving Additional Instructions in Presence of Counsel

Sometimes the jury may request additional information from the court. The request may relate to testimony, exhibits or the judge's charge. The jury may even ask for additional instructions or clarification of the instructions already given. Whether or not additional instructions will be given is within the discretion of the court. Although it is error for the judge to give such instructions outside of the presence of counsel, the court may satisfy this obligation by making reasonable efforts to inform counsel and by providing counsel with a reasonable opportunity to be present.

The court need not delay jury deliberations unreasonably while counsel is being located. Therefore, in preparation for any eventuality during jury deliberations, counsel should be readily available and provide the court with adequate information to assure that proper contact is made.

Essentially the rules relating to the giving of initial instructions apply equally to supplemental instructions. The court should inform counsel of the substance of additional instructions to provide counsel with an opportunity to object.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental Instructions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gehring v. Case Corp., 43 F.3d 340, 344, (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1159 (1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Bender v. Brumley, 1 F.3d 271, 276 (5th Cir. 1993) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.13

§ 39.13 Evaluating Standard of Appellate Review Regarding Jury Instruction Errors

[1] Considering Instructions in Context of Entire Trial

On appellate review, an error in instructions may not be viewed in isolation but must be examined in the context of the entire charge as part of an integrated whole. n1 Jury instructions need not be perfect to withstand appellate scrutiny, n2 and will not form the basis for reversal if the charge as a whole--when considered in the context of the entire trial--fairly and adequately covers the issues presented, correctly states the law, and is not misleading. n3

Even if an instruction misstates the applicable law or provides insufficient guidance on an issue, a court of appeals will disturb the judgment below only if the error could have affected the outcome of the trial; n4 otherwise, the error is considered harmless. n5

If the error affected only the jury's assessment of damages, the determination on the issue of liability remains and a remand for a new trial on damages only is the appropriate remedy. n6

[2] Failing to Object Limits Review to Search for Plain Error

A party preserves a claim of error when a proper objection under Rule 51(c) is made to an instruction that is subsequently given. n7 In addition, a party may assign as error the court's failure to give an instruction if a proper request was made for the particular instruction and, unless the court made a definitive ruling on the record rejecting the request, the party also makes a proper objection under Rule 51(c). n8 Accordingly, a district court's failure to grant a timely request for a proposed instruction is subject to review once the court makes a definitive ruling regarding the request on the record.

An error not preserved under Rule 51 may also be reviewed in exceptional circumstances. Specifically, a court may consider a plain error in the instructions affecting substantial rights even if no party has preserved the error. n9 While it is difficult to precisely predict when plain error relief is warranted, the following factors may be considered: n10

- The obviousness of the mistake n11
- The importance of the error
- The costs of correcting the error

- The impact the verdict may have on nonparties

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Trytko v. Hubbell, Inc., 28 F.3d 715, 725 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Floyd v. Laws, 929 F.2d 1390, 1394 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hardin v. Ski Venture, Inc., 50 F.3d 1291, 1294 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Bebout v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 47 F.3d 876, 878 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Arleth v. Freeport-McMoran Oil & Gas Co., 2 F.3d 630, 634 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. McLaughlin v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 30 F.3d 861, 868-869 (7th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1149 (1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1)(A).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51(d)(2); see McGuire v. Davidson Mfg. Corp., 398 F.3d 1005, 1010 (8th Cir. 2005) ; see also Connelly v. Hyundai Motor Co., 351 F.3d 535, 545-546 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52 Committee Note (2003).

(n11)Footnote 11. Connelly v. Hyundai Motor Co., 351 F.3d 535, 545-546 (1st Cir. 2003) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

55 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 39 Jury Instructions *

3-39 Federal Litigation Guide § 39.14

§ 39.14 Applying Law as It Exists at Time of Appeal on Review of Instructions

On review of instructions in federal diversity and supplemental jurisdiction cases, a court of appeals applies the law as it exists at the time of appeal and not as it existed at time of trial. n1

State law governs the review of the correctness of the substance of the instructions in those cases, while federal law governs review of the procedural aspects of giving or refusing instructions. Whether a jury instruction misstates the elements that must be proved at trial is a question of law that is reviewed de novo. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Taylor, 102 F.3d 767, 771 (6th Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 927 (1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hadley v. VAM P T S, 44 F.3d 372, 374-375 (5th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 39 was rewritten in 2004 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

56 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide 40.syn

§ 40.syn Synopsis to Chapter 40: Verdicts and Jury Deliberations

§ 40.01 Comparing General and Special Verdicts

§ 40.02 Using Special Verdict and General Verdict Accompanied by Answers to Special Interrogatories as Alternatives to General Verdict

§ 40.03 Evaluating the Effect of Inconsistencies in the Jury's Special Verdicts

§§ 40.04 through 40.09 [Reserved]

§ 40.10 Using Special Verdicts to Avoid Confusion and Appellate Uncertainty

§ 40.11 Using Special Verdicts to Focus Jury's Attention to Material Questions of Fact

§ 40.12 Utilizing Special Verdict to Limit Potential Issues for Retrial

§ 40.13 Rule 49 Utilized At Sole Discretion of Trial Judge

§ 40.14 Formulation of Questions Not Prescribed by Rule 49(a)

§ 40.15 Appealing the Use of Special Verdicts

§ 40.16 Submitting Questions to the Jury

§ 40.17 Court May Insert Finding of Omitted Issue of Material Fact to Complete Jury Verdict

§ 40.18 Failing to Object to Omission in Interrogatories Constitutes Waiver of Jury Trial as to That Issue

§ 40.19 Objecting to Form of Special Interrogatories at Trial to Preserve Issue for Appellate Review

§ 40.20 Reconciling Inconsistent Responses to Special Verdict Questions

§ 40.21 Rule 49(a) Findings on Factual Issues Omitted From Special Interrogatories Reviewable Under Clearly Erroneous Standard

§§ 40.22 through 40.29 [Reserved]

§ 40.30 Submitting Special Interrogatories to Jury Concerning Selected Issues of Fact

§ 40.31 Identifying Whether Verdicts Represent Special Verdict or General Verdict With Answers to Interrogatories

§ 40.32 Submitting Interrogatories is Discretionary

§ 40.33 Submitting Additional Interrogatories for Clarification Purposes

§ 40.34 Failing to Object to Interrogatories Constitutes Waiver on Appeal

§ 40.35 Raising Post-Verdict Objections

§ 40.36 Evaluating the Effect of Inconsistencies Between Interrogatory Answers and General Verdict
[1] Entering Judgment in Accordance With Answers Notwithstanding Verdict, Seeking Further Jury Deliberations, or Ordering New Trial
[2] Resubmitting Inconsistent Answers to Jury
[3] New Trial May Be Ordered if General Verdict and Interrogatory Answers Inconsistent

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers jury verdicts, and focuses on the use of special verdicts and general verdicts accompanied by answers to interrogatories under Rule 49 as alternatives to the general verdict. The chapter discusses the operation of these two possible jury dispositions in detail. Special attention is given to the grounds for objection to the questions submitted under the rule and to the effect the timing of the objection may have on its waiver as a ground for appeal. Also described and analyzed are the effects of inconsistencies in jury verdicts.

For expanded coverage of special verdicts and general verdicts, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 49, Special Verdicts and Interrogatories . For expanded discussion of the effect and timing of objections to instructions to the jury, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 51, Instructions to Jury: Objection .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
A. Understanding the Function of Rule 49

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.01

§ 40.01 Comparing General and Special Verdicts

The general verdict is the most commonly used form of verdict. The jury determines only whether the defendant is liable and, if so, in what amount, without providing a specific basis for the verdict. The general verdict is well suited for simple cases.

The special verdict is authorized by Rule 49 as a more detailed alternative to the more commonly used general verdict. n1 The general verdict has the advantage of certainty, but suffers from the disadvantage of being either all right or all wrong.

Plaintiffs often seek simplicity in the verdict so that it is easy for the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff, while defendants usually seek complexity so that it is difficult for the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff. There are situations in which special verdicts or interrogatories are necessary. For example, in a diversity personal injury action in which state law requires itemization of or places limits on certain types of damages, there must be a special verdict.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a); see also Zhang v. American Gem Seafoods, Inc., 339 F.3d 1020, 1031 (9th Cir. 2003) (special verdicts and general verdicts with interrogatories involve only factual findings; general verdicts involve not factual findings but ultimate legal conclusions) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
A. Understanding the Function of Rule 49

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.02

§ 40.02 Using Special Verdict and General Verdict Accompanied by Answers to Special Interrogatories as Alternatives to General Verdict

In response to the difficulties posed by the basic general verdict, n1 Rule 49 provides two practical alternatives:

- The special verdict n2
- The general verdict accompanied by answers to special interrogatories n3

A special verdict is returned in lieu of a general verdict and contains factual findings on all of the material issues in the case. n4 Pursuant to Rule 49(a), the jury returns its special verdict in the form of written answers to separate questions concerning each factual issue in the case. The trial court then applies the law to those answers and enters judgment accordingly. n5 By removing from the jury the consideration or application of the law (which a general verdict requires through application of the court's instruction), the special verdict avoids those two sources of possible error in the general verdict. n6

Under Rule 49(b), on the other hand, the jury after being instructed returns a general verdict together with answers to specific interrogatories. Rule 49(b) combines the two types of verdicts, the general verdict and the special verdict. If the answers to the interrogatories do not contradict the general verdict, the trial court enters judgment on the verdict. n7

Under Rule 49(b), special interrogatories are directed to selected issues of fact and the answers should support, rather than take the place of, the general verdict. The Rule 49(b) verdict has been described as a middle course between the simple general verdict and the Rule 49(a) special verdict because it "focuses the jury's attention on the controlling points at issue, and the interrogatory answers provide a check on the propriety of the general verdict." n8

The decision to use special verdicts under Rule 49(a) or special interrogatories under Rule 49(b) is within the discretion of the trial court judge. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral

OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Jones v. Miles, 656 F.2d 103, 106 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Johnson v. ABLT Trucking Co., 412 F.3d 1138, 1142 (10th Cir. 2005) ; see also Quaker City Gear Works, Inc. v. Skil Corp., 747 F.2d 1446, 1453 (Fed. Cir. 1984) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lavoie v. Pacific Press & Shear Co., 975 F.2d 48, 53 (2d Cir. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lavoie v. Pacific Press & Shear Co., 975 F.2d 48, 53 (2d Cir. 1992) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Allen Organ Co. v. Kimball Int'l, Inc., 839 F.2d 1556, 1561-1562 (Fed. Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Micrel, Inc. v. TRW, Inc., 486 F.3d 866, 882 (6th Cir. 2007) .

60 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
A. Understanding the Function of Rule 49

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.03

§ 40.03 Evaluating the Effect of Inconsistencies in the Jury's Special Verdicts

The most important distinction between Rule 49(a) and Rule 49(b) is in the effect of inconsistencies in the jury's special verdicts. Rule 49(a) contains no provision for this situation, while Rule 49(b) provides that "[w]hen the answers [to interrogatories] are inconsistent with each other and one or more is likewise inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment shall not be entered, but the court shall return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or shall order a new trial." n1 When special interrogatories are inconsistent with the general verdict, objection must be made before the jury is discharged. Rule 49(b) expressly recognizes that judgments should not be entered in those circumstances and "the court should return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or shall order a new trial." n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
A. Understanding the Function of Rule 49

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 40.04 through 40.09

[Reserved]

§§ 40.04[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.10

§ 40.10 Using Special Verdicts to Avoid Confusion and Appellate Uncertainty

The Rule 49(a) special verdict was designed to avoid confusion, appellate uncertainty, n1 and the need for additional proceedings by identifying the bases upon which the jury rendered its verdict. n2 Thus, special verdicts promote judicial efficiency by reducing the likelihood of new trials. n3 Special verdicts are especially well-suited to cases involving multiple, alternative theories of recovery because such verdicts eliminate the uncertainty that can rise with a general verdict as to whether the verdict was based wholly on an improper theory requiring a retrial of the case. n4

Additionally, special verdicts are useful in cases where the law is uncertain or in its early stages of development. n5 For example, trial courts have found that special verdicts are particularly suited to patent cases by reducing the number of retrials, n6 and by effectuating Congressional policy expressed in the patent law. n7 Indeed, the Seventh Circuit has specifically instructed its trial courts to utilize special verdicts in patent cases. n8 As a result, the subsequent failure of a trial court to use the special verdict in a patent case was held to be reversible error. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewReversible Errors

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Ware v. Reed, 709 F.2d 345, 355 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See McGuire v. Russell Miller, Inc., 1 F.3d 1306, 1310 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Mueller v. Hubbard Milling Co., 573 F.2d 1029, 1038-1039 (8th Cir. 1978) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See American Hoist & Derrick Co. v. Sowa & Sons, Inc., 725 F.2d 1350, 1361 (Fed Cir. 1984) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Structural Rubber Prods. Co. v. Park Rubber Co., 749 F.2d 707, 724 (Fed. Cir. 1984) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Dual Mfg. & Eng'g, Inc. v. Burris Indus., Inc., 619 F.2d 660, 667 (7th Cir. 1980) (en banc, citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Roberts v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 723 F.2d 1324, 1342 (7th Cir. 1983) .

63 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.11

§ 40.11 Using Special Verdicts to Focus Jury's Attention to Material Questions of Fact

One of the chief attributes of the special verdict is its ability to focus the jury's attention by identifying the issues in complex cases. n1

Further, special verdict questions can organize the issues and evidence in complex cases and can focus the jury's attention on specific issues in order to promote orderly decision making. n2 Finally, Rule 49(a) has the effect of simplifying the court's jury instructions. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Ware v. Reed, 709 F.2d 345, 355 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See SCM Corp. v. Xerox Corp., 463 F.Supp. 983, 988 (D. Conn. 1978) , remanded, 599 F.2d 32 (2d Cir. Conn. 1979) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Structural Rubber Prods., Co. v. Park Rubber, Co., 749 F.2d 707, 723-724 (Fed. Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.12

§ 40.12 Utilizing Special Verdict to Limit Potential Issues for Retrial

Another important advantage of the special verdict becomes evident in situations where a verdict contains one or more errors or inconsistencies. In such a case, the trial judge may grant a retrial on a limited issue while the rest of the verdict may be saved. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Barton's Disposal Servs., Inc. v. Tiger Corp., 886 F.2d 1430, 1434 (5th Cir. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.13

§ 40.13 Rule 49 Utilized At Sole Discretion of Trial Judge

Rule 49 places the decision to use or not use a special verdict within the court's discretion. n1 No party has a right to the use of a special verdict. n2 Furthermore, a party may not raise for the first time on appeal the failure of a trial judge to employ a special verdict. n3

The wide discretion accorded to the trial judge extends to the nature, form, and scope of the issues, n4 as well as the construction and utilization of verdict forms. n5 As a consequence of the broad latitude accorded the trial court, the scope of appellate review is correspondingly narrow.

A number of courts have recommended that a special verdict be used in complex litigation, particularly in cases involving multiple parties or alternative theories of liability. n

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fidelity & Guaranty Ins. Underwriters Inc. v. Jasam Realty Corp., 540 F.3d 133, 139 (2d Cir. 2008) ; see also Chlopek v. Fed. Ins. Co., 499 F.3d 692, 701 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Floyd v. Laws, 929 F.2d 1390, 1395 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Great Coastal Express, Inc. v. International Bhd. of Teamsters, 511 F.2d 839, 845 (4th Cir. 1975) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bowers v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 800 F.2d 474, 476 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Putnam Res. v. Pateman, 958 F.2d 448, 456 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote . See Huff v. Sheahan, 493 F.3d 893, 904 n.14 (7th Cir. 2007) ; see also King v. Ford Motor Co.,

597 F.2d 436, 439 n.2 (5th Cir. 1979) .

66 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.14

§ 40.14 Formulation of Questions Not Prescribed by Rule 49(a)

Rule 49(a) provides little direction as to the formulation of special verdict questions. Similarly, there is no prescription for the form of the jury's verdict. n1 The rule specifies only that questions shall be "susceptible of a categorical or other brief answer," or that the court may submit "written forms of the special findings that might properly be made under the pleadings and evidence" or that the court may use "any other method that the court considers appropriate." n2 However, the questions asked of the jury must be sufficient to elicit answers which will establish the factual issues essential to support the judgment. n3 Additionally, the questions together with the court's instructions must "fairly present the issues to the jury." n4

When submitting a special verdict, the court must give to the jury the instructions and explanations necessary to enable the jury to make its findings on each submitted issue. n5 The court's instructions must be sufficient to allow the jury to respond intelligently to the interrogatories. n6 Questions submitted to the jury should be clear and unambiguous. n7 Judgments entered on answers to interrogatories which mislead or confuse the jury, n8 or which inaccurately frame the issues to be resolved by the jury are reversible. n9 Each question submitted to the jury should be limited to a single issue; n10 However, a single question may combine elements of one claim, provided that "the question is fair and does not combine two issues disjunctively." n11

Because Rule 49(a) expressly authorizes the court to use such methods of submitting issues as it deems most appropriate, district courts may "mix and match" types of verdicts. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Putnam Res. v. Pateman, 958 F.2d 448, 457 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Kornicki v. Calmar S.S. Corp., 460 F.2d 1134, 1139 (3d Cir. 1972) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Miley v. Oppenheimer & Co., 637 F.2d 318, 334 (5th Cir. 1981) (Citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a)(2); see also Santos v. Posadas de Puerto Rico Assocs., Inc., 452 F.3d 59, 65 (1st Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fidelity & Guaranty Ins. Underwriters Inc. v. Jasam Realty Corp., 540 F.3d 133, 139 (2d Cir. 2008) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Kinnel v. Mid-Atlantic Mausoleums, Inc., 850 F.2d 958, 961 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Petes v. Hayes, 664 F.2d 523, 525 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Romano v. Howarth, 998 F.2d 101, 106 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Dobbs v. Gulf Oil Co., 759 F.2d 1213, 1216 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See United States v. Pforzheimer, 826 F.2d 200, 204 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Putnam Res. v. Pateman, 958 F.2d 448, 456 (1st Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.15

§ 40.15 Appealing the Use of Special Verdicts

The trial court has broad discretion in the formulation and utilization of Rule 49(a) special verdicts. As a consequence, a reviewing court's inquiry is limited to whether the form of the interrogatories is an abuse of discretion. n1 Imposing an element of proof not required by law in a special verdict question is an example of such an abuse of discretion. n2

Once the court opts to use a Rule 49(a) special verdict, it must submit "all material issues raised by the pleadings and evidence." n3 Failure to submit to the jury special verdict interrogatories on all material issues in the case has been held to be an abuse of discretion. n4

However, Rule 49(a) does not require the submission of a question on every issue presented in a case. n5 Thus, it is not error to refuse to submit a special interrogatory where the issue is adequately covered by other questions or instructions. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of Discretion

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Cutlass Productions, Inc. v. Bregman, 682 F.2d 323, 325 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Deadwyler v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 884 F.2d 779, 782 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bowers v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 800 F.2d 474, 478 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Cutlass Prods., Inc. v. Bregman, 682 F.2d 323, 326 (2d Cir. 1982) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); see also §§ 40.18.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints v. United States Gypsum Co., 882 F.2d 335, 338 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Wheeler v. John Deere Co., 935 F.2d 1090, 1102 (10th Cir. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.16

§ 40.16 Submitting Questions to the Jury

Rule 49(a) authorizes the judge to submit written questions together with instructions to the jury in order for it to make findings upon each issue. n1 Answers to these questions must be consistent with each other in order to form the basis of a sound judgment. n2

There are two time frames within which questions may be submitted to a jury:

- When the jury receives the case for its deliberations
- After deliberations but before the jury is discharged

Rule 49(a) is silent as to the procedure to be followed in the event that the jury makes inconsistent findings. However, it is well established that trial courts are required to attempt to reconcile apparent inconsistencies in the special verdict if at all possible. n3

When a special verdict presents irresolvable inconsistencies or ambiguities which the judge has been unable to harmonize, the jury may be consulted to assist the court in reconciling the interrogatory answers. Rule 49(a) is silent as to whether it is appropriate to resubmit the questions which have yielded inconsistent answers for further deliberations by the jury before it is discharged or whether it is permissible to submit supplemental interrogatories to clarify an ambiguous result.

Resubmission presents several advantages. First, the submission of inconsistent verdicts to the jury preserves the jury's traditional role as fact-finder. In addition, to the extent the jury resolves the conflicting responses to the interrogatories, resubmission promotes the efficient and fair resolution of inconsistent specialverdicts and is preferable to the costly alternative of another round of trial. n4 Finally, by removing an uncertainty to the jury's findings, resubmission solidifies any judgment entered on the special verdict. n5

Resubmission has been upheld in the First, n6 Fourth, n7 Fifth, n8 Eighth, n9 and Ninth Circuit Courts of Appeals. n10

To avoid the impression that the court is making an improper suggestion as to the outcome of a case by resubmitting it to the jury, the judge may explain that no inference should be drawn as to the ultimate decision reached by the jury. n11

In the absence of improper influence or coercion, allowing the jury to reconsider its inconsistent answers is the preferred course. n12

In addition to the court's discretion in resubmitting special verdict interrogatories to the jury, the court also may submit additional or supplemental questions to aid the jury in reconciling inconsistencies or ambiguities. These questions are submitted to the jury after the original questions have been answered. The submission of supplemental interrogatories has been upheld in the First n13 and Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. n14

Another situation in which questions may be submitted after the jury has deliberated occurs when the jury is deadlocked. n15 However, it is impermissible to submit interrogatories to a jury that has reached a consistent verdict, n16 because there is no reason to ask the question a second time or to raise doubts about the jury's reasoning. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Karl v. Burlington N. R. Co., 880 F.2d 68, 72 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Auwood v. Harry Brandt Booking Office, Inc., 850 F.2d 884, 890 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Gallick v. B & O R.R., 372 U.S. 108, 119, 83 S. Ct. 659, 9 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1963) ; see also California v. Altus Finance, S.A., 540 F.3d 992, 1004 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Santiago-Negron v. Castro-Davila, 865 F.2d 431, 444 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Richard v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 853 F.2d 1258, 1260-1261 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Poduska v. Ward, 895 F.2d 854, 857 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Taylor v. Home Ins. Co., 777 F.2d 849, 858-859 (4th Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Richard v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 853 F.2d 1258, 1260-1261 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Karl v. Burlington N.R. Co., 880 F.2d 68, 72 (8th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See California v. Altus Finance, S.A., 540 F.3d 992, 1004 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Nance v. Gulf Oil Corp., 817 F.2d 1176, 1179 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Santiago-Negron v. Castro-Davila, 865 F.2d 431, 444 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Skillin v. Kimball, 643 F.2d 19, 19-20 (1st Cir. 1981) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Alverez v. J. Ray McDermott & Co., 674 F.2d 1037, 1040-1041 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Thorpe v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., 984 F.2d 541, 544-545 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See McCollum v. Stahl, 579 F.2d 869, 871 (4th Cir. 1978) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Binder v. Long Island Lighting Co., 57 F.3d 193, 199 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.17

§ 40.17 Court May Insert Finding of Omitted Issue of Material Fact to Complete Jury Verdict

Under Rule 49(a), a court may supply an omitted finding that would complete the jury's verdict. n1 This is so even if the jury did not answer specific interrogatories on the issue. n2 In the absence of a jury verdict, however, a court may not determine the ultimate liability of a party. n3

Moreover, courts have recognized that partially completed special verdict forms are sufficient, provided that the answered questions support the verdict and the unanswered questions, if answered in favor of the nonprevailing party, would not render the judgment erroneous. n4 If a jury fails to answer all the questions submitted in a special verdict, the verdict may be accepted for those issues that are resolved. n5 The court's legal rulings and the jury's factual findings may be combined to complete the jury's verdict. n6

When a party fails to request that an issue be submitted and if the court fails to make an express finding, Rule 49(a) permits a judgment by implying findings necessary to support it. n7 On the other hand, if the court does make a finding contrary to the jury's verdict, a party is not entitled to the presumption that a finding was made in its favor on issues omitted from the special verdict form. n8

Although a district court may make its own findings as to issues not submitted to the jury, Rule 49(a) does not authorize the court to reform a jury's decisions on issues submitted to the jury, nor does it permit a court to make findings contrary to the jury verdict. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Anderson v. Cryovac, Inc., 862 F.2d 910, 915-916 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Watkins v. Fibreboard Corp., 994 F.2d 253, 257-258 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Neely v. Club Med Management Servs., Inc., 63 F.3d 166, 202-203 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bristol Steel & Iron Works v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 41 F.3d 182, 190 (4th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Quaker City Gear Works v. Skil Corp., 747 F.2d 1446, 1453 (Fed. Cir. 1984) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Simms v. Village of Albion, 115 F.3d 1098, 1105-1106 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Eastern Mt. Platform Tennis v. Sherwin-Williams Co., 40 F.3d 492, 501 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Roberts v. Karimi, 251 F.3d 404, 407-408 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gaia Techs., Inc. v. Recycled Prods. Corp., 175 F.3d 365, 370-371 (5th Cir. 1999) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.18

§ 40.18 Failing to Object to Omission in Interrogatories Constitutes Waiver of Jury Trial as to That Issue

Under Rule 49(a), the court is required to give to the jury such explanation and instruction concerning the matters at issue as may be necessary to enable the jury to make findings on each issue. If in so doing the court omits any issue of fact raised by the pleadings or by the evidence, each party waives the right to a trial by jury of the omitted issue unless the party demands its submission to the jury before the jury retires. n1

Case law also provides that a failure to object to the omission of a material issue of fact from a Rule 49(a) verdict before a jury retires constitutes a waiver of jury trial as to that issue. n2 In making such an objection, a party must use methods which are sufficient to inform the court of issues which are missing in the special interrogatories. n3 The waiver rule does not apply in situations where the omitted issue was not raised by the pleadings or the evidence. n4

A party subject to waiver should keep in mind that the waiver of a jury determination on an issue does not preclude determination of the issue by the court. Rule 49(a) provides that the court may enter its own finding on an issue omitted from the jury. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 49(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Putnam Res. v. Pateman, 958 F.2d 448, 457 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fischer v. Dallas Federal Sav. & Loan Asso., 835 F.2d 567, 569 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Union Planters Nat'l Bank v. Commercial Credit Business Loans, Inc., 651 F.2d 1174, 1188 (6th Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bristol Tech., Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., 114 F. Supp. 2d 59, 81 (D. Conn. 2000) .

71 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.19

§ 40.19 Objecting to Form of Special Interrogatories at Trial to Preserve Issue for Appellate Review

A party must object to the form of the special interrogatories in the trial court in order to preserve this issue on appeal. n1

This principle also applies to the instructions or explanation that the court may have provided to the jury along with the interrogatories. Under Rule 51 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, no party may assign as error the giving or the failure to give an instruction unless that party objects to the instruction before the jury retires to consider its verdict, stating distinctly the matter objected to and the grounds for the objection. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Neely v. Club Med Management Servs., 63 F.3d 166, 200 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 51.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.20

§ 40.20 Reconciling Inconsistent Responses to Special Verdict Questions

A trial court must render a judgment that makes the jury's answers consistent if such a construction is possible. n1 Although Rule 49(a) does not explicitly provide for resubmission to the jury in case of an inconsistency, the Ninth Circuit has held that, because the rule does not prohibit it, special verdicts are subject to resubmission if the jury has not yet been excused. n2

The limits of a district court's discretion to harmonize the jury's findings are not clearly delineated. n3

A case must be reversed and remanded for a new trial if, after review of the responses to the special verdict questions and the court's attempt to reconcile apparently inconsistent or ambiguous responses, there is no way to view the case in which the special verdict can be seen as supporting the judgment. This principle also seems to be consistent with efficient judicial management. n4

There is conflict among the circuits as to whether a party must object to perceived inconsistencies in the jury's verdict before the jury is discharged. Those circuits that hold there is no waiver of the right to appeal on the basis that the verdict is irreconcilably inconsistent in the absence of an objection in the trial court are the Third, n5 Fourth, n6 Fifth, n7 and Ninth Circuits. n8 Those courts use as a basis for their decision the lack of any provision in Rule 49(a) requiring the lodging of an objection before the jury is discharged. The Second Circuit, while receptive to the nonwaiver principle, n9 favors a case-by-case application of waiver principles. n10

The First, n11 Tenth, n12 and Eleventh n13 Circuits require that an objection be made in the trial court in order to preserve the issue for appeal. One of the primary justifications for this view is to prevent litigants from using perceived inconsistencies as a strategy to obtain a new trial. n14 This view also seems to be consistent with efficient judicial management. Providing notice to the trial court gives the district judge the opportunity to resubmit questions to the jury before it has been discharged.

Litigants should be afforded a meaningful opportunity to review the verdict answers to determine whether there are any inconsistencies. The courts of appeal disagree as to the amount of prior notice counsel should be given regarding the special interrogatories and instructions that will be submitted to the jury. The Sixth Circuit requires only that the trial judge give counsel the "substance," not the exact wording, of the questions, n15 while the Second Circuit determined that the trial court has discretion whether to show the text of the special verdict before submitting it to the jury. n16 The notice requirement has been adopted by analogy to the notice requirement of Rule 51. n17

In attempting to reconcile inconsistent verdicts, the reviewing court must consider the court's instructions as well as the interrogatories themselves. n18 Indeed, the appellate court may review the entire record in order to ascertain whether the reconciliation of apparently inconsistent verdicts by the trial court represents a fair and reasonable view of the case. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Gallick v. B & O R.R., 372 U.S. 108, 119, 83 S. Ct. 659, 9 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1963) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Duk v. MGM Grand Hotel, Inc., 320 F.3d 1052, 1056-1057 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See McGuire v. Russell Miller, Inc., 1 F.3d 1306, 1311-1312 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Riley v. K Mart Corp., 864 F.2d 1049, 1054-1055 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Simmons v. Philadelphia, 947 F.2d 1042, 1057 (3d Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ladnier v. Murray, 769 F.2d 195, 198, n.3 (4th Cir. 1985) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Alverez v. J. Ray McDermott & Co., 674 F.2d 1037, 1040 (5th Cir.1982) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Pierce v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co., 823 F.2d 1366, 1370 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Auwood v. Harry Brandt Booking Office, Inc., 850 F.2d 884, 890-891 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Denny v. Ford Motor Co., 42 F.3d 106, 111 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Andrade v. Jamestown Hous. Auth., 82 F.3d 1179, 1189 (1st Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Bell v. Mickelsen, 710 F.2d 611, 616 (10th Cir. 1983) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Golub v. J.W. Gant & Associates, 863 F.2d 1516, 1520, & n.4 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See McIsaac v. Didriksen Fishing Corp., 809 F.2d 129, 134 (1st Cir. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Sakamoto v. N.A.B. Trucking Co., 717 F.2d 1000, 1006 (6th Cir. 1983) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Cutlass Prods., Inc. v. Bregman, 682 F.2d 323, 330 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Fed R. Civ. P. 51.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Gallick v. B & O R.R., 372 U.S. 108, 118-122, 83 S. Ct. 659 (1963) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Royal Cup, Inc. v. Jenkins Coffee Service, Inc., 898 F.2d 1514, 1519 (11th Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.21

§ 40.21 Rule 49(a) Findings on Factual Issues Omitted From Special Interrogatories Reviewable Under Clearly Erroneous Standard

The court's finding on a factual issue omitted from the special interrogatories is reviewable under the clearly erroneous standard of Rule 52(a). n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Therrell v. Georgia Marble Holdings Corp., 960 F.2d 1555, 1563 (11th Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
B. Understanding Special Verdicts

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 40.22 through 40.29

[Reserved]

§§ 40.22[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.30

§ 40.30 Submitting Special Interrogatories to Jury Concerning Selected Issues of Fact

Rule 49(b) provides the mechanism by which the court submits special interrogatories to a jury concerning selected issues of fact. The jury then answers those questions while also reaching a general verdict. n1 Because a Rule 49(b) verdict combines aspects of both the general verdict and special interrogatories, Rule 49(b) has been described as providing a "middle ground" between the general and the special verdict. n2

A trial court has broad discretion in the formulation of jury interrogatories, including the authority to combine the issues of liability and affirmative defenses into a single interrogatory, as long as the verdict form does not misstate the law, contain inconsistencies, or otherwise mislead or confuse the jury. n3

A Rule 49(b) verdict can be particularly useful in complex cases involving numerous theories of recovery. n4 Federal law pertaining to the submission of special interrogatories to a jury is controlling in diversity actions. n5 However, state law governs the determination of whether a verdict is inconsistent. n6

The decision to use interrogatories together with a general verdict should be made before the case is submitted to the jury. n7 Counsel may request the submission of special interrogatories, but the court has broad discretion to grant or deny such a request. However, the court should advise counsel when Rule 49(b) will be used, and the court should give counsel an opportunity to review the questions. n8 The pretrial conference is often the appropriate time to raise the potential use of Rule 49(b) interrogations.

Judicial economy is served through the use of interrogatories because the necessity of retrials fades when the answers to interrogatories illuminate the jury'sanalysis. n9

Special interrogatories are useful to "test" the jury's verdict n10 by providing acheck on the application of the law to the facts. n11 Thus, the use of Rule 49(b) interrogatories is strongly preferred as a mechanism to guide a jury, thereby increasing the reliability of its verdict, and facilitating appellate review. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral

VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See EEOC v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 406 F. Supp. 2d 645, 652 (E.D. La. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Royal Typewriter Co., Div. of Litton Business Systems, Inc. v. Xerographic Supplies Corp., 719 F.2d 1092, 1098-1099 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bartak v. Bell-Galyart & Wells, Inc., 629 F.2d 523, 531 (8th Cir. 1980) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Conte v. General Housewares Corp., 215 F.3d 628, 639 (6th Cir. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Austin-Westshore Constr. Co., Inc. v. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 934 F.2d 1217, 1220 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Brown v. Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., 623 F.2d 450, 455 (6th Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Allen Organ Co. v. Kimball Int'l, Inc., 839 F.2d 1556, 1562 (Fed. Cir. 1988) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Railroad Dynamics, Inc. v. A. Stucki Co., 727 F.2d 1506, 1515-1516 (Fed. Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.31

§ 40.31 Identifying Whether Verdicts Represent Special Verdict or General Verdict With Answers to Interrogatories

Appellate courts are often faced with the difficulty of identifying whether a verdict represents a Rule 49(a) special verdict or a Rule 49(b) general verdict with answers to interrogatories. n1 The label given to a verdict is not necessarily dispositive. Instead, courts examine the characteristics of the verdict, such as the written questions, the form, and the issue sought to be resolved. n2

Also, a court that is using Rule 49(b) interrogatories will instruct the jury on the law. n3 Legal instructions are not necessary in Rule 49(a) special verdicts where the jury's role is limited to fact-finding n4 because the court applies the law. n5 Similarly, a Rule 49(b) submission always should be accompanied by a general verdict. n6

If a party is uncertain whether a case is being submitted under Rule 49(a) or (b), the party should inquire of the court; otherwise objections may be inadvertently waived.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Bills v. Aseltine, 52 F.3d 596, 604-605 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520-1522 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lavoie v. Pacific Press, 975 F.2d 48, 53 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1521 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bills v. Aseltine, 52 F.3d 596, 605 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lavoie v. Pacific Press & Shear Co., Div. of Canron Corp., 975 F.2d 48, 53 (2d Cir. 1992) .

77 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.32

§ 40.32 Submitting Interrogatories is Discretionary

Rule 49(b) provides that the decision to submit special interrogatories in connection with a general verdict is a discretionary act within the power of the trial court. n1 Matters pertaining to the form of the interrogatories, n2. including determinations as to the number, n3 and wording n4 of the interrogatories are also within the discretion of the court and ordinarily will not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Portage II v. Bryant Petroleum Corp., 899 F.2d 1514, 1520 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bills v. Aseltine, 52 F.3d 596, 605 (6th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Aetna Cas. Sur. Co. v. P & B Autobody, 43 F.3d 1546, 1555 (1st Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Piper v. Goodwin, 20 F.3d 216, 221 (6th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Hammerquist v. Clarke's Sheet Metal, Inc., 658 F.2d 1319, 1322 (9th Cir. 1981) .

78 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.33

§ 40.33 Submitting Additional Interrogatories for Clarification Purposes

Appellate courts have upheld the submission of additional interrogatories to seek clarification from the jury as to a particular aspect of the verdict. n1 However, special interrogatories may not be submitted to a jury after it has reached a clear and unambiguous verdict. n2 To do so invites inconsistency, as the jury may give different answers to post-verdict questions than it did originally. Post-verdict interrogatories may also imply that the jury's verdict is unjustified. n3 In addition, nothing in the text of Rule 49(b) justifies a court's submission of special questions after a jury asked to render a general verdict returns such a verdict.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See McLaughlin v. Fellows Gear Shaper Co., 786 F.2d 592, 596 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Jacobs Mfg. Co. v. Sam Brown Co., 19 F.3d 1259, 1267 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Jacobs Mfg. Co. v. Sam Brown Co., 19 F.3d 1259, 1267 (8th Cir. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.34

§ 40.34 Failing to Object to Interrogatories Constitutes Waiver on Appeal

Objection to the form or content of special interrogatories must be made before the jury is discharged. Otherwise, the objections may be considered waived in a subsequent appeal. n1

Similarly, timely objections must be made to the court's instructions or else they also may be waived. n2 This rule protects integrity of the jury. It also advances the overall efficiency of the judicial system by providing an opportunity to cure any defect in the verdict procedure.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Stancill v. McKenzie Tank Lines, Inc., 497 F.2d 529, 535 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 51.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.35

§ 40.35 Raising Post-Verdict Objections

The last sentence of Rule 49(b) provides that, "when the answers are inconsistent with each other and one or more is likewise inconsistent with the general verdict, judgment shall not be entered, but the court shall return the jury for further consideration of its answers and verdict or shall order a new trial." n1 As with other objections to the form and content of interrogatories, it is better practice to raise objections to inconsistencies prior to discharge of the jury or risk waiving them. n2

The circuits are not uniform as to the effect of a failure to object toinconsistencies, but a majority of courts of appeals that have considered the issue have held there is a waiver of objections not timely made. The First, n3 Fourth, n4 Fifth, n5 Tenth, n6 and Eleventh n7 Circuits have invoked the waiver doctrine with respect to objections involving inconsistencies in interrogatory answers by failing to raise them before the discharge of the jury. It is important to note that in nearly all of the cases where waiver has been invoked, the trial court had given counsel an opportunity to object to the jury's verdict before the jury was discharged and counsel raised no objection until appeal.

The waiver doctrine promotes the fair and expeditious correction of error while avoiding the need to present evidence to a new jury. n8 In addition, waiver promotes court efficiency in the management of its caseload. n9

However, other circuits have taken a different approach to the inconsistency issue. The Ninth Circuit has taken the opposite view and has squarely held that the failure to object to an inconsistency in answers to interrogatories does not result in a waiver to argue that the court erred in entering judgment on the general verdict. n10 As a result, a party may challenge the consistency of a verdict for the first time on a post-trial motion. n11

The Ninth Circuit distinguished waiver cases on the basis that in nearly all of them, counsel had been given an opportunity to object to inconsistencies before the jury's discharge but that counsel had declined to do so. Thus, the Ninth Circuit reasoned, waiver would be an appropriate result in those instances where counsel had affirmatively misled the judge in order to get the jury dismissed prior to objecting to the inconsistency. n12

The Second Circuit has indicated that while a party's failure to object "carries some weight in our analysis on appeal" it was incumbent on the trial judge to resolve inconsistencies in special interrogatory answers. n13

The answers to interrogatories and the general verdict must be viewed in light of the instructions given to the jury to determine whether there are any inconsistencies. n14 In one case, for example, in which the instructions identified two alternative theories of liability from which a jury could choose, the verdicts were not considered inconsistent, eliminating the need for an objection. n15

Objections to errors in instructions must also be timely raised, or else waived. n16 Rule 51 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides for waiver of such objections unless there is plain error in the sense that a miscarriage of justice would result. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Babcock v. General Motors Corp., 299 F.3d 60, 63-64 (1st Cir. 2002) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Trull v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 320 F.3d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 2002) , cert. denied, 540 U.S. 938 (2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See White v. Celotex Corp., 878 F.2d 144, 146 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Stancill v. McKenzie Tank Lines, Ltd., 497 F.2d 529, 534-535 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Diamond Shamrock Corp. v. Zinke & Trumbo, Ltd., 791 F.2d 1416, 1422-1423 (10th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Itel Capital Corp. v. Cups Coal Co., 707 F.2d 1253, 1261 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See White v. Celotex Corp., 878 F.2d 144, 146 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Strauss v. Stratojac Corp., 810 F.2d 679, 683 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Grosvenor Properties, Ltd. v. Southmark Corp., 896 F.2d 1149, 1151 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Los Angeles Nut House v. Holiday Hardware Corp., 825 F.2d 1351, 1354 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Los Angeles Nut House v. Holiday Hardware Corp., 825 F.2d 1351, 1354-1355 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Schaafsma v. Morin Vermont Corp., 802 F.2d 629, 634 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Grosvenor Properties, Ltd. v. Southmark Corp., 896 F.2d 1149, 1151-1152 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Grosvenor Properties, Ltd. v. Southmark Corp., 896 F.2d 1149, 1151-1152 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Abou-Khadra v. Mahshie, 4 F.3d 1071, 1078-1079 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Moe v. Avions Marcel Dassault-Breguet Aviation, 727 F.2d 917, 924 (10th Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 40 Verdicts and Jury Deliberations
C. Understanding General Verdicts with Answers to Interrogatories

3-40 Federal Litigation Guide § 40.36

§ 40.36 Evaluating the Effect of Inconsistencies Between Interrogatory Answers and General Verdict

[1] Entering Judgment in Accordance With Answers Notwithstanding Verdict, Seeking Further Jury Deliberations, or Ordering New Trial

Where the general verdict and the answers to interrogatories are harmonious, Rule 49(b) provides that the appropriate judgment shall be entered pursuant to Rule 58. n1 While general verdicts with special interrogatories must be consistent, no such consistency requirement is extended to multiple general verdicts. n2

In addition, in situations where answers to interrogatories are consistent with each other but inconsistent with the general verdict, the rule provides three alternatives: n3

- Judgment may be entered in accordance with the answers notwithstanding the general verdict, n4
- The court may return the jury for further deliberations n5
- A new trial may be ordered n6

However, the rule does not apply to situations in which the claimed inconsistency is between the verdict and the evidence. n7 Thus, a district court cannot be compelled to strike a general verdict and enter a verdict consistent with the factual findings. n8

A district court has a duty to reconcile and harmonize the jury's answers to interrogatories to support the judgment, if that is possible. n9 The test in reconciling inconsistencies is whether "the answers represent a logical and probable decision on the relevant issues as submitted." n10

A court may enter a judgment pursuant to Rule 49(b) only if it is not reasonably possible to resolve the apparent inconsistency presented by the verdict and the answer to the interrogatory. n11 In a civil rights action brought by a citizen against a police officer alleging that his constitutional rights were violated by the officer's use of excessive force in detaining him, the jury entered a general verdict for the citizen but awarded no damages. Plaintiff filed a post-trial motion to correct the verdict to award him damages. The district court determined that the verdict and interrogatory answers were inconsistent and denied the motion. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit held that the general verdict and interrogatory answers could be harmonized by reflecting the jury's view that while the officer violated plaintiff's civil rights that plaintiff suffered no injury as a result. Accordingly, the case was reversed and remanded with instructions to enter judgment for plaintiff and to award $1 nominal damages. n12

[2] Resubmitting Inconsistent Answers to Jury

Under Rule 49(b), the trial court has the power to permit a jury to correct mistakes in its verdict before the jury is discharged. n13 The resubmission of inconsistent answers to special interrogatories or the submission of supplemental interrogatories is expressly authorized by Rule 49(b). n14

Most courts hold that any objection concerning the interrogatories and the verdict must be raised prior to the discharge of the jury or it will be waived. n15

[3] New Trial May Be Ordered if General Verdict and Interrogatory Answers Inconsistent

The new trial is the last option offered by Rule 49(b) when there is an inconsistency between the answers to interrogatories and the general verdict. Trial courts have broad discretion in considering the award of a new trial. n16 This includes the power to refuse to accept a jury's inconsistent answers to interrogatories. n17 Vacating a verdict and ordering a new trial does not violate a party's Seventh Amendment rights where the verdict is confused and impossible to understand. n18 However, a trial court must exhaust its efforts to harmonize the interrogatory answers and the verdict before ordering a new trial. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent Verdicts

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Arthur Pew Constr. Co. v. Lipscomb, 965 F.2d 1559, 1571 (11th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Wilbur v. Correctional Services Corp., 393 F.3d 1192, 1199 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Armstrong ex rel. Armstrong v. Brookdale University Hospital & Medical Center, 425 F.3d 126, 135 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Turyna v. Martam Construction Co., 83 F.3d 178, 181-182 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Jewell v. Holzer Hosp. Foundation, Inc., 899 F.2d 1507, 1511 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Rinehart v. Wedge, 943 F.2d 1158, 1160 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See McAdam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 896 F.2d 750, 763-764 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See White v. Grinfas, 809 F.2d 1157, 1161 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Los Angeles Nut House v. Holiday Hardware Corp., 825 F.2d 1351, 1353-1354 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Wilks v. Reyes, 5 F.3d 412, 415-416 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Rowe Int., Inc. v. J-B Enterprises, Inc., 647 F.2d 830, 835 (8th Cir. 1981) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See McLaughlin v. Fellows Gear Shaper Co., 786 F.2d 592, 596 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Correia v. Fitzgerald, 354 F.3d 47, 56-57 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See MacQuarrie v. Howard Johnson Co., 877 F.2d 126, 131 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Atlantic Tubing & Rubber Co. v. International Engraving Co., 528 F.2d 1272, 1276 (1st Cir. 1976) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Cool Light Co. v. GTE Prods. Corp., 973 F.2d 31, 35-36 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Harvey v. General Motors Corp., 873 F.2d 1343, 1348 (10th Cir. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.syn

§ 41.syn Synopsis to Chapter 41: Bench Trials *

41.01 Evaluating Constitutional Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

41.02 Evaluating Rule 38 Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

41.03 Evaluating Rule 39 Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

41.04 Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur Following Jury Demand
[1] Consenting to Bench Trial Following Jury Demand
[2] Waiving Jury Trial By Conduct Following Jury Demand
[3] Failing to Object to Order Scheduling Bench Trial May Constitute Consent
[4] Moving to Strike Opponent's Jury Demand May Function as Consent
[5] Finding By Court That No Right to Jury Trial Exists
[6] Moving to Strike Jury Demands

41.05 Considering Combined Trials of Jury and Nonjury Issues

41.06 Jury's Determinations of Common Facts Are Binding

§§ 41.07 through 41.09 [Reserved]

41.10 Persuading the Court Throughout the Litigation

41.11 Addressing Procedural and Substantive Issues at Pretrial Conferences

41.12 Preparing Trial Briefs for Bench Trials

41.13 Making Opening Statements in Bench Trials

41.14 Maintaining Flexibility as Bench Trial Unfolds

41.15 Considering Order of Proof in Bench Trials

41.16 Conducting Direct Examination in Bench Trials

41.17 Conducting Cross-Examination in Bench Trials

41.18 Evaluating Evidentiary Issues in Bench Trials

41.19 Using Deposition Transcripts in Bench Trials

41.20 Using Demonstrative Exhibits in Bench Trials

41.21 Presenting Closing Arguments at Bench Trials

§§ 41.22 through 41.29 [Reserved]

41.30 Impaneling Advisory Jury on Motion or Sua Sponte

41.31 Impaneling Advisory Jury Does Not Satisfy Seventh Amendment

41.32 Impaneling Advisory Jury Is Discretionary

41.33 Understanding the Effect of Verdict of Advisory Jury

41.34 Accepting or Rejecting Advisory Verdict

41.35 Challenging Findings, Not Advisory Verdict

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter examines issues pertaining to bench trials. The chapter explains bench trials that result because no jury was demanded, because the parties were never entitled to a jury trial, or because the parties stipulated to a bench trial.

The chapter also addresses tactics and techniques that are effective when a case is tried by a judge without a jury. In general, the art of persuasion remains the same before a judge or a jury. Therefore, the overall approach to the trial of a nonjury case should be basically the same as the approach to the trial of a jury case. Although the fundamental strategy and approach to bench trials may the same as that for jury trials, the evidence may be streamlined for some bench trials, as discussed in the chapter.

Finally, the chapter analyzes advisory juries and includes a discussion of when advisory juries may be used by the court.

For expanded coverage of bench trials, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 39, Trial By Jury or By the Court .

84 of 109 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.01

41.01 Evaluating Constitutional Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

The Seventh Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees the right to a jury trial for "suits at common law" where the value in controversy exceeds twenty dollars. The amendment is construed to embrace all suits which are not of equity or admiralty jurisdiction. n1 Accordingly, parties in an action seeking relief in equity do not have a right to a jury trial, and trials in those cases will typically be bench trials.

When a party brings both legal and equitable claims in the same action, the Seventh Amendment right to jury trial on the legal claims must be preserved by trying those claims first, or at least simultaneously with equitable claims, and the jury's findings on any common questions of fact must be applied when the court decides the equitable claims. n2

The Seventh Amendment does not mandate jury trials but instead preserves an entitlement to a jury trial for parties in particular cases. As such, the right to a jury trial may be waived. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Teamsters v. Terry, 494 U.S. 558, 564, 110 S. Ct. 1339, 108 L. Ed. 2d 519 (1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Colorado Visionary Academy v. Medtronic, Inc., 397 F.3d 867, 875 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bellmore v. Mobil Oil Corp., 783 F.2d 300, 306 (2d Cir. 1986) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.02

41.02 Evaluating Rule 38 Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

Rule 38(a) preserves the right to a jury trial in those cases in which the right is protected by the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution, as well as in those cases that allow for a jury under federal statute. n1

Rule 38(b) provides that any party may demand a jury trial on any issue to which the right to a jury trial exists. The demand must be in writing, and must be served on the other parties within 14 days after service of the last pleading addressing the issue. n2 Failure to timely serve and file a Rule 38 jury demand may waive any right to a trial by jury. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(d).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.03

41.03 Evaluating Rule 39 Guidelines Pertaining to Trials

When a jury trial has been demanded as provided in Rule 38, the action shall be designated upon the docket as a jury action. The trial of all issues so demanded shall be by jury, unless one of the following conditions is met: n1

- The parties or their attorneys of record, by written stipulation filed with the court or by an oral stipulation made in open court and entered in the record, consent to trial by the court sitting without a jury

- The court upon motion or of its own initiative finds that a right of trial by jury of some or all of those issues does not exist under the Constitution or statutes of the United States

Issues not demanded for trial by jury as provided in Rule 38 shall be tried by the court. However, notwithstanding the failure of a party to demand a jury in an action in which such a demand might have been properly made, the court in its discretion upon motion may order a trial by a jury of any or all issues. n2

In all actions not triable of right by a jury the court upon motion or of its own initiative may try any issue with an advisory jury or, except in actions against the United States when a statute of the United States provides for trial without a jury, the court, with the consent of both parties, may order a trial with a jury whose verdict has the same effect as if trial by jury had been a matter of right. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(c).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.04

41.04 Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur Following Jury Demand

[1] Consenting to Bench Trial Following Jury Demand

Even if a jury demand is made with respect to an issue, that issue may be tried to the court rather than a jury if all parties or their attorneys of record so consent by filing a written stipulation or by making an oral stipulation that is entered in the record. n1

Whenever the record adequately reflects the consent of the parties, even if not in the form of a stipulation, courts have permitted nonjury trials of issues that are otherwise subject to valid jury demands. n2

[2] Waiving Jury Trial By Conduct Following Jury Demand

The right to a jury trial may be waived, despite a timely filed demand and the absence of any express stipulation on the record, if the conduct of the partiesmakes it clear that they do not intend to maintain their claim to a jury trial. n3 For example, knowing participation in a bench trial without objection is sufficient to constitute a jury waiver. n4

[3] Failing to Object to Order Scheduling Bench Trial May Constitute Consent

If a timely jury demand is made, but a court makes a pretrial order under Rule 16 assigning the case for a bench trial, a waiver of the right to a jury trial may occur if there is no timely objection to the order. n5

[4] Moving to Strike Opponent's Jury Demand May Function as Consent

Moving to strike the other party's jury demand may preclude a party from objecting when that opposing party subsequently attempts to unilaterally withdraw the jury demand. In one case, for example, the defendant had strenuously opposed plaintiffs' demand for a jury, but when the plaintiffs later attempted to waive their demand, in order to secure an earlier trial date, defendant refused to consent to the waiver. The court concluded that, by virtue of its earlier opposition, defendant waived its right to object to the withdrawal of the jury demand. n6 This quasi-estoppel, using a party's prior conduct to find a waiver of the right to object to the unilateral withdrawal of a jury demand, is the functional equivalent of conduct evidencing consent to a nonjury trial.

[5] Finding By Court That No Right to Jury Trial Exists

Despite a timely demand for jury trial, the action, or particular issues in the action, will be tried by the court if the court determines that there is no right to a jury for the action or for particular issues covered by the jury demand. n7 Permitting a court to ignore a timely-filed jury demand when it rules that there is no right to a jury is proper because Rules 38 and 39 merely preserve the right to a jury trial. A Rule 38 jury demand does not create any right to a jury trial when there is no such right under the Seventh Amendment or any statute.

[6] Moving to Strike Jury Demands

Any party may move to strike the demand for a jury trial, or move to strike the action or specified issues in the action from the jury trial list or jury calendar. n8 Rule 39(a) also permits the court to strike an action from the jury trial list on its own initiative. n9

Parties have a great deal of latitude on the timing of motions to strike a jury demand. Because a court has the power to act sua sponte at any time, it follows that a court has the discretion to permit a motion to strike a jury demand at any time, even on the eve of trial. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wauhop v. Allied Humble Bank, N.A., 926 F.2d 454, 455-456 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Johnson v. Penrod Drilling Co., 469 F.2d 897, 902-903 (5th Cir. 1972) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See White v. McGinnis, 903 F.2d 699, 703 (9th Cir. 1990) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. Sewell v. Jefferson County Fiscal Court, 863 F.2d 461, 464-465 (6th Cir. 1988) ; Fields Eng'g & Equip. v. Cargill, Inc., 651 F.2d 589, 592 (8th Cir. 1981) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Reid Bros. Logging Co. v. Ketchikan Pulp Co., 699 F.2d 1292, 1304 (9th Cir. 1983) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Armco, Inc. v. Armco Burglar Alarm Co., 693 F.2d 1155, 1158 (5th Cir. 1982) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.05

41.05 Considering Combined Trials of Jury and Nonjury Issues

Because the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allow legal, equitable, and maritime claims to be joined in a single action, n1 and because the right to a jury trial under Rule 38 extends to individual issues in a case rather than to entire actions, n2 combined trials in which the legal claims are submitted to a jury while the equitable or maritime claims are submitted to the court are almost inevitable. n3 The language of Rule 39 anticipates combined actions. When there is a jury demand, the Rule provides for a case to be put on the jury docket for the trial of "all issues so demanded"; n4 and simultaneously recognizes that "issues not demanded for trial by jury" will be tried by the court. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 2; Fed. R. Civ. P. 18.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 38.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Kunkel v. Topmaster Intern., Inc., 906 F.2d 693, 696 (Fed. Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(b).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.06

41.06 Jury's Determinations of Common Facts Are Binding

Absent imperative circumstances, if jury and nonjury claims are raised in the same action, any common questions of fact must be tried the jury first. The right to a jury trial may not be impaired through prior determination of factual issues by a court. n1

In combined jury and nonjury trials, the jury's decisions on the common factual questions are binding on the court. n2 However, the court is not always bound by the jury's verdict. If the court determines that a jury determination of factual issues is"infirm" because it is so without legally sufficient evidentiary support that a judgment as a matter of law (i.e., "judgment n.o.v.") would be justified, n3 or if the court determines that there are grounds for ordering a new trial, n4 the court may make contrary factual decisions without impinging on a party's right to a jury trial. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Beacon Theatres v. Westover, 359 U.S. 500, 510, 79 S. Ct. 948, 3 L. Ed. 2d 988 (1959) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wade v. Orange County Sheriff's Office, 844 F.2d 951, 954 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Swentek v. US Air, Inc., 830 F.2d 552, 559 (4th Cir. 1987) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
A. Understanding When Bench Trials May Occur

2-41 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 41.07 through 41.09

[Reserved]

§§ 41.07[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.10

41.10 Persuading the Court Throughout the Litigation

Since the judge is the finder of both the facts and the law in bench trials, it is critical to begin persuading the judge as early in the litigation as possible. In bench trial cases, every pleading and brief, and every oral presentation, even those that relate to purely procedural matters, may present an opportunity to begin persuading the judge that a claim or defense has merit. Impressions formed or conclusions reached by the judge at the beginning of the case may be as important and as lasting as those reached at the end. Therefore, in bench trials great care must be taken in deciding what position to take on all pretrial matters.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.11

41.11 Addressing Procedural and Substantive Issues at Pretrial Conferences

Most judges will attempt to resolve procedural and substantive issues during the final pretrial conference. While some judges may believe that pretrial conferences are less important in nonjury cases, most judges will use the pretrial conference in a nonjury case to advance the judicial process as much as possible.

The trial court may seek to set evidentiary limits for trial at the time of the pretrial conference, including limiting the number of expert witnesses, warning against cumulative evidence, and establishing specific procedures for the use of deposition transcripts at trial. Additionally, the pretrial conference may be used to determine which facts the parties will stipulate to, obviating the need to present evidence on those facts.

At the final pretrial conference, the judge may also set forth guidelines for the submission of:

- Trial briefs
- Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law
- Post-trial briefs

The judge in a nonjury case may also consider bifurcating issues for trial at the time of the pretrial conference. This includes not only the possibility of separate trials on liability and damages, but also the possibility of a separate trial on any issue which might be determinative of the case. Therefore, before the pretrial conference, counsel should determine whether bifurcation of particular issues is possible or likely, whether a separate trial of any issue is in the client's interest, and, if it is not, what arguments might be advanced to avoid the bifurcation.

Finally, the judge is likely to encourage the parties to reach a settlement at thepretrial conference.

For complete coverage of pretrial conferences, see Ch. 27 , Pretrial Conference.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.12

41.12 Preparing Trial Briefs for Bench Trials

Because the trial judge will be the finder of both facts and the law, it is generally advisable to file a detailed and persuasive trial brief in all bench trials. Trial briefs in a nonjury case will usually be more comprehensive and, particularly on factual matters, more detailed than jury trial briefs.

In bench trials, a trial brief is an especially effective way to present the case in a cogent and persuasive manner before presenting evidence at trial. A well-drafted trial brief is more likely to positively influence the judge's final decision in the case than one formulated with minimal effort. Although it is possible that motions in limine and briefs in support of requested instructions can do some of the work of a trial brief, the brief plays a unique role in providing the framework for the court's legal and factual analysis of the case.

In general, a trial brief should include an introductory section which provides a factual and procedural overview of the case. Following the introduction, the trial brief will often integrate a discussion of factual and legal issues. It is often desirable to discuss the elements of the claims or defenses on an item by item basis, describing both the evidence in support of the claim or defense and the related legal issues in the same section of the brief.

While the factual summaries contained in a trial brief should be decidedly affirmative, and while the evidence supporting a particular position should almost always precede a discussion of unfavorable evidence, always forewarn the court of adverse evidence by discussing it candidly and by tendering the strongest possible rebuttal.

For complete coverage of trial briefs, see Ch. 29, Trial Briefs.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.13

41.13 Making Opening Statements in Bench Trials

The use of opening statements can be every bit as important and as effective in a trial to the court as they are in a trial to a jury. Properly presented opening statements can be used to summarize the case and arouse the judge's interest. However, the use of opening statements in bench trials is at the discretion of the court, since no rules establish the right to present opening statements.

Even if a formal opening statement is not permitted by the court, the equivalent of an opening statement may be delivered in fragments as particular issues are raised or objections are made, or as various procedural watersheds such as motions for judgment are made to the court.

Many judges will limit the opening statement, either by expressly stating what will be permitted or by setting forth specific questions at the beginning of the case. Thus, it is not uncommon for the judge to state at the beginning of the case what the judge understands the issues and contentions of the parties to be and to inquire whether the issues and contentions have been accurately stated. Alternatively, the judge may identify issues for preliminary discussion. In some cases the judge may even affirmatively identify areas of doubt with respect to a party's version of the case.

As a result, the use of opening statements in bench trials requires flexibility, and counsel for both sides must be prepared to confront a variety of situations, from a full blown exposition of all the facts at one extreme to a selective discussion of particular facts or issues at the other.

A good way to prepare for trial is to draft an opening statement early on and continually revise it as the trial date approaches. Even if the planned opening statement is never presented, the process of writing and revising it will help to manage the themes, witnesses, and complexity of the case.

Opening statements to the court are not subject to the same limitations as those made to a jury. For instance, in bench trials, it may be appropriate to discuss points of law or legal issues. Indeed, in a bench trial, discussion of legal points during opening statement may be more important than a discussion of the facts. While purely argumentative, conclusional remarks are never proper in an opening statement, an integrated discussion of the legal issues and the expected proof can produce a more complete opening statement than is possible in a jury trial. The court presumably understands the difference between facts, inferences, and mere supposition and argumentative matter--provided it is relevant and to the point--may be entirely appropriate in an opening statement to the court.

Finally, an opening statement in a bench trial should invite a dialogue with the court. The principal purpose of this dialogue will be to determine if the judge has any preconceived opinions, favorable or unfavorable, about the case and to determine whether there are any aspects of the case over which the judge is concerned or confused. Information obtained on any of these subjects, or any hint that the judge has reservations concerning an aspect of the claim or defense, is invaluable.

For complete coverage of opening statements, see Ch. 32, Opening Statements.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.14

41.14 Maintaining Flexibility as Bench Trial Unfolds

Bench trials are often more unpredictable than jury trials, and can require more flexibility in the sequencing and presentation of evidence. Often in the bench trial, there is more dialogue between the judge and attorneys, and the trial unfolds in amanner that is less choreographed than is the case with many jury trials. Moreover, because of the guidance that the lawyers receive as to the judge's understanding or concerns about the case, the trial may have a substantially different emphasis at the end than it had at the beginning.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.15

41.15 Considering Order of Proof in Bench Trials

The most effective sequence of proof in a jury trial is likely to be the most effective sequence of proof in a bench trial. Even so, counsel may not need to call as many witnesses. Cumulative evidence will generally have less effect with a judge than with a jury, and may actually have an adverse effect by exhausting the judge's patience. Thus, one expert whose credentials are excellent and whose views are cogently expressed may be enough for the judge in a situation where a second expert, perhaps with a lesser background but a more "folksy" demeanor, might be desirable with a jury.

Depending on the type of case, it may not be necessary to lay the same kind of foundation and background for the substantive elements of a case in a bench trial as it is with a jury. Indeed, it is usually a good strategy in a bench trial to give the court credit for not requiring elaborate exposition of routine facts. Both the pretrial conference and the trial briefs will have laid most of the groundwork.

Although witnesses should always be presented in logical sequence, the sequencing of witnesses in a bench trial will not be as critical as in a jury trial. Whereas a jury may be easily confused by a non-linear presentation, a judge generally will be better able to connect and relate fragments of evidence received at different points in the trial. Notwithstanding that fact, counsel should depart from a well-ordered presentation only out of necessity.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.16

41.16 Conducting Direct Examination in Bench Trials

As is the case in jury trials, it is critical to choose witnesses who will testify credibly and persuasively in bench trials. Pretrial interviews and depositions are often the best methods of determining which witnesses to present at trial, and key witnesses should be selected for the purpose of creating a complete record at trial.

The preparation of an outline of questions for direct examination is critical. Likewise, witness preparation for direct examination is critical before any trial, and should include:

- Familiarizing witnesses with the trial process
- Educating witnesses about the facts of the case
- Explaining protocol of direct examination and cross-examination
- Reviewing deposition testimony
- Discussing demeanor, attire, and speaking manner
- Explaining the significance of the testimony

During a bench trial, the personal background of witnesses can generally be quickly sketched. Witnesses should testify only to matters strictly germane to the case, and even important substantive witnesses should get quickly to the point.

Unless an attack on an expert's qualifications is expected, the expert's curriculum vitae should be offered as an exhibit without exhaustive questioning regarding the expert's qualifications. The expertise of such witnesses will normally be assumed by the court, and their credibility will be judged primarily by the substance of the testimony.

For complete coverage of direct examination, see Ch. 33, Direct Examination.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.17

41.17 Conducting Cross-Examination in Bench Trials

As one sophisticated in the analysis of evidence and evaluation of credibility, the trial judge will not be interested in points made on cross-examination which do not go to the heart of the case. Effective cross-examination serves two essential purposes:

- To elicit additional favorable facts that were not established
- To neutralize or discredit unfavorable testimony

Cross-examination also provides the opportunity to bring out facts tending to discredit the witness by showing that the witness' testimony was untrue, biased, or based on faulty memory or perception.

A party who is adverse to the party initially calling a witness may cross-examine the witness in the sequence that the court directs. Cross-examination is typically limited to: n1

- The subject matter of the witness' direct examination
- Matters affecting the credibility of the witness

However, the court may, in the exercise of discretion, permit inquiry into additional matters as if on direct examination. n2

Planning for an effective cross-examination begins well before trial. Preparation generally includes reviewing discovery responses, deposition testimony, and other related documents. These materials will often illuminate the potentially adverse testimony of key opposition witnesses, and the materials can often beused to impeach or otherwise cross-examine those witnesses. An outline of areas of inquiry for each potential adverse witness that includes potential cross-examination questions will likely be useful at trial.

For complete coverage of cross-examination, see Ch. 35, Cross-Examination.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 611(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 611(b).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.18

41.18 Evaluating Evidentiary Issues in Bench Trials

The rules of evidence are the same for jury and nonjury trials. However, the standards of admissibility applied in a bench trial may be looser than those applied in a jury trial, and a reversal based on the improper admission of evidence in a bench trial may be unlikely. This is particularly true when the trial judge is careful to address in the findings of fact any evidence which may have been improperly admitted, with an express indication that the evidence was given little or no weight.

Some judges are as disciplined in their evidentiary rulings in a bench trial as they are in a jury trial. Many judges, though more lenient, are nevertheless careful to comment on the infirmity of significant evidence admitted over serious objection and to thus reassure the aggrieved party that the evidence will not be given improper weight. This, however, does not change the essential problem faced by the attorneys offering or opposing the admission of the evidence. The attorney proffering the evidence must recognize that it is not enough to persuade the court that, because it is a bench trial, and to avoid error, the evidence should come in; the attorney must also convince the court that the evidence has substantive value. The attorney opposing the admission of the evidence must recognize that the judge will not forget the nature or details of the tendered evidence, even if it is excluded. Both attorneys must remember that, when admissibility is argued, they are in fact addressing the issues of relevance and probative weight.

Judges in bench trials will often relax the evidentiary rules for the following reasons:

- To expedite the proof
- To admit evidence of slight probative value for evaluation in the context of the entire case
- To avoid the risk of reversal where the evidentiary issue is genuinely close

Counsel should recognize these three objectives and avoid prolonged argument when one or more of them are clearly being served. That is not to say, however, that relevant objections should not be raised on the record just as they would be at a jury trial.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.19

41.19 Using Deposition Transcripts in Bench Trials

Although judges generally recognize that key evidence and admissions may be contained in deposition transcripts, some judges may grow impatient with the reading of depositions at trial. Some judges may even "prohibit" such reading entirely, stating that they will read all designated portions from depositions tendered by either party, and will give that testimony weight equal to that given to the testimony of live witnesses.

Whether depositions are to be read in open court or by the judge or the clerk in chambers, it is advisable to be very selective when designating which portion of a deposition should be read. This is a prime example of the general concept that the presentation of evidence in a bench trial should be streamlined. Therefore, if key elements of the case depend upon deposition testimony, ask the judge to read only those portions of depositions that are material to the case.

If the judge will not permit the reading of depositions in open court, counsel should orally emphasize the importance of the deposition testimony on the record. If important deposition testimony is not to be heard in open court, the briefs and other documents which are filed should strongly emphasize both the deposition testimony and the points or issues established by that testimony. Such written emphasis would certainly be appropriate for pretrial and post-trial briefs. It would also be appropriate to include references to deposition testimony in any other briefs or motions filed during the course of the trial where the deposition testimony is relevant.

Regardless of the court's attitude toward depositions, if it is necessary to mark extensive or voluminous portions of depositions, file an index or topical table of contents to the deposition identifying by subject matter and page number the topics covered.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.20

41.20 Using Demonstrative Exhibits in Bench Trials

Demonstrative exhibits should play the same role in a bench trial as in a trial to a jury. Nevertheless, some judges believe that the use of demonstrative exhibits in bench trials should be sparing. It is undoubtedly true that, because of the experience which most judges possess in evidentiary matters, demonstrative exhibits may be less necessary in some cases where they might be essential with a jury.

It is therefore important to evaluate whether demonstrative exhibits are necessary and if they are, to consider reducing the number of demonstrative exhibits offered. This can usually be done without detracting from the merits of the case or defense. It again assumes that the judge has either a greater familiarity with the technicalities of the case or that, because of broader experience, the judge can more readily assimilate complex information presented orally or contained in the trial exhibits.

In general, the use of high-quality graphics and other professionally generated demonstrative exhibits which clarify the issues and succinctly set forth a party's position will be appreciated by the court, and may have a positive impact in the outcome of the case.

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.21

41.21 Presenting Closing Arguments at Bench Trials

At the close of the evidence in a nonjury trial, the trial court will likely do one of the following:

- Hear closing arguments immediately or within a few days
- Set closing arguments for a future date
- Dispense with closing arguments entirely

In the first two events, the judge may indicate particular subjects that should be covered in the argument. In the third event, it may be understood that either post-trial briefs or proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, or both, will serve the function of closing argument.

The most significant difference between closing argument in jury and nonjury cases is that, in a jury case, except for facial expressions and body language you will have had no dialogue with the jury. By contrast, unless the trial judge in a nonjury case has conducted the trial in truly neutral terms, you should have at least some indication--and very often a clear indication--of the points which the judge believes are significant or about which he or she has particular concerns. Thus, while in a jury case counsel must be sure to cover all possible points of proof or concern, in a bench trial counsel may be very selective and specific in the points covered.

In closing argument to the court it is also possible to be much more candid and direct in addressing points which are of known concern to the court. For example, under the right circumstances, the closing argument might begin with the statement: "Your Honor, I know that there are two points in this case which are of most concern, and I will address them first."

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
B. Evaluating Bench Trial Strategies and Procedures

2-41 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 41.22 through 41.29

[Reserved]

§§ 41.22[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.30

41.30 Impaneling Advisory Jury on Motion or Sua Sponte

The court, on motion or on its own initiative, may try any issue with an advisory jury. n1 Rule 39(c) expressly authorizes an advisory jury in "an action not triable of right by a jury." n2 The court may accept or ignore an advisory jury's verdict, must make its own findings of fact and conclusions of law, and must bear the responsibility for the ultimate judgment. However, since the judge is very likely to adopt the jury's findings, a trial to an advisory jury should be conducted as though it were a trial to a jury empowered to make binding determinations. For example, the jury should be instructed as the scope and nature of the proceedings, opening statements and closing arguments should be allowed, and evidentiary rulings should be made to the same standard as during a typical jury trial.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(c).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.31

41.31 Impaneling Advisory Jury Does Not Satisfy Seventh Amendment

Use of an advisory jury does not satisfy a party's constitutional right to a jury trial. n1 If a party is entitled to a jury trial, and if a court erroneously denies a party the right to a jury trial, the presence of an advisory jury will be ignored, and the judgment will not stand on appeal. The judgment will be reversed and the case remanded for a new jury trial even in those cases in which an advisory jury was impaneled and the court accepted the advisory verdict, or a party wishes to accept the verdict of the advisory jury. n2

There are tactical differences in presenting a case to a court, as opposed to a jury, and the presence of an advisory jury usually will not alter those differences. Trial before a jury that the parties assume will have only an advisory role does not give the parties the true jury trial to which the Constitution or a statute says they are entitled. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fischer Imaging Corp. v. GE, 187 F.3d 1165, 1174 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fischer Imaging Corp. v. GE, 187 F.3d 1165, 1174 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Pradier v. Elespuru, 641 F.2d 808, 811 (9th Cir. 1981) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.32

41.32 Impaneling Advisory Jury Is Discretionary

A court's authority to impanel an advisory jury is discretionary, n1 and is not a matter of right. n2 Because the court's decision to use an advisory jury is strictly discretionary, that decision has been held to be unreviewable on appeal. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See NAACP v. Acusport Corp., 226 F. Supp. 2d 391, 397 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Delman v. Federal Prods. Corp., 251 F.2d 123, 126 (1st Cir. 1958) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cox v. Babcock & Wilcox Co., 471 F.2d 13, 14 (4th Cir. 1972) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.33

41.33 Understanding the Effect of Verdict of Advisory Jury

The function of the advisory jury is only to enlighten the court. An advisory jury does not replace the court as the trier of fact in the case. n1 The responsibility for rendering a decision as the trier of fact remains with the judge, even though an advisory jury is used. n2

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Skoldberg v. Villani, 601 F. Supp. 981, 982 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wilson v. Prasse, 463 F.2d 109, 116 (3d Cir. 1972) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.34

41.34 Accepting or Rejecting Advisory Verdict

The verdict of the advisory jury has no binding effect on the court. n1 The court may accept the advisory verdict and make findings in accordance with it, or the court may reject the advisory verdict in whole or in part. n2

Regardless of whether the court accepts or rejects the advisory verdict, Rule 52(a) requires the court, as the true trier of fact, to make its own, independent findings of fact and conclusions of law. n3 The court may not simply enter judgment on the jury's verdict as if the case had been tried to a nonadvisory jury. n4 In order for a jury to be truly advisory, the court must bear ultimate responsibility for the judgment. n5 In practical terms, this means that if a district court, over objection, erroneously ordered a jury trial, that error may not be overlooked simply by considering the jury to be "advisory." n6

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Newmann v. United States, 938 F.2d 1258, 1259 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See American River Transp. Co. v. Paragon Marine Servs., Inc., 213 F. Supp. 2d 1035, 1054 (E.D. Mo. 2002) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Gragg v. City of Omaha, 20 F.3d 357, 358-359 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a); see also Aetna Ins. Co. v. Stanford, 273 F.2d 150, 153 (5th Cir. 1959) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Wilson v. Prasse, 463 F.2d 109, 116 (3d Cir. 1972) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Troy v. City of Hampton, 756 F.2d 1000, 1003 (4th Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 41 Bench Trials *
C. Understanding Advisory Juries

3-41 Federal Litigation Guide 41.35

41.35 Challenging Findings, Not Advisory Verdict

Once the court has made its required findings and conclusions, n1 any motion challenging the judgment is not properly a motion to set aside the jury's verdict or the jury's answer to special interrogatories. Even if the court's findings are identical to the verdict of the advisory jury, a Rule 50 motion for judgment as a matter of law, or for judgment n.o.v., n2 is not appropriate. A Rule 52(b) motion to amend the findings of the court, or to make additional findings, is the only motion that may test the accuracy or sufficiency of the findings. n3

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Greenwood v. Greenwood, 234 F.2d 276, 278 (3d Cir. 1956) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

* Chapter 41 was rewritten in 2007 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

1 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide 42.syn

§ 42.syn Synopsis to Chapter 42: Class Actions

§ 42.01 Purpose of Class Action

§ 42.02 Benefits of Class Action

§ 42.03 Rule 23 Governs Class Actions in Federal Court

§ 42.04 Failure to Comply With Local Rules May Bar Class Action

§ 42.05 District Court Given Broad Discretion to Decide Whether Suit May Be Maintained as Class Action

§ 42.06 Alternate Forms of Certification Permissible

§§ 42.07 through 42.19 [Reserved]

§ 42.20 Class Actions Must Meet General Jurisdictional Prerequisites

§ 42.21 Diversity Jurisdiction Under Class Action Fairness Act of 2005
[1] Effective Date of CAFA
[2] Evaluating Cases Exempted From Jurisdictional Provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act
[3] Complete Diversity Not Required Under CAFA
[4] Amount in Controversy Under the CAFA Must Exceed $5,000,000

§ 42.22 Diversity Jurisdiction Under CAFA Depends on Citizenship of Members of Plaintiff Class
[1] District Court Must Decline Jurisdiction When More Than Two-Thirds of Class Members Are Citizens of Forum State
[2] District Court Has Discretion to Decline Jurisdiction When More Than One-Third and Less Than Two-Thirds of Class Members Are Citizens of Forum State

§ 42.23 "Mass Actions" Are Treated as Class Actions

§ 42.24 Establishing Complete Diversity When Class Action Fairness Act is Inapplicable

§ 42.25 Aggregating Claims to Satisfy Amount in Controversy When The Class Action Fairness Act is Inapplicable
[1] Aggregating Common and Undivided Claims

[2] "Separate and Distinct" Claims Must Each Satisfy Jurisdictional Amount
[3] If One Class Member Meets Amount in Controversy, Supplemental Jurisdiction Extends to Insufficient Claims of Other Class Members

§ 42.26 Removal of State Class Actions to Federal Court
[1] Removal Under Class Action Fairness Act
[2] One-Year Limitation on Removal Does Not Apply
[3] Defendant's Local Citizenship Does Not Preclude Removal
[4] Any Single Defendant May Remove Class Action
[5] Accelerated, Discretionary Appellate Review of Remand Order Under Class Action Fairness Act
[6] "Mass Actions" May Also be Removed

§§ 42.27 through 42.29 [Reserved]

§ 42.30 Satisfying Rule 23 Requirements

§ 42.31 Evaluating Implicit Requirements of Rule 23

§ 42.32 Evaluating Explicit Requirements of Rule 23(a)

§ 42.33 Class Action Must Fall Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

§ 42.34 CHECKLIST: Satisfying Class Certification Prerequisites

§§ 42.35 through 42.39 [Reserved]

§ 42.40 Class Description Must Be Sufficiently Definite

§ 42.41 Named Class Representative Must Be Class Members with Standing

§ 42.42 Consequences of Claim Becoming Moot
[1] Jurisdiction Unaffected If Representative's Claim Becomes Moot After Certification
[2] Practice Tip: Early Class Definition and Certification May Be Critical

§ 42.43 Future Class Members Permissible

§ 42.44 Less Precision in Class Definition Required in Rule 23(b)(2) Class Actions Seeking Injunctive or Declaratory Relief

§§ 42.45 through 42.49 [Reserved]

§ 42.50 Class Must Be So Numerous That Joinder of All Members Is Impractical

§ 42.51 Determining Numerosity
[1] Factors Relevant to Determining Impracticability of Joining All Class Members
[2] Relationship of Class Size to Impracticality

§ 42.52 Burden Is on Party Seeking Class Certification

§ 42.53 Presumption of Numerosity in Securities Litigation Cases

§§ 42.54 through 42.59 [Reserved]

§ 42.60 "Commonality" Requires That Questions of Law or Fact Must Be Common to Class

§ 42.61 "Typicality" Requires That Named Class Representative's Claims or Defenses Must Be Typical of Class

§ 42.62 "Typicality" Distinguished From "Commonality"

§ 42.63 Typicality Does Not Require Complete Identity of Claims

§ 42.64 Unique Defenses of Named Class Representative May Destroy Typicality

§ 42.65 Typicality Not Defeated by Statute of Limitations

§ 42.66 Typicality May Be Defeated If Named Class Representative Does Not Have Claims Against Each Defendant
[1] Named Class Representatives Generally Must Be Injured by Each Defendant to Satisfy Typicality Requirement
[2] Exceptions to General Rule

§§ 42.67 through 42.79 [Reserved]

§ 42.80 "Adequate Representation" Applies to Both Named Class Representative and Class Counsel

§ 42.81 Adequate Representation Is Most Critical Factor in Determining Class Certification

§ 42.82 Adequacy Determination Is Made on Case by Case Basis

§ 42.83 Burden of Proof--Split in Authority

§ 42.84 Court Has Continuing Obligation to Ensure Adequacy of Representation at All Stages of Litigation

§ 42.85 Parameters of Adequate Representation by Named Class Representative
[1] Named Class Representative Acts as Fiduciary
[2] Position of Named Class Representative Need Not Be Identical to That of Class Members, and Need Not Be Best Representative
[3] Conflict Between Representative and Class Must Be More Than Merely Speculative to Defeat Adequacy Requirement
[4] Named Class Representative Inadequate If Subject to Unique Defense Central to Litigation
[5] Named Class Representative Must Ensure Vigorous Prosecution of Litigation
[6] Named Class Representative Should Not Delay in Seeking Certification or Fail to Respond to Opposing Party
[7] Named Class Representative Should Be Familiar With Action and Not Abdicate Conduct of Case to Counsel
[8] Size of Financial Interest in Outcome May Be Relevant But Is Not Determinative
[9] Ability of Named Class Representative to Finance Litigation
[10] Named Class Representative May Need to Demonstrate Financial Means
[11] Honesty, Credibility, and Motives of Named Class Representative Must Be Relevant to Issues in Litigation to Affect Adequacy Determination

§ 42.86 Class Counsel Must Be Qualified, Experienced, and Able to Conduct Proposed Litigation
[1] Appointing Class Counsel
[2] Courts Consider Counsel's Record, Expertise, and Resources
[3] Courts Consider Ethical Conduct of Counsel
[4] Conflicts of Interest With Class Impermissible
[5] Appointment Procedure

§ 42.87 Effect of Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 on Adequacy of Representation in Securities Litigation
[1] Act Enacted to Address Abusive Securities Fraud Cases

[2] Lead Plaintiff Must Be Most Capable Representative
[3] Most Adequate Plaintiff Chooses Lead Counsel
[4] Ownership of Securities by Lead Counsel

§§ 42.88 through 42.99 [Reserved]

§ 42.100 Types of Class Actions Maintainable

§ 42.101 Preference for Rule 23(b)(1) and 23(b)(2) Actions Over 23(b)(3) Actions

§§ 42.102 through 42.109 [Reserved]

§ 42.110 Overview of Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§ 42.111 Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requires Realistic Possibility of Separate Litigation in Absence of Class Certification

§ 42.112 Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requires Risk That Separate Litigation Will Result in Varying Adjudications

§ 42.113 Only Actions for Declaratory or Injunctive Relief May Be Certified Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§ 42.114 Certification of Defendant Classes Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§ 42.115 No Right to Notice Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§ 42.116 No Right to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§§ 42.117 through 42.129 [Reserved]

§ 42.130 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Actions Focus on Preserving Limited Funds for Class Members

§ 42.131 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Compared With Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

§ 42.132 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Inapplicable to Actions for Money Damages Only

§ 42.133 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Commonly Used in Limited Fund Cases
[1] Pool of Assets May Be Insufficient to Satisfy All Claims Against the Fund
[2] Limited Fund Cases Are Equitable in Nature
[3] Courts Differ Over Extent of Risk That Must Be Shown to Obtain Limited Fund Certification
[4] Specific Evidence Must Be Provided Regarding Limited Fund
[5] Certification Granted If Likelihood That Earlier Plaintiff's Claims Will Exhaust Defendant's Assets

§ 42.134 Separate Punitive Damages Classes May Be Certified Under Limited Fund and "Limited Generosity" Theories

§ 42.135 Certification of Defendant Classes Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

§ 42.136 No Right to Notice or to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)
[1] Members of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Have No Absolute Right to Notice
[2] Court Has Discretion to Require Notice
[3] Members of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Have No Absolute Right to Opt Out
[4] Courts Have Permitted Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)
[5] Due Process May Require Notice and Opportunity to Opt Out of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Action

§§ 42.137 through 42.149 [Reserved]

§ 42.150 Overview of Rule 23(b)(2)

§ 42.151 Party Opposing Class Must Have Acted or Refused to Act on Grounds "Generally Applicable" to Class

§ 42.152 Rule 23(b)(2) Class Certification Improper If Primary Relief Sought Is Money Damages

§ 42.153 Defendant Class Actions Under Rule 23(b)(2)

§ 42.154 No Right to Notice or to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(2)

§§ 42.155 through 42.159 [Reserved]

§ 42.160 Overview of Rule 23(b)(3)

§ 42.161 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate for Rule 23(b)(3) Class Certification
[1] Various Standards Have Been Applied to Determine Whether Common Issues Predominate
[2] Money Damages Actions: Predominance Satisfied Even If Individual Damages Issues Remain
[3] Differences in Application of Statute of Limitations to Individual Class Members Will Not Preclude Rule 23(b)(3) Certification
[4] Merits of Case May Be Considered But Not Decided

§ 42.162 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate in Securities Fraud Cases
[1] Requirement That Each Member Be Subject to Common Scheme of Fraudulent Conduct
[2] Factors Indicating Common Scheme
[2.--1] Nondisclosure of Material Facts
[2.--2] Same or Similar Written Misrepresentations
[3] Proof of Reliance Not Required
[4] Individual Issues of Reliance Alone Usually Do Not Preclude Certification

§ 42.163 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate in Mass Tort Cases
[1] Traditional Reluctance to Certify Classes in Mass Tort Cases
[2] Predominance of Common Issues Has Been Found Increasingly in Mass Tort Litigation

§ 42.164 Determining Whether Class Action Is Superior to Other Available Methods
[1] Superiority Requirement
[2] Similar Issues Suggest Superiority
[3] Size of Anticipated Recovery

§ 42.165 Evaluating Predominance and Superiority Guidelines Specified in Rule 23(b)(3)
[1] Rule 23(b)(3) Specifies Four Nonexhaustive Guidelines
[2] Individual Interest in Controlling Separate Litigation
[3] Extent and Nature of Litigation Already Commenced
[4] Desirability of Concentrating All Claims in Single Forum
[5] Manageability of Class Action
[5.--1] Factors Typically Considered in Determining Manageability
[5.--2] Solution to Manageability Problem Through Fluid Recovery Method

§ 42.166 Rule 23(b)(3) Applies to Money Damages and to Injunctive or Declaratory Relief

§ 42.167 Rule 23(b)(3) Applies Equally to Certification of Defendant Classes

§ 42.168 Members of Rule 23(b)(3) Class Have Right to Notice and to Opt Out

§§ 42.169 through 42.179 [Reserved]

§ 42.180 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requirements

§ 42.181 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Requirements

§ 42.182 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements

§ 42.183 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements

§§ 42.184 through 42.189 [Reserved]

§ 42.190 General Pleading Requirements of Rule 8 Apply to Class Actions

§ 42.191 Alleging Facts Demonstrating That Class Action Requirements Are Met

§ 42.192 Additional Requirements in Securities Class Actions
[1] Plaintiff's Signed Certification Must Accompany Complaint
[2] Notice to Class

§ 42.193 Attending Pre-Certification Scheduling Conferences

§ 42.194 Conducting Pre-Certification Discovery

§§ 42.195 through 42.209 [Reserved]

§ 42.210 Court Must Determine at an Early Practicable Time Whether to Certify the Action

§ 42.211 Obligation of Court to Address Certification Sua Sponte

§ 42.212 Burden of Demonstrating That Requirements for Class Action Have Been Met Is on Party Seeking Certification

§ 42.213 Drafting Motion and Supporting Papers
[1] Provide Advance Notice of Motion
[2] Submit Supporting Affidavits and Memorandum of Law
[3] Proposed Order May Be Required
[4] Contents of Order

§ 42.214 Ruling on Class Certification Motion
[1] Meeting Rule 23 Certification Requirements
[2] Court Accepts as True Substantive Allegations in Complaint
[3] Hearing on Certification Motion
[4] Discovery May Be Permitted With Respect to Class Certification Issues
[5] Alternate Forms of Certification Permissible
[6] Appealing Class Certification Order
[6.--1] Filing Petition for Permission to Appeal
[6.--2] Court May Certify Issue for Interlocutory Appeal
[6.--3] Review Through Writ of Mandamus
[6.--4] Order of Dismissal Without Addressing Class Certification Is Appealable

§ 42.215 Filing Class Action Tolls Statutes of Limitation on Claims of Individual Class Members
[1] Tolling Continues Until Certification Is Denied

[2] If Certification Is Granted, Tolling Ceases for Members Who Opt Out
[3] Evaluating Whether Tolling Applies to Members Who File Individual Suits Pending Certification Decision

§§ 42.216 through 42.219 [Reserved]

§ 42.220 Determining Whether Notice Is Required
[1] Mandatory Notice to Class Members Required Only in Rule 23(b)(3) Actions
[2] Due Process May Require Notice in Certain Rule 23(b)(1)(B) and 23(b)(2) Actions
[3] Court Has Discretion to Require Notice in Other Class Actions

§ 42.221 Determining Content of Notice to Rule 23(b)(3) Class Members
[1] Describing Clearly the Action and Opt-Out Rights
[2] Balanced Notice

§ 42.222 Determining Method of Providing Notice to Rule 23(b)(3) Class Members
[1] "Best Notice Practicable" Must Be Provided
[2] Notice by First Class Mail
[2.--1] Notice by First Class Mail to Members Who Can Be Identified Through Reasonable Effort
[2.--2] Parties Must Procure Obtainable Information
[3] Publishing Notice
[4] Supplementing Notice

§ 42.223 "Clearly Erroneous" Standard of Appellate Review Regarding Notice

§ 42.224 Cost of Providing Notice

§§ 42.225 through 42.229 [Reserved]

§ 42.230 Action Proceeds in Same Fashion as Any Other Civil Action

§ 42.231 Court May Make Appropriate Orders for Conduct of Action
[1] Rule 23(d) Authorizes Court to Make Appropriate Orders
[2] Orders May Be Amended
[3] Court Not Limited to Listed Orders

§ 42.232 Orders Permitting Intervention
[1] Adequacy of Representation
[2] Court Applies Intervention Standards of Rule 24

§ 42.233 Orders Requiring Amendment of Pleadings

§ 42.234 Appellate Review of Rule 23(d) Orders

§§ 42.235 through 42.239 [Reserved]

§ 42.240 Court Approval Required for Dismissal or Settlement

§ 42.241 Settlement Standard
[1] Settlement Must Be Fundamentally Fair, Adequate, and Reasonable
[2] Factors Considered in Determining Fairness of Proposed Settlement
[3] Strength of Plaintiff's Case Compared to Amount Offered in Settlement
[4] Reaction of Class Members to Proposed Settlement
[5] Stage of Proceedings at Which Settlement Is Reached

[6] Providing New Opportunity to Opt-Out

§ 42.242 Court Not Permitted to Modify Settlement Agreement

§ 42.243 Typical Settlement Process

§ 42.244 Settling Class Action Prior to Class Certification
[1] Settlement Prior to Certification Permitted
[2] Class May Be Certified for Settlement Purposes

§ 42.245 Obtaining Preliminary Court Approval of Settlement

§ 42.246 Providing Notice of Proposed Settlement to Class Members
[1] Directing Notice in a Reasonable Manner
[2] Form and Manner of Notice of Proposed Settlement
[3] Costs and Necessary Tasks of Notice of Proposed Settlement

§ 42.247 Participating in Fairness Hearing

§ 42.248 Objecting to Proposed Settlement

§ 42.249 Computing Attorney's Fees in Cases Not Involving Coupon Settlements
[1] Court Review of Fee Settlements
[2] Fee Calculations
[2.--1] Percentage-of-the-Fund Approach
[2.--2] Factors Considered on Fee Applications
[3] Court Approval is Limited in Settlements Requiring Class Members to Make Payments to Counsel
[4] Court May Not Approve Settlements That Discriminate Based on Geographical Location

§ 42.250 Court Approval of Coupon Settlements
[1] Class Action Fairness Act Governs Coupon Settlements
[2] Coupon Settlement May Be Conditioned on Charitable Distribution of Unredeemed Coupon Value
[3] Attorney's Fees Are Limited in Cases Involving Coupon Settlements

§ 42.251 Defendants Must Notify Appropriate Federal and State Officials of Proposed Settlement
[1] Defendants Must Give Notice Within 10 Days After Filing Proposed Settlement
[2] Selecting the Appropriate Federal and State Officials for Service of Notice
[3] Contents of the Notice of Proposed Settlement
[4] Notice Requirement May Delay Court Approval of Class Action Settlement
[5] If Notice Not Provided, Class Members Might Not Be Bound

§ 42.252 Drafting Class Action Judgment
[1] Drafting Crucial to Determining Who Is Bound
[2] Drafting Requirements in Rule 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2) Actions
[3] Drafting Requirements in Rule 23(b)(3) Actions

§ 42.253 Judgment in Class Action Must Describe Those Bound by Judgment

§ 42.254 Preclusive Effect of Judgments and Orders in Class Actions
[1] Evaluating Whether Order Denying Certification Has Preclusive Effect
[2] Final Judgment Has Preclusive Effect on All Class Members Who Did Not Opt Out

§§ 42.255 through 42.299 [Reserved]

§ 42.300 Class Action Complaint
[1] FORM
Class Action Complaint
[2] Use of Form
[3] Complaint Must Set Forth Prerequisites for Class Action
[4] Proper Description of Plaintiffs in Case Caption

§ 42.301 Notice of Motion for Class Action Certification
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Class Action Certification
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Seeking Class Action Certification
[4] Burden Is on Party Seeking Certification
[5] Determining Whether Notice to Class Members Is Required

§ 42.302 Notice to Class Members
[1] FORM
Notice to Class Members
[2] Use of Form
[3] Providing Notice

2 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter describes the requirements for maintaining a class action in federal court, and covers the process by which a class action is commenced, prosecuted, and defended in federal court. The chapter includes coverage of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA), which includes provisions relating to diversity jurisdiction in class actions, removal of class action lawsuits from state to federal court, and class action settlements.

The chapter covers the following topics:

- Types of class actions maintainable under Rule 23
- Prerequisites for class certification for each type of class action
- Diversity jurisdiction in class actions
- Removal procedures for class actions
- Drafting the class action complaint
- Pre-certification procedural issues
- Moving for class certification
- Opposing the motion for class certification
- Providing notice to potential class members
- Prosecuting or defending the action following class certification
- Settling the class action

Also included are procedural checklists for use in determining whether a proposed class action meets the necessary prerequisites.

The chapter includes a sample Class Action Complaint, Notice of Motion for Class Action Certification, and Notice to Class Members.

For expanded coverage of class actions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 23, Class Actions (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.01

§ 42.01 Purpose of Class Action

The class action was designed as "an exception to the usual rule that litigation is conducted by and on behalf of the individual named parties only." n1

One primary purpose of the class action is to promote judicial economy and efficiency by obviating the need for multiple adjudications of the same issues. Class actions are particularly appropriate when the " 'issues involved are common to the class as a whole' and when they 'turn on questions of law applicable in the same manner to each member of the class' ". n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 156, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) ; Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 700-701, 99 S. Ct. 2545, 61 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1979) .

(n2)Footnote 2. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 155, 159, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) , quoting Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 700-701, 99 S. Ct. 2545, 61 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1979) .

4 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.02

§ 42.02 Benefits of Class Action

The benefits of a class actions include the following:

- Enhancement of access to the courts by spreading litigation costs among numerous litigants with similar claims n1

- Avoiding inconsistent adjudications by providing a single proceeding in which to determine the merits of the plaintiffs' claims n2

- Ensuring that the interests of absentee class members are considered fairly and adequately n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States Parole Comm'n v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 402-403, 100 S. Ct. 1202, 63 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1980) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States Parole Comm'n v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 402-403, 100 S. Ct. 1202, 63 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1980) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Hansberry v. Lee, 311 U.S. 32, 42-43, 61 S. Ct. 115, 85 L. Ed. 22 (1940) ; see also Baby Neal ex rel. Kanter v. Casey, 43 F.3d 48, 55 (3d Cir. 1994) ; Sikes v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 841 F. Supp. 1572, 1578 (S.D. Ga. 1993) .

5 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.03

§ 42.03 Rule 23 Governs Class Actions in Federal Court

Rule 23 governs class actions in the federal courts. Several courts have held that Rule 23 should be given a liberal rather than a narrow interpretation. n1

Other courts, in contrast, have strictly construed the requirements of the Rule. n2 The principle of strict construction follows from the perception of some courts that class actions are often unmanageable. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 709, 729 (4th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied sub nom., Anderson v. Aetna Casualty and Sur. Co., 493 U.S. 959 (1989) ; Movement v. GMC, 622 F.2d 1235, 1254 (7th Cir. 1980) ; Wright v. Stone Container Corp., 524 F.2d 1058, 1061-1062 (8th Cir. 1975) ; Green v. Wolf Corp., 406 F.2d 291, 301 (2d Cir. 1968) ; Vigue v. Ives, 138 F.R.D. 6, 8 (D. Me. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Roby v. St. Louis S. R. Co., 775 F.2d 959, 961 (8th Cir. 1985) ; La Mar v. H.&B. Novelty & Loan Co., 489 F.2d 461, 468 (9th Cir. 1973) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See LaMar v. H.&B. Novelty & Loan Co., 489 F.2d 461, 468 (9th Cir. 1973) .

6 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.04

§ 42.04 Failure to Comply With Local Rules May Bar Class Action

Local district court rules impose additional procedural requirements for bringing class actions which must be satisfied before a class may be certified. Those local rules are discussed throughout this chapter where relevant. Local district court rules should be consulted prior to commencing any federal lawsuit.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.05

§ 42.05 District Court Given Broad Discretion to Decide Whether Suit May Be Maintained as Class Action

The district court has broad discretion to decide whether to certify a class. The district court's decision to certify a class will be overturned only for abuse of discretion. n1

The court's discretion, however, must be exercised within the framework of Rule 23. n2

The court's discretion is tempered by its obligation to protect the interests of absent class members. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Castano v. The American Tobacco Co., 84 F 3d 734, 752 (5th Cir. 1996) ; In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1078-1079 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Town of Hyde Park, 47 F.3d 473, 482 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Hoxworth v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., Inc. 980 F.2d 912, 923 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Six Mexican Workers v. Arizona Citrus Growers, 904 F.2d 1301 (9th Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Gulf Oil Co., v. Bernard, 452 U.S. 89, 99-101, 101 S. Ct. 2193, 68 L. Ed. 2d 693 (1981) ; Andrews v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 95 F.3d 1014, 1022 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 996 F.2d 1425, 1438 (2d Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.06

§ 42.06 Alternate Forms of Certification Permissible

The court is empowered to define an appropriate class, whether by accepting the proposed class, conditionally certifying a class for a limited portion of the litigation, limiting the class to particular issues, or creating subclasses. A complaint's proposed class definition does not bind the court. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Lundquist v. Sec. Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs. Corp., 993 F.2d 11, 14 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 959 (1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
A. Understanding Class Action Purpose, Benefits, and Basic Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.07 through 42.19

[Reserved]

§§ 42.07[Reserved]

10 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.20

§ 42.20 Class Actions Must Meet General Jurisdictional Prerequisites

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure neither extend nor limit the jurisdiction of the federal courts. n1

Therefore, Rule 23 does not provide jurisdiction for an action merely because the plaintiffs wish to proceed as a class. Rather, jurisdiction must be grounded on some other basis, most commonly a federal question or diversity of citizenship. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 82.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 (federal question jurisdiction), 1332 (diversity jurisdiction).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.21

§ 42.21 Diversity Jurisdiction Under Class Action Fairness Act of 2005

[1] Effective Date of CAFA

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA) expands the scope of diversity jurisdiction in class actions. n1 In general, the law gives federal courts diversity jurisdiction over multi-state class actions involving claims of $5 million or more where at least one member of a class of plaintiffs is from a different state than any defendant. n2 The changes made by the Act apply to any civil action commenced on or after February 18, 2005. n3 The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA apply to any action brought as a class action, before or after the entry of a class certification order by the court. n4 Diversity jurisdiction for class action lawsuits filed in federal or state court before February 18, 2005 is governed by the prior law (see § 42.24, below).

[2] Evaluating Cases Exempted From Jurisdictional Provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act

The following types of cases are excluded from the jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA:

- Actions with governmental parties excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply to any class action in which the primary defendants are states, state officials, or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed (on Eleventh Amendment grounds) from ordering relief. n5

- See Frazier v. Pioneer Americas LLC, 455 F.3d 542, 546-547 (5th Cir. 2006) (governmental parties exception to CAFA jurisdiction applies only when all primary defendants are states, state officials, or other governmental entities).

Small classes excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply when the aggregate number of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the action is less than 100. n6

- Securities actions excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim concerning a covered security as defined under § 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and § 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. n7

- Actions concerning fiduciary duties and related obligations concerning securities excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim that relates to the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating to, or created by, or pursuant to any security as defined under § 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 and the regulations issued under that section. n8

- Actions concerning intracorporate and business organization litigation excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim that relates to the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and arises under or by virtue of the laws of the state in which the corporation or business enterprise is incorporated or organized. n9

[3] Complete Diversity Not Required Under CAFA

The federal district courts have original jurisdiction over any class action governed by the Class Action Fairness Act in which the amount in controversy requirement (see [4], below) is met and either: n10

- Any member of a plaintiff class is a citizen of a state different from any defendant; or

- Any member of a plaintiff class is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state and any defendant is a citizen of a state; or

- Any member of a plaintiff class is a citizen of a state and any defendant is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state.

Under the CAFA, "citizenship" of a state should be determined as in other diversity contexts (see Ch. 1, Pleadings). Additionally, the Act provides that an unincorporated association is deemed to be a citizen of the state where it has its principal place of business, as well as the state under whose laws it is organized. n11 This is a departure from the usual rule under which an unincorporated association has the citizenship of all of its members. n12

Citizenship of the members of a proposed plaintiff class is determined as of the date of filing of the complaint or amended complaint. If the case stated by the initial pleading is not subject to federal jurisdiction, citizenship is determined as of the date of service by the plaintiff of an amended pleading, motion, or other paper indicating the existence of federal jurisdiction. n13

In class actions not covered by the CAFA, the "complete diversity" rule requires that each named class representative must be a citizen of a different state than each defendant. n14

[4] Amount in Controversy Under the CAFA Must Exceed $5,000,000

The federal district courts have original jurisdiction of any class action governed by the Act in which the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $5,000,000, exclusive of interests and costs, n15 provided the minimum diversity requirements of the Act are met.

The claims of all class members are to be aggregated to determine whether the amount-in-controversy minimum is met. In an action in which a plaintiff class asserts monetary claims, whether the individual claims are large or small, the process of determining the amount in controversy is relatively straightforward. More complex problems of valuation arise in actions involving equitable or injunctive relief. In these cases, the amount in controversy is measured by the value of the "object of the litigation." n16

The difficulty of assigning a value to injunctive relief is enhanced by the question of whether to consider the value of the claim from the plaintiff's or from the defendant's viewpoint; that is, whether to consider the benefit of the relief to the plaintiff or the cost of the relief to the defendant. Under traditional diversity jurisdiction principles as applied to class actions, the non-aggregation rule also applied to equitable and injunctive relief. Therefore, the value of the injunctive relief being sought, or the cost of injunctive relief to the defendant, had to be prorated throughout the class to determine the amount in controversy. Under the Act, which requires aggregation of claims, this apparently is no longer the case. At least one court has held that the $5,000,000 amount in controversy requirement can be met by considering the aggregate value to all plaintiffs or the aggregate cost to the defendants of equitable or injunctive relief. n17

Those class actions that do not meet the more-than-$5,000,000 threshold are not entitled to be brought in or removed to federal court under the provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Braud v. Transp. Serv. Co., 445 F.3d 801, 803-809 (5th Cir. 2006) ; see also Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 420 F.3d 1090, 1093-1098 (10th Cir. 2005) (the commencement date of the action refers to the date the action is filed in a court of proper jurisdiction, not the date it is removed to federal court).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(8).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(5)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(5)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(9)(A).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(9)(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(9)(B).

(n10)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(10).

(n12)Footnote 12. See United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO v. R.H. Bouligny, Inc., 382 U.S. 145, 146-150, 86 S. Ct. 272, 15 L. Ed. 2d 217 (1965) .

(n13)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(7).

(n14)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a); see Supreme Tribe of Ben-Hur v. Cauble, 255 U.S. 356, 365, 41 S. Ct. 338, 65 L. Ed. 673 (1921) .

(n15)Footnote 15. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(7).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., DiTolla v. Doral Dental IPA of N.Y., 469 F.3d 271, 275 (2d Cir. 2006) (defendant failed to demonstrate that claim satisfied jurisdictional amount in controversy in action seeking an accounting, as amount of damages award, if any, was mere speculation).

(n17)Footnote 17. Berry v. American Express Publ'g, 381 F. Supp. 2d 1118, 1123 (C.D. Cal. 2005) ("Since plaintiffs can now aggregate their claims to invoke diversity jurisdiction, finding the amount of controversy from the aggregate cost to defendants does not circumvent any non-aggregation principles and is consistent with the principle that only cases that could have been originally brought in federal court may be removed. Accordingly, the Court concludes that the amount in controversy may be satisfied either from the view of the aggregate value to the class members or defendants.").

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.22

§ 42.22 Diversity Jurisdiction Under CAFA Depends on Citizenship of Members of Plaintiff Class

[1] District Court Must Decline Jurisdiction When More Than Two-Thirds of Class Members Are Citizens of Forum State

The Class Action Fairness Act imposes limits on jurisdiction with respect to classes composed largely of citizens of the forum state. Specifically, the Act establishes two situations in which the district court must decline jurisdiction. n1

The first situation in which the court must decline jurisdiction under the CAFA is known as the local-controversy exception, and occurs when: n2

- More than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes, in the aggregate, are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed;

- There is at least one defendant who is a citizen of the state in which the action was originally filed who is also a defendant "from whom significant relief is sought" by members of the plaintiff class or classes, and "whose alleged conduct forms a significant basis for the claims asserted" by the proposed plaintiff class or classes; n3

- The members of the plaintiff class or classes incurred "principal injuries" resulting from the alleged conduct (or any related conduct) of each defendant in the state in which the action was originally filed; and

- During the three-year period preceding the filing of the class action, no other class action has been filed asserting the same or similar factual allegations against any of the defendants on behalf of the same or other persons.

The second situation, known as the home-state exception, in which the court must decline jurisdiction occurs when two-thirds or more of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes, in the aggregate, as well as the "primary defendants," are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed. n4

The burden of proof on these exceptions to CAFA jurisdiction falls on the party opposing federal jurisdiction. n5 To meet the burden of proof, the party opposing federal jurisdiction must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the exception applies. n5.1

[2] District Court Has Discretion to Decline Jurisdiction When More Than One-Third and Less Than Two-Thirds of Class Members Are Citizens of Forum State

The district court may, in the interests of justice and looking at the totality of circumstances, decline to exercise jurisdiction under CAFA over a class action in which: n6

- More than one-third of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes, in the aggregate, are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed; and
- Fewer than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes, in the aggregate, are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed; and
- The "primary" defendants are citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed.

The court's exercise of discretion must be based on "the interests of justice and looking at the totality of the circumstances," n7 and the court must consider each of the following six factors:

- Whether the claims asserted involve matters of national or interstate interest n8
- Whether the claims asserted will be governed by laws of the state in which the action was originally filed or by the laws of other states n9
- Whether the class action has been pleaded in a manner that seeks to avoid federal jurisdiction n10
- Whether the action was brought in a forum with a distinct nexus with the class members, the alleged harm, or the defendants n11
- Whether the number of citizens of the state in which the action was originally filed in all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is substantially larger than the number of citizens from any other state, and the citizenship of the other members of the proposed class is dispersed among a substantial number of states n12
- Whether, during the 3-year period preceding the filing of the class action, one or more other class actions asserting the same or similar claims on behalf of the same or other persons have been filed n13

If the requirements for invoking the court's discretion are met, and if the factors favor a state court proceeding rather than a federal one, the court may, in its discretion, decline to exercise the minimal diversity subject matter jurisdiction provided by the Class Action Fairness Act. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Evans v. Walter Indus., Inc., 449 F.3d 1159, 1163-1168 (11th Cir. 2006) (whether class seeks "significant relief" includes not only assessment of how many members of class were harmed by defendant's actions, but also comparison of relief sought between all defendants and of each defendant's ability to pay potential judgment).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(4)(B).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Serrano v. 180 Connect, Inc., 478 F.3d 1018, 1021-1024 (9th Cir. 2007) ; Frazier v. Pioneer Americas LLC, 455 F.3d 542, 544-546 (5th Cir. 2006) ; Hart v. FedEx Ground Package Sys. Inc., 457 F.3d 675, 679-682 (7th Cir. 2006) ; Evans v. Walter Indus., Inc., 449 F.3d 1159, 1163-1168 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 5.1. See In re Sprint Nextel Corp., 593 F.3d 669, 673 (7th Cir. 2010) .

(n7)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3).

(n8)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3).

(n9)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(A).

(n10)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(B).

(n11)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(C).

(n12)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(D).

(n13)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(E).

(n14)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3)(F).

(n15)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.23

§ 42.23 "Mass Actions" Are Treated as Class Actions

The jurisdictional provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act also apply to "mass actions." n1 Under the Act, a "mass action" is any civil action other than a class action in which the monetary claims of 100 or more persons are proposed to be tried jointly on the ground that the plaintiffs' claims involve common questions of law or fact. n2 A "mass action" does not include any civil action in which: n3

- All of the claims in the action arise from an event or occurrence in the state in which the action was filed, and that allegedly resulted in injuries in that state or in states contiguous to that state;

- The claims are joined on motion of a defendant;

- All of the claims in the action are asserted on behalf of the general public (and not on behalf of individual claimants or members of a purported class) pursuant to a state statute specifically authorizing such action; or

- The claims have been consolidated or coordinated solely for pretrial proceedings.

Thus, a federal district court may exercise subject matter jurisdiction over a "mass action" based on the same sort of minimal diversity of citizenship that is sufficient under CAFA for class actions. n4 In a mass action, however, jurisdiction exists only over those plaintiffs whose claims satisfy the traditional jurisdictional amount requirements under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a) (i.e., more than $75,000 for each plaintiff). n5

This jurisdiction limitation raises the question of who is to be considered when applying the 100-plaintiff minimum, $5,000,000 threshold, and one-third/two-third classifications in the mass action context. The Eleventh Circuit has held that the numerosity and aggregate amount-in-controversy requirements are threshold requirements measured at the time of removal, while the $75,000 provision is to be treated as an exception addressed on a plaintiff-by-plaintiff basis after the action is removed. That is, the $75,000 requirement does not bar district courts from asserting jurisdiction over the entire case even though some of the individual plaintiff's claims turn out not to exceed $75,000 and must, therefore, be remanded to state court. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i); see also Louisiana ex rel. Caldwell v. Allstate Ins. Co., 536 F.3d 418, 429-430 (5th Cir. 2008) ; Bullard v. Burlington N. Santa Fe Ry. Co., 535 F.3d 759, 761-762 (7th Cir. 2008) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(ii).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lowery v. Alabama Power Co., 483 F.3d 1184, 1203-1205 (11th Cir. 2007) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.24

§ 42.24 Establishing Complete Diversity When Class Action Fairness Act is Inapplicable

Courts may not assert subject matter jurisdiction over every proposed class action based on the limited or minimal diversity provision of the Class Action Fairness Act. A proposed class action might not meet the jurisdictional tests of the Class Action Fairness Act; a proposed class action might be one of the kinds of class actions excluded from the CAFA; the court also may decline to exercise jurisdiction in appropriate cases. The inapplicability of the CAFA does not necessarily eliminate federal jurisdiction over a class action, however. Even if federal question jurisdiction does not exist, the proposed class might meet the traditional requirements for "complete" diversity jurisdiction. n1

Diversity jurisdiction for cases outside the CAFA requires "complete" diversity of citizenship between all plaintiffs and all defendants. However, only the citizenship of named parties is considered. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a); see Supreme Tribe of Ben-Hur v. Cauble, 255 U.S. 356, 365, 41 S. Ct. 338, 65 L. Ed. 673 (1921) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.25

§ 42.25 Aggregating Claims to Satisfy Amount in Controversy When The Class Action Fairness Act is Inapplicable

[1] Aggregating Common and Undivided Claims

In a diversity class action, if no class member's claim is for the requisite jurisdictional amount, aggregation of many smaller claims is not permitted unless the claims are "common and undivided," rather than "separate and distinct." n1 The distinction between "common and undivided" claims and "separate and distinct" claims can be elusive.

The determination of whether aggregation is proper is independent of the Rule 23(b) category in which a class action falls. n2

However, some types of actions are more likely to involve a joint and common interest than others. In particular, an action under Rule 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2), which is predicated on the relationship between class members, is more likely to involve the assertion of a joint and common claim than an action under Rule 23(b)(3), which is based on the predominance of common legal or factual issues, without regard to the relationship of the class members. n3

[2] "Separate and Distinct" Claims Must Each Satisfy Jurisdictional Amount

When separate and distinct recoveries are sought for each class member, as opposed to a recovery in common, the claim of each class member must meet the requisite jurisdictional amount. n4

[3] If One Class Member Meets Amount in Controversy, Supplemental Jurisdiction Extends to Insufficient Claims of Other Class Members

The United States Supreme Court has held that the supplemental jurisdiction statute n5 has eliminated the requirement, enunciated in Zahn v. International Paper Co., n6 that each class member must meet the amount in controversy requirement. n7

The supplemental jurisdiction statute grants district courts supplemental jurisdiction over all claims so related to a claim within the courts' original jurisdiction that they constitute part of the same case or controversy under Article III of the Constitution. Supplemental jurisdiction extends to claims involving the joinder or intervention of additional parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Snyder v. Harris, 394 U.S. 332, 336-337 (1969) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Snyder v. Harris, 394 U.S. 332, 336-337 (1969) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Gallagher v. Continental Ins. Co., 502 F.2d 827, 831 (10th Cir. 1974) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Zahn v. International Paper Co., 414 U.S. 291, 301, 94 S. Ct. 505, 38 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1973) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

(n6)Footnote 6. Zahn v. International Paper Co., 414 U.S. 291, 301, 94 S. Ct. 505, 38 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1973) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Allapattah Servs., Inc., 545 U.S. 546, 125 S. Ct. 2611, 162 L. Ed. 2d 502, 526 (2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.26

§ 42.26 Removal of State Class Actions to Federal Court

[1] Removal Under Class Action Fairness Act

The Class Action Fairness Act makes removal of class actions easier to accomplish in two distinct ways. First, the CAFA makes it easier to establish jurisdiction based on diversity of citizenship. n1 Second, the CAFA makes several changes to removal procedures that affect the removability of class actions. n2 The changes made by the Act apply to any civil action commenced on or after February 18, 2005. n3 A change in a class definition does not restart a class action suit for purposes of the provision of the Class Action Fairness Act stating that the Act applies only to suits "commenced" on or after the effective date of the Act. n4 An amended pleading relates back to the date of the original pleading and, therefore, does not "commence" a new action for purposes of the CAFA removal provision. n5 However, the addition of new claims and parties may be sufficient, under the applicable state law, to commence a new suit, provided the new claims do not relate back to the filing of the original suit. n6

The Act's procedural changes to the removal procedures apply to any "class action." n7 In this context, "class action" means "any civil action filed under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or similar state statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by one or more representative persons as a class action." n8 Some courts have held that the Class ActionFairness Act did not change the longstanding rule that the removing party bears the burden of establishing federal subject matter jurisdiction. n9 Other courts have held that the Class Action Fairness Act did change the burden of proof with respect to removal jurisdiction, so that now the party seeking remand has the burden of showing that jurisdiction is lacking and the case should be remanded to state court. n10

The CAFA specifically excludes certain types of class actions from its provisions, including the following:

- Actions with governmental parties excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply to any class action in which the primary defendants are states, state officials, or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed (on Eleventh Amendment grounds) from ordering relief. n11

- Small classes excluded. The jurisdictional provisions of the CAFA do not apply when the aggregate number of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the action is less than 100. n12

- Securities actions excluded. The Act's special removal procedures do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim concerning a covered security as defined under § 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and § 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. n13

- Actions concerning fiduciary duties and related obligations concerning securities excluded. The Act's special removal procedures do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim that relates to the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating to, or created by, or pursuant to any security as defined under § 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 and the regulations issued under that section. n14

- Actions concerning intracorporate and business organization litigation excluded. The Act's special removal procedures do not apply to any class action that solely involves a claim that relates to the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and arises under or by virtue of the laws of the state in which the corporation or business enterprise is incorporated or organized. n15

A party seeking remand bears the burden of proof when it seeks to avail itself of an express statutory exception to federal jurisdiction. Thus, a plaintiff class seeking remand based on a CAFA exception, such as the governmental parties exception or the local controversy exception, has the burden of establishing that the exception applies. n16 The standard of proof by which the removing defendant must establish federal jurisdiction under CAFA is a preponderance of the evidence. n17

[2] One-Year Limitation on Removal Does Not Apply

The procedure for removing a class action under the Class Action Fairness Act is, for the most part, the same as for other civil actions, but the one-year absolute limitation on removal does not apply. n18 Under the general removal-procedure statute, a defendant seeking removal must file a notice of removal within 30 days after receipt of the initial pleading or service of summons. If the case stated by the initial pleading is not removable, the defendant must file the notice of removal within 30 days after receipt of an amended pleading or other paper from which the defendant may first ascertain that the case is or has become removable. However, a defendant may not remove a case based on diversity jurisdiction more than one year after the commencement of the action. n19

The 30-day requirement applies to removal of class actions under the Class Action Fairness Act. The Act changes only the absolute one-year limitation on removal. n20 Thus, under appropriate circumstances, a defendant may remove at any time, even several years after commencement of the action, provided the notice of removal is filed within 30 days after receipt of a pleading or other paper from which the defendant may first ascertain that the action is or has become removable. n21

[3] Defendant's Local Citizenship Does Not Preclude Removal

In actions that are not governed by the jurisdictional provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act, the defendants may remove a civil action from state court to federal court on the basis of diversity of citizenship only if none of the defendants is a citizen of the state in which the action was originally brought. n22 This limitation does not apply to class actions governed by the Class Action Fairness Act. These class actions may be removed "without regard to whether any defendant is a citizen of the state in which the action is brought." n23

[4] Any Single Defendant May Remove Class Action

In actions that do not fall under the Class Action Fairness Act, all of the defendants must join in the notice of removal or the case is not removable. n24 Class actions governed by the Class Action Fairness Act may be removed by any defendant without the consent of the other defendants. n25 The removal applies to the entire action, including the claims of defendants that did not join in the notice of removal. n26

[5] Accelerated, Discretionary Appellate Review of Remand Order Under Class Action Fairness Act

In an action that does not fall under the Class Action Fairness Act, an order granting a motion to remand a case to the state court from which it was removed is rarely reviewable on appeal. n27 In a class action governed by the Class Actions Fairness Act, however, a court of appeals may, in its discretion, accept an appeal from an order of a district court either granting or denying a motion to remand if application is made to the court of appeals "not less than seven days after entry of the order." n28 This appears to be a drafting error. Congress undoubtedly intended to require the application to be made as promptly as reasonably possible, and appears to have decided that this was not later than seven days after entry of the order. The intent to have any such appeals processed as promptly as possible is apparent from the limited time granted to the court of appeals to resolve any such appeal. n29 However, Congress actually stated the opposite. As drafted, the Act requires a seven-day waiting period before the application may be filed with the court of appeals. The circuits that have considered the issue have agreed that this was indeed a drafting error and that the application must be filed not more than seven days after the order to be appealed. n30 All days are counted to compute the seven days. n31 If the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. n32

This type of appellate review is available only when a class action was removed under the CAFA jurisdictional provisions, not to class actions removed on the basis of traditional diversity jurisdiction. n33

[6] "Mass Actions" May Also be Removed

The Class Action Fairness Act deems a "mass action" to be class action, and the Act makes a mass action removable in the same manner as a class action. n34 Generally, a "mass action" is a civil action other than a class action in which monetary relief of 100 or more persons are proposed to be tried jointly on the grounds that the plaintiffs' claims involve common questions of law or fact. n35

The removal of a "mass action" under the provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act also means that the case will be treated as a class action for purposes of the statute of limitations. The limitations periods on any claims asserted in a mass action that is removed to federal court under the CAFA are tolled during the period that the action is pending in federal court. n36

A mass action that is removed to federal court under the provisions of the Class Action Fairness Act may not later be transferred to another court for consolidated pretrial procedures under 28 U.S.C. § 1407, unless a majority of the plaintiffs in the action request transfer. n37 This anti-transfer provision applies only to mass actions, not to certified class actions or actions proposed for certification. n38

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 1453.

(n3)Footnote 3. McAtee v. Capital One, F.S.B., 479 F.3d 1143, 1146-1148 (9th Cir. 2007) ; Pritchett v. Office

Depot, Inc., 404 F.3d 1232, 1234-1238 (10th Cir. 2005) ; see also Natale v. Pfizer, Inc., 424 F.3d 43, 44 (1st Cir. 2005) (citing Moore's).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Knudsen v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 411 F.3d 805, 806-807 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Plubell v. Merck & Co., Inc., 434 F.3d 1070, 1071-1074 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Braud v. Transport Serv. Co., 445 F.3d 801, 806-808 (5th Cir. 2006) (addition of new defendant after effective date of Act commenced new suit, so that suit was properly removed to federal court).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 9. Blockbuster, Inc. v. Galeno, 472 F.3d 53, 57-58 (2d Cir. 2006) ; Morgan v. Gay, 471 F.3d 469, 472 (3d Cir. 2006) ; Abrego v. Dow Chem. Co., 443 F.3d 676, 682-686 (9th Cir. 2006) ; Brill v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 427 F.3d 446, 447-449 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Berry v. American Express Publ'g, 381 F. Supp. 2d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(5)(A).

(n12)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(5)(B).

(n13)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(d)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(d)(3).

(n15)Footnote 15. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(d)(2).

(n16)Footnote 16. Preston v. Tenet Healthsystems Mem'l Med. Ctr., Inc., 485 F.3d 804, 812-813 (5th Cir. 2007) ; Serrano v. 180 Connect, Inc., 478 F.3d 1018, 1021-1024 (9th Cir. 2007) ; Frazier v. Pioneer Americas LLC, 455 F.3d 542, 544-546 (5th Cir. 2006) ; Hart v. FedEx Ground Package Sys. Inc., 457 F.3d 675, 679-682 (7th Cir. 2006) ; Evans v. Walter Indus., Inc., 449 F.3d 1159, 1163-1168 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Preston v. Tenet Health System Mem'l Med. Ctr., 485 F.3d 804, 813-814 (5th Cir. 2007) ; Miedema v. Maytag Corp., 450 F.3d 1322, 1330 (11th Cir. 2006) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(d)(2).

(n19)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n20)Footnote 20. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b); 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n22)Footnote 22. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b).

(n23)Footnote 23. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n24)Footnote 24. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(b).

(n26)Footnote 26. Lowery v. Alabama Power Co., 483 F.3d 1184, 1196 (11th Cir. 2007) (using CAFA procedures, one defendant may remove entire action, including claims against all defendants).

(n27)Footnote 27. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d).

(n28)Footnote 28. 28 U.S.C. § 1453(c)(1).

(n29)Footnote 29. See 28 U.S.C. § 1453(c)(2), (c)(3) (appeal must be resolved within 60 days or very short extension of that period).

(n30)Footnote 30. Morgan v. Gay, 466 F.3d 276, 277-279 (3d Cir. 2006) (statutory language requiring application for appeal "not less than" seven days after remand order was at odds with clear legislative intent and was, therefore, construed to mean "not more than" seven days); Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1309 v. Laidlaw Transit Servs., 435 F.3d 1140, 1145-1146 (9th Cir. 2006) (construing statutory language to mean "not more than"); Miedema v. Maytag Corp., 450 F.3d 1322, 1326 (11th Cir. 2006) ("not less than" language construed to mean that application must be filed within seven days of remand order, because to read language literally would produce absurd result); Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 420 F.3d 1090, 1093 (10th Cir. 2005) (construing statutory language to mean "not more than").

(n31)Footnote 31. Fed. Rule. App. P. 26(a)(1).

(n32)Footnote 32. Fed. Rule. App. P. 26(a)(1).

(n33)Footnote 33. Patterson v. Dean Morris, L.L.P., 448 F.3d 736, 742 (5th Cir. 2006) ; Saab v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 469 F.3d 758, 759-760 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n34)Footnote 34. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(A).

(n35)Footnote 35. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(B)(i).

(n36)Footnote 36. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(D).

(n37)Footnote 37. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(c)(i).

(n38)Footnote 38. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(11)(c)(ii).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
B. Jurisdictional Prerequisites and Removing Class Actions From State to Federal Court

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.27 through 42.29

[Reserved]

§§ 42.27[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.30

§ 42.30 Satisfying Rule 23 Requirements

Before a class action may proceed, the class must be "certified" by the court. To be certified, all of the requirements of Rule 23(a) must be met, n1 as well as those of any of the subsections of Rule 23(b). n2 The Supreme Court has held that Rule 23 trumps a state law prohibiting class actions that seek to recover statutory penalties or minimal recoveries because Rule 23 requires certification if the terms of the Rule are met. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.31, 42.32.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 42.33.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs. v. Allstate Ins. Corp., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311, 325 (2010) .

19 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.31

§ 42.31 Evaluating Implicit Requirements of Rule 23

Rule 23 implicitly imposes the following class definition and representation requirements: n1

- An identifiable class must exist n2
- The named representatives must be members of the proposed class n3

For further discussion of these requirements, see §§ 42.40, 42.41.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNonnamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 709, 728 (4th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied sub nom., Anderson v. Aetna Casualty and Sur. Co., 493 U.S. 959 (1989) ; Stambaugh v. Kansas Dep't of Corrections, 151 F.R.D. 664, 671 (D. Kan. 1993) ; Ad-Hoc Committee v. City of St. Louis, 143 F.R.D. 216, 216 (E.D. Mo. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Simer v. Rios, 661 F.2d 655, 669 (7th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 456 U.S. 917 (1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Schlesinger v. Reservists Comm. to Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 216-217, 94 S. Ct. 2925, 41 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1974) .

20 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.32

§ 42.32 Evaluating Explicit Requirements of Rule 23(a)

Rule 23(a) explicitly states that the following four factors must be present for a class action to proceed: n1

- Numerosity of parties n2
- Commonality of legal and factual issues n3
- Typicality of claims and defenses of the class representatives n4
- Adequacy of representation n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of RepresentationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See §§ 42.50-42.53.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 42.60.

(n4)Footnote 4. See §§ 42.61-42.66.

(n5)Footnote 5. See §§ 42.80-42.87.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.33

§ 42.33 Class Action Must Fall Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

To be certified, a class action must fall within one of the following categories: n1

- Rule 23(b)(1) class action, which is concerned with the risk of prejudice to putative class parties
- Rule 23(b)(2) class action, which involves injunctive or declaratory relief
- Rule 23(b)(3) class action, which focuses on predominant common issues

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.34

§ 42.34 CHECKLIST: Satisfying Class Certification Prerequisites

Rule 23(a) requires that specific prerequisites be met before any class action may be certified. The following checklist may be used as a guide in assuring that all initial certification requirements have been met.

- ☐ An identifiable class exists. n1
- ☐ The named representatives are members of the proposed class. n2
- ☐ All four of the following have been found:
  - ☐ Numerosity of parties. n3
  - ☐ Commonality of legal and factual issues. n4
  - ☐ Typicality of claims and defenses of the class representatives. n5
  - ☐ Adequacy of representation. n6
- ☐ The class action falls into at least one of the following categories:

☐ Rule 23(b)(1) class action, which is concerned with the risk of prejudice to putative class parties.

☐ Rule 23(b)(2) class action, which involves injunctive or declaratory relief.

☐ Rule 23(b)(3) class action, which focuses on predominant common issues.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of RepresentationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesMaintainabilityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 42.40.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 42.41.

(n3)Footnote 3. See §§ 42.50-42.53.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 42.60.

(n5)Footnote 5. See §§ 42.61-42.66.

(n6)Footnote 6. See §§ 42.80-42.87.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
C. Summary of Class Action Prerequisites

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.35 through 42.39

[Reserved]

§§ 42.35[Reserved]

24 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.40

§ 42.40 Class Description Must Be Sufficiently Definite

Before a class may be certified under Rule 23, the class description must be sufficiently definite so that it is administratively feasible for the court to determine whether a particular individual is a member of the proposed class. n1

The class definition identifies the persons who would be entitled to relief and bound by any judgment. n2 If the class definition is so vague that class members are not readily identifiable, then problems may arise regarding the provision of notice, the binding effect of a judgment, and even the propriety of the class action. n3

If the court determines that the proposed class description is not sufficiently definite, it need not deny class certification. Rather, the court may in its discretion limit or modify the definition of the proposed class to provide the necessary precision. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Murray v. Auslander, 244 F.3d 807, 810 (11th Cir. 2001) ; Clay v. American Tobacco Co., 188 F.R.D. 483, 490 (S.D. Ill. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Monumental Life Ins. Co., 365 F.3d 408, 413-414 (5th Cir. 2004) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ad-Hoc Comm. v. City of St. Louis, 143 F.R.D. 216, 219 (E.D. Mo. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 619 (6th Cir. 2007) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.41

§ 42.41 Named Class Representative Must Be Class Members with Standing

The named class representative must be a member of the class, and have proper standing. To have standing to sue as a class representative, the plaintiff must possess the same interest and suffer the same injury shared by all members of the class that he or she seeks to represent. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Schlesinger v. Reservists Comm. to Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 94 S. Ct. 2925, 41 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1974) ; Hadix v. Johnson, 182 F.3d 400, 406 n.3 (6th Cir. 1999) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.42

§ 42.42 Consequences of Claim Becoming Moot

[1] Jurisdiction Unaffected If Representative's Claim Becomes Moot After Certification

If a named class representative's claim becomes moot after class certification, the court continues to have jurisdiction to hear the merits, provided there remains a controversy between any class member and any defendant. n1

However, if the class representative's claim becomes moot before class certification, the entire action becomes moot. n2 To make a suit moot, the defendant must satisfy all the plaintiffs' demands. Otherwise, the plaintiffsare entitled to have the court rule on the merits of their claims. n3 An exception to the general rule concerning mootness may be applicable under either of the following circumstances and the class action may be able to survive even if the representative's claim becomes moot before certification: n4

- Due to the transitory nature of the claim, the representative's claim becomes moot before the district court can reasonably be expected to rule on a certification motion

- The defendant "picks off" the named representative by settling out the representative's claims before there is reasonable opportunity to file a motion for class certification, or before the court can reasonably be expected to rule on a certification motion

[2] Practice Tip: Early Class Definition and Certification May Be Critical

Properly defining and certifying the class at an early stage of the litigation is particularly important in cases in which the class representative's claim may become moot during the pendency of the litigation (e.g., graduation from a school, or release from prison).

If the class representative's claim becomes moot before class certification, the entire action becomes moot. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityMootnessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 401, 95 S. Ct. 553, 42 L. Ed. 2d 532 (1975) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Board of School Commissioners v. Jacobs, 420 U.S. 128, 129, 95 S. Ct. 848, 43 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1975) ; Comer v. Cisneros, 37 F.3d 775, 798 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Lusardi v. Xerox Corp., 975 F.2d 964, 974 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Gates v. Towery, 430 F.3d 429, 430-432 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Nasca v. GC Servs. Ltd. P'ship, 2002 U.S. Dist. 16992, at *6-*7 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 12, 2002).

(n5)Footnote 5. See [1], above.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.43

§ 42.43 Future Class Members Permissible

The definition of a class need not be so specific that every potential member of the class must be identifiable at the commencement of the action. Rather, a class may encompass future members, provided the court would be able to determine at any given time whether a particular individual is then a member of the class. Likewise, the particular members of the class may change over time, provided there is an administratively feasible method of identifying the class members at any particular time. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNonnamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Johnson v. Brelje, 482 F. Supp. 121, 123 (N.D. Ill. 1979) ; Esler v. Northrop Corp., 86 F.R.D. 20, 32 (W.D. Mo. 1979) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.44

§ 42.44 Less Precision in Class Definition Required in Rule 23(b)(2) Class Actions Seeking Injunctive or Declaratory Relief

A precise class definition is much less important in cases in which the plaintiff attempts to certify a class for injunctive or declaratory relief under Rule 23(b)(2).

Courts generally require that classes be defined with precision in order to ensure that they can identify those entitled to relief, those bound by the judgment, and those entitled to notice. In actions under Rule 23(b)(2), notice need not be given to all of the class members, and members do not have an opportunity to opt out of the class. Furthermore, the defendants are obligated to comply with any orders granting injunctive or declaratory relief, so that it may be unnecessary for the court to identify with precision the people who are entitled to enforce compliance, since the representative plaintiffs may do so. Thus, less precision in defining the class is required in actions seeking relief under Rule 23(b)(2) than in actions seeking damages under Rule 23(b)(3), in which notice is mandatory, and class members are given an opportunity to opt out. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDeclaratory Judgment ActionsState JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Monumental Life Ins. Co., 343 F.3d 331, 337-338 (5th Cir. 2003) ; McHan v. Grandbouche, 99 F.R.D. 260, 265 (D. Kan. 1983) ; Battle v. Pennsylvania, 629 F.2d 269, 271 n.1 (E.D. Pa. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
D. Determining Whether Identifiable Class Exists

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.45 through 42.49

[Reserved]

§§ 42.45[Reserved]

30 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
E. Establishing Numerosity of Parties

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.50

§ 42.50 Class Must Be So Numerous That Joinder of All Members Is Impractical

One or more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties on behalf of all only if the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. n1

The "numerosity" requirement ensures that a class action will proceed only if there is a real need for the class action device. The requirement does not demand that joinder of all potential class members would be impossible, but rather that joinder would be extremely difficult or inconvenient. n2

There is no set formula to determine whether a class is so numerous it should be certified, and the district court has wide latitude in the determining whether numerosity is present. n3

There is no magical threshold number that must be reached to demonstrate numerosity. Instead, whether the class is sufficiently numerous is judged by a variety of factors, including the nature of the claims and whether those claims could be expected to be brought by particular class members. n4

For discussion of the factors relevant to determining whether joinder of all of the class members would be impracticable, see § 42.51[1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Trevizo v. Adams, 455 F.3d 1155, 1162-1163 (10th Cir. 2006) ; Robidoux v. Celani, 987 F.2d 931, 935 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Trevizo v. Adams, 455 F.3d 1155, 1162-1163 (10th Cir. 2006) (court did not abuse its discretion in finding that class of 84 persons was not so large as to make joinder impracticable when names and addresses had been provided during discovery).

(n4)Footnote 4. Golden v. City of Columbus, 404 F.3d 950, 965-966 (6th Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
E. Establishing Numerosity of Parties

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.51

§ 42.51 Determining Numerosity

[1] Factors Relevant to Determining Impracticability of Joining All Class Members

Rule 23 does not require that class actions involve any specific number of putative class members. Rather, whether joinder of all of the class members would be impracticable (the standard for determining "numerosity") depends on the circumstances surrounding the case, and not merely on the number of class members. In addition to the size of the class, which if large enough may alone establish impracticability, the following factors are relevant in determining impracticability: n1

- Judicial economy arising from avoiding multiple actions. If the joinder of all claims into one proceeding would be expensive, time-consuming, and logistically unfeasible, then the impracticality requirement will be satisfied

- Geographic dispersion of class members. Wide geographic dispersion of class members supports a finding of impracticability of joinder

- Financial resources of class members. In cases involving sophisticated individuals with significant economic resources, joinder is less likely to be impracticable

- Ability of claimants to institute individual suits. If class members' individual claims involve only a small amount of damages, class members are unlikely to file separate actions, and courts have concluded that their joinder is impracticable; conversely, if the individual class members have considerable financial stakes in the litigation, then joinder is not likely to be impracticable

- Requests for prospective and injunctive relief that could affect future class members. Courts often find joinder impracticable in cases where plaintiffs request injunctive relief that could affect future class members, because parties who have not yet been injured, or who do not know that they have been injured, are unlikely to join a lawsuit

[2] Relationship of Class Size to Impracticality

- Numbers alone may be dispositive. The larger the class, the greater the chance of a finding of impracticability of joining all class members n2

- Fewer than 21 members is generally inadequate. In the absence of special circumstances, a class of fewer than 21 members generally fails to satisfy the numerosity requirement n3

- More than 40 members is generally adequate. Classes with more than 40 members generally satisfy the numerosity requirement n4

- Between 21 and 40 members receive varying treatment. A class of 32 has failed the numerosity requirement n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJoinder of Claims & RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Robidoux v. Celani, 987 F.2d 931, 936 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Fox v. Cheminova, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 113, 122 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Buford v. H & R Block, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 340, 348 (S.D. Ga. 1996) ; Lockwood Motors, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 162 F.R.D. 569, 574-575 (D. Minn. 1995) ; Mathis v. Bess, 138 F.R.D. 390, 393 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hodge v. McLean Trucking Co., 607 F.2d 1118, 1121 (5th Cir. 1979) ; Bivens v. Crowell, 138 F.R.D. 18, 19 (D.N.H. 1990) ; CL-Alexanders Laing & Cruickshank v. Goldfeld, 127 F.R.D. 454, 457-458 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Rodger v. Electronic Data Sys. Corp., 160 F.R.D. 532, 535 (E.D.N.C. 1995) ; Olen house v. Commodity Credit Corp., 136 F.R.D. 672, 679 (D. Kan. 1991) ; Leyva v. Buley, 125 F.R.D. 512, 515 (E.D. Wash. 1989) ; Patrykus v. Gomilla, 121 F.R.D. 357, 361 (N.D. Ill. 1988) ; Committee of Blind Vendors v. District of Columbia, 695 F. Supp. 1234, 1242 (D.D.C. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Kilgo v. Bowman Transp., Inc., 789 F.2d 859, 878 (11th Cir. 1986) ; Crawford v. Western Elec. Co., 614 F.2d 1300, 1305 (5th Cir. 1980) ; Bishop v. New York City Dep't of Housing Preservation and Dev., 141 F.R.D. 229, 235-236 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; Johnson v. Gross, 125 F.R.D. 169, 171 (W.D. Okla. 1989) , aff'd, 971 F.2d 1487 (10th Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
E. Establishing Numerosity of Parties

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.52

§ 42.52 Burden Is on Party Seeking Class Certification

To satisfy the numerosity requirement, n1 the party seeking certification need not state the exact number of members of the proposed class, or endeavor to identify each member. Rather, the movant need only provide some evidence or a reasonable estimate of the number of class members. n2

Common sense assumptions to support findings of numerosity are permitted. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 42.50.

(n2)Footnote 2. Siles v. ILGWU National Retirement Fund, 783 F.2d 923, 930 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1079 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Vickery v. Jones, 856 F. Supp. 1313, 1328 (S.D. Ill. 1994) ; Maywalt & Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 147 F.R.D. 51, 55 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; Sherman v. Griepentrog, 775 F. Supp. 1383, 1389 (D. Nev. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
E. Establishing Numerosity of Parties

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.53

§ 42.53 Presumption of Numerosity in Securities Litigation Cases

In securities litigation cases, courts generally assume that the numerosity requirement is satisfied for classes of sellers or buyers of nationally traded securities as long as there is evidence of a large number of stock transactions or of a large number of affected shareholders during the relevant time period. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesNumerosity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Zeidman v. J. Ray McDermott & Co., 651 F.2d 1030, 1039 (5th Cir. 1981) ; McEwen v. Digitran Sys., Inc., 160 F.R.D. 631, 636 (D. Utah 1994) ; Simpson v. Speciality Retail Concepts, 149 F.R.D. 94, 98 (M.D.N.C. 1993) ; Trief v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 144 F.R.D. 193, 198 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; CV Reit, Inc. v. Levy, 144 F.R.D. 690, 696 (S.D. Fla. 1992) ; Antonson v. Robertson, 141 F.R.D. 501, 505 (D. Kan. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
E. Establishing Numerosity of Parties

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.54 through 42.59

[Reserved]

§§ 42.54[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.60

§ 42.60 "Commonality" Requires That Questions of Law or Fact Must Be Common to Class

One of the prerequisites to class action certification is commonality, which means that there must be questions of law or fact common to the class. A single common question is sufficient. n1

If common questions do not arise among the class as defined in the complaint, the court may in its discretion redefine the putative class or create subclasses. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2); see Powers v. Hamilton County Pub. Defender Comm'n, 501 F.3d 592, 619 (6th Cir. 2007) ("The commonality requirement is satisfied if there is a single factual or legal question common to the entire class."); see also Staton v. Boeing Co., 327 F.3d 938, 953-956 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(5).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.61

§ 42.61 "Typicality" Requires That Named Class Representative's Claims or Defenses Must Be Typical of Class

One of the prerequisites to class action certification is typicality, which means that the claims or defenses of the class representatives must be typical of the claims or defenses of the class. n1 This requirement attempts to ensure that the interests of the class representatives are substantially aligned with those of the absent class members. It also promotes efficient case management and fair representation. n2

To satisfy the typicality requirement, the class representative's claims must arise from the same events, practice, or course of conduct, and must be based on the same legal theory as those of the class members. n3

Typicality issues often overlap with the analysis of other Rule 23 requirements. For example, in deciding whether to certify a class, courts frequently overlap the discussion of the typicality requirement with the Rule 23(a)(4) adequacy of representation requirement. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gen. Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 157 n.13, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Dukes v. Wal-Mart, Inc., 474 F.3d 1214, 1232 (9th Cir. 2007) ; Deiter v. Microsoft Corp., 436 F.3d 461, 466-468 (4th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Weiss v. York Hosp., 745 F.2d 786, 809 n.36 (3d Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.62

§ 42.62 "Typicality" Distinguished From "Commonality"

While the commonality inquiry focuses on whether there are questions of law or fact common to the class, the typicality inquiry focuses on whether the claims of the putative class representatives are typical of the class sharing common questions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.63

§ 42.63 Typicality Does Not Require Complete Identity of Claims

Complete identity of claims is not required to establish typicality; some factual differences are permissible. The critical inquiry is whether the class representative's claims have the same essential characteristics of the putative class. n1

Differences in damages do not destroy typicality. n2 If the claims arise from similar courses of conduct and share the same legal theory, the presence of factual differences among the claims will not defeat typicality. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Appleyard v. Wallace, 754 F.2d 955, 958 (11th Cir. 1985) ; De La Fuente v. Stokely-Van Camp, Inc., 713 F.2d 225, 232 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. DeBoer v. Mellon Mortg. Co., 64 F.3d 1171, 1174 (8th Cir. 1995) ; Hoxworth v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., Inc., 980 F.2d 912, 923 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Appleyard v. Wallace, 754 F.2d 955, 958 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Daffin v. Ford Motor Co., 458 F.3d 549, 552-553 (6th Cir. 2006) (class representative's breach of warranty claims based on defective car part were typical of class, even though some class members had not experienced manifestation of defect).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.64

§ 42.64 Unique Defenses of Named Class Representative May Destroy Typicality

If the class representative's claim is subject to one or more unique defenses that likely will be central to the litigation, typicality will not be found because of the fear that the defense will occupy the class representative to the detriment of the interests of absent class members. n1

However, a unique defense that is not central to the litigation, in contrast, does not create a significant danger that the class representative will become distracted, and therefore does not defeat typicality or class certification. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Beck v. Maximus, Inc., 457 F.3d 291, 295-301 (3d Cir. 2006) ; Hanon v. Dataproducts Corp., 976 F.2d 497, 508-509 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Rodger v. Electronic Data Sys. Corp., 160 F.R.D. 532, 538-539 (E.D.N.C. 1995) ; Trief v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 144 F.R.D. 193, 200-201 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; In re Amerifirst Sec. Litig., 139 F.R.D. 423, 428-429 (S.D. Fla. 1991) ; Riordan v. Smith Barney, 113 F.R.D. 60, 63 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.65

§ 42.65 Typicality Not Defeated by Statute of Limitations

The fact that a class representative's claim may be barred by an applicable statute of limitations is not a bar to typicality. Barring typicality on the basis of a limitation defense requires the court to consider the merits in deciding whether to certify a class, which is not permitted. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonalityCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicalityGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. CV Reit, Inc. v. Levy, 144 F.R.D. 690, 697 (S.D. Fla. 1992) ; Goldwater v. Alston & Bird, 116 F.R.D. 342, 351 (S.D. Ill. 1987) ; Rishcoff v. Commodity Fluctuations Sys., 111 F.R.D. 381, 382 (E.D. Pa. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.66

§ 42.66 Typicality May Be Defeated If Named Class Representative Does Not Have Claims Against Each Defendant

[1] Named Class Representatives Generally Must Be Injured by Each Defendant to Satisfy Typicality Requirement

At least one class representative must have a claim against and be injured by each defendant to meet the typicality requirement. If no class representative has a cause of action against one or more of the defendants, the lack of typicality will preclude class certification, at least as to those defendants. n1

[2] Exceptions to General Rule

Courts have recognized exceptions to the principle that at a named plaintiff must have been injured by each named defendant. These exceptions are:

- If the defendants conspired to injure the plaintiffs n2

- If the defendants are "juridically linked"; a "juridical link" is some legal relationship that relates all defendants in a manner so that a single resolution of the dispute is preferred to multiple, individual actions n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesTypicality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Thompson v. Board of Educ. of Romeo Com. Schools, 709 F.2d 1200, 1204-1205 (6th Cir. 1983) ; LaMar v. H.& B. Novelty & Loan Co., 489 F.2d 461, 466 (9th Cir. 1973) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Butt v. Allegheny Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., 116 F.R.D. 486, 488-489 (E.D. Va. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Angel Music, Inc., v. ABC Sports, Inc., 112 F.R.D. 70, 74-77 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) ; Thillens, Inc. v. Community Currency Exchange Asso., 97 F.R.D. 668, 676 (N.D. Ill. 1983) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
F. Establishing "Commonality" and "Typicality"

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.67 through 42.79

[Reserved]

§§ 42.67[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.80

§ 42.80 "Adequate Representation" Applies to Both Named Class Representative and Class Counsel

Before a class action will be certified, it must be demonstrated that the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class. n1

Adequate representation requires two elements: n2

- The class representative must not have interests adverse to those of the class
- Class counsel must be qualified, experienced, and generally able to conduct the proposed litigation

In determining the adequacy of the named class representative, courts also consider whether the representative will vigorously advocate the class claims. n3 In order to be an adequate class representative, a named party must be a member of the class at the time certification is sought. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Crawford v. Honig, 37 F.3d 485, 487 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 598 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Hoxworth v. Blinder Robinson & Co., Inc., 980 F.2d 912, 924 (3d Cir. 1992) ; In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, 960 F.2d 285, 291 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 478-484 (5th Cir. 2001) ; In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1083 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Andrews v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 95 F.3d 1014, 1023 (11th Cir. 1996) ; Hassine v. Jeffes, 846 F.2d 169, 179 (3d Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Paton v. New Mexico Highlands Univ., 275 F.3d 1274, 1278-1280 (10th Cir. 2002) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.81

§ 42.81 Adequate Representation Is Most Critical Factor in Determining Class Certification

"Adequate representation" is the most critical factor in determining class certification. The requirement was designed to protect the due process rights of absent members of the class. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Products Liability Litigation, 55 F.3d 768, 784 (3d Cir. 1995) ; Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 721 (11th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.82

§ 42.82 Adequacy Determination Is Made on Case by Case Basis

What constitutes adequate representation is a question of fact that largely depends on the circumstances of the particular case. n1

The district court's adequacy determination will be reversed only for abuse of discretion. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 728 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Boley v. Brown, 10 F.3d 218, 223 (4th Cir. 1993) ; Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 728 (11th Cir. 1987) ; Malchman v. Davis, 761 F.2d 893, 899 (2d Cir. 1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.83

§ 42.83 Burden of Proof--Split in Authority

Courts have disagreed as to which party has the burden of proving adequacy of representation under Rule 23(a)(4). Most courts have held that the party seeking class certification carries the burden of proving that all of the Rule 23(a) requirements, including adequacy of representation, are satisfied. n1 However, some courts have held that the party challenging class certification has the burden of proving the inadequacy of the named representative. Courts have held that, unlike the other factors that determine certification, the burden of proof lies on the party challenging the adequacy of the representative rather than on the party seeking certification. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of RepresentationEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Buford v. H&R Block, 168 F.R.D. 340, 348 (S.D. Ga. 1996) ; Morel v. Giuliani, 927 F. Supp. 622, 633 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ; Arnold v. United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., 158 F.R.D. 439, 448 (N.D. Cal. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Welch v. Board of Directors of Wildwood Golf Club, 146 F.R.D. 131, 136 (W.D. Pa. 1993) .

47 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.84

§ 42.84 Court Has Continuing Obligation to Ensure Adequacy of Representation at All Stages of Litigation

The court has a continuing obligation to ensure adequacy of representation at all stages of litigation. n1

If events occurring after class certification render a class representative an inadequate representative, the court may remedy the problem by substituting a new representative, by excluding those class members who are not adequately represented, or by bifurcating the trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Foe v. Cuomo, 892 F.2d 196, 198 (2d Cir. 1989) ; Key v. Gillette Co., 782 F.2d 5, 7 (1st Cir. 1986) ; Shroder v. Suburban Coastal Corp., 729 F.2d 1371, 1374 (11th Cir. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.85

§ 42.85 Parameters of Adequate Representation by Named Class Representative

[1] Named Class Representative Acts as Fiduciary

The class representative acts as fiduciary for the entire class, and as such owes the class a duty of loyalty. n1

[2] Position of Named Class Representative Need Not Be Identical to That of Class Members, and Need Not Be Best Representative

The interests of the named representative must not be in conflict with or antagonistic to those of the class members. However, the position of the class representative need not be identical to that of the class members. n2

There is no requirement for the named representative to be the best possible representative. n3

[3] Conflict Between Representative and Class Must Be More Than Merely Speculative to Defeat Adequacy Requirement

Speculative conflict does not make the class representative inadequate. n4

Disagreements among class members as to the proper type or scope of relief will not create an impermissible conflict of interest, if the class members agree that the defendant is liable. n5

In addition, for a conflict of interest to bar class certification, the conflict must relate to the subject matter of the litigation. n6

In situations in which there is a close familial bond between class counsel and a class representative, there is a danger that the representative might have some interests in conflict with the best interests of the class as a whole when, for example, making decisions that impact on attorney's fees. n7

[4] Named Class Representative Inadequate If Subject to Unique Defense Central to Litigation

If the class representative is subject to a defense that potentially will become a focus of the litigation, the adequacy requirement will not be satisfied. n8

Class treatment will generally be denied if a unique defense is even arguably present. n9

However, if the court determines that the defense has absolutely no merit, the defense will not preclude class certification. n10

[5] Named Class Representative Must Ensure Vigorous Prosecution of Litigation

In determining the adequacy of the named representative, courts consider whether the representative will vigorously advocate the class claim. n11

In assessing whether a class representative will vigorously prosecute a class action case, a court sometimes will consider the actual progress of the proceedings to that point. Delays in seeking class certification, failures to timely prosecute the litigation, and failures to comply with reasonable disclosure obligations or discovery requests are factors that suggest that the class representative is inadequate. n12

[6] Named Class Representative Should Not Delay in Seeking Certification or Fail to Respond to Opposing Party

Delays in seeking class certification and failure to timely prosecute the litigation are indicative of inadequate class representation. n13

[7] Named Class Representative Should Be Familiar With Action and Not Abdicate Conduct of Case to Counsel

The named class representative must:

- At least minimally supervise class counsel n14
- Possess at least a minimal degree of knowledge relating to the class action n15
- Possess a general understanding of the nature of class action litigation n16

Knowledge of the legal or technical aspects of the case is not necessary. n17 Courts properly become concerned when a class representative is or appears to be prosecuting a class action for the benefit of class counsel rather than for the benefit of the class. Therefore, if a class representative is closely affiliated with class counsel, courts often consider this to be a disqualifying conflict of interest. n18

[8] Size of Financial Interest in Outcome May Be Relevant But Is Not Determinative

A large financial interest by the named class representative in the outcome of the litigation is more likely to support a finding of adequacy. n19 However, additional requirements apply in securities class actions. Under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act (PSLRA), the court ordinarily must appoint as lead plaintiff the person who requests to be appointed lead plaintiff and has the largest financial interest in the relief sought by the class. The statutory requirements relating to the lead plaintiff are in addition to the typicality and adequacy requirements that apply to all class representatives under Rule 23. n19.1

[9] Ability of Named Class Representative to Finance Litigation

In view of its relationship to vigorous prosecution, the ability and willingness of a class representative to finance the litigation is relevant to determining the adequacy of representation. n20

In class actions under Rule 23(b)(3), class representatives must finance the costs of notice to all class members. n21

[10] Named Class Representative May Need to Demonstrate Financial Means

Many courts require class representatives to make an affirmative demonstration of their ability to pay the costs of notice by a showing of either:

- Regularly paid litigation expenses n22
- An established fund created to pay the litigation costs n23

Traditionally, class counsel may only advance litigation costs if the class representative agrees to reimburse the attorney. n24

[11] Honesty, Credibility, and Motives of Named Class Representative Must Be Relevant to Issues in Litigation to Affect Adequacy Determination

If the credibility or honesty of the class representative threatens to become a focus of the litigation, the class representative will be held to be an inadequate representative. n25

Conversely, if the credibility of the class representative is not subject to serious question or does not threaten to become a central issue in the litigation, then a credibility issue will not defeat class certification. n26

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersNamed MembersCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 726 (11th Cir. 1987) ; Kline v. Wolf, 702 F.2d 400, 402-403 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Servs. Inc., 908 F.2d 1338, 1349-1350 (7th Cir. 1990) , rev'd on other grounds, 500 U.S. 90 (1991) ; In re Tetracycline Cases, 107 F.R.D. 719, 730 (W.D. Mo. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. McGowan v. Faulkner Concrete Pipe Co., 659 F.2d 554, 559 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Rosario v. Livaditis, 963 F.2d 1013, 1018-1019 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Becher v. Long Island Lighting Co., 164 F.R.D. 144, 151 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) , amended on other grounds, 172 F.R.D. 28 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) ; In re Telectronics Pacing Sys., Inc., Accufix Atrial "J" Leads Prods. Liab. Litig., 164 F.R.D. 222, 229 (S.D. Ohio 1995) ; Alvarado Partners, L.P. v. Mehta, 130 F.R.D. 673, 676 (D. Colo. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Stewart v. Winter, 669 F.2d 328, 335 (5th Cir. 1982) ; Walsh v. Northrup-Grumman Corp., 162 F.R.D. 440, 447-448 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) ; Hispanics United of DuPage County v. Village of Addison, 160 F.R.D. 681, 689-690 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. German by German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 168 F.R.D. 145, 154-155 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; Rentschler v. Carnahan, 160 F.R.D. 114, 117 (E.D. Mo. 1995) ; Adair v. Sorenson, 134 F.R.D. 13, 19-20 (D. Mass. 1991) ; Alvarado Partners, L.P. v. Mehta, 130 F.R.D. 673, 676 (D. Colo. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Petrovic v. AMOCO Oil Co., 200 F.3d 1140, 1154-1155 (8th Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Gary Plastic Packaging Corp., v. Merrill Lynch, 903 F.2d 176, 178-180 (2d Cir 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Kline v. Wolf, 702 F.2d 400, 402-403 (2d Cir. 1983) ; J.H. Cohn & Co. v. American Appraisal Assoc., Inc., 628 F.2d 994, 998-999 (7th Cir. 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Hardy v. City Optical Inc., 39 F.3d 765, 770 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Koenig v. Benson, 117 F.R.D. 330, 335-338 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Berger v. Compaq Computer Corp., 257 F.3d 475, 478-484 (5th Cir. 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Culver v. City of Milwaukee, 277 F.3d 908, 912 (7th Cir. 2002) .

(n13)Footnote 13. East Texas Motor Freight Sys., Inc. v. Rodriguez, 431 U.S. 395, 405, 97 S. Ct. 1891, 52 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1977) ; Andrews v. Bechtel Power Corp., 780 F.2d 124, 130 (1st Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1172 (1985) ; McGowan v. Faulkner Concrete Pipe Co., 659 F.2d 554, 559 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Dubin v. Miller, 132 F.R.D. 269, 273 (D. Colo. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 727 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Baffa v. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Sec. Corp., 222 F.3d 52, 60-62 (2d Cir. 2000) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Civic Assoc. of Deaf v. Giuliani, 915 F. Supp. 622, 633 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; In re United Energy Corp. Solar Power Modules Tax Shelter Inv. Sec. Litig., 122 F.R.D. 251, 258 (C.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Trautz v. Weisman, 846 F. Supp. 1160, 1167 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See London v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 340 F.3d 1246, 1255 (11th Cir. 2003) .

(n19)Footnote 19. In re Boardwalk Marketplace Sec. Litig., 122 F.R.D. 4, 8 (D. Conn. 1988) .

(n20)Footnote 19.1. See In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 243-244 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Palmer v. BRG, Inc., 874 F.2d 1417, 1420-1421 (11th Cir. 1990) , rev'd on other grounds, 498 U.S. 46 (1990) (en banc); Rolex Employees Retirement Trust v. Mentor Graphics Corp., 136 F.R.D. 658 (D. Or. 1991) .

(n22)Footnote 21. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Tedesco v. Mishkin, 689 F. Supp. 1327, 1336 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n24)Footnote 23. Pension Benefit Guar. Corp. v. LTV Corp., 122 F.R.D. 436, 440 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ; Jansen v. Greyhound Corp., 692 F. Supp. 1022, 1028 (N.D. Iowa 1986) .

(n25)Footnote 24. See ABA Model Rules of Professional Responsibility, 1.8(e).

(n26)Footnote 25. Kline v. Wolf, 702 F.2d 400, 402-403 (2d Cir. 1983) ; Wagner v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb Inc., 646 F. Supp. 643, 660-661 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n27)Footnote 26. German by German v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 168 F.R.D. 145, 154-155 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ; Adair v. Sorenson, 134 F.R.D. 13, 19-20 (D. Mass. 1991) ; Dubin v. Miller, 132 F.R.D. 269, 272 (D. Colo. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.86

§ 42.86 Class Counsel Must Be Qualified, Experienced, and Able to Conduct Proposed Litigation

[1] Appointing Class Counsel

Unless a statute provides otherwise, a court that certifies a class must appoint class counsel. n1 An attorney appointed to serve as class counsel must fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class. n2

Class counsel must be qualified, experienced, and generally able to conduct the proposed litigation. n3

Class counsel has a fiduciary duty of loyalty to the class members. n4

[2] Courts Consider Counsel's Record, Expertise, and Resources

In appointing class counsel, the court must consider the following: n5

- The work counsel has done in identifying or investigating potential claims in the action
- Counsel's experience in handling class actions, other complex litigation, and claims of the type asserted in the action
- Counsel's knowledge of the applicable law
- The resources counsel will commit to representing the class

In appointing class counsel, the court may consider any other matter pertinent to counsel's ability to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class. n6 The court may also direct potential class counsel to provide information on any subjectpertinent to the appointment and to propose terms for attorney's fees and nontaxable costs. n7

[3] Courts Consider Ethical Conduct of Counsel

In determining whether counsel will provide adequate representation, courts also consider whether counsel has acted unethically in the present case or other litigation. n8 In evaluating any breach of ethical standards, a court will consider the seriousness of the violation and any resulting prejudice to the class. n9

[4] Conflicts of Interest With Class Impermissible

Class counsel must not have conflicts of interest with the class. n10

Depending on the nature of the conflict, class members may be able to retain their counsel by waiving the potential conflict. n11

[5] Appointment Procedure

The court may designate interim counsel to act on behalf of the putative class before determining whether to certify the action as a class action. n12 When there is one applicant for appointment as class counsel, the court may appoint that applicant only if the applicant is adequately qualified. n13 If more than one adequate applicant seeks appointment as class counsel, the court must appoint the applicant best able to represent the interests of the class. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1); see also In re Merck & Co. Sec. Litig., 432 F.3d 261, 266-268 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1); UAW v. GMC, 497 F.3d 615, 626 (6th Cir. 2007) (adequacy of representation turns in part on competency of class counsel and in part on absence of conflicts of interest).

(n3)Footnote 3. Crawford v. Honig, 37 F.3d 485, 487 (9th Cir. 1994) ; In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 960 F.2d 285, 290 (2d Cir. 1992) ; Hoxworth v. Blinder Robinson & Co., Inc., 980 F.2d 912, 924 (3d Cir. 1992) ; Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 721 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 800 F.2d 14, 17-18 (2d Cir. 1986) ; Wagner v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb, Inc., 646 F. Supp. 643, 661 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(C).

(n8)Footnote 8. Piambino v. Bailey, 757 F.2d 1112, 1143-1146 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Wagner v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb, Inc., 646 F. Supp. 643, 661-662 (N.D. Ill. 1986) ; In re Mid-Atlantic Toyota Antitrust Litig., 93 F.R.D. 485, 488 (D. Md. 1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Phillips v. Joint Legislative Comm. on Performance and Expenditure Review, 637 F.2d 1014, 1023 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Lowenschuss v. Bluhdorn, 613 F.2d 18, 20 (2d Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 840 (1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Ray M. by Juana D. v. Board of Educ. of City of New York, 884 F. Supp. 696, 706-707 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.87

§ 42.87 Effect of Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 on Adequacy of Representation in Securities Litigation

[1] Act Enacted to Address Abusive Securities Fraud Cases

To address a perceived rise in abusive securities fraud lawsuits, Congress enacted the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. n1 The Act applies to all securities fraud actions commenced on or after December 22, 1995.

[2] Lead Plaintiff Must Be Most Capable Representative

Pursuant to the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, the lead plaintiff should be the person or entity most capable of adequately representing the interests of class members. n1.1 The Act establishes a rebuttable presumption that the most adequate plaintiff is the plaintiff with the largest financial interest in the relief sought by the class. The presumption may be rebutted by showing that the plaintiff with the largest financial interest would not fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class, or is subject to unique defenses. n2

[3] Most Adequate Plaintiff Chooses Lead Counsel

Pursuant to the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, the most adequate plaintiff chooses lead counsel, subject to court approval. n3

[4] Ownership of Securities by Lead Counsel

If lead counsel owns an interest in the securities that are the subject of the class litigation, the court must determine whether such an interest constitutes a conflict of interest that disqualifies counsel from representing the class. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of RepresentationSecurities LawLiabilityPrivate Securities LitigationLead CounselSecurities LawLiabilityPrivate Securities LitigationLead Plaintiff

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. 104-67, 109 Stat. 737.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 F.3d 201, 243-244 (3d Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. §§ 77z-1(a)(3)(B)(i), (iii), 78u-4(a)(3)(B)(i), (iii).

(n4)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. §§ 77z-1(a)(3)(B)(v), 78u-4(a)(3)(B)(v).

(n5)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. §§ 77z-1(a)(8), 78u-4(a)(8).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
G. Determining Whether Representative Parties Will Fairly and Adequately Represent Class

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.88 through 42.99

[Reserved]

§§ 42.88[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
1. General Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.100

§ 42.100 Types of Class Actions Maintainable

If all four prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 a class action may be maintained, provided the action falls within one of the following subdivisions of Rule 23(b):

- Rule 23(b)(1): concerned with the risk that separate adjudications by or against individual members of a class would have on the putative class parties n2
- Rule 23(b)(2): involves injunctive or declaratory relief n3
- Rule 23(b)(3): focuses on predominant common issues n4

It is not unusual for a case to qualify as a class action under more than one of the three categories of class actions set out in Rule 23(b). n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.30-42.32.

(n2)Footnote 2. See §§ 42.110-42.116, 42.130-42.136; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See §§ 42.150-42.154; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See §§ 42.160-42.168; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. In re A.H. Robins Co, Inc., 880 F.2d 709, 728 (4th Cir. 1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
1. General Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.101

§ 42.101 Preference for Rule 23(b)(1) and 23(b)(2) Actions Over 23(b)(3) Actions

If a choice exists between certification under Rule 23(b)(3) and either Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2), courts generally certify the class action pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2). One of the reasons is that members of a Rule 23(b)(3) class action are entitled to opt out of the action. n1 A mandatory class action is seen as preferable because there is no risk that individual members will opt out of the class and pursue separate litigation that might prejudice other class members or the defendants. n2

Moreover, mandatory notice to all class members pursuant to Rule 23(c)(2) is required only for class actions under Rule 23(b)(3). n3 Class actions requiring notice are less preferable because notice may impede the judiciary's need to expedite the orderly resolution of conflict.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 42.168.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Robertson v. National Basketball Ass'n, 556 F.2d 682, 685 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2); see also § 42.168.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
1. General Requirements

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.102 through 42.109

[Reserved]

§§ 42.102[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.110

§ 42.110 Overview of Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

The court may certify an action as a class action under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) if: n1

- There is a substantial risk of separate actions being brought in the absence of a class action
- The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class
- The inconsistent or varying adjudications would, in turn, establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class

Actions under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) address the risk posed to the party opposing a class; actions under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) address the risk posed to the individual members of a class. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.111

§ 42.111 Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requires Realistic Possibility of Separate Litigation in Absence of Class Certification

Implicit in Rule 23(b)(1)(A) is that there must be a realistic possibility of separate litigation in the absence of class certification. n1

Certification will be denied if separate adjudications would be unlikely. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litig., 829 F.2d 1539, 1544-1545 (11th Cir. 1987) ; Roper v. Consurve, Inc., 578 F.2d 1106, 1111 n.3 (5th Cir. 1978) ; Eliasen v. Green Bay & W. R.R., 93 F.R.D. 408, 412 (E.D. Wis. 1982) , aff'd, 705 F.2d 461 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Eliasen v. Green Bay & W. R.R., 93 F.R.D. 408, 412 (E.D. Wis. 1982) , aff'd, 705 F.2d 461 (7th Cir. 1983) ; Roper v. Consurve, Inc., 578 F.2d 1106, 1111 n.3 (5th Cir. 1978) ; Ruland v. General Elec. Co., 94 F.R.D. 164, 166 (D. Conn. 1982) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.112

§ 42.112 Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requires Risk That Separate Litigation Will Result in Varying Adjudications

Rule 23(b)(1)(A) provides that there must be the risk that separate litigation will result in varying adjudications that would establish incompatible or varying standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n1

In general, Rule 23(b)(1)(A) is satisfied only if inconsistent judgments in separate suits would place the party opposing the class in the position of being unable to comply with one judgment without violating the terms of another. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litigation, 829 F.2d 1539, 1545 (11th Cir. 1987) ; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. United States Dist. Ct., 523 F.2d 1083, 1086 (9th Cir. 1975) ; National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh v. Midland Bancor, 158 F.R.D. 681, 687 (D. Kan. 1994) ; Westman v. Textron, 151 F.R.D. 229, 231 (D. Conn. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.113

§ 42.113 Only Actions for Declaratory or Injunctive Relief May Be Certified Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

Rule 23(b)(1)(A) only applies to actions in which the defendant could be sued for different and incompatible affirmative relief, as opposed to actions seeking money damages. n1

Thus, Rule 23(b)(1)(A) class certification is appropriate in a case in which the class seeks injunctive or declaratory relief to alter an ongoing course of conduct that is either legal or illegal as to all members of the class. Rule 23(b)(1)(A) does not apply to actions seeking compensatory damages. n2

A request for money damages in addition to injunctive or declaratory relief does not preclude Rule 23(b)(1)(A) certification unless the injunctive or declaratory relief is incidental to the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh v. Midland Bancor, 158 F.R.D. 681, 687 (D. Kan. 1994) ; Employees Ins. of Wausau v. Federal Dep. Ins. Corp., 112 F.R.D. 52, 56-57 (E.D. Tenn.1986) ; McBirney v. Autrey, 106 F.R.D. 240, 245 (N.D. Tex. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litigation, 829 F.2d 1539, 1545 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Copley Pharmaceutical, Inc., 158 F.R.D. 485, 490 (D. Wyo. 1994) ; Pruitt v. Allied Chem. Corp., 85 F.R.D. 100, 107 (E.D. Va. 1980) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.114

§ 42.114 Certification of Defendant Classes Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

Rule 23(b)(1)(A) expressly provides that defendant classes may be certified, provided the action satisfies the Rule's requirement that individual litigation could establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See First Fed. of Mich. v. Barrow, 878 F.2d 912, 919 (6th Cir. 1989) .

60 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.115

§ 42.115 No Right to Notice Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

Members of a class certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(A) are not entitled to notice of the action. n1

However, for any class certified under Rule 23(b)(1) the court may direct appropriate notice to the class. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2); U.S. Trust Co. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ; Walsh v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 726 F.2d 956, 963 n.3 (3d Cir. 1983) ; United States Trust Co. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.116

§ 42.116 No Right to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

Members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(A) class are not entitled to opt out of the action. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Walsh v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 726 F.2d 956, 963 n.3 (3d Cir. 1983) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
2. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.117 through 42.129

[Reserved]

§§ 42.117[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.130

§ 42.130 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Actions Focus on Preserving Limited Funds for Class Members

A class action may be maintained under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) if: n1

- The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of individual adjudications; and

- The individual adjudications would, as a practical matter, be dispositive of the interests of other class members or substantially impair or impede the ability of other members to protect their interests.

Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is designed to preserve a limited fund against individual claims of class members that could exhaust the fund and leave subsequent claimants with no remedy. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(1)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1303 (2d Cir. 1990) ; see § 42.133[1].

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.131

§ 42.131 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Compared With Rule 23(b)(1)(A)

Rule 23(b)(1)(A) focuses on the possible prejudice to the party opposing the class, n1 whereas Rule 23(b)(1)(B) focuses on the members of the putative class, and seeks to protect them against situations in which they would be prejudiced by separate litigation. To warrant class certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(B), the risk of prejudice need only be practical, not legal or technical. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 42.110.

(n2)Footnote 2. Alexander Grant & Co. v. McAlister, 116 F.R.D. 583, 590 (S.D. Ohio 1987) ; Esler v. Northrop Corp., 86 F.R.D. 20, 38 (W.D. Mo. 1979) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.132

§ 42.132 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Inapplicable to Actions for Money Damages Only

Rule 23(b)(1)(B) applies to cases seeking declaratory or injunctive relief in which one member's joint or common right is affected by other members' litigation. Certification under the Rule is limited to cases in which no individual or unique facts exist. n1

Rule 23(b)(1)(B) does not apply to actions seeking money damages only. However, a request for money damages does not preclude certification, provided injunctive or declaratory relief is also sought, and such relief is not incidental to the action. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDeclaratory Judgment ActionsState JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesMonetary Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Bazemore v. Friday, 478 U.S. 385, 406-407, 106 S. Ct. 3000, 92 L. Ed. 2d 315 (1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See White v. NFL, 822 F. Supp. 1389, 1407-1409 (D. Minn. 1993) , aff'd, 41 F.3d 402 (8th Cir. 1994) ; Robertson v. National Basketball Ass'n, 556 F.2d 682, 685 (2d Cir. 1977) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.133

§ 42.133 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Commonly Used in Limited Fund Cases

[1] Pool of Assets May Be Insufficient to Satisfy All Claims Against the Fund

Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is most commonly used in "limited fund" cases, which are actions in which any recovery will come from a fixed pool of assets that is or may be insufficient to satisfy all the claims against the fund. The fund must be the plaintiff's sole source of recovery. n1

Insolvency may also be the basis of a limited fund. n2

Certification of a class in limited fund cases is intended to ensure that allocation of the defendant's finite funds does not depend on which party rushes to the courthouse first or chooses a courthouse that can render swifter results than others. n3 Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is thus designed to preserve a limited fund for the benefit of the entire class, against individual claims of class members that could exhaust the fund and leave subsequent claimants with no remedy. n4

[2] Limited Fund Cases Are Equitable in Nature

Limited fund cases are considered to be equitable in nature, even though they involve money damages. n5

[3] Courts Differ Over Extent of Risk That Must Be Shown to Obtain Limited Fund Certification

Rule 23(b)(1)(B) requires a plaintiff to show some risk that a limited fund would subvert the rights of some plaintiffs if individual litigation were to proceed. However, courts have differed over the extent of risk that plaintiffs must establish. The Ninth Circuit has adopted the most stringent standard. That court has expressly barred limited fund certification under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) unless a party shows that separate actions will inescapably or necessarily result in the exhaustion of a limited fund prior to the satisfaction of all class members' claims. n6

Other courts, however, have concluded that the proponent of class certification need only show a substantial probability that limitations on the fund's resources will affect the plaintiffs' claims. n7 Under this standard, the plaintiff must establish more than a mere possibility, but less than an absolute likelihood, that, if damages are awarded, the claims of earlier litigants will exhaust the defendant's assets. n8

[4] Specific Evidence Must Be Provided Regarding Limited Fund

To obtain Rule 23(b)(1)(B) certification on the basis of a limited fund, a party must submit specific evidence showing that the fund may be depleted through individual litigation before all members' claims can be satisfied. n9

Bare allegations that the fund at issue may be insufficient to pay all claims are not enough to support class certification. n10

Fact-finding hearings may be required to determine whether certification should be granted on a limited fund theory. n11

[5] Certification Granted If Likelihood That Earlier Plaintiff's Claims Will Exhaust Defendant's Assets

Class certification pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1)(B) is appropriate if evidence establishes a likelihood that if damages are awarded in individual litigation, the claims of the earlier plaintiffs will exhaust the defendants' assets. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litigation, 829 F.2d 1539, 1546 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 982 F.2d 721, 738 (2d Cir. 1992) , modified on other grounds, 993 F.2d 7 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 982 F.2d 721, 738 (2d Cir. 1992) , modified on other grounds, 993 F.2d 7 (1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1303 (2d Cir. 1990) ; Waldron v. Raymark Indus., 124 F.R.D. 235, 238 n.1 (N.D. Ga. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 982 F.2d 721, 738 (2d Cir. 1992) , modified on other grounds, 993 F.2d 7 (1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. In re Northern Dist. of Cal., Dalkon Shield IUD. Prod. Liab. Litig., 693 F.2d 847, 851-852 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Trautz v. Weisman, 846 F. Supp. 1160, 1169 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) ; In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 100 F.R.D. 718, 724-725 (E.D.N.Y. 1983) , aff'd, 818 F.2d 145 (2d Cir. 1987) , cert. denied sub nom., Pinkney v. Dow Chem. Co., 484 U.S. 1004 (1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 129 B.R. 710, 765 (S.D.N.Y. & E.D.N.Y. 1991) , vacated on other grounds, 982 F.2d 721 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 9. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1303 (2d Cir. 1990) ; In re Northern Dist. of Cal., Dalkon Shield IUD. Prod. Liab. Litig., 693 F.2d 847, 852 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Trautz v. Weisman, 846 F. Supp. 1160, 1168-1169 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. In re Bendectin Prod. Liab. Litig., 749 F.2d 300, 306 (6th Cir. 1984) ; In re Northern Dist. of Cal., Dalkon Shield IUD. Prod. Liab. Litig., 693 F.2d 847, 852 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n12)Footnote 12. In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 982 F.2d 721, 738 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.134

§ 42.134 Separate Punitive Damages Classes May Be Certified Under Limited Fund and "Limited Generosity" Theories

In a number of cases, courts have considered certifying, pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1)(B), separate classes covering only claims for punitive damages. Plaintiffs have offered two theories in support of such certification. Under the first theory, a "limited fund" approach, certification of a punitive damages class is appropriate because the defendants may not have sufficient assets to satisfy multiple large punitive damage awards. n1 If plaintiffs provide insufficient evidence that the defendants will be unable to pay multiple punitive damage awards, certification under the limited fund theory will be denied. n2

The "limited generosity theory" operates under the assumption that there is a limit to the number of times a defendant should be punished for a single transgression. Under this theory, certification is considered appropriate if a court, a jury, a state law, or the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution would limit repetitive awards of punitive damages so that later plaintiffs essentially would be ineligible for such awards. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re First Commodity Corp. of Boston Customer Accounts Litig., 119 F.R.D. 301, 312 (D. Mass. 1987) ; In re Federal Skywalk Cases, 93 F.R.D. 415, 424 (W.D. Mo. 1982) , vacated on other grounds, 680 F.2d 1175 (8th Cir. 1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Simon II Litig. v. Philip Morris USA Inc. (In re Simon II Litig.), 407 F.3d 125, 134-138 (2d Cir. 2005) ; see also In re Northern Dist. of Cal., Dalkon Shield IUD. Prod. Liab. Litig., 693 F.2d 847, 852 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 166 (2d Cir. 1987) ; In re School Asbestos

School Litigation, 789 F.2d 996, 1004 (3d Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.135

§ 42.135 Certification of Defendant Classes Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

For a defendant class to be certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B), the individual defendants' interests must be impaired or impeded by separate litigation. Unlike the certification of a plaintiff class, courts rarely certify defendant classes in limited fund cases, because plaintiffs, rather than defendants, are likely to seek money damages from a limited fund. Nevertheless, courts have certified defendant classes on limited fund grounds in two situations. First, one court has certified a defendant class in an interpleader action, in which the plaintiff sought to distribute monies to the defendants from the proceeds of a settlement involving bonds held by members of the defendant class. n1

Second, defendant classes have been certified if the class consists of partners holding common professional liability insurance policies that could be exhausted through separate lawsuits, leaving subsequently-tried partners to pay their legal fees and any money judgments out of their own pockets. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersDefendantsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States Trust Co. of N.Y. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 418-419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Chambers Development Sec. Litig., 912 F. Supp. 822, 836 (W.D. Pa. 1995) ; Alexander Grant & Co. v. McAlister, 116 F.R.D. 583, 590 (S.D. Ohio 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.136

§ 42.136 No Right to Notice or to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

[1] Members of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Have No Absolute Right to Notice

Members of a class certified under Rule 23(b)(1)(B) do not have an absolute right to be notified about the action. n1 However, for any class certified under Rule 23(b)(1) the court may direct appropriate notice to the class. n2

[2] Court Has Discretion to Require Notice

The court in its discretion may issue an order requiring that notice be given to some or all of the members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class informing them of a particular step in the action, and affording them the opportunity to participate in the action or otherwise make their views known. n3

[3] Members of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Have No Absolute Right to Opt Out

Like members of a class certified pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1)(A), members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(A) class do not have an absolute right to opt out of the action. n4

[4] Courts Have Permitted Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

Rule 23 does not contain any provision specifically authorizing the court to exercise discretion to permit members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class to opt out of the action. Nevertheless, some courts have stated that because Rule 23 does not expressly preclude an exercise of discretion, members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class may be permitted to opt out under appropriate circumstances. These courts have held that although the court usually should not allow a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) class member to opt out, this does not mean that the court should never permit it. For example, the right to opt out may not be exercised solely at the instance of the party seeking to opt out, but a class member may opt out at the invitation of the district court. n5

[5] Due Process May Require Notice and Opportunity to Opt Out of Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Class Action

Although Rule 23(b)(1)(B) does not entitle members of a class to notice of the action or the opportunity to opt out, class members may have a right to these mechanisms under the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution. In 1985, the

Supreme Court held that a class member lacking minimum contacts with the forum state has a due process right to an opportunity to remove himself or herself from the class in an action seeking money damages. n6

Courts have generally agreed that a class member's due process right to opt out applies only in a case seeking primarily money damages. n7

In applying the Supreme Court's 1985 decision in Phillips Petroleum, some courts have refused to certify mandatory classes; n8 some courts have held that the putative class members must be afforded notice and an opportunity to contest the facts underlying the certification, but that exclusion from a properly certified class is not available; n9 and other courts have held that a judgment obtained in a class action does not bar an absent member's damage claims through the operation of res judicata. n10 Some courts have found that class members' due process rights are not implicated because the members had sufficient contacts with the forum. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2); In re Dennis Greenman Sec. Litig., 829 F.2d 1539, 1544 (11th Cir. 1987) ; Walsh v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 726 F.2d 956, 963 n.3 (3d Cir. 1983) ; United States Trust Co. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. See United States Trust Co. v. Alpert, 163 F.R.D. 409, 419 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n5)Footnote 5. Eubanks v. Billington, 110 F.3d 87, 94-96 (D.C. Cir. 1997) ; County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1302-1304 (2d Cir. 1990) ; In re Temple, 851 F.2d 1269, 1272 n.5 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 811-812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., White v. NFL, 41 F.3d 402, 407 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Waldron v. Raymark Indus., 124 F.R.D. 235, 238 (N.D. Ga. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re Temple, 851 F.2d 1269, 1272 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Brown v. Ticor Title Ins. Co., 982 F.2d 386, 392 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See White v. NFL, 41 F.3d 402, 407 (8th Cir. 1994) ; In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 960 F.2d 285, 292 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
3. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(1)(B)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.137 through 42.149

[Reserved]

§§ 42.137[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.150

§ 42.150 Overview of Rule 23(b)(2)

Rule 23(b)(2) provides that a class action may be maintained if: n1

- The requirements of Rule 23(a) are satisfied
- The party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class as a whole
- Final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate with respect to the class as a whole

Rule 23(b)(2) was promulgated in 1966 primarily as a tool for facilitating civil rights actions. Since its enactment, the Rule has been applied to many types of discrimination and civil rights claims. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Dukes v. Wal-Mart, Inc., 474 F.3d 1214, 1222 (9th Cir. 2007) (gender discrimination); Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 614, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) (race-based claims); Spinka v. Brill, 750 F. Supp. 306, 308-309 (N.D. Ill. 1990) (voting rights violations).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.151

§ 42.151 Party Opposing Class Must Have Acted or Refused to Act on Grounds "Generally Applicable" to Class

A class action under Rule 23(b)(2) is only appropriate if conduct of the party opposing the class is generally applicable to the entire class of persons. n1

Courts have held that some members of a class may seek relief under Rule 23(b)(2), even if the conduct of the party opposing the class did not harm every member. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2); Hiatt v. County of Adams, 155 F.R.D. 605, 609 (S.D. Ohio 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Arnold v. United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., 158 F.R.D. 439, 454-455 (N.D. Cal. 1994) .

73 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.152

§ 42.152 Rule 23(b)(2) Class Certification Improper If Primary Relief Sought Is Money Damages

Parties seeking to commence actions under Rule 23(b)(2) must request final declaratory or injunctive relief. n1

As a general rule, class certification under Rule 23(b)(2) is improper if the primary relief sought by the action is money damages. n2 However, if money damages are incidental to the plaintiff's request for injunctive or declaratory relief, the class may still be certified. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDeclaratory Judgment ActionsState JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesMonetary Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Bower v. Bunker Hill Co., 114 F.R.D. 587, 596 (E.D. Wash. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Thorn v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co., 445 F.3d 311, 329-332 (4th Cir. 2006) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Allstate Ins. Co., 400 F.3d 505, 506-508 (7th Cir. 2005) ; see also Molski v. Gleich, 318 F.3d 937, 946-950 (9th Cir. 2002) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.153

§ 42.153 Defendant Class Actions Under Rule 23(b)(2)

There is a conflict of authority over whether defendant classes may be certified under Rule 23(b)(2). It is difficult to reconcile the certification of defendant classes with the language of the Rule. The language of the provision--"the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class"--seemingly envisions that the defendant is the party opposing the class. In general, plaintiffs charge defendants with having "acted," rather than vice versa, and plaintiffs seek to enjoin actions by the defendants. Accordingly, several courts have held that defendant classes under Rule 23(b)(2) are untenable and may not be maintained. n1

However, some courts have held that defendant class actions are permitted under Rule 23(b)(2). n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersDefendantsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Tilley v. TJX Cos., Inc., 345 F.3d 34, 39-40 (1st Cir. 2003) ; Henson v. East Lincoln Township, 814 F.2d 410, 413-417 (7th Cir. 1987) ; Thompson v. Board of Educ. 709 F.2d 1200, 1203-1204 (6th Cir. 1983) ; Paxman v. Campbell, 612 F.2d 848, 854 (4th Cir. 1980) (en banc).

(n2)Footnote 2. Marcera v. Chinlund, 595 F.2d 1231, 1238 (2d Cir. 1979) , vacated on other grounds sub nom., Lombard v. Marcera, 442 U.S. 915 (1979) ; McKay v. County Election Comm'rs, 158 F.R.D. 620, 625 (E.D. Ark. 1994) ; United States v. Rainbow Family, 695 F. Supp. 314, 320-321 (E.D. Tex. 1988) ; Doss v. Long, 93 F.R.D. 112, 118-119 (N.D. Ga. 1981) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.154

§ 42.154 No Right to Notice or to Opt Out Under Rule 23(b)(2)

In class actions under Rule 23(b)(2) that seek equitable relief only, class members have no absolute right to notice of the pending class action. n1

However, for any class certified under Rule 23(b)(2), the court may direct appropriate notice to the class. n2 In "hybrid" class actions under Rule 23(b)(2), which seek equitable and monetary relief, class members may have a due process right to notice of the pending action. n3

Likewise, class members have no absolute right to opt out of actions under Rule 23(b)(2) that seek equitable relief only. n4 Nevertheless, a court may grant members the opportunity to opt out in "hybrid" class actions, in which money damages are sought in addition to injunctive or declaratory relief. n5

However, due process generally does not require that class members in a hybrid class action be given an opportunity to opt out, if absent class members are given notice of their rights in the pending action. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Stoetzner v. U.S. Steel Corp., 897 F.2d 115, 119 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Allen v. Isaac, 100 F.R.D. 373, 376-377 (N.D. Ill. 1983) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Dosier v. Miami Valley Broadcasting Corp., 656 F.2d 1295, 1299 (9th Cir. 1981) ; White v. NFL, 822 F. Supp. 1389, 1411 (D. Minn. 1993) ; Williams v. Lane, 129 F.R.D. 636, 640 (N.D. Ill. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Avagliano v. Sumitomo Shoji America, Inc., 107 F.R.D. 748, 749-750 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Williams v. Burlington Northern, Inc., 832 F.2d 100, 103-104 (7th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 991 (1988) ; Stewart v. Rubin, 948 F. Supp. 1077, 1089-1091 (D.D.C. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
4. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(2)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.155 through 42.159

[Reserved]

§§ 42.155[Reserved]

77 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.160

§ 42.160 Overview of Rule 23(b)(3)

Under Rule 23(b)(3), a class action may be maintained if the court finds both of the following: n1

- Common questions of law or fact predominate over questions affecting only individual members
- A class action is superior to other available methods for resolving the controversy

Although commonality is a prerequisite to all class actions, the predominance and superiority requirements are unique to Rule 23(b)(3) class actions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.161

§ 42.161 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate for Rule 23(b)(3) Class Certification

[1] Various Standards Have Been Applied to Determine Whether Common Issues Predominate

A Rule 23(b)(3) class action requires common questions of law or fact to predominate over questions affecting only individual members. n1

The Rule 23(b)(3) predominance inquiry tests whether proposed classes are sufficiently cohesive to warrant adjudication by representation. n2 No precise test governs the determination of whether common questions of law or fact predominate. Instead, the Rule requires a pragmatic assessment of the entire action and of all the issues involved. n3 In making this assessment, courts have enunciated a number of standards, finding that a predominantly commonly legal grievance is present if:

- The substantive elements of the class members' claims would require the same proof for each class member n4
- The proposed class was bound together by a mutual interest in resolving common questions more than it was divided by individual interests n5
- The resolution of an issue common to the class would significantly advance the litigation n6
- The common issue constitutes a significant part of each of the class members' individual cases n7
- The common questions are central to all of the members' claims n8
- Common questions predominate regarding liability n9

Courts generally agree that the predominance of common issues does not mean that the common issues merely outnumber individual issues. n10 Nor should a court determine predominance by comparing the time that the common issues can be anticipated to consume in the litigation to the time that individual issues will require. n11 Otherwise, only the most complex common questions could predominate since such issues tend to require more time to litigate than less complex issues.

The predominance analysis must be made in light of all relevant factual and legal issues, including issues that are conceded by the defendant. The predominance inquiry tests whether a proposed class is sufficiently cohesive to warrant adjudication by representation. An issue that is conceded or otherwise resolved continues to bear on whether the proposed class is a legally coherent unit of representation by which absent class members may be fairly bound. A different conclusion would undermine the Rule 23 goal of greater efficiency through collective adjudication, because claims of similarly situated parties would be less amenable to class treatment in those situations in which liability was so clear that it would be conceded by the defendants. n11.1

[2] Money Damages Actions: Predominance Satisfied Even If Individual Damages Issues Remain

In actions for money damages under Rule 23(b)(3), courts usually require individual proof of the amount of damages each member incurred. Nevertheless, if common questions predominate over individual questions as to liability, courts generally find the predominance standard of Rule 23(b)(3) to be satisfied even if individual damages issues remain. n12

Courts often bifurcate trials into liability and damages phases in order to sever common liability questions from individual damages issues. n13 A court will not bifurcate a proceeding, however, if the court determines that judicial economy would not be served by holding more than one trial. n14 Moreover, if the liability and damages issues are so closely linked that severance is not practical, certification may be denied. n15

[3] Differences in Application of Statute of Limitations to Individual Class Members Will Not Preclude Rule 23(b)(3) Certification

The fact that a statute of limitations may bar the claims of some but not all class members does not compel a finding that individual issues predominate over common ones. Rather, as long as there is a sufficient nucleus of common issues, differences in the application of a statute of limitations to individual class members will not preclude certification under Rule 23(b)(3). n16

[4] Merits of Case May Be Considered But Not Decided

The facts necessary to decide predominance often are intertwined with facts going to the merits of the action, so that some inquiry into the underlying factual issues is required at the certification stage. n17 The general rule, however, is that on a motion for class certification, a court may not decide the merits of the case or consider the likelihood of success or failure on the merits. n18 Nonetheless, courts may go beyond the pleadings and may allow discovery and hear evidence when necessary to make the factual determinations that Rule 23 requires. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 623-624, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In re Nassau County Strip Search Cases, 461 F.3d 219, 227-229 (2d Cir. 2006) ; Rodriguez v. Carlson, 166 F.R.D. 465, 477 (E.D. Wash. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Rosario v. Livaditis, 963 F.2d 1013, 1018 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Anderson v. Bank of the South, N.A., 118 F.R.D. 136, 150 (M.D. Fla. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Doe v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 145 F.R.D. 466, 476 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. McClendon v. Continental Group, Inc., 113 F.R.D. 39, 43-44 (D.N.J. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., Inc., 782 F.2d 468, 470 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Commonwealth of Puerto Rico v. M/V Emily S, 158 F.R.D. 9, 15 (D. P.R. 1994) ; Edgington v. R.G. Dickinson and Co., 139 F.R.D. 183, 190 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Smilow v. Southwestern Bell Mobile Sys., Inc., 323 F.3d 32, 40 (1st Cir. 2003) (citing Moore's); Gunnells v. Healthplan Servs., Inc., 348 F.3d 417, 428-430 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Buford v. H & R Block, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 340, 356 (S.D. Ga. 1996) ; Deutschman v. Beneficial Corp, 132 F.R.D. 359, 375 (D. Del. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Coleman v. Cannon Oil Co., 141 F.R.D. 516, 526-527 (M.D. Ala. 1992) ; In re Workers' Comp., 130 F.R.D. 99, 108 (D. Minn. 1990) .

(n12)Footnote 11.1. In re Nassau County Strip Search Cases, 461 F.3d 219, 227-229 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n13)Footnote 12. Gunnells v. Healthplan Servs., Inc., 348 F.3d 417, 428-430 (4th Cir. 2003) ; Sterling v. Velsicol Chem Corp., 855 F.2d 1188, 1197 (6th Cir. 1988) ; Ardrey v. Federal Kemper Ins. Co., 142 F.R.D. 105, 114 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Hilao v. Estate of Marcos, 103 F.3d 767, 782 (9th Cir. 1996) ; Sterling v. Velsicol Chem Corp., 855 F.2d 1188, 1197 (6th Cir. 1988) ; Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., Inc., 782 F.2d 468, 470-471 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n15)Footnote 14. McEwen v. Digitran Sys., Inc., 160 F.R.D. 631, 641 (D. Utah 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Brown v. Cameron-Brown Co., 92 F.R.D. 32, 45 (E.D. Va. 1981) .

(n17)Footnote 16. See Hoxworth v. Blinder, Robinson & Co., 980 F.2d 912, 924 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Coopers & Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 469, 98 S. Ct. 2454, 57 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1978) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 177-178, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n20)Footnote 19. General Tel. Co. of the Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 160, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.162

§ 42.162 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate in Securities Fraud Cases

[1] Requirement That Each Member Be Subject to Common Scheme of Fraudulent Conduct

In securities fraud cases, each member must have been subject to a common scheme of fraudulent conduct for a class to be certified. n1

[2] Factors Indicating Common Scheme

[2.--1] Nondisclosure of Material Facts

Courts have held that the requirement that each member of a class in a securities fraud case be subject to a common scheme of fraudulent conduct n2 is satisfied based on allegations that the defendants fraudulently failed to disclose material facts. n3

[2.--2] Same or Similar Written Misrepresentations

Courts generally find that a common scheme presenting predominantly common questions exists if securities purchasers allege that the defendants acted wrongfully through the use of the same or similar written misrepresentations. n4

All class members need not have relied on the same document in order for common questions to predominate, provided the documents relied upon present a core of facts common to the class. n5

Certification of a class based on the existence of oral misrepresentations is generally denied on the ground that such representations are likely to vary from one purchaser to another, so that such a case involves predominantly individual questions. n6

[3] Proof of Reliance Not Required

Positive proof of reliance on a nondisclosure or misrepresentation of material information is unnecessary in cases primarily involving a failure to disclose. Rather, if the plaintiffs allege that the defendants failed to disclose material information, the plaintiffs are presumed to have relied on the defendants' failure to disclose. n7

There is also a rebuttable presumption of reliance in misrepresentation cases based on "fraud on the market" theory. The "fraud on the market" theory is based on the assumption that, in an open and developed market, the price of a company's stock is determined by all material information that is available about the company, so that misrepresentations will defraud stock purchasers by affecting the stock's price even though the purchasers do not directly rely on those misrepresentations. The Supreme Court has held that, in Rule 10b-5 actions, the fraud on the market theory creates a presumption that stock purchasers relied on the defendant's misrepresentation of material facts. n8

To invoke the "fraud on the market" presumption of reliance, plaintiffs must prove that: n9

- The defendants made public misrepresentations;
- The misrepresentations were material;
- The stock was traded on an efficient market;
- The misrepresentations were sufficiently credible and material as to induce a reasonable, relying investor to misjudge the value of the stock; and
- The plaintiff class traded in the stock between the time the misrepresentations were made and the time the truth was revealed.

If plaintiffs properly invoke the fraud on the market theory, they need not prove each class member's direct reliance on the substance of the seller's omissions or misrepresentations. Under the theory, the market itself is presumed to have relied on the omissions or misrepresentations. n10

The fraud on the market theory has been invoked frequently by courts that certify classes of allegedly defrauded securities purchasers. n11 Although the Supreme Court has endorsed the use of the fraud on the market theory in Rule 10b-5 actions, the Court has suggested that the theory does not necessarily apply to securities actions based on common-law fraud. n12 Nonetheless, lower courts have, occasionally, applied the theory in common-law securities-fraud actions. n13

Although a plaintiff may use the fraud on the market theory to establish a presumption of reliance, the presumption may be rebutted. Evidence that severs the link between a misrepresentation and either (1) the price the plaintiff paid or received, or (2) the plaintiff's decision to trade at the market price undercuts the theory and rebuts the presumption. n14 Specifically, the presumption may be rebutted by evidence showing that: n15

- The plaintiff was privy to the truth, or
- The alleged misrepresentations did not distort the market price, or
- The purchasers were motivated to trade the securities by reasons unrelated to the market price.

If a defendant does not satisfy any of those criteria, the presumption applies and courts may certify a class action based on the fraud on the market theory. n16 As noted above, the fraud on the market theory applies only when the securities in question are traded in a developed and efficient market. It is only in a developed and efficient market that misrepresentations made to fewer than all purchasers will affect the market price, because only that type of market efficiently relays information. n17 An "efficient" market is one that rapidly reflects all new, material information about a stock issuer in the price of the stock. n18

[4] Individual Issues of Reliance Alone Usually Do Not Preclude Certification

When plaintiffs allege a common course of wrongdoing based on the same or similar representations and omissions, individual issues of reliance alone will not preclude certification of the class. n19

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. See [1], above.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bresson v. Thomson McKinnon Sec., Inc., 118 F.R.D. 339, 343 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ; Goldwater v. Alston & Bird, 116 F.R.D. 342, 349 (S.D. Ill. 1987) ; Anderson v. Bank of the South, N.A., 118 F.R.D. 136, 150 (M.D. Fla. 1987) ; Austell v. Smith, 634 F. Supp. 326, 334 (W.D.N.C. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Maywalt v. Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 147 F.R.D. 51, 55 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; Goldwater v. Alston & Bird, 116 F.R.D. 342, 349 (S.D. Ill. 1987) ; Anderson v. Bank of the South, N.A., 118 F.R.D. 136, 150 (M.D. Fla. 1987) ; Austell v. Smith, 634 F. Supp. 326, 334 (W.D.N.C. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Mayer v. Mylod, 988 F.2d 635, 640 (6th Cir. 1993) ; Kennedy v. Tallant, 710 F.2d 711, 717 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Marcial v. Coronet Ins. Co., 880 F.2d 954, 957 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Grainger v. State Sec. Life Ins. Co., 547 F.2d 303, 307 (5th Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 436 U.S. 932 (1978) ; Soper v. Valone, 110 F.R.D. 8, 10 (W.D.N.Y. 1985) ; Kaser v. Swann, 141 F.R.D. 337, 339-340 (M.D. Fla. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, 406 U.S. 128, 153-154, 92 S. Ct. 1456, 31 L. Ed 2d 741 (1972) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Basic, Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224, 248-249 (1988) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gariety v. Grant Thornton, LLP, 368 F.3d 356, 364 (4th Cir. 2004) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Nelsen v. Craig-Hallum, Inc., 659 F. Supp. 480, 484-485 (D. Minn. 1987) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See In re Laser Arms Corp. Sec. Litig., 794 F. Supp. 475, 495 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Basic, Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224, 244 (1988) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See In re Am. Continental/Lincoln Sav. & Loan Sec. Litig., 140 F.R.D. 425, 434 (D. Ariz. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Basic, Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224, 248-249 (1988) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Basic, Inc. v. Levinson, 485 U.S. 224, 248-249 (1988) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Hanon v. Dataprods. Corp., 976 F.2d 497, 506 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Hayes v. Gross, 982 F.2d 104, 107 (3d Cir. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See In re Polymedica Corp. Sec. Litig., 432 F.3d 1, 4-19 (1st Cir. 2005) ; see also Gariety v. Grant Thornton, LLP, 368 F.3d 356, 368 (4th Cir. 2004) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 722-724 (11th Cir. 1987) ; Eisenberg v. Gagnon, 766 F.2d 770, 786 (3d Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 946 (1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.163

§ 42.163 Determining Whether Common Issues Predominate in Mass Tort Cases

[1] Traditional Reluctance to Certify Classes in Mass Tort Cases

Traditionally, courts have been reluctant to certify mass tort class actions under Rule 23(b)(3) because the nature of personal injury suits suggests that individual issues would predominate. n1

[2] Predominance of Common Issues Has Been Found Increasingly in Mass Tort Litigation

In long-term toxic tort cases, some courts have certified classes under Rule 23(b)(3), finding that the evidence necessary to establish each of the plaintiff's claims is sufficiently alike as to establish the predominance of common issues. n2 Other courts have certified classes under Rule 23(b)(3) because of the predominance of a common defense. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesCommonality

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Joint E. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 129 B.R. 710, 805 (E.D.N.Y. 1991) , vacated on other grounds, 982 F.2d 721 (2d Cir. 1992) , modified on other grounds, 993 F.2d 7 (1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Sterling v. Velsicol Chem. Corp., 855 F.2d 1188, 1197 (6th Cir. 1988) ; see also In re School Asbestos Litig., 789 F.2d 996, 1010 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 165-167 (2d Cir. 1987) ; see also Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., 782 F.2d 468, 473 (5th Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.164

§ 42.164 Determining Whether Class Action Is Superior to Other Available Methods

[1] Superiority Requirement

In addition to requiring that common questions predominate over individual questions, Rule 23(b)(3) mandates that a class action must be the superior method for litigating the case. n1 Under the superiority test of Rule 23(b)(3), a class action must be better than, and not merely just as good as, other methods of adjudication. n1.1 However, it is well-settled that the adjudication of a matter through a class action is superior to no adjudication of the matter at all. n1.2

The question of whether potential class members have both the incentive and the capability to pursue claims individually without the benefit of a class action is central to the superiority requirement of Rule 23(b)(3). n2

[2] Similar Issues Suggest Superiority

In determining whether a class action would be superior to multiple individual lawsuits, courts consider the similarity of the issues at stake. The more similar the issues, the more likely it is that a class action would be superior to multiple individual lawsuits. n3

[3] Size of Anticipated Recovery

In determining whether a class action would be superior to multiple individual lawsuits, courts consider the size of the anticipated recovery for each individual plaintiff. A small anticipated recovery weighs in favor of the superiority of a class action. n4

On the other hand, a large anticipated recovery weighs against the superiority of a class action. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Johnston v. HBO Film Mgmt., 265 F.3d 178, 194 (3d Cir. 2001) (class action must represent best available method for fair and efficient adjudication of controversy).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See In re Tetracycline Cases, 107 F.R.D. 719, 732 (W.D. Mo. 1985) (citing Moore's).

(n4)Footnote 2. See Johns v. DeLeonardis, 145 F.R.D. 480, 482 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (Gypsies unlikely to pursue claims individually against law enforcement officers); see also Rodriguez v. Carlson, 166 F.R.D. 465, 479-480 (E.D. Wash. 1996) (superiority of class action for migrant workers unlikely to pursue individual litigation because of lack of English and limited understanding of legal system).

(n5)Footnote 3. See Epifano v. Boardroom Bus. Prods., 130 F.R.D. 295, 299 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) ; Sala v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 120 F.R.D. 494, 500 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Deposit Guaranty Nat'l Bank v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 338, 100 S. Ct. 1166, 63 L. Ed. 2d 427, 439 (1980) .

(n7)Footnote 5. See Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 623, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.165

§ 42.165 Evaluating Predominance and Superiority Guidelines Specified in Rule 23(b)(3)

[1] Rule 23(b)(3) Specifies Four Nonexhaustive Guidelines

Rule 23(b)(3) specifies that a court, in determining predominance and superiority, consider four factors: n1

- The interests of class members in controlling their own litigation n2
- The nature and extent of any relevant, pending litigation brought by or against members of the class n3
- The desirability of concentrating the litigation in the particular forum n4
- Any management difficulties the class action is likely to present n5

The four criteria are suggestive, nonexhaustive guidelines; there is no requirement that a court review each factor in every case, or make a finding with respect to them. n6

[2] Individual Interest in Controlling Separate Litigation

One of the statutory factors that courts consider in determining predominance and superiority is the interests of class members in controlling their own litigation. n7

The presence of large individual damage awards has been viewed as supporting separate litigation. n8

Additionally, when individual class members have an interest in tailoring trial tactics to their individual needs, each class member should be permitted to pursue separate litigation. n9

[3] Extent and Nature of Litigation Already Commenced

Another statutory factor that courts consider in determining predominance and superiority is the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already commenced by or against members of the class. n10

The more parallel lawsuits there are, the more likely it is that other methods of litigation are feasible, and that a class action would contribute little to the resolution of the issues. n11

[4] Desirability of Concentrating All Claims in Single Forum

A third statutory factor that courts consider in determining predominance and superiority is the desirability or undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum. n12

The desirability of concentrating all claims of a class action in a single forum is usually assessed by reference to criteria similar to those applied in change of venue determinations: the accessibility of witnesses and evidence, the burden on the parties, and the existence of a more appropriate forum. n13

[5] Manageability of Class Action

[5.--1] Factors Typically Considered in Determining Manageability

The final statutory factor that courts consider in determining predominance and superiority is the difficulties likely to be encountered in the management of a class action. n14 Generally, courts consider manageability of class actions by comparison with alternative methods of adjudication. Under that approach, difficulties in the management of a class action should not defeat certification unless the difficulties render a class action a less fair and efficient procedure than another available method. n15

Courts have identified a number of factors as relevant to whether the proposed class action is manageable. Those factors include the difficulty and expense of communicating with members of the class, including providing notice to each of the members. If the members of the class are not identifiable, managing of the action may pose insurmountable problems. n16 Similarly, if the names and addresses of all members are not known, the case will be difficult to manage. n17

While the size of a class and the location of its members are certainly relevant, the fact that a class may be large and many of its members may come from different states does not necessarily render an action unmanageable. n18 However, if class members who live in different states raise pendent state claims, certification of the state claims may be denied on the ground that application of the varying standards of state-law liability would render the class action unmanageable. n19

Difficulty in computing damages is also a factor in determining manageability. n20 The presence of individual issues increases the difficulty of assessing injury and calculating damages. Accordingly, courts have held that if individual issues in the case will require a significant number of separate trials, the class action will be unmanageable. n21 However, if a court can calculate damages by using a mathematical formula or statistical techniques, the existence of individualized damage claims does not pose a barrier to certification. n22

[5.--2] Solution to Manageability Problem Through Fluid Recovery Method

Even when the calculation of damages on an individual basis would otherwise be prohibitively burdensome, the fluid recovery method may permit a court to manage the class action. Under the fluid recovery method, a court awards damages to the class as a whole, without requiring any member to prove injury. n23 Individual claims are then satisfied out of this total. n24

In addition, a court may order defendants to effectuate a fluid recovery by distributing money to class members indirectly through an arrangement such as reducing future charges or funding a project likely to benefit the members. n25

Some courts have rejected the fluid recovery method as an illegal solution to manageability problems. According to those courts, a fluid recovery violates due process by ignoring the claims of individuals and improperly relieving plaintiffs classes of the burden of proving individual damages. In some cases, however, courts have held that the fluid recovery method may be used if it advances the objectives of the particular statute on which plaintiffs base their claims. n26

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3); see e.g., Zinser v. Accufix Research Inst., Inc., 253 F.3d 1180, 1190-1192 (9th Cir. 2001) (application of four factors demonstrated that class action was not superior method of adjudication).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 42.165[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 42.165[3].

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 42.165[4].

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 42.165[5].

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(A).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Zinser v. Accufix Research Inst., Inc., 253 F.3d 1180, 1190-1191 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 166 (2d Cir. 1987) ; In re Northern Dist. of Cal. Dalkon Shield IUD Prods. Liab. Litig., 693 F.2d 847, 853 (9th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied sub nom., A.H. Robins Co. v. Abed, 459 U.S. 1171 (1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(B); see also In re Crazy Eddie Sec. Litig., 135 F.R.D. 39, 41 (E.D.N.Y. 1991) ; Pennsylvania v. Budget Fuel Co., 122 F.R.D. 184, 185 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Kurczi v. Eli Lilly & Co., 160 F.R.D. 667, 680 (N.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(C).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Ikonen v. Hartz Mountain Corp., 122 F.R.D. 258, 266 (S.D. Cal. 1988) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(D).

(n15)Footnote 15. Carnegie v. Household Int'l, Inc., 376 F.3d 656, 660-661 (7th Cir. 2004) ; Klay v. Humana, Inc., 382 F.3d 1241, 1272-1273 (11th Cir. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Tedesco v. Mishkin, 689 F. Supp. 1327, 1337 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(N17)Footnote 17. Riordan v. Smith Barney, 113 F.R.D. 60, 66 (N.D. Ill. 1986) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Werner v. Satterlee, Stephens, Burke & Burke, 797 F. Supp. 1196, 1217 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; but see In re LifeUSA Holding, Inc., 242 F.3d 136, 147-148 (3d Cir. 2001) (class action was not superior when the size of the class and the number of individualized determinations that were necessary were so great that a class action could not be fairly and efficiently managed).

(n19)Footnote 19. Castano v. American Tobacco Co., 84 F.3d 734, 743-744 (5th Cir. 1996) ; Valentino v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 97 F.3d 1227, 1234 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Zapata v. IBP, Inc. 167 F.R.D. 147, 169 (D. Kan. 1996) ; Jackshaw Pontiac v. Cleveland Press Pub. Co., 102 F.R.D. 183, 195 (N.D. Ohio 1984) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Castano v. American Tobacco Co., 84 F.3d 734, 745 n.19 (5th Cir. 1996) ; In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1085 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Andrews v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 95 F.3d 1014, 1023 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Hilao v. Estate of Marcos, 103 F.3d 767, 782-786 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Hilao v. Estate of Marcos, 103 F.3d 767, 782-786 (9th Cir. 1996) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See Pruitt v. Allied Chem. Corp., 85 F.R.D. 100, 114 (E.D. Va. 1980) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Nelson v. Greater Gadsden Hous. Auth., 802 F.2d 405, 409 (11th Cir. 1986) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Abrams v. Interco, Inc., 719 F.2d 23, 31 (2d Cir. 1983) ; see also Haywood v. Barnes, 109 F.R.D. 568, 583 (E.D.N.C. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.166

§ 42.166 Rule 23(b)(3) Applies to Money Damages and to Injunctive or Declaratory Relief

Rule 23(b)(3) applies to actions seeking money damages, as well as those seeking injunctive or declaratory relief. A class will be certified as long as the class action achieves an economy of time, effort, and expense without sacrificing procedural fairness. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDeclaratory Judgment ActionsState JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesMonetary Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Prudential Ins. Co., 962 F. Supp. 450, 525 (D. N.J. 1997) .

84 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.167

§ 42.167 Rule 23(b)(3) Applies Equally to Certification of Defendant Classes

A defendant class may be certified under Rule 23(b)(3). Unlike Rule 23(b)(1), Rule 23(b)(3) does not expressly contemplate defendant classes. Nevertheless, nothing in the language of the Rule bars defendant classes.

Certification of a defendant class under Rule 23(b)(3) must meet the same requirements as certification of a plaintiff class under the same Rule. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersDefendantsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Northwestern Nat'l Bank of Minneapolis v. Fox & Co., 102 F.R.D. 507, 515 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.168

§ 42.168 Members of Rule 23(b)(3) Class Have Right to Notice and to Opt Out

In any class certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the court must direct to class members the best notice that is practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. The notice must clearly and concisely state in plain, easily understood language: n1

- The nature of the action
- The definition of the class certified
- The class claims, issues, or defenses
- That a class member may enter an appearance through an attorney if the member so desires
- That the court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion
- The time and manner for requesting exclusion
- The binding effect of a class judgment on members under Rule 23(c)(3)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
5. Maintaining Class Action Under Rule 23(b)(3)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.169 through 42.179

[Reserved]

§§ 42.169[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
6. CHECKLISTS: Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.180

§ 42.180 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(1)(A) Requirements

If all four prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 a class action may be maintained as long as the action falls within one of the categories provided by Rule 23(b). The following checklist may be used to determine whether the class action satisfies the requirements of Rule 23(b)(1)(A):

☐ Realistic possibility of separate litigation in the absence of class certification.

☐ Risk that separate litigation will result in varying adjudications that would establish incompatible or varying standards of conduct for the party opposing the class.

☐ Defendant could be sued for different and incompatible affirmative relief, as opposed to seeking damages.

☐ Class seeks injunctive or declaratory relief to alter an ongoing course of conduct that is either legal or illegal as to all members of the class.

☐ Case does not seek compensatory damages.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.30-42.32.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
6. CHECKLISTS: Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.181

§ 42.181 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(1)(B) Requirements

If all four prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 a class action may be maintained as long as the action falls within one of the categories provided by Rule 23(b). The following checklist may be used to determine whether the class action satisfies the requirements of Rule 23(b)(1)(B):

☐ Case focuses on members of putative class and seeks to protect them against situations in which they would be prejudiced by separate litigation, such as in limited fund cases.

☐ Evidence establishes a likelihood that if damages are awarded in individual litigation, the claims of the earlier plaintiffs will exhaust the defendants' assets.

☐ Case seeks declaratory or injunctive relief in which one member's joint or common right is affected by other members' litigation.

☐ No individual or unique facts exist.

☐ Case does not seek only money damages.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.30-42.32.

89 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
6. CHECKLISTS: Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.182

§ 42.182 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(2) Requirements

If all four prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 a class action may be maintained as long as the action falls within one of the categories provided by Rule 23(b). The following checklist may be used to determine whether the class action satisfies the requirements of Rule 23(b)(2):

☐ Defendant has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, making final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole appropriate.

☐ Defendant's conduct or failure to act is "generally applicable" to an entire class of persons.

☐ Case does not seek money damages only.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.30-42.32.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
6. CHECKLISTS: Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.183

§ 42.183 CHECKLIST: Determining Whether Class Action Satisfies Rule 23(b)(3) Requirements

If all four prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied, n1 a class action may be maintained as long as the action falls within one of the categories provided by Rule 23(b). The following checklist may be used to determine whether the class action satisfies the requirements of Rule 23(b)(3):

☐ Case achieves an economy of time, effort, and expense without sacrificing procedural fairness.

☐ Both of the following are present:

☐ Common questions of law or fact predominate over questions affecting only individual members.

☐ Class action is superior to other available methods for resolving the controversy.

☐ Case is for monetary, declaratory, or injunctive relief.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 42.30-42.32.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
H. Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)
6. CHECKLISTS: Establishing That Class Action Falls Within One of Three Subdivisions of Rule 23(b)

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.184 through 42.189

[Reserved]

§§ 42.184[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.190

§ 42.190 General Pleading Requirements of Rule 8 Apply to Class Actions

Rule 23 does not set forth any specific pleading requirements for class actions. n1

Rule 8, which sets forth general rules of pleading in federal actions, applies to pleadings in class actions. Specifically, Rule 8 provides that a pleading which sets forth a claim for relief must contain: n2

- A short and plain statement of the grounds upon which the court's jurisdiction depends
- A short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief
- A demand for judgment for the relief the pleader seeks

A complaint filed in federal court must include sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, and all claims must be accompanied by facts which allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." n3 This "facial plausibility" cannot be supported by "mere conclusory statements" and a reviewing court is required to "draw on its experience and common sense" in its determination of plausibility. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ___ U.S. ___, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868, 884-885 (2009) ; see also al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949, 956 (9th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts sufficient to state plausible claim); Sinaltrainal v. Coca-Cola Co., 578 F.3d 1252, 1261-1270 (11th Cir. 2009) (pleaded facts failed to state plausible claim).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.191

§ 42.191 Alleging Facts Demonstrating That Class Action Requirements Are Met

The class action complaint must allege facts demonstrating that all of the requirements for bringing a class action have been fulfilled. Although the plaintiff, as the party seeking class certification, bears the burden of demonstrating that the requirements for class certification have been met, the plaintiff is not required to make an extensive evidentiary showing. n1 More is required than mere conclusory allegations in the complaint which track the language of Rule 23. Where there is merely a recitation in the complaint that each of the requirements of Rule 23 is satisfied, the court is not bound to find that class treatment is proper. n2

The complaint should allege facts demonstrating the following: n3

- An identifiable class exists
- The named representatives are members of the proposed class
- Numerosity of parties
- Commonality of legal and factual issues
- Typicality of claims and defenses of the class representatives
- Adequacy of representation
- The class action falls into at least one of the three subsections of Rule 23(b).

In diversity class actions subject to the Class Action Fairness Act, the aggregate amount of the plaintiffs' claims must be at least $5 million, the claims must be asserted on behalf of at least 100 proposed class members, and at least one member of a proposed class must be from a state other than that of any defendant. n4 In diversity class actions which are not governed by the Class Action Fairness Act, the capacity of the representative of the class must be alleged, because the citizenship of the representative controls for diversity jurisdiction purposes. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. LaFlamme v. Carpenters Local # 370 Pension Plan, 212 F.R.D. 448, 452 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1079 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Stambaugh v. Kansas Dep't of Corrections, 151 F.R.D. 664, 671 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2); 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(5)(B).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Supreme Tribe of Ben Hur v. Cauble, 255 U.S. 356, 366, 41 S. Ct. 338, 65 L. Ed. 673 (1921) , overruled in part on other grounds, 314 U.S. 118 (1941) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.192

§ 42.192 Additional Requirements in Securities Class Actions

[1] Plaintiff's Signed Certification Must Accompany Complaint

The complaint in a class action alleging violation of the Securities Act of 1933 or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 must be accompanied by a certification signed by the plaintiff. n1

Setting forth all of the transactions of the plaintiff in the security that is the subject of the complaint during the class period specified in the complaint.

Identifying any other action for securities law violation filed during the three year period preceding the date on which the certification is signed by the plaintiff, in which the plaintiff sought to serve, or actually served, as a class representative.

Stating that the plaintiff:

- Has read the complaint and authorized its filing
- Did not purchase the security that is the subject of the complaint at the direction of plaintiff's counsel, or in order to participate in any private action for securities law violation
- Is willing to serve as a representative of the class, including providing testimony at deposition and trial, if necessary
- Will not accept any payment for serving as class representative beyond his or her pro rata share of any recovery, except as otherwise ordered or approved by the court

[2] Notice to Class

Within 20 days after the date on which the complaint is filed, the plaintiff must cause to be published in a widely circulated national business-oriented publication or wire service a notice advising members of the purported class: n2

- Of the pendency of the action, the claims asserted, and the purported class period

- That not later than 60 days after the date on which the notice is published, any member of the purported class may move the court to serve as lead plaintiff of the purported class

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsDerivative ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. P.L. 104-67, § 101(a), (b).

(n2)Footnote 2. P.L. 104-67, § 101(a)(3)(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.193

§ 42.193 Attending Pre-Certification Scheduling Conferences

Case scheduling conferences pursuant to Rule 16 and local rules are often scheduled prior to the filing of a motion for class certification. The court has broad discretion regarding the topics and issues to be discussed at any pretrial conference. n1

Topics typically discussed at scheduling conferences in class actions include:

- Pre-certification discovery
- Timing of motion seeking class certification
- Timing of any pre-certification dispositive motions

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(P).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.194

§ 42.194 Conducting Pre-Certification Discovery

A motion seeking class certification may be stayed pending pre-certification discovery.

Pre-certification discovery typically is an issue discussed at the case scheduling conference held pursuant to Rule 16 and local rules. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesScheduling Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)-(c).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
I. Drafting Class Action Complaint; Pre-Certification Procedural Issues; Filing Dispositive Motion

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.195 through 42.209

[Reserved]

§§ 42.195[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.210

§ 42.210 Court Must Determine at an Early Practicable Time Whether to Certify the Action

When a person sues or is sued as a representative of a class, the court must, at an early practicable time, determine by order whether to certify the action as a class action. n1

The filing of a class action tolls the statute of limitations on the claims of individual class members, and the statute of limitations begins to run again on an individual claim on denial of certification or on decertification of the class. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A); see also Leonard v. Southwestern Bell Corp. Disability Income Plan, 408 F.3d 528, 533-534 (8th Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Yang v. Odom, 392 F.3d 97, 103-108 (3d Cir. 2004) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.211

§ 42.211 Obligation of Court to Address Certification Sua Sponte

If the plaintiff representative does not file a motion seeking class certification, is the court obligated sua sponte to address the issue? A number of courts have held that the district judge has an obligation on his or her own motion to determine whether an action may proceed as a class action. n1

Other courts have held that if the plaintiff representative does not move to have the action certified, the action will not be permitted to be maintained as a class action. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Senter v. General Motors Corp., 532 F.2d 511, 520-521 (6th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 870 (1976) ; Castro v. Beecher, 459 F.2d 725, 731 (1st Cir. 1972) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Robinson v. First Nat'l City Bank, 482 F. Supp. 92, 99-100 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.212

§ 42.212 Burden of Demonstrating That Requirements for Class Action Have Been Met Is on Party Seeking Certification

The party seeking class certification has the burden of demonstrating that all the requirements for a class action have been met. n1 Class certification also may not be obtained by default judgment. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 161, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Partington v. American Int'l Specialty Lines Ins. Co., 443 F.3d 334, 340-341 (4th Cir. 2006) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.213

§ 42.213 Drafting Motion and Supporting Papers

[1] Provide Advance Notice of Motion

The movant must provide advance notice of the Rule 23(c) motionseeking class certification. n1

[2] Submit Supporting Affidavits and Memorandum of Law

Local rules and individual judge's rules should be consulted for requirements pertaining to affidavits and memorandum of law.

[3] Proposed Order May Be Required

The practitioner should consult the local rules, as well as individual judge's rules, with respect to submitting proposed orders.

[4] Contents of Order

An order certifying a class action must define the class and the class claims, issues, or defenses, and must appoint class counsel under Rule 23(g). n2

An order certifying a class action may be altered or amended before final judgment. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.214

§ 42.214 Ruling on Class Certification Motion

[1] Meeting Rule 23 Certification Requirements

To certify a class action, all of the requirements of Rule 23(a) must be met as well as those of one of the subsections of Rule 23(b). n1 The court has broad discretion with regard to certification, and will be reversed on appeal only for abuse of discretion. n2

Given the fact that the court's decision is discretionary, a federal court decision denying certification has virtually no preclusive effect on a subsequent state court's determination to certify or not certify the same or a similar class action in state court. Each court has the broad discretion to determine independently whether its own class action requirements are met. n3

[2] Court Accepts as True Substantive Allegations in Complaint

In evaluating a motion for class certification, the court accepts as true the substantive allegations in the complaint, and does not conduct an inquiry into the merits of the plaintiff's claims. n4 However, the court does not accept the class allegations in the complaint as true, as would be the case in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. n5

[3] Hearing on Certification Motion

If the pleadings set forth sufficient facts from which a court can determine whether the requirements of Rule 23 are satisfied, then the court may decide whether a class should be certified without a hearing. n6 In most circuits, the district court is not limited to the complaint in making its certification decision, and the court should make whatever legal and factual inquiries are necessary to determine whether a class should be certified. n7 However, in some circuits the district court is not permitted to conduct a preliminary inquiry into the merits of the case at the class certification stage. n8

Courts often need more information than is provided by the pleadings, and therefore, courts commonly conduct evidentiary hearings on the class certification issue. The district court should hold an evidentiary hearing if there is any doubt regarding the issue of class certification. n9

A district court's certification decision may be reversed as an abuse of discretion if the court fails to hold an evidentiary hearing on the issue. n10 However, the failure of a court to hold a hearing does not require reversal unless the party claiming that a hearing was necessary can demonstrate that it suffered prejudice. n11

Parties may waive their right to an evidentiary hearing by failing to request that the district court hold such a hearing. n12

[4] Discovery May Be Permitted With Respect to Class Certification Issues

The district court has considerable discretion in determining whether, and to what extent, to allow discovery with respect to class certification issues. However, a district court may abuse its discretion by failing to allow discovery on issues necessary to determine whether class certification is proper. n13

Often, district courts will limit precertification discovery to class certification issues, and postpone discovery on the merits of the action until after the certification decision. n14

[5] Alternate Forms of Certification Permissible

The court is empowered to define an appropriate class, whether by accepting the proposed class, conditionally certifying a class for a limited portion of the litigation, n15 limiting the class to particular issues, n16 or creating subclasses. n17

A complaint's proposed class definition does not bind the court. n18

[6] Appealing Class Certification Order

[6.--1] Filing Petition for Permission to Appeal

A court of appeals may permit an appeal from an order granting or denying class-action certification if a petition for permission to appeal is filed with the circuit clerk within 14 days after the order is entered. An appeal does not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district judge or the court of appeals so orders. n19

The deadline to file a Rule 23(f) petition is tolled by the filing of a timely and proper motion to reconsider the grant or denial of class certification. n19.1

[6.--2] Court May Certify Issue for Interlocutory Appeal

The district court may certify its decision to grant class action certification for interlocutory appeal, especially in large class actions such as mass tort cases. n20

Review of class certification decisions generally will be most appropriate when: n21

- There is a death-knell situation for either the plaintiff or defendant that is independent of the merits of the underlying claims, coupled with a class certification decision by the district court that is questionable

- The certification decision presents an unsettled and fundamental issue of law relating to class actions, important both to the specific litigation and generally, that is likely to evade end-of-the-case review

- The district court's class certification decision is manifestly erroneous

[6.--3] Review Through Writ of Mandamus

To grant mandamus, the appellate court must find that the decision will inflict irreparable harm in that an appeal at the end of the case would be ineffectual, and that the order must so far exceed the proper bounds of judicial discretion as to be legitimately considered usurpative in character, or in violation of a clear and indisputable legal right, or, at the very least, patently erroneous. n22 Mandamus is usually denied because most decisions involved in class action certification may be effectively reviewed on appeal. n23

[6.--4] Order of Dismissal Without Addressing Class Certification Is Appealable

If the district court dismisses a suit on summary judgment or on a motion to dismiss, and fails to rule on class certification, finality is not lacking and the dismissal is appropriate for appellate review. n24

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentAppellate ReviewAppealability

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 (advisory committee notes of 1966).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Retired Chicago Police Association v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584, 596 (7th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 117 S. Ct. 305 (1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Clearwater v. Ashland Oil Co., 93 F.3d 176, 180 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Shelter Realty Corp. V. Allied Maintenance Corp., 574 F.2d 656, 661 n.15 (2d Cir. 1978) ; In re Frontier Ins. Group, Inc. Secs. Litig., 172 F.R.D. 31, 39 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Gariety v. Grant Thornton, LLP, 368 F.3d 356, 365-367 (4th Cir. 2004) ; Szabo v. Bridgeport Machs., Inc., 249 F.3d 672, 675-676 (7th Cir. 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 6. John v. National Sec. Fire & Cas. Co., 501 F.3d 443, 445 (5th Cir. 2007) (citing Moore's); In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1079 (6th Cir. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See In re Polymedica Corp. Sec. Litig., 432 F.3d 1, 4-6, 17-18 (1st Cir. 2005) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Heerwagen v. Clear Channel Communications, 435 F.3d 219, 231-233 (2d Cir. 2006) ; but see Oscar Private Equity Invs. v. Allegiance Telecom, Inc., 487 F.3d 261, 268-269 (5th Cir. 2007) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Merrill v. Southern Methodist Univ., 806 F.2d 600, 608 (5th Cir. 1986) ; Morrison v. Booth, 730 F.2d 642, 644 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Morrison v. Booth, 730 F.2d 642, 644 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Grayson v. K Mart Corp., 79 F.3d 1086, 1099 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Morrison v. Booth, 730 F.2d 642, 644 (11th Cir. 1984) ; Marcera v. Chinlund, 565 F.2d 253, 255 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n13)Footnote 13. In re American Med. Sys., Inc., 75 F.3d 1069, 1086 (6th Cir. 1996) ; Chateau de Ville Productions, Inc. v. Tams-Witmark Music Library, Inc., 586 F.2d 962 (2d Cir. 1978) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Heerwagen v. Clear Channel Communications, 435 F.3d 219, 233-234 (2d Cir. 2006) ; Washington v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 959 F.2d 1566, 1571 (11th Cir. 1992) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(4); see also In re Nassau County Strip Search Cases, 461 F.3d 219, 226-230 (2d Cir. 2006) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(5).

(n18)Footnote 18. Lundquist v. Sec. Pac. Auto. Fin. Servs. Corp., 993 F.2d 11, 14 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 959 (1993) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f).

(n20)Footnote 19.1. See Gutierrez v. Johnson & Johnson, 523 F.3d 187, 193 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See Jenkins v. Raymark Indus., Inc., 782 F.2d 468, 471 (5th Cir. 1986) , reh'g denied, 785 F.2d 1034 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n22)Footnote 21. See Chamberlan v. Ford Motor Co., 402 F.3d 952, 957-960 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n23)Footnote 22. Grady v. Rhone-Poulenc Rorer Inc., 51 F.3d 1293, 1295 (7th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 867, (1995) ; In re Temple, 851 F.2d 1269, 1271 (11th Cir. 1988) ; In re Bendectin Prods. Liab. Litig., 749 F.2d 300, 303-304 (6th Cir. 1984) .

(n24)Footnote 23. See In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 169 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n25)Footnote 24. See DeBruyne v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y, 920 F.2d 457, 463 (7th Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.215

§ 42.215 Filing Class Action Tolls Statutes of Limitation on Claims of Individual Class Members

[1] Tolling Continues Until Certification Is Denied

The commencement of a class action tolls the applicable statute of limitations for all putative class members who file individual actions after a court denies class certification. n1

This rule promotes judicial economy. If the running of the statute of limitations were not tolled, numerous class members would be obliged to file separate individual actions or motions to ensure that their actions were not barred. n2

Once the statute of limitations is tolled, it remains tolled for all members of the putative class until the question of certification has been resolved. If certification is denied, the period begins to run again. n3

Putative class members must then either file their own suits or move to intervene as plaintiffs in the existing action before the remaining limitations expires. n4

Decertification of a class action will also start the statute of limitations running again. n5

The tolling rule applies to all asserted members of the class who would have been parties had the suit been permitted to continue as a class action. n6

Ordinarily, courts look to the complaint to determine the scope of the asserted class. However, one court has ruled that the scope of a class for tolling purposes is that class for which there was fair notice as to both the substantive claims and the number and generic identities of the potential class members. n7

The rules that permit tolling of limitations may not be abused by stacking two or more class actions to continue to toll the statute of limitations after certification has been denied once. Thus, if certification is denied in one class action, the statute of limitations will not be extended further by filing another, virtually identical class action; nor will a second class action filed while the first action was pending further toll the limitations period after certification is denied in the first class action. n8

To hold otherwise would enable class plaintiffs to toll the statute of limitations indefinitely by repeatedly seeking certification of the same class. n9

[2] If Certification Is Granted, Tolling Ceases for Members Who Opt Out

The tolling rule also applies to actions in which certification is granted. Thus, purported class members who opt out of a class action are entitled to the tolling of the statute of limitations from the commencement of the original class suit until the class members participation ends by means of the opt-out. The opt-out renders the question of whether the class is eventually certified irrelevant as to the individual plaintiffs who opt out. n10

The statute of limitations then begins to run again from the date the class member opts out. n11

Application of the tolling rule to class members who choose to opt out is justified because, without tolling, the statute of limitations would most often have run before the class members received notice of the class action, so that the provisions of Rule 23 that require notice and an opportunity to opt out would be pointless. n12

Allowing tolling of the statute with respect to those who opt out also prevents needless duplication of motions and protective filings by parties seeking to preserve their rights during the pendency of the class action. n13

[3] Evaluating Whether Tolling Applies to Members Who File Individual Suits Pending Certification Decision

While tolling applies to all class members who seek to file their own suits after class certification is denied or granted, there is a circuit split as to whether the statute of limitations is tolled with respect to putative class members who file separate suits while the class certification decision is pending. The Sixth Circuit, as well as some district courts in other circuits, have ruled that tolling does not apply in this circumstance. n14

Judicial economy is not furthered when plaintiffs file independent actions before the decision on class certification. These courts, therefore, do not allow a plaintiff to file an individual suit, which signals that the plaintiff is opting out of a class, and simultaneously claim class action tolling benefits.

Other circuits, however, have taken the opposite view, holding that putative class members' time to file is tolled on the filing of a class action purporting to assert their claims, regardless of whether they also file individual actions asserting the same claims. In adopting this view, the Second Circuit reasoned that the purpose of the tolling rule is to protect class members from being forced to file individual suits in order to preserve their claims, not to reduce the number of suits filed or to force individual plaintiffs to make an early decision whether to proceed by individual suit or rely on a class action. n15 The Ninth Circuit noted that applying traditional tolling to plaintiffs who filed individual suits before certification is consistent with the purpose underlying the statutes of limitations, given that statutes of limitation are intended to provide notice to defendants of a claim before the underlying evidence becomes stale. n16 The Tenth Circuit has held that an individual plaintiff is entitled to rely on the representative suit as long as it lasts. The policy underlying statutes of limitations is not harmed by this approach, as the defendant effectively has been on notice of the substantive claims of the individual plaintiff through the class action, and application of the tolling rule would not substantially impede the efficiency and economy of the class action mechanism. n17

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 354, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 350-354, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Yang v. Odom, 392 F.3d 97, 102 (3d Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Crown, Cork & Seal Co. v. Parker, 462 U.S. 345, 346-347, 354, 103 S. Ct. 2392, 76 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, Inc., 51 F.3d 1293, 1295 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See American Pipe & Constr. Co. v. Utah, 414 U.S. 538, 554, 94 S. Ct. 756, 38 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1974) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Smith v. Pennington, 352 F.3d 884, 891-894 (4th Cir. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Basch v. Ground Round, Inc., 139 F.3d 6, 11 (1st Cir. 1998) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Korwek v. Hunt, 827 F.2d 874, 879 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Realmonte v. Reeves, 169 F.3d 1280, 1284, 1287 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Adams Pub. Sch. Dist. v. Asbestos Corp., 7 F.3d 717, 718 n.1 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Realmonte v. Reeves, 169 F.3d 1280, 1284, 1287 (10th Cir. 1999) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Adams Pub. Sch. Dist. v. Asbestos Corp., 7 F.3d 717, 718 (8th Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Wyser-Pratte Mgmt. Co. v. Telxon, 413 F.3d 553, 569 (6th Cir. 2005) ; Chinn v. Giant Food, Inc., 100 F. Supp. 2d 331, 335 (D. Md. 2000) ; Rahr v. Grant Thornton LLP, 142 F. Supp. 2d 793, 800 (N.D. Tex. 2000) ; Stutz v. Minnesota Mining Mfg. Co., 947 F. Supp. 399, 403-404 (D. Ind. 1996) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See California Pub. Employees Ret. Sys. v. Caboto-Gruppo Intesa BCI (In re WorldCom Sec. Litig.), 496 F.3d 245, 252-256 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Phillips v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. (In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litig.), 521 F.3d 1028, 1038 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Boellstorff, 540 F.3d 1223, 1235 (10th Cir. 2008) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
J. Moving for Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.216 through 42.219

[Reserved]

§§ 42.216[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.220

§ 42.220 Determining Whether Notice Is Required

[1] Mandatory Notice to Class Members Required Only in Rule 23(b)(3) Actions

Mandatory notice is required only in Rule 23(b)(3) actions. n1

[2] Due Process May Require Notice in Certain Rule 23(b)(1)(B) and 23(b)(2) Actions

Although Rule 23 does not entitle members of a Rule 23(b)(1)(B) or 23(b)(2) class to notice of the action, class members may have a right to notice under the Due Process Clause of the U.S. Constitution.

[3] Court Has Discretion to Require Notice in Other Class Actions

For any class certified under Rule 23(b)(1) or Rule 23(b)(2), the court may direct appropriate notice to the class. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(A).

106 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.221

§ 42.221 Determining Content of Notice to Rule 23(b)(3) Class Members

[1] Describing Clearly the Action and Opt-Out Rights

For any class certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the notice must concisely and clearly state in plain, easily understood language: n1

- The nature of the action
- The definition of the class certified
- The class claims, issues, or defenses
- That a class member may enter an appearance through counsel if the member so desires
- That the court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion, stating when and how members may elect to be excluded
- The binding effect of a class judgment on class members under Rule 23(c)(3)

Although Rule 23(b)(3) contains an opt-out requirement, the language of Rule 23 does not recognize any type of class in which members of a class may or must affirmatively act to opt into membership. Nor is an opt-in provision ever required by due process considerations. n2

[2] Balanced Notice

The notice should be balanced, and should neither encourage nor discourage the class members from asserting claims. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass

ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Kern v. Siemens Corp., 393 F.3d 120, 124-129 (2d Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hoffmann-La Roche, Inc. v. Sperling, 493 U.S. 165, 174, 110 S. Ct. 482, 107 L. Ed. 2d 480 (1989) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.222

§ 42.222 Determining Method of Providing Notice to Rule 23(b)(3) Class Members

[1] "Best Notice Practicable" Must Be Provided

In any Rule 23(b)(3) class action, the class members must be provided with the "best notice practicable under the circumstances". n1

The notice must be reasonably calculated under all the circumstances to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action, and to afford them an opportunity to present their objections. n2 The relevant question is not whether every absent class member actually receives notice, but whether the notice that the court orders is reasonably calculated to reach absent members. n3

[2] Notice by First Class Mail

[2.--1] Notice by First Class Mail to Members Who Can Be Identified Through Reasonable Effort

Individual notice must be given to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. n4

Notice of the class action is typically sent to the identified individual class member by first class mail. n5

[2.--2] Parties Must Procure Obtainable Information

If the names and last known addresses of class members are either known to the parties or capable of being identified from records available to theparties, the parties must obtain the information. n6

The general rule is that the representative plaintiff must perform the task of identifying class members. n7 However, if a defendant is able to perform a necessary task with less difficulty or expense than the representative plaintiff, the court may order the defendant to perform it. n8

[3] Publishing Notice

Publication of notice is often the best notice practicable for class members who cannot be identified or located specifically through reasonable efforts. n9

Courts will consider the circumstances of each case, including the size and geographical diversity of the class, and the characteristics of the class members that are relevant to determining which publications they would read. However, courts cannot rely solely on notice by publication to satisfy the requirements of Rule 23(c)(2); there must be direct notice to identified individuals as well. n10

[4] Supplementing Notice

The court may order that publication or individual notice be supplemented through additional means, such as broadcasting on radio or television networks, providing a toll-free telephone number, or giving notice to various state agencies that class members would be likely to contact. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Reppert v. Marvin Lumber & Cedar Co., Inc., 359 F.3d 53, 57 (1st Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2); Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 177, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732, 748 (1974) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 176, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 355 n.22, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 355, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n9)Footnote 9. In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litig., 391 F.3d 516, 536-537 (3d Cir. 2004) ; In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 168-169 (2d Cir. 1987) ; In re Domestic Air Transp. Antitrust Litig., 141 F.R.D. 534, 548-553 (N.D. Ga. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Silber v. Mabon, 18 F.3d 1449, 1455 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n11)Footnote 11. In re "Agent Orange" Prod. Liab. Litig., 818 F.2d 145, 168-169 (2d Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.223

§ 42.223 "Clearly Erroneous" Standard of Appellate Review Regarding Notice

Rule 23 accords considerable discretion to the district court in fashioning notice to a class. The standard of review on appeal is whether the district court was clearly erroneous in its factual findings, and whether it abused its discretion. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody, 422 U.S. 405, 424, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1975) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.224

§ 42.224 Cost of Providing Notice

The plaintiff class representative is generally obligated to bear the cost of notice to class members. n1 However, if the court orders a defendant to perform certain tasks associated with providing notice, the defendant may also be ordered to bear the cost if the defendant's cost would be insubstantial, such as in a case where notice could be included with the defendant's periodic mailings. n2

Courts have also required defendants to bear the costs if the defendant has conducted itself improperly, n3 has requested certification of the plaintiff class, n4 or has assumed those costs as part of a settlement agreement. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 171, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 355 n.22, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Nagy v. Jostens, Inc., 91 F.R.D. 431, 433 (D. Minn. 1981) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Argo v. Hills, 425 F. Supp. 151, 159 (E.D.N.Y. 1977) , aff'd, 578 F.2d 1366 (2d Cir. 1978) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Milstein v. Huck, 600 F. Supp. 254, 256 (E.D.N.Y. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
K. Providing Notice to Potential Class Members

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.225 through 42.229

[Reserved]

§§ 42.225[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.230

§ 42.230 Action Proceeds in Same Fashion as Any Other Civil Action

After a class has been certified, the action proceeds in the same fashion as any other action. The same discovery devices available in civil actions are available in class actions; Rule 23 does not contain any separate discovery provisions. The Supreme Court has held that the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) prohibits arbitrators from imposing class arbitration on parties unless an arbitration agreement specifically provides for it. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. AnimalFeeds International Corp., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1758, 176 L. Ed. 2d 605, 624 (2010) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.231

§ 42.231 Court May Make Appropriate Orders for Conduct of Action

[1] Rule 23(d) Authorizes Court to Make Appropriate Orders

In any class action, the court may make appropriate orders regarding: n1

- The course of the proceedings
- Notice to class members
- Conditions on representative parties or intervenors
- Amendments of pleadings
- Other procedural matters

Any court order in a class action may be combined with an order under Rule 16, which governs pretrial conferences, scheduling, and case management. n2

[2] Orders May Be Amended

Rule 23(d) orders may be altered or amended from time to time, as desirable, permitting a court to vacate its prior orders in a class action when appropriate. n3

[3] Court Not Limited to Listed Orders

The purpose of Rule 23(d) is to provide the court with the means for facilitating the "fair and efficient conduct of the action," and courts apply the Rule's general provision for orders "dealing with other procedural matters" liberally. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass

ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1304 (2d Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.232

§ 42.232 Orders Permitting Intervention

[1] Adequacy of Representation

The court may give absentee class members the opportunity to intervene and present claims or defenses, or otherwise come into the action. n1

The primary purpose of intervention is to assure that the class is adequately represented within the meaning of Rule 23(a)(4). Thus, in a ruling on a motion for intervention, a court will typically undertake an analysis of the adequacy of the proposed representation. n2

[2] Court Applies Intervention Standards of Rule 24

Although intervention is usually granted liberally, a court may require that the requirements of Rule 24 are satisfied before intervention is permitted. n3

Rule 24 distinguishes between intervention as of right and permissive intervention. n4 To intervene as of right, the applicant must file a timely application, show an interest in the action, demonstrate that the applicant's interest may be impaired by the disposition of the action, and show that the applicant's interest is not adequately protected by the parties to the action. n5

Under the permissive intervention rule, a court has discretion to permit intervention if the applicant files a timely application, demonstrates that the proposed intervenor's claims and the existent class action share common questions of law or fact, and shows that the intervention will not unduly delay or prejudice any party. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionTimelinessCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesAdequacy of Representation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Vollmer v. Publrs. Clearing House, 248 F.3d 698, 706-707 (7th Cir. 2001) (district court properly denied intervention when class member seeking to intervene failed to show that existing class counsel would not adequately represent his interests in settlement); Gottlieb v. Wiles, 11 F.3d 1004, 1008 n.4 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Diduck v. Kasycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 149 F.R.D. 55, 57-58 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; see also Wyatt By and Through Rawlins v. Poundstone, 169 F.R.D. 155, 167 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; Ardrey v. Federal Kemper Ins. Co., 142 F.R.D. 105, 116 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a), 24(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1060 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; see also Diduck v. Kasycki & Sons Contractors, Inc., 149 F.R.D. 55, 58 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b); Comer v. Cisneros, 37 F.3d 775, 801 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1062 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; Ardrey v. Federal Kemper Ins. Co., 142 F.R.D. 105, 116 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.233

§ 42.233 Orders Requiring Amendment of Pleadings

The court may order pleadings to be amended to eliminate allegations regarding the representation of absent persons. n1

This provision may be used to:

- Purge class allegations from a complaint following denial of a motion for class certification n2
- Excise portions of a complaint's class allegations if, for example, the court determines that the plaintiffs cannot possibly prove those claims n3
- "Decertify" a class if the court determines that the plaintiffs no longer satisfy all of the requirements for maintaining a class action n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsPrerequisitesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(d)(1)(D).

(n2)Footnote 2. Narwick v. Wexler, 912 F. Supp. 342, 344 (N.D. Ill. 1995) ; White v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 153 F.R.D. 639, 641 (D. Neb. 1993) ; Kingsepp v. Wesleyan Univ., 142 F.R.D. 597, 603 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Vulcan Society v. Fire Dep't, 82 F.R.D. 379, 403 (S.D.N.Y. 1979) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bresson v. Thomson McKinnon Sec., Inc., 118 F.R.D. 339, 342 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ; see also Smith v. Heckler, 595 F. Supp. 1173, 1176 (E.D. Cal. 1984) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.234

§ 42.234 Appellate Review of Rule 23(d) Orders

Orders issued pursuant to Rule 23(d) generally are not final appealable orders because they do not finally and entirely dispose of the rights of the parties in the action. n1 However, courts of appeal have reviewed such orders under the collateral order doctrine. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertification

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Paine Webber Inc. Ltd Partnership Litig., 94 F.3d 49, 52 (2d Cir. 1996) ; see also In re School Asbestos Litig., 842 F.2d 671, 677 (3d Cir. 1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
L. Prosecuting or Defending Action Following Class Certification

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.235 through 42.239

[Reserved]

§§ 42.235[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.240

§ 42.240 Court Approval Required for Dismissal or Settlement

The claims, issues, or defenses of a certified class may be settled, voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court's approval. The following procedures apply to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise: n1

- The court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal
- If the proposal would bind class members, the court may approve it only after a hearing and on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate
- The parties seeking approval must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the proposal
- If the class action was previously certified under Rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless it affords a new opportunity to request exclusion to individual class members who had an earlier opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so
- Any class member may object to the proposal if it requires court approval under this subdivision (e); the objection may be withdrawn only with the court's approval

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out Provisions

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.241

§ 42.241 Settlement Standard

[1] Settlement Must Be Fundamentally Fair, Adequate, and Reasonable

The court may approve a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise that would bind the class members only after a hearing and on finding that the settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise is fair, reasonable, and adequate. n1

[2] Factors Considered in Determining Fairness of Proposed Settlement

Many cases discuss class action settlements and list various factors to be considered in determining whether a proposed settlement is "fair, reasonable, and adequate." Some lists are lengthy, some concise, and the factorsvary from circuit to circuit. n2 The most significant of these factors may be categorized under the following four concerns: n3

- The strength of the plaintiff's case on the merits balanced against the amount offered in settlement
- The possibility of collusion in reaching a settlement
- The reaction of members of the class to the settlement
- The stage of the proceedings and the amount of discovery completed

[3] Strength of Plaintiff's Case Compared to Amount Offered in Settlement

In determining the fairness of a proposed class action settlement, the court must balance the probable result at trial against the likely costs, in both time and money, of continued litigation. n4

[4] Reaction of Class Members to Proposed Settlement

The reaction of class members to a proposed settlement is a proper consideration for the trial court, although a settlement is not deemed unfair simply because a large number of class members object to it. n5

Indeed, even majority opposition does not bar approval. n6

[5] Stage of Proceedings at Which Settlement Is Reached

A court is more likely to approve a settlement if most of the discovery is completed, because it suggests that the parties arrived at a compromise based on a full understanding of the issues surrounding the case. n7

[6] Providing New Opportunity to Opt-Out

In an action previously certified as a class action under Rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless it affords a new opportunity to request exclusion to individual class members who had an earlier opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re General Motors Corp. Pick-up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 785 (3d Cir. 1995) , cert. denied sub nom. General Motors Corp. v. French, 516 U.S. 824 (1995) ; Gottlieb v. Wiles, 11 F.3d 1004, 1014 (10th Cir. 1993) ; County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1323 (2d Cir. 1990) ; In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 105 (D.R.I. 1996) ; Manchaca v. Chater, 927 F. Supp. 962, 966 (E.D. Tex. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See UAW v. GMC, 497 F.3d 615, 631 (6th Cir. 2007) ; see also Ayers v. Thompson, 358 F.3d 356, 369 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 420 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 107 (D.R.I. 1996) ; see also Manchaca v. Chater, 927 F. Supp. 962, 966 (E.D. Tex. 1996) ; Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1063 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 420 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 907 F.2d 1295, 1304 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 106 (D.R.I. 1996) ; see also Manchaca v. Chater, 927 F. Supp. 962, 966 (E.D. Tex. 1996) ; In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 420 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.242

§ 42.242 Court Not Permitted to Modify Settlement Agreement

The court is not permitted to modify the terms of a settlement agreement. Rather, it must approve or disapprove of the settlement as a whole. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsOpt-Out ProvisionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsModifications

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 726-727, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.243

§ 42.243 Typical Settlement Process

After the parties agree on a proposed settlement, the following steps are usually taken in cases in which the class has been certified prior to settlement:

- The proposed settlement is submitted to the court
- Often, a hearing is held in which the court will make a preliminary determination regarding the fairness of the settlement
- If appropriate, notice is drafted, approved, and delivered
- At least one fairness hearing is held allowing affected persons to be heard with respect to the proposed settlement
- The court approves or disapproves the settlement, sometimes including a statement of its findings and conclusions, and initiates any necessary claims process

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromises

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.244

§ 42.244 Settling Class Action Prior to Class Certification

[1] Settlement Prior to Certification Permitted

Parties to a class action are permitted to negotiate a proposed settlement before certification of the class. However, to guard against the possibility of collusion and undue pressure, settlement negotiations prior to certification are subjected to a higher degree of scrutiny than is usual in assessing later settlements. n1

[2] Class May Be Certified for Settlement Purposes

A class action may be certified solely for purposes of settlement. n2 Certification of classes for settlement purposes is consistent with Rule 23, provided the district court thoroughly evaluates whether the proposed class fully satisfies the requirements of Rule 23(a) and (b). n3

Although the fact of the settlement is relevant to the class certification decision, the requirements of Rule 23 must still be met. While courts have wide discretion in assessing fairness, they "lack the authority to substitute for Rule 23's certification criteria a standard never adopted--that if a settlement is 'fair,' then certification is proper". n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromises

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1424 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 777-778 (3d Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Cmty. Bank of N. Va., 418 F.3d 277, 300-302 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 614, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 2235, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689

(1997) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.245

§ 42.245 Obtaining Preliminary Court Approval of Settlement

Although not required by Rule 23(e), the court will typically conduct a preliminary review of the proposed settlement before ordering that notice be sent to the class members providing an opportunity to be heard. The preliminary review is conducted for the following purposes: n1

- To establish an initial presumption of fairness through a cursory review of the settlement's terms
- To determine whether the negotiations occurred at arm's length
- To establish whether there was sufficient discovery
- To determine whether the proponents of the litigation are experienced in similar litigation
- To establish that the number of actual or anticipated objections to the settlement is not large when compared to the class size

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromises

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re General Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 785 (3d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.246

§ 42.246 Providing Notice of Proposed Settlement to Class Members

[1] Directing Notice in a Reasonable Manner

The court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise. n1 A "reasonable" notice need not include all of the details of the proposed settlement or dismissal; rather, the notice must fairly apprise the class members of the terms of the settlement or dismissal. n2

[2] Form and Manner of Notice of Proposed Settlement

The court has broad discretion in directing the manner and form of notice. Notice by mail to individual class members is the most common manner of effecting notice. n3

However, there is no rigid requirement of individual notice under Rule 23(e). The Due Process clause also guarantees to class members the right to notice. However, this right does not require that every class member actually receive notice. The question is whether the court directed the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to class members who can be identified with reasonable effort. n4

[3] Costs and Necessary Tasks of Notice of Proposed Settlement

Although the general rule is that the representing plaintiff should perform all tasks and bear all costs related to sending the notice of proposed settlement, defendants may be required to perform necessary tasks if the defendant has the ability to perform them more efficiently. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsVoluntary Dismissals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. UAW v. GMC, 497 F.3d 615, 630 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See County of Suffolk v. Long Island Lighting Co., 710 F. Supp. 1422, 1424 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See DeJulius v. New Eng. Health Care Employees Pension Fund, 429 F.3d 935, 943-947 (10th Cir. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Oppenheimer Fund, Inc., v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 359-360, 98 S. Ct. 2380, 57 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1978) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.247

§ 42.247 Participating in Fairness Hearing

The court may approve a settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise that would bind the class members only after a hearing and on finding that the settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise is fair, reasonable, and adequate. n1 Sometimes multiple hearings are held in different locations to facilitate a wider degree of participation by those objecting to the settlement.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCertificationCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2) ; see, e.g., UAW v. GMC, 497 F.3d 615, 631 (6th Cir. 2007) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.248

§ 42.248 Objecting to Proposed Settlement

Any class member may object to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, orcompromise that requires court approval, and such an objection may be withdrawn only with the court's approval. n1

The court is obligated to consider class members' objections in its determination of whether a proposed settlement agreement is fair, adequate, and reasonable. n2 Even a non-named class member, who has timely objected to a settlement at a fairness hearing, may appeal the approval of the settlement without first intervening. n3

In an action previously certified as a class action under Rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless it affords a new opportunity to request exclusion to individual class members who had an earlier opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsCourt OrdersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 107 (D.R.I. 1996) ; see also Manchaca v. Chater, 927 F. Supp. 962, 966 (E.D. Tex. 1996) ; see also Dillard v. City of Foley, 926 F. Supp. 1053, 1063 (M.D. Ala. 1995) ; In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 420 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Devlin v. Scardelletti, 536 U.S. 1, 13-14, 122 S. Ct. 2005, 153 L. Ed. 2d 27 (2002) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(4).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.249

§ 42.249 Computing Attorney's Fees in Cases Not Involving Coupon Settlements

[1] Court Review of Fee Settlements

In an action certified as a class action, the court may award reasonable attorney's fees and nontaxable costs authorized by law or by agreement of the parties. n1 A claim for an award of attorney's fees and nontaxable costs must be made by motion under Rule 54(d)(2) at a time set by the court. Notice of the motion must be served on all parties and, for motions by class counsel, directed to class members in a reasonable manner. n2

A class member, or a party from whom payment is sought, may object to the motion. n3 The court may hold a hearing and must find the facts and state its conclusions of law on the motion under Rule 52(a) at a time set by the court. n4

[2] Fee Calculations

[2.--1] Percentage-of-the-Fund Approach

Most courts apply the percentage-of-the-fund approach to class actions. Although courts have granted fee awards ranging between 15 and 50 percent of the entire settlement fund, 30 percent of the fund is seen as presumptively reasonable, subject to adjustment upward or downward in extraordinary circumstances. n5

Courts have retreated from the lodestar approach, in which courts determine the number of hours reasonably expected, multiply them by a reasonable hourly rate, and then multiply the total by a multiplier to increase or decrease the award as circumstances warrant. n6

[2.--2] Factors Considered on Fee Applications

Courts consider the following factors in determining whether to approve fee applications: n7

- The time and labor expended by counsel
- The magnitude and complexity of the litigation
- The risk of the litigation

- The quality of the representation
- The requested fee in relation to the settlement
- Public policy considerations

[3] Court Approval is Limited in Settlements Requiring Class Members to Make Payments to Counsel

Courts have only limited authority to approve a class action settlement that requires class members to make payments to counsel. n8 The limitation on the court's discretion to approve such settlements is contained in the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA), and applies to class actions commenced on or after February 18, 2005. n9

Whenever a proposed class action settlement obligates any class member to pay an amount to class counsel that would result in a class member suffering a monetary loss, the court may approve the settlement only if the court makes a written finding that nonmonetary benefits conferred by the settlement on the class member substantially outweigh the amount paid to counsel. n10 The Act thus requires the court first to determine the value of nonmonetary benefits (such as an injunction or other equitable relief) with respect to the individual class member, and then to weigh that value against the sum paid by the class member so as to determine whether the nonmonetary value is "substantially" greater. n11

[4] Court May Not Approve Settlements That Discriminate Based on Geographical Location

A court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for greater payments to some class members than to others, when the difference is attributable solely to the fact that some members are located in closer geographic proximity to the court than others. n12 This limitation was enacted as part of the CAFA and applies to class actions commenced on or after February 18, 2005. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFeesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsJudicial DiscretionCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re AT&T Corp., 455 F.3d 160, 167-173 (3d Cir. 2006) ; Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 121-124 (2d Cir. 2005) ; see also In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 300-307 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See In re Fleet/Norstar Sec. Litig., 935 F. Supp. 99, 107 (D.R.I. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See In re Marine Midland Motor Vehicle Leasing Litig., 155 F.R.D. 416, 422 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 1713.

(n9)Footnote 9. *See Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5166, at 15 (D.Colo. Mar. 9, 2005) (the commencement date of the action refers to the date the action is filed in a court of proper jurisdiction, not the date it is removed to federal court).

(n10)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1713.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 1713.

(n12)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1714.

(n13)Footnote 13. *See Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5166, at 15 (D.Colo. Mar. 9, 2005) (the commencement date of the action refers to the date the action is filed in a court of proper jurisdiction, not the date it is removed to federal court).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.250

§ 42.250 Court Approval of Coupon Settlements

[1] Class Action Fairness Act Governs Coupon Settlements

There are specific provisions under the Class Action Fairness Act which limit court approval of "coupon settlements." n1 The provisions apply to class actions commenced on or after February 18, 2005. n2

Under the CAFA, a court may approve a proposed coupon settlement only after the court holds a hearing to determine whether, and makes a written finding that, the coupon settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate for class members. n3 The CAFA does not define "coupon" or "coupon settlement." n4 Parties should presume that the CAFA applies to any settlement in which some or all of the recovery consists of coupons or vouchers that may be redeemed for any form of goods or services.

[2] Coupon Settlement May Be Conditioned on Charitable Distribution of Unredeemed Coupon Value

Courts may require that a coupon settlement agreement provide that a portion of the value of unredeemed or unclaimed coupons be distributed to one or more charitable or governmental organizations, the number and identity of which are to be agreed to by the parties. n5

[3] Attorney's Fees Are Limited in Cases Involving Coupon Settlements

Courts must base the portion of the award of attorney's fees attributable to the recovery of coupons on the value to class members of the coupons that are actually redeemed. n6 A court, in its discretion and on motion of a party, may receive expert testimony from a witness qualified to provide information on the actual value to class members of the redeemed coupons. n7 In a case involving an award of coupons, any portion of the fee award that is not attributable to the award of coupons must be based on the amount of time class counsel reasonably expended on the work. n8 Any fee for work to obtain equitable or injunctive relief must be based on the amount of time expended by class counsel. The CAFA specifically authorizes use of the "lodestar with a multiplier" method for compensating counsel.

Any court-ordered charitable distribution may not be used to calculate attorney's fees. n9 The fee award may not be computed (and may not be paid) until after the redemption period for the coupons has elapsed, because until that time no one can know how many coupons will be redeemed. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1712.

(n2)Footnote 2. *See Pritchett v. Office Depot, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5166, at 15 (D.Colo. Mar. 9, 2005) (the commencement date of the action refers to the date the action is filed in a court of proper jurisdiction, not the date it is removed to federal court).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e).

(n4)Footnote 4. See generally 28 U.S.C. §§ 171, 1712.

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e).

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(d).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e).

(n10)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1712(a).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.251

§ 42.251 Defendants Must Notify Appropriate Federal and State Officials of Proposed Settlement

[1] Defendants Must Give Notice Within 10 Days After Filing Proposed Settlement

Under the Class Action Fairness Act, each defendant participating in a proposed settlement of a class action must serve appropriate federal and state officials with a notice of the proposed settlement within 10 days after a proposed settlement is filed in court. n1

[2] Selecting the Appropriate Federal and State Officials for Service of Notice

In the vast majority of cases, the "appropriate federal official" is the United States Attorney General. n2 However, in a case in which the defendant is a federal depository institution, a state depository institution, a depository institution holding company, a foreign bank, or a nondepository institution subsidiary of one of these, n3 the notice requirements are satisfied by serving the person who has the primary federal regulatory or supervisory responsibility with respect to the defendant, provided some or all of the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation or supervision by that person. n4

The selection of the "appropriate state official" is more complex. The defendant must serve the person in the state who either: n5

- Has the primary regulatory or supervisory responsibility with respect to the defendant, or
- Licenses or otherwise authorizes the defendant to conduct business in the state.

However, these two alternatives apply only if some or all of the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation by such a person. If there is no primary regulatory, supervisory, or licensing authority, or if the matters alleged in the class action are not subject to regulation or supervision by such a person, then the appropriate state official is the state attorney general. n6

Different rules apply for determining the appropriate state official when a state depository institution is a settling defendant. n7 A defendant state depository institution satisfies its obligation to give notice of a proposed class action settlement by serving notice on the state bank supervisor (as defined by 12 U.S.C. § 1813) of the state in which the defendant is incorporated or chartered, if some or all of the of the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation or supervision by that person. n8 In addition to serving the state bank supervisor, state depository institutions must also serve the appropriate federal official. n9

Class members will not be bound by any class settlement with respect to any defendant who failed to give the required notice to the appropriate federal and state officials. n10 However, if the defendant selects the wrong state official, class members will remain bound so long as the defendant served the appropriate federal official and either the state attorney general or the primary regulatory, supervisory, or licensing authority. n11

[3] Contents of the Notice of Proposed Settlement

Each defendant's notice must include all of the following: n12

- A copy of the complaint and any materials filed with the complaint and any amended complaints. These materials may be omitted if they are made available electronically on the internet and the notice indicates how to electronically access such material n13

- Notice of any scheduled judicial hearing in the class action n14

- Any proposed or final notice to class members informing them of their right to opt out, or informing them that no right to opt out exists in the case; and any proposed or final notice of a class settlement n15

- Any proposed or final class action settlement n16

- Any settlement or other agreement contemporaneously made betweenclass counsel and counsel for the defendants n17

- Any final judgment or notice of dismissal n18

- If feasible, the names of class members who reside in each state and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of the state's class members to the entire settlement. The information with respect to each state needs to be provided only to the appropriate state official for that state. If it is not feasible to provide this information, the notice must include a reasonable estimate of the number of class members residing in each state and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of those members to the entire settlement. n19

- Any written judicial opinion relating to notice to the class concerning their opt-out rights or a proposed settlement; relating to any proposed or final settlement; relating to any settlement or agreement between class counsel and counsel for the defendants; or relating to any final judgment n20

[4] Notice Requirement May Delay Court Approval of Class Action Settlement

The court may not give final approval of a proposed settlement until at least 90 days have elapsed since the last date on which the last defendant completed serving notice on the appropriate state and federal officials. n21

[5] If Notice Not Provided, Class Members Might Not Be Bound

A class member may refuse to comply with and may choose not to be bound by a settlement agreement or consent decree if the class member demonstrates that a defendant has not served the required notice on the appropriate federal and state officials. n22

However, a class member may not refuse to comply with or be bound by the settlement agreement or consent decree if a defendant merely erred as to who is an appropriate state official, provided the defendant served notice on both: n23

- The appropriate federal official
- Either the state attorney general or the person who has primary regulatory, supervisory, or licensing authority over the defendant

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 12 U.S.C. § 1813 (definitions).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(1)(B); 28 U.S.C. § 1715(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(c)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(c)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(c)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(2).

(n15)Footnote 15. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(3).

(n16)Footnote 16. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(4).

(n17)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(5).

(n18)Footnote 18. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(6).

(n19)Footnote 19. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(7).

(n20)Footnote 20. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b)(8).

(n21)Footnote 21. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(d).

(n22)Footnote 22. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(1).

(n23)Footnote 23. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(e)(2).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.252

§ 42.252 Drafting Class Action Judgment

[1] Drafting Crucial to Determining Who Is Bound

The drafting of the judgment in a class action is crucial to determining who is bound by that judgment.

[2] Drafting Requirements in Rule 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2) Actions

The judgment in a Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2) class action must, whether or not it is favorable to the class, include and describe those whom finds to be members of the class. It need not, however, specify the individual members. n1

[3] Drafting Requirements in Rule 23(b)(3) Actions

The judgment in a Rule 23(b)(3) action must, whether or not it is favorable to the class, include and specify or describe those to whom the notice provided in Rule 23(c)(2) was directed, and who have not requested exclusion, and whom the court finds to be members of the class. Thus, the judgment must specify the individual members who have been identified and describe the others. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass MembersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsCompromisesCivil ProcedureClass ActionsNoticesCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3)(B).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.253

§ 42.253 Judgment in Class Action Must Describe Those Bound by Judgment

A judgment in a Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2) class action, regardless of whether it is favorable or unfavorable to the class, must include and describe those whom the court finds to be members of the class. n1

Similarly, a judgment in a Rule 23(b)(3) class action, regardless of whether it is favorable or unfavorable to the class, must include and specify or describe those to whom the court directed certification notice under Rule 23(c)(2), including all class members who have not requested exclusion and whom the court finds are members of the class. n2

In other words, in a Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2) action, the judgment must describe the members of the class, but need not specify the individual members; in a Rule 23(b)(3) action, the judgment must specify the individual members who have been identified and must describe the others. n3

If a judgment improperly includes and describes the class membership, the court may correct this clerical error of omission or oversight in the judgment under Rule 60(a). n4

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(3)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c) Advisory Committee Note (1966).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Vaughter v. Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 817 F.2d 685, 690 (11th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.254

§ 42.254 Preclusive Effect of Judgments and Orders in Class Actions

[1] Evaluating Whether Order Denying Certification Has Preclusive Effect

The Fifth Circuit has ruled that an order denying class certification should not have preclusive effect by reasoning that the district court's certification decision results from the court's exercise of broad discretion, and on the further ground that the certification decision is merely a procedural one. n1

According to the Fifth Circuit, each court has the broad discretion to determine independently whether the class-action requirements applicable in that jurisdiction have been met. n2

The Seventh Circuit, on the other hand, held that its judgment reversing certification of a nationwide class was a final adjudication of that issue and had the conclusive effect necessary for issue preclusion. The unnamed class members were bound by the judgment, regardless of whether the court would have had personal jurisdiction over them, just as they would have been bound by a final judgment if the class had been certified. n3

A later decision by the Seventh Circuit held that not every ruling denying class certification is entitled to collateral estoppel effect. The binding effect of such a ruling depends on whether the class members who would be affected by it had been adequately protected by the class representatives and class counsel in the proceeding in which the ruling was made. Also, collateral estoppel is an affirmative defense that is forfeited if not raised in a timely manner. n4

[2] Final Judgment Has Preclusive Effect on All Class Members Who Did Not Opt Out

A judgment in a properly maintained class action is binding on all class members, as well as named parties, in any subsequent litigation. The principles of claim preclusion and issue preclusion apply. n5

The general rule that class action judgments have preclusive effects must be qualified for Rule 23(b)(3) class actions. In those cases, the judgment will have preclusive effect only if the class action procedures used to reach it have comported with certain constitutional due process requirements. Due process requires that in Rule 23(b)(3) cases, cases in which the predominant request for relief is for money damages, absent class members must be given the best practicable notice, an opportunity to be heard, an opportunity to opt out of the action, and adequate representation by the named plaintiff. n6

Rule 23(c)(2) requires a court to comply with all of those due process requirements. n7

Class members who are not properly notified of certification and the right to opt out will be able to pursue their claims individually as if they had opted out, without regard to the judgment in the class action. n8

By contrast, if the requirements of Rule 23(c)(2) have been satisfied, all Rule 23(b)(3) class members who were given proper notice and did not opt out are bound by the judgment. n9

Due process concerns play a smaller role in connection with the preclusive effects of final judgments in Rule 23(b)(1) or (b)(2) classes. Members of those classes generally do not have the choice to opt out, as do members of Rule 23(b)(3) classes, n10 and they may be bound by the judgment reached in the action even though they did not receive individual notice or an opportunity to opt out. n11 Accordingly, in such actions class members must rely on the class representative to protect their interests. The preclusive effect of a judgment from a prior action depends on whether the absent class members were adequately represented by the named plaintiffs in that action. n12

A class member given an opportunity to opt out, but who did not opt out, has very limited due process arguments to prevent a final class judgment from being preclusive. The class member may file an objection with the district court or, in appropriate circumstances, appeal a final judgment or an order approving a settlement. n13

Under those circumstances, however, the only ground for challenging the preclusive effect of a final class judgment will be an assertion that the class representatives and class counsel inadequately represented the class interests. n14

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Clearwater v. Ashland Oil Co., 93 F.3d 176, 180 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Clearwater v. Ashland Oil Co., 93 F.3d 176, 180 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See In re Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., Tires Prods. Liab. Litig., 333 F.3d 763, 768-769 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Carnegie v. Household Int'l, Inc., 376 F.3d 656, 662-663 (7th Cir. 2004) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Cooper v. Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, 467 U.S. 867, 874, 104 S. Ct. 2794, 81 L. Ed. 2d 718 (1984) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Adams v. Southern Farm Bureau Life Ins. Co., 493 F.3d 1276, 1285-1287 (11th Cir. 2007) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Pate v. United States, 328 F. Supp. 2d 62, 72-74 (D.D.C. 2004) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re Diet Drugs Prods. Liab. Litig., 431 F.3d 141, 145-149 (3d Cir. 2005) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. See In re Greenman Sec. Litig., 829 F.2d 1539, 1542 (11th Cir. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Pelt v. Utah, 539 F.3d 1271, 1284-1287 (10th Cir. 2008) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Bash v. Firstmark Standard Life Ins. Co., 861 F.2d 159, 164 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Stephenson v. Dow Chem. Co., 273 F.3d 249, 259 (2d Cir. 2001) , revd in part, affd in part by equally divided court, 539 U.S. 111, 112 (2003) (per curiam).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
M. Settling Class Actions

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 42.255 through 42.299

[Reserved]

§§ 42.255[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
N. Forms

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.300

§ 42.300 Class Action Complaint

[1] FORM

Class Action Complaint

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

1. [Allegations of jurisdiction and venue (see Ch. 1, Pleadings)].

2. This action is brought by the plaintiffs as a class action, on their own behalf and on behalf of all others similarly situated, pursuant to the provisions of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 23(a) and [insert additional Rule 23 subdivisions], on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated.

3. The relief sought in this action is as follows:

[set forth relief sought; for example, an injunction to enjoin the defendants from (specify conduct to be enjoined)]

4. The class represented by the plaintiffs in this action consists of individuals who [state characteristics of class].

5. The exact number of members of the class is not known, but it is estimated that the number is in excess of [insert estimate of number of class members]. The class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable.

6. There are questions of law or fact presented in this action that are common to the entire class, and that affect the rights of the class. Those issues include the following: [specify common questions].

7. The claims of the named plaintiffs are typical of the claims of the class, and the named plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

8. The named plaintiffs are able to and will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

9. Counsel for the named plaintiffs is qualified, experienced, able to conduct this litigation, and will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

[CHOOSE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING, AS APPROPRIATE]

10. [If class action is predicated upon subdivision (1)(A) of Rule 23(b), allege the following:] This action is properly maintained as a class action in that the prosecution of separate actions by individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the defendants herein.

[OR]

10. [If class action is predicated upon subdivision (1)(B) of Rule 23(b), allege the following:] This action is properly maintained as a class action in that the prosecution of separate actions by individual members of the class would create a risk of adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would as practical matter be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications, or would substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests.

[OR]

10. [If class action is predicated upon subdivision (2) of Rule 23(b), allege the following:] This action is properly maintained as a class action in that the defendants herein have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole.

[OR]

10. [If class action is predicated upon subdivision (3) of Rule 23(b), allege the following:] This action is properly maintained as a class action in that questions of law and fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy.

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs respectfully request that judgment be entered in this action, on behalf of themselves and all other class members similarly situated, as follows:

1. [insert relief requested, consistent with paragraph no. 3 of this form]

2. That plaintiffs be awarded attorney's fees in accordance with [insert authority for award of attorney's fees]

3. That plaintiffs be awarded such other and further relief as may be appropriate, including costs and expenses.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiffs, [names of plaintiffs]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of class action complaint pursuant to Rule 23.

Complaints in securities fraud actions have additional requirements under the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. n1 The Act applies to all securities fraud actions commenced on or after December 22, 1995. For discussion of those requirements, see § 42.87.

A complaint in a class action alleging violation of the Securities Act of 1933 or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 n2 must be accompanied by a certification signed by the plaintiff [see § 7.192[1]].

[3] Complaint Must Set Forth Prerequisites for Class Action

The complaint must set forth all the prerequisites for a class action suit, which are as follows: n3

- Numerosity: the class is so numerous that joinder of all parties is impracticable
- Commonality: there are questions of law or fact common to the class
- Typicality: the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the class
- Adequacy of representation: the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interest of the class

[4] Proper Description of Plaintiffs in Case Caption

The case caption in a class action should be set up so that the names of the plaintiff representatives reads as follows: "[Names of representative plaintiffs], on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated'

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. 104-67, 109 Stat. 737.

(n2)Footnote 2. P.L. 104-67, § 101(a), (b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a); see § 42.191.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
N. Forms

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.301

§ 42.301 Notice of Motion for Class Action Certification

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Class Action Certification

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court at the United States Courthouse located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 23(c)(1):

(a) permitting the within action to be maintained as a class action for the benefit of the class consisting of [state characteristics of class, e.g., persons exposed to asbestos manufactured by XYZ Corporation], of which the named plaintiffs are members;

(b) setting forth the requisite form and manner of notice, if any, to be provided to members of the class; and

(c) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute; generally required) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date], and upon all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiffs, [names of plaintiffs]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion for class action certification in accordance with the provisions of Rule 23(c)(1). For complete discussion of motions seeking class action certification, see §§ 42.210 -42.214.

[3] Deadline for Seeking Class Action Certification

When a person sues or is sued as a representative of a class, the court must, at an early practicable time, determine by order whether to certify the action as a class action [see § 42.210[1]]. n1

Local rules often impose deadlines for seeking class action certification.

[4] Burden Is on Party Seeking Certification

The party seeking class certification has the burden of demonstrating that all the requirements for a class action have been met. n2

[5] Determining Whether Notice to Class Members Is Required

For discussion of class action notice requirements, see §§ 42.220 -42.224. For a form of Notice to Class Members, see § 42.302.

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 42.212.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 42 Class Actions
N. Forms

3-42 Federal Litigation Guide § 42.302

§ 42.302 Notice to Class Members

[1] FORM

Notice to Class Members

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

To all [identify members of class]:

You are hereby advised, pursuant to order of the above court dated [date of order], of the pendency of the above action commenced [date action commenced], wherein [summarize in detail the definition of the class certified; the nature of the action; and the claims, issues, or defenses involved].

You are further advised, in accordance with the provisions of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 23(c)(2), that:

(1) you will be excluded as a member of the class [describe class] if you make a request for exclusion by [specify date and manner for requesting exclusion];

(2) the judgment in this action, whether favorable or not, will include all members of the class [describe class] who do not request exclusion; and

(3) if you do not request exclusion from the class, you may, if you so desire, enter an appearance through your counsel.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiffs, [names of plaintiffs]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice for use by plaintiffs' counsel to notify potential class members of the pendency of the action.

Potential class members must be notified of the pendency of the action when the class is maintained pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3). A court may order notification to potential class members when the class is maintained under Rules 23(b)(1) or 23(b)(2).

[3] Providing Notice

In any Rule 23(b)(3) class action, the class members must be provided with the "best notice practicable under the circumstances". n1 The notice must be reasonably calculated under all the circumstances to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action, and to afford them an opportunity to present their objections. n2

Individual notice must be given to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. n3 Notice of the class action is typically sent to the identified individual class member by first class mail. n4

To determine whether notice by publication is appropriate, courts will consider the circumstances of each case, including the size and geographical diversity of the class, and the characteristics of the class members that are relevant to determining which publications they would read. However, courts cannot rely solely on notice by publication to satisfy the requirements of Rule 23(c)(2); there must be direct notice to identified individuals as well. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 7.221[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 7.222.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 7.222[3].

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *

3-43 Federal Litigation Guide 43.syn

§ 43.syn Synopsis to Chapter 43: Damages *

§ 43.01 Evaluating Types of Damages
[1] Considering General Damages
[2] Considering Nominal Damages
[3] Considering Exemplary or Punitive Damages
[4] Considering Special Damages
[5] Considering Liquidated Damages
[6] Considering Statutory Damages

§ 43.02 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Federal Court
[1] Applying Federal Law in Federal Question Cases
[2] Applying State Law in Diversity Cases
[3] Applying Federal Law in Review of Jury Awards

§ 43.03 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Transferred Actions
[1] Considering Damages in Actions Transferred Based on Convenience
[2] Considering Damages in Actions Transferred Based on Improper Venue

§ 43.04 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Multidistrict Litigation Cases
[1] Consolidating Cases Under the Multidistrict Litigation Act
[2] Applying the Damages Laws of the Transferor Forum

§ 43.05 Establishing Adequate Damages in Diversity Actions
[1] Determining Amount in Controversy Is Question of Federal Law
[2] Recovering Less Than Jurisdictional Amount
[3] Claiming Amount in Controversy in Good Faith
[4] Failing to Meet Threshold Damages Based on Statutory or Contractual Cap on Damages
[5] Including Punitive Damages in Calculation of Threshold Damages
[6] Proving Jurisdictional Damages in Diversity Cases
[7] Pleading Jurisdictional Amount

§ 43.06 Pleading Damages
[1] Pleading Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

[2] Establishing Limit for Default Judgments

§ 43.07 Pleading General Damages

§ 43.08 Pleading Punitive Damages

§ 43.09 Pleading Special Damages
[1] Stating Special Damages Specifically
[2] Pleading Special Damages May Be Required in Certain Cases
[3] Pleading Special Damages With Specificity Gives Opposing Party Notice
[4] Acting on Insufficient Statement of Relief
[5] Failing to Plead Special Damages Properly

§ 43.10 Pleading Statutory Damages

§ 43.11 Obtaining Damages Information Through Disclosure and Discovery
[1] Disclosing Computation of Damages
[2] Disclosing Best Information Available
[3] Making Discovery Requests for Damages Information

§ 43.12 Calculating Damages

§ 43.13 Calculating Interest as Portion of Damages

§ 43.14 Calculating Future Damages Awards
[1] Discounting Interest Earned on Lump Sum
[2] Taking Future Inflation Into Account

§ 43.15 Converting Foreign Currency In Damages Calculations

§ 43.16 Proving Damages
[1] Establishing Extent of Damages
[2] Proving General Damages
[3] Proving Lost Profits
[4] Proving Punitive Damages
[5] Proving Liquidated Damages
[6] Using Damages Experts

§ 43.17 Conducting Separate Trials on Issues of Liability and Damages

§ 43.18 Awarding Damages Through General and Special Verdicts

§ 43.19 Considering Taxation of Damages Awards
[1] Excluding Award From Taxable Income Is Exception
[2] Evaluating Taxation of Personal Injury Awards
[3] Evaluating Taxation of Workers' Compensation Awards
[4] Evaluating Taxation of Business-Related Damages
[5] Evaluating Taxation of Punitive Damages
[6] Evaluating Taxation of Attorney's Fees Award
[7] Instructing the Jury Regarding Taxation

§§ 43.20 through 43.30 [Reserved]

§ 43.31 Moving for New Trial Based on Excessive Award of Damages

§ 43.32 Reducing Excessive Damages By Remittitur
[1] Electing to Remit a Portion of the Damages Awarded In Lieu of New Trial
[2] Evaluating Whether Award is Excessive in Federal Question Cases
[3] Evaluating Whether Award is Excessive in Diversity Cases
[4] Determining Amount of Remittitur
[5] Accepting Remittitur Precludes Subsequent Appeal of Remittitur Order

§ 43.33 Additur Generally Not Permissible
[1] Defining Additur
[2] Additur Is Constitutionally Impermissible
[3] Evaluating the Limited Use of Additur

§ 43.34 Appealing Damages Awards
[1] Evaluating the Standard of Review
[2] Specific Findings Required
[3] Reviewing a Trial Judge's Award of Punitive Damages
[4] Reducing Excessive Punitive Damages on Appeal
[5] Constitutional Challenges to Punitive Damages Awards

§§ 43.35 through 43.40 [Reserved]

§ 43.41 Seeking Damages In Antitrust Cases
[1] Considering Possible Damages Under Antitrust Law
[2] Making a Reasonable and Fair Estimate of Damages
[3] Proving Antitrust Damages
[3.--1] Showing Injury and Actual Loss
[3.--2] Establishing Fact of Injury
[3.--3] Establishing Net Damages
[4] Recovering Overcharges in Price-Fixing Cases
[5] Recovering Overcharges in Tying Cases
[6] Recovering Damages in Price Discrimination Cases
[7] Calculating Lost Profits
[7.--1] Determining Net Profit
[7.--2] Using the "Before and After" Method
[7.--3] Using the "Yardstick" Method
[7--4] Establishing Loss of Goodwill, "Going Concern" or Capital Value

§ 43.42 Seeking Damages Under Section 11 of the 1933 Securities Act
[1] Recovering Damages Resulting From Untrue Fact in Registration Statement
[2] Calculating Damages Under Section 11

§ 43.43 Seeking Damages Under Section 12(2) of the 1933 Securities Act
[1] Bringing a Claim Based on Prospectus Fraud
[2] Seeking Rescission Under Section 12(2)
[3] Recovering Damages Under Section 12(2)

§ 43.44 Seeking Damages Under Section 10(b) of the 1934 Securities Exchange Act
[1] Making a Claim for Securities Fraud Under Rule 10b-5
[2] Recovering Actual or Out-of-Pocket Damages

[3] Recovering Defendant's Fraudulent Profits
[4] Recovering Benefit-of-the-Bargain Damages
[5] Recovering Consequential Damages
[6] Seeking Rescission Under Rule 10b-5
[7] Punitive Damages Unavailable Under Federal Securities Law

§ 43.45 Seeking Damages Under Federal Copyright Law
[1] Electing Proper Remedy Under Copyright Statute
[2] Recovering Actual Damages for Copyright Infringement
[3] Recovering Profits of Infringer
[4] Recovering Statutory Damages for Copyright Infringement
[5] Recovering Prejudgment Interest in Copyright Cases
[6] Punitive Damages Unavailable in Federal Copyright Cases

§ 43.46 Seeking Damages Under Federal Patent Law
[1] Claiming Damages for Unauthorized Use of Patented Invention
[2] Recovering Profits Lost From Patent Infringement
[3] Recovering Reasonable Royalty Damages
[4] Recovering Hypothetical Royalty Damages
[5] Increasing Damages Award Based on Willful Infringement
[6] Recovering Prejudgment Interest in Patent Cases

§ 43.47 Seeking Damages Under Federal Trademark Law
[1] Claiming Damages for Trademark Infringement
[2] Recovering Damages Based on Lost Earnings
[3] Recovering Damages Based on Defendant's Profits
[4] Increasing Damages Award Based on Statutory Authority

§ 43.48 Seeking Damages for Employment Discrimination Under Title VII
[1] Claiming Damages For Discrimination at the Workplace
[2] Recovering Back Pay Under Title VII
[3] Recovering Front Pay Under Title VII
[4] Recovering Compensatory and Punitive Damages Under Title VII

§ 43.49 Seeking Damages for Age Discrimination Under the ADEA
[1] Claiming Damages Under the ADEA
[2] Recovering Back Pay Under the ADEA
[3] Recovering Liquidated Damages Under the ADEA
[4] Recovering Front Pay Under the ADEA
[5] Recovering Punitive and Compensatory Damages Under The ADEA

§ 43.50 Seeking Damages Under the Equal Pay Act
[1] Claiming Damages For Discrimination Based on Sex
[2] Recovering Back Pay Under the Equal Pay Act
[3] Recovering Liquidated Damages Under the Equal Pay Act

§ 43.51 Seeking Damages Under 42 U.S.C. § 1981
[1] Claiming Damages for Civil Rights Violations Under Section 1981
[2] Recovering Compensatory Damages Under Section 1981
[3] Recovering Punitive Damages Under Section 1981

§ 43.52 Seeking Damages Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983
[1] Claiming Damages for Civil Rights Violations Under Color of State Law
[2] Recovering Compensatory Damages Under § 1983
[3] Recovering Punitive Damages Under § 1983

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *

3-43 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses damages issues in the federal courts. Part A provides an overview of the types of damages available, and includes discussion of the following topics and principles:

- The law governing damages in federal question cases, diversity cases, transferred actions, and multidistrict litigation cases
- Jurisdictional requirements concerning damages in diversity cases
- Pleading damages under the Federal Rules
- Obtaining damages information through mandatory disclosure and subsequent discovery
- Calculating damages
- Proving damages and other trial concerns
- Taxation of damages awards

Part B covers post-trial considerations including:

- Moving for new trial based on an excessive award of damages
- Use of remittitur and additur in federal courts
- Appealing damages awards

Finally, Part C provides a brief overview of the damages available under specific federal statutes including some of those governing:

- Antitrust and securities litigation

- Copyright, trademark, and patent infringement
- Employment and discrimination actions

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.01

§ 43.01 Evaluating Types of Damages

[1] Considering General Damages

General damages are defined as the actual damages that are the natural consequence of the wrongful act. n1 For example, damages for personal injury may be sought as general damages in an automobile accident case, while lost profits may be sought as general damages in a breach of contract case. n2

Although general damages may be recovered without proof of an exact amount, proof of the extent of damages is required. n3

[2] Considering Nominal Damages

Nominal damages are not compensatory in nature, but rather serve as a token recognition of a "technical" violation of rights. n4 Courts have held that where actual injury is found, but damages are not proven, nevertheless there must be some damages awarded. n5 In tort cases in general, if only the fact of damages but not their extent is proven, nominal damages may be awarded. n6

A plaintiff is limited to the recovery of nominal damages when the existence of actual damage is uncertain or speculative. n7 A number of courts have held, or implied in dicta, that nominal damages may not exceed $1 in amount. n8

[3] Considering Exemplary or Punitive Damages

Punitive damages, also known as "exemplary" damages, are those damages generally designed to punish and to deter. In order to receive punitive damages, the plaintiff must usually prove that the defendant's conduct was malicious or outrageous.

One of the first cases to make explicit reference to exemplary damages explained the principle behind them: "Damages are designed not only as a satisfaction to the injured person, but likewise as punishment to the guilty, to deter from any such proceeding in the future and as a proof of the detestation of the jury to the action itself." n9 Punitive damages are quasi-criminal insofar as they are not awarded to compensate for injury, but rather to further the aims of the criminal law: "to punish reprehensible conduct and to deter its future occurrence." n10 Because of their public policy dimension, punitive damages may not be indemnified by insurance in many states.

Most punitive damage awards are discretionary. Under the traditional common-law approach, the amount awarded is determined by a jury instructed to consider both the gravity of the act and the need to deter similar conduct.

[4] Considering Special Damages

Special damages are defined as those damages that do not necessarily or invariably flow from the particular wrong. Special damages vary with the circumstances peculiar to the infliction of the injury and are not implied by law from the wrong complained of. n11 In short, special damages are those that, although resulting from the commission of the wrong, are unusual for the claim in question and not normally associated with the claim. n12

Special damages must be reasonably foreseeable at the time of the injury in order to be recoverable. n13

[5] Considering Liquidated Damages

Liquidated damages are damages specified in a contract as a remedy in the event of a breach. n14 Damages for breach by either party may be liquidated in an agreement but only at an amount that is reasonable in light of the anticipated or actual loss caused by the breach and the difficulties of proof of loss. n15

Liquidated damages clauses are not binding and enforceable if the amount designated imposes a penalty on the breaching party. n16

[6] Considering Statutory Damages

Statutory damages are damages that are specifically provided for by statute. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cotton Bros. Baking Co. v. Industrial Risk Insurers, 102 F.R.D. 964, 966 (W.D. La. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Avitia v. Metropolitan Club, Inc., 49 F.3d 1219, 1226 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hayes v. Irwin, 541 F. Supp. 397 (N.D. Ga. 1982) , aff'd without opinion, 729 F.2d 1466 (11th Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Redding v. Fairman, 717 F.2d 1105, 1119 (7th Cir. 1983) , cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1025 (1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Powell v. Ward, 643 F.2d 924 (2d Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 832 (1981) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ustrak v. Fairman, 781 F.2d 573, 578 (7th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 824 (1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Contemporary Mission, Inc. v. Famous Music Corp., 557 F.2d 918, 926 (2d Cir. 1977) . See also Zim v. Western Pub. Co., 573 F.2d 1318, 1326 (5th Cir. 1978) (nominal damages are recoverable when a breach of contract has been established but no damages have been shown).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 266, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1978) ; United States ex rel. Tyrrell v. Speaker, 535 F.2d 823, 829 (3d Cir. 1976) ; Magnett v. Pelletier, 488 F.2d 33, 35 (1st Cir. 1973) ; Mayberry v. Robinson, 427 F. Supp. 297, 301 (M.D. Pa. 1977) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Wilkes v. Wood, 98 Eng. Rep. 489, 498-499 (K.B. 1963), quoted in Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 274 n.20, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 297, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989) (O'Connor, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (citing Bankers Life & Cas. Co. v. Crenshaw, 486 U.S. 71, 87, 108 S. Ct. 1645, 100 L. Ed. 2d 62 (1988) (O'Connor, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment)).

(n11)Footnote 11. FDIC v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 118 F.R.D. 435, 436 (M.D. La. 1988) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Cotton Bros. Baking Co. v. Industrial Risk Insurers, 102 F.R.D. 964, 966 (W.D. La. 1984) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Roberson v. Dale, 464 F. Supp. 680, 683 (M.D.N.C. 1979) .

(n14)Footnote 14. E.g., In re Community Med. Ctr., 623 F.2d 864, 867 (3d Cir. 1980) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Space Master Int'l, Inc. v. City of Worcester, 940 F.2d 16, 17-18 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Governor's Island v. Eways, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 19695 (4th Cir. Aug. 23, 1991) ; Interstate Markings, Inc. v. Mingus Constructors, Inc., 941 F.2d 1010, 1014 (9th Cir. 1991) ; Space Master Int'l, Inc. v. City of Worcester, 940 F.2d 16, 17 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Alewine v. City Council, 505 F. Supp. 880 (S.D. Ga. 1981) , rev'd on other grounds, 699 F.2d 1060 (11th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.02

§ 43.02 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Federal Court

[1] Applying Federal Law in Federal Question Cases

In cases in which jurisdiction is based on a federal question, particularly when the claim for relief is based on a federal statute or regulation, issues regarding damages generally are governed by federal law.

[2] Applying State Law in Diversity Cases

In diversity cases, state law governs damage awards because damages are a matter of substantive law. n1 Under Erie Railway Co. v. Tompkins, n2 federal courts must apply the conflict of laws rules of the state in which they sit to determine which state damages principles apply in federal diversity actions. n3

The Erie doctrine is rooted in a realization that it would be unfair for the result of litigation to depend on whether the suit is brought in state or federal court. n4

[3] Applying Federal Law in Review of Jury Awards

Although state law applies on issues of damages in diversity cases, federal law governs the role of the federal trial and appellate courts in reviewing jury verdicts and awards. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFederal QuestionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsErie DoctrineCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 278-279, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Erie Railway Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246

(1938) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496, 61 S. Ct. 1020, 85 L. Ed. 1477 (1941) (an action brought in federal court in Delaware based on breach of a New York contract presents a question of conflict of laws to be determined under the law of Delaware).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Guaranty Trust Co. v. York, 326 U.S. 99, 109, 65 S. Ct. 1464, 89 L. Ed. 2079 (1945) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 278-279, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989) ; Donovan v. Penn Shipping Co., 429 U.S. 648, 649-650, 97 S. Ct. 835, 51 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1977) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.03

§ 43.03 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Transferred Actions

[1] Considering Damages in Actions Transferred Based on Convenience

A district court may transfer any civil action to any other district or division where it might have been brought for the convenience of parties and witnesses, and in the interest of justice. n1 Thus, under the convenience-transfer statute, even though venue is proper in the court in which the plaintiff brought the action, in general the court is empowered to transfer the action to another federal forum if two requirements are met:

- The court must determine that transfer of the action will enhance the convenience of the parties and witnesses, and is in the interest of justice n2

- The proposed transferee district must be one in which the action "might have been brought" originally n3

In diversity cases, following a transfer for convenience, the court to which the action has been transferred generally must apply the same state law, including any applicable choice of law rules, that the transferor court would have applied had the action remained there. n4 Pursuant to the Erie doctrine, the transferor court, as a court sitting in diversity, generally would have applied the law, including the choice of law rules, of the state in which it is sitting. n5 A convenience transfer is merely a "housekeeping measure" that does not carry with it a change in the applicable law. n6 The statute deals with the "placement of litigation in the federal courts," and merely authorizes "a change of courtrooms," n7 not a change in applicable law. Damages issues, therefore, will be determined pursuant to the law applicable in the transferor district court.

Following a convenience transfer in a federal question case, the transferee court ordinarily should apply the law as interpreted by its own circuit, and should not be required to apply the precedent of the transferor circuit. n8 Accordingly, the law applicable in the transferee court governs damages in federal question cases.

[2] Considering Damages in Actions Transferred Based on Improper Venue

An action may be transferred from one district court to another in order to cure improper venue, provided the case is transferred to a district or division in which it could have been brought initially. n9 A district court has no power to transfer an action based on improper venue unless it has subject matter jurisdiction--that is, diversity, federal question, or some other basis for subject matter jurisdiction over the action--and must dismiss the action if jurisdiction is lacking. n10 However, a district court may transfer the action to another district under Section 1406(a) whether or not the transferor court has personal jurisdiction over the defendant. n11

Following a transfer based on improper venue, "the transferee court should apply whatever law it would have applied had the action been properly commenced there," n12 including the choice of law rules of the state in which the transferee court sits. n13 Accordingly, damages will be determined pursuant to the law of the transferee court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueFederal Venue TransfersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueFederal Venue TransfersConvenience TransfersCivil ProcedureVenueFederal Venue TransfersImproper Venue TransfersCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsChoice of LawForum & PlaceCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsErie DoctrineCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Findley v. Blinken (In re Joint E. & S. Dists. Asbestos Litig.), 22 F.3d 755, 762 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 634, 84 S. Ct. 805, 11 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1964) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 627, 84 S. Ct. 805, 11 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1964) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-80, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 636, 84 S. Ct. 805, 11 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1964) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 627, 84 S. Ct. 805, 11 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1964) .

(n8)Footnote 8. EEOC v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 188 F.3d 695, 700-701 (6th Cir. 1999) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Grand Blanc Educ. Ass'n v. Grand Blanc Bd. of Educ., 624 F.2d 47, 49 (6th Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Cameron v. Thornburgh, 983 F.2d 253, 257 (D.C. Cir. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Schaeffer v. Village of Ossining, 58 F.3d 48, 49 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Adam v. J.B. Hunt Transp., Inc., 130 F.3d 219, 230 (6th Cir. 1997) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.04

§ 43.04 Evaluating Law Governing Damages in Multidistrict Litigation Cases

[1] Consolidating Cases Under the Multidistrict Litigation Act

The Multidistrict Litigation Act n1 provides that "civil actions involving one or more common questions of fact ... may be transferred to any district for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings." n2 The purpose of the Act is to promote "the convenience of parties and witnesses and ... the just and efficient conduct of such actions." n3 At the conclusion of pretrial proceedings in the transferee district court, each action is remanded to its original district for trial. n4

[2] Applying the Damages Laws of the Transferor Forum

In general, the choice of law rules that must be applied by the transferee court that receive cases under the multidistrict litigation statute are consistent with the rules to be applied by transferee courts that receive cases under the convenience-transfer statute. n5 Thus, in diversity-of-citizenship cases, the general rule is that the transferee court must apply the law that the transferor court would have applied; but in federal-question cases, the transferee court may apply the law of its own circuit.

In multidistrict litigation that has been transferred to a central forum for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings, the transferee federal district court must apply the substantive state law of the transferor district, n6 including its choice of law rules. n7

This rule is designed to ensure that parties may not use a transfer to receive a result in federal court that would have been unavailable in the courts of the state in which the action was filed. It follows from these cases that the issue of damages, being one of substantive law, is to be determined according to the law which would be applied by the original district court in multidistrict litigation actions.

In cases of transferred federal claims, courts have held that while "the law of a transferor forum on a federal question ... merits close consideration, [it] does not have stare decisis effect in a transferee forum situated in another circuit." n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureVenueFederal Venue TransfersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueFederal Venue TransfersConvenience TransfersCivil ProcedureVenueMultidistrict LitigationCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsChoice of LawForum & PlaceCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1407.

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1407(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Id.

(n4)Footnote 4. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. In re Silicone Gel Breast Implants Prods. Liab. Litig., 887 F. Supp. 1463, 1465 (N.D. Ala. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. In re Nucorp Energy Sec. Litig., 772 F.2d 1486, 1492 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. In re Korean Air Lines Disaster, 829 F.2d 1171, 1175-1176 (D.C. Cir. 1987) , aff'd, 490 U.S. 122, 109 S. Ct. 1676, 104 L. Ed. 2d 113 (1989) ("because there is ultimately a single proper interpretation of federal law, the attempt to ascertain and apply diverse circuit interpretations simultaneously is inherently self-contradictory"). See also Wegbreit v. Marley Orchards Corp., 793 F. Supp. 965 (E.D. Wash. 1992) ; In re Litig. Involving Alleged Loss of Cargo, 772 F. Supp. 707 (D.P.R. 1991) ; Eckstein v. Balcor Film Investors, 740 F. Supp. 572 (E.D. Wis. 1990) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.05

§ 43.05 Establishing Adequate Damages in Diversity Actions

[1] Determining Amount in Controversy Is Question of Federal Law

There is diversity jurisdiction only if the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs. n1

In a diversity case, the court must look to state law to determine the nature and extent of the damages to be awarded. n2 However, determination of the value of the matter in controversy for purposes of federal jurisdiction is determined by application of federal standards. n3 This conclusion derives from the fact that in establishing the standards for determining jurisdictional amount, a court is in actuality interpreting a federal statute, Section 1332(a). Hence, state law will dictate what is actually financially at stake in the case, and federal standards will determine whether those financial stakes are sufficient to satisfy the statutory requirement.

[2] Recovering Less Than Jurisdictional Amount

If a plaintiff who originally filed in federal court is finally adjudged to be entitled to recover less than the jurisdictional minimum, computed without regard to any set-off or counterclaim and exclusive of interests and costs, the trial court may both deny costs to the plaintiff and impose costs on the plaintiff. n4 However, such a penalty is discretionary. Courts have generally fashioned a bad-faith test before costs are assessed. n5

[3] Claiming Amount in Controversy in Good Faith

The damages claimed by the plaintiff will control in a diversity case for purposes of meeting the jurisdictional damages threshold of at least $75,000 if the claim for damages is apparently made in good faith. n6 A rebuttable presumption exists that the face of the complaint is a good faith representation of the actual amount in controversy. n7 It must appear to a legal certainty that the claim is really for less than the jurisdictional amount to justify dismissal. n8

[4] Failing to Meet Threshold Damages Based on Statutory or Contractual Cap on Damages

The clearest example of a case in which the damage claim fails to meet the "legal certainty" test is one in which by law, the allowable damages are capped at an amount below the jurisdictional minimum. Such a legally imposed limitation may derive either from a statute or a contractual agreement. Thus, a number of cases have indicated that a court has the power to dismiss for want of jurisdiction after deciding that a limitation-of-liability clause in a contract (or a state statute) caps damages at less than the jurisdictional amount. n9

[5] Including Punitive Damages in Calculation of Threshold Damages

Punitive damages are properly considered in determining whether the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional minimum. n10 Therefore, punitive and actual damages may be aggregated to meet the amount in controversy requirement. n11 In considering punitive damages in order to satisfy the jurisdictional minimum in a diversity case, a two-part inquiry is necessary:

- First, the plaintiff must establish that punitive damages are recoverable as a matter of governing substantive law. n12

- Second, the plaintiff must present some factual evidence of entitlement to punitive damages. n13

It is a question of law for the court, not for the jury, to decide whether a plaintiff has established that punitive damages are available. n14

Claims for punitive damages are subjected to closer scrutiny than claims for actual damages. n15 This is particularly true if the claim for punitive damages comprises the bulk of the amount in controversy and may have been asserted solely or primarily for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction. n16

[6] Proving Jurisdictional Damages in Diversity Cases

If the existence of the jurisdictional amount in controversy is disputed, the person asserting jurisdiction bears the burden of proof on the issue. Thus, a plaintiff who files in federal court bears the burden, and a defendant who seeks removal to federal court bears the burden. n17

If the plaintiff bears the burden, it is not a heavy one. A plaintiff need demonstrate only that it is not impossible that he or she will recover more than the jurisdictional amount. n18 If a defendant or the court challenges the plaintiff's allegations concerning the amount in controversy, the plaintiff must produce sufficient evidence to meet the requirements of the "legal certainty" test n19 by a preponderance of the evidence n20 supported by competent proof. n21 "Competent proof" has been defined as proof to a reasonable probability that jurisdiction exists. n22 Absolute certainty in valuation of the rights involved is not required n23 if an amount in controversy exceeding the jurisdictional minimum can be ascertained according to some realistic formula. n24

[7] Pleading Jurisdictional Amount

A complaint is fatally defective if it fails to contain a proper allegation of the amount in controversy. n25 In applying the "legal certainty" test, however, resort to matters outside the pleadings may be relied on in order to amplify the meaning of the complaint's allegations. n26

In addition, when the applicable jurisdictional grant imposes a jurisdictional minimum, defendants should also allege an amount in controversy in their counterclaims. n27

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyDeterminationsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesConstitutional

LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionDiversityTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesAward CalculationsJurisdictional Amounts

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Horton v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 367 U.S. 348, 352, 81 S. Ct. 1570, 6 L. Ed. 2d 890 (1961) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Luckett v. Delta Airlines, Inc., 171 F.3d 295, 298 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(b); Fischer v. First Chicago Capital Mkts., Inc., 195 F.3d 279, 285 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Dr. Franklin Perkins Sch. v. Freeman, 741 F.2d 1503, 1525 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 288-289, 58 S. Ct. 586, 82 L. Ed. 845 (1938) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Wolde-Meskel v. Vocational Instruction Project Community Servs., Inc., 166 F.3d 59, 63 (2d Cir. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 8. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 288-289, 58 S. Ct. 586, 82 L. Ed. 845 (1938) ; see Barrett v. Lombardi, 239 F.3d 23, 30-31 (1st Cir. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Pratt Cent. Park Ltd. Partnership v. Dames & Moore, 60 F.3d 350, 353 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 10. J.W. Petroleum, Inc. v. Lange, 787 F. Supp. 975, 976 (D. Kan. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Watson v. Blankinship, 20 F.3d 383, 386 (10th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Cadek v. Great Lakes Dragaway, Inc., 58 F.3d 1209, 1212 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Larkin v. Brown, 41 F.3d 387, 388-389 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Kenebrew v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., 882 F. Supp. 749, 752 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Larkin v. Brown, 41 F.3d 387, 389 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Anthony v. Security Pac. Fin. Servs., 75 F.3d 311, 315-318 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Trimble v. Asarco, Inc., 232 F.3d 946, 959 (8th Cir. 2000) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Ahearn v. Fibreboard Corp., 162 F.R.D. 505, 522 (E.D. Tex. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 19. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Greenberg, 134 F.3d 1250, 1253 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Trimble v. Asarco, Inc., 232 F.3d 946, 959 (8th Cir. 2000) .

(n21)Footnote 21. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Greenberg, 134 F.3d 1250, 1253 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Rexford Rand Corp. v. Ancel, 58 F.3d 1215, 1218 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Tongkook Am., Inc. v. Shipton Sportswear Co., 14 F.3d 781, 784 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Moore v. Betit, 511 F.2d 1004, 1006 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n25)Footnote 25. We Care Hair Dev., Inc. v. Engen, 180 F.3d 838, 841 (7th Cir. 1999) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Giangrande v. Shearson Lehman/E.F. Hutton, 803 F. Supp. 464, 467 (D. Mass. 1992) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Iglesias v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 156 F.3d 237, 242-243 (1st Cir. 1998) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 812 (1999) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.06

§ 43.06 Pleading Damages

[1] Pleading Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

For federal question claims, federal law governs the nature of damages and the procedure for pleading. For claims based on diversity of citizenship or supplemental jurisdiction, state law governs the nature of the damages, while the procedure for pleading damages is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. n1 A pleading setting forth a claim for relief must contain "a demand for judgment for the relief the pleader seeks." n2 Therefore, any affirmative pleading, whether a complaint, third-party complaint, or answer containing a cross-claim or counterclaim must contain a demand for judgment. The demand for judgment may be stated in general terms. For example, a single sum of money can be the requested relief sought for an act of negligence resulting in physical injury, pain of body and mind, and loss of business. n3 Demand for relief in the alternative or for several different types of relief is permitted. n4

[2] Establishing Limit for Default Judgments

The demand for judgment will not limit the relief that may be ordered by the court, except for awards arising from default judgments. A default judgment may not be different in kind or exceed the amount requested in the demand for judgment. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionAmount in ControversyDeterminationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Parker v. Aetna Life & Cas., 791 F. Supp. 175, 178 (W.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Appendix of Forms, Form 9 (demand for judgment in the amount of $1,000.00 for bodily injury, pain and suffering, loss of business, and medical expenses).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(c).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

144 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.07

§ 43.07 Pleading General Damages

General damages do not need to be specially pleaded, and may be supported simply by the facts alleged in a claim. n1 Other damages (for example, special damages, liquidated damages, and damages claimed pursuant to statutory authority), however, must be specially pleaded.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.08

§ 43.08 Pleading Punitive Damages

As a general rule, a plaintiff need not specifically state a claim for punitive damages in the pleadings. As punitive damages are not special damages, they do not need to be specifically pleaded in federal complaints.

A plaintiff should, however, allege that defendant acted with a culpable state of mind sufficient to justify an award of punitive damages. A finding of malice usually justifies a punitive damages award, as does "willful and wanton misconduct," "intentional misconduct," or "reckless disregard for the rights of others when such conduct is tantamount to "evil intent." n1

In addition to stating the facts of the case and alleging the applicable state of mind of defendant, plaintiff's complaint must state a claim for non-punitive damages, as punitive damages do not constitute a separate cause of action under Federal Rule 54(b). n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 1 L. Schlueter & K. Redden, Punitive Damages 102 (The Michie Co. 2d ed. 1989). See, e.g., Bremenkamp v. Beverly Enterprises-Kansas, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 884 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Mason v. Texaco, Inc., 948 F.2d 1546 (10th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 504 U.S. 910 (1992) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.09

§ 43.09 Pleading Special Damages

[1] Stating Special Damages Specifically

Items of special damages must be "specifically stated" in a claim for relief. n1 When a claim may result in the recovery of both general and special damages, general damages are defined as the actual damages that are the natural consequence of the wrongful act, n2 while special damages are those that, although resulting from the commission of the wrong, are unusual for the claim in question and not normally associated with the claim. n3

[2] Pleading Special Damages May Be Required in Certain Cases

In some states, special damages are required to be stated in all defamation claims, n4 in libel per quod claims, n5 and in slander claims. n6 Attorney's fees have been held to constitute special damages in some settings. n7

[3] Pleading Special Damages With Specificity Gives Opposing Party Notice

Heightened notice of special damage claims that accompany general damage claims is required because special damages are unusual and not normally associated with the claim presented. n8 The requirement that special damages essential to claims be specifically stated serves not only to provide greater notice, but also to permit groundless claims to be discovered and dismissed earlier in litigation. n9

There is no "hard and fast" formula for determining whether an averment of special damages has been stated with sufficient particularity under Rule 9(g), n10 although conclusory allegations will be insufficient, n11 as will allegations based on mere speculation or conjecture. n12

Allegations of special damage must be sufficient to permit a defending party to begin preparing a defense. Since the purpose of Rule 9(g) is to give adequate notice to a defending party of the alleged damages, the more natural or likely or probable the damages are in connection to the claimed breach of duty, the less particularity is needed. n13

Once items are deemed special damages, an indispensable allegation in a demand for relief is at least a general statement of the causes giving rise to the special damages. n14 Special damages should be set forth in an itemized form rather than in a lump sum. For example, when plaintiffs alleged special damages of $500,000 in lost profits from several businesses, the court required the plaintiffs to amend the complaint to itemize the amount of damage suffered by each business. n15 Itemization, however, is not required beyond the point at which it becomes too evidentiary. n16 Further, if the injuries are of a nature as to preclude precise allegations as to the amount of special damages at the time of the initial pleading, relief will not be denied simply because the damage or loss computation or manner of proof was not alleged with certainty. n17 In these instances, it will be sufficient for a claimant to state the general nature of the special damages, in anticipation that the damage issue will be further explored in discovery. n18

[4] Acting on Insufficient Statement of Relief

A failure to plead special damages pursuant to Rule 9(g) may be raised in a number of ways:

- Motion for more definite statement. Inadequate pleading of special damages could, at least theoretically, be raised by a Rule 12(e) motion for a more definite statement. n19 However, a motion for a more definite statement should be granted only when "a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague and ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading." n20

- Motion to dismiss. A violation of Rule 9(g), a failure to adequately plead special damages, could theoretically be raised by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted. n21 There is only one common exception, only one type of claim in which courts frequently note that special damages are an essential element of a valid claim for relief. n22 In defamation per quod actions, a motion to dismiss would lie if the pleader failed to adequately allege special damages. n23 However, even when a valid claim for relief is not stated because of the failure to adequately plead special damages, a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) will not be granted until the pleader is given leave to amend his or her pleading. n24

- Motion for summary judgment. A motion for summary judgment n25 may be brought for failure to adequately allege special damages, but only in the same limited circumstances as would support a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. As with a motion to dismiss, an opportunity to amend would be granted before the rendering of any actual summary judgment. Summary judgment would be granted only if the pleader refused to amend or was incapable of alleging the required special damages. n26

- Motion in limine or motion to exclude evidence. A party who wishes to complain or preserve a complaint about the inadequate pleading of special damages must, at the very least, object at trial to the introduction of evidence concerning those special damages. Failure to object amounts to a waiver of any complaint concerning the inadequate pleading. The matter will be deemed to have been tried by consent or implied consent, and treated as if it had been properly raised in the pleadings.

[5] Failing to Plead Special Damages Properly

Recovery of special damages may be denied because of a violation of the pleading requirements of Rule 9(g). n27 However, it is important to note that in virtually all of the cases stating that special damages may be denied for the failure to adequately plead them, the claim for the special damages was raised for the first time in a post-trial motion. n28 or at trial, n29 particularly when evidence of those special damages was subject to a vigorous objection. n30

When the inadequate pleading of special damages is raised in a pretrial motion or at pretrial, the most usual remedy is to order the pleader to amend his or her pleading. Furthermore, if evidence on inadequately pleaded damages is offered at trial and there is no objection, the matter is deemed tried by consent and the inadequate pleading is no obstacle to the recovery of inadequately pleaded special damages. n31 Therefore, it is only when the inadequately pleaded special damages surprise a party at trial and the surprised party objects, or when the unpleaded special damages are raised for the first time in a post-trial motion, that inadequately pleaded special damages are likely to be denied. In almost every other case, even when the failure to adequately allege special damages renders the entire claim for relief defective, the courts will give the defaulting pleader an opportunity to amend. n32

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsHeightened Pleading RequirementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cotton Bros. Baking Co. v. Industrial Risk Insurers, 102 F.R.D. 964, 966 (W.D. La. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Avitia v. Metropolitan Club of Chicago, Inc., 49 F.3d 1219, 1226 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Woodmont Corp. v. Rockland Ctr. Partnership, 811 F. Supp. 1478, 1484 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Management Servs. v. Health Management Sys., 907 F. Supp. 289, 294 (C.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Thompson v. Kiekhaefer, 71 F.R.D. 115, 117 (E.D. Wis. 1976) .

(n7)Footnote 7. National Liberty Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. 120 F.3d 913, 916 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Brennan v. Minneola, 723 F. Supp. 1442, 1444 (M.D. Fla. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. Jacobson, 713 F.2d 262, 270 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Spelson v. CBS, Inc., 581 F. Supp. 1195, 1201 (N.D. Ill. 1984) , aff'd without opinion, 757 F.2d 1291 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n11)Footnote 11. KBT Corp. v. Ceridian Corp., 966 F. Supp. 369 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Everco Indus., Inc. v. O.E.M. Prods. Co., 63 F.R.D. 662, 666 (N.D. Ill. 1974) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Suarez Matos v. Ashford Presbyterian Community Hosp., Inc., 4 F.3d 47, 51 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Burlington Transp. Co. v. Josephson, 153 F.2d 372, 377 (8th Cir. 1946) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Kuenzell v. United States, 20 F.R.D. 96, 100 (N.D. Cal. 1957) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Kuenzell v. United States, 20 F.R.D. 96, 100 (N.D. Cal. 1957) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Action Repair, Inc. v. ABC, Inc., 776 F.2d 143, 150 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Everco Indus., Inc. v. O.E.M. Prods. Co., 63 F.R.D. 662, 666 (N.D. Ill. 1974) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Lebeda v. A.H. Robins Co., 101 F.R.D. 689, 690-691 (D. Me. 1984) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

(n22)Footnote 22. See KBT Corp. v. Ceridian Corp., 966 F. Supp. 369, 374, 378 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Woodmont Corp. v. Rockland Ctr. Partnership, 811 F. Supp. 1478, 1484 (D. Kan. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 24. KBT Corp. v. Ceridian Corp., 966 F. Supp. 369, 374, 378 (E.D. Pa. 1997) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Parker v. Aetna Life & Cas., 791 F. Supp. 175, 178 (W.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 27. United Indus. v. Simon-Hartley, Ltd., 91 F.3d 762, 764-765 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n28)Footnote 28. 44 Liquormart, Inc. v. Rhode Island, 940 F. Supp. 437, 439-440 (D.R.I. 1996) .

(n29)Footnote 29. National Liberty Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 120 F.3d 913, 917 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Campbell v. Thornton, 644 F. Supp. 103, 105 & n.4 (W.D. Mo. 1986) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See Niedland v. United States, 338 F.2d 254, 258-259 (3d Cir. 1964) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Action Repair, Inc. v. ABC, Inc., 776 F.2d 143, 149-150 (7th Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.10

§ 43.10 Pleading Statutory Damages

Some state statutes require that certain types of damages be specially pleaded. n1 A party claiming such damages in federal court under a pendant state law claim must therefore specifically plead these damages.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionSupplemental JurisdictionPendent ClaimsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Alewine v. City Council, 505 F. Supp. 880 (S.D. Ga. 1981) , rev'd on other grounds, 669 F.2d 1060 (11th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.11

§ 43.11 Obtaining Damages Information Through Disclosure and Discovery

[1] Disclosing Computation of Damages

At the outset of a case and without waiting for a formal discovery request, each party is required to disclose to the other a computation of any category of damages claimed by the disclosing party. The disclosing party also must make available to the other party the documents or other evidentiary material, not privileged or protected from disclosure, on which the computation is based, including materials relating to the nature and extent of injuries suffered. n1

[2] Disclosing Best Information Available

A party claiming damages must have some evidence that an injury occurred and some basis for calculating the damages the party suffered as the result of that injury before filing suit. n2 The party making such a claim, therefore, has the obligation, when it makes its initial disclosures, to disclose to the other parties the best information then available to it concerning that claim, however limited and potentially changing it may be. n3

The initial disclosures may be sufficiently specific if they, coupled with other information made available to the other parties earlier during the course of the proceedings, provide the other parties with an adequate basis to evaluate the injury the disclosing party claims to have suffered. Moreover, the initial disclosure of the amount of damages the party allegedly suffered may be sufficient even though the disclosing party failed to disclose the precise method by which it calculated the specified amount, if the method of calculation is appropriately the subject of expert evidence and the parties are under the obligation to provide disclosures of expert evidence in the future. n4 Under such circumstances, the disclosing party's obligation to disclose the method of calculating damages would be controlled by the expert testimony disclosure rules. n5

[3] Making Discovery Requests for Damages Information

Mandatory disclosure provisions do not preclude the parties from making further traditional discovery requests about the information that is the subject of mandatory disclosure. n6 Therefore, it is proper for a party to seek discoverable material or testimony relevant to damages. Thus, in one district court case, interrogatories were permitted that sought the amount of the defendant's gross sales and total revenues to determine punitive damages, as well as the defendant's authorized and issued stock and its par value, even though, as the court pointed out, par value may be a bad indicator of net worth. n7 Another district court has similarly held that it is proper for a defendant to request, in interrogatories, that the plaintiff provide a specific description of any non-pecuniary relief it seeks in the case. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(C).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See StairMaster Sports/Med. Prods., Inc. v. Groupe Procycle, Inc., 182 F.R.D. 117, 119 (D. Del. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Pine Ridge Recycling, Inc. v. Butts County, 889 F. Supp. 1526, 1527 (M.D. Ga. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(5).

(n7)Footnote 7. Wauchop v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 138 F.R.D. 539, 550 (N.D. Ind. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Caton, 136 F.R.D. 682, 687 (D. Kan. 1991) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.12

§ 43.12 Calculating Damages

A host of practical dollars-and-cents questions may arise in judicial "fine-tuning" of a damages calculation above and beyond pinpointing an out-of-pocket loss or placing a reasonable value on intangible losses. To actually make a plaintiff whole, or prevent making the plaintiff more than whole, the court may have to consider a number of collateral issues. These issues include:

- Prejudgment interest
- Costs and litigation expenses
- Tax issues
- Reduction of future damages elements to present value
- The impact of inflation
- Issues relating to the involvement of foreign parties and currency in the lawsuit

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

150 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.13

§ 43.13 Calculating Interest as Portion of Damages

Prejudgment interest, generally awarded from the date the claim for relief accrued through the date of judgment, aims to compensate plaintiff for the loss of the use of money while the claim was being adjudicated. n1 State law determines whether a successful litigant in a diversity action is entitled to prejudgment interest. n2 Conversely, the availability of prejudgment interest in an action arising under a federal statute is generally governed by federal and not state law. n3 Yet, federal courts have applied state law on prejudgment interest even to damages claims under federal statutes.

In SEC v. Musella, n4 the court declared that prejudgment interest on damages awarded pursuant to the federal securities law is a matter of judicial discretion and the court could use the forum state's legal rate of interest to calculate the prejudgment interest award. The federal trial courts generally have great discretion in awarding prejudgment interest, n5 both as to the rate used, and the time period for which the award is made. n6

Finally, the practitioner should note the following warning regarding prejudgment interest. Because the Supreme Court views prejudgment interest as "an element of [plaintiff's] complete compensation," it has held that a motion under Rule 59(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to alter a judgment to include a discretionary award of prejudgment interest raises a question sufficiently tied to reconsideration of the merits of the litigation that such a Rule 59(e) motion may vitiate a previously filed notice of appeal. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See West Virginia v. United States, 479 U.S. 305, 310 n.2, 107 S. Ct. 702, 93 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Kona Enters. v. Estate of Bishop, 229 F.3d 877, 883, 887 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Poleto v. Conrail Corp., 826 F.2d 1270, 1274 (3d Cir. 1987) (citing cases).

(n4)Footnote 4. SEC v. Musella 748 F. Supp. 1028, 1042-1043 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) , aff'd, 898 F.2d 138 (2d Cir.

1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 816 (1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Kaufman Co. v. Lantech, Inc., 926 F.2d 1136 (Fed. Cir. 1991) ; Reeled Tubing, Inc. v. M/V Chad G, 794 F.2d 1026 (5th Cir. 1986) ; Danna v. New York Tel. Co., 755 F. Supp. 615 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) ; SEC v. Musella, 748 F. Supp. 1028 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) , aff'd, 898 F.2d 138 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Independent Bulk Transp., Inc. v. Vessel "Morania Abaco," 676 F.2d 23, 26 (2d Cir. 1982) ; Royal Ins. Co. of Am. v. S/S Robert E. Lee, 756 F. Supp. 757 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Osterneck v. Ernst & Whinney, 489 U.S. 169, 175, 109 S. Ct. 987, 103 L. Ed. 2d 146 (1989) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.14

§ 43.14 Calculating Future Damages Awards

[1] Discounting Interest Earned on Lump Sum

Plaintiffs often receive damage awards that include payments attributable to future losses or amounts which would have been received in the future. Damages for lost future earnings, for example, are generally paid in one lump sum rather than in a stream over time. This means that the plaintiff receiving a future damages award may invest the entire award at the conclusion of the litigation and may therefore earn interest on money the plaintiff would not yet have received in the absence of the award. Because of this "time value of money" issue, the Supreme Court has held that "in all cases where it is reasonable to suppose that interest may safely be earned upon the amount that is awarded, the ascertained future benefits ought to be discounted in the making up of the award." n1

Although the Supreme Court has said that the discount rate used should be based on the rate of interest that "the best and safest investments" would earn over the period covered by the award, n2 it has not designated one rate as preferred. In fact, the Court has noted that there is no single mandated method for determining present value. n3 Regardless of the method or rate used, however, a judge has an obligation to prevent the present value determination from becoming unnecessarily complicated or prolonged. The judge may therefore recommend one or more calculation methods to the jury, so long as the jury's function is not preempted. n4 Once the trier of fact has determined the appropriate discount rate, it should apply the rate to each of the estimated installments in the stream of future damages. It should then add the discounted installments to determine the total damages award. n5

[2] Taking Future Inflation Into Account

Discounting to present value alone does not make a lump-sum payment economically equal in value to a stream of future payments. To equalize the lump sum payment with a stream of future payments, inflation must be taken into account. In other words, consideration must be given to the fact that as a consequence of inflation the future payments would presumably be larger than they would have needed to be if they were payments designed to compensate the plaintiff for the loss which preceded calculation of the judgment.

Another alternative would be to use an inflation-free discount rate. In this case, no inflation-based increase would be made to the stream of earnings; the recipient of the sum (discounted at a low, inflation-free rate) could invest the money at a higher prevailing interest rate, which is assumed to compensate for cost-of-living (inflation) increases that the worker would have received.

As in the case of discounting, there is no consensus as to how inflation should be accounted for. Courts may choose to calculate future damages on an increasing scale, on the basis that they would have increased over time due to inflation. Another alternative would be for the plaintiff to present expert testimony as to what future inflation would be. Or courts may decide that inflation and discount rates will cancel each other out, and inflation will not be accounted for. What is certain, however, is that the way inflation is treated should affect the discount rate used. Both methods should yield the same results. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesMonetary DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. v. Pfeifer, 462 U.S. 523, 537, 103 S. Ct. 2541, 76 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1983) (quoting Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co. v. Kelly, 241 U.S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 L. Ed. 1117 (1916)) . See also Conde v. Starlight I, Inc., 103 F.3d 210, 215-216 n.8 (1st Cir. 1997) (while "the most detailed inquiry can at best produce an approximate" percentage with which to reduce an award to present value, "absent extraordinary circumstances the fact finder normally should essay some measure of 'present value' reduction' ").

(n2)Footnote 2. Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co. v. Kelly, 241 U.S. 485, 491, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 L. Ed. 1117 (1916) .

(n3)Footnote 3. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Dickerson, 470 U.S. 409, 412, 105 S. Ct. 1347, 84 L. Ed. 2d 303 (1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Monessen Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Morgan, 486 U.S. 330, 342, 108 S. Ct. 1837, 100 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1988) . See also McKay v. Wiltel Commun. Sys., 87 F.3d 970, 977-978 (8th Cir. 1996) (court did not err in failing to instruct jury to reduce award to present value as defendant's closing argument sufficiently stressed importance of using present value to calculate award).

(n5)Footnote 5. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. v. Pfeifer, 462 U.S. 523, 538, 103 S. Ct. 2541, 76 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See In re Connecticut Nat'l Bank, 928 F.2d 39, 42 (2d Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.15

§ 43.15 Converting Foreign Currency In Damages Calculations

It is a commonly accepted principle that money judgments must be rendered in the currency of the forum. n1 Thus, in American courts, when damages are owed in foreign currency, they are calculated in that currency, then the damage award is converted to American currency. Two general rules govern the proper conversion: n2

- Breach-day rule. Plaintiff recovers the value in dollars that the currency had on the day of the defendant's breach n3

- Judgment day rule. Plaintiff recovers the value of the currency on the day of the court's judgment. n4

Two main approaches to determine the applicable rule have evolved. The first approach focuses on the place of payment. If on the date of breach the payment of a debt was due in a foreign country, in that country's currency, the judgment-day rule applies. If the payment was to be made in the United States, the breach-day rule applies. n5

The second approach to the conversion issue focuses on the jurisdiction in which the cause of action arose. If, at the time of breach, the plaintiff had a cause of action under American law, the breach day rule applies. The judgment-day rule applies only when the cause of action arose wholly under foreign law. Most courts, however, have found that the jurisdiction approach conforms better with the weight of authority. n6

As currencies fluctuate, the rule applied may significantly affect the amount of recovery. For example, under the breach-day rule, the creditor will benefit from an appreciation of the dollar but will receive a smaller recovery if the value of the dollar has dropped. Under the judgment-day rule, the reverse is true.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesMonetary DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesSpecial Damages

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Sainz Gonzalez v. Banco de Santander-Puerto Rico, 932 F.2d 999 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Zimmermann v. Sutherland, 274 U.S. 253, 255-256 47 S. Ct. 625, 71 L. Ed. 1034 (1927) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Hicks v. Guinness, 269 U.S. 71, 46 S. Ct. 46, 70 L. Ed. 168 (1925) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Die Deutsche Bank Filiale Nurnberg v. Humphrey, 272 U.S. 517, 47 S. Ct. 166, 71 L. Ed. 383 (1926) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Trinh v. Citibank, N.A., 623 F. Supp 1526, 1537 (D.C. Mich. 1985) , aff'd, 850 F.2d 1164 (6th Cir. 1988) ("[W]here a debt in foreign currency is payable in a foreign country, the judgment day rule applies. ... [H]owever, where the obligation is payable in the United States, conversion is proper at the rate current at the time of breach. ...").

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., In re Good Hope Chem. Corp., 747 F.2d 806, 811 (1st Cir. 1984) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.16

§ 43.16 Proving Damages

[1] Establishing Extent of Damages

The burden of establishing the existence and extent of damages generally rests with the person seeking those damages. n1 Once damages are so pleaded, a defendant may assert mitigation of damages as an affirmative defense to the claim. At this point, however, the burden of proof shifts to the defendant. The defendant must show, in a responsive pleading, that plaintiff failed to take reasonable steps to mitigate damages. n2

[2] Proving General Damages

The law of damages accords plaintiffs considerable leeway in establishing damages through a variety of methods of inference. However, courts demand that damages proof rises above the level of speculation.

The general rule holds that while the amount of recoverable damages is a question of fact, the measure of damages upon which the factual computation is based is a question of law. n3

[3] Proving Lost Profits

Some jurisdictions do not allow damages awards for lost profits in commercial contexts. n4 In those jurisdictions that do allow lost profits awards, the standard of proof generally includes a requirement that plaintiffs establish the existence and extent of lost profits with "reasonable" or "rational" certainty. n5 This often means that plaintiffs can meet their burden by providing the "best evidence available." n6 Regardless of the standard used, however, courts often base awards of lost profits on estimates or projections. These figures may be based on past profits, n7 projections from sales of similar products, n8 subsequent comparable business experience, n9 or even comparable business experience of others n10 in the industry as a whole. n11

Plaintiffs often present these projections and estimates through the testimony of experts. Possible experts include persons in the same business as plaintiff and professional consultants and economists. Experts must do more than just testify as to a final damages figure. They must show that their projections or estimates proceed logically from plaintiff's business records. n12

[4] Proving Punitive Damages

A finding of malice usually justifies a punitive damages award, as does "willful and wanton misconduct," "intentional misconduct," or "reckless disregard for the rights of others when such conduct is tantamount to "evil intent." n13 Some states even allow punitive damages in cases of gross negligence, fraud, or oppression. n14 Simple negligence alone, however, is not enough to justify an award of punitive damages. n15

When the complaint asserts a claim that will sustain an award of punitive damages if proven, a majority of federal courts permit discovery of the net worth and financial condition of the defendant, without requiring the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case on the issue of punitive damages. n16 Financial information is relevant to punitive damages claims because one of the questions the finder of fact frequently considers in arriving at the amount of its award is how high the award should be, considering the defendant's financial condition, to punish it for engaging in the misconduct that led to the punitive damages award and to deter it from doing so again in the future. n17 In addition to the defendant's financial condition, the amount of an award is also limited by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. n18

[5] Proving Liquidated Damages

When deciding on the enforceability of a liquidated damages provision, courts generally consider the following: n19

- The difficulty of proving that a loss has occurred or of establishing the amount of the loss
- Whether the amount sought is a reasonable estimate of difficult to ascertain damages

The primary issue of proof concerns whether the liquidated damages provision is designed to compensate for a hard-to-quantify loss, or whether the provision is instead intended to be a "penalty to spur timely performance." n20

Most courts hold that the party seeking to avoid a liquidated damages clause bears the burden of proving that the clause should be invalidated. n21 Since liquidated damages must compensate for loss, it may be determined that an otherwise reasonable liquidated damages provision is unenforceable if no loss is sustained. n22

[6] Using Damages Experts

One of the best ways to buttress the plaintiff's evidence of losses is through expert testimony. Indeed, these days a court almost takes it for granted that a plaintiff with a significant claim will have one or more damages experts.

In fact, the court often plays more than a passive role in the process of using a damages expert. First, Rule 706 of the Federal Rules of Evidence gives the court the power to select its own, court-appointed expert. Second, discovery of the expert's opinion and its basis, under Rule 26(b)(4) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, is a vital and often hotly contested phase of litigation, which is subject to the court's rulings. Finally, of course, just what expert testimony is deemed admissible--even which experts are allowed to testify--is up to the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral DamagesEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocationEvidenceTestimonyExpertsGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesAward CalculationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Schiller v. Schmidt, Inc. v. Nordisco Corp., 969 F.2d 410, 415 (7th Cir. 1992) ("people who want damages have to prove them"); Worthem v. Gillette Co., 774 F. Supp. 514, 517 (N.D. Ill. 1991) ("plaintiff has the burden of showing a reasonable basis for computation of all damages"); Riofrio Anda v. Ralston Purina Co., 772 F. Supp. 46 (D.P.R. 1991) (plaintiff must establish existence of damages).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Kensington Rock Island v. American Eagle Historic Partners, 921 F.2d 122 (7th Cir. 1990) (defendant required to affirmatively plead mitigation or defense waived); Allied Int'l, Inc. v. International Longshoremen's Ass'n, 814 F.2d 32, 38-39 (1st Cir. 1987) ("it is the defendants who bear the burden of proving by a fair preponderance that an injured party failed to take reasonable steps to hold down its losses").

(n3)Footnote 3. Wolff & Munier Inc. v. Whiting-Turner Contracting Co., 946 F.2d 1003, 1009 (2d Cir. 1991) ; United States ex rel. N. Maltese & Sons v. Juno Constr. Corp., 759 F.2d 253, 255 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Handi Caddy, Inc. v. American Home Prods. Corp., 557 F.2d 136 (8th Cir. 1977) (allowing recovery for loss of profits under Missouri law); CCMS Pub. Co. v. Dooley-Maloof, Inc., 645 F.2d 33 (10th Cir. 1981) (allowing loss of profits as a proper element of damages under Oklahoma law). But see Cargill, Inc. v. Taylor Towing Serv., Inc., 642 F.2d 239 (8th Cir. 1981) (expected profits of a commercial business are generally too remote, speculative, and uncertain to be a proper element of damages under Missouri Law, but profits may be recoverable where evidence brings issue out of the realm of speculation); Horizons, Inc. v. Avco Corp., 714 F.2d 862 (8th Cir. 1983) (expected profits are not recoverable under South Dakota law because they are too remote, speculative and uncertain).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Uniroyal Inc. v. Rudkin-Wiley Corp., 939 F.2d 1540 (Fed. Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Miami Int'l Realty Co. v. Paynter, 841 F.2d 348 (10th Cir. 1988) (documentary evidence unnecessary if testimony is sufficiently credible and detailed).

(n7)Footnote 7. E.g., Security Dev. Co. v. Fedco, Inc., 23 Utah 2d 306, 462 P.2d 706 (1969) .

(n8)Footnote 8. E.g., United Cal. Bank v. Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc., 546 F. Supp. 945 (D. Mass. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 9. E.g., Lewis v. Mobil Oil Corp., 438 F.2d 500 (8th Cir. 1971) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Randy's Studebaker Sales, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 533 F.2d 510 (10th Cir. 1976) ; Walker v. City of Kansas City, Mo., 697 F.Supp. 1088 (W.D. Mo. 1988) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Cf. Bob Willow Motors, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 872 F.2d 788 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Complex calculations may call for the use of charts or schedules, which are admissible under Fed. R. Evid. 1006 and 803(6) as summaries of voluminous business records, or under Fed. R. Evid. 701 and 702 as opinion testimony (provided that the underlying data is introduced into evidence and is available for inspection by opposing counsel).

(n13)Footnote 13. 1 L. Schlueter & K. Redden, Punitive Damages 102 (The Michie Co. 2d ed. 1989). See, e.g., Bremenkamp v. Beverly Enterprises-Kansas, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 884 (D. Kan. 1991) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Glasscock v. Armstrong Cork Co., 946 F.2d 1085 (5th Cir. 1991) (finding of gross negligence justifies award of punitive damages under Texas law); Hatrock v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 750 F.2d 767 (9th Cir. 1984) (Idaho state law permits granting of punitive damages in cases of fraud); Dugan v. EMS Helicopters, Inc., 915 F.2d 1428 (10th Cir. 1990) (gross negligence justifies assessment of punitive damages under state law of New Mexico).

(n15)Footnote 15. 1 L. Schlueter & K. Redden, Punitive Damages 393-394 (The Michie Co. 2d ed. 1989).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Caruso v. Coleman Co., 157 F.R.D. 344, 348 (E.D. Pa. 1994) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Vollert v. Summa Corp., 389 F. Supp. 1348, 1349 (D. Haw. 1975) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 1519-1520, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 (2003) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Space Master Int'l, Inc. v. City of Worcester, 940 F. 2d 16, 17-18 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Space Master Int'l, Inc. v. City of Worcester, 940 F. 2d 16, 19 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Zidell, Inc. v. Pacific N. Marine Corp., 744 F. Supp. 982, 987 (D. Or. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Space Master Int'l, Inc. v. City of Worcester, 940 F. 2d 16, 18 (1st Cir. 1991) (quoting Priebe & Sons, Inc. v. United States, 332 U.S. 407, 413, 68 S. Ct. 123, 92 L. Ed. 32 (1947)) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.17

§ 43.17 Conducting Separate Trials on Issues of Liability and Damages

For convenience, to avoid prejudice, to expedite litigation, or to reduce expense, a court may order a separate trial of one or more separate issues, claims, crossclaims, counterclaims, or third-party claims. When ordering a separate trial, the court must preserve any federal right to a jury trial. n1

Cases where liability and damages may be effectively separated often have been held to be proper subjects for bifurcation. n1.1 A number of courts have indicated that the bifurcation of liability and damages is a decision that must be made on a case-by-case basis. n2 Bifurcation of liability and damages is more likely to be granted when both issues are complex, there would be no significant overlap of issues that would result in duplication of effort, and bifurcation would encourage judicial economy and efficiency because it could narrow the claims for which damages are recoverable. n3

Rule 42(b) authorizes presentation of evidence relating to punitive damages after the jury's determination of other issues, thereby insulating the jury from considering that evidence while determining liability and compensatory damages. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate TrialsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Princeton Biochems., Inc. v. Beckman Instruments, Inc., 180 F.R.D. 254, 257-259 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See Lis v. Robert Packer Hospital, 579 F.2d 819, 824 (3d Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 439 U.S. 955 (1978) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Princeton Biochems., Inc. v. Beckman Instruments, Inc., 180 F.R.D. 254, 257-259 (D.N.J. 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Mattison v. Dallas Carrier Corp., 947 F.2d 95, 110 (4th Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.18

§ 43.18 Awarding Damages Through General and Special Verdicts

Federal juries either return unexplained general verdicts or special verdicts consisting of responses to specific fact questions submitted by the court, or they use a mixed procedure whereby a general verdict will be reached and special interrogatories answered at the same time. The trial court has considerable discretion in deciding which procedure to use, n1 and how to phrase the questions put to the jury. n2 Even in diversity cases, federal law governs verdict procedures. n3

A general verdict for damages must conform to the pleadings, evidence, and instructions in the case. Although in a general verdict a jury is not necessarily required to set out its computation of damages, it must assess the total damages with reasonable certainty, or make a sufficient finding of the damages data on which the court may make an assessment. n4 The general verdict has the advantage of certainty, but suffers from the disadvantage of being either all wrong or all right. n5

The special verdict is authorized by Rule 49 as a more detailed alternative to the more commonly used general verdict. n6 There are situations in which special verdicts or interrogatories are necessary. For example, in a diversity personal injury action in which state law requires itemization of or places limits on certain types of damages, there must be a special verdict. Under the Age Discrimination and Employment Act, n7 willfulness must be specially found to entitle the plaintiff to liquidated damages in an amount equal to the plaintiff's award for back pay and benefits. Counsel should urge that the form of the verdict be settled before closing arguments and that form should be used by counsel in closing arguments to guide the jury through it.

Damages issues are often complex, and are often the subject of jury compromise. Defendants may generally look with favor on special verdicts and interrogatories insofar as these devices may reduce a jury's tendency to overestimate difficult to calculate damages or to compromise on difficult damages issues by returning an unexplained lump sum verdict favorable to plaintiff. Defendants may also view a series of interrogatories as deadening the jury's interest in plaintiff's case and posing a series of obstacles for plaintiff to surmount. Nonetheless, these devices must always be evaluated with the particular facts of a given case in mind.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Chiarello v. Domenico Bus Serv., Inc., 542 F.2d 883 (2d Cir. 1968) ; Martin v. Texaco, Inc., 726 F.2d 207 (5th Cir. 1984) ; U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. Pressed Steel Tank Co., 852 F.2d 313 (7th Cir. 1988) . For a detailed discussion of verdicts and jury deliberations, see ch. 40 supra.

(n2)Footnote 2. Cann v. Ford Motor Co., 658 F.2d 54 (2d Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 456 U.S. 960 (1982) ; Dreiling v. General Elec. Co., 511 F.2d 768 (5th Cir. 1974) (listing factors trial judge should consider in composing special interrogatories to jury).

(n3)Footnote 3. Jewell v. Holzer Hosp. Found., Inc., 899 F.2d 1507 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Johnson v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 797 F.2d 1440 (7th Cir. 1986) (damages are discretionary with the jury and the verdict will be upheld if it is within the scope of the evidence presented at trial); In re Wolverton Assoc., 909 F.2d 1286 (9th Cir. 1990) (trier of fact's damages calculation must find support in the record).

(n5)Footnote 5. Sunkist Growers, Inc. v. Winckler & Smith Citrus Prods. Co., 370 U.S. 19, 29-30, 82 S. Ct. 1130, 8 L. Ed. 2d 305 (1962) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Guidry v. Kem Mfg. Co., 598 F.2d 402, 405 (5th Cir. 1979) , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 929 (1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 626(B).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.19

§ 43.19 Considering Taxation of Damages Awards

[1] Excluding Award From Taxable Income Is Exception

Section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code states, "[e]xcept as otherwise provided ..., gross income means all income from whatever source derived." n1 Any income is therefore presumed to be gross income, unless the taxpayer can show that it fits into one of the specific exclusions of the Code. n2 Certain damage awards, usually those for injuries of a personal nature, fit into those exclusions.

[2] Evaluating Taxation of Personal Injury Awards

Section 104(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that gross income does not include damages received "on account of personal injuries or sickness." n3 Courts have interpreted "personal injuries" in this context as including nonphysical consequences of a physical injury. n4

[3] Evaluating Taxation of Workers' Compensation Awards

Amounts received as workers' compensation for an occupational sickness or injury are fully exempt from tax if they are paid under a workers' compensation act or a statute in the nature of a workers' compensation act. n5 A statute that does not restrict benefits to work-related injuries is not considered a worker's compensation act. n6

[4] Evaluating Taxation of Business-Related Damages

Damage awards designed to compensate plaintiffs for lost profits are fully taxable as ordinary income. n7 Since the lost profits represent amounts that have never been taken into the income stream, they are not deductible when they are lost or fail to be realized. Recovery for damage to goodwill, however, is a return of capital, and a plaintiff that has established a tax "basis" for goodwill may treat the damages as tax free until they exceed the basis. n8

[5] Evaluating Taxation of Punitive Damages

Punitive damages awarded on account of physical injury or sickness are excludable from gross income under I.R.C. § 104(a)(2). Other punitive damages are taxable. n9

[6] Evaluating Taxation of Attorney's Fees Award

Attorney's fees recovered by an individual are generally considered to be personal income and not excludable from gross income. For example, attorney's fees recovered in personal injury cases are not excludable, although I.R.C. § 104 allows exclusion of the injury damages from gross income. Attorney's fees are deductible, however, if they are paid in litigation involving the activities of a trade or business or if they are paid for a claim resulting in taxable damage compensation. n10 Section 162 does not allow deduction of legal expenses that are only indirectly related to a taxpayer's business.

[7] Instructing the Jury Regarding Taxation

A defendant in a federal personal injury case is entitled to an instruction that damages awards for personal injury are not subject to federal income taxation. n11

Most states, however, have held that jury instructions should not include mention of taxation. n12 Questions have thus arisen regarding jury instructions in diversity cases. The majority of circuits have reached the conclusion that whether to give or withhold a taxability instruction is a question of state law, which they are bound to follow. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesTax LawFederal Income Tax ComputationGeneral OverviewTax LawFederal Income Tax ComputationGross Income (IRC sec. 61)

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 26 U.S.C. § 61(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Rickel v. C.I.R., 900 F.2d 655 (3d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 26 U.S.C. § 104(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Threlkeld v. C.I.R., 848 F.2d 81, 84 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. I.R.C. § 104(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Take v. Commissioner, 804 F.2d 553, 557 (9th Cir. 1986) (a firefighter was not allowed to exclude disability retirement benefits from gross income since disability benefit was not tied only to work-related injuries).

(n7)Footnote 7. Gilbertz v. United States, 808 F.2d 1374 (10th Cir. 1987) ; Schnadig Corp. v. Gaines Manufacturing Co., 620 F.2d 1166 (6th Cir. 1980) ; Taracido v. Commissioner, 72 T.C. 1014 (1979) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Gilbertz v. United States, 808 F.2d 1374 (10th Cir. 1987) ; Schnadig Corp. v. Gaines Manufacturing Co., 620 F.2d 1166 (6th Cir. 1980) ; Taracido v. Commissioner, 72 T.C. 1014 (1979) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 75 S. Ct. 473, 99 L. Ed. 483 (1955) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 26 U.S.C.A. § 162. See also L. Frolik, Federal Tax Aspects of Injury, Damage and Loss (1987).

(n11)Footnote 11. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Liepelt, 444 U.S. 490, 492, 100 S. Ct. 755, 62 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1980) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Vasina v. Grumman Corp., 644 F.2d 112 (2d Cir. 1981) (applying New York law);

Gander v. FMC Corp., 892 F.2d 1373 (8th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 878 (1990) (applying Missouri law).

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Adams v. Fuqua Indus., Inc., 820 F.2d 271 (8th Cir. 1987) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
A. Seeking Damages in Federal District Court

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 43.20 through 43.30

[Reserved]

§§ 43.20[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
B. Seeking Review of Damages Awards

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.31

§ 43.31 Moving for New Trial Based on Excessive Award of Damages

An award of excessive damages may serve as legitimate grounds for a new trial under Rule 59. n1 No fixed standard applies to the grant or denial of Rule 59 relief; rather, the applicable standard applied by the trial court in its exercise of discretion varies with the grounds for which relief is sought. n2 A district court has broad discretion to grant a new trial when necessary to prevent injustice. n3

As a general rule, courts will not disturb jury verdicts in the absence of extreme circumstances, such as a case of manifest injustice or abuse of the jury's function. Courts will sustain jury verdicts if reasonable bases exist to uphold the verdict. In ruling on a Rule 59 motion, the court will search the record for evidence that could reasonably lead the jury to reach its verdict, drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the verdict winner. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, 311 U.S. 243, 251, 61 S. Ct. 189, 85 L. Ed. 147 (1940) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Henry v. Hess Oil Virgin Islands Corp., 163 F.R.D. 237, 242 (D.V.I. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Government Fin. Servs. v. Peyton Place, 62 F.3d 767, 774 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Nissim v. McNeil Consumer Prods. Co., 957 F. Supp. 600, 602-604 (E.D. Pa. 1997) , aff'd without opinion, 135 F.3d 765 (3d Cir. 1997) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
B. Seeking Review of Damages Awards

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.32

§ 43.32 Reducing Excessive Damages By Remittitur

[1] Electing to Remit a Portion of the Damages Awarded In Lieu of New Trial

When the court finds that a verdict is excessive, it may overturn the verdict and order a new trial outright, or may order a new trial conditioned on the verdict winner's refusal to accept a "remittitur." n1 Remittitur is defined as the process by which a court compels a plaintiff to choose between the reduction of an excessive verdict and a new trial. n2 If the plaintiff rejects the specified reduction in the amount of damages, the court must grant a new trial; the court does not have the option of entering judgment for the reduced amount without the plaintiff's consent. n3

When ruling on a motion for a new trial on the ground of excessiveness, the judge should use his or her independent judgment, after weighing all the evidence and other relevant factors, to determine whether the verdict is against the clear weight of the evidence or otherwise results in a miscarriage of justice. n4

[2] Evaluating Whether Award is Excessive in Federal Question Cases

The determination of whether or not an award is excessive is a question of law. n5 In a federal question case, a district court will ordinarily deem an award excessive if it "shocks the judicial conscience." n6 Courts have also used similar language, such as "when one's sense of justice is outraged." n7 Alternatively, it has been said that the question in whether the amount of damages found by the jury is so excessive and exorbitant as to show passion and prejudice on the part of the jury. n8

[3] Evaluating Whether Award is Excessive in Diversity Cases

In cases in which the federal rule for determining damages is furnished by state law, such as is the case in diversity actions, the federal rule for determining excessiveness is also furnished by state law. n9 However, once state substantive law is used to determine the excessiveness of the award, "federal case law [will] then [determine] whether a new trial or remittitur should be granted." n10

Many states use a standard for excessiveness that is generally similar to the federal standard. n11 Although the Supreme Court has not specifically addressed the application of state statutory limits on damages in diversity cases, appellate courts have held that the application of state limits by district courts does not violate the Seventh Amendment. n12

[4] Determining Amount of Remittitur

Once a court has determined that a verdict is excessive, it must decide the amount to be remitted. Three approaches have been applied to the difficult issue of determining the proper amount of remittitur:

- Awarding the lowest amount of damages supported by the record (the "minimum recovery" rule) n13
- Awarding the highest legal amount of damages (the "maximum recovery" rule) n14
- Awarding damages that the court deems reasonable n15

Because the remittitur procedure allows the court to simply "lop off" excess verdict amounts, n16 setting the final judgment amount at anything less than the maximum legal award may violate the Seventh Amendment. n17

In defense of the "maximum recovery" rule, the Second Circuit has argued that "[t]o obtain a 'fair' judgment on damages in a case such as this, the law has traditionally deferred to the decision of a jury of laymen drawn from the community at large, and not to the 'seasoned judgment' of the trial judge." n18 On the other hand, while the "minimum recovery" standard could arguably be viewed as an undue invasion of the jury's province, it has been defended as necessary "in order to protect the party obliged to pay against a judge's assessment of damages." n19

[5] Accepting Remittitur Precludes Subsequent Appeal of Remittitur Order

It is well established that when a party agrees to remittitur, that party may not thereafter appeal the remittitur order. n20 Despite the general prohibition on appeal of a remittitur, however, if the defendant argues on appeal that items were inappropriately included in the damage award, the plaintiff may be entitled to raise the inappropriateness of a remittitur that he or she has accepted. n21

Finally, the decision of whether to order a remittitur "clearly falls within the discretion of the trial judge, whose decision cannot be disturbed by [an appellate court] absent a manifest abuse of discretion." n22

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionDiversity JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFederal QuestionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursRemittitursCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, 518 U.S. 415, 116 S. Ct. 2211, 2222, 135 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Earl v. Bouchard Transp. Co., 917 F.2d 1320, 1328 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cline v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 144 F.3d 294, 305-306 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Bates v. Hensley, 414 F.2d 1006, 1011 (8th Cir. 1969) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Mazyck v. Long Island R. R. Co., 896 F. Supp. 1330, 1336 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 1595, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Dagnello v. Long Island R.R., 289 F.2d 797, 802, 806 (2d Cir. 1961) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Gorsalitz v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp., 429 F. 2d 1033, 1042-1043 (5th Cir. 1970) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Pescatore v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc., 97 F.3d 1, 18 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Pescatore v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc., 97 F.3d 1, 18 (2d Cir. 1996) (citing TDS, Inc. v. Shelby Mut. Ins. Co., 760 F.2d 1520, 1530 n.8 (11th Cir. 1985) ; Quality Foods, Inc. v. U.S. Fire Ins. Co., 715 F.2d 539, 542 n.2 (11th Cir. 1983) ; Lowe v. General Motors Corp., 624 F.2d 1373, 1383 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, 518 U.S. 415, 116 S. Ct. 2211, 2218, 135 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1996) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Boyd v. Bulala, 877 F.2d 1191, 1196 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Meissner v. Papas, 35 F. Supp. 676, 677 (E.D. Wis. 1940) , modified on other grounds, 124 F.2d 720 (7th Cir. 1941) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Osburn v. Anchor Labs., 825 F.2d 908, 919 (5th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1009 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Lanfranconi v. Tidewater Oil Co., 376 F.2d 91, 97 (2d Cir. 1967) , cert. denied, 389 U.S. 951 (1967) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 485, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Earl v. Bouchard Transp. Co., 917 F.2d 1320, 1328-1330 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Earl v. Bouchard Transp. Co., 917 F.2d 1320, 1329 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Meissner v. Papas, 35 F. Supp. 676, 677 (E.D. Wis. 1940) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Spence v. Board of Educ., 806 F.2d 1198, 1206 n.6 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Ohio-Sealy Mattress Mfg. Co. v. Sealy, Inc., 585 F.2d 821, 839 (7th Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930 (1979) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Spence v. Board of Educ. of Christina School Dist., 806 F.2d 1198, 1201 (3d Cir. 1986) (citing cases).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
B. Seeking Review of Damages Awards

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.33

§ 43.33 Additur Generally Not Permissible

[1] Defining Additur

Additur is the practice of denying a plaintiff's motion for a new trial based on a claim of an insufficient amount of damages awarded by a jury, conditioned on the defendant's agreement to pay damages in an amount greater than the verdict returned by the jury. For example, a plaintiff who is unhappy with the amount of damages awarded by the jury moves in the trial court for a new trial based on the insufficiency of the verdict. The trial judge, agreeing with the argument but wanting to avoid the cost and delay involved in granting a new trial, even one limited to the issue of damages, denies the motion in favor of the defendant. The denial, however, is conditioned on the defendant's agreement to pay damages in an amount greater than that awarded by the jury. Alternatively, the court's decision could be structured to grant the plaintiff's motion for a new trial unless the defendant agrees to pay an amount greater than that awarded by the jury. In either case, additur is the method by which a court would require the defendant to pay a sum in addition to that awarded by the jury.

Inadequate damage cases often arise when a plaintiff is awarded some types of damages but not others. For example, when a jury finds liability by the defendant but does not make an award for pain and suffering, courts may, but are not required to, order a new trial; the underlying argument is that the verdict is contrary to law and contrary to the weight of the evidence. n1

[2] Additur Is Constitutionally Impermissible

With some exceptions, when a verdict is inadequate, a federal trial court may not constitutionally offer additur and is limited to the option of ordering a new trial. n2 In Dimick v. Schiedt, the Supreme Court found that the practice of additur violated the Seventh Amendment's proscription against "reexamining" facts tried by a jury. n3 The Court reached this conclusion, because it found that the practice of additur did not exist at common law and therefore violated the clause of the Seventh Amendment prohibiting the reexamination of any fact found by a jury at common law. n4

[3] Evaluating the Limited Use of Additur

Despite the Supreme Court's well established rejection of additur on constitutional grounds, its application has not died out altogether. Under certain circumstances, and not necessarily with notable distinction, federal courts of appeal have on various occasions approved of the use of additur, or techniques strikingly similar to additur, in addressing claims of insufficient damages. n5

A question remains as to the applicability of the constitutional prohibition against additur in cases where there is no constitutional right to a jury trial, but a jury trial is provided under some statutory authority. For example, in a condemnation case in which a trial judge ordered additur, the Fifth Circuit upheld the trial court on two distinct bases: n6

- First, because the right to a jury trial in a condemnation case is not derived from the Seventh Amendment
- Second, because there was no basis in the case for the granting of a new trial

Not all federal courts agree with this outcome, either distinguishing their facts, n7 or disagreeing outright with the Fifth Circuit's conclusion. n8

A practice analogous to additur may properly be employed when damages are incorrectly low as a matter of law. For example, use of additur has been upheld in the following circumstances:

- The judge instructed the jury to credit the defendant a sum certain as a matter of law, and that ruling was incorrect as a matter of law n9
- The increase in damages was required simply to correct a clerical error n10
- The amount of damages was not in issue or was stipulated n11

In these situations, because the jury's error is one of law rather than fact, the Seventh Amendment does not act as a bar. Such cases do not technically involve additur, because the correct figure is divined as a matter of law, and the plaintiff is not made to choose between the increased damage award and a new trial. One court has held that additur may be permissible when the plaintiff requests the additur and the additur was based on a state law. n12

Additur may be appropriate if nominal damages are required by appropriate statute and have not been awarded, n13 although if nominal damages are not absolutely required, their award may well be considered impermissible additur. n14 The rationale for this rule is clear: "It would be a mere formality to order a partial new trial limited to the issue of damages when the court could immediately thereafter grant summary judgment for the undisputed amount." n15 An interesting question arises whether a court, on appeal or on a motion for a new trial, may change the percentage of liability of a plaintiff or a defendant. Because the proposed change would increase the percentage of liability of the defendant, it would effectively act as an additur, and as such, would seem to violate the Supreme Court's proscription of the use of additur. Nevertheless, in special circumstances the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals ordered additur in a case in which it determined the district court had improperly apportioned the comparative negligence of the parties. Distinguishing Dimick, the Court noted: "This rule is triply inapplicable in this case: we have the additur conditional on the plaintiff's consent; the amount of damages is not in dispute; there is no jury trial in Federal Tort Claims Act cases." n16

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursAdditursCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsTrial by Jury in Civil Actions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Zarow-Smith v. New Jersey Transit Rail Operations, 953 F. Supp. 581, 591 (D.N.J. 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 486-487, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 482-483, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n4)Footnote 4. U.S. Const. amend. VII, cl. 2.

(n5)Footnote 5. See TCBY Sys. v. RSP Co., Inc., 33 F.3d 925, 930-931 (1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield Ass'n, 99 F.2d 830, 833-835 (5th Cir. 1938) , cert. denied, 306 U.S. 646 (1939) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., United States v. 93.970 Acres of Land, 258 F.2d 17, 31 (7th Cir. 1958) , rev'd on other grounds, 360 U.S. 328, 3 L. Ed. 1275 (1959) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See United States v. 340 Acres of Land, 54 F. Supp. 457, 459 (S.D. Ga. 1944) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Mumma v. Reading Co., 247 F. Supp. 252, 260 (E.D. Pa. 1965) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Zarow-Smith v. New Jersey Transit Rail Operations, 953 F. Supp. 581, 590-591 (D.N.J. 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Jones v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 870 F.2d 982, 985-986 (5th Cir. 1989) (when plaintiff stipulates to amount of damages, plaintiff waives right to jury verdict on amount; plaintiff's argument that trial court's action constitutes additur requiring new trial is not valid); see also Liriano v. Hobart Corp., 170 F.3d 264, 272-273 (2d Cir. 1999) (district court adjusted jury's damage award to include hospital bill that was undisputed and that manifestly should have been part of jury's damage calculations; such adjustment was not true additur, because district judge had not divined figure and then made defendants choose between increased damage award and new trial).

(n12)Footnote 12. McCoy v. Wean United, Inc., 67 F.R.D. 495, 498 (D. Tenn. 1975) (applying Tennessee law permitting suggestion of additur).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Gibeau v. Nellis, 18 F.3d 107, 111 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Gentile v. County of Suffolk, 926 F.2d 142, 155 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Taylor v. Green, 868 F.2d 162, 165 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 841 (1989) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Davis v. United States, 716 F.2d 418, 430 (7th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
B. Seeking Review of Damages Awards

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.34

§ 43.34 Appealing Damages Awards

[1] Evaluating the Standard of Review

Great deference is paid to the trial court's factual findings in the area of damages. n1 Damages are treated as findings of fact and reviewed under the clearly erroneous standard. n2 This rule is applied to the trial court's conclusions regarding both the amount n3 and the apportionment n4 of compensatory and punitive damages. n5 Factors in mitigation of damages are also questions of fact to be reviewed under the clearly erroneous standard. n6 The review of a district court's findings as to damages in a bench trial under the clearly erroneous standard should not be confused with the review of the trial judge's rulings regarding acceptable damages made following a motion for a new trial in a jury trial.

[2] Specific Findings Required

Specific findings must be made regarding the issue of damages. Appellate courts do not want the entire damages award presented as a lump sum. Instead, they expect the total amount of damages to be itemized and an amount assigned to each individual element of damages. n7 Specific findings regarding damages must also be made in default judgments. n8 If the trial court fails to specify the basis for the award, thereby making informed review impossible, the appellate court may find it necessary to remand for further findings. For example, remand may be required if:

- The reviewing court is unable to tell how or whether the damages were reduced to present value n9
- It is impossible to tell if the trial court considered the proper factors in mitigation of damages n10
- Two items of damages appear to overlap n11
- The award appears to be excessive or inadequate, and the reviewing court cannot determine how the trial court arrived at the final figure n12
- The reviewing court is unable to determine the propriety of the award n13

However, if the record as a whole provides a sufficient basis for appellate review of the award of damages, the court is unlikely to remand even if a damages award is not broken down. n14 If the total award seems proper in light of the totality of the facts presented, the reviewing court may be reluctant to remand for itemization of the award. n15

[3] Reviewing a Trial Judge's Award of Punitive Damages

If no constitutional issue is raised, punitive damages awards are reviewed under an abuse-of-discretion standard. n16 However, when constitutional issues are raised on appeal, a de novo standard of review is required. n17

[4] Reducing Excessive Punitive Damages on Appeal

Appellate courts may, on review, reduce the amount of punitive damages awarded, provided that the award is "clearly excessive." n18 In determining whether a punitive damages award is clearly excessive, federal courts look to four factors: n19

- The nature and enormity of the wrong
- The financial status of the defendant
- The potential liability of the defendant resulting from multiple claims
- Whether the jury's award is out of line with awards in analogous cases

[5] Constitutional Challenges to Punitive Damages Awards

Punitive damages "have long been a part of traditional state tort law." n20 Under the traditional common-law approach, the amount of such an award is "initially determined by a jury instructed to consider the gravity of the wrong and the need to deter similar wrongful conduct. The jury's determination is then reviewed by trial and appellate courts to ensure that it is reasonable." n21

The common-law method for assessing punitive damages does not in itself violate due process since there is nothing so inherently unfair in the process as to make it per se unconstitutional. Although unlimited jury or judicial discretion may invite extreme results bordering on the unconstitutional, the Supreme Court has determined that it is not necessary to "draw a mathematical bright line between the constitutionally acceptable and the constitutionally unacceptable that would fit every case." n22 Rather, all that is required, is adequate guidance from the court when the case is tried to a jury and general adherence to reasonable procedures and review. n23

Due process requires the availability of judicial review of the amount of a punitive damages award, n24 and the Due Process Clause prohibits punitive damages awards that are "grossly excessive." n25 A de novo standard of review is required when reviewing the constitutionality of a punitive damages award. n26

When reviewing awards of punitive damages under the due process clause of the Federal Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment, courts must consider three guideposts: n27

- The degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's misconduct
- The disparity between the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff and the punitive damages awarded
- The difference between the punitive damages awarded and the civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases

The Supreme Court held that punitive damages cannot be based a jury's desire to punish the defendant for harming nonparties to the litigation. n28 In a maritime action involving an oil spill, the Supreme Court held that punitive damages should be reasonably predictable in severity, and the punitive damages award was reduced to create an even ratio between compensatory and punitive damages. n29 The rational of the decision may be limited to maritime cases.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous ReviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesAward CalculationsAppellate & Posttrial ReviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesAward CalculationsConstitutional Requirements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Vermont Microsystems, Inc. v. Autodesk, Inc., 88 F.3d 142, 151 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hayes v. United States, 899 F.2d 438, 450 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cowan v. Prudential Ins. Co., 852 F.2d 688, 689-690 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Soto v. United States, 11 F.3d 15 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Sterling v. Velsicol Chem. Corp., 855 F.2d 1188, 1198 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Sellers v. Delgado College, 902 F.2d 1189, 1194 (5th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 987 (1990) , reh'g denied, 498 U.S. 1075 (1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Cole v. United States, 861 F.2d 1261, 1264 (11th Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Adriana Int'l Corp. v. Thoeren, 913 F.2d 1406, 1414 (9th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied sub nom. Lewis & Co. v. Thoeren, 498 U.S. 1109 (1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Pierce v. New York C. R. Co., 409 F.2d 1392, 1399 (6th Cir. 1969) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Rapisardi v. United Fruit Co., 441 F.2d 1308, 1313 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Neill v. Diamond M. Drilling Co., 426 F.2d 487, 491-492 (5th Cir. 1970) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Adkins v. GAF Corp., 923 F.2d 1225, 1232 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Adkins v. GAF Corp., 923 F.2d 1225, 1232 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Gibbs v. United States, 599 F.2d 36, 39 (2d Cir. 1979) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Sines v. United States, 430 F.2d 644, 645 (9th Cir. 1970) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 276-277, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Cooper Indus., Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc, 532 U.S. 424, 121 S. Ct. 1678, 1685-1686, 149 L. Ed. 2d 674 (2001) .

(n18)Footnote 18. West v. Western Gas & Sur. Co., 846 F.2d 387, 399-400 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Id.

(n20)Footnote 20. Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 1041, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1991) (quoting from Silkwood v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 464 U.S. 238, 104 S. Ct. 615, 625, 78 L. Ed. 2d 443 (1984)) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 1042, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1991) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 1043, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1991) .

(n23)Footnote 23. TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 113 S. Ct. 2711, 2722, 125 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1993) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Honda Motor Co., Ltd. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 114 S. Ct. 2331, 2334, 129 L. Ed. 2d 336 (1994) .

(n25)Footnote 25. BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S. Ct. 1589,134 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1996) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Cooper Indus., Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc, 532 U.S. 424, 121 S. Ct. 1678, 1685-1686, 149 L. Ed. 2d 674 (2001) .

(n27)Footnote 27. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 419-428, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 (2003) (citing BMW of N. Am. v Gore, 517 US 559, 116 S Ct 1589, 134 L Ed 2d 809 (1996)) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Philip Morris USA, Inc. v. Williams, 549 U.S. 346, 127 S. Ct. 1057, 1063, 166 L. Ed. 2d 940 (2007) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Exxon Shipping Co. v. Baker, 554 U.S. --, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5263 (2008) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
B. Seeking Review of Damages Awards

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 43.35 through 43.40

[Reserved]

§§ 43.35[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.41

§ 43.41 Seeking Damages In Antitrust Cases

[1] Considering Possible Damages Under Antitrust Law

The antitrust laws make illegal certain business combinations and activities in restraint of trade. n1 Generally, an antitrust plaintiff may recover:

- Its increased costs from an overcharge in price-fixing cases
- Lost profits
- Reduction in the value of its business or loss of goodwill

Punitive damages apart from the damages prescribed in the statute are not allowable. n2 Finally, nominal damages may be awarded in antitrust cases, n3 in which case the disappointed plaintiff may be consoled by the award of statutory attorney's fees. n4

A person who has been injured in business or property by reason of a violation of the antitrust laws may sue for treble damages under Section 4 of the Clayton Act. n5

[2] Making a Reasonable and Fair Estimate of Damages

The Supreme Court has stated that the "vagaries of the marketplace usually deny us sure knowledge of what plaintiff's situation would have been in the absence of defendant's antitrust violation." n6 Although the fact finder generally may not base its verdict on speculation or guesswork, it may make a reasonable and fair estimate of damages sustained based on the evidence admitted at trial. n7

[3] Proving Antitrust Damages

[3.--1] Showing Injury and Actual Loss

There are two different aspects to a plaintiff's damages case under the antitrust laws. Plaintiff must prove both:

- Fact of injury
- Amount of damages

In sum, plaintiff must first prove that it has suffered antitrust injury n8 and must do so with a fair degree of certainty. n9

[3.--2] Establishing Fact of Injury

"Fact of injury" means injury caused by the type of conduct that the antitrust laws prohibit. n10 "Plaintiffs must prove antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." n11

Even though a business may suffer loss from the lower prices of its competitors, mere competition in price setting does not constitute an antitrust violation, and the losses that result from lawful competition in the market do not constitute antitrust injuries. n12 Low prices (unless predatorily low) virtually always benefit the consumer and are pro-competitive, and a competing dealer complaining about another dealer's low prices in effect is complaining about competition. Plaintiff's proof of damages must "reflect only the losses directly attributable to unlawful competition." n13

[3.--3] Establishing Net Damages

The plaintiff must also prove that its claimed antitrust damages are "net" damages, offsetting any benefits which plaintiff may have derived from the defendant's illegal conduct. n14 Offsets made to arrive at a net damage figure are deducted before the judgment is trebled, n15 while deductions for settlement amounts plaintiff received from co-defendants are made after trebling. n16

[4] Recovering Overcharges in Price-Fixing Cases

When a plaintiff has paid an artificially high price because of defendant's illegal price-fixing, the plaintiff may recover the difference between the price paid and the price that would have been paid absent the illegal price-fixing. n17 This is true even though the overcharge may have been passed on to plaintiff's customers. n18

Customers do not have standing to recover overcharges under federal antitrust law. n19 However, customers may be allowed to recover overcharges in connection with state law antitrust claims pursued in federal court. n20

[5] Recovering Overcharges in Tying Cases

Unlawful tying arrangements are those in which a seller forces a buyer to take a second (tied) product along with the desired (tying) product. If this sale results in the buyer paying more than it would have for just the tying product it may recover the amount of this overcharge (presumably the cost of the tied product if the buyer had no use for the tied product). n21

This overcharge has been measured in several ways, including the difference between the price paid for the tying product and the price of similar products sold by other sellers, and the difference between the total price (paid for both products) and the fair market value of both products.

In cases in which buyers have asked to purchase only the tying product but sellers have refused to sell them separately, some courts have held that the buyers may recover the costs incurred by going elsewhere for the goods. n22 This may not be allowed, however, if the price asked for the tied and tying products did not exceed their fair market value. n23

[6] Recovering Damages in Price Discrimination Cases

Price discrimination, as defined by the Supreme Court is the contemporaneous sale at different prices to different buyers of the same goods. n24 In price discrimination cases, damages are measured by evaluating "what plaintiff's situation would have been in the absence of defendant's antitrust violation." n25 Courts often use lost profits as the measure of these damages.

[7] Calculating Lost Profits

[7.--1] Determining Net Profit

Claimants in antitrust actions may recover only their lost net profits (not lost gross profits). Business expenses and interest are deductible in determining lost profits. n26 Lost profits awards are not reduced by the amount of income tax that would have been owed on the profits, however, and they are not adjusted for inflation. n27

[7.--2] Using the "Before and After" Method

The "before and after" method of computing lost profits allows a claimant to recover the difference between: (1) net profits during a period (reflecting a fair measure of claimant's profits) n28 in which claimant's business was unaffected by antitrust violations, and (2) net profits during the period in which the business suffered due to the violations. n29

[7.--3] Using the "Yardstick" Method

The yardstick method computes lost profits by measuring the difference between: (1) net profits earned by the claimant during the damage period, and (2) net profits earned during the same period by a comparable business unaffected by the antitrust violations. n30 It has been held, however, that if this measure is to be upheld, it must fairly reflect profits claimant would have earned absent the antitrust violations. n31

A third method, the "sales projection" method, measures damages by multiplying the claimant's net profit per unit by the number of sales units lost due to antitrust violations. n32

[7--4] Establishing Loss of Goodwill, "Going Concern" or Capital Value

If a claimant's business is destroyed by antitrust violations, the claimant may recover the "going concern" value of the business. n33 This is designed to "compensate for the harm sustained when a business interest is unlawfully terminated as a result of an antitrust violation." n34

To receive these damages, a plaintiff must show:

- That the antitrust violation was the cause of the particular loss (e.g., the defendant engaged in predatory price cutting, forcing the plaintiff to lower prices as a result)
- That plaintiff's business was destroyed
- That the loss is measured from the date that plaintiff's business was terminated, destroyed, or sold as a result of the violations. n35

In the alternative, a plaintiff may recover any reasonably anticipated future profits lost due to the antitrust violations. It may not, however, recover both lost future profits and going concern value. n36

If the plaintiff's business has been damaged but not completely destroyed, it may recover any loss of fair market value of the business caused by the violations. n37 Damages to goodwill are determined by taking into consideration "factors such as a business's age, profit, history, customers, and potential for future earnings." n38 The standard of proof required for damages is generally not difficult to meet, although the plaintiff's assertion of damages must be unsupported factually or analytically. Finally, even a business that had operated at a loss may receive lost future profits damages. n39

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawClayton ActRemediesGeneral OverviewAntitrust & Trade LawClayton ActRemediesDamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1-27 (Sherman and Clayton Acts in their modern form).

(n2)Footnote 2. Hansen Packing Co. v. Armour & Co., 16 F. Supp. 784 (D.N.Y. 1936) (court struck complainant's request for punitive damages holding that statute, in trebling actual damages, carried its own provision for punishment).

(n3)Footnote 3. Sciambra v. Graham News Co., 892 F.2d 411 (5th Cir. 1990) ; United States Football League v. National Football League, 842 F.2d 1335 (2d Cir. 1988) ($1 trebled to $3).

(n4)Footnote 4. United States Football League v. National Football League, 842 F.2d 1335 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 15.

(n6)Footnote 6. J. Truett Payne Co. v. Chrysler Motors Corp., 451 U.S. 557, 566, 101 S. Ct. 1923, 68 L. Ed. 2d 442 (1981) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 89 S. Ct. 1562, 23 L. Ed. 2d 129 (1969) ; Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 327 U.S. 251, 66 S. Ct. 574, 90 L. Ed. 652 (1946) . See also Wells Real Estate, Inc. v. Greater Lowell Bd. of Realtors, 850 F.2d 803 (1st Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 955 (1988) (damages speculative); Household Goods Carriers' Bureau v. Terrell, 452 F.2d 152 (5th Cir. 1971) (courts must not allow damages verdicts based on speculation).

(n8)Footnote 8. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 110 S. Ct. 1884, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333 (1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. McClure v. Undersea Indus., Inc., 671 F.2d 1287 (11th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1037 (1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 340, 110 S. Ct. 1884, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333 (1990) .

(n13)Footnote 13. MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1161 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Comm'n v. National Football League, 791 F.2d 1356, 1367 (9th Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 826 (1987) ; Minpeco, S.A. v. Conticommodity Servs., Inc., 676 F. Supp. 486

(S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Id.

(n16)Footnote 16. Id. See also Auwood v. Harry Brandt Booking Office, Inc., 850 F.2d 884 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n17)Footnote 17. In re Mid-Atlantic Toyota Antitrust Litig., 560 F. Supp. 760 (D. Md. 1983) (overcharge measured as difference between price paid for products and price that would have been charged if there had been no conspiracy). See also Hanover Shoe, Inc. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481, 88 S. Ct. 2224, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1231 (1968) ; Burlington Indus. v. Milliken & Co., 690 F.2d 380 (4th Cir. 1982) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Hanover Shoe, Inc. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481, 88 S. Ct. 2224, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1231 (1968) . See also New York v. Hendrickson Bros., Inc., 840 F. 2d 1065 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 736 n.16, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d. 707 (1977) ; Hanover Shoe Inc. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481, 88 S. Ct. 2224, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1231 (1968) .

(n20)Footnote 20. California v. ARC America Corp., 109 S. Ct. 1661, 104 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1989) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Bouldis v. U.S. Suzuki Motor Corp., 711 F.2d 1319 (6th Cir. 1983) ; Selchow & Righter Co. v. Goldex Corp., 612 F. Supp. 19 (S.D. Fla. 1985) . Cf. De Jesus v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 87 F.3d 65, 71 (2d Cir. 1996) (employment as "Neighborhood Office Agents," a service for which plaintiffs were compensated, could not constitute a "tying product" within the antitrust laws).

(n22)Footnote 22. Knutson v. Daily Review, Inc., 664 F.2d 1120 (9th Cir. 1981) ; Flintkote Co. v. Lysfjord, 246 F.2d 368 (9th Cir. 1957) , cert. denied, 355 U.S. 835 (1957) .

(n23)Footnote 23. E.g., Will v. Comprehensive Accounting Corp., 776 F.2d 665 (7th Cir. 1985) ; Kypta v. McDonald's Corp., 671 F.2d 1282 (11th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 857 (1982) .

(n24)Footnote 24. FTC v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 363 U.S. 536, 80 S. Ct. 1267, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1385 (1960) .

(n25)Footnote 25. J. Truett Payne Co. v. Chrysler Motors Corp., 451 U.S. 557, 566, 101 S. Ct. 1923, 1929, 68 L. Ed. 2d 442, 451 (1981) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Ad-Vantage Tel. Directory Consultants, Inc. v. GTE Directories Corp., 943 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See Locklin v. Day-Glo Color Corp., 429 F.2d 873 (7th Cir. 1970) ; U-Haul Int'l, Inc. v. Jartran, Inc., 601 F. Supp. 1140 (D. Ariz. 1984) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 793 F.2d 1034 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Pacific Coast Agr. Export Ass'n v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196 (9th Cir. 1975) ; D&R Distributing Co., Inc. v. Chambers Corp., 608 F. Supp. 1290 (E.D. Cal. 1984) . See also Bascom Food Prods. Corp. v. Reese Finer Foods, Inc., 715 F. Supp. 616 (D.N.J. 1989) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 327 U.S. 251, 66 S. Ct. 574, 90 L. Ed. 652 (1946) ; Pacific Coast Agr. Export Ass'n v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196 (9th Cir. 1975) .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Metrix Warehouse, Inc. v. Daimler-Benz Aktiengesellschaft, 828 F.2d 1033 (4th Cir. 1987) ; G.M. Brod & Co. v. U.S. Home Corp., 759 F.2d 1526 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See Home Placement Serv., Inc. v. Providence Journal Co., 819 F.2d 1199 (1st Cir. 1987) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Ford Motor Co. v. Webster's Auto Sales, Inc., 361 F.2d 874 (1st Cir. 1966) ; Tunis Bros. Co., Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 952 F.2d 715 (3d Cir. 1991) .

(n33)Footnote 33. See Malley-Duff & Assoc., Inc. v. Crown Life Ins. Co., 734 F.2d 133 (3d Cir. 1984) ; Trimed, Inc. v. Sherwood Medical Center, 977 F.2d 885 (4th Cir. 1992) ; Sciambra v. Graham News Co., 841 F.2d 651 (5th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 855 (1988) .

(n34)Footnote 34. Bonjorno v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp., 559 F.Supp. 922, 936 (E.D. Pa. 1983) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 752 F.2d 802 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n35)Footnote 35. C. Knapp, Commercial Damages § 55.05[3] (Matthew Bender 1991).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Lehrman v. Gulf Oil Corp., 500 F.2d 659, 663-664 (5th Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 420 U.S. 929 (1975) ; American Anodco, Inc. v. Reynolds Metal Co., 743 F.2d 417 (6th Cir. 1984) ; see also Malley-Duff & Assocs., Inc. v. Crown Life Ins. Co., 734 F.2d 133 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Central Telecommunications, Inc. v. TCI Cablevision, Inc., 800 F.2d 711 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n38)Footnote 38. Copper Liquor, Inc. v. Adolph Coors Co. ("Coors II"), 642 F.2d 875, 879 n.9 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Graphic Prods. Distribs. v. Itek Corp.,717 F.2d 1560, 1580 (11th Cir. 1983) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.42

§ 43.42 Seeking Damages Under Section 11 of the 1933 Securities Act

[1] Recovering Damages Resulting From Untrue Fact in Registration Statement

Section 11 of the 1933 Securities Act applies to security offerings that are registered under the 1933 Act. It provides for civil liability arising from the registration statement of a security containing an untrue statement of a material fact or an omission to state a material fact unless the person acquiring the security knew of such untruth or omission. n1 If the buyer knows of these misrepresentations at the time of purchase, the buyer may not collect damages. n2

Moreover, the plaintiff must prove that the misstatement caused the loss. n3 The statute provides that if the defendant can prove that any portion of the plaintiff's claimed damages result from something other than the registration statement, those damages shall not be recoverable. n4 Therefore, it would be prudent for a defense attorney to pay close attention to all factors influencing the market in order to ensure that the client does not pay for damages caused by market conditions. Section 11 also contains provisions regarding the persons who may be held liable and provides for exemptions from liability. n5

[2] Calculating Damages Under Section 11

Under Section 11, a plaintiff may recover such damages that represent the difference between the amount paid for the security (not exceeding the price at which the security was offered to the public) and either of the following:

- The value of the security as of the time such suit was brought
- The price at which such security shall have been disposed of in the market before suit
- The price at which such security shall have been disposed of after suit but before judgment if such damages are less than the damages representing the difference between the amount paid for the security (not exceeding the price at which the security was offered to the public) and the value thereof as of the time the suit was brought n6

Under these provisions, exactly when a plaintiff disposes of stock can have a substantial effect on the recovery. This manner of calculating damages "forces the plaintiff to assess the market and decide whether it is in his/her best interests to retain the security, to sell prior to suit, or to sell during suit but prior to judgment." n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesPunitive DamagesSecurities LawLiabilitySecurities Act of 1933 ActionsCivil LiabilityFalse Registration StatementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 77k(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. McFarland v. Memorex Corp., 96 F.R.D. 357, 362 (N.D. Cal. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Akerman v. Oryx Communications Inc., 609 F. Supp. 363, 368 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) , aff'd, 810 F.d 336 (2d Cir. 1987).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77(k)(e).

(n5)Footnote 5. See generally 15 U.S.C. §§ 77k(a)(1)-(5) and 77k(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 77k(e).

(n7)Footnote 7. R. Kaplan and A. Tadler, Damages in Federal Securities Litigation, Securities Litigation 1991: Strategies and Current Development 736-737 (PLI Litig. & Admin. Practice Course Handbook Series No. 417 (1991)).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.43

§ 43.43 Seeking Damages Under Section 12(2) of the 1933 Securities Act

[1] Bringing a Claim Based on Prospectus Fraud

Section 12(2) deals with civil liability in the case of prospectus fraud in the sale of any securities, whether or not they are registered. Section 12(2) prohibits the offer or sale of securities by means of a prospectus or oral communication, which includes an untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. It is up to the defendant to sustain the burden of proof that it did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of such untruth or omission. n1

A purchaser who is so defrauded may "sue either at law or in equity ... to recover the consideration paid for such security with interest thereon, less the amount of any income received thereon upon the tender of such security, or for damages if he no longer owns the security." n2 Section 12(2) therefore allows for:

- Rescission as the appropriate remedy when the defrauded party still has the stock
- Damages as the remedy when the party no longer owns the stock

[2] Seeking Rescission Under Section 12(2)

If a party brings a suit under Section 12(2) of the 1933 Act and the party has retained the securities, the appropriate remedy is rescission. n3 The amount of plaintiff's remedy through rescission is determined by adding the consideration given for the security, plus any interest that such consideration would have earned, less any income received from the security. n4

[3] Recovering Damages Under Section 12(2)

If a party brings a suit under Section 12(2) of the 1933 Act when the party no longer owns the stock, then the appropriate remedy is damages and not rescission. n5 "[D]amages are to be measured so as to result in the substantial equivalent of rescission--namely, the difference between the purchase price and the plaintiff's resale price, plus interest, and less any income or return of capital (with interest) that the plaintiff received on the security." n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesPunitive DamagesSecurities LawLiabilitySecurities Act of 1933 ActionsCivil LiabilityCommunications & ProspectusesDamages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 77l(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77l.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77l.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Randall v. Loftsgaarden, 478 U.S. 647, 659, 106 S. Ct. 3143, 3151, 92 L. Ed. 2d 525, 539 (1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 15 U.S.C. § 771.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Loss, Fundamentals of Securities Regulation 886 (Little Brown & Co. 2d ed. 1988).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

166 of 174 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.44

§ 43.44 Seeking Damages Under Section 10(b) of the 1934 Securities Exchange Act

[1] Making a Claim for Securities Fraud Under Rule 10b-5

Probably the most familiar Section of the 1934 Securities Exchange Act is Section 10(b) and its accompanying regulation, Rule 10b-5. Section 10(b) n1 and Rule 10b-5 prohibit fraud "in connection with the purchase or sale of any security."

The Securities and Exchange Commission has implemented Section 10(b) of the 1934 Act through its Rule 10b-5. In pertinent part, this Rule states that it is unlawful to use the means listed in Section 10(b) of the Act:

- To employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud
- To make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or
- To engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security n2

Neither Section 10(b) nor Rule 10b-5 expressly contains a civil remedy for the violation of their provisions. However, case law has established that there is an implied private action under this Section of the 1934 Act. n3

[2] Recovering Actual or Out-of-Pocket Damages

Because neither Section 10(b) nor Rule 10b-5 state how damages are to be determined, the courts have used the actual economic loss damages standards of Section 28 of the 1934 Securities Exchange Act. n4

To have standing to bring suit to recover damages under 10(b) and 10b-5, the plaintiff must suffer actual money damages. It is insufficient for a plaintiff to plead "intangible economic injury" such as being influenced to not buy or not sell securities based on fraudulent misrepresentations. n5

If a plaintiff fails to demonstrate actual damages, then the plaintiff has failed to present a fraud cause of action under §

10(b). n6 This, however, is not to say that one must show the amount of damages with "mathematical precision." n7 Rather, what a plaintiff must do is submit enough evidence so that the trier of fact can come to an intelligent decision regarding the amount of damages. n8

The general "measure of damages under § 28 of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78bb(a) is the difference between the fair value of all that the ... seller received and the fair value of what he would have received had there been no fraudulent conduct." n9 In other words, from the perspective of a defrauded purchaser, actual damages are "the difference between what [the purchaser] paid for the stock and what it was worth." n10 If, however, the security has increased in value since the date of purchase and the shares are later sold, the plaintiff will then have suffered no actual damages resulting from the defendant's action, and a § 10(b) cause of action may not be maintained. n11

[3] Recovering Defendant's Fraudulent Profits

The Supreme Court has held that there are times when an assessment of actual damages is not sufficient: "[W]here the defendant [receives] more than the seller's actual loss ... damages are the amount of the defendant's profit." n12 This measure of damages is "disgorgement of profits."

The reasoning behind permitting disgorgement is that "it is simple equity that a wrongdoer should disgorge his fraudulent enrichment." n13 To allow a defendant to retain profits illegally earned would amount to unjust enrichment. n14 Disgorgement clearly does more than simply make the plaintiff whole for the economic loss proximately caused by the defendant's fraud. Indeed, the accepted rationale underlying this alternative is simply that "[i]t is more appropriate to give the defrauded party the benefit even of windfalls than to let the fraudulent party keep them." n15

Courts have been confronted with the question of how to deal with a private action for disgorgement after a defendant has already paid to the SEC a disgorgement measure of damages. At least one court has held that if the "defendants did not disgorge the full extent of their illegal profits, the proper measure of disgorgement damages shall be the difference between each defendant's actual profits and the amount disgorged to the SEC." n16 The court reasoned: "Once ill-gotten profits have been disgorged to the SEC, further disgorgement as damages in a private action is clearly punitive in its effect and would constitute an impermissible penalty assessment." n17

[4] Recovering Benefit-of-the-Bargain Damages

A plaintiff bringing a cause of action under Section 10(b) may seek "benefit of the bargain damages," used in common law fraud actions. n18 The Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit has held that in order for benefit-of-the-bargain damages to be awarded, there must be a bargain or contract for the "purchase or sale of securities." n19 Thus, if the contract is unenforceable, there can be no recovery under this theory. n20

Benefit-of-the bargain recovery provides for damages sufficient to give the recipient the benefit of the contract, if these damages are proved with reasonable certainty. n21 It is used when traditional out-of-pocket damages do not provide the injured party with "just and satisfactory" compensation. n22 This type of remedy, however, is controversial and many circuits do not approve of such a remedy.

Even circuits which generally disapprove of this remedy sometimes allow such relief in certain limited circumstances. One Second Circuit panel has ruled that plaintiffs generally may not recover benefit of the bargain damages in securities cases. n23 Nevertheless, a subsequent decision of that court carved out an exception to the rule and held that benefit-of-the-bargain damages should be allowed in the limited situation "where misrepresentation is made in the tender offer and proxy solicitation materials as to the consideration to be forthcoming upon an intended merger." n24 In such a case, the court reasoned, there was no speculation as to what the damages from the misrepresentation were, and therefore, benefit-of-the-bargain damages could be awarded. The measure of damages in this case was found to be "the difference between what was represented as coming to the ... shareholders and what they actually received." n25

[5] Recovering Consequential Damages

Some courts have held that suits under 10b-5 permit indirect or consequential damages when the defrauded party proves "with reasonable certainty that the fraud caused the damages." n26 However, once a plaintiff discovers the fraud, the plaintiff may not recover for consequential damages that could have been avoided through mitigation. n27

Consequential damages, however, may be recovered on the theory of recovery of capital contributions made to an enterprise after the plaintiff learns of the fraud if the following can all be shown: n28

- Each expenditure ... was a reasonable effort to, e.g., minimize plaintiffs' losses
- The expenditures were an effort to save the company from a "pre-existing insolvency concealed by defendants"
- But for the defendant's misrepresentations, the plaintiff would not have made those expenditures

In such cases, the plaintiff may recover for the additional money expended.

[6] Seeking Rescission Under Rule 10b-5

Under Rule 10b-5, a plaintiff may also be able to obtain rescissory damages. However, the Supreme Court has warned that "[t]he issue whether and under what circumstances rescission or a rescissory measure of damages is available under § 10(b) is an unsettled one." n29 Rescission allows the injured party to be returned to the position in which he or she would have been had the transaction never occurred.

Some circuits require that there be "privity between plaintiff and defendant or some specific fiduciary duty owed" to the plaintiff by the defendant in order for a rescissory measure of damages to be awarded. n30 Those courts reason that if there is no privity, the defendant may be paying for losses that have resulted not from illegal conduct, but rather from some unrelated cause such as market forces. n31 However, other circuits do not hold that privity is required in all cases for rescissory damages to be awarded. n32 These courts follow a "but for" analysis arguing that if the illegal act had not occurred, no losses would have resulted. n33

Even with a remedy of rescission, the § 10(b) plaintiff is still limited to actual damages. What should be included as actual damages has been debated. One area of special concern is cases involving tax shelters.

[7] Punitive Damages Unavailable Under Federal Securities Law

Because § 28 of the Securities Act limits the amount of damages that a party may recover in a federal securities action to actual damages, punitive damages may not be recovered in a § 10(b) action. n34 However, pendent state law claims are an alternative basis for punitive damages, and this avenue should be explored by plaintiff's counsel. n35

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawAdditional Offerings & the Securities Exchange Act of 1934Jurisdiction & ScopeLimitations on RemediesSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesGeneral OverviewSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesActual DamagesSecurities LawLiabilityRemediesPunitive DamagesSecurities LawLiabilitySecurities Exchange Act of 1934 ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Section 10(b) of the Act states that it is unlawful to use, directly or indirectly, the mails, the facilities of any national security exchange, or any means of interstate commerce [or to] use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered on a national securities exchange or any security not so registered, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(n2)Footnote 2. 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 730, 95 S. Ct. 1917, 1922 44 L. Ed. 2d 539, 546 (1975) (citing Superintendent of Ins. v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 404 U.S. 6, 13 n.9, 92 S. Ct. 165, 30 L. Ed. 2d 128 (1971) ; Affiliated Ute v. United States, 406 U.S. 128, 150-154, 92 S. Ct. 1456, 31 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1972)) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Pelletier v. Stuart-James Co., 863 F.2d 1550, 1557 (11th Cir. 1989) (citing Feldman v. Pioneer Petroleum, Inc., 813 F.2d 296, 301 (10th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 954 (1987)) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Blue Chip Stamps v. Manor Drug Stores, 421 U.S. 723, 734, 95 S. Ct. 1917, 1925, 44 L. Ed. 2d 539, 549 (1975) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Pelletier v. Stuart-James Co., 863 F.2d 1550, 1557-1558 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Feldman v. Pioneer Petroleum, Inc., 813 F.2d 296, 301 (10th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 954 (1987) (quoting King & King Enters. v. Champlin Petroleum Co., 657 F.2d 1147, 1158 (10th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1164 (1982)) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Feldman v. Pioneer Petroleum, Inc., 813 F.2d 296, 301 (10th Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 954 (1987) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Affiliated Ute v. United States, 406 U.S. 128, 155, 92 S. Ct. 1456, 31 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1972) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Astor Chauffeured Limousine v. Runnfeldt Inv. Corp., 910 F.2d 1540, 1551 (7th Cir. 1990) . See also Foster v. Financial Technology, Inc., 517 F.2d 1068, 1071 (9th Cir. 1975) ; Pelletier v. Stuart-James Co., 863 F.2d 1550, 1557-1558 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Rubenstein v. IU Int'l. Corp., 506 F. Supp. 311, 318 (E.D. Pa. 1980) . See also Gardner v. Surnamer, 608 F. Supp. 1385, 1388 (E.D. Pa. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Affiliated Ute v. United States, 406 U.S. 128, 155, 92 S. Ct. 1456, 31 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1972) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Litton Ind. v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb, Inc., 734 F. Supp. 1071, 1075 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) (quoting Janigan v. Taylor, 344 F.2d 781, 786 (1st Cir. 1965) , cert. denied, 382 U.S. 879 (1965)) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See SEC v. MacDonald, 725 F.2d 9, 11 (1st Cir. 1984) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Randall v. Loftsgaarden, 478 U.S. 647, 663, 106 S. Ct. 3143, 3153, 92 L. Ed. 2d 525, 542 (1986) (quoting Janigan v. Taylor, 344 F.2d 781, 786 (1st Cir. 1965) , cert. denied, 382 U.S. 879 (1965)) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Litton Ind. v. Lehman Bros. Kuhn Loeb Inc., 734 F. Supp. 1071, 1077 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Id.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Osofsky v. Zipf, 645 F.2d 107, 114 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Pelletier v. Stuart-James Co., 863 F.2d 1550, 1559 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Id.

(n21)Footnote 21. Osofsky v. Zipf, 645 F.2d 107, 114 (2d Cir. 1981) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Torts § 549(2) (1977)).

(n22)Footnote 22. Id.

(n23)Footnote 23. Levine v. Seilon, Inc., 439 F.2d 328 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Osofsky v. Zipf, 645 F.2d 107, 114 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Id.

(n26)Footnote 26. Consequential or indirect damages, akin to special damages, do not flow directly from the wrong but from its consequences. See also Grubb v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 868 F.2d 1151, 1165 (10th Cir. 1989) (citing James v. Meinke, 778 F.2d 200, 205 (5th Cir. 1985) ; de Haas v. Empire Petroleum Co., 435 F.2d 1223, 1228-1229 (10th Cir. 1970)) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Madigan, Inc. v. Goodman, 498 F.2d 233 (7th Cir. 1974) ; Grubb v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 868 F.2d 1151 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Grubb v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp., 868 F.2d 1151, 1165 (10th Cir. 1989) (quoting Madigan, Inc. v. Goodman, 498 F.2d 233, 238-239 (7th Cir. 1974)) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Randall v. Loftsgaarden, 478 U.S. 647, 661, 106 S. Ct. 3143, 3152, 92 L. Ed. 2d 525, 540 (1986) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Huddleston v. Herman & MacLean, 640 F.2d 534, 554 (5th Cir. 1981) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 459 U.S. 375, 103 S. Ct. 683, 74 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1983) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Id. at 554-555 .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Arthur Young & Co. v. Reves, 937 F.2d 1310, 1336 (8th Cir. 1991) ; Bruschi v. Brown, 876 F.2d 1526, 1532 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n33)Footnote 33. See Huddleston v. Herman & MacLean, 640 F.2d 534, 555 (5th Cir. 1981) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 459 U.S. 375, 103 S. Ct. 683, 74 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1983) .

(n34)Footnote 34. Pelletier v. Stuart-James Co., 863 F.2d 1550, 1557 (11th Cir. 1989) . See also Huddleston v. Herman & MacLean, 640 F.2d 534, 559 (5th Cir. 1981) , rev'd in part on other grounds, 459 U.S. 375, 103 S. Ct. 683, 74 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1983) ; Grogan v. Garner, 806 F.2d 829, 838 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See Cyrak v. Lemon, 919 F.2d 320 (5th Cir. 1990) ; Grogan v. Garner, 806 F.2d 829 (8th Cir. 1986) ; Nye v. Blyth Eastman Dillon & Co., 588 F.2d 1189 (8th Cir. 1978) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.45

§ 43.45 Seeking Damages Under Federal Copyright Law

[1] Electing Proper Remedy Under Copyright Statute

Remedies for copyright infringement are provided by statute. The copyright owner may seek an injunction to restrain the infringement, n1 or may sue for damages and profits, n2 or may join both remedies in a single action. When actual damages and profits are sought, the parties are entitled to a jury trial on that issue. n3

[2] Recovering Actual Damages for Copyright Infringement

A copyright owner who proceeds under § 504(b)(1) may recover actual damages resulting from the infringement. There are several methods of computing these damages, and courts within the same jurisdiction have used different methods from case to case, depending on the facts involved. The most frequently used measure of actual damages is the extent of injury to the market value of the copyrighted work. n4

The copyright owner's lost profits are perhaps the most helpful evidence of loss in market value and have been used as a primary source of guidance for the courts. n5 This figure is computed by deducting a copyright owner's saved or reduced production costs (presuming that the infringement has lessened demand for the copyright owner's product and that the owner has thus produced fewer products) from the owner's lost sales. n6

The causal link between the infringement and the alleged "lost profits" must also be adequately established; a comparison of before-infringement and (lower) after-infringement sales figures, standing alone, does not mean automatic recovery for the copyright owner. The most direct way to prove that lost sales are due to infringement is to show that defendant's post-infringement customers were former customers of plaintiff. n7

Another measure of actual damages is the market value of the work when misappropriated. If there have been previous transactions between the parties, this value may be easily computed. n8

[3] Recovering Profits of Infringer

A copyright owner electing to proceed under § 504(b) may also collect, in addition to actual damages, "any profits of the infringer that are attributable to the infringement and are not taken into account in computing the actual damages." n9 To establish these profits, the copyright owner need present proof "only of the infringer's gross revenue." The burden then shifts to the infringer, who must "prove his or her deductible expenses and the elements of profit attributable to factors other than the copyrighted work." n10

To meet this shifted burden, defendant may show that some of its profits are attributable to factors other than the infringement. For example, defendant may have contributed original material to the infringing material, or defendant may have used marketing, sales, or other business skills, which are at least partially responsible for the profits. If the defendant makes such a showing of its contribution, the court must apportion the profits. n11

[4] Recovering Statutory Damages for Copyright Infringement

A copyright owner may elect to recover statutory damages (instead of actual damages and a portion of defendant's profits) "at any time before final judgment is rendered." n12 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(1) provides that such damages may be awarded for "all infringements involved in the action, with respect to any one work, ... in a sum of not less than $500 or more than $20,000 as the Court considers just."

Statutory damages may also be awarded by the court when it is difficult or impossible to accurately compute actual damages. Statutory damages may not be awarded, however, for: n13

- Any infringement of copyright in an unpublished work commenced before the effective date of its registration; or

- Any infringement of copyright commenced after first publication of the work and before the effective date of its registration unless such registration is made within three months after the first publication of the work.

[5] Recovering Prejudgment Interest in Copyright Cases

Prejudgment interest is available to plaintiffs seeking relief under the Copyright Act. n14

[6] Punitive Damages Unavailable in Federal Copyright Cases

Punitive damages are not recoverable in federal copyright suits. The Act itself, however, provides for deterrence and punishment of "willful" conduct with its provision for increased statutory damages in such cases. n15

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsRemediesDamagesActual DamagesCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsRemediesDamagesDamage ComputationCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsRemediesDamagesStatutory Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 17 U.S.C. § 502(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 17 U.S.C. § 504(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Meeropol v. Nizer, 505 F.2d 232, 238 (2d Cir. 1974) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Manufacturers Technologies, Inc. v. Cams, Inc., 728 F. Supp. 75, 80 (D. Conn. 1989) ; Fitzgerald Pub. Co. v. Baylor Pub. Co., 670 F. Supp. 1133 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) , aff'd, 862 F.2d 304 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fitzgerald Pub. Co. v. Baylor Pub. Co., 670 F. Supp. 1133, 1138 (E.D.N.Y. 1987) , aff'd, 862 F.2d 304 (2d Cir. 1988) . See also Sunset Lamp Corp. v. Alsy Corp., 749 F. Supp. 520 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Taylor v. Meirick, 712 F.2d 1112 (7th Cir. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Stevens Linen Associates, Inc. v. Mastercraft & Corp., 656 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Aitken v. Empire Constr. Co., 542 F. Supp. 252 (D. Neb. 1982) (infringer purchased architectural plans and built two separate and identical buildings rather than the agreed-upon one, the court used the original price of the plans to determine their value to the defendants in the second use).

(n9)Footnote 9. 17 U.S.C. § 504(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Id.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Baldwin Cooke Co. v. Keith Clark, Inc., 420 F. Supp. 404, 406 (N.D. Ill. 1976) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. 17 U.S.C. § 412.

(n14)Footnote 14. Kleier Advertising, Inc. v. Premier Pontiac, Inc., 921 F.2d 1036, 1041 (10th Cir. 1990) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Hays v. Sony Corp. of America, 847 F.2d 412, 415 (7th Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.46

§ 43.46 Seeking Damages Under Federal Patent Law

[1] Claiming Damages for Unauthorized Use of Patented Invention

Section 284 of Title 35 of the United States Code provides that on finding that a defendant has made, used, or sold any patented invention without authority within the United States during the term of the patent, a court must award to the owner of the patent damages "adequate to compensate for the infringement, but in no event less than a reasonable royalty for the use made of the invention by the infringer." n1

[2] Recovering Profits Lost From Patent Infringement

Most claimants try to recover "damages adequate to compensate for the infringement," i.e., damages equal to the loss suffered because of the infringement. The most common method of measuring such damages is by using the patentee's lost profits--profits on those sales that the patentee would have made but for the infringement. To recover lost profits, a claimant must prove the following: n2

- Demand for the patented product existed
- Absence of acceptable noninfringing substitutes
- Claimant's manufacturing and marketing capability to exploit the demand
- The amount of the profit claimant would have made

The first three elements combine to establish liability and resulting causation of damages; the fourth determines the amount of the award.

[3] Recovering Reasonable Royalty Damages

If a court finds for a patent owner, but there is insufficient evidence to establish actual damages, the court may use a "reasonable royalty" figure as the minimum damages that may be awarded. n3 The best measure of a reasonable royalty is usually an "established royalty," if one exists. An established royalty is one that is paid by a large enough number of consumers as to indicate that it is reasonable to those consumers in the market for the invention. n4 An established royalty might be based on royalties previously received by the patentee. It could also be established by the royalties paid for comparable inventions, as illustrated through testimony of experts or others in the industry.

[4] Recovering Hypothetical Royalty Damages

If an established royalty is not available, the court must use other evidence to arrive at a royalty that is reasonable and adequate to compensate for the infringement. n5 The amount of a reasonable royalty after infringement turns on the facts of each case, including what plaintiff's property is (and its value) and to what extent defendant has taken it. n6

[5] Increasing Damages Award Based on Willful Infringement

35 U.S.C. § 248 provides that a court may increase patent damages "up to three times the amount found or assessed." Although the statute does not specify when such an increase is appropriate, the courts have held that enhancement of damages must be based on willful infringement or bad faith. n7 The question of whether infringement is willful is one of fact, and courts must analyze the "totality of the circumstances" in each case. n8 Several factors may be considered, including:

- The extent of the infringer's knowledge of the existing patent n9
- Whether the infringer sought legal counsel regarding use of the patented invention n10
- Whether the infringer blatantly disregarded the patent holder's rights in an effort to compete n11

[6] Recovering Prejudgment Interest in Patent Cases

35 U.S.C. § 284 also provides for an award of interest and costs to a prevailing claimant. Unlike attorney's fees, the awarding of interest and costs does not require exceptional circumstances. On the contrary, prejudgment interest, from the date of infringement to the date of judgment, should "ordinarily be awarded absent some justification for withholding" it. n12 Courts should not deny interest simply because the calculation is complex or difficult. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewPatent LawRemediesGeneral OverviewPatent LawRemediesCollateral AssessmentsPrejudgment InterestPatent LawRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewPatent LawRemediesDamagesMeasures

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 35 U.S.C. § 284.

(n2)Footnote 2. Panduit Corp. v. Stahlin Bros. Fibre Works, Inc., 575 F.2d 1152 (6th Cir. 1978) ; Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Johnson & Johnson Orthopaedics, Inc., 976 F.2d 1559 (Fed. Cir. 1992) ; Standard Havens Prods., Inc. v. Gencor Indus., Inc., 953 F.2d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1992) ; Micro Motion, Inc. v. Exac Corp., 761 F. Supp 1420 (N.D. Ca. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 35 U.S.C. § 284.

(n4)Footnote 4. Hanson v. Alpine Valley Ski Area, Inc., 718 F.2d 1075, 1078 (Fed. Cir. 1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 35 U.S.C. § 284.

(n6)Footnote 6. See TWM Manufacturing Co. v. Dura Corp., 789 F.2d 895 (Fed. Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Yarway Corp. v. Eur-Control USA, Inc., 775 F.2d 268, 277 (Fed. Cir. 1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Central Soya Co. v. Geo. A. Hormel & Co., 723 F.2d 1573, 1577 (Fed. Cir. 1983) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Ryco Inc. v. Ag-Bag Corp., 857 F.2d 1418, 1428 (Fed. Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Uniroyal Inc. v. Rudkin-Wiley Corp., 939 F.2d 1540, 1546 (Fed. Cir. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Yarway Corp. v. Eur-Control USA, Inc., 775 F.2d 268, 278 (Fed. Cir. 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. General Motors Corp. v. Devex Corp., 461 U.S. 648, 657, 103 S. Ct. 2058, 76 L. Ed. 2d 211 (1983) . See also Oiness v. Walgreen Co., 88 F.3d 1025, 1033 (Fed. Cir. 1996) (trial court erred in awarding interest on entire damages award, including projected future lost profits, with regard to which losses had not yet been suffered).

(n13)Footnote 13. Lummus Indus., Inc. v. D.M.&E. Corp., 862 F.2d 267, 275 (Fed. Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.47

§ 43.47 Seeking Damages Under Federal Trademark Law

[1] Claiming Damages for Trademark Infringement

The law of trademarks is governed by various statutes and common law rulings. The most frequently used statute is the Lanham Act. n1 15 U.S.C. § 1117 sets out the monetary relief available when a trademark owner's rights are violated. Aggrieved plaintiffs may recover damages, defendant's profits, costs, and, in some cases, attorney's fees. These recoveries are cumulative, so while a finding of infringement does not guarantee monetary recovery, plaintiff may receive both its own damages and defendant's profits if recovery is allowed. n2

[2] Recovering Damages Based on Lost Earnings

Section 1117 provides that once trademark infringement is established, a plaintiff is entitled to "any damages sustained." These damages are usually those which flow from the specific wrong that the plaintiff can prove, plus lost profits plaintiff would have earned but for the infringement.

Plaintiff's lost profits are demonstrated by establishing the following: n3

- The infringer's sales volume of the infringing products
- But for the infringement, plaintiff would have made the sales

Plaintiff's damages may also be established by using royalties normally received for use of a trademark as the proper measure of damages for the trademark's misuse. This may mean looking to previous negotiations between parties or using current market rates. n4

Plaintiff may also recover "reasonable" damages to cover corrective advertising expenses incurred to counteract public confusion from defendant's infringement. n5

[3] Recovering Damages Based on Defendant's Profits

15 U.S.C. § 1117 provides that a trademark owner may recover defendant's profits if infringement is established. Two main theories are used to support an award of defendant's profits. One theory views a profits award as compensation to the trademark owner for loss of diverted sales. This means that for a plaintiff to recover, there must be competition between the parties, so that sales diversion is plausible. n6

The second theory uses profits awards as redress for the infringer's unjust enrichment and as a deterrent to further enrichment. Because sales diversion is irrelevant, competition between the parties need not exist. n7

Under either approach, the plaintiff has to prove the amount of defendant's sales of the infringing product. The burden then shifts to defendant to demonstrate costs and/or deductions.

[4] Increasing Damages Award Based on Statutory Authority

Section 1117(a) provides that the court may, according to the circumstances of the case, award "any sum above the amount found as actual damages, not exceeding three times such amount." Once actual damages are established, courts may thus increase the award, subject to the treble maximum, "as justice shall require." Section 1117(a) also allows the court, if it finds the profit-based recovery "either inadequate or excessive," to award a sum it finds "just" under the circumstances. Significantly, the statute imposes no ceiling on such recovery.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewTrademark LawInfringement ActionsRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewTrademark LawInfringement ActionsRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesTrademark LawInfringement ActionsRemediesDamagesStatutory DamagesTrademark LawInfringement ActionsRemediesDamagesTreble Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1051-1127.

(n2)Footnote 2. Playboy Enters., Inc. v. P.K. Sorren Export Co., 546 F. Supp. 987, 998 (S.D. Fla. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Id.

(n4)Footnote 4. Howard Johnson Co. v. Khimani, 892 F.2d 1512, 1519 (11th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Big O Tire Dealers v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 561 F.2d 1365, 1375 (10th Cir. 1977) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Maltina Corp. v. Cawy Bottling Co., 613 F.2d 582, 584 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Id. at 585 .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.48

§ 43.48 Seeking Damages for Employment Discrimination Under Title VII

[1] Claiming Damages For Discrimination at the Workplace

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is a broad piece of legislation designed to protect people from discrimination in the work place. The Act prohibits discrimination on the basis of "race, color, religion, sex, or national origin." n1 All persons who work for an employer with 15 or more employees for "twenty or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year," are covered by this statute. n2 This statute also covers discrimination by labor unions and employment agencies.

[2] Recovering Back Pay Under Title VII

Reinstatement and back pay are the principal equitable remedies under Title VII. n3 Back pay is viewed as an attempt to "make whole" the victim of discrimination. n4 It is calculated as the difference between "what would have been earned by the plaintiff in the employment lost through discrimination ... less what was actually earned from other employment during the period," n5 or should have been earned with reasonable diligence, "after normal expenses incurred in seeking and holding the interim employment have been deducted." n6

Under Title VII, a plaintiff is required to mitigate damages by seeking alternative comparable employment. n7 While the plaintiff bears the burden of proving a prima facie case of discrimination, n8 the burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the mitigation is not adequate.

[3] Recovering Front Pay Under Title VII

Some circuits award "front pay" as a remedy for violations of Title VII. These courts award front pay when other relief is not sufficient to make the plaintiff whole.

"Front pay" in Title VII cases has been defined as a remedy for the postjudgment effects of discrimination. It compensates the plaintiff for lost income from the date of judgment to the date the plaintiff obtains the position that would have been accepted but for the discrimination. n9

Generally, front pay is awarded when reinstatement is either not possible or practical. "Front pay may be awarded when the 'antagonism between employer and employee is so great that reinstatement is not appropriate.' " n10 But the award of front pay is generally not for an indefinite period. "Front pay is designed to make an employee whole for a reasonable future period, required for an employee to re-establish his rightful place in the job market." n11

Some decisions allowing front pay have emphasized that the courts have discretion in deciding whether or not to award front pay. One court held that failure to adequately seek out a new position to mitigate damages was sufficient justification to deny front pay. n12

[4] Recovering Compensatory and Punitive Damages Under Title VII

Plaintiffs who are the victims of intentional discrimination (as opposed to victims of unlawful "disparate impact" discrimination), and who have not already recovered damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, may recover compensatory and punitive damages. n13

A plaintiff may recover punitive damages against any party, other than a government, governmental agency, or political subdivision, if the complaining party demonstrates that the respondent engaged in a discriminatory practice or practices with malice or with reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of an aggrieved individual. n14 With respect to compensatory damages, the Act provides that such damages may not include "back pay, interest on back pay, or any type of relief authorized under section 706(g) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964." n15

Punitive damages and compensatory awards are limited to damages for "future pecuniary losses, emotional pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental anguish, loss of enjoyment of life, and other nonpecuniary losses." n16 The limitation on the amount of damages varies with the size of the employer's workforce. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawCivil Rights ActsCivil Rights Act of 1964Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964RemediesCompensatory DamagesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964RemediesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e.

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g).

(n4)Footnote 4. Robinson v. Lake Station, 630 F. Supp. 1052, 1062 (N.D. Ind. 1986) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. 1613 Appendix A (1991).

(n6)Footnote 6. Id.

(n7)Footnote 7. Sennello v. Reserve Life Ins. Co., 667 F. Supp. 1498, 1513 (S.D. Fla. 1987) , aff'd, 872 F.2d 393 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n8)Footnote 8. EEOC v. Delight Wholesale Co., 765 F. Supp. 583, 588 (W.D. Mo. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Sellers v. Delgado College, 902 F.2d 1189, 1196 (5th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 987 (1990) (quoting Floca v. Homcare Health Servs., Inc., 845 F.2d 108, 112 (5th Cir. 1988)) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Daniels v. Essex Group, Inc., 740 F. Supp 553, 562 (N.D. Ind. 1990) , aff'd, 937 F.2d 1264

(7th Cir. 1991) , (quoting Fadhl v. City & County of San Francisco, 741 F.2d 1163, 1167 (9th Cir. 1984)) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Id. (citing Dillon v. Coles, 746 F.2d 998, 1006 (3d Cir. 1984) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Sellers v. Delgado College, 902 F.2d 1189, 1196 (5th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 987 (1990) .

(n13)Footnote 13. S. Res. 1745, § 1977A, 102d Cong., 2d Sess. (1991) (enacted).

(n14)Footnote 14. Id. at § 1977A(b)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Id. at § 1977A(b)(2).

(n16)Footnote 16. Id. at § 1977A(b)(3).

(n17)Footnote 17. Id. at § 1977A(b)(3)(A)-(D).

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.49

§ 43.49 Seeking Damages for Age Discrimination Under the ADEA

[1] Claiming Damages Under the ADEA

Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA), it is unlawful for an employer, labor organization, or employment agency to discriminate against someone because of their age, n1 if the employee is over 40 years old. n2 Plaintiffs who bring civil actions for violations of these provisions are entitled to "such legal or equitable relief as will effectuate the purposes of this chapter." n3 The burden of proof on the issue of damages is on the plaintiff. n4

[2] Recovering Back Pay Under the ADEA

The standards that govern back pay under the ADEA are similar to those found in Title VII. Back pay is generally awarded in order to give full relief and courts generally do not have wide discretion to decline back pay to a prevailing plaintiff. The plaintiff is entitled to the wages the plaintiff would have received less any interim earnings. n5

The ADEA also requires that a plaintiff mitigate damages, by using reasonable efforts to obtain other employment after termination. n6

[3] Recovering Liquidated Damages Under the ADEA

The ADEA provides for more than equitable remedies, because the ADEA has incorporated parts of the Fair Labor Standards Act into its provisions. In pertinent part, the ADEA states that "liquidated damages shall be payable only in cases of willful violations of this chapter." n7

Under the ADEA, the term "liquidated damages" is not used in the same manner as in cases construing that term in contract clauses. Liquidated damages under the ADEA merely refers to the "double" damages that a plaintiff may be entitled to in certain situations. n8

Liquidated damages provide for double damages when there has been a "willful violation" of the ADEA since the employer will be liable not only for back pay, but also for an equal amount as liquidated damages. The key to being awarded liquidated damages is proof that the acts of the employer were willful.

Some courts have found that "evidence of outrageous conduct" is a predicate for liquidated damages, n9 while other courts have declined to follow this standard. n10

Clearly, there can be no liability for liquidated damages if the employer "acted negligently, inadvertently, innocently, or even if the employer was aware of the applicability of the ADEA, and acted reasonably and in good faith." n11 Equally clear is the proposition that an employee would be awarded liquidated damages if the employer had an "evil motive" in discharging an employee. n12 Certainly, if "an employer consciously and deliberately does what it knows ... the ADEA prohibits, that employer has acted willfully." n13

The Supreme Court has stated that willful conduct will be found if "the employer ... knew or showed reckless disregard for the matter of whether its conduct was prohibited by the ADEA." n14 However, an employee may even be entitled to liquidated damages when the employer acts in a way that is "indifferent to the requirements of the governing statute and acted in a purposeful deliberate and calculated fashion." n15

[4] Recovering Front Pay Under the ADEA

Front pay is awarded to compensate for lost future earnings. n16 Front pay is not a mandatory remedy, and there is considerable discretion in determining whether or not to award such relief. n17 Front pay presupposes that reinstatement is either impossible or impracticable and that the claimant has not been able to find comparable employment since being terminated. n18 The plaintiff has the burden of establishing that front pay is appropriate under the circumstances of the case. n19

[5] Recovering Punitive and Compensatory Damages Under The ADEA

The ADEA has established specific equitable and punitive remedies in the form of back pay, front pay, and liquidated damages. These remedies compensate the plaintiff for the actual loss of his or her job and punish the employer for any willful misconduct. However, under the ADEA, courts have held that a plaintiff may not recover compensatory damages for the injuries of "emotional suffering," n20"emotional distress, mental anguish, and injury to reputation." n21

At least one court has defended this position by stating, "[c]omputation of compensatory damages, could not be readily achieved in any administrative conciliation process," and that if compensatory damages of this nature were to be allowed, it would frustrate the Congressional intent to encourage conciliation. n22 Furthermore, the courts have held that a plaintiff may not be awarded punitive damages in excess of back pay and liquidated damages under the ADEA. n23 However, as in other areas of federal litigation, a party may be able to recover punitive and compensatory damages through pendent state claims.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationRemediesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationRemediesCompensatory DamagesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationRemediesLiquidated DamagesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationRemediesPunitive Damages

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 623.

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 631.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 626(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Meschino v. International Tel. & Tel. Corp., 661 F. Supp. 254, 256 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Leftwich v. Harris-Stowe State College, 702 F.2d 686 (8th Cir. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hansard v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., 865 F.2d 1461, 1468 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 842 (1989) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Benjamin v. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc., 873 F.2d 41, 43 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Kelly v. Matlack, Inc., 903 F.2d 978, 982 (3d Cir. 1990) (quoting Dreyer v. Arco Chem. Co., 801 F.2d 651, 656-658 (3d Cir. 1986)) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Lindsey v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co., 810 F.2d 1094, 1100 (11th Cir. 1987) (divided panel).

(n11)Footnote 11. Benjamin v. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc., 873 F.2d 41, 44 (2d Cir. 1989) (citing McLaughlin v. Richland Shoe Co., 486 U.S. 128, 133-135, 108 S. Ct. 1677, 100 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1988)) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Id. (citing Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston, 469 U.S. 111, 123 n.17, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (1985)) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Brown v. M&M/Mars, 883 F.2d 505, 514 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Trans World Airlines v. Thurston, 469 U.S. 111, 128, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (1985) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Benjamin v. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc., 873 F.2d 41, 44 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Hansard v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., 865 F.2d 1461, 1469 (5th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 842 (1989) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Chace v. Champion Spark Plug Co., 725 F. Supp. 868, 871 (D. Md. 1989) (citing Dominic v. Consolidated Edison Co., 822 F.2d 1249, 1257 (2d Cir. 1987)) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Nobler v. Beth Israel Medical Ctr., 715 F. Supp. 570, 573 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Linn v. Andover Newton Theological School, Inc., 874 F.2d 1, 8 (1st Cir. 1989) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Patton v. University of Chicago Hosp., 706 F. Supp. 627 (N.D. Ill 1989) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Higdon v. Concast Cable Communications, Inc., 708 F. Supp. 1584 (N.D. Ala. 1987) .

(n22)Footnote 22. McLaren v. Emory Univ., 705 F. Supp. 563, 567 (N.D. Ga. 1988) (citing Rogers v. Exxon, 550 F.2d 834, 840-841 (3d Cir. 1977)) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Espinueva v. Garrett, 895 F.2d 1164, 1165 (7th Cir. 1990) , cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1005 (1990) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.50

§ 43.50 Seeking Damages Under the Equal Pay Act

[1] Claiming Damages For Discrimination Based on Sex

The Equal Pay Act ("EPA") amended the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 ("FLSA") to address pay discrimination based on sex. The Equal Pay Act provides that an employer may not discriminate between employees on the basis of sex by paying unequal wages for equal work. n1

Either a private party or the Secretary of Labor may bring an action against an employer under the Equal Pay Act. n2 The Equal Pay Act provides for damage awards of unpaid wages, as well as an additional equal amount as liquidated damages. n3

The EPA and the Wage Hours Act, which is also a part of the FLSA, share the same remedial section. n4

[2] Recovering Back Pay Under the Equal Pay Act

Violations of the Equal Pay Act are compensable by a remedy of back pay. A party generally may bring suit for back pay within a two year period after the violation occurred. n5 However, under the EPA, if there is a willful violation by the employer, then the statute of limitations for bringing a suit for back pay is three years. n6 Under the EPA, as under the ADEA and Title VII, the back pay award will be reduced by the amount of mitigated interim earnings. n7

[3] Recovering Liquidated Damages Under the Equal Pay Act

Under the EPA, a prevailing plaintiff may be awarded liquidated damages. n8 These damages differ from liquidated damages discussed in the context of a breach of contract. Liquidated damages under the EPA merely double the amount of compensation that an EPA plaintiff has already been awarded.

While both the ADEA and EPA allow for liquidated damages, n9 it has been stated that the purpose of liquidated damages is different under the ADEA than under the EPA. Under the ADEA, many courts have found that the primary purpose of liquidated damages is to punish and deter employers from violating the Act, whereas under the FLSA, liquidated damages are used primarily to compensate for damages that are hard to calculate. n10

Under the EPA, liquidated damages are mandatory unless an employer has a good faith defense. That is, if the court finds that the employer reasonably, and in good faith, thought it was acting in a lawful manner, then liquidated damages may be denied by the court in its discretion. n11 Otherwise, the award is mandatory. n12 On the other hand, even if good faith is found, the court in its discretion may still grant, in whole or in part, a request for liquidated damages. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesLabor & Employment LawEqual PayEqual Pay ActRemediesLabor & Employment LawEqual PayRemedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(I).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. §§ 216(b) and (c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 255(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Id. See also EEOC v. First Citizens Bank, 758 F.2d 397, 401 (9th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 902 (1985) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See EEOC v. White & Son Enters., 881 F.2d 1006, 1013 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b) and 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lindsey v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co., 810 F.2d 1094, 1102 (11th Cir. 1987) (divided panel).

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 U.S.C. § 260. (This section is commonly referred to as Section 11 of the Portal-to-Portal Act.)

(n12)Footnote 12. EEOC v. Shelby County Gov't, Bd. of County Comm'rs, 707 F. Supp. 969 (W.D. Tenn. 1988) (quoting Laffey v. Northwest Airlines Inc., 567 F.2d 429, 464 (D.C. Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1086 (1978)) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Martinez v. Food City, Inc., 658 F.2d 369 (5th Cir. 1981) ; Laffey v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 567 F.2d 429 (D.C. Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1086 (1978) . See also EEOC v. Altmeyer's Home Stores, Inc., 698 F. Supp. 594 (W.D. Pa. 1988) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.51

§ 43.51 Seeking Damages Under 42 U.S.C. § 1981

[1] Claiming Damages for Civil Rights Violations Under Section 1981

Section 1981 protects against discrimination based on race and provides, in pertinent part:

[A]ll persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every State and Territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens. n1

Section 1981 protects civil rights in public and private facilities including schools, at the workplace, in housing, as well as in other areas when the violation is based on race.

Under § 1981, "[a]n individual who establishes a cause of action ... is entitled to both equitable and legal relief, including compensatory and, under certain circumstances, punitive damages." n2

[2] Recovering Compensatory Damages Under Section 1981

Under § 1981, a party may recover compensatory damages n3 for emotional pain and suffering. n4 However, to be eligible for compensatory damages for emotional or mental injuries, the plaintiff must present evidence of actual injury. n5

Courts have allowed recovery under § 1981 for emotional distress, but there must be sufficient evidence to support the award. n6

[3] Recovering Punitive Damages Under Section 1981

Federal standards govern the determination of punitive damages under Section 1981. n7 In general, a plaintiff seeking punitive damages must establish that the defendant acted maliciously, recklessly, or in gross disregard of plaintiff's rights. n8

Some courts have held in § 1981 cases that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to the amount of compensatory damages awarded. n9 However, this proportionality rule generally does not apply to nominal damages because only a very low punitive damages award could be said to bear a reasonable relationship to the amount of a nominal damages award. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)Remedies

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 1981.

(n2)Footnote 2. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency, Inc., 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 1720, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295, 301 (1975) . See also Holt v. Michigan Dep't of Corrections, 771 F. Supp. 201, 204 (W.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Gunby v. Pennsylvania Elec. Co., 840 F.2d 1108, 1121 (3d Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 492 U.S. 905 (1989) (citing Johnson v. Railway Express Agency, Inc., 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 1720, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295, 301 (1975) ; Easley v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 758 F.2d 251, 263 (8th Cir. 1985)) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Gunby v. Pennsylvania Elec. Co., 840 F.2d 1108, 1121 (3d Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 492 U.S. 905 (1989) (citing Johnson v. Railway Express Agency, Inc., 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 1720, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295, 301 (1975) ; Carter v. Duncan-Huggins, Ltd., 727 F.2d 1225, 1238 (D.C. Cir. 1984) ; Williams v. Trans-World Airlines, Inc., 660 F.2d 1267, 1272 (8th Cir. 1981)) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Id.

(n6)Footnote 6. Id. (quoting Erebia v. Chrysler Plastic Prods. Corp., 772 F.2d 1250, 1259 (6th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1015 (1986)) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Jackson v. Pool Mortg. Co., 868 F.2d 1178, 1181 (10th Cir. 1989) (citing cases).

(n8)Footnote 8. Id.

(n9)Footnote 9. Edwards v. Jewish Hosp. of St. Louis, 855 F.2d 1345, 1352 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Id.

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 43 Damages *
C. Evaluating Federal Statutory Damages

1-43 Federal Litigation Guide § 43.52

§ 43.52 Seeking Damages Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

[1] Claiming Damages for Civil Rights Violations Under Color of State Law

Section 1983 of Title 42 of the United States Code protects citizens from constitutional torts committed under the color of state law. This statute was created to serve as " 'a species of tort liability' in favor of persons who are deprived of "rights, privileges or immunities secured' to them by the Constitution." n1

Section 1983 expressly provides for civil liability, and it has been stated that any liability imposed is primarily to compensate people who have been deprived of their constitutional rights. n2 Consequently, the most common type of damages awarded under § 1983 are compensatory. Plaintiffs may also be awarded punitive and nominal damages and attorney's fees.

[2] Recovering Compensatory Damages Under § 1983

Generally, under § 1983 a party must plead and prove actual injuries to be awarded compensatory damages. n3 If actual injuries are not proven, a party may only be entitled to nominal damages. Because compensatory damages are designed to compensate for an injury caused by defendant's actions, n4 it is not proper for a court to vary the level of compensatory damages based on the abstract "value" or "importance" of the constitutional right. n5

Compensatory damages for § 1983 purposes may be divided into two categories: special damages that compensate for out of pocket losses and other monetary harms n6 and general damages that include such things as impairment of reputation, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering. n7 To be awarded compensatory damages on a § 1983 claim, a party must present adequate evidence regarding the monetary or emotional injury suffered. n8

[3] Recovering Punitive Damages Under § 1983

Punitive damages may also be recovered under § 1983, n9 even if the plaintiff has not been awarded compensatory damages but nominal damages were awarded. n10 But in order to be awarded punitive damages, the plaintiff must show that defendant acted in a way that was willful or malicious, that defendant acted with reckless or serious indifference for the rights of others, or there was bad faith or an improper motive behind the defendant's action. n11

However, even if the requisite elements for punitive damages are found, the court is not bound to award them because punitive damages are discretionary. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 253, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 1047, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252, 258 (1978) (citation omitted).

(n2)Footnote 2. Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 254, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 1047, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252, 259 (1978) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 253, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 1047, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252, 258 (1978) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Id. 435 U.S. at 254, 98 S. Ct. at 1047, 55 L. Ed. 2d at 259 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura, 477 U.S. 299, 309-310, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 2544-2545, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249, 260-261 (1986) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Id. 477 U.S. at 307, 106 S. Ct. at 2543, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 258 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Id., (quoting Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 350, 94 S. Ct. 2997, 3012, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789, 811 (1974)) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lipsett v. University of Puerto Rico, 759 F. Supp. 40, 58 (D.P.R. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Smith v. Wade, 461 U.S. 30, 35-36, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 1629, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632, 638-639 (1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Brewer v. Chauvin, 938 F.2d 860, 864 (8th Cir. 1991) ; Davis v. Locke, 936 F.2d 1208, 1214 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Smith v. Wade, 461 U.S. 30, 45-49, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 1634-1636, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632, 644-646 (1983) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Hale v. Fish, 899 F.2d 390, 404 (5th Cir. 1990) .

* Chapter 43 was rewritten in 2002 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

1 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide 44.syn

§ 44.syn Synopsis to Chapter 44: Findings and Judgments *

§ 44.01 Analyzing When Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Are Required

§ 44.02 Analyzing When Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Are Not Required

§ 44.03 Considering the Importance of Findings and Conclusions for Rulings on Significant Motions

§ 44.04 Considering the Purpose of Findings of Fact

§ 44.05 Remanding the Action on Appeal for Failure to Make Necessary Findings

§ 44.06 Timing and Procedure Under Rule 52(a)
[1] Determining Whether Proposed Findings and Conclusions Should Be Submitted
[2] Preparing Proposed Findings and Conclusions After Trial
[3] Submitting Proposed Findings and Conclusions Before Decision Rendered

§ 44.07 Preparing Proposed Findings and Conclusions for the Court
[1] Aiding the Trial Court in Making a Sound and Reasoned Decision
[2] Clarifying the Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel Effects of Judgment
[3] Assisting the Appellate Court on Review

§ 44.08 Evaluating the Appellate Court's Review of Findings and Conclusions
[1] Applying the "Clearly Erroneous" Standard
[2] Evaluating Mixed Questions of Law and Fact

§ 44.09 Considering the Court's Adoption of Proposed Findings and Conclusions

§§ 44.10 through 44.19 [Reserved]

§ 44.20 Understanding Rule 52(b) Motions
[1] Correcting the Decision of the Trial Judge
[2] Analyzing the Objectives of a Motion Under Rule 52(b)
[3] Establishing a Proper Record for the Court of Appeals

§ 44.21 Timing and Procedure of Rule 52(b) Motions

[1] Filing Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment
[2] Filing Rule 52(b) Motion Extends Time to File Appeal
[3] Filing Rule 52(b) Motion With Other Post-Trial Motions

§ 44.22 Evaluating Objectives of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Party Losing the Decision
[1] Understanding General Use of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Losing Party
[2] Moving to Alter or Clarify Erroneous Findings of Fact
[3] Moving to Alter or Clarify Erroneous Conclusions of Law
[4] Moving to Strike Extraneous Findings
[5] Moving For Adoption of Further Findings

§ 44.23 Evaluating Objectives of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Prevailing Party
[1] Moving to Amend Findings of Fact
[2] Moving to Amend Conclusions of Law

§ 44.24 Considering Factors Militating Against Use of Rule 52(b) Motions
[1] Accepting Adverse Findings That Weaken the Court's Decision
[2] Accepting Omissions in Court's Findings

§ 44.25 Determining Whether to Appeal the Sufficiency of the Evidence in Support of Factual Findings Rather Than Make a Rule 52(b) Motion
[1] Raising the Sufficiency of the Evidence on Appeal
[2] Challenging Findings on Appeal Requires Showing That Findings Are Clearly Erroneous
[3] Challenging Findings Based on Inadmissible or Incompetent Evidence
[4] Challenging Findings Based on Mistake

§ 44.26 Determining Whether to Make a Rule 52(b) Motion With Respect to Conclusions of Law

§§ 44.27 through 44.29 [Reserved]

§ 44.30 Considering the Separate Document Requirement Under Rule 58
[1] Separate Document Not Required For Orders Disposing of Certain Motions
[2] Evaluating When Time for Appeal Begins to Run Based on Entry of Judgment

§ 44.31 Using Correct Terminology to Describe Entry of Judgment

§ 44.32 Understanding Role of District Court Clerk in Entering Judgment

§ 44.33 Judgments Which Must Be Entered by Clerk Without Court Direction
[1] Judgment Following General Verdict
[2] Judgment Involving Only Sum Certain or Costs
[3] Judgment Denying All Relief

§ 44.34 District Judge May Order Clerk Not to Enter Judgment

§ 44.35 Judgments Which Must Be Approved by Court as to Form Prior to Entry by Clerk
[1] Judgment After Special Verdict or General Verdict Accompanied by Answers to Interrogatories
[2] Judgment on Decision by Court Granting Other Relief

§ 44.36 Determining Time of Entry of Judgment
[1] Timing of Entry When No Separate Document Required Under Rule 58(a)
[2] Timing of Entry When Separate Document Required Under Rule 58(a)

§ 44.37 Tolling Effect of Motion For Fees

§ 44.38 Providing Notice of Entry of Judgment
[1] Entry of Judgment Starts Time in Which to File Appeal Running
[2] Service of Notice of Entry of Judgment by Clerk
[3] Service of Notice of Entry of Judgment by Party

§ 44.39 Preparing the Judgment
[1] Contents of Judgment
[2] Drafting Considerations

§ 44.40 Analyzing Scope of Rule 59(e)

§ 44.41 Seeking Specific Relief Under Rule 59(e)

§ 44.42 Labeling of Motion Not Determinative

§ 44.43 Using Rule 59(e) Motions Only to Correct Final Judgments

§ 44.44 Timing of Filing of Motion Under Rule 59(e)
[1] Filing Rule 59(e) Motion on Time Is Critical
[2] Filing Motion Tolls Time in Which to File Appeal

§ 44.45 Moving to Alter or Amend Judgment After Jury or Court Trial
[1] Aiming Motion at Specific Errors in Judgment
[2] Moving to Vacate Judgment Under Rule 59(e)
[3] Seeking Fees Under Rule 59(e)
[4] Using Rule 59(e) to Amend Specific Terms in Otherwise Acceptable Judgment

§ 44.46 Moving to Alter or Amend Judgments Entered Prior to Trial
[1] Understanding Pretrial Application of Rule 59(e)
[2] Using Rule 59(e) to Challenge Entry of Judgment of Dismissal on Summary Judgment
[3] Using Rule 59(e) to Challenge Other Pretrial Judgments

§§ 44.47 through 44.49 [Reserved]

§ 44.50 Obtaining a Default Judgment Against Defendant for Failure to Appear or Defend
[1] Moving For Default Judgment Under Rule 55
[2] Determining Whether to Seek Entry of Default
[3] Analyzing Two-Step Process to Obtain Default Judgment

§ 44.51 Considering Threshold Issues Before Requesting Entry of Default
[1] Determining Whether Affirmative Relief Is Sought Against the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered
[2] Determining Whether the Party Has Failed to Plead or Otherwise Defend
[3] Determining Whether the Court Has Jurisdiction
[4] Determining Whether the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered is an Infant or an Incompetent Person
[5] Determining Whether the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered Is in the Military
[6] Determining Whether There Are Other Factors Which Would Tend to Make Default Unjust

§ 44.52 Obtaining Entry of Default

§ 44.53 Obtaining a Judgment on the Default
[1] Preparing an Application to the Clerk for a Default Judgment

[2] Preparing an Application to the Court for a Default Judgment
[3] Appointing a Representative for a Minor, Incompetent Person, or Person in the Military Service
[4] Giving Seven-Days Notice to Person Who Has Appeared
[5] Establishing the Amount of Damages or the Merits of a Claim

§ 44.54 Setting Aside a Default or Default Judgment
[1] Resolving Doubts in Favor of Party Seeking Relief From Default Judgment
[2] Showing of Good Cause Required
[3] Moving to Set Aside Default Judgment in Reasonable Time

§§ 44.55 through 44.59 [Reserved]

§ 44.60 Correcting Clerical Mistakes Under Rule 60(a)

§ 44.61 Comparing Rule 60(a) and Rule 60(b)

§ 44.62 Determining Whether Error Is a "Clerical Mistake"
[1] Evaluating Nature of Error
[2] Seeking Amendment of Judgment to Include Prejudgment Interest
[3] Correcting Other Clerical Mistakes Under Rule 60(a)

§ 44.63 Preparing a Motion Under Rule 60(a)
[1] Providing Notice of Motion
[2] Making Motion in a Case on Appeal

2 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers findings and judgments. The chapter first discusses practice under Rule 52(a), including the circumstances under which findings of fact and conclusions of law are required, the timing and procedure for proposing such findings, and the preparation of proposed findings and conclusions.

An in-depth discussion of the Rule 52(b) motion to alter or amend findings and conclusions includes factors to be considered when deciding whether to make the Rule 52(b) motion, the timing and procedure of the motion, and the objectives to be attained by both the party that lost the trial court decision and the party that prevailed.

Next, entry of judgment under Rule 58 is analyzed. The chapter covers such topics as the preparation of the judgment form, the formal requirements of a judgment, and which judgments are automatically entered by the clerk. Certain problems counsel may encounter under Rule 58 are also considered.

The chapter includes a review of Rule 59(e) motions to alter or amend a judgment, as well as a discussion of default judgments under Rule 55. Various prerequisites to obtaining a default judgment are highlighted.

An analysis of the mechanisms for correcting clerical mistakes in judgments concludes the chapter.

For expanded coverage of findings and judgments, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 52, Findings by the Court; Judgment on Partial Findings ; Ch. 58, Entry of Judgment ; Ch. 59, New Trials; Amendment of Judgments ; and Ch. 55, Default (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

3 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.01

§ 44.01 Analyzing When Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Are Required

In general, Rule 52(a) requires findings of fact and conclusions of law in three circumstances:

- When there is a bench trial;
- When an advisory jury is used; and n1
- When the court grants or denies an interlocutory injunction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Skoldberg v. Villani, 601 F. Supp. 981, 982 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Inverness Corp. v. Whitehall Labs., 819 F.2d 48, 50 (2d Cir. 1987) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.02

§ 44.02 Analyzing When Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Are Not Required

Under Rule 52(a)(3), the court is not required to state findings or conclusions when ruling on a motion under Rule 12 or 56 or, unless the Federal Rules provide otherwise, on any other motion. However, that does not mean that it is improper for a court to use appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law as a means to explain the basis of its rulings on motions.

One of the more controversial contexts for the granting of a motion without a statement of findings and conclusions is the grant of a summary judgment motion under Rule 56. At least one court has said it would be "ill-advised" to make findings of fact in granting a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment because they "would carry an unwarranted implication that a fact question was presented." n1 Such an implication can easily be avoided, however, by identifying the findings as setting forth the material facts that the court finds are undisputed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. A R Inc. v. Electro-Voice, Inc., 311 F.2d 508, 513 (7th Cir. 1962) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

5 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.03

§ 44.03 Considering the Importance of Findings and Conclusions for Rulings on Significant Motions

Oftentimes, a court will explain the basis for a ruling on a significant motion, such as a motion for summary judgment, even though technically it may not be required to do so. n1 Some appellate courts have urged that it would be helpful if the district court set forth its findings and conclusions. n2 Findings and conclusions assist a reviewing court to understand the basis for the decision, particularly where the ruling required the evaluation of some evidence. n3 In spite of the language of Rule 52 stating that findings and conclusions are "not required" unless specifically required by a Federal Rule, courts of appeal have remanded some decisions for the district court to make findings and conclusions where they have concluded that such an explanation by the district court is necessary for meaningful review. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsRemands

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gaines v. Haughton, 645 F.2d 761, 768 n.13 (9th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1145 (1982) . For a detailed explanation of the reasons for providing findings of fact and conclusions of law when granting a motion for summary judgment, see Garter-Bare Co. v. Munsingwear, Inc., 650 F.2d 975, 982-983 (9th Cir. 1980) (concurring opinion).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., W.L. Gore & Assocs., Inc. v. International Med. Prosthetics Research Assocs., Inc., 745 F.2d 1463, 1465-1466 (Fed. Cir. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., Societe de Conditionnement en Aluminum v. Hunter Eng'g Co., 655 F.2d 938, 942 (9th Cir. 1981) (review of a dismissal of a complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction "would have been significantly aided by findings of fact and conclusions of law"); Dolgow v. Anderson, 438 F.2d 825, 833 (2d Cir. 1971) (order granting summary judgment reversed and remanded "for the preparation of findings and conclusions in accordance with Judge Weinstein's original intention announced at the time of the ruling. ...").

(n4)Footnote 4. E.g., Fogarty v. Piper, 767 F.2d 513, 515 (8th Cir. 1985) (court of appeals remanded to district court because it was unable to review the parties' contentions on appeal from the district court's order denying a motion to compel arbitration and denying a motion to stay pending arbitration where the district court made no findings of fact and conclusions of law); In re FTC Line of Bus. Report Litig., 626 F.2d 1022, 1028 n.34 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ("Though findings are not normally required, then we may properly remand for further elucidation when review would be substantially hindered without them. ... Indeed, that has long been standard practice in this circuit."); Dolgow v. Anderson, 438 F.2d 825, 833 (2d Cir. 1971) . See also Carter v. Stanton, 405 U.S. 669, 671, 92 S. Ct. 1232, 31 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1972) .

Cf. Bartsh v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 831 F.2d 1297, 1304-1306 (7th Cir. 1987) (findings of fact in an oral opinion were adequate even though they did not resolve specific issues involving credibility, since the court discussed and resolved important factual issues).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.04

§ 44.04 Considering the Purpose of Findings of Fact

The main purposes of findings of fact are: n1

- To provide the appellate court with an adequate record for review; and
- To guarantee that the trial court carefully reviews the evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 9 Moore's Federal Practice, 3d. ed. § 52.02[1].

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.05

§ 44.05 Remanding the Action on Appeal for Failure to Make Necessary Findings

If an appeal is taken and the trial court has failed to discharge its duty by making findings in accordance with Rule 52, the appellate court will normally vacate the judgment and remand the action for appropriate findings to be made. n1

However, findings are not a jurisdictional requirement of appeal and an appellate court may decide the appeal when there is a full understanding of the question presented without the aid of findings. Accordingly, if findings are incomplete, reversal and remand are not required if the findings are sufficient to enable appellate review. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsRemands

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Security Farms v. International Bhd. of Teamsters, 124 F.3d 999, 1015-1016 (9th Cir. 1997) (failure to make findings requires reversal if full understanding of issue presented on appeal is impossible without more specific findings).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. $242,484.00, 389 F.3d 1149, 1154-1156 (11th Cir. 2004) ; Six Clinics Holding Corp., II v. Cafcomp Sys., Inc., 119 F.3d 393, 400 (6th Cir. 1997) ; Valley v. Rapides Parish Sch. Bd., 118 F.3d 1047, 1053 (5th Cir. 1997) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.06

§ 44.06 Timing and Procedure Under Rule 52(a)

[1] Determining Whether Proposed Findings and Conclusions Should Be Submitted

While the Rule 52(a) requirement of findings of fact and conclusions of law is addressed to the judge rendering a decision, counsel frequently play a role in their preparation.

In some districts, local rules of procedure require both parties to prepare proposed findings and conclusions and specify a deadline for their submission. Some districts require the parties to submit proposed findings and conclusions before trial, while other districts require the parties to submit them after trial.

In districts having no generally applicable rule, some individual judges issue standing orders to be followed in cases tried before them. Other judges have standard forms of orders governing trial procedures that they will enter in a typical case. n1 These orders may govern the submission of proposed findings and conclusions.

[2] Preparing Proposed Findings and Conclusions After Trial

As an advocacy tool, proposed findings and conclusions are likely to have their greatest impact when prepared after trial, when you know how the evidence came in, but before the judge has formulated a decision. At this point, properly prepared findings and conclusions can focus the judge's attention on the material issues of fact and law and make clear your position on those issues.

Proposed findings and conclusions can serve as a mini post-trial brief, which is particularly important where no post-trial briefs are filed. Accordingly, if there are no local rules governing the preparation of proposed findings and conclusions, you should offer to submit them.

[3] Submitting Proposed Findings and Conclusions Before Decision Rendered

Even where the local rule requires the prevailing party to submit proposed findings and conclusions at a later stage, it is not improper to request to submit proposed findings and conclusions before a decision is rendered. While it is within the power of the district court to ask the prevailing counsel to submit proposed findings after a decision has been reached, some judges routinely request findings from both sides prior to any decision.

Carefully crafted proposed findings and conclusions are critical, especially since the court may rely heavily (if not entirely) upon proposed submissions. The United States Supreme Court has held that the adoption of a party's proposed findings verbatim is not erroneous per se. The Court has held that so long as the findings are supported by the evidence, the fact that counsel is the source of the findings is of no consequence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Note that where there is no indication of deliberate disobedience, dismissal for failure to prosecute is too severe a sanction for plaintiffs' failure to file proposed findings of fact and law required by the court. Jackson v. Schoemehl, 788 F.2d 1296, 1299 (8th Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. El Paso Natural Gas Co., 376 U.S. 651, 656-657, 84 S. Ct. 1044, 12 L. Ed. 2d 12 (1964) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.07

§ 44.07 Preparing Proposed Findings and Conclusions for the Court

[1] Aiding the Trial Court in Making a Sound and Reasoned Decision

Proposed findings and conclusions prepared by counsel should aid the trial court in making a sound and reasoned decision and assist the court in preparing its own findings and conclusions. In this respect, proposed findings and conclusions may serve some of the functions of a post-trial brief, but they should not be confused with a brief and their form should vary significantly from that of a brief.

In preparing proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, the common and preferred practice is to state the proposed findings of fact first, followed by conclusions of law. Local rules may specify the format to follow and should be consulted. The proposed findings of fact generally should be numbered separately; should be concise and nonargumentative; and should avoid disparaging references and other formulations that would seem out of place if made by the judge. This format makes it easy for the judge to revise and incorporate the findings and conclusions into a decision.

[2] Clarifying the Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel Effects of Judgment

Findings and conclusions required by Rule 52(a) clarify the res judicata and collateral estoppel effects of the judgment entered by the court. In many cases the collateral estoppel effects of a judgment can have significant impact in subsequent litigation.

The Supreme Court has emphasized the strict limitations placed on appellate review of findings of fact, holding that, despite the parties' assistance, the findings are those of the district court and may not be disturbed unless clearly erroneous. The Court acknowledged that the meaning of "clearly erroneous" is not immediately apparent, but requires that the appellate court, upon review of all the evidence, be left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been made. In addition, the factfinder's choice between two reasonable interpretations of the evidence cannot be found to be clearly erroneous. n1

[3] Assisting the Appellate Court on Review

Proposed findings and conclusions should be prepared with an eye toward the possibility of appeal. Therefore, proposed findings and conclusions must be adequate to support a judgment.

The Supreme Court, in construing the obligation imposed on the district court by Rule 52(a), characterized the minimum findings required in this way:

We hold only that there must be findings, stated either in the court's opinion or separately, which are sufficient to indicate the factual basis for the ultimate conclusion. n2

Similarly, the Seventh Circuit has ruled:

We hold that substantial compliance with the fact-finding requirements of Rule 52(a) necessitates that the findings of fact on the merits include as many of the subsidiary facts as are necessary to disclose to the reviewing court the steps by which the trial court reached its ultimate conclusion on each factual issue. n3

The district court's ultimate finding of fact may be set aside if the factual findings on which it is based do not show a chain of reasoning leading to the result. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsEstoppelCollateral EstoppelCivil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsRes Judicata

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 573-575, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Kelley v. Everglades Drainage Dist., 319 U.S. 415, 422, 63 S. Ct. 1141, 87 L. Ed. 1485 (1943) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Denofre v. Transportation Ins. Rating Bureau, 532 F.2d 43, 45 (7th Cir. 1976) . See Fluor Corp. v. United States ex rel. Mosher Steel Co., 405 F.2d 823, 828-829 (9th Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 394 U.S. 1014 (1969) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Andre v. Bendix Corp., 774 F.2d 786, 800-801 (7th Cir. 1985) (district court adopted verbatim or with minor changes the bulk of plaintiff's post-trial brief).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.08

§ 44.08 Evaluating the Appellate Court's Review of Findings and Conclusions

[1] Applying the "Clearly Erroneous" Standard

When drafting proposed findings and conclusions, counsel should keep in mind the "clearly erroneous" standard of review specified in the Rule for findings of fact. The "clearly erroneous" standard applies to findings of fact "whether based on oral or other evidence." n1 Thus, the degree of deference accorded by the courts of appeal to findings of fact does not depend on the form of evidence supporting the finding. n2 Conclusions of law do not enjoy that protection and are freely reviewable by the appellate court. n3

Other things being equal, therefore, it is preferable to classify rulings as "findings of fact" rather than "conclusions of law" to increase the likelihood that the clearly erroneous standard of review would apply to a favorable ruling. It is important to keep in mind that the appellate court is not bound by the trial court's determination that a particular statement is a finding of fact rather than a conclusion of law. n4

[2] Evaluating Mixed Questions of Law and Fact

The difficulty of determining whether an issue is one of law or fact is complicated because some issues are actually mixed questions of law and fact. There is no clear consensus on the appropriate standard of review for such questions, though generally de novo review is accorded, unless the mixed question is particularly fact intensive.

Some circuits, for example, regard a finding of negligence as a finding of fact, at least insofar as the application of the "clearly erroneous" standard is concerned. n5 Other circuits classify a finding of negligence as a conclusion of law, not a finding of fact. n6 Counsel should research the law applicable in the specific district or circuit where the action is pending.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a)(6).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52, Committee Note (1983).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Mississippi Valley Generating Co., 364 U.S. 520, 526, 81 S. Ct. 294, 5 L. Ed. 2d 268 (1961) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Cleary v. United States Lines Co., 411 F.2d 1009, 1010 (2d Cir. 1969) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Sierra Fria Corp. v. Donald J. Evans, P.C., 127 F.3d 175, 183-184 (1st Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Cleary v. United States Lines Co., 411 F.2d 1009, 1010 (2d Cir. 1969) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.09

§ 44.09 Considering the Court's Adoption of Proposed Findings and Conclusions

Courts are not prohibited from adopting findings substantially or entirely as proposed by one party. n1 As the Supreme Court has stated: "Those findings, though not the product of the workings of the district judge's mind, are formally his; they are not to be rejected out-of-hand, and they will stand if supported by evidence." n2 In one notable case, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia declined to reverse, to conclude that the judge was biased, or to change the "clearly erroneous" standard of review, even though the district court copied the defendant's findings of fact and conclusions of law verbatim, including typographical errors and assessments of the witnesses' credibility. n3

While appellate courts have applied the "clearly erroneous" standard to review of findings of fact adopted verbatim from those submitted by the prevailing party, they have also said that such findings will receive special scrutiny. As one court put it in remanding a case for new findings: n4

Even though we may not summarily reject findings adopted verbatim, we must view the challenged findings and the record as a whole with a more critical eye to insure that the trial court has adequately performed its judicial function.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Andre v. Bendix Corp., 774 F.2d 786, 800 (7th Cir. 1985) ; Lektro-Vend Corp. v. Vendo Co., 660 F.2d 255, 263 (7th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 921 (1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. El Paso Natural Gas Co., 376 U.S. 651, 656, 84 S. Ct. 1044, 12 L. Ed. 2d 12 (1964) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Southern Pac. Communications Co. v. A T & T, 740 F.2d 980, 983 (D.C. Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1005 (1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Ramey Constr. Co. v. Apache Tribe of Mescalero Reservation, 616 F.2d 464, 467 (10th Cir. 1980)

.

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
A. Understanding Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(a)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 44.10 through 44.19

[Reserved]

§§ 44.10[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.20

§ 44.20 Understanding Rule 52(b) Motions

[1] Correcting the Decision of the Trial Judge

Rule 52(b) motions are used to modify a trial court's findings of fact and conclusions of law. n1 Rule 52(b) motions are used to correct decisions rendered by judges, not to change jury verdicts. A Rule 52(b) motion to amend findings is appropriate only when findings of fact and conclusions of law are required under Rule 52(a). n2

[2] Analyzing the Objectives of a Motion Under Rule 52(b)

The objectives of a motion under Rule 52(b) are to make the best possible record for appeal, to clarify ambiguous findings or conclusions in a way helpful to your client, or to revise or delete findings of fact that could have adverse collateral estoppel or res judicata effects in other proceedings. A successful motion can strengthen a favorable but weak decision or mitigate the impact of an adverse one.

[3] Establishing a Proper Record for the Court of Appeals

The principal purpose of Rule 52(b) is to enable the court of appeals to obtain a correct understanding of the factual issues determined by the trial court as a basis for its conclusions of law and the ultimate judgment entered as a result. n3 As specified in the Rule, a motion to alter or amend a trial court's findings of fact and conclusions of law must be made within 28 days of the entry of judgment. Rule 52(b) motions can be particularly important and useful in seeking to modify findings of fact, because the "clearly erroneous" standard for appellate review of fact findings, imposed by Rule 52(a), makes the chance of changing such findings on appeal substantially less than the chance of changing the trial court's conclusions of law.

The possibility that a Rule 52(b) motion may fail should not necessarily deter you from making it, particularly if there are objections to be raised to findings of fact. Counsel may not raise on appeal correctable errors in the trial court's findings, apart from insufficiency of evidence to sustain the findings, unless the error has been challenged under Rule 52(b). n4 Appellate courts must accept any factual filings of the lower court which are not "clearly erroneous." n5 Thus, if the findings are not challenged and corrected before appeal, there is little opportunity to correct them later and, in all likelihood, the appellate court will rely on the lower court's fact findings in making its determinations. A party may, of course, assert on appeal that the evidence to support the findings is insufficient, but this makes for a difficult appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a) permits the trial court to deliver its findings of fact and conclusions of law orally "may be stated on the record after the close of the evidence" rather than by written opinion. This practice is widespread. Oral findings may be less precise than those made in writing. For this reason, proposed findings will be increasingly important, as will the motion to amend findings under Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. All Hawaii Tours, Corp. v. Polynesian Cultural Ctr., 116 F.R.D. 645, 648 (D. Hawaii 1987) , aff'd and rev'd on other grounds, 855 F.2d 860 , *opinion at, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 19305, at 6 (9th Cir. 1988) (Rule 11 sanctions for frivolous Rule 52(b) motion reversed on appeal).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Carolina E. Chem. Co., 639 F. Supp. 1420, 1423 (D.S.C. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. To illustrate: "[I]n a personal injury case the trial court may make a general finding that plaintiff has suffered general damages in X amount and special damages in Y amount. If the defendants do not request a breakdown of the elements of X and Y before the findings are signed, they cannot later complain on appeal." Evans v. Suntreat Growers & Shippers, Inc., 531 F.2d 568, 570 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1976) . Accord L.B. Lindbeck v. Wyatt Mfg. Co., 324 F.2d 807, 812 (10th Cir. 1963) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.21

§ 44.21 Timing and Procedure of Rule 52(b) Motions

[1] Filing Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment

Rule 52(b) states:

On a party's motion filed no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment, the court may amend its findings--or make additional findings--and may amend the judgment accordingly. The motion may accompany a motion for new trial under Rule 59.

Rule 52(b) only applies to court-tried cases or cases where an advisory jury is used. n1 The term "findings" in Rule 52(b) includes both findings of fact and conclusions of law, and includes any findings of the advisory jury adopted by the trial judge. n2 As with other postjudgment motions, the 28-day time limit on Rule 52(b) motions is mandatory, and cannot be extended. n3

While it is permissible to make a Rule 52(b) motion before the actual entry of judgment, n4 there is some disadvantage to such an early filing because of the ambiguity that may arise as to whether a subsequent entry of judgment constitutes denial of the motion. So long as service is effected within 28 days of judgment, the motion may be filed within a reasonable time thereafter. n5

[2] Filing Rule 52(b) Motion Extends Time to File Appeal

As with other postjudgment motions, the timely service of a Rule 52(b) motion will extend the time within which to file a notice of appeal. n6

If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and pending, the court may: n7

- Defer considering the motion
- Deny the motion
- State either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue

The movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk under Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1 if the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue. n8 The district court may decide the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose. n9 If the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue, the court of appeals may remand for further proceedings but retains jurisdiction unless it expressly dismisses the appeal. If the court of appeals remands but retains jurisdiction, the parties must promptly notify the circuit clerk when the district court has decided the motion on remand. n10

[3] Filing Rule 52(b) Motion With Other Post-Trial Motions

Rule 52(b) expressly provides that a motion to alter or amend findings may be made jointly with a motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59(a). n11 It is also proper to make a Rule 52(b) motion in connection with one or more other post-trial motions, such as a motion for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(b), a motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60, and a motion to amend a judgment under Rule 59(e). n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Greenwood v. Greenwood, 234 F.2d 276, 278 (3d Cir. 1956) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Paddock, 301 F.2d 807, 810-811 (5th Cir. 1962) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); Gribble v. Harris, 625 F.2d 1173, 1174 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Calculators Hawaii, Inc. v. Brandt, Inc., 724 F.2d 1332, 1335 (9th Cir. 1983) ; United States v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc., 299 F.2d 74, 76 (5th Cir. 1962) ; Clark v. Edwards, 725 F. Supp. 285, 303 (M.D. La. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d); Keohane v. Swarco, Inc., 320 F.2d 429, 431-432 (6th Cir. 1963) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a); Gribble v. Harris, 625 F.2d 1173, 1174 n. 12 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(b); Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(b). Also, when a party requests to add new evidence to clarify the court's findings, this should be done by motion for partial new trial. Frantz Mfg. Co. v. Phenix Mfg. Co., 314 F. Supp. 99, 99-100 (E.D. Wis. 1970) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Hahn v. Becker, 551 F.2d 741, 742 (7th Cir. 1977) (Rule 50(b), Rule 59(a), and Rule 59(e) motions brought jointly).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.22

§ 44.22 Evaluating Objectives of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Party Losing the Decision

[1] Understanding General Use of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Losing Party

As a general matter, the losing party should:

- Move to alter or clarify any erroneous findings of fact or conclusions of law as to which there is any reasonable chance for relief from the trial judge and which are not challenged as a part of a motion for a new trial;

- Move to strike extraneous findings which could confuse the appeal, or prejudice other proceedings; and

- Move to have the court adopt further findings of fact or conclusions of law which would strengthen the case on appeal or which are necessary to inform the appellate court adequately of facts and issues central to the appeal.

[2] Moving to Alter or Clarify Erroneous Findings of Fact

Counsel should review whether any of the following classes of erroneous findings have been made by the trial court:

- Findings of fact based on stricken testimony or opinions of nonexperts;

- Findings of fact based on exhibits not admitted into evidence;

- Findings of fact in conflict with admissions or other discovery responses of one or more parties;

- Findings of fact contradicted by opposing counsel in opening or closing argument or in the trial brief (though arguments and briefs are not evidence, a party is bound by admissions or concessions made by its counsel);

- Findings of fact based on facts or information not in the record or judicially noticed in error;

- Findings of fact in conflict with the findings of an advisory jury (a trial judge is not required to adopt the advisory jury's findings, but such conflict provides a strong basis for a challenge); n1
- Findings of fact based on testimony recanted or impeached during cross-examination;
- Findings of fact in conflict with previous summary judgment determinations;
- Findings of fact based on evidence disallowed by pretrial motions in limine.

[3] Moving to Alter or Clarify Erroneous Conclusions of Law

Counsel should also consider whether any of the following classes of erroneous legal conclusions were adopted by the trial court:

- Conclusions of law, in diversity cases, based on federal law where state law should be applied, and vice versa;
- Conclusions of law, in diversity cases, based on application of law of the wrong state;
- Conclusions of law in conflict with instructions provided to an advisory jury;
- Conclusions of law in conflict with legal points conceded by opposing counsel in briefs or opening or closing arguments;
- Conclusions of law in conflict with previous determinations that should be given collateral estoppel effect;
- Conclusions of law in conflict with new case law handed down during the course of trial;
- Conclusions of law adopted with no associated findings of fact;
- In the case of trial after remand, conclusions of law in conflict with the determinations of the appellate court.

Although this list is far from complete, it highlights errors which have a good probability of being modified by the trial court.

[4] Moving to Strike Extraneous Findings

Extraneous findings may be just as damaging as erroneous findings. Extraneous findings may be technically correct, but they can both confuse the appellate court and prejudice other proceedings by way of collateral estoppel.

Extraneous findings may also constrain a losing party's argument on appeal or provide ammunition to an opponent. To the extent that extraneous findings prejudice a defendant by comparison, the findings should be challenged. In general, a losing party should be wary of findings of fact which, though consistent with the evidence, are not necessary to the judgment. Such findings have a way of being seized upon by the opponent and woven into a convincing factual defense of the adverse judgment.

[5] Moving For Adoption of Further Findings

In some cases, the court will have omitted findings of fact which, although relevant and justified by the evidence, might undercut the trial court's determination of various issues. This is particularly common where the trial court has simply adopted, in whole or in part, the proposed findings of the prevailing party.

In this circumstance, it is important that the losing party move under Rule 52(b) for the adoption of any omitted favorable findings which are justified by the evidence at trial. In this context, the fact that the omitted findings may not be "essential" to the judgment should not dissuade the losing party from seeking them. The losing party cannot rely on the appellate court to bring the findings into balance; an appellate court will not direct the district court to make additional findings in support of a party's position on appeal. n2 And even if the findings are plainly inadequate, the appellate court will not make further findings. n3 At best, the appellate court may determine that the findings are so inadequate that the case should be remanded. This result is unlikely, however, and it is not a sound justification for failure to seek district court adoption of findings which could improve the chances of prevailing on appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Aetna Ins. Co. v. Paddock, 301 F.2d 807, 810-811 (5th Cir. 1962) (regarding findings of advisory juries).

(n2)Footnote 2. Kennedy v. United States, 115 F.2d 624, 625 (9th Cir. 1940) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Schilling v. Schwitzer-Cummins Co., 142 F.2d 82, 83-84 (D.C. Cir. 1944) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.23

§ 44.23 Evaluating Objectives of Rule 52(b) Motions for the Prevailing Party

[1] Moving to Amend Findings of Fact

Perhaps the most important question from the standpoint of the prevailing party is whether the court has adopted findings not essential to the decision, but which could be used by the opponent on appeal. If so, the prevailing party should seek to delete the findings, or attempt to diffuse them by adding additional contrary findings. The prevailing party should not take the factual findings for granted. Although the findings may be favorable, they may be imprecise, or incorrect, and thus create a risk of reversal.

The findings of fact should be read in light of the following considerations:

- Are the findings clear, logical, and complete;
- Are additional findings necessary to inform the appellate court on all the issues on appeal;
- Are the findings internally inconsistent or inconsistent with the testimony or evidence; and
- Are the findings, although favorable, so confusing as to require further explanation to be useful to the appellate court?

Balanced against such considerations, will an unsuccessful motion highlight weaknesses in the decision or place the entire decision in an unfavorable light?

[2] Moving to Amend Conclusions of Law

The prevailing party may also seek to add any omitted conclusions of law which are supported by the evidence and which may be helpful in the event of an appeal. n1

Counsel should consider the following when deciding whether to file a motion under Rule 52(b):

- Are there favorable conclusions of law which, although correct, lack adequate foundation in factual findings? If so, consider seeking additional factual findings, unless the court is likely to deny the Rule 52(b) motion and bringing it would tip off your opponent to a weakness in your case.

- Are there any errant conclusions of law which could be deleted to protect the judgment on appeal without undercutting it? It may be best to move to delete the incorrect conclusions of law, to avoid even the appearance of error.

- Are there conclusions of law which, although not necessarily wrong, are unnecessary to the decision, and which could provide a basis for appeal by your opponent? It may be best to have them modified rather than leave an opening for attack on appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. There are practical limitations, of course, given the 10-day time limit, but the prevailing party would not ordinarily have the additional burden of preparing a motion for new trial (Rule 59(a)), or motion to amend judgment (Rule 59(e)), within those 10 days.

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.24

§ 44.24 Considering Factors Militating Against Use of Rule 52(b) Motions

[1] Accepting Adverse Findings That Weaken the Court's Decision

From the standpoint of counsel for the losing party, conclusions of law based on illogical or inconsistent findings of fact may be tainted and may make the judgment more vulnerable on appeal. In this situation, it may be better to accept the adverse findings which poison the whole decision. Similarly, where conclusions of law are mutually inconsistent, or at variance with findings of fact, there is reason to leave them alone since they can make the judgment appear incompetent and increase the likelihood of reversal.

[2] Accepting Omissions in Court's Findings

If the judge failed to make definitive findings on an issue that was not essential to render the judgment, but may play a role on appeal, a party need not voice objections so as to preserve the right to comment on the issue on appeal. n1 Instead, by keeping silent, a party preserves the ability to argue the issue broadly.

In short, if there is an issue you wish to argue on appeal, as to which the court has made no findings, do not seek findings. It is better to have no findings than to have to show that adverse findings are "clearly erroneous."

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityAdverse Determinations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a), (b). However, some courts have indicated that omissions, as distinct from errors, should be called to the attention of the trial court. See, e.g., Evans v. Suntreat Growers & Shippers, Inc., 531 F.2d 568, 571 (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1976) . Still, keeping silent appears to be allowed by the generally recognized rule that a losing party is not required to propose counter-findings. See, e.g., In re Imperial Irr. Dist., 38 F. Supp. 770, 772 (S.D. Cal. 1941) , aff'd sub nom Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. v. Imperial Irr. Dist. 136 F.2d 539 (9th Cir. 1943) , cert. denied, 321 U.S. 787 (1943) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.25

§ 44.25 Determining Whether to Appeal the Sufficiency of the Evidence in Support of Factual Findings Rather Than Make a Rule 52(b) Motion

[1] Raising the Sufficiency of the Evidence on Appeal

Rule 52(a)(5) states:

A party may later question the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the findings, whether or not the party requested findings, objected to them, moved to amend them, or moved for partial findings.

While this language appears very generous and may tempt a party to forego making a Rule 52(b) motion, challenging the sufficiency of the evidence in support of a finding is almost always a losing proposition. The trial court's findings of facts are presumptively correct. n1

[2] Challenging Findings on Appeal Requires Showing That Findings Are Clearly Erroneous

The findings may not be set aside unless they are "clearly erroneous," and the burden of proof is on the appellant. n2 The findings are "clearly erroneous" if they are not supported by substantial evidence and "the reviewing court on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed." n3 The appellate court is required to interpret the evidence and the inferences deducible therefrom in the light most favorable to the prevailing party at trial. n4 In practice, this means that findings of fact are very rarely set aside by a court of appeal. n5

[3] Challenging Findings Based on Inadmissible or Incompetent Evidence

The strategy of accepting the district court's findings, but challenging the sufficiency of the evidence to support them, may succeed in certain situations. For example, if the objectionable findings are based on inadmissible or incompetent evidence admitted through faulty rulings at trial, it may be best to forego a Rule 52(b) motion and take a chance with the appellate court. This is particularly true if the findings could be modified by the district court so as to eliminate their reliance on bad evidence, without changing their effect as to the judgment.

[4] Challenging Findings Based on Mistake

Errors in the factual findings may also be left alone at the district court level if the findings cannot reasonably be drawn from the evidence, particularly if the relevant evidence is undisputed. Here, even if there is some competent evidence to support the findings, they may be rejected as "clearly erroneous" if the appellate court is "left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed." n6

If the findings are unquestionably wrong, counsel may wish to leave the findings intact to make the poor judgment of the trial court obvious to the appellate court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsWeight & Sufficiency

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Mathis v. John Morden Buick, Inc., 136 F.3d 1153, 1154-1155 (7th Cir. 1998) ; Colorado Milling & Elevator Co. v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n of St. Louis, 350 F.2d 273, 277 (8th Cir. 1965) , cert. denied, 382 U.S. 989 (1966) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Estate of Davis v. Delo, 115 F.3d 1388, 1394-1395 (8th Cir. 1997) ; Bellevue Gardens, Inc. v. Hill, 297 F.2d 185, 187 (D.C. Cir. 1961) .

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364, 395, 68 S. Ct. 525, 92 L. Ed. 746 (1948) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Aunt Mid, Inc. v. Fjell--Oranje Lines, 458 F.2d 712, 718 (7th Cir. 1972) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 877 (1972) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 581, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364, 395, 68 S. Ct. 525, 92 L. Ed. 746 (1948) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.26

§ 44.26 Determining Whether to Make a Rule 52(b) Motion With Respect to Conclusions of Law

On appeal, conclusions of law are not protected by the "clearly erroneous" standard, as are findings of fact. n1 Additionally, the cases which hold that trial findings should not be challenged for the first time on appeal refer to findings of fact. Therefore, there is less risk in forgoing a Rule 52(b) motion as to adverse conclusions of law and relying on the appellate court to remedy those errors on appeal. But bear in mind that an adverse conclusion of law will often be based on adverse findings of fact which can and frequently should be challenged under Rule 52(b) before appeal.

There will be situations in which there is no reasonable basis to challenge the factual findings underlying a conclusion of law. In these situations, you must decide whether to attack the conclusion of law in the district court under Rule 52(b), or whether to wait for appeal. This decision depends on the likelihood that the trial court would grant the Rule 52(b) motion and requires an assessment of a number of points:

- How strong are the legal arguments that the conclusion of law is incorrect?
- Has the trial judge shown any doubt or uncertainty on the point of law?
- Has the particular legal issue been briefed sufficiently, or would an opportunity for separate briefing and argument likely bring new evidence and authorities to the trial judge's attention?
- Was the particular conclusion of law proposed by the opposing party, or was it independently adopted by the court?
- Would an alteration of the conclusion of law have the effect of reversing the judgment or substantially changing the relief offered?

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral

Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. University Hills, Inc. v. Patton, 427 F.2d 1094, 1099 (6th Cir. 1970) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
B. Moving to Alter or Amend Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Under Rule 52(b)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 44.27 through 44.29

[Reserved]

§§ 44.27[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.30

§ 44.30 Considering the Separate Document Requirement Under Rule 58

[1] Separate Document Not Required For Orders Disposing of Certain Motions

Rule 58 formerly required that a judgment was effective only when set forth on a separate document and entered as provided in Rule 79(a). The result of failure to enter judgment on a separate document under former Rule 58 was that the time for making motions under Rules 50, 52, 54(d)(2)(B), 59, and some motions under Rule 60, never began to run. n1 Moreover, the time to appeal under Appellate Rule 4(a) did not begin to run. n2

The December 2002 amendments to Rule 58 established that entry on a separate document is not required for an order disposing of the motions listed in Appellate Rule 4(a). n3 The amendments were designed to work in conjunction with Appellate Rule 4(a) to ensure that appeal time does not linger on indefinitely and to maintain the integration of the time periods set for Rules 50, 52, 54(d)(2)(B), 59, and 60 with Appellate Rule 4(a). n4

[2] Evaluating When Time for Appeal Begins to Run Based on Entry of Judgment

In general, a notice of appeal must be filed with the district court within 30 days after the judgment or order appealed from is entered. n5 If a party files any of the following motions, the time to file an appeal runs for all parties from the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion: n6

- For judgment under Rule 50(b)
- To amend or make additional findings of fact under Rule 52(b), whether or not granting the motion would alter the judgment
- For attorney's fees under Rule 54 if the district court extends the time to appeal under Rule 58
- For a new trial, or to alter or amend the judgment, under Rule 59
- For relief under Rule 60 if the motion is filed no later than 28 days after judgment is entered

Since some courts have traditionally treated such orders as those that deny a motion for new trial as a judgment, the appeal time would not start to run until the order was entered on a separate document. n7 Without attempting to address the question whether such orders are appealable, and thus judgments under Rule 54(a), the December 2002 amendment to Rule 58 provides that entry on a separate document is not required for an order disposing of the motions listed under Appellate Rule 4(a). Accordingly, entry on a separate document is not required for an order disposing of a motion: n8

- For judgment under Rule 50(b)
- To amend or make additional findings of fact under Rule 52(b)
- For attorney's fees under Rule 54
- For a new trial, or to alter or amend the judgment, under Rule 59
- For relief under Rule 60

The enumeration of motions drawn from Appellate Rule 4(a) is generalized by omitting details that are important for appeal time purposes but that would unnecessarily complicate the separate document requirement. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(a); see also Fed. R. App. P. 4(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(a)(1)-(5).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.31

§ 44.31 Using Correct Terminology to Describe Entry of Judgment

Only judgments may be entered. Judgment includes both final orders, as well as interlocutory orders that are appealable. n1

A final order is one that disposes of all disputed issues, and leaves nothing for the court to do but execute it. n2

The terminology used in entering a judgment is sometimes confusing, and court opinions often add to the confusion by interchanging the terms filing, recording, and entry of judgment. The following explanations should help to clarify some of the confusion:

- Filing refers to delivery of the judgment document itself to the clerk. n3

- Recording a judgment refers to compliance with Rule 79(b), which directs the court clerk to keep "a correct copy of every final judgment or appealable order." n4

- Entry of judgment refers to compliance with Rule 79(a), which requires the court clerk to make a note of the judgment in the official court docket. n5

Entry is sometimes casually used to refer to the actual rendition of the judgment by the court. The distinction, however, is worth noting: rendition of a judgment is a judicial act, while entry of a judgment is a ministerial act, performed by the clerk.

The practitioner should avoid referring to a court's decision or opinion as a judgment. Findings of fact and conclusions of law do not constitute a judgment, but rather are the reasoning underlying the judgment. Thus, a written opinion explaining a ruling, and concluding with the words "so ordered" does not constitute a judgment. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil

ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cooper v. Salomon Bros. Inc., 1 F.3d 82, 84-85 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1063 (1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(e).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. RR Village Ass'n v. Denver Sewer Corp., 826 F.2d 1197, 1200-1201 (2d Cir. 1987) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.32

§ 44.32 Understanding Role of District Court Clerk in Entering Judgment

It is the duty of the district court clerk to maintain a civil docket in which all judgments must be entered chronologically. Entries must show the substance of each order or judgment of the court, as well as the date of the entry. n1

The clerk must, without awaiting the court's direction, promptly prepare, sign, and enter the judgment when any of the following occur: n2

- The jury returns a general verdict
- The court awards only costs or a sum certain
- The court denies all relief

The court must promptly approve the form of the judgment, which the clerk must promptly enter when either of the following occurs: n3

- The jury returns a special verdict or a general verdict accompanied by interrogatories
- The court grants other relief not described in Rule 58(b)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(2).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.33

§ 44.33 Judgments Which Must Be Entered by Clerk Without Court Direction

[1] Judgment Following General Verdict

After a general verdict by a jury, the clerk, unless the court otherwise orders, must prepare, sign, and enter the judgment without awaiting any direction by the court. n1

Rule 58 thus operates as a standing order to clerks for prompt action, fulfilled by the clerk's completion of Official Form 31 (judgment on jury verdict) or its equivalent. n2

After a special verdict or a general verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories, the district judge must first approve the form of judgment prior to entry by the clerk. n3

In an action involving multiple parties, a judgment may be final as to some but not all parties. Generally, that will mean the clerk must await further action by the court before entering judgment, although the court may certify the judgment as final and direct the clerk to enter it if there is no just reason for delay. n4

If the court certifies a judgment as final as to some but not all parties, and directs the clerk to enter the judgment, the Rule 58(a) and Rule 79(a) requirements for entry of judgment still must be satisfied. n5

[2] Judgment Involving Only Sum Certain or Costs

If the court has decided that a party is to recover only a sum certain or costs, the clerk must promptly prepare and enter the judgment unless the court orders otherwise. n6

If both the plaintiff and the defendant have been awarded damages, it is often desirable to request that the court compute the net award and direct entry by the clerk of a single judgment.

[3] Judgment Denying All Relief

If the court has decided that all relief is to be denied, the clerk must promptly prepare and enter the judgment unless the court orders otherwise. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P 58(b)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Moore's Federal Practice Rules Pamphlet, Part 1, Form 31 (Matthew Bender).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Willhauck v. Halpin, 953 F.2d 689, 701-702 (1st Cir. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(1)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(1)(C).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.34

§ 44.34 District Judge May Order Clerk Not to Enter Judgment

The district judge retains the discretion to order the clerk not to enter a judgment. n1

For example, if the court has reserved decision on a motion for a directed verdict, n2 or a motion for a new trial has been made, n3 it may be appropriate to delay entry of judgment by the clerk until the motion is decided.

Delay of entry of judgment must be explicitly ordered by the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59.

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.35

§ 44.35 Judgments Which Must Be Approved by Court as to Form Prior to Entry by Clerk

[1] Judgment After Special Verdict or General Verdict Accompanied by Answers to Interrogatories

After a special verdict n1 or a general verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories, n2 the district judge must first approve the form of judgment prior to entry by the clerk. n3

[2] Judgment on Decision by Court Granting Other Relief

The district judge must first approve the form of judgment prior to entry by the clerk if the judgment is predicated on a decision by the court granting relief other than the following: n4

- A general verdict of a jury
- A decision by the court that a party is to recover only a sum certain or costs, or that all relief is to be denied
- A special verdict
- A general verdict accompanied by answers to interrogatories

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(2)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(2)(B).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.36

§ 44.36 Determining Time of Entry of Judgment

[1] Timing of Entry When No Separate Document Required Under Rule 58(a)

If Rule 58(a) does not require a separate document for the judgment, the judgment is entered when the notation of judgment is made in the civil docket in the manner prescribed by Rule 79(a). n1

[2] Timing of Entry When Separate Document Required Under Rule 58(a)

If Rule 58(a) requires a separate document, judgment is entered when it is entered into the civil docket pursuant to Rule 79(a) and when the earlier of these events occurs: n2

- When it is set forth on a separate document
- When 150 days have run from entry in the civil docket under Rule 79(a)

Accordingly, even if the separate document requirement is not adhered to by the court and clerk, the motion time periods set by Rules 50, 52, 54, 59, and 60 begin to run after expiration of 150 days from entry of the judgment in the civil docket as required by Rule 79(a). n3 Likewise, the time period in which to appeal begins to run after expiration of 150 days from entry of the judgment in the civil docket as required by Rule 79(a). n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(c)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58, Committee Note (2002).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(7).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

28 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.37

§ 44.37 Tolling Effect of Motion For Fees

The entry of judgment is not to be delayed in order to tax costs or award fees. n1 However, Rule 58 contains an exception to this principle. The rule provides that the court may deem a timely motion for attorney's fees to have the same tolling effect as a timely motion under Rule 59. n2

When a timely motion for attorney's fees is made under Rule 54(d)(2), the court, before a notice of appeal has been filed and has become effective, may order that the motion have the same effect under Rule 4(a)(4) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure as a timely motion under Rule 59. n3

Under Fed. R. App. P. 4(a), certain post-trial motions toll the running of the appeal period; among the specified motions are a motion to alter or amend the judgment under Rule 59, a motion for a new trial under Rule 59, and a motion for attorney's fees, provided the court extends the time for appeal under Rule 58. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(e).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(e).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.38

§ 44.38 Providing Notice of Entry of Judgment

[1] Entry of Judgment Starts Time in Which to File Appeal Running

It is the duty of the clerk to notify the parties that judgment has been entered. n1 However, it is entry of the judgment that starts the time in which to file an appeal running; notice of entry is not necessary to start the time for appeal running, and a clerk's failure to properly serve the notice of entry will not necessarily extend the deadline within which an appeal otherwise must be filed. n2

The district court may, however, reopen the time for appeal if it finds that a party entitled to notice of entry of a judgment or order did not receive notice from the clerk or any party within 21 days of its entry, and that no party would be prejudiced. n3 If the judgment is not properly entered, the time to file an appeal will not begin to run, although a party may still appeal from the judgment if no further proceedings are contemplated.

[2] Service of Notice of Entry of Judgment by Clerk

Immediately on the entry of an order or judgment, the clerk must serve a notice of the entry by mail on each party who is not in default for failure to appear, and must make a note in the docket of the mailing. Notice of the entry must be served by mail in the manner provided for in Rule 5. n4

[3] Service of Notice of Entry of Judgment by Party

Any party may serve a notice of entry of judgment in the manner provided in Rule 5 for the service of papers. n5

Appellate Rule 4(a)(6) encourages the prevailing party to serve its own notice of entry of judgment to the losing party, to minimize the possibility that a judge might reopen the time for appeal based on the losing party's non-receipt of the notice of entry. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6), Committee Note (1991).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
C. Understanding Rule 58--Entry of Judgment

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.39

§ 44.39 Preparing the Judgment

[1] Contents of Judgment

To be enforceable and appealable, a judgment generally must be set forth on a separate document. n1 However, entry on a separate document is not required for an order disposing of the motions listed in Appellate Rule 4(a). n2

A judgment should not contain a recital of pleadings, the report of a master, or the record of prior proceedings. n3 The judgment should be a self-contained document that:

- Does not contain findings or reasoning of the court
- Disposes of all claims
- Simply states which party has prevailed and what relief has been awarded, including any monetary or injunctive relief

[2] Drafting Considerations

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not mandate a particular form of judgment. Official Forms 31 (judgment on very verdict) and 32 (judgment on decision by the court), which are intended for illustration only, highlight the simple language of a proposed form of judgment. n4

The form of judgment must comply with the separate document requirement of Rule 58(a) and should include the following information: n5

- Venue
- File or docket number
- Caption
- Heading: "Judgment"

- Relief granted (e.g., damages or injunctive relief)
- Prevailing party
- Appropriate reference to interest and costs
- Date
- Signature and name of clerk

If Rule 58(a) does not require a separate document for the judgment, the judgment is entered when the notation of judgment is made in the civil docket in the manner prescribed by Rule 79(a). If Rule 58(a) does require a separate document, judgment is entered when it is entered into the civil docket pursuant to Rule 79(a) and when the earlier of these events occurs: (1) when it is set forth on a separate document; or (2) when 150 days have run from entry in the civil docket under Rule 79(a). n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(a); see also Fed. R. App. P. 4(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Moore's Federal Practice Rules Pamphlet, Part 1, Forms 31, 32 (Matthew Bender).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(c)(2).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.40

§ 44.40 Analyzing Scope of Rule 59(e)

Rule 59(e) provides, "A motion to alter or amend a judgment must be filed no later than 28 days after the entry of the judgment." n1 The 28-day period is mandatory and may not be extended by the court or by agreement of the parties. n2 The timeliness of a Rule 59(e) motion is determined by the date of service, not by the date of filing. n3

The Rule was adopted to make clear that the district court possesses the power to rectify its own mistakes in the period immediately following the entry of judgment. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The notation of a judgment in the civil docket under Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a) constitutes the entry of judgment.

(n2)Footnote 2. United States Leather, Inc. v. H & W Partnership, 60 F.3d 222, 225 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Samuels v. American Motors Sales Corp., 969 F.2d 573, 578 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Rivera v. M/T Fossarina, 840 F.2d 152, 154 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. White v. New Hampshire Dep't of Empl. Sec., 455 U.S. 445, 450, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325 (1982) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.41

§ 44.41 Seeking Specific Relief Under Rule 59(e)

Motions under Rule 59(e) are normally used to correct specific errors or problems in a judgment order. For example, relief may be sought under Rule 59(e):

- To include an award of interest, and/or to add prejudgment interest; n1
- To quantify an indefinite award of attorney's fees; n2
- To delete reference to a party improperly made subject to the judgment; n3
- To add a conclusion of law previously adopted by the court; n4
- To challenge an award of costs; or n5
- To add a previously denied claim for relief. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & AmendCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Glick v. White Motor Co., 317 F. Supp. 42, 44 (E.D. Pa. 1970) , aff'd, 458 F.2d 1287 (3d Cir. 1972) ; Continental Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Delta Corp. 425 F. Supp. 371, 372 (W.D. Okla. 1976) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Maristuen v. National States Ins. Co., 57 F.3d 673, 676-679 (8th Cir. 1995) (trial court entered judgment with unquantified award of attorney fees; appeals court held that judgment was not a final decision, was not appealable until amended, and thus motion to alter judgment was timely).

(n3)Footnote 3. Davis v. West, 71 F. Supp. 377, 378 (W.D. Mo. 1947) , aff'd, 74 F. Supp. 495, 496 (W.D. Mo.

1947) (same case).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lyman v. Remington Rand, 188 F.2d 306, 308 (2d Cir. 1951) (addition of bond requirement).

(n5)Footnote 5. Osterneck v. Ernst & Whinney, 489 U.S. 169, 173-178, 109 S. Ct. 987, 103 L. Ed. 2d 146 (1989) ; Munden v. Ultra-Alaska Assocs., 849 F.2d 383, 386-387 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hicks v. Town of Hudson, 390 F.2d 84, 87-88 (10th Cir. 1967) ; McGee v. United States, 62 F.R.D. 205, 209-210 (E.D. Pa. 1972) (change in law subsequent to judgment).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.42

§ 44.42 Labeling of Motion Not Determinative

The labels given to post-judgment motions by the parties are not controlling. Therefore, any motion filed within 28 days of judgment that challenges the validity of that judgment is a Rule 59(e) motion to alter or amend the judgment, no matter what label may have been appended to the motion by the movant. n1 On the other hand, if the motion seeks relief that is collateral or incidental to the judgment, it is not a Rule 59(e) motion to alter or amend the judgment even if the movant incorrectly labels it as such. n2

If it is uncertain whether the motion is properly brought under Rule 59(e), the motion should be filed within 28 days after entry of judgment to avoid the risk having the motion dismissed as untimely. Attempts to characterize Rule 59(e) motions as being brought under Rule 60, which imposes no time limits, to avoid the strict time requirements of Rule 59(e) have generally been ineffective. n3 The rule has also been interpreted to provide for a motion to vacate, rather than merely change, a judgment. Rule 59(e) thus encompasses postjudgment motions for "reconsideration" or "rehearing" of a determination resulting in judgment. n4 Those uses of a Rule 59(e) motion most commonly occur in situations in which the court enters judgment prior to trial, disposing of a case on the basis of a motion by one of the parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Osterneck v. Ernst & Whinney, 489 U.S. 169, 178-179, 109 S. Ct. 987, 103 L. Ed. 2d 146 (1989) (motion to add prejudgment interest is one under Rule 59(e), because the question of prejudgment interest is part of the merits of the plaintiff's claim for relief and therefore the motion challenged the validity of the judgment); St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Fair Grounds Corp., 123 F.3d 336, 339 (5th Cir. 1997) (motion seeking "new trial" after grant of summary judgment construed as Rule 59(e) motion to reconsider summary judgment); Phelps v. Hamilton, 122 F.3d 1309, 1323-1324 (10th Cir. 1997) (motion filed within 10 days that sought alteration of judgment was Rule 59(e) motion); Madison v. Vintage Petroleum, Inc. 114 F.3d 514, 516 (5th Cir. 1997) (unlabeled motion was one under Rule 59(e), because it questioned correctness of court's judgment).

(n2)Footnote 2. Budinich v. Becton Dickinson & Co., 486 U.S. 196, 199-203, 108 S. Ct. 1717, 100 L. Ed. 2d 178 (1988) (post-judgment motion for attorney's fees is not motion under Rule 59(e) and so does not suspend time to judgment on the merits); Pogor v. Makita U.S.A., Inc, 135 F.3d 384, 387-388 (6th Cir. 1998) (when judgment mentions an award, but does not fix amount of prejudgment interest, motion to assess interest is Rule 60 motion, not motion under Rule 59(e)).

(n3)Footnote 3. McConnell v. MEBA Medical & Benefits Plan, 778 F.2d 521, 526 (9th Cir. 1985) (post-trial motion filed one year after entry of judgment which sought punitive damages and prejudgment interest at a rate greater than indicated in the judgment was untimely); Elias v. Ford Motor Co., 734 F.2d 463, 465-466 (1st Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Norman v. Arkansas Dep't of Educ., 79 F.3d 748, 750 (8th Cir. 1996) (district court abused discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to alter or amend judgment, dismissing action when plaintiff pointed out in motion that court had erred in believing that plaintiff failed to comply in timely fashion with local court rules); Lapeyrouse v. Texaco, Inc., 670 F.2d 503, 505 (5th Cir. 1982) . However, a motion to reconsider the ruling on a post-trial motion is not a Rule 59(e) motion which tolls the appeal period. American Sec. Bank v. John Y. Harrison Realty, Inc., 670 F.2d 317, 322 (D.C. Cir. 1982) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.43

§ 44.43 Using Rule 59(e) Motions Only to Correct Final Judgments

Rule 59(e) applies to all final judgments, both those rendered before trial and those rendered without trial. Ordinarily, the Rule 59(e) motion made after a trial should be a narrow one, addressed to specific errors in the judgment, such as in the calculation of interest. In contrast, a substantive challenge to the jury verdict or to the judgment of the trial judge should be made by alternative motions under Rule 59(a) (new trial), Rule 50(b) (judgment as a matter of law), or Rule 52(b) (motion to alter trial judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law).

This is the recommended practice, although various courts have ruled it permissible to make a motion to vacate a post-trial judgment under Rule 59(e) and seek broad relief by such a motion, even if a motion under another rule would be appropriate. n1 These courts reason that a party is not bound at its peril to give the proper nomenclature to a motion. n2 However, because a party may bring substantive motions under Rule 59(a) or Rule 52(b) jointly with a Rule 59(e) motion, each motion should be limited to its intended purpose and there is no need to apply Rule 59(e) overbroadly. Rule 59(e) should normally be used merely to correct, but not overturn the judgment.

Rule 59(e) plays a broader and more useful role with respect to judgments rendered without trial. As to these judgments, such as a judgment on a Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss, there are limited procedural alternatives short of appeal. Rule 59(a) and Rule 50(b) do not apply and the court is not required to make findings as to which a Rule 52(b) motion could be made. n3 In the pretrial context, a Rule 59(e) motion is commonly brought to seek reconsideration or vacation of a judgment and is, therefore, employed to attack the substance of the judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & AmendCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. E.g., Steward v. Atlantic Ref. Co., 235 F.2d 570, 572 (3d Cir. 1956) (motion to vacate and reverse judgment).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gainey v. Brotherhood of Ry. & S.S. Clerks, 303 F.2d 716, 718 (3d Cir. 1962) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.44

§ 44.44 Timing of Filing of Motion Under Rule 59(e)

[1] Filing Rule 59(e) Motion on Time Is Critical

A Rule 59(e) postjudgment motion must be filed no later than 28 days after the entry of the judgment. n1 As with all deadlines under the Federal Rules, Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays are counted as part of the 28-day period. n2

The district court does not possess the power to rectify its own mistakes after the period immediately following the entry of judgment has passed, except to the extent explicitly authorized in Rule 60. As with a new trial motion under Rule 59(a) or a motion to amend findings of fact and conclusions of law under Rule 52(b), the 28-day limit on Rule 59(e) motions is mandatory, and the court has no power to grant an extension of time. n3

[2] Filing Motion Tolls Time in Which to File Appeal

The Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure provide that a notice of appeal must ordinarily be filed within 30 days of a final judgment. n4 However, the filing of certain post-decisional motions (including a timely filed Rule 59(e) postjudgment motion) will defer the start of the appeal period until disposition of the last of those motions outstanding. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(e).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a); see Hart v. Sheahan, 396 F.3d 887, 889-891 (7th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Green v. Bisby, 869 F.2d 1070, 1072 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Scola v. Boat Frances R., Inc., 618 F.2d 147, 154 (1st Cir. 1980) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A)(iv). For the text of Apellate Rule 4(a)(4)(A), see § 44.32[3.--2].

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.45

§ 44.45 Moving to Alter or Amend Judgment After Jury or Court Trial

[1] Aiming Motion at Specific Errors in Judgment

After trial, the Rule 59(e) motion should be aimed at specific errors in the judgment itself, although it is technically proper to request that the entire judgment be vacated. Substantive errors are usually addressed by a motion for a new trial (Rule 59(a)), by a motion for judgment as a matter of law in the case of a jury trial (Rule 50(b)), or by a motion to alter or amend the judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law in the case of a court trial (Rule 52(b)). In the post-trial context, therefore, the application of Rule 59(e) is rather limited. Although a party may seek to vacate a judgment under Rule 59(e), and possibly succeed, n1 other post-trial motions are specifically designed to overturn a judgment after trial and the better practice is to use Rule 59(e) to seek more limited relief. n2

[2] Moving to Vacate Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

There are situations in which a substantive Rule 59(e) motion to vacate a judgment, made without an accompanying motion for a new trial or for other relief, is appropriate. For example, when the judgment is clearly at variance with the findings of fact and conclusions of law, a new trial is unnecessary, but a motion to vacate the judgment would be appropriate.

A Rule 59(e) motion is also appropriate in a number of more common situations in which it is not necessary to vacate the entire judgment. For example, the motion may be used to delete a party named in a judgment if that party was not among the class of persons actually liable. n3 A Rule 59(e) motion may be made if the statement of damages is incorrect. n4 A Rule 59(e) motion may also be used to request that the judge modify a damage award if a comparative fault calculation by the jury is at variance with the jury's factual findings. n5

Another situation calling for a Rule 59(e) motion is one where the judgment itself incorporates findings which are unnecessary to the result and which may have some prejudicial effect in other proceedings. Under Rule 58, the judgment need not encompass findings, and they can be stricken by way of Rule 59(e) motion. The judgment should be amended pursuant to a Rule 59(e) motion if costs or interest awards are misstated or omitted.

[3] Seeking Fees Under Rule 59(e)

When there is a basis for an award of attorney's fees, but fees have been omitted from the judgment, it is proper to seek fees by Rule 59(e) motion in certain circumstances. n6 In fact, there is some authority that substantive (as opposed to equitable) claims to attorney's fees may be time-barred if they are not made within 28 days pursuant to Rule 59(e). n7

The Supreme Court has ruled that postjudgment requests for attorney's fees in civil rights cases, under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, however, are not subject to Rule 59(e), and may be brought after the Rule's filing deadline has expired. n8 The Supreme Court expressly addressed only § 1988 fee requests; consequently, it is unclear whether fees sought pursuant to other statutory provisions are likewise not subject to the time limit of Rule 59(e). For the time being, however, it is advisable to make any other attorney fee request within 28 days under Rule 59(e) to avoid denial of the request for untimeliness.

[4] Using Rule 59(e) to Amend Specific Terms in Otherwise Acceptable Judgment

Rule 59(e) is particularly useful for the party who has prevailed or is otherwise satisfied with the judgment and does not want to appeal, but finds that the judgment itself is erroneous as to some of its terms or damage calculations. Thus, if the judgment on the merits is acceptable but the terms of the judgment are flawed, it would be good practice to bring a Rule 59(e) motion, and perhaps no other post-trial motion.

Rule 59(e), at least in the post-trial setting, is best employed to fine-tune the judgment: to eliminate any variance with the court's findings or the verdict; to set the damage award precisely; n9 and to eliminate extraneous or unnecessary findings incorporated in the judgment which might complicate or prejudice future proceedings. Other post-trial motions can be used to attack the substance of the judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Continental Cas. Co. v. American Fid. & Cas. Co., 186 F. Supp. 173, 179-180 (S.D. Ill. 1959) , aff'd, 275 F.2d 381 (7th Cir. 1960) (prior judgment vacated under Rule 59(e) after it was determined to be inconsistent with evidence).

(n2)Footnote 2. Erickson Tool Co. v. Balas Collet Co., 277 F. Supp. 226, 234 (N.D. Ohio 1967) , aff'd, 404 F.2d 35, 37 (6th Cir. 1968) (plaintiff was not entitled to amendment of judgment where he sought, in effect, complete reversal of court's judgment).

(n3)Footnote 3. Davis v. West, 71 F. Supp. 377, 378 (W.D. Mo. 1947) , aff'd, 74 F. Supp. 495, 496 (W.D. Mo. 1947) (judgment against partnership modified to delete partner who had joined partnership after transaction at issue).

(n4)Footnote 4. Field v. Witt Tire Co., 200 F.2d 74, 78 (2d Cir. 1952) (court instructed as to damage standard not in effect at time of accident; award recalculated without need for new trial).

(n5)Footnote 5. Mumma v. Reading Co., 247 F. Supp. 252, 259-260 (E.D. Pa. 1965) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fase v. Seafarers Welfare & Pension Plan, 79 F.R.D. 363, 366 (E.D.N.Y. 1978) ; Hairline Creations, Inc. v. Kefalas, 664 F.2d 652, 660 (7th Cir. 1981) (fees tied to substance of judgment must be obtained under Rule 59(e), but collateral "bad faith" fees may be sought as costs under Rule 54(d)).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lichtenstein v. Lichtenstein, 55 F.R.D. 535, 537 (E.D. Pa. 1972) , rev'd on other grounds, 481 F.2d 682 (3d Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1144 (1974) (fees ordinarily must be sought within Rule 59(e) deadline, but party could thereafter amend bill of costs to seek fees on the basis of bad faith). Cf. Maristuen v. National States Ins. Co., 57 F.3d 673, 676-679 (8th Cir. 1995) (trial court entered judgment with unquantified award of attorney fees, later amended with a quantified amount; appeals court held that judgment first entered was not final, was not appealable until amended, and motion to alter judgment was thus timely).

(n8)Footnote 8. White v. New Hampshire Dep't of Empl. Sec., 455 U.S. 445, 450, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325 (1982) .

See also Buchanan v. Stanships, Inc., 485 U.S. 265, 268-269, 108 S. Ct. 1130, 99 L. Ed. 2d 289 (1988) (although postjudgment application for costs was styled as a motion to amend under Rule 59, the motion was predicated on Rule 54(d) and therefore did not involve a reconsideration within the meaning of Rule 59 and did not render a prior notice of appeal ineffective).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Maristuen v. National States Ins. Co., 57 F.3d 673, 676-679 (8th Cir. 1995) (trial court entered judgment with unquantified award of attorney fees, later amended with a quantified amount; appeals court held that judgment first entered was not final, was not appealable until amended, and motion to alter judgment was thus timely).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.46

§ 44.46 Moving to Alter or Amend Judgments Entered Prior to Trial

[1] Understanding Pretrial Application of Rule 59(e)

Rule 59(e) is not limited to judgments rendered after trial. A Rule 59(e) motion may be made with respect to any judicial determination which results in judgment, and indeed the pretrial application of Rule 59(e) may be more important than its application after trial, since the post-trial litigant may make a variety of motions to challenge a trial judgment, while a party who has been dismissed on a pretrial motion, for example, has limited procedural options short of appeal.

Substantive errors in judgments rendered on pretrial motions may be raised by a Rule 59(e) motion. n1 Rule 59(e) thus represents an alternative to an immediate appeal where judgments have been rendered without trial.

[2] Using Rule 59(e) to Challenge Entry of Judgment of Dismissal on Summary Judgment

Perhaps the most common application of Rule 59(e) where judgment has been entered without trial is to challenge the entry of judgment of dismissal, as on a summary judgment motion. A Rule 59(e) motion may be made to alter, amend, or vacate judgment entered after hearing on a motion for summary judgment. n2 Such a motion is an important procedural device with respect to summary judgment because the losing party has a very limited number of options short of appeal, unlike the losing party at trial.

Under Rule 52(a) a court is not required to issue findings of fact and conclusions of law in connection with a summary judgment motion. n3 This means that a Rule 52(b) motion to alter or amend findings and conclusions may be inappropriate to attack the summary judgment. Second, in the interest of finality of judgments, many courts have required that a challenge to entry of summary judgment be made within 28 days even if the challenge is labeled a request for "reconsideration" or "rehearing."

Thus, Rule 59(e) may afford the only opportunity to have the district court reconsider its ruling on a summary judgment motion or other pretrial motion to dismiss. Because such "reconsideration" must comply with Rule 59(e), a party wishing to have the pretrial judgment altered or set aside should be prepared to bring the motion within 28 days or run the risk that it will be denied as untimely. n4

The absence of alternative procedures explains why Rule 59(e) is often used to vacate a judgment of dismissal before trial although the text of Rule 59(e) does not expressly speak of a motion to vacate. n5 Despite the literal terms of the Rule, it is clear that a motion to vacate judgment can be made under Rule 59(e), n6 and counsel should not hesitate to do so whenever the chances for success outweigh the costs, and prompt review by the district court is preferable to appeal. The motion would be appropriate, for example, if the district court has made a clear error of law, or has misconstrued affidavits or other evidence presented by the party against whom judgment has been entered.

[3] Using Rule 59(e) to Challenge Other Pretrial Judgments

In addition to summary judgment, a Rule 59(e) motion may be made with respect to virtually all judgments or final orders entered prior to trial, or without trial. n7 For example, relief under Rule 59(e) may be sought in all the following situations:

- Upon judgment of dismissal for want of jurisdiction; n8
- Upon judgment of dismissal for failure to comply with discovery; n9
- Upon entry of order granting a preliminary injunction; n10
- Upon judgment of dismissal for failure to join indispensable parties; n11
- Upon judgment of dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted; n12 and
- Upon judgment of dismissal for failure to prosecute. n13

In the above situations, the Rule 59(e) motion challenges the substance of the district court's decision and requests the district court to reconsider the merits before an appeal is taken. The purpose of the motion is simple--to obtain a second hearing on the merits without the cost and delay of appeal. Obviously, this strategy will be most effective when the district judge has made a clear error which he or she is likely to correct, but in any case this procedure affords a quick and inexpensive alternative to appeal. Although many practitioners would simply move for rehearing, perhaps after 28 days have elapsed, this practice is fraught with risk in light of the authorities that have construed "reconsideration" motions as Rule 59(e) motions, and have regularly found them time-barred.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Continental Cas. Co., 684 F.2d 691, 693 (10th Cir. 1982) (Rule 59(e) is substantive motion, in summary judgment context).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sonnenblick-Goldman Corp. v. Nowalk, 420 F.2d 858, 859 (3d Cir. 1970) . District courts also treat motions seeking reconsideration of dismissal or summary judgment as Rule 59(e) motions. See, e.g., Tripati v. Henman, 845 F.2d 205, 206 n.1 (9th Cir. 1988) ; Northern Cheyenne Tribe v. Hodel, 842 F.2d 224, 227 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a), findings are required only as to cases tried to a court, with or without an advisory jury, and to cases where interlocutory injunctions are issued.

(n4)Footnote 4. Peake v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 717 F.2d 1016, 1019 (6th Cir. 1983) (motion to "reconsider" granting of summary judgment denied when brought 25 days after judgment).

(n5)Footnote 5. Spatz v. Nascone, 368 F. Supp. 352, 353 (W.D. Pa. 1973) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Sonnenblick-Goldman Corp. v. Nowalk, 420 F.2d 858, 859 (3d Cir. 1970) .

(n7)Footnote 7. The motion may be made as to all "judgments" as defined by Rule 54(a): all final orders and all appealable interlocutory orders.

(n8)Footnote 8. Markert v. Swift & Co., 173 F.2d 517, 519 (2d Cir. 1949) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Vac--Air, Inc. v. John Mohr & Sons, Inc., 471 F.2d 231, 234 (7th Cir. 1973) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Commonwealth of Virginia v. Tenneco, Inc., 538 F.2d 1026, 1030 (4th Cir. 1976) (temporary restraining order in nature of preliminary injunction was final order subject to Rule 59(e)).

(n11)Footnote 11. Silk v. Sandoval, 435 F.2d 1266, 1267 (1st Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 402 U.S. 1012 (1971) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Theodoropoulos v. Thompson-Starrett Co., 418 F.2d 350, 353 (2d Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 398 U.S. 905 (1970) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
D. Moving to Alter or Amend a Judgment Under Rule 59(e)

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 44.47 through 44.49

[Reserved]

§§ 44.47[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.50

§ 44.50 Obtaining a Default Judgment Against Defendant for Failure to Appear or Defend

[1] Moving For Default Judgment Under Rule 55

Rule 55 sets forth the procedure for obtaining a default or a default judgment "[w]hen a party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead or otherwise defend ...". Other rules provide for the entry of default judgment in other circumstances, such as disobedience of a court order to respond to discovery. n1

The default for which Rule 55 may be used generally occurs when the defendant has not appeared or has appeared and then disappeared. Generally, it is unlikely that a default or default judgment will be obtained, or maintained, against a party who appears to have a substantive defense against a claim but who, through some understandable error, has missed a filing deadline or otherwise run afoul of a procedural technicality.

[2] Determining Whether to Seek Entry of Default

Before seeking entry of default, counsel should first be satisfied that there is some real purpose to obtaining the default or default judgment. If the defending party is not before the court because it is insolvent or otherwise insulated against any judgment, there may be no practical reason for pursuing the claim. If the defending party is absent because there is some question regarding jurisdiction, counsel should think carefully about whether a default judgment will be of any real use in collecting a judgment or enforcing the terms of a nonmonetary judgment.

[3] Analyzing Two-Step Process to Obtain Default Judgment

Rule 55 contemplates two steps in the process of obtaining a default judgment. First is the entry of default, which is a function for the clerk. Second is the entry of a judgment by default which is done either by the clerk or by the court depending on the type of situation involved. All the procedures contemplated by Rule 55--the entry of default, the entry of a default judgment, or setting aside either or both--are matters that are discretionary with the trial court. n2 Counsel should check with the district court clerk to determine whether there are any local rules or practices that govern the entry of defaults or of default judgments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(vi).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ackra Direct Mktg. Corp. v. Fingerhut Corp., 86 F.3d 852, 856 (8th Cir. 1996) (court of appeals reviewed entry of default judgment by district court under Rule 55(b)(2) for abuse of discretion); Duling v. Markun, 231 F.2d 833, 836 (7th Cir. 1956) , cert. denied, 352 U.S. 870 (1956) ; Midland Eng'g Co. v. John A. Hall Constr. Co., 398 F. Supp. 981, 987 (N.D. Ind. 1975) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.51

§ 44.51 Considering Threshold Issues Before Requesting Entry of Default

[1] Determining Whether Affirmative Relief Is Sought Against the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered

In most cases there is little difficulty in determining whether affirmative relief is sought against the party whose default is to be entered. The affirmative relief may be a money judgment or it may be a declaration or other nonmonetary form of relief. n1

In one case, a default judgment in a contract action was denied because the individual against whom the judgment was sought had signed the contract as an agent and his agency status was indicated on the face of the contract. Because the contract was attached to the complaint, the court decided that the allegations of the complaint, including the contract, could not support a judgment against the individual. n2

Default judgments in cases involving multiple defendants may present unique problems. The Supreme Court has held that in certain circumstances it is inappropriate to enter a default judgment against one defendant when other defendants in the same case have prevailed on the merits. n3 Although the Court's opinion did not identify those specific circumstances, several courts of appeals have held that if at trial facts are established that exonerate certain defendants, and that as a matter of logic preclude the liability of another defendant, the plaintiff should be collaterally estopped from obtaining a default judgment against the other defendant, even though it failed to participate in the proceeding in which the exculpatory facts were established. n4

[2] Determining Whether the Party Has Failed to Plead or Otherwise Defend

The most typical failure that will invoke Rule 55 is the failure to file an answer or other responsive pleading to a complaint. n5 The failure to participate in discovery proceedings n6 or to participate in judicial pretrial proceedings n7 may also justify the entry of default.

But courts tend to deny requests for default based on the failure to conduct discovery or to participate in the case if the party seeking default has also been dilatory. n8 The party seeking default must be prepared to persuade the court that the conduct of the party against whom a default is sought has been sufficiently egregious to justify the extreme consequences of a default judgment. n9

[3] Determining Whether the Court Has Jurisdiction

The court, in deciding whether to grant a request for a default judgment, should determine whether it has jurisdiction. If it determines that it lacks jurisdiction, default judgment should not be entered and the action may be dismissed at least as to the party over whom there is no jurisdiction. n10

[4] Determining Whether the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered is an Infant or an Incompetent Person

Rule 55(b)(2) prohibits the clerk from entering a default judgment against an infant or incompetent person. When a minor or incompetent person is involved, the court is required to determine whether the individual is represented by a guardian or other representative and, if the individual has no such representative, the court is empowered under Rule 17(c) to appoint one. If a default judgment is entered against a minor or incompetent person who does not have a proper representative, such judgment may be set aside. n11

[5] Determining Whether the Party Whose Default Is To Be Entered Is in the Military

The Servicemembers' Civil Relief Act (SCRA) applies to any civil action or proceeding in which the defendant does not make an appearance. n12 Under the Act, before a default judgment may be entered for failure to appear, the plaintiff must file an affidavit stating whether or not the defendant is in military service and showing necessary facts to support the affidavit; or if the plaintiff is unable to determine whether or not the defendant is in military service, stating that the plaintiff is unable to determine whether or not the defendant is in military service. n13 The requirement for an affidavit can be satisfied by a statement, declaration, verification, or certificate, in writing, subscribed and certified or declared to be true under penalty of perjury. n14

If it appears that the defendant is in military service, the court may not enter a judgment until after the court appoints an attorney to represent the defendant. n15 If an attorney appointed to represent a servicemember cannot locate the servicemember, actions by the attorney in the case shall not waive any defense of the servicemember or otherwise bind the servicemember. n16

If based upon the affidavits filed, the court is unable to determine whether the defendant is in military service, the court may require the plaintiff to file a bond in an amount approved by the court before entering judgment. n17 If the defendant is later found to be in military service, the bond shall be available to indemnify the defendant against any loss or damage the defendant may suffer by reason of any judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant, should the judgment be set aside in whole or in part. n18

[6] Determining Whether There Are Other Factors Which Would Tend to Make Default Unjust

The entry of defaults or default judgments is discretionary and the court will look to all the relevant circumstances. Most judges will refuse to enter a default judgment if they believe that such action will simply provoke a motion to set aside the default judgment that would have to be granted if it were made.

Before seeking a default judgment, consider the arguments which the defaulting party might make to persuade the court that the entry of default judgment would be unjust or should be set aside. Then minimize the impact such arguments would have either by highlighting factors which favor default judgment (such as prejudice to the moving party) or by eliminating the basis of the defendant's argument.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Massa v. Jiffy Prods. Co., 240 F.2d 702, 705 (9th Cir. 1957) , cert. denied, 353 U.S. 947 (1957) ; Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Smeck, 78 F.R.D. 537, 539 (E.D. Pa. 1978) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Nishimatsu Constr. Co. v. Houston Nat'l Bank, 515 F.2d 1200, 1206 (5th Cir. 1975) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Frow v. De La Vega, 82 U.S. 552, 554, 21 L. Ed. 60 (1872) . In Frow, the plaintiff De La Vega sued 14 defendants, alleging that eight of them participated in a "joint conspiracy to defraud him" out of a parcel of real estate. One of the eight defendants was Frow. Frow failed to file a timely answer and the district court entered a pretrial default judgment against him. The case went to trial and the complaint alleging the joint conspiracy was dismissed on the merits. The Court wrote that "if the suit should be decided against the complainant on the merits, the bill will be dismissed as to all the defendants alike--the defaulter as well as the others." Id. See also Haines v. Fisher, 82 F.3d 1503, 1511 (10th Cir. 1996) (court (citing Frow v. De La Vega, 82 U.S. 552 (1872) , supra) held that when multiple defendants are alleged to be jointly liable and fewer than all defendants default, district court may not render liability determination as to defaulting parties unless and until remaining defendants are found liable on the merits).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Farzetta v. Turner & Newall, Ltd., 797 F.2d 151, 154 (3d Cir. 1986) ; Gulf Coast Fans, Inc. v. Midwest Elecs. Importers, Inc., 740 F.2d 1499, 1511-1512 (11th Cir. 1984) ; In re Uranium Antitrust Litig., 617 F.2d 1248, 1256-1258 (7th Cir. 1980) ; International Controls Corp. v. Vesco, 535 F.2d 742, 746 (2d Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1014 (1978) .

(n5)Footnote 5. E.g., Norsyn, Inc. v. Desai, 351 F.3d 825, 828-829 (8th Cir. 2003) (district court properly denied a motion for default judgment when the plaintiff had never been properly served and therefore had no obligation to answer); Meadows v. Dominican Republic, 817 F.2d 517, 521-522 (9th Cir. 1987) ; Douglas v. Metro Rental Servs., Inc., 827 F.2d 252, 255 (7th Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ackra Direct Mktg. Corp. v. Fingerhut Corp., 86 F.3d 852, 856 (8th Cir. 1996) (complete failure to respond to discovery order and other orders, failure to comply with pretrial requirements, and failure to attend final pretrial/settlement conference supported entry of default judgment against defendant); Coleman v. Smith, 814 F.2d 1142, 1145-1146 (7th Cir. 1987) (willful failure to comply with pretrial orders over a two-year period); Au Bon Pain Corp. v. Artect, Inc., 653 F.2d 61, 65 (2d Cir. 1981) ; Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hughes, 449 F.2d 51, 57 (2d Cir. 1971) , rev'd on other grounds, 409 U.S. 363 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ringgold Corp. v. Worrall, 880 F.2d 1138, 1141 (9th Cir. 1989) ; American Electronics Laboratories, Inc. v. Dopp, 369 F. Supp. 1245, 1249-1250 (D. Del. 1974) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See SEC v. North Am. Research & Dev. Corp., 59 F.R.D. 111, 116 (S.D.N.Y. 1972) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Brock v. Unique Racquetball & Health Clubs, Inc., 786 F.2d 61, 64-65 (2d Cir. 1986) (an entry of default was proper where defense counsel failed to appear during the course of trial; however, defense counsel should have been granted an opportunity to be heard concerning the judgment to be entered). See also HMG Property Invs., Inc. v. Parque Indus. Rio Canas, In c., 847 F.2d 908, 919 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Bross Utils. Serv. Corp. v. Aboubshait, 489 F. Supp. 1366, 1367-1368 (D. Conn. 1980) , aff'd, 646 F.2d 559 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Zaro v. Strauss, 167 F.2d 218, 220 (5th Cir. 1948) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(4).

(n15)Footnote 15. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(2).

(n16)Footnote 16. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(2).

(n17)Footnote 17. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(3).

(n18)Footnote 18. 50 U.S.C. App. § 521 Sec. 201(b)(3).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

41 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.52

§ 44.52 Obtaining Entry of Default

Rule 55(a) establishes simple requirements for the entry of default. The appropriate local rules should be consulted for any particular requirements they may contain. The application for the entry of default must include an affidavit or other means of proving that the party whose default is to be entered is one against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought and that such party has failed to plead or otherwise defend the action.

In simple cases the application for entry of default may be joined with an application for entry of default judgment by the clerk pursuant to Rule 55(b)(1), or the application may be made for the entry of default only.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultEntry of Default JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.53

§ 44.53 Obtaining a Judgment on the Default

[1] Preparing an Application to the Clerk for a Default Judgment

Rule 55(b)(1) sets forth the only instances in which the clerk may enter the default judgment. The application should be in the form of an affidavit or unsworn declaration under penalty of perjury and should show:

- The party against whom judgment is sought has been defaulted for failure to appear;
- The party is not a minor or an incompetent person or in the military service;
- The claim made against such party is for a sum certain or for a sum which can by computation be made certain; and
- The amount which is due under such computation.

If the foregoing facts are not set forth, the clerk should not enter a default judgment and an application to the court will have to be made.

The most difficult condition to meet is that the claim is for a sum certain. If the amount of the defendant's liability is capable of precise calculation, such as the amount of a promissory note n1 or the amount of delinquent assessment, n2 then it is a sum certain and the clerk may enter a default judgment. If, however, the amount of the defendant's liability cannot be determined and is a matter of estimation, such as the value of personal property n3 or the extent of personal injuries, n4 it is not a sum certain, and the clerk cannot enter a default judgment.

[2] Preparing an Application to the Court for a Default Judgment

The best approach in preparing an application to the court for a judgment by default is to begin with the requirements for a judgment which might be entered by the clerk. Normally, the application will be made to the court because one or more of the requirements for entry of judgment by the clerk is missing.

The elements that can be stated should be stated by affidavit or statement under penalty of perjury, just as they would be if the application were being made to the clerk. The required elements that cannot be so stated will then dictate the remainder of the application. If the clerk should have entered default judgment but did not do so for any reason, then the motion to the court should indicate that fact and be accompanied by an affidavit or statement under penalty of perjury setting forth the elements required by Rule 55(b)(1). n5

[3] Appointing a Representative for a Minor, Incompetent Person, or Person in the Military Service

One reason that an application to the court may be required is that the individual against whom judgment is sought is a minor or incompetent person or person in the military service. If the individual is an infant or incompetent, then the application for judgment should include (1) an indication that the individual is represented in the action by a proper representative who has appeared in the action or (2) an application under Rule 17(c) for the appointment of a guardian ad litem.

If the individual is in the military service, the application should include a request that the court appoint an attorney to represent the defendant.

[4] Giving Seven-Days Notice to Person Who Has Appeared

Another reason that an application to the court may be required is that the party against whom judgment by default is sought has appeared in the action. In that case the rule requires that the defaulting party be given at least seven-days notice prior to a hearing on the application. n6 If the party has appeared by a representative, the notice must go to the representative. Local rules may require longer notice.

If the party has already appeared, then the application to the court should recite clearly the reason that default judgment should be entered. Generally, the moving papers should include a complete statement of all the evidence that shows that the defaulting party has "failed to plead or otherwise defend" and all of the reasons that such failure might have caused prejudice to the moving party. If the moving party has any evidence concerning why the defaulting party may have stopped active participation after the initial appearance, it should present that evidence to the court because the court will want to know why the defaulting party has failed to continue to defend the action.

[5] Establishing the Amount of Damages or the Merits of a Claim

When the amount of damages is not liquidated, a hearing may be necessary to determine the amount of damages.

When a hearing is required, there is no right to a jury to determine the amount of damages. n7 In many situations, the best practice will be to submit the evidence as to the damage calculation by affidavit or unsworn statement under penalty of perjury, but prudence dictates inquiring as to the particular practice of the individual judge before whom the matter is to be heard. The moving party has the burden of establishing the amount of damages to the court's satisfaction even though the court has entered a default. n8

Similarly, where there is any other question to be determined by the court, best practice is to include the evidence in favor of the moving party's case in affidavits or unsworn statements under penalty of perjury accompanying the moving papers. For example, where the claim is against the United States, Rule 55(d) requires that the claimant establish the claim or right to relief by satisfactory evidence. What will constitute satisfactory evidence will depend on the circumstances of a particular case as well as the preferences of the particular judge.

When liability is joint and several, a default judgment against fewer than all defendants in an action is proper, but damages may not be decided until the liability of each defendant has been resolved. The reason for this rule is to avoid inconsistent damages awards on a single claim involving joint and several liability. n8.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultEntry of Default JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Thorpe v. Thorpe, 364 F.2d 692, 693-694 (D.C. Cir. 1966) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Raleigh Restaurant, 398 F. Supp. 496, 498 (E.D.N.Y. 1975) .

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Melichar, 56 F.R.D. 49, 50 (E.D. Wis. 1972) (personal property).

(n4)Footnote 4. Finch v. Big Chief Drilling Co., 56 F.R.D. 456, 457-458 (E.D. Tex. 1972) (personal injury). See also Combs v. Coal & Mineral Mgmt. Servs., Inc., 105 F.R.D. 472, 474-475 (D.D.C. 1984) (withdrawal liability under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, interest thereon, and liquidated damages represented sums certain, but reasonable attorney's fees did not).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Brown v. Weschler, 135 F. Supp. 622, 624 (D.D.C. 1955) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ackra Direct Mktg. Corp. v. Fingerhut Corp., 86 F.3d 852, 856 (8th Cir. 1996) (notice of motion for default judgment was properly served on defendant more than three days prior to hearing on motion).

(n7)Footnote 7. Olcott v. Delaware Flood Co., 327 F.3d 1115, 1124 (10th Cir. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 8. KPS Assocs., Inc. v. Designs by FMC, Inc., 318 F.3d 1, 17-21 (1st Cir. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 8.1. See Kidd v. Andrews, 340 F. Supp. 2d 333, 338 (W.D.N.Y. 2004) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.54

§ 44.54 Setting Aside a Default or Default Judgment

[1] Resolving Doubts in Favor of Party Seeking Relief From Default Judgment

Default judgments are not favored by the federal courts, and the courts generally resolve all doubts in favor of the party seeking relief from thedefault judgment to facilitate resolution of disputes on the merits. n1

[2] Showing of Good Cause Required

The factors which constitute good cause depend on the circumstances of the case. n1.1 The party attempting to set aside a default or default judgment should demonstrate that the "failure to plead or otherwise defend" which caused the entry of default in the first place was the result of some excusable neglect or mistake and that there is some credible basis for believing that the party has a meritorious defense to the claim being asserted. n2

Even where a meritorious defense does exist, relief from default may be denied where defendant does not sufficiently show an excuse for failing to respond. n3 In one case, the court found that the defendant's explanation that its failure to respond was due to an error in handling documents was too vague to constitute good cause. n3.1 A willful refusal to litigate the case properly may justify the court's refusal to vacate a default entry. n4

[3] Moving to Set Aside Default Judgment in Reasonable Time

The moving party must demonstrate that it has been reasonably quick to move to set aside the default and that the opposing party is unlikely to suffer any prejudice as a result of setting aside the default. n5 A party's good faith or lack thereof also may be considered as a factor. n6 If the default has led to a default judgment, such judgment may be set aside in accordance with the provisions of Rule 60(b). n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From DefaultCivil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Coon v. Grenier, 867 F.2d 73, 76 (1st Cir. 1989) ; United States v. One Parcel of Real Property with Bldgs., Appurtenances, & Improv., etc., 682 F. Supp. 694, 697 (D.R.I. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Edes v. Fredson, 344 F. Supp. 2d 209, 212-213 (D. Me. 2004) (the district court set aside an entry of default, applying a seven-factor test).

(n3)Footnote 2. A general denial, although it raises a meritorious defense in a timely answer, is insufficient to support the reopening of a default. Sony Corp. v. Elm State Electronics, Inc., 800 F.2d 317, 319-320 (2d Cir. 1986) . See also FDIC v. Francisco Inv. Corp., 873 F.2d 474, 478 (1st Cir. 1989) ; Flute, Inc. v. Rubel, 682 F. Supp. 184, 187 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Park Corp. v. Lexington Ins. Corp., 812 F.2d 894, 897 (4th Cir. 1987) (defendant simply stated that summons and complaint had somehow disappeared from its mailroom). Cf. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 (5th Cir. 1996) (defendant was never given notice that default judgment was being entered against him although he had participated in telephone conference with magistrate judge and later with opposing party's counsel, in which he made it known that he planned to contest the action).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. See Brand Scaffold Builders, Inc. v. Puerto Rico Elec. Power Auth., 364 F. Supp. 2d 50, 53-56 (D.P.R. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Davis v. Hutchins, 321 F.3d 641, 646-648 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Shepard Claims Serv., Inc. v. William Darrah & Assocs., 796 F.2d 190, 195 (6th Cir. 1986) (refusal to set aside an entry of default is an abuse of discretion where plaintiff is not prejudiced by defendant's conduct, defendant has a meritorious defense, and defendant's conduct was not willful). See Schartner v. Copeland, 59 F.R.D. 653, 656-657 (M.D. Pa. 1973) , aff'd. without opinion, 487 F.2d 1395 (3rd Cir. 1973) . Cf. INVST Fin. Group, Inc. v. Chem-Nuclear Sys., Inc., 815 F.2d 391, 398-400 (6th Cir. 1987) cert. denied sub nom. Garratt v. INVST Fin. Group, Inc., 484 U.S. 927 (1987) (default judgment for defendant's failure to file an answer is too severe where the parties have agreed to an extension of time, plaintiff would not be prejudiced by relief, and defendant presents a meritorious defense); Brock v. Unique Racquetball & Health Clubs, Inc., 786 F.2d 61, 64-65 (2d Cir. 1986) (where defense counsel's motion to vacate a default judgment was received by the court, final judgment should not have been entered before defense counsel was given an opportunity to be heard regarding the judgment; the court of appeals therefore remanded the case for such proceedings).

(n8)Footnote 6. See, e.g., McKinnon v. Kwong Wah Restaurant, 83 F.3d 498, 503-504 (1st Cir. 1996) (defendant's failure to cooperate with counsel in filing answer to complaint justified refusal to set aside default judgment because "[l]itigants must act punctually and not casually or indifferently if a judicial system is to function effectively"); Boron v. West Texas Exports, Inc., 680 F. Supp. 1532, 1535-1536 (S.D. Fla. 1988) aff'd, 869 F.2d 1500 (11th Cir. 1989) ; (default judgment entered against defendant which made "patently false representations" upheld); Kryzak v. Dresser Indus., 118 F.R.D. 12, 13-14 (D. Me. 1987) (denying default judgment where defendant failed to respond to complaint which was improperly routed through in-house counsel's office and such delay evidenced no bad faith). See also Alan Neuman Prods., Inc. v. Albright, 862 F.2d 1388, 1392 (9th Cir. 1988) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 858 (1989) .

(n9)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). See also Calumet Lumber, Inc. v. Mid-America Indus., Inc., 103 F.3d 612, 615 (7th Cir. 1997) (scope of review of district court's Rule 60(b) determination is especially narrow; reviewing court only considers whether denial of motion was abuse of discretion); American Alliance Ins. Co. v. Eagle Ins. Co., 92 F.3d 57, 61 (2d Cir. 1996) (district court abused discretion in not setting aside default judgment for "excusable neglect" when default resulted from gross negligence, rather than willfulness, party had meritorious defense, and opponent would not be prejudiced by setting aside of verdict); Gregorian v. Izvestia, 871 F.2d 1515 (9th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 891 (1989) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
E. Understanding Default Judgments Under Rule 55

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 44.55 through 44.59

[Reserved]

§§ 44.55[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
F. Understanding the Use of Rule 60(a) to Correct Clerical Mistakes in Judgments

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.60

§ 44.60 Correcting Clerical Mistakes Under Rule 60(a)

Rule 60(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorizes the federal courts to correct "clerical mistakes" in the judgment or in any part of the record. It provides:

> The court may correct a clerical mistake or a mistake arising from oversight or omission whenever one is found in a judgment, order, or other part of the record. The court may do so on motion or on its own, with or without notice. But after an appeal has been docketed in the appellate court and while it is pending, such a mistake may be corrected only with the appellate court's leave. n1

This rule can be invoked to correct mistakes in the judgment, in a jury verdict, in orders of the court or in any other part of the record. It cannot be invoked to seek reconsideration of substantive legal errors. n2 That must be done under Rule 59 or Rule 60(b). Rule 60(a), however, has been used successfully to correct a wide variety of "clerical mistakes," which are discussed more fully below.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistake

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Crowe v. Bolduc, 365 F.3d 86, 91-95 (1st Cir. 2004) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
F. Understanding the Use of Rule 60(a) to Correct Clerical Mistakes in Judgments

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.61

§ 44.61 Comparing Rule 60(a) and Rule 60(b)

If there is an error in a judgment or order, a litigant will frequently be able to obtain relief under Rule 60(a), Rule 60(b), or both. n1 Insome circumstances, Rule 60(a) may be a more advantageous choice than Rule 60(b) because there are no time restrictions for seeking the relief authorized by Rule 60(a).

Rule 60(a) specifically provides that a "clerical mistake" may be corrected "whenever one is found," either on the motion of any party or on the court's own initiative. In this respect, Rule 60(a) differs from the related provisions of Rule 60(b). Rule 60(b) authorizes relief from a judgment or order on broader grounds than Rule 60(a), but it also requires, as to some grounds for relief, that a motion for relief from the judgment or order be made within one year from entry of the judgment or order. Rule 60(a) imposes no such time limitation. n2

As a practical matter, however, the potential for using Rule 60(a) to avoid the time restriction of Rule 60(b) is limited. The reason is that relief under Rule 60(a) is available only for "clerical mistakes" and errors "arising from oversight or omission." The courts have maintained a relatively strict interpretation of this language in Rule 60(a), and most of the reported cases turn on the interpretation of this language.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistake

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See also Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(e) (motion to alter or amend judgment must be made not later than 10 days after entry of judgment).

(n2)Footnote 2. E.g., Jones & Guerrero Co. v. Sealift Pac., 650 F.2d 1072, 1074 (9th Cir. 1981) ; International Controls Corp. v. Vesco, 556 F.2d 665, 670 (2d Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1014 (1978) . If Rule 60(a) relief is sought during pendency of an appeal, however, leave of the appellate court is required.

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
F. Understanding the Use of Rule 60(a) to Correct Clerical Mistakes in Judgments

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.62

§ 44.62 Determining Whether Error Is a "Clerical Mistake"

[1] Evaluating Nature of Error

It is clear that the phrase "clerical mistakes" is not restricted literally to mistakes made by the court clerk. Instead, Rule 60(a) can be applied to mistakes which are clerical in nature, even if they were made by the court, the jury, an attorney, or a party. n1 One court has defined the term "clerical mistake" as follows:

The term "clerical mistake" does not mean that it must be made by a clerk. The phrase merely describes the type of error identified with mistakes in transcription, alteration or omission of any papers and documents which are traditionally or customarily handled or controlled by clerks but which papers or documents may be handled by others. It is a type of mistake or omission mechanical in nature which is apparent on the record and which does not involve a legal decision or judgment by an attorney. n2

Other courts have explained that Rule 60(a) concerns "what is erroneous because the thing spoken, written, or recorded is not what the person intended to speak, write or record." n3

[2] Seeking Amendment of Judgment to Include Prejudgment Interest

Several courts have held that a judgment may be amended under Rule 60(a) to include prejudgment interest if the prevailing party has an unconditional statutory right to prejudgment interest. n4 On the other hand, if an award of prejudgment interest is discretionary, or if such an award must be predicated on some legal ruling by the court, Rule 60(a) is not applicable. n5

[3] Correcting Other Clerical Mistakes Under Rule 60(a)

Rule 60(a) has also been applied to correct a wide variety of other clerical mistakes. For example, it has been used to:

- Revoke the unintended dismissal of an action; n6
- Increase an award of attorney's fees to the stipulated amount; n7
- Correct damage calculations by the court n8 or by the jury; n9

- Add class certification findings which were inadvertently omitted from a judgment; n10
- Correct an error in naming a party; n11
- Correct typographical errors; n12
- Delete prejudgment interest when the court never intended to award such interest; n13
- Correct an improper rate of interest applicable to a judgment on a promissory note; n14
- Add statutorily mandated damages for delay; n15 and
- Correct a judgment which did not specify the relief to which the prevailing parties were entitled, to recite the relief obtained. n16

Relief under Rule 60(a) has been denied, however, in numerous cases in which the moving party actually sought reconsideration of some legal ruling or other intentional decision by the court. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistake

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Pattiz v. Schwartz, 386 F.2d 300, 303 (8th Cir. 1968) ; In re Merry Queen Transfer Corp., 266 F. Supp. 605, 607 (E.D.N.Y.) , modified on other grounds, 370 F.2d 781 (2d Cir. 1967) .
The court's amendment of a judgment, shifting an award of prejudgment interest to the proper recipient, is a clerical change, properly made more than 10 days after entry of judgment. Frederick v. Mobil Oil Corp., 765 F.2d 442, 450 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Merry Queen Transfer Corp., 266 F. Supp. 605, 607 (E.D.N.Y.) , modified on other grounds, 370 F.2d 781 (2d Cir. 1967) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Chavez v. Balesh, 704 F.2d 774, 776 (5th Cir. 1983) , quoting Allied Materials Corp. v. Superior Prods. Co., 620 F.2d 224 (10th Cir. 1980) (emphasis in original). See also Panama Processes v. Cities Serv. Co., 789 F.2d 991, 993-994 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. E.g., Lee v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., 592 F.2d 39, 41-42 (2d Cir. 1979) ; Glick v. White Motor Co., 458 F.2d 1287, 1293-1294 (3d Cir. 1972) ; United States v. Faulkner, 119 F.R.D. 390, 390-391 (N.D. Ill. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. E.g., Stern v. Shouldice, 706 F.2d 742, 746-747 (6th Cir. 1983) ; Scola v. Boat Frances, R., Inc., 618 F.2d 147, 155-156 (1st Cir. 1980) . See also Chicago & N.W. Ry. Co. v. Union Packing Co., 527 F.2d 592, 592 (8th Cir. 1976) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Jones & Guerrero Co. v. Sealift Pac., 650 F.2d 1072, 1074 (9th Cir. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Dura-Wood Treating Co. v. Century Forest Indus., Inc., 694 F.2d 112, 114 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n8)Footnote 8. E.g., Chavez v. Balesh, 704 F.2d 774, 776-777 (5th Cir. 1983) ; Allied Materials Corp. v. Superior Prods. Co., 620 F.2d 224, 226 (10th Cir. 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 9. United States ex rel. Mississippi Road Supply Co. v. H.R. Morgan, Inc., 542 F.2d 262, 269 (5th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 828 (1977) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Gurule v. Wilson, 635 F.2d 782, 788-790 (10th Cir. 1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. E.g., Fluoro Elec. Corp. v. Branford Assoc., 489 F.2d 320, 323-326 (2d Cir. 1973) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Esquire Radio & Elecs., Inc. v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 804 F.2d 787, 795-796 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Blanton v. Anzalone, 813 F.2d 1574, 1577 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 14. United States v. Griffin, 782 F.2d 1393, 1397 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Aloe Coal Co. v. Clark Equip. Co., 816 F.2d 110, 112-113 (3d Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 853 (1987) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Soo Line R.R. v. Escanaba & Lake Superior R.R., 840 F.2d 546, 549 (7th Cir. 1988) . See also McNickle v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 888 F.2d 678, 681-682 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n17)Footnote 17. E.g., Security Mut. Cas. Co. v. Century Cas. Co., 621 F.2d 1062, 1065 (10th Cir. 1980) ; Scola v. Boat Frances, R., Inc., 618 F.2d 147, 155-156 (1st Cir. 1980) ; Warner v. City of Bay St. Louis, 526 F.2d 1211, 1212 (5th Cir. 1976) .

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 44 Findings and Judgments *
F. Understanding the Use of Rule 60(a) to Correct Clerical Mistakes in Judgments

4-44 Federal Litigation Guide § 44.63

§ 44.63 Preparing a Motion Under Rule 60(a)

[1] Providing Notice of Motion

Correction of clerical mistakes pursuant to Rule 60(a) may be made on the motion of any party, after such notice as the court orders. It can also be made on the court's own initiative, although most courts would give notice to the parties before doing so.

Generally, a Rule 60(a) motion will be made according to the regular motion procedures of the district court, as set forth in its local rules. There is no time limitation for a motion under Rule 60(a). n1

The motion should be based on facts that convince the court that the error is "clerical" in nature, or that correction is necessary to conform the judgment, order, or other part of the record to what its author intended. In some cases, this may require the submission of affidavits as well as legal argument, and in an unusual case the lawyer might even ask the court for leave to present oral testimony. The key point is to avoid asking the court to reconsider any substantive legal ruling or finding of fact because that is impermissible under Rule 60(a).

[2] Making Motion in a Case on Appeal

If a motion under Rule 60(a) is to be made in a case that is on appeal, and an appeal has been docketed in the appellate court, the moving party must obtain leave from the appellate court. n2 Normally this will be done by a written motion in accordance with the appellate court's local rules.

After the appeal has been decided, a Rule 60(a) motion may be made on remand, even if the subject of the motion was not previously raised in the district court or on appeal. n3 If the judgment has been affirmed on appeal, however, relief under Rule 60(a) may not be available, at least not without leave from the appellate court. n4

If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and pending, the court may: n5

- Defer considering the motion
- Deny the motion

- State either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue

The movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk under Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1 if the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue. n6 The district court may decide the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose. n7 If the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue, the court of appeals may remand for further proceedings but retains jurisdiction unless it expressly dismisses the appeal. If the court of appeals remands but retains jurisdiction, the parties must promptly notify the circuit clerk when the district court has decided the motion on remand. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistake

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Frederick v. Mobil Oil Corp., 765 F.2d 442, 450 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Dura-Wood Treating Co. v. Century Forest Indus., Inc., 694 F.2d 112, 114 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Id., at 114 n.2 . Note, however, that a judgment may be amended after an appeal and affirmance where the court of appeals did not consider the issue amended and the amendment reflects the court's original intention. Panama Processes v. Cities Serv. Co., 789 F.2d 991, 994 (2d Cir. 1986) ; Cannon v. Loyola Univ. of Chicago, 116 F.R.D. 243, 243-244 (N.D. Ill. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(b); Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(b).

* Chapter 44 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide 45.syn

§ 45.syn Synopsis to Chapter 45: Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *

§ 45.01 Asserting Pre-Verdict Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law Under Rule 50(a) to Preserve Right to Make Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

§ 45.02 Judgment as a Matter of Law Replaces Directed Verdict and Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

§ 45.03 Most Courts Take Liberal Approach to Sufficiency of Pre-Verdict Motion

§ 45.04 Liberal Approach Does Not Extend to Complete Failure to Assert Motion for Judgment at Trial

§ 45.05 Failing to Object to Pre-Verdict JMOL Waives Defect

§ 45.06 Renewing Pre-Verdict Motion to Obtain Judgment and to Preserve Issue of Sufficiency of Evidence for Appellate Review

§ 45.07 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 50(b)
[1] Filing Renewed Motion Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment
[2] Court May Not Extend Time to File Renewed Motion

§ 45.08 Making Rule 50(b) Motion Orally in Open Court

§ 45.09 Evaluating the Form and Content of Rule 50(b) Motions
[1] Specifying Grounds for Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)
[2] Rule 50(b) Motion Must Assert Same Grounds as Pre-Verdict Motion Under Rule 50(a)
[3] Technical Precision Not Required
[4] Defect Subject to Waiver

§ 45.10 Joining Alternative Motion for New Trial Under Rule 59(a) With Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

§ 45.11 Determination of Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

§ 45.12 Granting New Trial Instead of Judgment as Matter of Law

§ 45.13 If Court Grants Renewed Motion, Nonmovant May Move for New Trial Within 28 Days of Entry of

Judgment as Matter of Law

§ 45.14 Evaluating the Standard for Granting a Renewed Judgment Under Rule 50(b)

§ 45.15 Same Standard Governs Pre-Verdict and Post-Verdict Consideration of Motion and Appellate Review of Trial Court Ruling on Motion

§ 45.16 Grant or Denial of Renewed Motion Is Final Appealable Judgment

§§ 45.17 through 45.19 [Reserved]

§ 45.20 Considering Scope of Rule 59
[1] Three Types of Procedures Relating to New Trial
[2] Grant of Motion Is Within Trial Court's Discretion
[3] Court May Order New Trial on Its Own Motion
[4] New Trial Must Be Jury Trial If Original Trial Was Jury Trial

§ 45.21 Limiting New Trial to Certain Parties
[1] Only Injured Party May Get New Trial
[2] Court May Limit New Trial to Some But Not All Injured Parties
[3] All Parties Must Receive New Trial When Liability Is Interrelated

§ 45.22 Obtaining Partial New Trial
[1] Jury Trials
[2] Nonjury Trials
[3] Grounds for Partial New Trial

§ 45.23 Staying Enforcement of Judgment

§ 45.24 Considering Impact of Harmless Error Rule
[1] No New Trial Unless Error Affects Substantial Right
[2] Harmless Error Will Not Be Reversed
[3] Case by Case Review for Harmless Error
[4] Burden of Persuasion Is on Movant

§ 45.25 Distinguishing Rule 59 Motion for New Trial From Rule 50 Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law
[1] Rule 50 Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law Made Before Case Goes to Jury
[2] New Trial May Be Granted When Rule 50 Motion Is Renewed
[3] Rule 50(b) Standard More Strict Than Rule 59

§ 45.26 Objecting to Preserve Error
[1] Counsel Must Object During Trial
[2] Making Objections Specific and Distinct

§ 45.27 Filing Timely Motion for New Trial
[1] Filing Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment
[2] Computing 28-Day Period
[3] Notation of Judgment in the Civil Docket Constitutes Entry of Final Judgment

§ 45.28 Amending After 28-Day Period

§ 45.29 Motion May Be Made Before Entry of Judgment

§ 45.30 Motion Must Be Made From Final Judgment

§ 45.31 Converting Motion for New Trial to Motion for Rule 60(b) Relief

§ 45.32 Moving for New Trial Based on Due Process

§ 45.33 Moving for New Trial When Verdict Against Weight of Evidence
[1] Jury's Verdict Must Be Seriously Erroneous
[2] Compared With Standard for Judgment as Matter of Law
[3] Judge May Not Assess Credibility of Witnesses

§ 45.34 Moving for New Trial Based on Inadequate or Excessive Damages
[1] Possible Remedies for Jury Error in Awarding Damages
[2] Determining Whether Award Is Excessive
[3] Partial New Trial May Be Appropriate

§ 45.35 Moving for New Trial Based on Inconsistent Verdicts and Special Interrogatories
[1] Distinguishing Special Verdict From General Verdict With Special Interrogatories
[2] Dealing With Inconsistencies in Verdicts
[3] Court Must Attempt to Reconcile Inconsistent Answers Before Ordering New Trial
[4] Only Partial New Trial May Be Required to Remedy Inconsistencies

§ 45.36 Improper Jury Instructions
[1] Improper Instructions May Be Grounds for New Trial
[2] No New Trial When Erroneous Jury Instructions Constitute Harmless Error

§ 45.37 Improper Submission to or Withdrawal of Issues From Jury

§ 45.38 Erroneous Evidentiary Rulings
[1] May Be Grounds for New Trial
[2] New Trial Not Warranted If Erroneous Evidentiary Ruling Is Harmless Error
[3] Erroneous Admission of Evidence in Nonjury Trials Is Usually Harmless

§ 45.39 Newly Discovered Evidence
[1] Motion May Be Made Under Rule 59(b) or Rule 60(b)
[2] Evidence Must Relate to Facts Existing at Time of Trial

§ 45.40 Denial of Jury Trial

§ 45.41 Judge's Failure to Make Findings and Conclusions in Bench Trial
[1] New Trial Not Warranted in Most Instances
[2] Remand for Additional Evidence or New Trial

§ 45.42 Inability of Judge to Proceed
[1] Successor Judge May Proceed With Trial
[2] Successor Judge Has Discretion to Order New Trial
[3] Grounds for Granting New Trial
[4] Waiver of New Trial

§ 45.43 Errors in Jury Selection, or Bias of Jurors
[1] Jury Selection
[2] Juror Bias or Disqualification May Be Grounds for New Trial

§ 45.44 Improper Juror Motivation
[1] Jury Prejudice, Compromise, or Coercion May Be Grounds for New Trial
[2] Juror Access to Inappropriate Information May Be Grounds for New Trial
[3] Outside Influence or Independent Juror Investigation May Be Grounds for New Trial
[4] Proof Is Difficult Because Jurors May Not Impeach Verdict

§ 45.45 Misconduct of Trial Judge
[1] Misconduct of Judge May Be Grounds for New Trial
[2] Determining Whether Misconduct of Judge Is Harmless Error

§ 45.46 Misconduct of Attorneys, Witnesses, and Parties
[1] Misconduct of Attorneys
[2] New Trial Based on Counsel's Conduct Solely Within Discretion of Court
[3] Perjury or Prejudicial Remarks by Witness May Be Grounds for New Trial
[4] Conduct of Party During Trial Is Rarely Grounds for New Trial

§ 45.47 Content and Form of Motion for New Trial
[1] State With Particularity Grounds for Motion
[2] Make Motion in Writing Unless Made During Trial

§ 45.48 Preparing Supporting Affidavits
[1] Supporting Affidavits Must Be Filed With Motion
[2] Court May Permit Reply Affidavits

§ 45.49 Joining Motion for New Trial With Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law
[1] Time for Filing Joined Motions
[2] Trial Court's Possible Rulings on Joined Motions
[3] When Court Grants Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law, Court Must Rule Conditionally on Joined Motion for New Trial

§ 45.50 CHECKLIST: Moving for New Trial

§ 45.51 Opposing Motion for New Trial

§ 45.52 Filing Opposing Affidavits
[1] Must Be Filed Up to 14 Days After Service of Motion
[2] Extension to Respond Governed by Rule 6(b)

§ 45.53 Court May Employ Remittitur as Alternative to New Trial When Damages Are Excessive
[1] Choosing Between Reduction of Excessive Verdict and New Trial
[2] Cases in Which Remittitur Is Appropriate
[3] Distinction Between Verdict and Amount Remitted
[4] New Trial Required If Plaintiff Rejects Remittitur
[5] Determination of Amount of Remittitur
[6] Plaintiff's Acceptance of Remittitur Limits Appeal

§ 45.54 Employing Additur Is Unlikely as Alternative to New Trial When Damages Are Inadequate
[1] Additur Generally Not Permitted
[2] Additur May Be Permissible When There Is No Right to Jury Trial
[3] Additur May Be Permissible When Statute Requires Nominal Damages

§ 45.55 Weighing Evidence in Considering Motion

§ 45.56 Motions to Reconsider Rule 59 Orders
[1] Court May Reconsider Order Granting New Trial
[2] Motion to Reconsider Order Denying New Trial Must Be Filed Within 28 Days After Entry of Judgment

§ 45.57 Timely Rule 59 Motion Suspends Time for Appeal

§ 45.58 Motion for New Trial Is Not Required to Appeal From Judgment

§ 45.59 Appealing Grant of Motion for New Trial
[1] Order Granting New Trial Is Generally Not Appealable
[2] Order Granting New Trial May Be Appealable If Court Lacked Jurisdiction
[3] Conditional Motion for New Trial Granted With Judgment as Matter of Law

§ 45.60 Appealing Order Denying New Trial
[1] Order Denying New Trial Is Not Immediately Appealable
[2] Exceptions to Nonappealability of Order Denying New Trial
[3] Appeal From Denial of Untimely Motion
[4] Order Denying New Trial Is Appealable If Order Involves New Matters Arising After Entry of Judgment

§§ 45.61 through 45.99 [Reserved]

§ 45.100 Combined Notice for Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial
[1] FORM
Combined Notice for Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial
[2] Use of Form
[3] Motion Must Be Filed Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment
[4] Filing of Opposing Affidavits
[5] Critical Considerations

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter covers the following post-trial motions:

- Renewed motions for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(b)
- Motions for a new trial under Rule 59.

First, the chapter covers renewed motions for judgment as a matter of law. The chapter includes discussion regarding the function, scope, and procedure for filing a renewed motion. Because the post-verdict renewed motion is dependent upon the filing of a pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law, and because the same standards apply to both motions, Chapter 38, Dispositive Motions, should also be consulted when filing a renewed motion. Second, the chapter covers motions for a new trial. The chapter discusses the grounds and procedures applicable to a motion for a new trial and discusses the use of combined motions for both judgment and new trial. The chapter also covers opposing the motion for a new trial, as well as appealing orders on post-trial motions. The chapter includes a form of combined notice of renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law and motion for a new trial. Comments for use of the form are also included.

For expanded coverage of post-trial motions, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 50, Judgment as a Matter of Law in Actions Tried by Jury; Alternative Motion for New Trial; Conditional Rulings , and Ch. 59, New Trials; Amendment of Judgments (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.01

§ 45.01 Asserting Pre-Verdict Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law Under Rule 50(a) to Preserve Right to Make Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

In general, a party must have made a timely and proper motion for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(a) after being fully heard on the issue at trial to preserve the ability to renew the motion after the verdict under Rule 50(b). n1 Specifically, a pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law is a prerequisite to a post-verdict motion on the same grounds. n2

Thus, the failure to make a proper pre-verdict motion for judgment at the close of all evidence limits the moving party to seeking a new trial and waives the right to mount a post-trial attack on the sufficiency of the evidence.

If a party has been fully heard on an issue during a trial and the court finds that a reasonable jury would not have a legally sufficient evidentiary basis to find for the party on that issue, the court may: n3

- Resolve the issue against the party, and n4
- Grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, may be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue n5

A motion for judgment as a matter of law may be made at any time before the case is submitted to the jury. n6

If a court does not grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law made under Rule 50(a), the court is considered to have submitted the action to the jury subject to the court's later deciding the legal questions raised by the motion.

Rule 50(a) provides that a court may grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law during a jury trial. Courts have interpreted this language to mean that motions for judgment as a matter of law are available only in civil cases tried by a jury with the power to return a binding verdict. n7 Accordingly, Rule 50 does not apply to cases or matters in which the trial court acts as finder of fact, n8 or to cases tried to the court with an advisory jury. n9

A motion for judgment as a matter of law made during a bench trial is treated as a motion for judgment on partial findings under Rule 52(c), and the appellate court considers arguments in support of such a motion as challenges to the factual and legal sufficiency of the district court's determinations based on all the evidence. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Ch. 38, Dispositive Motions, for a complete discussion of the pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law (JMOL) under Rule 50(a); Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b); Price v. City of Charlotte, N.C., 93 F.3d 1241, 1248-1249 (4th Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1116 (1997) (pre-verdict motion is prerequisite to post-verdict motion because movant must apprise district court of alleged insufficiency of opponent's suit before case is submitted to jury).

(n2)Footnote 2. Mayo v. Schooner Capital Corp., 825 F.2d 566, 571-572 (1st Cir. 1987) ("a party may not be awarded judgment notwithstanding the verdict on a ground that was not previously included in a motion for directed verdict at the close of all the evidence").

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Ortloff v. United States, 335 F.3d 652, 660 (7th Cir. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Schlitt v. Florida, 749 F.2d 1482, 1483 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Federal Ins. Co. v. HPSC, Inc., 480 F.3d 26, 32 (1st Cir. 2007) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.02

§ 45.02 Judgment as a Matter of Law Replaces Directed Verdict and Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

Rule 50 uses the term "judgment as a matter of law" to encompass both of the former terms "directed verdict" and "judgment notwithstanding the verdict" n1 (also known as judgment non obstante verdicto, often abbreviated as "j.n.o.v."). n2 This chapter uses current terminology unless discussing or quoting cases employing the former terminology.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 advisory committee's note (1991).

(n2)Footnote 2. Coastal Fuels of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Caribbean Petroleum Corp., 79 F.3d 182, 199 n.14 (1st Cir.), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 927 (1996) (the term "judgment as a matter of law" refers to directed verdict and JNOV).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.03

§ 45.03 Most Courts Take Liberal Approach to Sufficiency of Pre-Verdict Motion

A majority of courts take a broad view of what constitutes a sufficient predicate for a Rule 50(b) motion. n1 In deciding whether to excuse a movant's failure to assert a Rule 50(a) motion, courts often look to the purpose of Rule 50(b) in providing notice of evidentiary deficiencies before the close of the evidence. n2 When the trial court and opposing parties are alerted to grounds on which evidence is allegedly insufficient before the case is submitted to a jury, technical noncompliance with Rule 50(b) may be excused, n3 particularly when the nonmoving party has not been prejudiced by noncompliance. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Tamez v. City of San Marcos, 118 F.3d 1085, 1089-1091 (5th Cir. 1997) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1125 (1998) . (because bar can be harsh, courts should view pre-verdict motion broadly to secure just resolution of case).

(n2)Footnote 2. Scottish Heritable Trust v. Peat Marwick Main & Co., 81 F.3d 606, 610 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 869 (1996) ("[t]echnical noncompliance with Rule 50(b) may be excused in situations in which the purposes of the rule are satisfied").

(n3)Footnote 3. Greenwood v. Societe Francaise De, 111 F.3d 1239, 1244-1245 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 995 (1997) (court does not require strict compliance with Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) when its purposes are satisfied, i.e., when court and opponent are alerted to grounds on which evidence is allegedly insufficient before case is submitted to jury).

(n4)Footnote 4. Benson v. Allphin, 786 F.2d 268, 274 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 848 (1986) ("Unless Seventh Amendment questions are presented, the requirements of Rule 50(b) are not strictly enforced provided the prevailing party's failure to renew the motion for directed verdict did not unduly prejudice his opponent").

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.04

§ 45.04 Liberal Approach Does Not Extend to Complete Failure to Assert Motion for Judgment at Trial

The "liberal approach" to pre-verdict motion requirements does not extend to a movant's complete failure to make a motion for judgment at any point during trial. n1 Nor does it extend to a movant's failure to assert a pre-verdict motion on a basis advanced in a post-verdict motion for judgment. Furthermore, "liberal" application of Rule 50(b) may be curtailed by the requirement in Rule 50(a)(2) that pre-verdict motions specify the judgment sought and the law and facts on which the moving party is entitled to judgment. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Johnson v. University of Wis.-Milwaukee, 783 F.2d 59, 61 (7th Cir. 1986) ("[P]laintiff's failure to make a motion for directed verdict at any point in the trial cannot be excused").

(n2)Footnote 2. Whelan v. Abell, 48 F.3d 1247, 1251 (D.C. Cir. 1995) ("new language explicitly requiring specificity in Rule 50 motions works to 'alter the result' in cases where a court, by allowing less specificity, effectively circumvented the requirement that the later motion be based on grounds raised in the earlier motion").

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

55 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.05

§ 45.05 Failing to Object to Pre-Verdict JMOL Waives Defect

Most courts hold that the failure to object to the lack of a motion for judgment as a matter of law at the close of the evidence waives the objection, provided that the opponent has substantially complied with renewed motion requirements. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Thompson & Wallace of Memphis, Inc. v. Falconwood Corp., 100 F.3d 429, 435 (5th Cir. 1996) (nonmovants who failed to raise waiver bar at trial in opposing Rule 50(b) motion may not raise bar on appeal).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.06

§ 45.06 Renewing Pre-Verdict Motion to Obtain Judgment and to Preserve Issue of Sufficiency of Evidence for Appellate Review

Rule 50(b) provides that a movant may renew a request for judgment as a matter of law by filing a post-verdict motion for judgment. n1 Moreover, a trial court's express reservation of decision on a pre-verdict motion for judgment does not relieve a moving party from the obligation to renew the motion for judgment as a matter of law, post-verdict. n2 Additionally, moving parties must renew the motion for judgment post-verdict to preserve the right to full appellate review of the trial court's denial of a pre-verdict motion for judgment. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Pahuta v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 170 F.3d 125, 129 (2d Cir. 1999) ("when a Rule 50(a) motion made during trial is not granted, the moving party must renew the motion both at the close of the evidence and within ten days after entry of judgment").

(n2)Footnote 2. Warkentien v. Vondracek, 633 F.2d 1, 2 n.1 (6th Cir. 1980) ("[E]xpress reservation of a directed verdict motion does not authorize a district court to direct a verdict contrary to the jury's decision in the absence of a motion for a judgment n.o.v.").

(n3)Footnote 3. Pahuta v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 170 F.3d 125, 129 (2d Cir. 1999) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.07

§ 45.07 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 50(b)

[1] Filing Renewed Motion Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment

A party renewing a motion for judgment as a matter of law must file the renewed motion no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment-or if the motion addresses a jury issue not decided by a verdict-no later than 28 days after the jury was discharged. n1

If Rule 58(a) does not require a separate document for the judgment, the judgment is entered when the notation of judgment is made in the civil docket in the manner prescribed by Rule 79(a). If Rule 58(a) does require a separate document, judgment is entered when it is entered into the civil docket pursuant to Rule 79(a) and when the earlier of these events occurs: (1) when it is set forth on a separate document; or (2) when 150 days have run from entry in the civil docket under Rule 79(a). n2 In the absence of a timely renewed motion for judgment, the trial judge may not enter post-verdict judgment. n3 Nor may an appellate court enter judgment as a matter of law in the absence of a timely renewed motion for judgment. n4

If a movant joins a motion for new trial under Rule 59 with a renewed motion for judgment as permitted by Rule 50(b), the motion for new trial also must be filed no later than 28 days after entry of judgment. n5 However, the timely filing of one motion does not automatically satisfy the time requirements for the other. n6

[2] Court May Not Extend Time to File Renewed Motion

Courts may not extend the deadline following entry of judgment within which movants must file renewed motions under Rule 50(b). n7 Rule 6(b) provides that courts may not extend the time to file a renewed motion for judgment under Rule 50(b) or to file a motion for new trial under Rule 59(b). Neither Rule 50 nor Rule 59 provide a mechanism for extending the prescribed 28-day filing deadline. n8 Accordingly, requests for an extension of time to file a renewed motion under Rule 50(b) or a new trial under Rule 59 are ineffective, even if received without objection and granted by a trial court. n9

As a result, courts interpret the 28-day time limitation as a jurisdictional limit on the power of the court to consider renewed motions. The failure to make a timely renewed motion divests district courts of the power to modify trial verdicts. n10 Accordingly, parties may not confer jurisdiction on the court by stipulating an extension of the filing deadline. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Jennings v. Patterson, 488 F.2d 436, 440 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Whitehead v. Food Max of Miss., Inc., 163 F.3d 265, 271 (5th Cir. 1998) (movant who fails to renew its pre-verdict motion for judgment in district court is not entitled to rendition of judgment in its favor on appeal).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Bass v. Spitz, 522 F. Supp. 1343, 1346 (E.D. Mich. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Goodman v. Bowdoin Coll., 380 F.3d 33, 46 (1st Cir. 2004) ; Phillips v. Corbin, 132 F.3d 867, 868 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Pinion v. Dow Chem., 928 F.2d 1522, 1525 (11th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 968 (1991) (neither Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) nor Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b) provides mechanism for extending prescribed filing deadline).

(n9)Footnote 9. Rodick v. City of Schenectady, 1 F.3d 1341, 1346 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Golden Triangle, 121 F.3d 351, 353-354 n.5 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. United States Leather, Inc. v. H & W Partnership, 60 F.3d 222, 224 (5th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.08

§ 45.08 Making Rule 50(b) Motion Orally in Open Court

Renewed motions may be made orally if asserted in open court during trial. n1 Although Rule 50(b) refers to renewal of a motion for judgment by filing a motion no later than 28 days after entry of judgment, Rule 7(b) provides that motions need not be in writing if made during a hearing or trial. n2 A motion made immediately after pronouncement of the verdict is made "during" trial for purposes of Rule 7(b)(1). n3

If the proceeding is not recorded, the renewed motion must be made in writing. In any event, the better practice is file and serve a written renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re City of Philadelphia Litig., 158 F.3d 711, 717 (3d Cir. 1998) (immediately following jury verdict, movant "orally renewed its motion for judgment as a matter of law in open court under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)").

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Rodick v. City of Schenectady, 1 F.3d 1341, 1347 (2d Cir. 1993) (counsel's oral, post-trial request for additional time to make JMOL motion does not constitute timely oral motion).

(n4)Footnote 4. Warkentien v. Vondracek, 633 F.2d 1, 2 n.1 (6th Cir. 1980) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.09

§ 45.09 Evaluating the Form and Content of Rule 50(b) Motions

[1] Specifying Grounds for Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

A renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law, like a pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law, generally must state the grounds on which it is based. n1 Technical precision is unnecessary in stating grounds for a renewed motion, however, providing the trial court is aware of the movant's position. n2

Furthermore, renewed motions for judgment are subject to the requirements of Rule 7(b)(1), which provides that motions state with particularity the grounds on which they are based. n3

[2] Rule 50(b) Motion Must Assert Same Grounds as Pre-Verdict Motion Under Rule 50(a)

In making a renewed motion for judgment, a movant generally may assert only those grounds previously raised in the pre-verdict motion for judgment; n4 Rule 50(b) ordinarily bars a renewed motion on any ground not specifically raised in an earlier motion at the close of the evidence. n5 A pre-verdict motion serves as a predicate to a post-verdict motion only if the pre-verdict motion includes the specific grounds asserted in the second motion. n6 Accordingly, trial courts may not ordinarily consider a ground raised for the first time in a post-trial motion as a basis for granting judgment as a matter of law. n7 Further, the failure to raise an issue until a post-verdict motion for judgment may result in its waiver for purposes of appellate review, although review may be available to prevent manifest injustice. n8

[3] Technical Precision Not Required

Technical precision is unnecessary in stating the grounds supporting a renewed motion. It follows that as long as the grounds for the renewed motion are "closely related" to those asserted in the pre-verdict motion, trial courts may consider those grounds in ruling on the renewed motion. n9

[4] Defect Subject to Waiver

If the party opposing a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law does not object to the insertion of a basis for granting the motion that was not raised in the motion at the close of the evidence, that defect is subject to waiver. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict Judgments

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Dimmitt Agri Indus., Inc. v. CPC Int'l Inc., 679 F.2d 516, 521 (5th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1082 (1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Jarvis v. Sauer Sundstrand Co., 116 F.3d 321, 323 n.4 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cambridge Plating Co. v. Napco, Inc., 85 F.3d 752, 760 (1st Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Freund v. Nycomed Amersham, 347 F.3d 752, 761 (9th Cir. 2003) ; EMI Music Mktg. v. Avatar Records, Inc., 364 F. Supp. 2d 337, 341 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Doe v. Celebrity Cruises, Inc., 394 F.3d 891, 903-904 (11th Cir. 2004) ; Doctor's Assocs., Inc. v. Weible, 92 F.3d 108, 112 (2d Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1091 (1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lifshitz v. Walter Drake & Sons, Inc., 806 F.2d 1426, 1429 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Correa v. Hospital San Francisco, 69 F.3d 1184, 1196 (1st Cir. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Purcell v. Seguin State Bank & Trust Co., 999 F.2d 950, 956 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Ross v. Rhodes Furniture, Inc., 146 F.3d 1286, 1289 (11th Cir. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 10. EMI Music Mktg. v. Avatar Records, Inc., 364 F. Supp. 2d 337, 341-342 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) ; Whelan v. Abell, 48 F.3d 1247, 1251 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (movants' failure to raise defensive theory in pre-verdict motion waived defense as basis for judgment, but opponent's failure to object to post-trial motion on this basis waived objection).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

60 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.10

§ 45.10 Joining Alternative Motion for New Trial Under Rule 59(a) With Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

Parties moving for judgment as a matter of law often seek alternative relief in the form of a new trial motion. n1 Rule 50 explicitly contemplates this practice, n2 and courts have discretion to grant motions for new trial even when a movant is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. n3 As a general rule, the standard for motions for new trial is broader and more lenient than the standard for motions for judgment; for example, evidence may be legally sufficient to take a case to a jury so that judgment as a matter of law is not justified, but new trial may still may be warranted when the verdict is against the great weight of the evidence. n4

A movant under Rule 50(b) wishing to bring an alternative motion for new trial under Rule 59(a) may proceed in either of two ways: n5

- Separate motion for new trial. The movant may file both a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law and a separate motion for new trial.

- Single motion seeking relief in the alternative. The movant may file a single motion requesting judgment as a matter of law, or in the alternative, a new trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawAlternative MotionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Dunn v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 890 F. Supp. 1262, 1274 (M.D. La. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Long v. Shultz Cattle Co., 881 F.2d 129, 132 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Dunn v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 890 F. Supp. 1262, 1274 (M.D. La. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, 311 U.S. 243, 250-251, 61 S. Ct. 189, 85 L. Ed. 147 (1940) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.11

§ 45.11 Determination of Renewed Motion Under Rule 50(b)

In ruling on a renewed motion, the court may, if a verdict was returned, do any of the following: n1

- Allow the judgment to stand
- Order a new trial
- Direct entry of judgment as a matter of law

If no verdict was returned, the court may order a new trial, or direct entry of judgment as a matter of law. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(1), (2), (3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(2), (3).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.12

§ 45.12 Granting New Trial Instead of Judgment as Matter of Law

In ruling on a renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law, the trial court may direct entry of judgment or may order a new trial. n1 In presenting these two options as alternatives, Rule 50(b) does not compel a trial court to enter judgment instead of ordering a new trial. Rather, it permits trial courts to exercise discretion in choosing one of the two alternatives. n2 For example, a new trial may be proper when the deficiencies in the nonmovant's proof may be remedied on retrial, or when the trial court erred in excluding the necessary evidence. n3

Note that the court's discretionary power to grant a new trial as an alternative to judgment as a matter of law comes into play only when the court believes that the moving party is entitled to post-verdict judgment. If the court does not believe the moving party is entitled to post-verdict judgment, the court may not grant the movant a new trial unless the movant has moved in the alternative for a new trial, or the court grants the new trial sua sponte in compliance with Rule 59(d). n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cone v. West Va. Pulp & Paper Co., 330 U.S. 212, 215, 67 S. Ct. 752, 91 L. Ed. 849 (1947) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Network Publications, Inc. v. Ellis Graphics Corp., 959 F.2d 212, 214 (11th Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Goldsmith v. Diamond Shamrock Corp., 767 F.2d 411, 414 (8th Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.13

§ 45.13 If Court Grants Renewed Motion, Nonmovant May Move for New Trial Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment as Matter of Law

The fact that the trial court has granted the renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law does not automatically mean the end of the nonmovant's chances. Like any litigant who has lost at the trial level, the nonmovant may seek a new trial on any grounds that motions for new trial were granted at common law. n1 Thus, if the trial court grants a renewed motion and directs entry of judgment as a matter of law for the movant, the party against whom the court grants judgment may file a motion for new trial in the trial court no later than 28 days after entry of judgment. n2 Rule 50(d) thus gives the nonmoving party a brief period after entry of judgment as a matter of law in which to invoke the trial court's discretion to order a new trial. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Neely v. Martin K. Eby Constr. Co., 386 U.S. 317, 321, 87 S. Ct. 1072, 18 L. Ed. 2d 75 (1967) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

64 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.14

§ 45.14 Evaluating the Standard for Granting a Renewed Judgment Under Rule 50(b)

A renewed judgment as a matter of law is proper if there was no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable jury to find for the nonmovant under controlling law. n1 Stated differently, judgment as a matter of law must be granted when, under governing law, there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the verdict. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Merrill Lynch Interfunding, Inc. v. Argenti, 155 F.3d 113, 120 (2d Cir. 1998) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250-251, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.15

§ 45.15 Same Standard Governs Pre-Verdict and Post-Verdict Consideration of Motion and Appellate Review of Trial Court Ruling on Motion

The standard for reviewing the grant or denial of pre-verdict and post-verdict motions for judgment as a matter of law is identical. n1

The same standard also governs trial and appellate court consideration of the propriety of the grant of judgment as a matter of law. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gibson v. City of Cranston, 37 F.3d 731, 735 (1st Cir. 1994) (applying same standard to motion for judgment "whether at the end of a plaintiff's case or at the close of all the evidence").

(n2)Footnote 2. McGreevy v. Daktronics, Inc., 156 F.3d 837, 840 (8th Cir. 1998) (appellate court reviews a district court's decision to grant JMOL de novo, applying the same standards as those used by the district court).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.16

§ 45.16 Grant or Denial of Renewed Motion Is Final Appealable Judgment

Entry of judgment on a trial court's grant or denial of a motion for judgment as a matter of law results in a final judgment for purposes of appeal. Specifically, if the trial court grants the motion for judgment, the nonmoving party may appeal from entry of judgment on the order granting the motion. n1

If the trial court denies the motion for judgment as a matter of law, the jury verdict stands and the movant may appeal from the judgment entered on the verdict. n2 However, a district court order determining the issue of liability but leaving damages to be determined is not a final appealable order. n3

Failure to raise an issue in a motion for judgment as a matter of law bars appellate review of that issue. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPostverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawPreverdict JudgmentsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Morante v. American Gen. Fin. Ctr., 157 F.3d 1006, 1008 (5th Cir. 1998) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fiore v. Washington County Community Mental Health Ctr., 960 F.2d 229, 232-233 n.8 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cook v. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp., 867 F.2d 1266, 1267 (11th Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Miller v. Eby Realty Group LLC, 396 F.3d 1105, 1114 (10th Cir. 2005) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
A. Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 45.17 through 45.19

[Reserved]

§§ 45.17[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.20

§ 45.20 Considering Scope of Rule 59

[1] Three Types of Procedures Relating to New Trial

Rule 59 permits three types of procedures relating to a new trial: n1

- A motion for a new trial by any party in either a jury or a nonjury action
- A new trial order made on the district court's own initiative
- A hybrid of the two procedures: a district court may grant a motion for a new trial on any grounds that are appropriate, even if those grounds are not alleged by the movant in the papers

The final type of motion permitted under Rule 59 is not one for a new trial, but rather for an alteration or amendment of a judgment. For discussion of that topic, see Ch. 44, Findings and Judgments.

[2] Grant of Motion Is Within Trial Court's Discretion

Granting a motion for a new trial is within the trial court's discretion. n2

[3] Court May Order New Trial on Its Own Motion

The court may grant a new trial on its own initiative for any reason that would justify granting a new trial on a party's motion. In that event, the court must enter the order granting a new trial no later than 28 days after entry of the judgment. n3

However, if a timely motion for a new trial is pending, the trial court has the power to grant a new trial for reasons not stated in the motion if it gives the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard. n4 The time to grant a new trial is enlarged in this situation because when a party makes a timely motion for a new trial, the finality of the judgment is already suspended. n5

When granting a new trial sua sponte or for a reason not stated in a motion, the court must specify the grounds in its order. n6

[4] New Trial Must Be Jury Trial If Original Trial Was Jury Trial

If the court grants a new trial in an action for which the Seventh Amendment required a jury in the first instance, the new trial must also be before a jury, unless a jury is not required due to lack of triable issues of fact or waiver by the parties. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59.

(n2)Footnote 2. Metromedia Co. v. Fugazy, 983 F.2d 350, 363 (2d Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 952 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Stone v. INS, 514 U.S. 386, 401-402, 115 S. Ct. 1537, 131 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(d).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Baltimore & Carolina Line, Inc. v. Redman, 295 U.S. 654, 656, 55 S. Ct. 890, 79 L. Ed. 1636 (1935) ; Slocum v. New York Life Ins. Co., 228 U.S. 364, 376, 33 S. Ct. 523, 57 L. Ed. 879 (1913) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.21

§ 45.21 Limiting New Trial to Certain Parties

[1] Only Injured Party May Get New Trial

Only a party injured by the verdict may be granted a new trial. n1

[2] Court May Limit New Trial to Some But Not All Injured Parties

In an action with multiple parties, the trial court has the discretion to limit the new trial to only some of the injured parties as justice dictates. In such a case, the verdict stands against the remaining parties. In other words, the court may grant a new trial to defendants found liable while allowing the verdict to stand as to another defendant found not liable. n2

[3] All Parties Must Receive New Trial When Liability Is Interrelated

The court must grant all defendants against whom a judgment has been entered a new trial when their liability is so interrelated that it is impossible to separate the issues. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Somerville v. Capital Transit Co., 192 F.2d 413, 415 (D.C. Cir. 1951) , cert. denied, 342 U.S. 941 (1952) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Compagnie Nationale Air France v. Port of New York Auth., 427 F.2d 951, 956 (2d Cir. 1970) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Continental Cas. Co., v. United States, 167 F.2d 107, 109 (9th Cir. 1948) , cert. denied, 337

U.S. 940 (1949) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.22

§ 45.22 Obtaining Partial New Trial

[1] Jury Trials

Rule 59 permits a new trial of any separable issue in a case. The trial court has the power to grant a partial new trial on any of the grounds for which a complete new trial may be granted. n1

Only an issue that is distinct and independent from all of the remaining issues of the trial is proper for a partial new trial. The court should deny a motion for a partial new trial when the issue that the jury has improperly determined is so interwoven with the other issues involved in the case as to be inseparable from those remaining issues. n2

The most common instance for the proper grant of a partial new trial involves cases in which liability of the defendant has been properly determined by the jury, but damages have not. In such a case, a partial new trial may be granted solely on the issues of proper damages to be awarded to the plaintiff. A new trial on the sole issue of damages is only appropriate if the court is satisfied that liability has been properly determined. n3

If the jury has apparently made an improper damage award because of a difficulty with the liability issue, a new trial must be granted on the liability issue as well as the damage issue. n4

[2] Nonjury Trials

In a nonjury case, even after a judgment has been entered, the trial judge may simply reopen the case to take additional testimony and amend the findings of fact or conclusions of law, or both. This may be done in a rehearing, or a new trial may be granted on all or some of the issues before the court. n5

[3] Grounds for Partial New Trial

The court may order a partial new trial on any ground that would support a complete new trial. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bohack Corp. v. Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., 715 F.2d 703, 709 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Wharf v. Burlington N. R.R. Co., 60 F.3d 631, 638 (9th Cir. 1995) (court may reopen issue of liability when new trial on damages alone would result in injustice).

(n4)Footnote 4. In re Joint E. Dist. & S. Dist. Asbestos Litig., 995 F.2d 343, 346 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(a).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.23

§ 45.23 Staying Enforcement of Judgment

Enforcement of a judgment may be stayed pending a ruling on a motion for a new trial. A stay of enforcement or any other proceedings to enforce a judgment is appropriate if the losing party is at risk of insolvency if the judgment were enforced. The district court has discretion to grant or deny the motion. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(b).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.24

§ 45.24 Considering Impact of Harmless Error Rule

[1] No New Trial Unless Error Affects Substantial Right

None of the following errors are grounds for a new trial, unless failure to grant a new trial would be inconsistent with substantial justice: n1

- An error in the admission or the exclusion of evidence
- An error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court
- Anything done or omitted by any of the parties

At every stage of the proceeding, the court must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. n2

[2] Harmless Error Will Not Be Reversed

Even if the trial court is mistaken, it will not be reversed unless its ruling results in substantial prejudice, or had a substantial effect on the outcome of the case. n3

[3] Case by Case Review for Harmless Error

Review for harmless error is fact specific, and must therefore proceed on a case by case basis. The court will consider the unique context of the particular case, including whether the error pertains to an issue that is one-sided or closely balanced, and how it relates to the ultimate decision in the case. n4

[4] Burden of Persuasion Is on Movant

The party asserting error has the burden of persuading the court that the error substantially affected the party's rights. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; Kotteakos v. United States, 328 U.S. 750, 764-765, 66 S. Ct. 1239, 90 L. Ed. 1557 (1946) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Markovich v. Bell Helicopter Textron, Inc., 805 F. Supp. 1231, 1240 (E.D. Pa. 1992) , aff'd without opinion, 977 F.2d 568 (3d Cir.1992) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Hygh v. Jacobs, 961 F.2d 359, 365 (2d Cir. 1992) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.25

§ 45.25 Distinguishing Rule 59 Motion for New Trial From Rule 50 Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law

[1] Rule 50 Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law Made Before Case Goes to Jury

If a party has been fully heard on an issue during a trial and the court finds that a reasonable jury would not have a legally sufficient evidentiary basis to find for the party on that issue, the court may: n1

- Resolve the issue against the party, and n2
- Grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law against the party on a claim or defense that, under the controlling law, may be maintained or defeated only with a favorable finding on that issue n3

Motions for judgment as a matter of law may be made at any time before submission of the case to the jury. Such a motion must specify the judgment sought, as well as the law and the facts on which the moving party is entitled to the judgment. n4

[2] New Trial May Be Granted When Rule 50 Motion Is Renewed

The movant may renew its request for judgment as a matter of law by filing a motion no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment-or if the motion addresses a jury issue not decided by a verdict-no later than 28 days after the jury was discharged. The movant may alternatively request a new trial or join a motion for a new trial under Rule 59. n5

Rule 50(b) unambiguously requires that a renewed motion for a judgment as a matter of law be filed no later than 28 days after entry of judgment. n6

In ruling on a renewed motion, the court may, if a verdict was returned, do any of the following: n7

- Allow the judgment to stand
- Order a new trial
- Direct entry of judgment as a matter of law

If no verdict was returned, the court may order a new trial, or direct entry of judgment as a matter of law. n8

[3] Rule 50(b) Standard More Strict Than Rule 59

The standard for deciding a motion for judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(b) is strict and the court will grant the motion only on the following grounds: n9

- There is such a complete absence of evidence supporting the verdict that the jury's findings could only have been the result of sheer surmise and conjecture

- There is such an overwhelming amount of evidence in favor of the movant that reasonable and fair minded people could not arrive at a verdict against the movant

The standard for granting a new trial is less strict: a motion for new trial may be granted even if there is substantial evidence to support the verdict. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(1)(B).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(1), (2), (3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)(2), (3).

(n9)Footnote 9. Dunn v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 890 F. Supp. 1262, 1274 (M.D. La. 1995) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Bevevino v. Saydjari, 574 F.2d 676, 683 (2d Cir. 1978) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.26

§ 45.26 Objecting to Preserve Error

[1] Counsel Must Object During Trial

Counsel must object during trial; a new trial will not be granted unless the grounds are brought to the court's attention during the trial. n1

For example:

- Attorney, party, or witness conduct. Misconduct by counsel, a party, a witness, or an unrelated third party is waived if a timely objection is not made by the party injured by the remark or conduct n2

- Juror conduct. Failure to timely object to contact between a juror and an outside party may waive the objection n3

- Jury instructions. To preserve the ground, the party moving for a new trial generally must object to the instructions before the jury retires to deliberate n4

- Jury submission. A party seeking to prevent submission of an issue to the jury generally must object to the submission before the jury retires; n5 similarly, litigants may waive the submission of an issue to the jury if they do not demand submission before the jury retires for deliberation n6

A motion for a new trial may be based only on the grounds for the objection made by a party at the time the evidence is offered for admission. n7

[2] Making Objections Specific and Distinct

The party must distinctly state the matter objected to and the grounds of the objection. n8 A general objection or an objection unaccompanied by a statement of the grounds is inadequate to preserve the right to a motion for a new trial. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Bateman v. Mnemonics, Inc., 79 F.3d 1532, 1543-1544 (11th Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Wharf v. Burlington N. R.R. Co., 60 F.3d 631, 637-638 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hafner v. Brown, 983 F.2d 570, 578 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51; Juneau Square Corp. v. First Wis. Nat'l Bank, 624 F.2d 798, 810 (7th Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1013 (1980) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a), 51.

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a), 51.

(n7)Footnote 7. Minetos v. City Univ. of N.Y., 925 F. Supp. 177, 185 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51.

(n9)Footnote 9. Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, 119, 63 S. Ct. 477, 87 L. Ed. 645 (1943) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.27

§ 45.27 Filing Timely Motion for New Trial

[1] Filing Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment

Any motion for a new trial must be filed no later than 28 days after the judgment has been entered. n1 The 28-day time period is mandatory and may not be extended by the court or by stipulation of the parties. The court must deny an untimely motion for a new trial. n2

The district court has no jurisdiction to entertain a motion for a new trial made more than 28 days after the entry of judgment. n3

[2] Computing 28-Day Period

The motion is timely if made within 28 business days after the judgment is entered.

The 28 days are computed as follows: n4

- Exclude the day judgment is entered
- Count every other day, including intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays
- Include the last day of the period, but if the last day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the period continues to run until the end of the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday

[3] Notation of Judgment in the Civil Docket Constitutes Entry of Final Judgment

If Rule 58(a)(1) does not require a separate document for the judgment, the judgment is entered when the notation of judgment is made in the civil docket in the manner prescribed by Rule 79(a). If Rule 58(a)(1) does require a separate document, judgment is entered when it is entered into the civil docket pursuant to Rule 79(a) and when the earlier of these events occurs: (1) when it is set forth on a separate document; or (2) when 150 days have run from entry in the civil docket under Rule 79(a). n5

The 28-day period begins to run when the judgment is entered, regardless of when or whether the parties have received notice of the entry of the judgment. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Garcia-Velazquez v. Frito Lay Snacks Caribbean, 358 F.3d 6, 10 (1st Cir. 2004) ; United States Leather, Inc. v. H & W Partnership, 60 F.3d 222, 225 (5th Cir. 1995) (post trial motions must be filed within deadline after entry of judgment).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b); Samuels v. American Motors Sales Corp., 969 F.2d 573, 578 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Shults v. Henderson, 110 F.R.D. 102, 105 (W.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.28

§ 45.28 Amending After 28-Day Period

The courts of appeals are split on whether a timely motion for a new trial may be amended to assert additional grounds for a new trial after the filing deadline has expired. Some circuits have held that the district court may not grant a new trial for reasons brought to its attention after the filing deadline. n1

Other circuits have held that because a timely motion suspends the finality of the judgment, the district court has the discretion to determine whether justice requires the consideration of an amendment to an otherwise timely motion. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Arkwright Mut. Ins. Co. v. Philadelphia Elec. Co., 427 F.2d 1273, 1275 (3d Cir. 1970) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Pate v. Seaboard R.R., Inc., 819 F.2d 1074, 1085 (11th Cir. 1987) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.29

§ 45.29 Motion May Be Made Before Entry of Judgment

A motion for a new trial may be made before judgment actually has entered. n1

Even though the motion may be made before judgment, the time for appeal does not begin to run until judgment has entered, and the district court has resolved all timely motions under Rule 59. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. FirsTier Mortgage Co. v. Investors Mortgage Ins. Co., 498 U.S. 269, 274, 111 S. Ct. 648, 112 L. Ed. 2d 743 (1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Charles v. Daley, 799 F.2d 343, 348 (7th Cir. 1986) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

78 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.30

§ 45.30 Motion Must Be Made From Final Judgment

Although a motion under Rule 59 may be made before a final judgment has entered, Rule 59 applies only to the final judgment. No motion under Rule 59 is proper with regard to an interlocutory judgment that is not appealable and that the district court has the power to alter or amend at any time. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Warner v. Rossignol, 513 F.2d 678, 684 n.3 (1st Cir. 1975) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.31

§ 45.31 Converting Motion for New Trial to Motion for Rule 60(b) Relief

A motion for a new trial under Rule 59 that is filed more than 28 days after entry of judgment may be treated as a Rule 60(b) motion. n1

Rule 60(b) provides relief from a judgment, provided the motion is filed not more than one year after the judgment was entered, on any of the following grounds: n2

- Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect
- Newly discovered evidence
- Fraud, misrepresentation, or misconduct of an adverse party

Rule 60(b) also provides for relief from judgment on the grounds that the judgment is void or has been satisfied, or for any other reason, provided the motion is filed within a reasonable time. n3

Even if the motion is filed within the time limit for a Rule 59(e) motion, the court may treat a motion that seeks to modify a judgment as a motion for relief under Rule 60(b) if the asserted ground for modifying the judgment is the movant's excusable neglect. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesExcusable NeglectCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistakeCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Hope v. United States, 43 F.3d 1140, 1143 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Harrington v. City of Chicago, 433 F.3d 542, 546 (7th Cir. 2006) ; United States v. $23,000 in U.S. Currency, 356 F.3d 157, 165 n.9 (1st Cir. 2004) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.32

§ 45.32 Moving for New Trial Based on Due Process

Due process requires a fair trial, not a perfect trial. A motion for a new trial must be granted if the trial was not fair to the moving party. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Rivas v. Brattesani, 94 F.3d 802, 807 (2d Cir. 1996) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.33

§ 45.33 Moving for New Trial When Verdict Against Weight of Evidence

[1] Jury's Verdict Must Be Seriously Erroneous

The trial court may grant a new trial when the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. The court must view the jury's verdict as "seriously erroneous" or a "miscarriage of justice." In making this assessment, a court may weigh the evidence itself, and need not view it in the light most favorable to the verdict winner. n1

[2] Compared With Standard for Judgment as Matter of Law

The standard for granting a new trial when the verdict is against the weight of the evidence is less stringent than the standard for granting judgment as a matter of law. Unlike judgment as a matter of law, the court may grant a new trial even if there is substantial evidence to support the jury's verdict. n2

[3] Judge May Not Assess Credibility of Witnesses

In reviewing a jury's verdict, the trial judge's role is to ensure that justice is carried out. The judge will weigh all of the evidence presented and consider all of the events of the trial to determine whether the verdict is seriously erroneous. However, with respect to the credibility of witnesses, the judge must avoid substituting his or her judgment for the jury's. The court will not grant a new trial when the witnesses' credibility would have been integral to the jury's resolution of the disputed issues. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewSubstantial EvidenceSufficiency of Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Bevevino v. Saydjari, 574 F.2d 676, 684 (2d Cir. 1978) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Taber Partners I v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., Inc., 917 F. Supp. 112, 116 (D.P.R. 1996) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.34

§ 45.34 Moving for New Trial Based on Inadequate or Excessive Damages

[1] Possible Remedies for Jury Error in Awarding Damages

A damage award that is insufficient or excessive as a matter of law may be grounds for a new trial. The trial may be limited to the issue of damages only. n1

Instead of ordering a new trial when damages are excessive as a matter of law, the court may offer the plaintiff the alternative of a new trial or accepting a remittitur. n2

[2] Determining Whether Award Is Excessive

In federal question cases, the issue whether a damage award is excessive is determined in accordance with federal law. n3

A motion for a new trial based on excessive damages is properly granted if the damages are so excessive as to "shock the conscience" of the court, so that it appears that some misconduct on the part of the jury must have occurred. n4

In diversity actions, federal district courts must apply state law standards for determining whether damages are excessive. n5

[3] Partial New Trial May Be Appropriate

The court may grant a partial new trial on the issue of damages provided the jury has properly determined the issue of liability. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursRemittitursCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Eiland v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 58 F.3d 176, 183 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, Inc., 518 U.S. 415, 432-435, 116 S. Ct. 2211, 135 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1996) (court may order new trial without qualification or offer verdict winner a remittitur in exchange for denying motion for new trial).

(n3)Footnote 3. Browning-Ferris Indus., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 279, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed.2d 219 (1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1996) ; Eich v. Board of Regents for Cent. Mo. State Univ., 350 F.3d 752, 763-764 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, Inc., 518 U.S. 415, 426-431, 116 S. Ct. 2211, 135 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(a); Crockett v. Long Island R.R., 65 F.3d 274, 278-279 (2d Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.35

§ 45.35 Moving for New Trial Based on Inconsistent Verdicts and Special Interrogatories

[1] Distinguishing Special Verdict From General Verdict With Special Interrogatories

Rule 49 provides two alternatives to a general verdict:

- The special verdict n1
- The general verdict accompanied by answers to special interrogatories n2

A special verdict is returned in lieu of a general verdict and contains factual findings on all of the material issues in the case. The jury returns its special verdict in the form of written answers to separate questions concerning specific factual issues. The trial court then applies the law to those answers and enters judgment accordingly. n3

By removing from the jury the consideration or application of the law (which a general verdict requires through application of the court's instruction), the special verdict avoids those two sources of possible error in the general verdict.

A trial court may submit written interrogatories to the jury for consideration, along with a general verdict form. In such a case, the jury will return both a general verdict of nonliability or of liability and damages, and answers to each of the individual interrogatories. n4

Rule 49(b) combines the two types of verdicts, the general verdict and the special verdict. Special interrogatories are directed to selected issues of fact and the answers should support, rather than take the place of, the general verdict.

[2] Dealing With Inconsistencies in Verdicts

A general verdict that is facially inconsistent and reflects confusion on the part of the jury is substantial grounds for a new trial. n5 If an internally consistent verdict is inconsistent with answers to special interrogatories, the trial court has discretion to grant a new trial. n6

When the answers to interrogatories are inconsistent with each other and one or more is inconsistent with the jury's verdict, a new trial may be warranted. First, the judge should attempt to read the answers to the interrogatories consistently, if possible. If the answers to interrogatories can be read in a way that shows a verdict by the jury that makes sense and does not show an abuse of power or other misconduct by the jury, a new trial should not be required. n7 If the answers cannot be reconciled, the judge may not enter judgment based on selecting from among inconsistent answers: if the jury has not been discharged, the court should return the matter to the jury for further consideration; n8 if the jury has been discharged, the court must order a new trial. n9

[3] Court Must Attempt to Reconcile Inconsistent Answers Before Ordering New Trial

A trial court must render a judgment that makes the jury's answers consistent if such a construction is possible. A new trial is not necessary if the answers can be interpreted in a way that results in a consistent verdict. The verdict need not be the same for all defendants in the action, and the jury's verdict need not be the same on all issues. n10

[4] Only Partial New Trial May Be Required to Remedy Inconsistencies

When a jury arrives at its decision by special interrogatories, a new trial may only be required on the issues on which the jury reached the erroneous verdict. When the jury arrives at its decision by special interrogatories, a court generally may be reasonably certain that an erroneous verdict was reached independent of the other verdicts. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Hopkins v. Coen, 431 F.2d 1055, 1059-1060 (6th Cir. 1970) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Harvey v. General Motors Corp., 873 F.2d 1343, 1346-1348 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Gallick v. Baltimore & Ohio R.R. Co., 372 U.S. 108, 119, 83 S. Ct. 659, 9 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1963) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Turyna v. Martam Constr. Co., 83 F.3d 178, 181 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Turyna v. Martam Constr. Co., 83 F.3d 178, 181 (7th Cir. 1996) (when jury returns factually inconsistent verdicts and is discharged, only option is new trial).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Gallick v. B & O R.R., 372 U.S. 108, 119, 83 S. Ct. 659, 9 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1963).

(n11)Footnote 11. Crockett v. Long Island R.R., 65 F.3d 274, 278-279 (2d Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.36

§ 45.36 Improper Jury Instructions

[1] Improper Instructions May Be Grounds for New Trial

Improper jury instructions, or the trial judge's failure to give a properly requested jury instruction, may be grounds for a new trial. A jury charge is erroneous if the instruction misleads the jury as to the proper legal standard, or does not adequately inform the jury of the law. n1

In reviewing jury instructions, the court will consider them as a whole, considering the court's entire charge, the allegations in the complaint, the opening statements, the closing arguments, and the evidence contained in the record. n2

[2] No New Trial When Erroneous Jury Instructions Constitute Harmless Error

Erroneous instructions are harmless error and do not warrant a new trial if, in light of the jury's verdict, they were irrelevant. For example, an error in the definition of damages is harmless if the jury finds no liability. n3

Failure to give the jury a proposed instruction constitutes harmless error if the instructions that were given both:

- Sufficiently informed the jury n4
- Did not mislead the jury or give the jury an inadequate impression of the law n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Bateman v. Mnemonics, Inc. 79 F.3d 1532, 1543-1544 (11th Cir. 1996) (incorrect infringement instructions distinguishing between copyrightable and noncopyrightable work manifestly infected deliberative process of jury and requires new trial; timely objection required before jury retires).

(n2)Footnote 2. See National R.R. Passenger Corp., v. One 25,900 Sq. Ft. Parcel of Land, 766 F.2d 685, 688 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n4)Footnote 4. See BAII Banking Corp. v. UPG, Inc., 985 F.2d 685, 696 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Riverwoods Chappaqua Corp. v. Marine Midland Bank, 30 F.3d 339, 346 (2d Cir. 1994) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.37

§ 45.37 Improper Submission to or Withdrawal of Issues From Jury

Issues that are improperly submitted to or withdrawn from the jury for consideration may be grounds for a new trial, unless the error is harmless. The issue improperly submitted or withdrawn must be material. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See King v. United Benefit Fire Ins. Co., 377 F.2d 728, 731-732 (10th Cir. 1967) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.38

§ 45.38 Erroneous Evidentiary Rulings

[1] May Be Grounds for New Trial

A new trial may be warranted when the trial court:

- Improperly admits prejudicial evidence at trial n1
- Fails to admit highly probative evidence that is likely to have a profound impact on the outcome of the trial n2
- Refuses to allow use of otherwise inadmissible evidence for impeachment purposes, if the result prejudices the moving party n3

[2] New Trial Not Warranted If Erroneous Evidentiary Ruling Is Harmless Error

The exclusion of competent evidence will be harmless error n4 unless both of the following occur:

- A substantial right of a party is affected n5
- The evidence excluded would have affected the outcome of the case n6

The introduction of inadmissible evidence is harmless error unless the introduction was a clear abuse of discretion and was so clearly prejudicial to the outcome of the trial that the court is convinced that the jury has reached a seriously erroneous result or that the verdict is a miscarriage of justice. n7

The party seeking to prove that the admission of incompetent evidence was reversible error has the burden of showing that there is a significant chance that it affected the result of the trial. n8

[3] Erroneous Admission of Evidence in Nonjury Trials Is Usually Harmless

A trial judge sitting without a jury is entitled to greater latitude in the admission or exclusion of evidence. n9

In most circumstances, error in the admission of evidence during a bench trial will be deemed harmless error. Reversal is only required if either: n10

- All of the competent evidence is insufficient to support the judgment
- It appears that the trial court used the improperly admitted evidence to make an essential finding that it otherwise would not have made

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error RuleEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsRulings on Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Logan v. Dayton Hudson Corp., 865 F.2d 789, 790 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Dabney v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 692 F.2d 49, 51-52 (8th Cir. 1982) , cert. denied, 461 U.S. 957 (1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Wood v. Morbark Indus., Inc., 70 F.3d 1201, 1209 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Phoenix Assocs. III v. Stone, 60 F.3d 95, 104-105 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Malek v. Federal Ins. Co., 994 F.2d 49, 55 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Hygh v. Jacobs, 961 F.2d 359, 365 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Walton v. United Consumers Club, Inc., 786 F.2d 303, 313 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Southern Pac. Transp. Co. v. Chabert, 973 F.2d 441, 448 (5th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 987 (1993) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. v. Chabert, 973 F.2d 441, 448 (5th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 987 (1993) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.39

§ 45.39 Newly Discovered Evidence

[1] Motion May Be Made Under Rule 59(b) or Rule 60(b)

A motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence may be made under either Rule 59(b) or Rule 60(b). Rule 60(b) permits any party to seek a modification of a judgment on grounds, including newly discovered evidence, that could not have been discovered by due diligence within the time period required for a Rule 59(b) motion. n1

A Rule 59(b) motion must be made within 28 days after the entry of judgment. n2 A Rule 60(b) motion must be made within a reasonable time, but not more than one year after the judgment is entered. n3

The court may consider an untimely Rule 59 motion for a new trial as a Rule 60(b) motion if the movant could not have discovered the new evidence by due diligence within the 28-day period. n4 A motion based on newly discovered evidence brought under Rule 59 destroys the finality of the judgment and suspends the period for appeal. In contrast, a motion under Rule 60(b) to set aside the judgment is unrelated to the process of appealing from that judgment.

[2] Evidence Must Relate to Facts Existing at Time of Trial

To constitute proper grounds for a Rule 59 motion for a new trial, the newly discovered evidence must relate to facts in existence at the time of the trial and may not pertain to events that occurred after the conclusion of the trial. n5

The party seeking a new trial based on newly discovered evidence must: n6

- Have been excusably unaware of the existence of the evidence during the trial
- Be able to show that he or she exercised due diligence in investigating the facts of the case

The evidence on which the motion for a new trial is based must be of the type that would not have been uncovered by a diligent search. n7 Evidence that supports a new legal theory of the case that was not introduced at the original trial is not an adequate basis for a motion for a new trial. n8 In such a case, the movant should move to amend the pleadings to add the new theory to the case, and then move to reopen to introduce additional relevant proof.

For newly discovered evidence to constitute adequate grounds for a Rule 59 motion for a new trial, the evidence must be both admissible and probative. The evidence must be of such substantial probative value that if it had been introduced at the previous trial, a different result would have been attained. n9 Evidence that is merely cumulative or that is only being introduced to impeach is not proper grounds for a new trial. n10 Evidence of false testimony by a witness may constitute a sufficient basis for a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence. n11

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Godwin v. FSLIC, 806 F.2d 1290, 1293 (5th Cir. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. White v. Bowen, 835 F.2d 974, 979 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Morgan v. Labiak, 368 F.2d 338, 341 (10th Cir. 1966) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Jay Edwards, Inc. v. New England Toyota Distrib., Inc., 708 F.2d 814, 825 (1st Cir.) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 894 (1983) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Toops v. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co., 871 F. Supp. 284, 294-295 (S.D. Tex. 1994) , rev'd on other grounds, sub nom. Toops v. Gulf Coast Marine, Inc., 72 F.3d 483 (5th Cir. 1996) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Coastal Transfer Co. v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., 833 F.2d 208, 211-212 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Mesarosh v. United States, 352 U.S. 1, 9, 77 S. Ct. 1, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1956) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Phillips v. Crown Cent. Petroleum Corp., 556 F.2d 702, 705 (4th Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1074 (1980) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.40

§ 45.40 Denial of Jury Trial

Denial of a jury trial when one is requested is proper grounds for a new trial, if the denial is not harmless error. n1

Denial of a jury trial will be deemed harmless error if a directed verdict would have been warranted. In other words, denial of a jury trial is not grounds for a new trial if:

- There was no material issue of fact for submission to a jury n2
- A jury verdict on the factual issues would have to have been set aside because of lack of evidence n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Freeman Contractors, Inc. v. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp., 205 F.2d 607, 612 (8th Cir. 1953) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re N-500L Cases, 691 F.2d 15, 32 (1st Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. King v. United Benefit Fire Ins. Co., 377 F.2d 728, 731 (10th Cir.) , cert. denied, 389 U.S. 857 (1967) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.41

§ 45.41 Judge's Failure to Make Findings and Conclusions in Bench Trial

[1] New Trial Not Warranted in Most Instances

The trial court's failure to make adequate findings of fact and conclusions of law in a bench trial usually does not warrant a new trial. The court may simply make its findings of fact and conclusions of law after the fact. n1

When the trial court's findings are inadequate, the appellate court usually will vacate the judgment and remand the action to the district court so that appropriate findings can be made. n2

[2] Remand for Additional Evidence or New Trial

In some cases, additional evidence may be required because the trial court failed to hear testimony on a material issue. In these cases the appellate court may instruct the district court to hear additional evidence, instead of merely remanding for further findings. n3

The appellate court may order a retrial when a significant period of time has elapsed since the trial, and the appeals court is concerned that the record might be stale in the trial judge's mind. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52.

(n2)Footnote 2. Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 291, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. Girard Trust Co. v. Windt, 178 F.2d 359, 360 (2d Cir. 1949) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Rucker v. Higher Educ. Aids Bd., 669 F.2d 1179, 1184 (7th Cir. 1982) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.42

§ 45.42 Inability of Judge to Proceed

[1] Successor Judge May Proceed With Trial

When the trial judge is unable to proceed (due for example to death, failing health, retirement, resignation, or disqualification), a new trial is generally not necessary because a successor judge will be appointed. The successor judge may proceed with the trial "upon certifying familiarity with the record and determining that the proceedings in the case may be completed without prejudice to the parties." In a nonjury trial, the successor judge may recall witnesses. n1

[2] Successor Judge Has Discretion to Order New Trial

The successor judge has discretion to order a new trial if the judge is satisfied that he or she cannot preside over the remainder of the case for any reason. n2

[3] Grounds for Granting New Trial

Proper grounds for a successor judge to grant a new trial include an insufficient record or the successor judge's inability to assess credibility issues, although a successor in a bench trial may be able to resolve credibility problems by recalling key witnesses. n3

An intervening decision that affects the law governing the case is also a proper ground for a successor judge to grant a new trial. n4

[4] Waiver of New Trial

Litigants may waive their right to a new trial by their conduct, such as failing to appear at status conferences, failing to respond to notice that the court intends to proceed under the existing record, otherwise neglecting to respond or communicate with the court, or by acquiescing in the process established by the successor judge. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDisqualifications &

RecusalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesSuccessorsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 63.

(n2)Footnote 2. See generally Fed. R. Civ. P. 63; Mergentime Corp. v. Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth., 166 F.3d 1257, 1262-1263 (1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Rose Hall, Ltd. v. Chase Manhattan Overseas Banking Corp., 576 F. Supp. 107, 125 (D. Del. 1983) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 63.

(n4)Footnote 4. Berry v. School Dist. of Benton Harbor, 494 F. Supp. 118, 120 (W.D. Mich. 1980) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Higginbotham, 917 F.2d 1130, 1133 (8th Cir. 1990) ; Townsend v. Gray Line Bus Co., 767 F.2d 11, 18 (1st Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.43

§ 45.43 Errors in Jury Selection, or Bias of Jurors

[1] Jury Selection

A new trial may properly be granted based either on:

- Denial of peremptory challenges n1
- The systematic exclusion of a particular group from service on a jury n2

The movant must show that he or she has been prejudiced by the error n3 and has made a timely objection. n4

The following errors in jury selection have been held to be harmless error:

- Allowing the wrong number of peremptory challenges in violation of Rule 47(b) if the alternate juror is not chosen to deliberate on the case n5
- Selecting an alternate juror by lottery in violation of Rule 47(b) n6

[2] Juror Bias or Disqualification May Be Grounds for New Trial

A new trial may be granted when a juror is biased or has failed to disclose information that would have justified his or her disqualification for cause. The movant must show that the juror failed to truthfully answer a material question during voir dire, and that if the juror had answered the question truthfully, the answer would have constituted cause to challenge the juror. n7

A motion for a new trial will not be granted merely because the untruthful answer deprived the movant of the information necessary to intelligently exercise peremptory challenges; the movant must show that the information withheld would have supported a challenge for cause n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsSelectionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Medrano v. City of Los Angeles, 973 F.2d 1499, 1503 (9th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 940 (1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Mitchell v. Morgan, 844 F. Supp. 398, 404 (M.D. Tenn.) , aff'd, 41 F.3d 1508 (6th Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n4)Footnote 4. See generally Anglo-American Gen. Agents v. Jackson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 83 F.R.D. 41, 43 (N.D. Cal. 1979) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Beard v. Mitchell, 604 F.2d 485, 500 (7th Cir. 1979) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Heath v. Cast, 813 F.2d 254, 257 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 849 (1987) .

(n7)Footnote 7. McDonough Power Equip., Inc. v. Greenwood, 464 U.S. 548, 556, 104 S. Ct. 845, 78 L. Ed. 2d 663 (1984) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Zerka v. Green, 49 F.3d 1181, 1185-1186 (6th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.44

§ 45.44 Improper Juror Motivation

[1] Jury Prejudice, Compromise, or Coercion May Be Grounds for New Trial

A verdict that is the result of mistake, passion, prejudice, compromise or other improper motive may be grounds for a new trial. n1 A verdict resulting from coercion from the court may also constitute adequate grounds for a new trial. n2

[2] Juror Access to Inappropriate Information May Be Grounds for New Trial

Either of the following may be grounds for a new trial:

- A jury's consideration of evidence not introduced at the trial n3
- A juror's discussion of the case with a nonjuror n4

A juror's access to such inappropriate information is not grounds for a new trial if the error is harmless; that is, if the information did not influence the juror's decision. n5

[3] Outside Influence or Independent Juror Investigation May Be Grounds for New Trial

Proof that a juror conducted an independent investigation or was otherwise influenced by an outside source may constitute grounds for a new trial, if not harmless error. n6 The court may also grant a new trial if a juror relates to the other jurors facts or experiences from his or her past that relate to the facts presented at trial. n7

No finding of misconduct will be made if a juror only calls on his or her general experience or knowledge. n8

[4] Proof Is Difficult Because Jurors May Not Impeach Verdict

Juror misconduct may be proven by testimony of third parties or testimony of the jurors themselves. However, jurors may only testify to issues that do not relate to the verdict itself or to the jury's deliberations. Jurors are prohibited from impeaching their verdict. n9

Specifically a juror's testimony about any of the following is prohibited: n10

- Any matter or statement occurring during the course of the jury's deliberations
- The juror's mental processes in connection with reaching a verdict
- The influence of any other juror's mind or emotions on the juror's vote

The rule prohibiting impeachment of the verdict by a juror applies as soon as the jurors are discharged from service. The rule does not prohibit a juror from:

- Testifying to misconduct before he or she is discharged n11
- Coming forward after discharge to correct an error in the verdict to ensure that the verdict published represents the result the jurors' agreed upon n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsMisconductCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsQualificationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsRemovalsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsEvidenceCompetencyJurorsExternal Influences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Mekdeci v. Merrell Nat'l Labs., Div. of Richardson-Merrell, Inc., 711 F.2d 1510, 1513-1515 (11th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Lucas v. American Mfg. Co., 630 F.2d 291, 293 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Stephens v. South Atl. Canners, Inc., 848 F.2d 484, 489 (4th Cir.) , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 996 (1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Thomas v. Peerless Mattress Co., 284 F.2d 721, 722 (4th Cir. 1960) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Pough v. Capital Transit Co., 194 F.2d 355, 356 (D.C. Cir. 1952) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Kilgore v. Greyhound Corp., 30 F.R.D. 385, 387-389 (E.D. Tenn. 1962) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Young v. Illinois Cent. Gulf R.R. Co., 618 F.2d 332, 336-337 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Casey v. United States, 20 F.2d 752, 754 (9th Cir. 1927) , aff'd on other grounds, 276 U.S. 413 (1928) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Evid. 606(b); see Webb v. United States Lines Co., 266 F.2d 611, 612 (2d Cir. 1959) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Evid. 606(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. See California Fruit Exch. v. Henry, 89 F. Supp. 580, 587-588 (W.D. Pa. 1950) , aff'd on other grounds, 184 F.2d 517 (3d Cir. 1950) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Freid v. McGrath, 135 F.2d 833, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1943) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.45

§ 45.45 Misconduct of Trial Judge

[1] Misconduct of Judge May Be Grounds for New Trial

A motion for a new trial based on the judge's alleged misconduct should be granted only if the conduct of the judge or other officer of the court is prejudicial, but not if it may be deemed harmless error. The attitude of the trial judge toward a party or counsel may warrant a new trial if either: n1

- The judge's conduct is so inappropriate as to call the fairness of the trial into question
- The conduct may have had an adverse impact on the jury

An attempt by the trial judge to hasten or coerce a verdict may be grounds for a new trial. n2

[2] Determining Whether Misconduct of Judge Is Harmless Error

Comments by the trial judge during the trial will be considered harmless error unless the complaining party can make a clear and precise showing of the prejudice that resulted from the judge's comments. n3 A judge's improper conduct will also be deemed harmless error unless the appellant can demonstrate substantial prejudice caused by the conduct. n4

The appellate court considers the following three factors when determining whether denial of a motion to recuse is harmless error: n5

- The risk of injustice to the parties in the particular case
- The risk that the denial of relief will produce injustice in other cases
- The risk of undermining the public's confidence in the judicial process

An order denying a motion to recuse is interlocutory and therefore is not immediately appealable. However, litigants may attempt to remove a judge who has denied their recusal motion by seeking a writ of mandamus from the circuit court of appeals. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error RuleEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsJudicial Intervention in TrialsComments by JudgesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Santa Maria v. Metro-N. Commuter R.R., 81 F.3d 265, 273 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Lucas v. American Mfg. Co., 630 F.2d 291, 293-294 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hansen v. Commissioner of I.R.S., 820 F.2d 1464, 1467 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Leddy v. Standard Drywall, Inc., 875 F.2d 383, 386 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 864, 108 S. Ct. 2194, 100 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., 861 F.2d 1307, 1312-1313 (2d Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.46

§ 45.46 Misconduct of Attorneys, Witnesses, and Parties

[1] Misconduct of Attorneys

Improper comments by counsel, whether during the opening, the presentation of evidence, or the closing argument, are grounds for a new trial only if they are so prejudicial as to cast doubt upon the verdict. n1 Remarks or actions by counsel that raise questions in the minds of the jurors as to the character of opposing counsel or an opposing party without any evidence to support the inferences may be grounds for a new trial if a party has been prejudiced. Allegations that a plaintiff abused illegal drugs and committed adultery have been found sufficiently prejudicial to warrant granting a motion for a new trial. n2

References by counsel to insurance policies or to the wealth of the defendant will generally be held to be prejudicial and will be sufficient grounds to warrant granting a motion for a new trial. n3 The court may grant a motion for a new trial based on remarks by plaintiff's counsel designed to elicit sympathy for the plaintiff by suggesting that the members of the jury place themselves in the plaintiff's position. n4 This argument (known as the "Golden Rule" argument) encourages the jury to depart from its proper function and is therefore objectionable when used with respect to the issue of damages in a civil trial, but is not necessarily inappropriate when applied to the issue of liability. n5

A new trial may be warranted if misconduct of counsel leads to surprise of the opposing party rising to a prejudicial level. For example, a new trial is warranted if a claim or defense is raised that was not disclosed in the pleadings or in any prior proceeding, and that was not or could not have been anticipated. n6 However, the objection will be deemed waived if the surprised party fails to seek a continuance. n7

[2] New Trial Based on Counsel's Conduct Solely Within Discretion of Court

Evaluation of the actions of counsel in the context of a motion for a new trial is solely within the discretion of the trial court. On appeal, the trial court's determination will not be disturbed unless the appellant is able to show that the lower court's decision constitutes an abuse of discretion, refusal to exercise discretion, or that the trial court was operating under a misapprehension of the law. n8

[3] Perjury or Prejudicial Remarks by Witness May Be Grounds for New Trial

A motion for a new trial is properly granted in a case in which a witness's remarks while on the witness stand are improper and prejudicial and no curative measures by the court will be adequate to eliminate the effect of these remarks on the jury. n9

Similarly, false testimony or perjury by a witness may be grounds for a new trial if the falsity of the testimony is established. n10

[4] Conduct of Party During Trial Is Rarely Grounds for New Trial

The conduct of a party during the trial is rarely adequate grounds for a new trial. The following conduct by a party did not warrant a new trial:

- Openly weeping n11
- Emotional outbursts n12
- Loudly accusing a witness of lying in the presence of the jury n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See F.H. Krear & Co. v. Nineteen Named Trustees, 810 F.2d 1250, 1261 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hall v. Freese, 735 F.2d 956, 961 (5th Cir. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Cleveland v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., 624 F.2d 749, 758 (6th Cir. 1980) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Loose v. Offshore Navigation, Inc., 670 F.2d 493, 496 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Stokes v. Delcambre, 710 F.2d 1120, 1128 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Perez-Perez v. Popular Leasing Rental, Inc., 993 F.2d 281, 287-288 (1st Cir. 1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Forrestal v. Magendantz, 848 F.2d 303, 309 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally, Juneau Square Corp. v. First Wis. Nat. Bank, 624 F.2d 798, 806 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1013 (1980) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Beck v. Wings Field, Inc., 122 F.2d 114, 117 (3d Cir. 1941) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Phillips v. Crown Cent. Petroleum Corp., 556 F.2d 702, 705 (4th Cir. 1977) , cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1074 (1980) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Franklin v. Shelton, 250 F.2d 92, 99 (10th Cir. 1957) , cert. denied, 355 U.S. 959 (1958) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Malandris v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 703 F.2d 1152, 1157 (10th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 824 (1983) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Garland Coal & Mining Co., v. Few, 267 F.2d 785, 791-792 (10th Cir. 1959) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.47

§ 45.47 Content and Form of Motion for New Trial

[1] State With Particularity Grounds for Motion

All motions must state with particularity the grounds for making the motion. n1

[2] Make Motion in Writing Unless Made During Trial

Motions generally must be made in writing. n2 However, it is quite common for a motion for a new trial to be made orally if it is made during the trial or hearing, or immediately after the rendering of the jury verdict or the court decision. An oral motion must contain the grounds for the motion and the relief requested, and it must be made a part of the record. n3

As a general proposition, the better practice is to await the entry of judgment and serve a written motion. This will avoid any problem as to the validity of an oral motion, whether counsel has assigned grounds for the motion and what they are, and whether the subsequent entry of the judgment was an implied denial of the motion made before the entry of the judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rodick v. City of Schenectady, 1 F.3d 1341, 1346-1347 (2d Cir. 1993) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.48

§ 45.48 Preparing Supporting Affidavits

[1] Supporting Affidavits Must Be Filed With Motion

If a motion for new trial is based on supporting affidavits, they must be filed with the motion. n1 Counsel should consult local rules as well as the individual judge's rules regarding extensions of time to serve a supporting affidavit.

[2] Court May Permit Reply Affidavits

The court may permit reply affidavits in connection with a motion for a new trial. n2 This would necessarily embrace the power to fix the time within which they may be served.

Counsel should consult the individual judge's rules regarding reply affidavits.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.49

§ 45.49 Joining Motion for New Trial With Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law

[1] Time for Filing Joined Motions

Motions for a new trial are often made in conjunction with Rule 50 motions for judgment as a matter of law. The movant may renew a request for judgment as a matter of law made during the trial by filing a motion no later than 28 days after entry of judgment. Alternatively, the movant may request a new trial, or join the motion for judgment as a matter of law with a Rule 59 motion for a new trial. n1

[2] Trial Court's Possible Rulings on Joined Motions

In ruling on the joined motion when the jury has returned a verdict, the court may do any of the following: n2

- Allow the judgment to stand
- Order a new trial
- Direct entry of judgment as a matter of law

In ruling on the joined motion when the jury has not returned a verdict, the court may do either of the following: n3

- Order a new trial
- Direct entry of judgment as a matter of law

[3] When Court Grants Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law, Court Must Rule Conditionally on Joined Motion for New Trial

If the trial court grants the renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law, the court must also determine whether the joined motion for a new trial should be granted if the judgment is subsequently vacated or reversed on appeal. n4 The trial court must specify the grounds for granting or denying the motion for the new trial. n5

The trial court's order conditionally granting the motion for a new trial does not affect the finality of the judgment. If the trial court conditionally grants the motion for a new trial, and the judgment is reversed on appeal, the trial court must hold a new trial unless the appellate court orders otherwise. n6

If the trial court conditionally denies the motion for a new trial, the movant may assert on appeal that the trial court erred in that denial. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(c); see Taylor v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 868 F. Supp. 479, 482 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(e).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.50

§ 45.50 CHECKLIST: Moving for New Trial

The following checklist will assist counsel in preparing a successful motion for new trial. Counsel should also check local district court rules and the individual judge's rules for motion procedures. Note that individual judges may require scheduling a pre-motion conference.

Initial Considerations:

- ☐ Consider the possibility of harmless error.
- ☐ Evaluate the strength of the evidence at trial.
- ☐ Decide whether motion will be limited to particular parties or issues.
- ☐ Determine whether the necessary objection appears in the record.

Determine grounds for motion. The following list includes the most common grounds for a motion for new trial:

- ☐ Fairness: Movant is entitled to fair trial.
- ☐ Verdict:
  - ☐ Against the weight of the evidence.
  - ☐ Excessive damages.
  - ☐ Inadequate damages.

- ☐ Inconsistencies.

☐ Jury:

- ☐ Misconduct.
- ☐ Improper instructions.
- ☐ Improper submission.
- ☐ Improper withdrawal.

☐ Denial of jury trial.

☐ Bias or selection errors.

☐ Evidence:

- ☐ Erroneous rulings.
- ☐ Newly discovered.

☐ Judge:

- ☐ Misconduct.
- ☐ Inability to proceed.
- ☐ Failure to make findings and conclusions in bench trial.

☐ Other misconduct:

- ☐ Opposing counsel.
- ☐ Witness.
- ☐ Party.

- ☐ Procedure:
  - ☐ File motion no later than 28 days after final judgment.
  - ☐ Prepare motion.
  - ☐ State grounds with particularity.
  - ☐ Include supporting affidavits.
- ☐ Final considerations:
  - ☐ Join motion with motion for judgment as matter of law.
  - ☐ If motion is based on excessive damages, will client accept remittitur?
- ☐ Is Rule 60(b) motion a viable alternative, if motion for new trial not timely filed?

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsMisconductCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursRemittitursCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.51

§ 45.51 Opposing Motion for New Trial

In addition to whatever substantive grounds exist for opposing a motion for new trial, counsel should consider using the following arguments:

- It is harmless error.
- Movant failed to properly object during trial.
- Movant failed to timely file the motion for new trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsHarmless Error Rule

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.52

§ 45.52 Filing Opposing Affidavits

[1] Must Be Filed Up to 14 Days After Service of Motion

The opposing party has 14 days after service of the motion to file opposing affidavits. n1

[2] Extension to Respond Governed by Rule 6(b)

Although a court may not extend the time to act under Rules 59(b), (d), and (e), there is no such limitations regarding extensions to respond to a motion for a new trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(b).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.53

§ 45.53 Court May Employ Remittitur as Alternative to New Trial When Damages Are Excessive

[1] Choosing Between Reduction of Excessive Verdict and New Trial

Remittitur is the process by which a court compels a plaintiff to choose between reduction of an excessive verdict and a new trial. n1 The court will condition the denial of the motion for new trial on the plaintiff's accepting a remittitur of the excessive portion of the award. n2

The court may offer remittitur when a losing defendant moves for a new trial on the ground that the verdict is excessive. If the court concludes that the verdict is in fact excessive as a matter of law, it may either grant the defendant's motion, or deny the motion on condition that the plaintiff accept a specified lower amount of damages. n3

[2] Cases in Which Remittitur Is Appropriate

Remittitur may be appropriate in two distinct kinds of cases: n4

- When the court can identify an error that caused the jury to include in the verdict a quantifiable amount that should be stricken

- When the award is intrinsically excessive in the sense of being greater than the amount a reasonable jury could have awarded, although the surplus cannot be ascribed to a particular, quantifiable error

[3] Distinction Between Verdict and Amount Remitted

In discussing remittitur, a distinction between the final verdict amount and the amount remitted must be made. Cases are not always clear whether remittitur refers to the amount by which the verdict is reduced or the final judgment amount. The better view, however, is that the remittitur amount is the amount by which the verdict is reduced. n5

To ensure accuracy on this point, the better practice is to state the remitted amount separately from the final amount of the award following remittitur.

[4] New Trial Required If Plaintiff Rejects Remittitur

If the plaintiff rejects the remittitur amount, the court must grant a new trial. It cannot enter judgment for the reduced amount, and thereby force the plaintiff to accept the remittitur. n6

[5] Determination of Amount of Remittitur

Once a court has determined that a verdict is excessive, it must decide the amount to be remitted. Three approaches have been applied to the difficult issue of determining the proper amount of remittitur:

- Awarding the lowest amount of damages supported by the record (the "minimum recovery" rule); n7
- Awarding the highest legal amount of damages (the "maximum recovery" rule); n8
- Awarding damages that the court deems reasonable. n9

Setting the final judgment amount at anything less than the maximum legal award would seem to violate the Seventh Amendment. n10

[6] Plaintiff's Acceptance of Remittitur Limits Appeal

A plaintiff who accepts remittitur cannot appeal from the order of remittitur or otherwise dispute the final judgment amount. The plaintiff may not seek to reinstate the original amount of the verdict on appeal. n11

The plaintiff has only one opportunity to argue against the appropriateness of a remittitur that he or she has accepted--if the defendant argues that items were inappropriately included in the damages award. The plaintiff may raise on appeal the inappropriateness of the remittitur for the purpose of maintaining the final damages awarded following remittitur. n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursRemittitursCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsRemands

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Lanier v. Sallas, 777 F.2d 321, 323 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Cline v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 144 F.3d 294, 305-306 (4th Cir. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Petramale v. Local No 17, 847 F.2d 1009, 1012-1013 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Shu-Tao Lin v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 742 F.2d 45, 49 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Earl v. Bouchard Transp. Co., 917 F.2d 1320, 1328 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Carter v. District of Columbia, 795 F.2d 116, 134-135 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Meissner v. Papas, 35 F. Supp. 676, 677 (E.D. Wis. 1940) , modified on other grounds, 124 F.2d 720 (7th Cir. 1941) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Warren v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 693 F.2d 1373, 1379-1380 (11th Cir. 1982) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Lanfranconi v. Tidewater Oil Co., 376 F.2d 91, 97 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 389 U.S. 951 (1967) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Earl v. Bouchard Transp. Co., 917 F.2d 1320, 1328-1330 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Donovan v. Penn Shipping Co., 429 U.S. 648, 648-650, 97 S. Ct. 835, 51 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1977) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ohio-Sealy Mattress Mfg. Co. v. Sealy, Inc., 585 F.2d 821, 839 (7th Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930 (1979) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.54

§ 45.54 Employing Additur Is Unlikely as Alternative to New Trial When Damages Are Inadequate

[1] Additur Generally Not Permitted

Additur is the practice of denying a plaintiff's motion for a new trial based on a claim of an insufficient amount of damages awarded by a jury on condition that the defendant pay damages in an amount greater than those returned by the jury.

The Supreme Court has held that additur violates the Seventh Amendment's proscription against "reexamining" facts tried by a jury. n1

[2] Additur May Be Permissible When There Is No Right to Jury Trial

Additur may still be appropriate in cases in which there is no right to a jury trial under the U.S. Constitution, but a jury trial is provided under some statutory authority. n2

[3] Additur May Be Permissible When Statute Requires Nominal Damages

Additur may be appropriate if nominal damages are required by statute and have not been awarded. n3

However, if nominal damages are not absolutely required, their award may well be considered impermissible additur. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursAdditursCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 484, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See United States v. Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield Ass'n, 99 F.2d 830, 833-834 (5th Cir. 1938), cert. denied, 306 U.S. 646 (1939).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Taylor v. Green, 868 F.2d 162, 165 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 841 (1989).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Walker v. Anderson Elec. Connectors, 944 F.2d 841, 845 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1078 (1993).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.55

§ 45.55 Weighing Evidence in Considering Motion

In considering a motion for new trial, the trial judge may weigh conflicting evidence and need not view the record in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. n1 Accordingly, the party moving for a new trial must evaluate the strength of the case presented at trial. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Song v. Ives Labs., Inc., 957 F.2d 1041, 1047 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Minetos v. City Univ. of N.Y., 925 F. Supp. 177, 186 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.56

§ 45.56 Motions to Reconsider Rule 59 Orders

[1] Court May Reconsider Order Granting New Trial

An order granting a new trial is interlocutory and destroys the finality of the judgment. n1

Since the district court has plenary power to reconsider, revise, alter, or amend an interlocutory order, the court has the power to take any action with respect to an order granting a new trial. The limitations of Rule 59 that are intended to protect the finality of judgments do not apply. n2

[2] Motion to Reconsider Order Denying New Trial Must Be Filed Within 28 Days After Entry of Judgment

When the court denies a motion for a new trial, the finality of the judgment is restored and the appeal time begins to run from the date the order is entered. n3

The court may hear a motion for reconsideration that is filed within the 28-day period following the order denying the motion for new trial. Once the 28-day period has expired, a motion to reconsider the denial is inappropriate. n4 An exception may be made if the order denying a new trial was inadvertent and can be corrected under Rule 60(a). n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Stone v. INS, 514 U.S. 386, 402, 115 S. Ct 1537, 131 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hardin v. Hayes, 52 F.3d 934, 938 (11th Cir. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Thomassen v. United States, 835 F.2d 727, 730 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bank Leumi Trust Co. v. Istim, Inc., 902 F. Supp 46, 48 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Burnam v. Amoco Container Co., 738 F.2d 1230, 1231-1232 (11th Cir. 1984) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.57

§ 45.57 Timely Rule 59 Motion Suspends Time for Appeal

A notice of appeal must ordinarily be filed within 30 days of a final judgment. n1 However, the filing of certain post-decisional motions (including a timely filed Rule 59 motion for new trial) will defer the start of the appeal period until disposition of the last of those motions outstanding. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A)(iv). Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A) provides, in relevant part:

> If a party timely files in the district court any of the following motions under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the time to file an appeal runs for all parties from the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion:
>
> (i) for judgment under Rule 50(b);
>
> (ii) to amend or make additional findings of fact under Rule 52(b), whether or not granting the motion would alter the judgment;
>
> (iii) for attorney's fees under Rule 54 if the district court extends the time to appeal under Rule 58;
>
> (iv) to alter or amend the judgment under Rule 59;
>
> (v) for a new trial under Rule 59; or
>
> (vi) for relief under Rule 60 if the motion is filed no later than 28 days after the judgment is entered.

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.58

§ 45.58 Motion for New Trial Is Not Required to Appeal From Judgment

A motion for a new trial is not essential to preserve properly made objections for appellate review, and therefore is not a prerequisite to an appeal from the judgment. n1

However, any ground for new trial that is reviewable for abuse of discretion must be presented to the trial court for the exercise of that discretion. Grounds for new trial that arise solely in the context of post-trial proceedings must be presented to the trial court for consideration by way of a motion for new trial, and the failure to do so deprives the appellate court from any record that is reviewable for error. Such grounds include:

- Newly discovered evidence
- Verdict against the weight of the evidence
- Inadequate or excessive damages

Although not a prerequisite to an appeal, it is often advisable to bring the alleged errors to the trial court's attention by a motion for a new trial, so that the time and expense of an appeal before a new trial ordered by the appellate court may be avoided.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Elmore v. United States, 843 F.2d 1128, 1131 n.7 (8th Cir. 1988) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.59

§ 45.59 Appealing Grant of Motion for New Trial

[1] Order Granting New Trial Is Generally Not Appealable

An order granting a new trial is interlocutory and not appealable. n1

The order granting a new trial may be reviewed when the final judgment is entered following the new trial. n2

[2] Order Granting New Trial May Be Appealable If Court Lacked Jurisdiction

Under an old line of authority, an order granting a new trial is appealable if the district court lacked the jurisdiction to grant it. n3

Because this line of authority undermines the concept of finality, the better view is that review should only be available through an extraordinary writ, if the losing party does not wish to wait for the subsequent entry of a final judgment. An extraordinary writ enables the appellate court to review orders granting a new trial that are not otherwise appealable. The writ is proper only in exceptional circumstances. n4

Extraordinary writs have also been held appropriate if the district court exceeded its authority in granting a new trial. n5

[3] Conditional Motion for New Trial Granted With Judgment as Matter of Law

If a motion for a new trial is granted together with a motion for judgment as a matter of law, the order granting a new trial is conditional on the appellate court's reversal of the judgment. The judgment is final, and an appeal may be taken from it. n6

On appeal from that judgment, the court may review the propriety of the conditional grant of a new trial. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil

ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Allied Chem. Corp. v. Daiflon, Inc., 449 U.S. 33, 34, 101 S. Ct 188, 66 L. Ed. 2d 193 (1980) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Richardson v. Communications Workers of Am., 469 F.2d 333, 334 (8th Cir. 1972) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 818 (1973) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Phillips v. Negley, 117 U.S. 665, 678, 6 S. Ct. 901, 29 L. Ed. 1013 (1886) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Allied Chem. Corp. v. Daiflon, Inc., 449 U.S. 33, 34, 101 S. Ct 188, 190, 66 L. Ed. 2d 193 (1980) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Bailey v. Sharp, 782 F.2d 1366, 1367 (7th Cir. 1986) , appeal after remand, 811 F.2d 366 (1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. Allied Chem. Corp. v. Daiflon, Inc., 449 U.S. 33, 36, 101 S. Ct 188, 66 L. Ed. 2d 193 (1980) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.60

§ 45.60 Appealing Order Denying New Trial

[1] Order Denying New Trial Is Not Immediately Appealable

An order denying a new trial may not be immediately appealed. Instead, the appeal must be taken from the underlying final judgment. n1

[2] Exceptions to Nonappealability of Order Denying New Trial

The appellate court will ordinarily treat as harmless and accept the appeal when both of the following can be demonstrated: n2

- An appeal is mistakenly taken from an order denying a new trial
- The underlying judgment is appealable because it is a final judgment or because it is an appealable interlocutory judgment

Once the court accepts an appeal on the underlying judgment, it may review an alleged abuse of discretion in the order denying a new trial. n3

However, the appellate court may not review the denial of a motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence. n4

[3] Appeal From Denial of Untimely Motion

If a party appeals from the denial of an untimely motion for a new trial, the appellate court may construe the motion as being made under Rule 60, and may review the district's court discretion in denying the motion, but may not review the underlying judgment. n5

[4] Order Denying New Trial Is Appealable If Order Involves New Matters Arising After Entry of Judgment

The denial of a timely motion for a new trial that presents new evidence or other matters that were not before the court at the time the judgment was entered is appealable. A party cannot raise this issue with an appeal from the final judgment, so the notice of appeal must be filed from the order denying the motion for a new trial. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. McGowne v. Challenge-Cook Bros., Inc., 672 F.2d 652, 659 (8th Cir. 1982) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wheatley v. Beetar, 637 F.2d 863, 864 n.1 (2d Cir. 1980) , rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Wheatley v. Ford, 679 F.2d 1037 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-182, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962) (citing Moore's).

(n4)Footnote 4. Stonewall Ins. Co. v. Asbestos Claims Management Corp., 73 F.3d 1178, 1199 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Van Skiver v. United States, 952 F.2d 1241, 1243 (10th Cir. 1991) , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 828 (1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Peterman v. Indian Motorcycle Co., 216 F.2d 289, 291 (1st Cir. 1954) .

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial *
B. Motion for New Trial

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 45.61 through 45.99

[Reserved]

§§ 45.61[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 45 Post-Trial Motions: Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial * C. Forms

4-45 Federal Litigation Guide § 45.100

§ 45.100 Combined Notice for Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial

[1] FORM

Combined Notice for Renewed Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law and Motion for a New Trial

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse, located at [address of court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 50(b):

(a) setting aside the verdict on the ground that [describe grounds for setting aside the verdict, stating with particularity the lack of evidence raised in the pre-verdict motion for judgment as a matter of law]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

In addition, [party designation and name of moving party] moves for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 59(b):

(a) granting a new trial on the ground that [describe grounds for seeking new trial, e.g., verdict is contrary to law]; and

(b) granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute; generally required) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date], the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date], and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) for renewed motion as a matter of law and Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b) seeking a new trial. If, for any reason, the court does not grant a motion for judgment as a matter of law at the close of all the evidence, the court is considered to have submitted the action to the jury subject to the court's later deciding the legal questions raised by the motion. The movant may renew the request for judgment as a matter of law and may alternatively request a new trial or join a motion for a new trial under Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b).

Grounds on which a new trial may be granted include the following:

- Verdict is contrary to law
- Verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence
- Damages are inadequate or excessive
- Inconsistency of special verdicts or general verdict and special interrogatories
- Newly discovered evidence
- Improper jury instructions
- Improper submission of issues to jury
- Erroneous evidentiary rulings
- Denial of jury trial
- Errors in selection or bias of jurors
- Misconduct of judge, attorneys, or jurors

[3] Motion Must Be Filed Within 28 Days of Entry of Judgment

The movant may renew its request for judgment as a matter of law by filing a motion no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment - or if the motion addresses a jury issue not decided by a verdict - no later than 28 days after the jury was discharged. n1 A party has 28 days after the entry of judgment to file a motion for a new trial. n1.1

[4] Filing of Opposing Affidavits

A party opposing the motion for new trial has 14 days after service of the motion to file opposing affidavits. n2

[5] Critical Considerations

Local district court rules and individual judge's rules should be consulted regarding the following topics:

- Formatting requirements
- Bluebacks and other covers
- Page limits
- Specifying rule or statute on which motion is based
- Date and time of hearing
- Oral argument
- Extending time
- Expedited hearing/Orders to show cause
- Supporting papers
- Serving motion papers
- Filing motion papers
- Courtesy copies
- Opposing papers
- Reply papers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b).

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(c).

* Chapter 45 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide 46.syn

§ 46.syn Synopsis to Chapter 46: Relief From Judgment *

§ 46.01 Moving for Relief From Judgment or Order Under Rule 60(b)

§ 46.02 Understanding Scope of Rule 60(b)
[1] Rule Applies Only to Final Judgment, Order, or Proceeding
[2] Motion Does Not Affect Finality of Judgment
[3] Balancing Justice and Public Interest
[4] Court Still Has Power to Entertain Independent Action to Grant Relief

§ 46.03 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)
[1] Generally Motion Must Be Made Within Reasonable Time
[2] One-Year Filing Limitation for Motions Based on Certain Grounds
[3] Determining "Reasonable Time"
[4] Motion for Relief From Void Judgment May Be Made at Any Time

§ 46.04 Filing Rule 60(b) Motion in Correct Court

§ 46.05 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(1) for Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

§ 46.06 Generally Attorney's Mistakes or Omissions Are Not Basis for Relief Under Rule 60(b)(1)

§ 46.07 Legal Error by Court May Be Mistake Under Rule 60(b)(1)

§ 46.08 Vacating Default Judgment Under Rule 60(b)(1)

§ 46.09 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(1)

§ 46.10 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(2) on the Basis of Newly Discovered Evidence

§ 46.11 Evaluating Standard for Relief Under Rule 60(b)(2)

§ 46.12 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(2)

§ 46.13 Opposing a Motion Under Rule 60(b)(2)

§ 46.14 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(3) for Fraud, Misrepresentation, or Misconduct of Adverse Party

§ 46.15 Proving Fraud Under Rule 60(b)(3)
[1] Clear and Convincing Evidence
[2] Fraud Must Impact Fairness of Trial
[3] Demonstrating That Misconduct Could Not Have Been Exposed Sooner

§ 46.16 Timing Of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(3)

§ 46.17 Vacating Judgment Based on Fraud Upon the Court

§ 46.18 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(4) When the Judgment is Void

§ 46.19 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(4)

§ 46.20 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Satisfaction, Release, or Discharge of Judgment

§ 46.21 Proving Satisfaction, Release, or Discharge

§ 46.22 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Reversal or Vacatur of Prior Judgment

§ 46.23 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) When Co-Party Has Been Granted Reversal on Appeal

§ 46.24 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Unfairness of Prospective Application of Judgment

§ 46.25 Demonstrating That the Purpose of the Injunction or Decree Has Been Achieved

§ 46.26 Demonstrating That Continued Application of Decree is Causing Hardship to Moving Party

§ 46.27 Demonstrating Change in Law As Basis for Relief from Decree or Injunction

§ 46.28 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)(5)

§ 46.29 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(6) for "Any Other Reason Justifying Relief"

§ 46.30 Party Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(6) Must Show Extraordinary Circumstances

§ 46.31 Higher Standard Applies Under Rule 60(b)(6)

§ 46.32 Combining Rule 60(b)(6) Motion With Other Motions Under Rule 60(b)

§ 46.33 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)(6)

§ 46.34 Rule 60(b) Motion Procedure
[1] Contents and Form of Motion Papers
[2] Serving Motion Papers

§ 46.35 Effect of Rule 60(b) Motion on Appeal of Underlying Judgment

§ 46.36 Appealing Ruling on Rule 60(b) Motion

§ 46.37 Opposing Rule 60(b) Motion

§ 46.38 CHECKLISTS: Motion for Relief From Judgment
[1] CHECKLIST: Moving for Relief From Order, Judgment, or Proceeding

[2] CHECKLIST: Opposing Motion for Relief

§ 46.100 Notice of Motion for Relief From Judgment or Order
[1] FORM
Notice of Motion for Relief from Judgment or Order
[2] Use of Form
[3] Deadline for Filing Motion
[4] Critical Considerations

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter provides a comprehensive and practical discussion of relief from judgment under Rule 60(b), and covers the following topics:

- The scope of relief available under Rule 60(b)
- Timing of filing of motion under Rule 60(b)
- Filing motion in proper court
- Grounds for relief under Rule 60(b)
- Motion practice
- Serving motion papers

The chapter also includes a checklist for moving for relief under Rule 60(b) and a checklist to oppose such a motion. Finally, the chapter includes a form of notice of motion under Rule 60(b) with comments for use of the form.

For expanded coverage of relief from judgment, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 60, Relief From Judgment or Order (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.01

§ 46.01 Moving for Relief From Judgment or Order Under Rule 60(b)

Under Rule 60(b) the court may relieve a party or a party's legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons:

- Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; n1
- Newly discovered evidence which by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b); n2
- Fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party; n3
- The judgment is void; n4
- The judgment has been satisfied, released, discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it is based has been reversed or otherwise vacated, or it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application; n5 or
- Any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesExcusable NeglectCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesMistakeCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.02

§ 46.02 Understanding Scope of Rule 60(b)

[1] Rule Applies Only to Final Judgment, Order, or Proceeding

Under Rule 60(b) relief may be granted from a final judgment, order, or proceeding. n1

[2] Motion Does Not Affect Finality of Judgment

A motion under Rule 60(b) does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. n2

[3] Balancing Justice and Public Interest

A motion seeking relief pursuant to Rule 60(b) is addressed to the sound discretion of the district court; in resolving the application, the court must balance the ends of justice with the public interest in the finality of judgments. n3

[4] Court Still Has Power to Entertain Independent Action to Grant Relief

Rule 60(d) explicitly provides that Rule 60 does not displace the power of the court to entertain an independent action for relief from judgment. n4 This provision does not authorize an independent action for relief. Instead, it preserves the pre-existing equitable remedy of an independent action.

An independent action does not require an independent basis of federal jurisdiction because whatever jurisdictional basis applied to the earlier action extends to the independent action. However, relief in such an action is rarely granted and is available only when not inconsistent with the strictures of Rule 60(b) and when necessary "to prevent a grave miscarriage of justice." n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered EvidenceCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment Rule

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b); Browder v. Director, Illinois Dep't of Corrections, 434 U.S. 257, 263 n.7, 98 S. Ct. 556, 54 L. Ed. 2d 521 (1978) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Home Ins. Co., 882 F. Supp 1355, 1356 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. United States v. Beggerly, 524 U.S. 38, 45-48, 118 S. Ct. 1862, 141 L. Ed. 2d 32 (1998) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.03

§ 46.03 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)

[1] Generally Motion Must Be Made Within Reasonable Time

Rule 60(c) provides that every motion for relief from judgment must be made within a "reasonable time." n1 Failure to satisfy this requirement is a ground for denying relief. n2 Moreover, many of the enumerated grounds, either by their language or by construction or both, make relief dependent on promptness. n3 Rule 60(b)(2) explicitly requires a showing that the newly discovered evidence "with reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b)."

The party opposing the motion should always question the moving party's showing as to reasonable time or diligence.

[2] One-Year Filing Limitation for Motions Based on Certain Grounds

A motion for relief based on one of the following grounds must be filed no more than one year after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken: n4

- Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect;
- Newly discovered evidence which by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b); or
- Fraud (whether denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party;

Although there is a one-year limitation period, the motion must also be made within a reasonable time. n5 The fact that the motion is made within one year gives the court power to entertain it, but as the delay in bringing the motion approaches one year there should be a corresponding increase in the burden that must be carried to show that the delay was reasonable. n6

The one-year period for bringing motions under Rules 60(b)(1), (2), and (3) is an absolute bar, even though a longer delay might be reasonable under the circumstances. Furthermore Rule 6(b) of the Federal Rules, relating to the court's discretionary authority to enlarge time limits, by its terms is expressly inapplicable to Rule 60(b).

[3] Determining "Reasonable Time"

A determination of reasonable time requires scrutinizing the particular circumstances of the case, and balancing the interest in finality of judgments with the reasons for the delay; in addition, courts consider the possibility of prejudice to the opposing party. n7

[4] Motion for Relief From Void Judgment May Be Made at Any Time

Because a void judgment is a nullity, a motion under Rule 60(b)(4) challenging a judgment as void may "reasonably" be made at any time. n8 In rare circumstances a party's conduct may constitute waiver of the right to challenge on grounds of voidness. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered EvidenceGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Boch Oldsmobile, Inc., 909 F.2d 657, 660-661 (1st Cir. 1990) ("What constitutes reasonable time ... depends on the facts of each case. ... The relevant considerations include, whether the parties have been prejudiced by the delay and whether a good reason has been presented for failing to take action sooner").

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Limerick v. Greenwald, 749 F.2d 97, 98-99 (1st Cir. 1984) ; Trinkner v. Heckler, 683 F. Supp. 513, 514 (E.D. Pa. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Trustees of Local Union No. 727 Pension Fund v. Perfect Parking, Inc., 126 F.R.D. 48, 53-54 (N.D. Ill. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Sasso v. M. Fine Lumber Co., 144 F.R.D. 185, 189 (E.D.N.Y. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. United States v. Boch Oldsmobile, Inc., 909 F.2d 657, 660-661 (1st Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., United States v. Boch Oldsmobile, Inc., 909 F.2d 657, 661 (1st Cir. 1990) (relief not granted based on facts of case but court noted that if the judgment were void relief must be granted regardless of timeliness); see, e.g., Taft v. Donellan Jerome, Inc., 407 F.2d 807, 808-809 (7th Cir. 1969) (attack on void judgment after 13 years upheld); see, e.g., Crosby v. Bradstreet Co., 312 F.2d 483, 485 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 373 U.S. 911 (1963) (vacating void judgment after nearly 30 years).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Trustees of Cent. Laborers' Welfare Fund v. Lowery, 924 F.2d 731, 734 (7th Cir. 1991) (although defense of failure of service of process had not technically been waived under the provisions of Rule 12, conduct of defendants subsequent to entry of default judgment, including participation in post-judgment proceedings for almost six years, was sufficient to show that defense was waived and hence ground of Rule 60(b) motion based on voidness was also waived).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.04

§ 46.04 Filing Rule 60(b) Motion in Correct Court

Counsel should file the Rule 60(b) motion in the court that rendered the judgment being challenged. n1

If a judgment rendered in one district court has been registered in another district court, the court where the judgment was registered may hear a Rule 60(b)(4) challenge alleging voidness due to lack of personal jurisdiction. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b) advisory committee's note (1946).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Covington Indus., Inc. v. Resintex, A.G., 629 F.2d 730, 733-734 (2d Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.05

§ 46.05 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(1) for Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

Since Rule 60(b)(1) does not define mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, a motion based on the rule is entirely dependent on the facts of the case. Rule 60(b)(1) is intended primarily to provide the moving party with relief from a judgment produced by an isolated mistake or oversight, for which the moving party offers some plausible and sympathetic excuse. Relief is usually denied where the moving party's overall conduct shows a pattern of indifference toward the case, signifying a refusal or unreasonable failure to take normal precautions to safeguard its interests. n1 When there is evidence of prejudice to the other party or bad faith, the court may properly find that excusable neglect does not exist under the facts. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurprise

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Vargas v. Gonzalez, 975 F.2d 916, 917-918 (1st Cir. 1992) (although underlying motion for relief did not clearly invoke Rule 60(b)(1), court noted that moving counsel's pattern of conduct was not neglect "of the 'excusable' variety" as would satisfy the requirements of Rule 60(b)(1)).

(n2)Footnote 2. See e.g., Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 507 U.S. 380, 393-394, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) ; Williams v. KFC Nat'l Mgmt. Co., 391 F.3d 411, 415-418 (2d Cir. 2004) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.06

§ 46.06 Generally Attorney's Mistakes or Omissions Are Not Basis for Relief Under Rule 60(b)(1)

In some cases, litigants seek relief from judgment on the ground that the misconduct of an attorney should not be imputed to the client. Many Rule 60(b) motions are made by the second or third lawyer to handle the case, alleging mistakes by earlier counsel. n1 Courts consistently decline to relieve a client under Rule 60(b)(1) of the burdens of a final judgment entered against the client due to the mistake or omission of his or her attorney by reason of the attorney's ignorance of the law or other rules of the court, or the attorney's inability to efficiently manage his or her caseload. n2 Note however, that an attorney's mental illness may constitute an extraordinary circumstance justifying relief under Rule 60(b)(6). n3

There is limited case law supporting Rule 60(b)(1) relief where the mistake of counsel has permitted an adverse judgment against a party who has a facially meritorious claim or defense which, because of counsel's mistake, was never heard. n4

There is also authority granting relief under Rule 60(b)(6) from mistakes of counsel which the courts are not prepared to say are "excusable" but where the seriousness of letting the judgment stand appears disproportionate to the gravity of the mistake. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurpriseLegal EthicsProfessional ConductGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. E.g, Sawka v. Healtheast, Inc., 989 F.2d 138, 139-140 (3d Cir. 1993) (plaintiff's third lawyer unsuccessful in asserting Rule 60(b)(1) argument based upon insufficiently detailed language in settlement agreement drafted by second lawyer); Smith v. Alumax Extrusions, Inc., 868 F.2d 1469, 1471 (5th Cir. 1989) (plaintiff's first lawyer withdrew and plaintiff retained a second lawyer, but did not know of pending motions for summary judgment; the lack of information concerning the status of the lawsuit was not excusable neglect for failing to timely respond to the summary judgment motions).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Pioneer Inv. Servs. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 507 U.S. 380, 393, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) (addressing the meaning of the term excusable neglect under a different statute); see also Allmerica Fin. Life Ins. & Annuity Co. v. Llewellyn, 139 F.3d 664, 665-666 (9th Cir. 1997) (attorney's failure to plead defense did not justify relief under Rule 60(b)(1)); United States v. 8136 S. Dobson St., 125 F.3d 1076, 1084 (7th Cir. 1997) (attorney's negligence or other misconduct not ground for Rule 60(b) relief); Briones v. Riviera Hotel & Casino, 116 F.3d 379, 380-382 (9th Cir. 1997) (relies on Supreme Court analysis from Pioneer in context of Rule 60(b)(1)).

(n3)Footnote 3. See United States v. Cirami, 563 F.2d 26, 32 (2d Cir. 1977) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See In re Salem Mortg. Co., 791 F.2d 456, 459-460 (6th Cir. 1986) (relief under Rule 60 was appropriate where a stipulation as to a particular issue, which limited available defenses, had been inadvertently signed, and counsel had, in fact, argued all the defenses).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Gray v. Estelle, 574 F.2d 209, 214-215 (5th Cir. 1978) . But see In re Virginia Information Sys. Corp., 932 F.2d 338, 342 (4th Cir. 1991) (while "attorney malfeasance which actively misleads a client or is comparably culpable might successfully ground a Rule 60(b) motion," neither ignorance, carelessness, nor "poor lawyering" are sufficient).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.07

§ 46.07 Legal Error by Court May Be Mistake Under Rule 60(b)(1)

The circuits are split concerning whether courts may reconsider legal errors in a judgment under Rule 60(b)(1). n1 In some circuits a legal mistake by the court in a judgment may be a ground for relief, n2 as may inadvertence by the court. n3

However, the safer route for seeking such relief is a timely appeal. Most of the authority which recognizes the possibility of Rule 60(b)(1) as a method for relief from judicial error of law limits the "reasonable time" for filing such a motion to the time within which an appeal could be taken. n4 In general, a Rule 60(b) motion should not be thought of as a substitute for appeal, n5 although it has been used to assist a party in curing an untimely appeal. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurprise

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Faile v. Upjohn Co. 988 F.2d 985, 986-987 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hopper v. Euclid Manor Nursing Home, Inc., 867 F.2d 291, 294 (6th Cir. 1989) ; see Schildhaus v. Moe, 335 F.2d 529, 531 (2d Cir. 1964) (citing Moore's); see also National Petrochemical Co. v. The M/T Stolt Sheaf, 930 F.2d 240, 244 (2d Cir. 1991) . But see Hoult v. Hoult, 57 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1995) (district court's admission of expert testimony regarding repressed memory was, at most, an erroneous decision on a point of law, not a "mistake" as defined in Rule 60(b)(1)).

(n3)Footnote 3. Buggs v. Elgin, J. & E. Ry. Co., 852 F.2d 318, 322 (7th Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Buggs v. Elgin, J. & E. Ry. Co., 852 F.2d 318, 322 (7th Cir. 1988) (denying a Rule 60(b)(1) motion to correct a judgment containing what was indisputably error by the magistrate).

(n5)Footnote 5. Latham v. Wells Fargo Bank, 987 F.2d 1199, 1203 (5th Cir. 1993) ; Eaton v. Jamrog, 984 F.2d 760, 762 (6th Cir. 1993) (vacation of judgment for such purpose cannot be entered sua sponte).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Lewis v. Alexander, 987 F.2d 392, 394-395 (6th Cir. 1993) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.08

§ 46.08 Vacating Default Judgment Under Rule 60(b)(1)

Rule 60(b)(1) is most frequently invoked to seek relief from default judgments enteredat the outset of an action because the defendant (or someone acting on defendant's behalf) mistakenly or inadvertently failed to file a timely response to the complaint. In such circumstances Rule 60(b)(1) is usually the only subdivision of Rule 60(b) that applies. In the context of a default judgment, court's generally apply the following criteria to Rule 60(b)(1) motions: n1

- Whether the default was willful;
- Whether the defendant has a meritorious defense; and
- What prejudice will result to the non-defaulting party if the relief is granted.

Where the moving party or counsel is led to believe that the opponent has agreed to an extension, and a default is taken during that ostensibly extended time, the moving party may also argue fraud or opponent misconduct under Rule 60(b)(3). n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultEntry of Default JudgmentsCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From DefaultCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurprise

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Augusta Fiberglass Coatings, Inc. v. Fodor Contracting Corp., 843 F.2d 808, 810-812 (4th Cir. 1988) ; American Alliance Ins. Co. v. Eagle Ins. Co., 92 F.3d 57, 59 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See First Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. California Pac. Life, 876 F.2d 877, 882-883 (11th Cir. 1989) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.09

§ 46.09 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(1)

To be timely a motion for relief under Rule 60(b)(1) must be made within a reasonable time and within a maximum time limit of one year after the final judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurprise

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.10

§ 46.10 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(2) on the Basis of Newly Discovered Evidence

A Rule 60(b)(2) motion is a demanding and arduous motion to win, and once lost the denial is reviewed only for abuse of discretion. n1 It is often advisable to combine the ground of newly discovered evidence with some other Rule 60(b) ground, e.g., Rule 60(b)(1) mistake, Rule 60(b)(3) fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct, and/or Rule 60(b)(5) inequity in "prospective application."

The task in making a Rule 60(b)(2) motion is to convince the court that with the newly discovered evidence the outcome would have been materially altered. n2

Generally speaking, the longer the trial, the heavier the 60(b)(2) burden, because the number of interconnections of facts which might have been persuasive increases exponentially with the length of a trial and because the court will be reluctant to vacate a result requiring the investment of substantial judicial resources. If the evidence could have been obtained during discovery but wasn't, or if a reasonable investigation would have uncovered it, the 60(b)(2) motion will be denied. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Schwartz v. Capital Liquidators, Inc., 984 F.2d 53, 54 (2d Cir. 1993) ; McKnight v. United States Steel Corp., 726 F.2d 333, 335 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. MCI Telecomm. Corp. v. Matrix Communications Corp., 135 F.3d 27, 35-37 (1st Cir. 1998) (relief from judgment properly denied when newly discovered evidence was not likely to have changed outcome of action); Hoult v. Hoult, 57 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1995) (scientific paper on repressed memory published one month before trial did not constitute "newly discovered evidence" under Rule 60(b)(2); moreover, defendant failed to demonstrate that opinions expressed in article would probably have changed trial's outcome); Brown v. Petrolite Corp., 965 F.2d 38, 50 (5th Cir. 1992) ("Newly discovered evidence justifies relief under Rule 60(b)(2) ... only if the evidence is material and clearly would have produced a different result if presented before the original judgment").

(n3)Footnote 3. See Brooks v. Ferguson-Florissant School Dist., 113 F.3d 903, 905 (8th Cir. 1997) (plaintiff not entitled to relief from judgment of dismissal since information offered to avoid limitations defense could have been uncovered earlier by the exercise of diligence); see also Johns-Manville Corp. v. Guardian Indus. Corp., 116 F.R.D. 97, 101-102 (E.D. Mich. 1987) (patent infringers could not rely on the results of post-trial experiments when they failed to conduct such tests before trial). Cf. Alpern v. Utilicorp United, Inc., 84 F.3d 1525, 1536-1537 (8th Cir. 1996) ("newly discovered evidence," obtained from a document "buried among the thousands produced" in this stockholder action, entitled the one stockholder, whose purchase occurred subsequent to publication by the corporate defendant of misinformation, to relief from partial summary judgment granted the corporation by the district court).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.11

§ 46.11 Evaluating Standard for Relief Under Rule 60(b)(2)

To prevail in a motion seeking relief from a judgment based on newly discovered evidence, the movant must show the following: n1

- The evidence must be discovered subsequent to the trial;
- The movant must demonstrate due diligence;
- The evidence must not be cumulative or impeaching;
- The evidence must be material; and
- The evidence is likely to produce a different result.

In addition, the newly discovered evidence must be both admissible and credible. n2 In most of the reported cases the moving party fails to satisfy one or more of these stringent requirements. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Atkinson v. Prudential Property Co., 43 F.3d 367, 371-372 (8th Cir. 1994) ; United States v. McGaughey 977 F.2d 1067, 1075 (7th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1019 (1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See United States v. McGaughey, 977 F.2d 1067, 1071 (7th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1019 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Mitchell v. Shalala, 48 F.3d 1039, 1041 (8th Cir. 1995) (claimant failed to exercise due diligence in discovering evidence and failed to show that new evidence would have changed outcome); Atkinson v. Prudential Property Co., 43 F.3d 367, 372 (8th Cir. 1994) (motion properly denied because there was no reason to believe that newly discovered evidence would produce different results).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.12

§ 46.12 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(2)

Relief may be accorded under Rule 60(b)(2) based on newly discovered evidence that could not have been discovered by due diligence in time for the party to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b). n1 The Rule 59 time period is 28 days. n2 The movingparty must establish that the evidence could not have been discovered earlier with due diligence. n3 Additionally, the movant must bring the motion within a reasonable time and not later than one year after the judgment enters, n4 even if reasonableness can be shown.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Schwartz v. Capital Liquidators, Inc., 984 F.2d 53, 54 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1); see also In re Dakota Cheese, Inc., 923 F.2d 576, 577 (8th Cir. 1991) (Rule 60(b) motion denied where it failed to come within one-year time limit applicable when ground is newly-discovered evidence).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.13

§ 46.13 Opposing a Motion Under Rule 60(b)(2)

Counsel opposing a Rule 60(b)(2) motion should be prepared to attack the moving party's "due diligence." n1 Such an attack presents a wide range of approaches. If the moving party pursued extensive discovery and obtained what was requested, but simply failed to ask for the materials now identified as the newly discovered evidence, diligence is open to question. If the identity of a witness was known, but the witness was not called at trial because of the expense involved, this can be construed as a lack of due diligence. n2 Rule 60(b)(2) is not intended to remedy the moving party's failure to properly analyze and prepare the case or to provide relief from the errors of judgment made by moving counsel. If the moving party pursued little pretrial discovery, that fact alone might establish a lack of diligence.

Counsel opposing the motion should also try to minimize the significance of the newly discovered evidence, arguing that it is merely cumulative, or merely impeaching, or in any event not of such significance as to impact a new trial. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. E.g., Gomez v. Chody, 867 F.2d 395, 404-406 (7th Cir. 1989) ; Lepore v. Vidockler, 792 F.2d 272, 274-275 (1st Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Parrilla-Lopez v. United States, 841 F.2d 16, 19-20 (1st Cir. 1988) (newly- discovered evidence was not grounds for a new trial where the evidence was cumulative in nature, and therefore not "newly discovered" within the meaning of Rule 60(b)(2), and was not sought previously because of the expense involved).

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., Shiley, Inc. v. Bentley Labs., Inc., 115 F.R.D. 169, 170-171 (C.D. Cal. 1987) . See also Hoult v. Hoult, 57 F. 3d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 1995) (article published one month before trial criticizing reliability of repressed memories was "hardly the sort of extraordinary new evidence contemplated by Rule 60(b)(2)").

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

126 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.14

§ 46.14 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(3) for Fraud, Misrepresentation, or Misconduct of Adverse Party

Rule 60(b)(3) provides for relief based upon fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party. n1 A movant may rely on conduct outside or inside the courtroom to constitute fraud. n2 In addition to losing the benefit of the judgment, there may be other serious consequences for the party and counsel accused of fraud. Prosecution for perjury is possible. Professional disciplinary proceedings and a malpractice action against the attorney are probable if counsel's misconduct contributed to the fraud. The 60(b)(3) motion (or independent action seeking vacation of a judgment on grounds of the opposing party's fraud) will thus likely induce the court to inquire not only as to the possible involvement of non-moving counsel in the misconduct alleged, but also the extent to which moving counsel has investigated before acting.

Retribution for a wrongful charge of fraud should be expected, either in a request for Rule 11 sanctions or in a separate lawsuit for abuse of process. Therefore, counsel may consider moving for relief on the grounds of surprise, mistake, or newly discovered evidence even if the facts strongly indicate your opponent's misconduct. n3

Fraud is the knowing misrepresentation of a material fact, or concealment of a material fact when there is a duty to disclose, done to induce another to act to his or her detriment. n4 A party seeking relief under Rule 60(b)(3) need not demonstrate that the adverse party has committed all the elements of fraud specified in the law of the state where the federal court is sitting, but rather need only show that the adverse party's conduct was fraudulent under the general common-law understanding. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesInadvertenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesSurpriseCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentFraud

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cf. Good Luck Nursing Home, Inc. v. Harris, 636 F.2d 572, 577-578 n.4 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ; Fleming v. Gulf Oil Corp., 547 F.2d 908 (10th Cir. 1977) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Info-Hold, Inc. v. Sound Merch., Inc., 538 F.3d 448, 456 (6th Cir. 2008) (citing Moore's).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Info-Hold, Inc. v. Sound Merch., Inc., 538 F.3d 448, 455-456 (6th Cir. 2008) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.15

§ 46.15 Proving Fraud Under Rule 60(b)(3)

[1] Clear and Convincing Evidence

It is a serious matter to assert that a party has obtained a judgment by fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct. The movant must establish the fraud by clear and convincing evidence. n1 However, the other party's conduct may raise a rebuttable presumption of fraud; for example, when a key report was intentionally withheld during discovery, the non-disclosing party was required to overcome a presumption that fraud had occurred. n2

[2] Fraud Must Impact Fairness of Trial

The fraud must have prevented the moving party from fully and fairly presenting its case. n3 It is not, however, necessary to prove that, absent the fraud, a different result would have been obtained at trial. n4

[3] Demonstrating That Misconduct Could Not Have Been Exposed Sooner

The district court may deny relief if the fraud or other misconduct should have been exposed earlier, through careful trial preparation and investigation or proper cross-examination. It is often wise to include an affidavit describing exactly how the fraud was discovered, to demonstrate that it could not have been uncovered by careful trial preparation. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentFraudEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofClear & Convincing Proof

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Abrahamsen v. Trans-State Express, Inc., 92 F.3d 425, 428 (6th Cir. 1996) (plaintiffs introduced clear and convincing evidence that they were prevented from fully and fairly presenting their case when defendant failed to disclose or produce material requested in discovery and witness falsely testified that statement did not exist); Longden v. Sunderman, 979 F.2d 1095, 1103 (5th Cir. 1992) ; Ervin v. Wilkinson, 701 F.2d 59, 61 (7th Cir. 1983) ; Harris v. Mapp, 719 F. Supp. 1317, 1324 (E.D. Va. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Anderson v. Cryovac, Inc., 862 F.2d 910, 925 (1st Cir. 1988) , aff'd sub nom. Anderson v. Beatrice Foods Co., 900 F.2d 388 (1st Cir.) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 891 (1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Gonzalez v. Gannett Satellite Info. Network, 903 F. Supp 329, 332 (N.D.N.Y. 1995) , aff'd, 101 F.3d 109 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ty Inc. v. Softbelly's, Inc., 353 F.3d 528, 536-537 (7th Cir. 2003) ; Lonsdorf v. Seefeldt, 47 F.3d 893, 897 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Anderson v. Cryovac, Inc., 862 F.2d 910, 924 n.10 (1st Cir. 1988) , aff'd sub nom. Anderson v. Beatrice Foods Co., 900 F.2d 388 (1st Cir.) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 891 (1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Black v. Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 641 F. Supp. 799, 802 (N.D.N.Y. 1986) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.16

§ 46.16 Timing Of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(3)

A motion under Rule 60(b)(3) asserting that a judgment was the product of an adverse party's fraud, misrepresentation or other misconduct is subject to the requirement that it be brought within a reasonable time, and in any event, not later than one year from date of judgment. n1 If relief from a judgment on the ground of the adverse party's fraud, misconduct, or misrepresentation is sought more than one year after entry of judgment, the wrongful conduct must amount to fraud on the court, and the relief must be sought through an independent action. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentFraud

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1); see also Gonzalez v. Walgreens Co., 918 F.2d 303, 305 (1st Cir. 1990) ; In re Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R.R. Co., 878 F.2d 182, 184 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wilson v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 873 F.2d 869, 871-872 (5th Cir. 1989) (fraudulent concealment of hazards of asbestos was not egregious enough to be a fraud upon the court).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.17

§ 46.17 Vacating Judgment Based on Fraud Upon the Court

Rule 60(b)(3), by its own terms does not apply to a motion to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court, such as bribery of a judge, jury tampering, or other serious interference with the integrity of the court. n1 These grounds are traditionally difficult to establish, and must involve egregious conduct. n2 The time limitation of one year generally applicable to motions under Rule 60(b)(3) does not apply to a motion for relief from judgment based on fraud upon the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentFraud

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b); see, e.g., Kupferman v. Consolidated Research & Mfg. Corp., 459 F.2d 1072, 1079 (2d Cir. 1972) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., In re Intermagnetics Am., Inc., 926 F.2d 912, 916-917 (9th Cir. 1991) (in reversing district court and remanding for further consideration of independent action seeking relief from sale of property approved by bankruptcy court, court discussed some of the difficulties of analysis with regard to a "fraud upon the court" ground under Rule 60(b), including the distinction drawn between extrinsic fraud which prevents a party by trick or artifice from properly presenting a case, and intrinsic fraud such as perjury, and the preference of a focus on harm to the integrity of the judicial system rather than, necessarily, prejudice to a party); see also, United States v. International Tel. & Tel. Corp., 349 F. Supp. 22, 29 (D. Conn. 1972) , aff'd sub nom. Nader v. United States, 410 U.S. 919 (1973) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.18

§ 46.18 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(4) When the Judgment is Void

Rule 60(b)(4) provides for seeking relief from a void judgment. n1 Examples of void judgments include:

- Court lacked personal jurisdiction; n2
- Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction; or n3
- Court's action violated due process. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Kocher v. Dow Chem. Co., 132 F.3d 1225, 1229 (8th Cir. 1997) ; see also Covington Indus., Inc., v. Resintex, A.G., 629 F.2d 730, 732-737 & n.4 (2d Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Forma, 42 F.3d 759, 762 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Carter v. Fenner, 136 F.3d 1000, 1005-1009 (5th Cir. 1998) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.19

§ 46.19 Timing of Motion Under Rule 60(b)(4)

There is no time limit with regard to attacking void judgments. n1 If a judgment is found to be void it must be set aside; discretion plays no role with respect to a void judgment. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Briley v. Hidalgo, 981 F.2d 246, 249 (5th Cir. 1993) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Orner v. Shalala, 30 F.3d 1307, 1310 (10th Cir. 1994) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.20

§ 46.20 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Satisfaction, Release, or Discharge of Judgment

Relief from a judgment may be obtained on the grounds that "the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged." n1 The terms of Rule 60(b)(5) raise no particularly complex legal questions. If a judgment has been satisfied by the judgment debtor's payment or other compliance with its terms, e.g., specific performance, the judgment debtor is entitled to discharge. Similarly, if there has been a release by the judgment creditor as to all or part of the judgment, or if the judgment has been discharged in bankruptcy, the judgment debtor is entitled to the benefit thereof.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.21

§ 46.21 Proving Satisfaction, Release, or Discharge

The question of satisfaction in the absence of a filed "satisfaction of judgment" is fertile ground for potential fact controversies, such as a controversy over the nature of payments made by the judgment debtor, whether payment was intended as satisfaction of the judgment or as satisfaction of some other obligation, whether a partial payment was intended as full satisfaction of the judgment or only as partial satisfaction, and so on. n1

The issue of release ordinarily presents questions of law concerning interpretation or validity of the alleged release. Disputed issues of fact may also arise, and should be addressed through discovery and possibly an oral evidentiary hearing.

Whether a judgment has been discharged in bankruptcy is ordinarily dependent on an interpretation of the bankruptcy court records in the proceeding involving the judgment debtor. Most of the controversy on a Rule 60(b)(4) motion asserting discharge will be resolved by those bankruptcy records.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. An unusual situation was presented in Johnson Waste Materials v. Marshall, an action by the Secretary of Labor claiming that the defendant had failed to pay overtime as required by the minimum wage laws. The defendant in fact had paid much of the overtime sought but failed to prove it at trial because it couldn't find the records. More than a year after the judgment, the defendant turned up its cancelled checks showing payment of the overtime and the endorsements of the employees. The court treated this as proof of satisfaction of the judgment. Johnson Waste Materials v. Marshall, 611 F.2d 593, 599-600 (5th Cir. 1980) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.22

§ 46.22 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Reversal or Vacatur of Prior Judgment

Rule 60(b)(5) provides for relief from a judgment that was "based" on a prior judgment that has been "reversed or otherwise vacated." n1 This portion of Rule 60(b)(5) provides relief only in the situation where the judgment attacked by the motion rests entirely upon another judgment, as where an action is brought to enforce a judgment or as with res judicata or collateral estoppel. n2 Situations coming within this provision arise only rarely. Courts have refused to grant relief under this provision, for example, where there has merely been an intervening change in controlling decisional law which formed the basis for the judgment attacked. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsPreclusion & Effect of JudgmentsEstoppelCollateral EstoppelCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentPrior Judgment Reversed

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cruickshank & Co. v. Dutchess Shipping Co., 805 F.2d 465, 467 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Bailey v. Ryan Stevedoring Co., 894 F.2d 157, 159-160 (5th Cir.) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 829 (1990) ; Tomlin v. McDaniel, 865 F.2d 209, 211 (9th Cir. 1989) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.23

§ 46.23 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) When Co-Party Has Been Granted Reversal on Appeal

Rule 60(b)(5) may, in limited circumstances, be available to relieve one party to a judgment after a co-party has been granted a reversal on appeal. However, the party that neglected to appeal is not guaranteed relief, particularly if failing to appeal was a matter of litigation strategy. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cruickshank & Co. v. Dutchess Shipping Co., 805 F.2d 465, 467-468 (2d Cir. 1986) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.24

§ 46.24 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(5) for Unfairness of Prospective Application of Judgment

Relief from a judgment may be obtained under Rule 60(b)(5) when "it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application." n1 This portion of Rule 60(b)(5) acknowledges the historic power of courts of equity to vacate or modify injunctions upon a showing of sufficient change in factual or legal circumstances. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. Note that relief from a judgment under Rule 60(b)(5) cannot be obtained where the judgment is final, not prospective in equity. Kock v. Government of the Virgin Islands, 811 F.2d 240, 244-245 (3d Cir. 1987) . The standard to be applied in determining whether an order has prospective application is whether it is "executory" or involves "supervision of changing conduct or conditions." Twelve John Does v. District of Columbia, 841 F.2d 1133, 1139 (D.C. Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.25

§ 46.25 Demonstrating That the Purpose of the Injunction or Decree Has Been Achieved

To obtain relief under Rule 60(b)(5), counsel must establish that circumstances have changed so significantly that relief is warranted. n1 Usually, this involves demonstrating that the purpose of the decree or injunction has been achieved, and there is no longer any need for the decree. n2

For example, in public interest cases, such as those involving integration plans or prison overcrowding, changes in the operative facts justify changes in the order or consent decree. n3 A party has a heavy burden, however, to justify modification of the equitable relief on the ground that the purpose of the judgment has been accomplished. n4 In addition to showing that the purpose of the judgment has ben accomplished, the moving party generally must show that ongoing equitable relief will result in hardship. n5

Although a hearing will generally be held before a court modifies a consent decree or a continuing injunction, n6 no hearing is required before a court denies a requested modification. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsConsent DecreesCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Patterson v. Newspaper & Mail Deliverers' Union, 13 F.3d 33, 37-38 (2d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 809 (1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Board of Educ. of Oklahoma City Pub. Schools v. Dowell, 498 U.S. 237, 246-248, 111 S. Ct. 630, 112 L. Ed. 2d 715 (1991) (desegregation decree could be modified if its purposes had been fully achieved and remanded the action for determination of whether school district was being operated in compliance with equal protection clause, and whether it was unlikely that the school board would return to its former ways); United States v. Eastman Kodak Co., 63 F.3d 95, 101 (2d Cir. 1995) (no relief from consent decree was available when purposes of decree had not been achieved).

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., Plyler v. Evatt, 846 F. 2d 208, 211 (4th Cir. 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Apex Fountain Sales, Inc. v. Kleinfeld, 818 F.2d 1089, 1098 (3rd Cir. 1987) ; Paradise v. Prescott, 767 F.2d 1514, 1526-1527 (11th Cir. 1985) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Lamphere v. Brown Univ., 706 F. Supp. 131, 137-138 (D. R.I. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Bradley v. Milliken, 772 F.2d 266, 271 (6th Cir. 1985) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Ibarra v. Texas Employment Comm'n, 645 F. Supp. 1060, 1069 (E.D. Tex.) , rev'd on other grounds, 823 F.2d 873 (5th Cir. 1986) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.26

§ 46.26 Demonstrating That Continued Application of Decree is Causing Hardship to Moving Party

A party relying on changed factual circumstances as a ground for Rule 60(b)(5) relief from the terms of an injunction or consent decree ordinarily must show hardship as a result of the injunction, which will continue unless relief is granted. The burden of proof of such hardship is on the party seeking relief. n1 The case law leaves some roomfor argument as to the standards of severity and unexpectedness which such a hardship must meet. n2 As a practical matter, the court's ultimate decision will depend on the overall showing by both parties and its inclination, on all the equities, to grant the moving party some relief. The unique nature and demands of institutional reform litigation (e.g, cases in which consent decrees mandate reforms in prisons or school systems) necessitate that a more flexible approach be taken towards modification of such decrees than might be appropriate with respect to consent decrees between private parties. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsConsent DecreesCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See United States v. Michigan, 680 F. Supp. 928, 969 (W.D. Mich. 1987) .
Rule 60(b)(5) may also be applied if special circumstances would make prospective application of the injunction inequitable, and thus cause hardship, even before the injunction has taken effect. See Williams v. Nix, 53 F.3d 212, 213-214 (8th Cir. 1995) (appellate court identified special circumstances sufficientto give two defendants the benefit of the prior judgment).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Swift & Co. and its progeny articulate a standard as to degree of hardship which it would be all but impossible for any Rule 60(b)(5) moving party to satisfy. United States v. Swift & Co., 286 U.S. 106, 52 S. Ct. 460, 76 L. Ed. 999 (1932) . See, e.g., Humble Oil & Ref. Co. v. American Oil Co., 405 F.2d 803, 812-813 (8th Cir. 1969) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Rufo v. Inmates of Suffolk County Jail, 502 U.S. 367, 383, 112 S. Ct. 748, 116 L. Ed. 2d 867 (1992) . See also Small v. Hunt, 98 F.3d 789, 795-796 (4th Cir. 1996) (court was correct in determining that significant change in factual circumstances warranted modification of provision of original consent decree mandating state to provide 50 square feet of living space per inmate; continued compliance would be substantially more onerous in light of unanticipated explosion in inmate population, and enforcement of provision would be detrimental to public interest in having institutions run in fiscally responsible manner).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.27

§ 46.27 Demonstrating Change in Law As Basis for Relief from Decree or Injunction

A significant change in law can also warrant relief from prospective application of an injunction. n1 If the legal premises for the injunction or decree have changed dramatically, relief from the injunction or decree may be available to the moving party. For example, if the injunction or consent decree was based on a federal statute which has been repealed or amended, so that what was then unlawful (and therefore enjoined) is now expressly lawful. n2

A change in the judicial construction of a statute that controlled the injunction or consent decree is also a possible ground relief. n3 "As to whether a change in the decisional law alone is sufficient ground for a Rule 60(b)(5) modification, there is a great deal of inconsistency among and even within the various circuits." n4 Nevertheless, such a change in the decisional law may serve as the basis for relief. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsConsent DecreesCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 237-240, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1997) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., System Fed'n No. 91 v. Wright, 364 U.S. 642, 647-650, 81 S. Ct. 368, 5 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1961) (modification of consent decree required where federal statutes in existence at time of entry of the decree had been amended specifically to permit what they had prohibited at time of entry of decree); Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & Belmont Bridge Co., 59 U.S. (18 How.) 421, 430 (1855) (federal court injunction against maintenance of bridge vacated after Congress enacted statute specifically authorizing the bridge).

(n3)Footnote 3. Marshall v. Board of Educ., 575 F.2d 417 (3d Cir. 1978) (injunction against school board violating federal minimum wage and hour laws vacated pursuant to Rule 60(b)(5) motion based on later decision of United States Supreme Court in another case holding those laws inapplicable to local government entities like Bergenfield School Board).

(n4)Footnote 4. United States v. Georgia Power Co., 634 F.2d 929, 933 (5th Cir. 1981) , and cases cited therein. The court in Georgia Power went on to state that "in this Circuit, given otherwise appropriate circumstances, a significant modification in decisional law will permit the district court in its sound discretion to prospectively modify a permanent injunction under Rule 60(b)(5)." 634 F.2d at 934 . The court further went on to hold that the circumstances there were not appropriate, vacating the district court's order modifying the injunction and directing the district court to reinstate it. 634 F.2d at 934 .

(n5)Footnote 5. E.g., Harris v. Martin, 834 F.2d 361 (3d Cir. 1987) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.28

§ 46.28 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)(5)

A motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60(b)(5) must be made within a reasonable time. The maximum time limit of one year after the final judgment is entered is not applicable. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1); see also Lowe v. McGraw-Hill Cos., 361 F.3d 335, 342-343 (7th Cir. 2004)

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.29

§ 46.29 Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(6) for "Any Other Reason Justifying Relief"

Rule 60(b)(6) is often called the catch-all provision of Rule 60(b), affording relief for "any other reason." Courts will not permit the use of the "catch-all" provision of Rule 60(b)(6) when another provision of the rule specifically governs the relief sought. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. For example, a mistake of law or fact will be considered only under Rule 60(b)(1), even when the one-year time limitation would bar relief and even though a Rule 60(b)(6) motion need be filed only within a reasonable time.
E.g., United States v. Alpine Land & Reservoir Co., 984 F.2d 1047, 1049 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 813 (1993) ; Hopper v. Euclid Manor Nursing Home, Inc., 867 F.2d 291, 294 (6th Cir. 1989) . See also Rice v. Ford Motor Co., 88 F.3d 914, 920 (11th Cir. 1996) (Rule 60(b)(6) motion cannot be used in lieu of a "proper and timely appeal" of an alleged mistake of law by the district court).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

142 of 151 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.30

§ 46.30 Party Seeking Relief Under Rule 60(b)(6) Must Show Extraordinary Circumstances

To be granted relief under Rule 60(b)(6), the moving party must allege:

- Extraordinary circumstances n1
- Prompt action upon becoming aware of the extraordinary circumstances n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 863-864, 108 S. Ct. 2194, 100 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1988) ; Sawka v. Healtheast, Inc., 989 F.2d 138, 140 (3d Cir. 1993) ("Relief under Rule 60(b)(6) may only be granted under extraordinary circumstances where, without such relief, an extreme and unexpected hardship would occur").

(n2)Footnote 2. Transaero, Inc. v. La Fuerza Area Boliviana, 24 F.3d 457, 461-462 (2d Cir. 1994) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.31

§ 46.31 Higher Standard Applies Under Rule 60(b)(6)

The standard for this subdivision appears to be higher than the general "extraordinary circumstances" requirement of Rule 60(b): Rule 60(b)(6) requires that extreme andundue hardship would otherwise result. n1 Inexcusable neglect cannot be grounds for relief under Rule 60(b)(6). n2 However, when the neglect has been caused by extraordinary circumstances beyond the control of the movant, a court may grant relief under Rule 60(b)(6). n3

Ignorance of the law is not an "extraordinary circumstance." n4 Generally, a subsequent change in law will not justify relief under Rule 60(b)(6), n5 particularly when the judgment does not have prospective application. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. In re Asbestos Litig., 173 F.R.D. 87, 90 (S.D.N.Y 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Reinsurance Co. of Am. v. Administratia Asigurarilor de Stat, 122 F.R.D. 517, 520 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (attorney error no basis for relief under catch-all provision).

(n3)Footnote 3. E.g., United States v. Cirami, 563 F.2d 26, 32-33 (2d Cir. 1977) (neglect due to counsel's mental illness, which counsel concealed from client).

(n4)Footnote 4. PRC Harris, Inc. v. Boeing Co., 700 F.2d 894, 897-898 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 936 (1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Tomlin v. McDaniel, 865 F.2d 209, 211 (9th Cir. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 239-240, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1997) (citing Moore's).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.32

§ 46.32 Combining Rule 60(b)(6) Motion With Other Motions Under Rule 60(b)

Rule 60(b)(6) is often used as an additional ground in support of Rule 60(b) motions relying primarily on one or more of the Rule's other enumerated subdivisions, either because the facts do not fit precisely within any of them or because the combination of facts presents an extraordinary situation which warrants relief apart from the precise satisfaction of individual grounds. This application of Rule 60(b)(2) is probably most useful where the motion is made within one year of the date of judgment, so that you need not be concerned with drawing a line between the facts supporting Rule 60(b)(1), (2), or (3) relief and those supporting Rule 60(b)(6) relief.

One example of such use of Rule 60(b)(6) is where judgment was entered through some oversight or neglect of counsel undercircumstances which are perhaps only marginally excusable, and thus only marginally within Rule 60(b)(1), yet it seems harsh to the client or otherwise contrary to sound policy to let the judgment stand. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 863-864, 108 S. Ct. 2194, 100 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1988) ; Hester Int'l Corp. v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 879 F.2d 170, 173-174 (5th Cir. 1989) . Cf. Solaroll Shade & Shutter Corp. v. Bio-Energy Sys., Inc., 803 F.2d 1130, 1132-1133 (11th Cir. 1986) (relief denied where unopposed motion merely reinstated action, and imposed no liability on defendant).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.33

§ 46.33 Filing Timely Motion Under Rule 60(b)(6)

A motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60(b)(6) must be made within a reasonable time. n1 The maximum time limit of one year after the final judgment is entered is not applicable. n2 Rule 60(b)(6) may not be used to overcome the requirement that specific motions under Rule 60(b) must be filed within one year after the judgment is entered. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Callon Petroleum Co. v. Frontier Ins. Co., 351 F.3d 204, 210-211 (5th Cir. 2003 (the district court did not abuse its discretion in denying relief from a judgment under Rule 60(b)(6) when the party seeking relief offered no plausible excuse for a 14-month delay in seeking relief after receiving notice of the judgment).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. Alpine Land & Reservoir Co., 984 F.2d 1047, 1050 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 813 (1993) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.34

§ 46.34 Rule 60(b) Motion Procedure

[1] Contents and Form of Motion Papers

Even though it comes after the entry of judgment, sometimes many months after, a Rule 60(b) motion is filed in the case in which the judgment was entered, and is subject to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and to the district court's local rules governing motions and motion papers generally.

Thus the motion must comply with Rule 7(b): it must be in writing, must state with particularity the grounds therefor, and must set forth the relief or order sought. n1

Local rules may go beyond the provisions of Rule 7(b) in specifying the content of a motion and the supporting materials that must accompany it. Such rules frequently require that the motion papers specify a hearing date. Often they require affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury) sufficient to support the motion's factual assertions. They may also require a memorandum of points and authorities or brief presenting argument and law in support of the relief requested. n2 Where you have identified the grounds on which you are moving and the evidence supporting those grounds, and believe that this evidence can effectively be presented by affidavit or declaration, compliance with such local rules presents essentially the same task as would be faced in any other motion asserting factual data (as, for example, a motion for summary judgment).Under limited circumstances, counsel may choose to file "skeleton" papers, indicating the intention to pursue discovery in support of the motion and to file supplemental evidentiary materials and argument upon completion of that discovery.

In any event, whether representing the movant or the opposing party, counsel should carefully consider the proclivities of the particular judge and the requirements of the local rules.

[2] Serving Motion Papers

A Rule 60(b) motion is sometimes made months or even years after the original action. It is thus possible that when the time comes to serve the motion papers, the party being served may no longer be represented by counsel, who would normally accept service.

Former counsel may choose to accept service on behalf of the client even if the attorney-client relationship has ended, but if the non-moving party's attorney refuses service, or has been formally permitted by the court to withdraw, counsel for the moving party can seek an order for the former counsel to accept service.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary Circumstances

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Rule 60(b) motions "must be shaped to the specific ground for modification or reversal listed in Rule 60(b)." United States v. Deutsch, 981 F.2d 299, 301-302 (7th Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. E.g., C.D. Cal., L.R. 7.5.

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.35

§ 46.35 Effect of Rule 60(b) Motion on Appeal of Underlying Judgment

A notice of appeal must ordinarily be filed within 30 days of a final judgment. n1 However, the filing of certain post-decisional motions (including a timely filed Rule 60 motion filed no later than 28 days after the entry of judgment) will defer the start of the appeal period until disposition of the last of those motions outstanding. n2

If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and pending, the court may: n3

- Defer considering the motion
- Deny the motion
- State either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue

The movant must promptly notify the circuit clerk under Federal Rule Appellate Procedure 12.1 if the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue. n4 The district court may decide the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose. n5 If the district court states that it would grant the motion or that the motion raises a substantial issue, the court of appeals may remand for further proceedings but retains jurisdiction unless it expressly dismisses the appeal. If the court of appeals remands but retains jurisdiction, the parties must promptly notify the circuit clerk when the district court has decided the motion on remand. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExtraordinary CircumstancesCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A)(vi). Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A) provides, in relevant part:

> If a party timely files in the district court any of the following motions under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the time to file an appeal runs for all parties from the entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion:
>
> (i) for judgment under Rule 50(b);
>
> (ii) to amend or make additional findings of fact under Rule 52(b), whether or not granting the motion would alter the judgment;
>
> (iii) for attorney's fees under Rule 54 if the district court extends the time to appeal under Rule 58;
>
> (iv) to alter or amend the judgment under Rule 59;
>
> (v) for a new trial under Rule 59; or
>
> (vi) for relief under Rule 60 if the motion is filed no later than 28 days after the judgment is entered.

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(b); Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62.1(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. Rule. App. P. 12.1(b).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.36

§ 46.36 Appealing Ruling on Rule 60(b) Motion

Denial of a Rule 60(b) motion is a final, appealable order. n1 An order granting a Rule 60(b) motion vacates the judgment. Since such an order leads to further proceedings, it is generally not a final, appealable order. However, if the relief granted is the entry of a new judgment that leaves nothing further to be decided, the new judgment is final and appealable. An appeal of a Rule 60(b) decision addresses only the granting or denial of the motion, not the merits of the underlying judgment. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cinerama, Inc. v. Sweet Music, 482 F.2d 66, 71-72 (2d Cir. 1973) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ahmed v. Rosenblatt, 118 F.3d 886, 891 (1st Cir. 1997) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.37

§ 46.37 Opposing Rule 60(b) Motion

Rule 60(b) arguments most often turn on the facts of each case. Aside from arguing the facts, the following arguments should be considered when opposing a Rule 60(b) motion:

- The motion was not timely made; even if timely was not reasonable time n1
- Prejudice to opponent as a result of the passage of time, such as detrimental reliance on the judgment, or loss of evidence that would support the judgment, outweighs harm to movant of leaving judgment in place
- Movant is party responsible for event that is subject of motion
- Lack of due diligence by moving party
- Lack of extraordinary circumstances
- Facts alleged, even if true, do not satisfy statute; for example, if motion is brought under Rule 60(b)(3), argue that alleged conduct, even if true, does not constitute fraud

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. PRC Harris, Inc. v. Boeing Co., 700 F.2d 894, 897-898 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 936 (1983) .

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
A Relief From Judgment

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.38

§ 46.38 CHECKLISTS: Motion for Relief From Judgment

[1] CHECKLIST: Moving for Relief From Order, Judgment, or Proceeding

The following checklist will assist counsel in evaluating the possibility of a successful Rule 60(b) motion. Counsel should also check local rules and the individual judge's rules for motion procedures. Note that individual judge's may require scheduling a pre-motion conference.

☐ Is this the correct procedure?

- ☐ Are you dealing with a judgment, order, or proceeding? n1
- ☐ Is the judgment, order, or proceeding final? n2

☐ When to file. File the motion as soon as possible after the basis for relief has been discovered.

- ☐ In all situations, the court will look at the reasonableness of the time.
- ☐ Motion based on Rule 60(b)(1)-(3) must be filed within one year of entry of the judgment, as well as within a reasonable time.
- ☐ Motion based on Rule 60(b)(4) can be filed at any time.

☐ Basis for relief.

- ☐ Mistake, inadvertence or surprise. n3

- ☐ Excusable neglect. n4
- ☐ Newly discovered evidence. n5
- ☐ Fraud or misrepresentation. n6
- ☐ Misconduct. n7
- ☐ Void judgment. n8
- ☐ Judgment satisfied, released, or discharged. n9
- ☐ Judgment reversed or vacated. n10
- ☐ No longer equitable that judgment have prospective application. n11
- ☐ "Any other reason." n12

☐ Procedure. Prepare motion; file and serve like any other motion; consult local and individual judge's rules.

[2] CHECKLIST: Opposing Motion for Relief

The following checklist will assist counsel in constructing arguments opposing a Rule 60(b) motion. Counsel should check local rules and the individual judge's rules for motion procedures.

- ☐ Does the motion relate to a judgment, order, or proceeding? n13
- ☐ Is the judgment, order, or proceeding final? n14
- ☐ Timeliness. How much time passed from the entry of judgment to the date of filing the motion?
- ☐ Was the delay reasonable?
- ☐ Was motion based on Rule 60(b)(1)-(3) filed within one year of entry of the judgment?
- ☐ Attacking the basis for relief.
- ☐ Rule 60(b)(1). Attorney errors do not constitute mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.

- [ ] Rule 60(b)(2).
- [ ] Could evidence have been discovered sooner?
- [ ] Is the evidence admissible?
- [ ] Is the evidence merely cumulative?
- [ ] Rule 60(b)(3).
- [ ] Was the fraud or misrepresentation committed by an adverse party?
- [ ] Did the fraud impact the fairness of the trial?
- [ ] Could the fraud have been exposed earlier?
- [ ] Rule 60(b)(4).
- [ ] Is the judgment really void?
- [ ] Is there a timeliness argument?
- [ ] Rule 60(b)(5).
- [ ] Is there adequate documentary evidence that judgment has been discharged, vacated etc.?
- [ ] Has opposing counsel established that circumstances have changed so significantly that relief is warranted?
- [ ] Rule 60(b)(6).
- [ ] Is opposing counsel using this provision because the one year time limit has expired?
- [ ] Has opposing counsel shown that failure to grant relief would result in extreme and undue hardship?
- [ ] Do any other the other provisions of Rule 60(b) apply?
- [ ] Attacking the evidence.
- [ ] Is there a showing of exceptional circumstances?

☐ Can you show prejudice to your client?

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentNewly Discovered EvidenceCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid JudgmentsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(6).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 46 Relief From Judgment *
B Forms

4-46 Federal Litigation Guide § 46.100

§ 46.100 Notice of Motion for Relief From Judgment or Order

[1] FORM

Notice of Motion for Relief from Judgment or Order

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] at [time of day (specify a.m. or p.m.)], or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, [party designation and name of moving party] will move this Court, at the United States Courthouse, located at [address of Court], Courtroom [courtroom number], for an order pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b) [state with particularity any other legal basis for motion including any applicable local rules] vacating and setting aside the final judgment entered against [moving party] in this action on [date judgment entered], on the ground that:

[CHOOSE APPROPRIATE PARAGRAPH FROM BELOW]

(a) [Relief from judgment based upon a showing of mistake, inadvertence, or surprise:] [Identify grounds for relief, e.g., An error was made in the judgment through no fault of anyone and [moving party] was unfairly surprised; identify mistake or explain why party was unfairly surprised.] The party against whom relief is sought will not be prejudiced by relief from judgment because [explain].

[OR]

(a) [Relief from judgment based on excusable neglect:] [Describe excusable neglect]. The party against whom relief is sought will not be prejudiced by relief from judgment because [explain].

[OR]

(a) [Relief from judgment based on newly discovered evidence that by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial:] [Describe new evidence discovered, time of discovery, diligence in attempts to discover evidence at an earlier time]. The newly discovered evidence is attached to this motion in admissible form as Exhibit A. The evidence is credible, material, and likely to be outcome determinative because [explain].

[OR]

(a) [Relief from judgment based on fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of adverse party:] Clear and convincing evidence exists that [party against whom relief is sought] engaged in misconduct. [Describe misconduct and how it prevented movant from fully and fairly presenting its case on the merits.]

[OR]

(a) [Relief from void judgment:] The judgment is void because [explain, e.g.,the court did not have proper subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction].

[OR]

(a) [Judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged:] [Explain satisfaction, release, or discharge of action].

[OR]

(a) [Prior judgment has been reversed or otherwise vacated:] [Identify earlier judgment and explain].

[OR]

(a) [Inequity:] [Moving party] is entitled to relief from judgment because it is inequitable for this judgment to have prospective application. [Explain inequity.]

[OR]

(a) [Exceptional circumstances exist that demonstrate that the judgment is manifestly unjust:] This judgment is manifestly unjust because [explain].

[CONTINUE]

(b) Granting [moving party] such other relief as may be appropriate.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion, the accompanying Declaration (or affidavit or other affidavit substitute; generally required) of [name of signatory] dated (or sworn to) [date] , the accompanying Memorandum of Law (if required) dated [date] , and on all of the pleadings and papers on file in this action.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for [name and designation of party]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of notice of motion pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b) for relief from a judgment or order.

[3] Deadline for Filing Motion

A motion for relief under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b) must be made within a reasonable time and, when based on the following grounds, not more than one year after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken:

- Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect
- Newly discovered evidence, which by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 59(b)
- Fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party

[4] Critical Considerations

Local district court rules and individual judge's rules should be consulted regarding requirements for the following:

- General formatting
- Bluebacks and other covers
- Page limits
- Caption
- Specifying rule or statute on which motion is based
- Date and time of hearing
- Availability of oral argument
- Extending time

- Expedited hearing/Orders to show cause
- Supporting papers
- Serving motion papers
- Filing motion papers
- Courtesy copies
- Opposing papers
- Reply papers

* Chapter 46 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

1 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide 47.syn

§ 47.syn Synopsis to Chapter 47: Costs

§ 47.01 Costs Recoverable Governed By Statute

§ 47.02 Costs Enumerated in 28 U.S.C. § 1920

§ 47.03 Costs Outside 28 U.S.C. § 1920
[1] Costs Not Recoverable Unless Expressly Allowed By Other Statutory Authority
[2] Costs Governed By Federal Law Exclusively
[3] Federal Rules of Civil Procedure Have Force of Statute
[4] Costs Recoverable If Fee-Shifting Statute Applies and Expenses Are Billable to Client
[5] Local District Court Rules May Dictate Recoverable Costs

§ 47.04 Recovering Clerk and Marshal Fees
[1] Clerk and Marshal Fees Taxable as Costs
[2] Fees of Clerk Defined
[3] Fees of Marshal Defined
[4] Expenses of Private Process Server Not Taxable as Marshal Fee

§ 47.05 Recovering Court Reporter Fees
[1] Complete Trial Transcripts
[2] Transcripts of Pretrial Proceedings
[3] Transcripts of Post-Trial Proceedings
[4] Expedited Daily Transcripts

§ 47.06 Recovering Deposition Fees
[1] Deposition Fees Recoverable If Necessarily Obtained
[2] Concept of Necessity Applied Practically
[3] Local District Court Rules May Dictate Recoverability of Deposition Fees

§ 47.07 Recovering Docket Fees

§ 47.08 Recovering Witness Fees, Including Deposition Expenses
[1] Taxable Witness Fees
[1.--1] 28 U.S.C. § 1821 Fees

[1.--2] Daily Witness Attendance Fees
[1.--3] Witness Travel Expenses
[1.--4] Witness Subsistence Fees
[2] Taxation of Expert Witness Fees in Excess of Statutory Cap
[3] Non-Testifying Witness
[4] Witness Includes Both Trial and Deposition Witness
[5] Party Not Entitled to Witness Fees
[6] Subpoena Not Condition for Taxation of Witness Fees as Costs

§ 47.09 Recovering Expenses for Production of Documentary and Other Non-Testimonial Evidence
[1] Exemplification and Copying Expenses
[2] Trial Exhibits, Photographs, Maps, and Chart Expenses
[2.--1] Generally Taxable
[2.--2] Necessary Professional Expenses in Producing Evidence Recoverable

§ 47.10 Recovering Expenses of Court Appointed Experts or Interpreters

§ 47.11 Recovering Costs with Respect to Government Litigants
[1] Government May Collect Costs From Private Litigants
[2] Understanding the Equal Access to Justice Act
[3] Evaluating Government Fee Liability Under EAJA
[4] Evaluating the Net Worth Limitation Under the EAJA
[5] Limiting Recovery of Fees to Those Incurred

§ 47.12 Posting Security for Costs

§§ 47.13 through 47.19 [Reserved]

§ 47.20 Prevailing Party Presumed Entitled to Costs

§ 47.21 Prevailing Party Defined

§ 47.22 Departing From Presumption of Costs to Prevailing Party
[1] Court May Limit or Deny Award of Costs to Prevailing Party
[2] Discretion May Be Limited by Federal Statute or Rule
[3] Losing Party Bears Burden of Demonstrating That Costs Should Be Denied or Limited
[4] Denial Or Limitation of Costs Must Be Explained

§§ 47.23 through 47.29 [Reserved]

§ 47.30 Deadline for Filing Bill of Costs
[1] Deadline Established by Local District Court Rules
[2] Deadline May Be Extended

§ 47.31 Filing of Appeal May Stay Taxation of Costs

§ 47.32 Submitting Verified Bill of Costs

§ 47.33 Advance Notice Must Be Given to Losing Party
[1] Costs Generally Taxed by Clerk on 14 Days' Notice
[2] Local District Court Rules May Require More Notice

§§ 47.34 through 47.39 [Reserved]

§ 47.40 Losing Party Has Right to Object to Bill of Costs

§ 47.41 Deadline for Objecting to Bill of Costs

§ 47.42 Particular Objections
[1] Challenging Court Reporter Fees Not Necessarily Obtained
[2] Challenging Trial Witness Fees
[3] Challenging Production of Copies or Documentary Evidence Not Necessarily Obtained

§§ 47.43 through 47.49 [Reserved]

§ 47.50 Clerk's Action Subject to De Novo Review

§ 47.51 Motion Required Within Seven Days of Clerk's Action

§ 47.52 Failure to File Motion Waives Any Objection to Clerk's Taxation of Costs

§ 47.53 Time May Be Extended

§§ 47.54 through 47.59 [Reserved]

§ 47.60 Grounds for Recovering Attorney's Fees Must Be Found in Fee-Shifting Statute

§ 47.61 Determining Whether Statute Authorizes Fee-Shifting
[1] Statute Must Expressly Mention Attorney's Fees
[2] Invoking State Law in Diversity Actions
[3] Discretionary Fee-Shifting Statutes
[4] Pro Se Party Not Entitled to Fee Award

§ 47.62 Determining Prevailing Party
[1] Plaintiff Is Prevailing Party If Success on Issues Achieves Some of Benefit Sought and Changes Relationship Between Plaintiff and Defendant
[2] Plaintiff May Be Prevailing Party Even If Relief Obtained Is Only Nominal Damages
[3] Plaintiff Is Prevailing Party If Case Is Dismissed Pursuant to Settlement
[4] Determining Prevailing Party If Suit Was Catalyst for Unilateral Action of Defendant That Mooted Case
[5] Defeating Suit on Merits Makes Defendant Prevailing Party

§ 47.63 Determining Applicability of Federal Equitable Principles
[1] Obtaining Award if Class Action, Interpleader, or Other Action Creates Common Fund
[2] Obtaining Award if Action Confers Substantial Benefit and Award Spreads Cost of Suit Among Beneficiaries
[3] Obtaining Award When Subjective Bad Faith of Party Merits Sanctions

§ 47.64 Determining Whether Contract Between Parties Authorizes Fees

§ 47.65 Determining Whether Attorney's Fees May Be Recovered From Governmental Litigants
[1] Federal Government Liable for Attorney's Fees Whenever Private Litigant Would Be Liable Under Same Circumstances
[2] Federal Government Liable for Fees Unless Position Was Substantially Justified or Special Circumstances Make Award Unjust
[2.--1] Imposition of Fees Is Mandatory
[2.--2] Qualification for Fee Award Based on Net Worth of Litigant
[2.--3] Government Bears Burden on Substantial Justification Issue
[3] Obtaining Fees from State and Local Governmental Units, Agencies, and Officers

[3.--1] Obtaining Fees from State When Eleventh Amendment Immunity Has Been Waived or Abrogated
[3.--2] Obtaining Fees From State When Officer Sued in Official Capacity
[3.--3] Obtaining Fees From Local Governmental Unit
[3.--4] Obtaining Fees From Officer in Individual Capacity

§§ 47.66 through 47.69 [Reserved]

§ 47.70 Lodestar Method Generally Required

§ 47.71 Statutory Cap on Hourly Rate Recoverable

§ 47.72 Proving Hours Reasonably Spent
[1] Submitting Contemporaneously Prepared Time Sheets Provides Best Proof of Hours Claimed
[2] Any Time Appropriately Billed to Client May Be Recovered
[3] Time Spent in Fee Litigation Generally Recoverable
[4] Time Spent on Unsuccessful Claims
[5] Time Spent in Other Forums
[5.--1] Express Statutory Language Controls
[5.--2] Fees in Connection With Mandatory Administrative Proceedings
[5.--3] Fees in Connection With Optional Administrative Proceedings
[5.--4] Independent Action to Collect Attorney's Fees Prohibited Unless Permitted By Statute

§ 47.73 Proving Reasonable Hourly Rate
[1] Affidavit of Counsel's Customary Rates
[2] Affidavit to Prove Rate When Counsel's Work Not Customary

§ 47.74 Post-Lodestar Adjustments
[1] Factors Not Reflected In Hours or Rate
[2] Prohibition Against Adjusting Lodestar for Contingency
[3] Adjusting Lodestar for Quality of Service Disfavored
[4] Adjusting Lodestar for Limited Nature of Results Obtained
[5] Considering Factors Allowing for Lodestar Adjustment

§ 47.75 Obtaining Current Rates In Lengthy Cases

§ 47.76 Recovering Other Expenses
[1] Recovering Out-of-Pocket Expenses Generally Billed to Client
[2] Expenses That Comprise Attorney Overhead Are Not Recoverable

§ 47.77 Awarding Percentage of Recovery in Common Fund Actions

§ 47.78 Effect of Client's Contract With Counsel

§§ 47.79 through 47.89 [Reserved]

§ 47.90 Motion Generally Required Within 14 Days of Judgment

§ 47.91 Court May Extend Deadline or Permit Untimely Motion

§ 47.92 Exceptions to 14-Day Requirement
[1] Motion Seeking Attorney's Fees as Sanctions
[2] Motion for Fees Against Federal Government Based on 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)

§ 47.93 Complying With Requirements of Form of Motion and Submission of Evidentiary Materials
[1] Motion Need Only State Basis For Fee Award and Fee Estimate
[2] Submitting Evidentiary Materials to Justify Fee Award

§ 47.94 Attorney's Fees as an Element of Damages

§ 47.95 Motion Must Be Brought in Client's Name

§ 47.96 Claim for Expert Witness Fees Requires Motion Within 14 Days of Judgment

§ 47.97 Motion Does Not Suspend Time to Appeal Judgment on Merits

§ 47.98 Appeal Does Not Divest Court of Jurisdiction to Award Fees

§§ 47.99 through 47.109 [Reserved]

§ 47.110 Requesting Opportunity for Adversary Submissions

§ 47.111 Determining Time Within Which to Oppose Motion

§ 47.112 Obtaining Evidentiary Hearing

§ 47.113 Raising Specific Objections

§ 47.114 Obtaining Discovery On Fee Issue Requires Exceptional Circumstances

§ 47.115 Right to Fee and Amount of Fee May Be Separately Resolved

§ 47.116 Court May Refer to Master or Magistrate Judge

2 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses post-judgment procedures to collect costs and attorney's fees, and covers the following topics:

- Determining recoverable costs
- Determining which party is entitled to costs
- Preparing a bill of costs
- Objecting to a bill of costs
- Seeking review of the clerk's taxation of costs
- Determining whether attorney's fees are recoverable
- Determining the proper amount of a fee award
- Employing the proper procedure for recovering attorney's fees
- Opposing a motion for attorney's fees

For expanded coverage of costs, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 54, Judgments; Costs (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

3 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.01

§ 47.01 Costs Recoverable Governed By Statute

Unless the court exercises its discretion to order otherwise, the prevailing party is entitled to an award of costs as a matter of course. n1

The term costs as used in Rule 54(d)(1) is a term of art. It does not refer to each and every expense incurred by the prevailing party in the action. Instead, it refers to those items that are properly taxed as costs in the action pursuant to statute. Indeed, Rule 54(d)(1) does not provide any authority for taxing items not specifically permitted by statute. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 441-445, 107 S. Ct. 2494, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.02

§ 47.02 Costs Enumerated in 28 U.S.C. § 1920

28 U.S.C. § 1920 authorizes the judge or clerk to tax as costs the following: n1

- Fees of the clerk and marshal [see § 47.04]
- Fees of the court reporter for all or any part of the stenographic transcript necessarily obtained for use in the case [see § 47.05]
- Fees and disbursements for printing and witnesses [see §§ 47.08, 47.09]
- Fees for exemplification and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use in the case [see § 47.09]
- Docket fees pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1923 [see § 47.07]
- Compensation of court appointed experts, compensation of interpreters, and salaries, fees, expenses, and costs of special interpretation services pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1828 [see § 47.10]

Even if an item of costs is not expressly recoverable pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1920, the item may be recovered if the statute can be fairly read to embrace it. For example, deposition expenses are not specifically mentioned in 28 U.S.C. § 1920, but may be recoverable if reasonably necessary at the time taken, subject to statutory limitation. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsCourt & Marshal FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920.

(n2)Footnote 2. See West Wind Afr. Line, Ltd. v. Corpus Christi Marine Servs. Co., 834 F.2d 1232, 1237-1238 (5th Cir. 1988) ; SK Hand Tool Corp. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 852 F2d 936, 944 (7th Cir. 1988) ; Cleveland v. North Am. Van Lines, Inc., 154 F.R.D. 37, 38 (N.D.N.Y. 1994) ; see also Health-Chem Corp. v. Hyman, 523 F. Supp. 27, 33 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) .

5 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.03

§ 47.03 Costs Outside 28 U.S.C. § 1920

[1] Costs Not Recoverable Unless Expressly Allowed By Other Statutory Authority

If 28 U.S.C. § 1920 [see § 47.02] does not expressly or implicitly authorize taxation of a particular expense as a recoverable cost, taxation is not permitted unless some other statutory provision expressly authorizes recovery of those expenses. n1

Various circuits have held that a district court in a copyright-infringement action has discretion to award costs beyond those specified in 28 U.S.C. § 1920. In a copyright-infringement action, 17 U.S.C. § 505 provides that "the court in its discretion may allow the recovery of full costs by or against any party." Courts have therefore held that the phrase "full costs" in Section 505 means that a district court in a copyright-infringement action may award otherwise nontaxable costs, including those outside the scope of Section 1920. n1.1

[2] Costs Governed By Federal Law Exclusively

Pursuant to the Erie doctrine, federal courts in diversity actions apply state substantive law but federal procedural law. n2

The types of costs that may be awarded incident to a judgment of a federal court is a procedural issue under Erie. Accordingly, federal law governs an award of costs in a diversity action, and state law regarding costs is irrelevant. n3

[3] Federal Rules of Civil Procedure Have Force of Statute

In view of the fact that the nationally promulgated Federal Rules of Civil Procedure have the force of statute, any costs expressly authorized by any of those rules may be awarded, even if not specifically authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 1920.

For example, Appellate Rule 39(e) authorizes recovery of the premiums paidfor cost of supersedeas bonds or other bonds to preserve rights pending appeal. n4

[4] Costs Recoverable If Fee-Shifting Statute Applies and Expenses Are Billable to Client

If a federal statute permits recovery of attorney's fees from the losing party, items of expense that are outside the coverage of 28 U.S.C. § 1920 [see § 47.02], but which are normally charged by the attorney to a paying client, may be recovered as a component of the attorney's fee award. Those expenses include photocopying, long-distance phone charges, postage and overnight delivery charges, and other routine expenses that are attributable to the client's action. n5

[5] Local District Court Rules May Dictate Recoverable Costs

It is not uncommon for local district court rules to enumerate the types of costs that are recoverable. Often, local district court rules also govern the procedure for recovering costs.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsCosts & Attorney Fees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See West Virginia Univ. Hosps., Inc. v. Casey, 499 U.S. 83, 87-88, 111 S. Ct. 1138, 113 L. Ed. 2d 68 (1991) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. v. Entertainment Distrib., 429 F.3d 869, 884-885 (9th Cir. 2005) ; Invessys, Inc. v. McGraw-Hill Cos., 369 F.3d 16, 22 (1st Cir. 2004) ; Coles v. Wonder, 283 F.3d 798, 803 (6th Cir. 2002) ; Susan Wakeen Doll Co. v. Ashton Drake Galleries, 272 F.3d 441, 458 (7th Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-79, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 11 Ohio Op. 246 (1938) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Aceves v. Allstate Ins. Co., 68 F.3d 1160, 1167-1168 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Carter v. General Motors Corp., 983 F.2d 40, 43-44 (5th Cir. 1993) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Chapparal Resources, Inc. v. Monsanto Co., 849 F.2d 1286, 1291-1292 (10th Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 39(e).

(n6)Footnote 5. Reichman v. Bonsignore, Brignati & Mazzotta P.C., 818 F.2d 278, 282 (2d Cir. 1987) ; Northcross v. Board of Education 611 F.2d 624, 639 (6th Cir. 1979) .

6 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.04

§ 47.04 Recovering Clerk and Marshal Fees

[1] Clerk and Marshal Fees Taxable as Costs

Fees of the clerk [see [2], below] and marshal [see [3], below] may be taxed as costs, unless the court directs otherwise. n1

[2] Fees of Clerk Defined

Fees of the clerk include filing fees, as well as any other additional fees prescribed the Judicial Conference of the United States. n2

The Judicial Conference Schedule of Additional Fees specifies the fees to be charged for the following services to be performed by clerks of the district courts:

- Filing or indexing any paper not in a case or proceeding for which a case filing fee has been paid (this fee is applicable to the filing of a Rule 27(a) petition to perpetuate testimony, the filing of papers by trustees under 28 U.S.C. § 754, the filing of letters rogatory or letters of request, and registering a judgment from another district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1963)

- Searching the records of the district court

- Certifying or exemplifying any document or paper

- Reproducing records or papers

- Reproducing magnetic tape recordings, either cassette or reel-to-reel

- Transcribing a record of any proceeding by a regularly employed member of the court staff who is not entitled by statute to retain the transcript fees for his or her own account

- Providing microfiche sheets of film or microfilm jacket copies of court records, where available

- Retrieving records from a Federal Records Center, National Archives, or other storage location removed from the place of business of the court

- Handling checks paid into the court which are returned for lack of funds

- Processing appeals to a district judge from a judgment of conviction by a magistrate judge in a misdemeanor case

- Processing applications by attorneys for admission to practice

- Providing copies of local rules of court

- Handling registry funds deposited with the court, to be assessed from interest earnings and in accordance with the detailed fee schedule issued by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts

- Providing electronic access to court data

[3] Fees of Marshal Defined

Fees of the marshal include fees for the following services: n3

- Serving a writ of possession, partition, execution, attachment in rem, or libel in admiralty, warrant, attachment, summons, complaints, or any other writ, order or process in any case or proceeding

- Serving a subpoena or summons for a witness or appraiser

- Forwarding any writ, order, or process to another judicial district for service

- Preparing any notice of sale, proclamation in admiralty, or other public notice or bill of sale

- Keeping attached property

- Copying writs or other papers furnished at the request of any party

- Necessary travel in serving or endeavoring to serve any process, writ, or order, except in the District of Columbia

- Overtime expenses incurred by deputy marshals in the course of serving or executing civil process

[4] Expenses of Private Process Server Not Taxable as Marshal Fee

At one time, the most common marshal's fee that was properly taxed as a cost was for service of the summons and complaint. Service of original process, however, is no longer restricted to United States marshals, but instead may be made by anyone over the age of 18 who is not a party to the action.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney

FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsCourt & Marshal Fees

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1914.

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1921.

7 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.05

§ 47.05 Recovering Court Reporter Fees

[1] Complete Trial Transcripts

"Fees of a court reporter for all or any part of the stenographic transcript necessarily obtained for use in the case" may be taxed as costs, unless the court directs otherwise. n1

[2] Transcripts of Pretrial Proceedings

The provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1920 which permits taxation of court reporter fees for stenographic transcription [see [1], above] is not restricted to complete trial transcripts, but extends to embrace pretrial proceedings as well. n2

[3] Transcripts of Post-Trial Proceedings

The provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1920 which permits taxation of court reporter fees for stenographic transcription [see [1], above] is not restricted to complete trial transcripts, but extends to embrace post-trial proceedings as well. n3

[4] Expedited Daily Transcripts

If a party can demonstrate its necessity, the cost of obtaining an expedited, daily transcript may be taxable. n4

If the daily transcript served no purpose other than counsel's convenience, taxation of that expense as a cost should be denied. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsCourt & Marshal FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsGovernmentsCourtsCourt Personnel

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Air Crash Disaster at John F. Kennedy Int'l Airport on June 24, 1975, 687 F.2d 626, 631 (2d Cir. 1982) ; see § 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Chore-Time Equip., Inc. v. Cumberland Corp., 713 F.2d 774, 781-782 (Fed. Cir. 1983) ; see § 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Holmes v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 11 F.3d 63, 64 (5th Cir. 1994) ; see United States Indus. Inc., v. Touche Ross & Co., 854 F.2d 1223, 1248 (10th Cir. 1988) ; Mercy v. County of Suffolk, 748 F.2d 52, 54 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. McIlveen v. Stone Container 910 F.2d 1581, 1582-1584 (7th Cir. 1990) ; United States Indus., Inc. v. Touche Ross & Co., 854 F.2d 1223, 1247-1248 (10th Cir. 1988) ; McDowell v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 758 F.2d 1293, 1294 (8th Cir. 1985) .

8 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.06

§ 47.06 Recovering Deposition Fees

[1] Deposition Fees Recoverable If Necessarily Obtained

"Fees of a court reporter for all or any part of the stenographic transcript necessarily obtained for use in the case" may be taxed as costs, unless the court directs otherwise. n1

This provision has been interpreted to embrace not only the official court reporter of the district court, but also any officer taking a deposition; and to permit an award of the fees of the court reporter taking the deposition, as well as the fee for the original transcription of the deposition. n2 However, delivery costs for deposition transcripts are not taxable costs. n2.1

If the parties have agreed to a video or audio recording of a deposition as a substitute for a stenographic transcript, the expense of the recording is properly taxed as a cost. n3

[2] Concept of Necessity Applied Practically

The concept of necessity under 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2) [see [1], above] is applied practically, so that the deposition need not have been necessary in an absolute sense. If the deposition was actually used, either in lieu of live testimony, for cross-examination or impeachment purposes, or in support of a successful dispositive motion, the necessity of the deposition is established. n4

Likewise, if the deposition appeared reasonably necessary at the time it was taken, costs may be taxed despite the lack of actual usage of the deposition. n5

[3] Local District Court Rules May Dictate Recoverability of Deposition Fees

Local district court rules often contain provisions regarding recovery of deposition fees.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersCourt ReportersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney

FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & Transcripts

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., SK Hand Tool Corp. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 852 F.2d 936, 943 (7th Cir. 1988) ; Hudson v. Nabisco Brands, 758 F.2d 1237, 1242 (7th Cir. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Smith v. Tenet Healthsystem SL, Inc., 436 F.3d 879, 889 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Barber v. Ruth 7 F.3d 636, 645 (7th Cir. 1993) ; Marino v. Town of Kirkland, 146 F.R.D. 49, 52 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4. West Wind Afr. Line, Ltd. v. Corpus Christi Marine Servs. Co., 834 F.2d 1232, 1237-1238 (5th Cir. 1988) ; Templeman v. Chris Craft Corp., 770 F.2d 245, 249 (1st Cir. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Marino v. Town of Kirkland, 146 F.R.D. 49, 51 (N.D.N.Y. 1993) .

9 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.07

§ 47.07 Recovering Docket Fees

Docket fees paid under § 28 U.S.C. § 1923 may be taxed as costs. n1 The amounts provided by 28 U.S.C. § 1923 for docket fees, however, are so small as to be virtually negligible.

If properly claimed, though, docket fees are taxable as costs. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsCourt & Marshal FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Templeman v. Chris Craft Corp., 770 F.2d 245, 249 (1st Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1021 (1985) ; Moore v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc., 708 F.2d 475, 486 (9th Cir. 1983) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.08

§ 47.08 Recovering Witness Fees, Including Deposition Expenses

[1] Taxable Witness Fees

[1.--1] 28 U.S.C. § 1821 Fees

Any and all of the fees to which witnesses are entitled under 28 U.S.C. § 1821 are properly taxable as costs. n1

Those fees include a daily witness attendance fee [see [1.--2], below], travel expenses [see [1.--3], below], and in some circumstances, a subsistence allowance [see [1.--4], below].

[1.--2] Daily Witness Attendance Fees

Each witness is entitled to a daily attendance fee in the amount of $40 for each day spent going to or from the place of the trial, hearing, or deposition. n2

Taxation of daily witness attendance fees is limited to $40 per day, irrespective of whether the witness is a lay witness or an expert witness. n3 For discussion of taxation of expert witness fees in excess of the $40 statutory cap, see [2], below.

[1.--3] Witness Travel Expenses

Witness expenses for necessary travel to and from the place of the trial, hearing, or deposition are taxable. n4

The court's power to tax costs of witness travel is not limited to the geographic area of the court's subpoena power. n5

In general, the means of travel by the witness should be the most economical available. n6

[1.--4] Witness Subsistence Fees

A witness is entitled to a subsistence fee if overnight stays are required. n7

Subsistence fees paid to witnesses are taxable as costs. n8

The amount of the subsistence fee is capped at the maximum amount generally allowable to employees of the federal government under 5 U.S.C. § 5702.

[2] Taxation of Expert Witness Fees in Excess of Statutory Cap

In general, taxation of witness fees is limited to $40 per day, irrespective of whether the witness is a lay witness or an expert witness. n9

Several fee-shifting statutes expressly authorize a fully compensatory award of expert witness fees. n10

If a federal statute authorizes the full recovery of expert witness fees, the proper method for seeking those expenses is a Rule 54(d)(2)(a) motion for "attorney's fees and related nontaxable expenses" [see §§ 47.90 -47.98].

A contract providing for fully compensatory expert witness fees is enforceable, and the full amount of those fees is taxable. n11

[3] Non-Testifying Witness

If a court order or some other extrinsic circumstance renders the testimony of a witness unnecessary, a paid witness fee may be taxed as a cost even though the witness never testified. n12

[4] Witness Includes Both Trial and Deposition Witness

Any and all of the fees to which to which witnesses are entitled under 28 U.S.C. § 1821 [see [1], above] are properly taxable as costs. n13

The statutory term witness as used in 28 U.S.C. §§ 1821 and 1920 is not defined, but has been judicially interpreted to mean not only witnesses at a trial or hearing in open court, but also deposition witnesses. n14

[5] Party Not Entitled to Witness Fees

A party is not a witness under 28 U.S.C. § 1821 or 28 U.S.C. § 1920. Accordingly, a party is not entitled to witness fees. n15

[6] Subpoena Not Condition for Taxation of Witness Fees as Costs

Although some witnesses appear in response to a subpoena, others, notably paid expert witnesses, appear voluntarily. The issuance of a subpoena is not a condition of the witness's entitlement to fees, or to the taxation of those fees as costs. n16

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnesses

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1821(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 441-445, 107 S. Ct. 2494, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 1920(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Farmer v. Arabian Am. Oil Co., 379 U.S. 227, 231-232, 85 S. Ct. 411, 13 L. Ed. 2d 248 (1964) .

(n6)Footnote 6. E.g., Breazeale v. Smith 857 F.2d 258, 260-261 (5th Cir. 1988) ; Hemmerick v. Chrysler Corp., 769 F. Supp. 525, 530-531 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 1821(d).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 U.S.C. § 1920(3); Hemmerick v. Chrysler Corp., 769 F. Supp. 525, 530 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 441-445, 107 S. Ct. 2494, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1987) .

(n10)Footnote 10. E.g., 15 U.S.C. §§ 2618(d), 2619(c)(2); 28 U.S.C. § 2412; 42 U.S.C. § 1988(c).

(n11)Footnote 11. TCBY Sys., Inc. v. RSP Co., 33 F.3d 925, 931 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See 28 U.S.C. § 1821(a)(1); United States ex rel. Evergreen Pipeline Constr. Co. v. Merritt Meridian Constr. Corp., 95 F.3d 153, 173 (2d Cir. 1996) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See 28 U.S.C. § 1920(3); 28 U.S.C. § 1821.

(n14)Footnote 14. Demarest v. Manspeaker, 498 U.S. 184, 187-191, 111 S. Ct. 599, 112 L. Ed. 2d 608 (1991) ; McCombs v. Meijer, Inc., 395 F.3d 346, 361 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Haroco, Inc. v. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 38 F.3d 1429, 1442 (7th Cir. 1994) ; Hodge v. Seiler 558 F.2d 284, 287 (5th Cir. 1977) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Demarest v. Manspeaker, 498 U.S. 184, 189, 111 S. Ct. 599, 112 L. Ed. 2d 608 (1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.09

§ 47.09 Recovering Expenses for Production of Documentary and Other Non-Testimonial Evidence

[1] Exemplification and Copying Expenses

"Fees for exemplification and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use in the case" are taxable, unless the court otherwise directs. n1

This provision permits taxation of photocopying costs. n2

[2] Trial Exhibits, Photographs, Maps, and Chart Expenses

[2.--1] Generally Taxable

Expenses incurred in producing documentary, non-testimonial evidence, such as trial exhibits, photographs, maps, charts, graphs, motion pictures, and kindred materials are taxable as 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4) costs. n3

Actual use of the evidence is not a prerequisite to a finding that the evidence was obtained necessarily. If the expense is required or approved by the court, its necessity is established. n4

Computer animations, videos, Powerpoint presentations, and graphic illustrations used to explain the case to the jury and the trial court generally do not qualify as "exemplification" costs recoverable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4). n4.1

[2.--2] Necessary Professional Expenses in Producing Evidence Recoverable

Taxation of costs for demonstrative evidence is not limited to the cost of physical production and copying of the evidence. Any required expenses of professionals in producing the evidence may also be taxed as costs. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney

FeesCostsWitnesses

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States ex rel. Evergreen Pipeline Constr. Co. v. Merritt Meridian Constr. Corp., 95 F.3d 153, 173 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Commercial Credit Equip. Corp. v. Stamps 920 F.2d 1361, 1367 (7th Cir. 1990) ; Maxwell v. Hapag. Lloyd Aktiengesell Schaft, 862 F.2d 767, 770 (9th Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. In Re Kulicke & Soffa Indus., Inc. Litig. 747 F.Supp. 1136, 1147 (E.D. Pa. 1990) , aff'd without opinion, 944 F.2d 897 (3d Cir. 1991) ; cf. Studiengesellschaft Kohle MbH v. Eastman Kodak Co., 713 F.2d 128, 132-133 (5th Cir. 1983) ; In re Air Crash Disaster at John F. Kennedy Int'l Airport on June 24, 1975, 687 F.2d 626, 631 (2d Cir. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. M.T. Bonk Co. v. Milton Bradley Co., 945 F.2d 1404 (7th Cir. 1990) ; McGuigan v. CAE Link Corp., 155 F.R.D. 31, 37 (N.D.N.Y. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See Summit Tech., Inc. v. Nidek Co., 435 F.3d 1371, 1375-1378 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

(n6)Footnote 5. In re Air Crash Disaster at John F. Kennedy Int'l Airport on June 24, 1975, 687 F.2d 626, 631 (2d Cir. 1982) .

12 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.10

§ 47.10 Recovering Expenses of Court Appointed Experts or Interpreters

The following expenses are taxable: n1

- Compensation of court appointed experts
- Compensation of interpreters
- Salaries, fees, expenses, and costs of special interpretation services under 28 U.S.C. § 1828

Taxation of costs for a court appointed expert witness is not subject to the statutory limitation of $40 per day applicable when an expert appears for one of the parties [see § 47.08[1.--2]].

The fees of an interpreter who translates depositions or other documents may be taxed. n2 Likewise, the fees of a trial interpreter may be taxed against the losing party. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnessesEvidenceTestimonyExpertsCourt-Appointed ExpertsCompensation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(6).

(n2)Footnote 2. BDT Prods. v. Lexmark Int'l, Inc., 405 F.3d 415, 419 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cruz v. Local Union No. 3, 150 F.R.D. 29, 37 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.11

§ 47.11 Recovering Costs with Respect to Government Litigants

[1] Government May Collect Costs From Private Litigants

The federal government is entitled to an award of costs to the same extent as any private litigant, unless some statute, rule, or regulation provides otherwise. n1

Similarly, any state may be awarded costs under Rule 54(d)(1).

[2] Understanding the Equal Access to Justice Act

The Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA) contains three fee-shifting provisions, found in two different sections of the United States Code, 5 U.S.C. § 504 and 28 U.S.C. § 2412. The EAJA is markedly different from other fee-shifting provisions in federal law in that it is not keyed to the type of case involved, but rather is tied to the presence of a federal governmental entity as a party in the action. Section 504 permits an award of fees by an administrative agency against the government in an adversary adjudication. n2 The other two fee-shifting provisions of the EAJA, 2412(b) and (d), apply to fee awards by federal courts and are likewise not restricted to particular types of cases; instead, they provide for fees to the prevailing party in any civil action brought by or against the United States. n3 Under the provisions of 28 U.S.C. §§ 2412(b) and (d), the United States may be assessed fees by a court in any civil action.

The EAJA is a gap-filling statute. It generally does not apply when another, more specific statute either permits or precludes a fee award; the EAJA authorizes fees only if the issue of fees is not addressed by the substantive law governing the action. If the more specific fee-shifting provision is exclusive, no resort to the EAJA is permitted, and fees may be awarded only under the standards set forth in the more specific statute. n4 The fee-shifting provisions of 28 U.S.C. 2412(b) and (d) both provide that if the substantive federal law at issue precludes fees, the more specific law governs and fees are not available. n5

If the substantive law contains a fee-shifting provision and the statute does not explicitly state that its provision is exclusive, the EAJA may supplement the provisions of the other fee-shifting statute. In such circumstances, the prevailing party should be given the benefit of whichever statute provides the more relaxed standard for awarding fees. n6

[3] Evaluating Government Fee Liability Under EAJA

Under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b), unless prohibited by statute a court may award reasonable fees and attorney's fees to the prevailing party in any civil action brought by or against the United States. Section 2412(b) further states that the government shall be liable for fees to the same extent that any other party would be liable under the common law or under the terms of any statute which specifically provides for such an award. n7 This provision places the government on an equal footing with private litigants and exposes the government to fee liability whenever a private litigant could be charged with such fees.

[4] Evaluating the Net Worth Limitation Under the EAJA

The mandatory fee-shifting provisions of the EAJA provide for an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party other than the United States. n8 Thus, in order to be eligible for a fee award under the EAJA, the fee claimant must be a party in proceedings against the government. n9 The EAJA was designed to ensure that parties with limited resources would be able to litigate against the government on an equal footing; therefore, to qualify as a party, a litigant may not exceed certain net worth maximums, a requirement that has been upheld as constitutional. n10

A movant requesting fees under 2412(d) bears the burden of qualifying under the net worth requirements. n11 In general, individuals may not exceed a net worth of $2,000,000, and corporations or other organizations may not exceed a net worth of $7,000,000. n12 In determining the prevailing party's net worth, the court should apply generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP). n13

[5] Limiting Recovery of Fees to Those Incurred

Section 2412(d) provides that the United States may be assessed fees and costs that were incurred by the prevailing party in the civil action. n14 Fees and costs incurred by a party ordinarily are the prevailing market rates billed by the party's attorney for the relevant services and expenses, not the attorney's actual cost for those items. The circuits are split on the question whether a prevailing party "incurs" fees that have been paid by a third party. The Ninth and Federal Circuits have held that a party "incurs" fees paid on his or her behalf by a third party even if the party's obligation to repay that third party is contingent on obtaining an award of those fees. n15

The Eighth Circuit, in contrast, has held that a contingent obligation to repay fees does not constitute "incurring" fees under the EAJA. n16 Under either view of what constitutes "incurring" fees, an award of fees and costs cannot be greater than the amount incurred. n17

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnesses

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Pine River Logging & Improvement Co. v. United States, 186 U.S. 279, 296, 22 S. Ct. 920, 46 L. Ed. 1164 (1902) ; see also 28 U.S.C. § 2412(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 5 U.S.C. 504(a)(1), (b)(1)(C).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b), (d).

(n4)Footnote 4. EEOC v. Consolidated Service Sys., 30 F.3d 58, 58-59 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b), (d).

(n6)Footnote 6. EEOC v. O & G Spring & Wire Forms Specialty, 38 F.3d 872, 880-884 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. 5 U.S.C. § 504; 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. Manning v. Astrue, 510 F.3d 1246, 1249-1255 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Richard v. Hinson, 70 F.3d 415, 417 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Sosebee v. Astrue, 494 F.3d 583, 586-589 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 5 U.S.C. 504(b)(1)(B); 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(2)(B).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Broaddus v. United States Army Corps of Engrs, 380 F.3d 162, 166-173 (4th Cir. 2004) .

(n14)Footnote 14. 5 U.S.C. 504(b)(1)(B); 28 U.S.C. 2412(d)(2).

(n15)Footnote 15. Morrison v. Commissioner, 565 F.3d 658, 662-663 (9th Cir. 2009) ; Ed A. Wilson, Inc. v. General Servs. Admin., 126 F.3d 1406, 1407 (Fed. Cir. 1997) .

(n16)Footnote 16. SEC v. Comserv Corp., 908 F.2d 1407, 1413-1414 (8th Cir. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 17. United States v. Paisley, 957 F.2d 1161, 1164 (4th Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.12

§ 47.12 Posting Security for Costs

The district court has the inherent power to require any party to an action to furnish security, in the form of a bond or other type of undertaking, for any other party's costs. n1 The matter is completely discretionary with the court, but is seldom used.

Some districts have promulgated local district court rules governing requests for security for costs. n2 The circumstances under which those requests will be granted, and the type of showing required in support of the request, vary from one rule to another. Generally, the main consideration in deciding whether to impose a security requirement is whether prejudice will result to the party seeking security if that party is required to incur large costs, which the party against whom security is sought cannot pay if it loses the action.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Anderson v. Steers, Sullivan, McNamar & Rogers, 998 F.2d 495 (7th Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., S.D.N.Y. & E.D.N.Y., Local Rule 54.2.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
A. Determining Recoverable Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.13 through 47.19

[Reserved]

§§ 47.13[Reserved]

16 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
B. Determining Which Party Is Entitled to Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.20

§ 47.20 Prevailing Party Presumed Entitled to Costs

Unless the court exercises its discretion to order otherwise, or a contrary express provision is made either in a federal statute or rule, the prevailing party is entitled to an award of costs as a matter of course. n1 The phrase as a matter of course has been interpreted to mean that the prevailing party is presumed to be entitled to costs. n2

There is no right of contribution among co-parties against whom costs have been awarded. Generally, parties against whom costs have been awarded are jointly and severally liable for the cost award, unless the court rules that one or more of them is responsible for a disproportionate share of the costs. n2.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnesses

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. National Info. Servs. v. TRW, Inc., 51 F.3d 1470, 1471-1472 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Sally v. E.I. CuPont de NeMours & Co., 966 F.2d 1011, 1017 (5th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Mercy v. County of Suffolk, 748 F.2d 52, 54 (2d Cir. 1984) ; Delta Airlines, Inc. v. Colbert, 692 F.2d 489, 490 (7th Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Anderson v. Griffin, 397 F.3d 515, 523-524 (7th Cir. 2005) .

17 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
B. Determining Which Party Is Entitled to Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.21

§ 47.21 Prevailing Party Defined

The term prevailing party generally means the party in whose favor judgment was entered. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnesses

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Head v. Medford, 62 F.3d 351, 354-355 (11th Cir. 1995) ; Roberts v. Madigan 921 F.2d 1047, 1058 (10th Cir. 1990) ; Schwarz v. Folloder 767 F.2d 125, 130-131 (5th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
B. Determining Which Party Is Entitled to Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.22

§ 47.22 Departing From Presumption of Costs to Prevailing Party

[1] Court May Limit or Deny Award of Costs to Prevailing Party

Despite the presumption that the prevailing party is entitled to an award of costs [see § 47.20], Rule 54(d)(1) nevertheless grants the court discretion to limit or deny taxable costs to the prevailing party. n1

[2] Discretion May Be Limited by Federal Statute or Rule

The discretion to tax costs granted by Rule 54(d)(1) [see [1], above] is subject to any express provision in a federal statute or a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure.

A number of statutes state that the court may award costs in its discretion. Such a provision is not contrary to Rule 54(d)(1), and does not displace the court's discretion under the Rule. n2

Other federal statutes explicitly mandate or prohibit an award of costs in particular circumstances, removing the court's discretion under the Rule 54(d)(1). n3

In order for the statute to be considered contrary to Rule 54(d)(1), it must specifically mention the term costs. n4

[3] Losing Party Bears Burden of Demonstrating That Costs Should Be Denied or Limited

The losing party bears the burden of demonstrating that costs should be denied or limited. The losing party's good faith is irrelevant, and cannot overcome the presumption in favor of an award of costs. n5

To overcome the presumption in favor of an award of costs to the prevailing party [see § 47.20], the losing party generally must show some misconduct on the part of the prevailing party. n6

[4] Denial Or Limitation of Costs Must Be Explained

Any decision to deny or limit otherwise taxable costs to the prevailing party must be explained by the district court. n7 Although the fact that a case is "close and difficult" may serve as a ground for denying costs to the prevailing party, a district court does not abuse its discretion merely because it awards costs in such a close and difficult case. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewEvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 441-445, 107 S. Ct. 2494, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. E.g., Fair Housing Act, 42 U.S.C. § 3613(c)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., United States v. D.K.G. Appaloosas Inc., 829 F.2d 532, 539 (5th Cir. 1987) ; SEC v. Kaufman, 835 F. Supp. 157, 159 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. United States ex rel. Lindenthal v. General Dynamics Corp., 61 F.3d 1402, 1412-1414 (9th Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. National Info. Servs. v. TRW, Inc., 51 F.3d 1470, 1471-1472 (9th Cir. 1995) ; McGill v. Faulkner 18 F.3d 456, 459 (7th Cir. 1994) ; White & White v. American Hosp. Supply Corp. 786 F.2d 728, 731 (6th Cir. 1986) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Smith v. Southeastern Penn. Transp. Auth., 47 F.3d 97, 99 (3d Cir. 1995) ; see, e.g., Sally v. E.I. CuPont de NeMours & Co., 966 F.2d 1011, 1017 (5th Cir. 1985) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Litton Sys., Inc. v. AT&T, 700 F.2d 785, 827 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Head v. Medford, 62 F.3d 351, 354 (11th Cir. 1995) ; National Info. Servs. v. TRW, Inc., 51 F.3d 1470, 1471-1472 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Hall v. State Farm & Fire Cas. Co., 937 F.2d 210, 216-217 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See McDonald v. Petree, 409 F.3d 724, 732 (6th Cir. 2005) .

19 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
B. Determining Which Party Is Entitled to Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.23 through 47.29

[Reserved]

§§ 47.23[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
C. Preparing Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.30

§ 47.30 Deadline for Filing Bill of Costs

[1] Deadline Established by Local District Court Rules

Rule 54(d)(1) does not provide any specific deadline within which a bill of costs must be filed. In the absence of a uniform time period in the national rules, the matter is left to the local rules of the individual district courts. n1

It is generally improper to file a bill costs before judgment has been entered. n2

[2] Deadline May Be Extended

The deadline provided in a local district court rule for filing a bill of costs [see [1], above] is not jurisdictional. Accordingly, the district court may extend the time, or may choose to permit an untimely motion or bill. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Congregation of the Passion v. Touche, Ross & Co., 854 F.2d 219, 221-223 (7th Cir. 1988) ; Wakefield v. Northern Telecom, Inc., 813 F.2d 535, 542 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Knighton v. Watkins, 616 F.2d 795, 798 (5th Cir. 1980) (citing Moore's Federal Practice); Repp v. Webber, 892 F. Supp. 552, 560 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ; Friends For All Children, Inc. v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. 725 F.2d 1392, 1399 (D.C. Cir. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. LoSacco v. City of Middletown, 71 F.3d 88, 92-93 (2d Cir. 1995) ; S.A. Healy Co. v. Milwaukee Metro. Sewage Dist., 60 F.3d 305, 308-309 (7th Cir. 1995) ; see Hernandez v. George 793 F.2d 264, 267-268 (10th Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
C. Preparing Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.31

§ 47.31 Filing of Appeal May Stay Taxation of Costs

Local district court rules should be consulted to determine whether the filing of an appeal stays the taxation of costs.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
C. Preparing Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.32

§ 47.32 Submitting Verified Bill of Costs

A party seeking costs must file a bill of costs, accompanied by an affidavit, made either by the party, the party's attorney, or the party's agent with knowledge of the facts, attesting to the fact that: n1

- The items are correct
- The costs incurred were necessarily incurred in the case
- The services for which fees have been charged were actually and necessarily performed

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1924.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
C. Preparing Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.33

§ 47.33 Advance Notice Must Be Given to Losing Party

[1] Costs Generally Taxed by Clerk on 14 Days' Notice

The initial obligation for the taxing of costs falls upon the clerk of the court. n1 However, the Sixth Circuit has held that a district court has inherent and statutory authority to act on motions related to costs prior to any action by the clerk. n1.1

The losing party must be given 14 days' notice of the proposed bill of costs before the clerk may tax costs. n2

If the notice is served by mail, the clerk must wait an additional three days before taxing costs. n3

[2] Local District Court Rules May Require More Notice

Local district court rules may require more than one day's notice of the proposed bill of costs before the clerk may tax costs.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. BDT Prods. v. Lexmark Int'l, Inc., 405 F.3d 415, 417-419 (6th Cir. 2005) .

(n3)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d); United States v. Carson, 52 F.3d 1173, 1190 (2d Cir. 1995) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
C. Preparing Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.34 through 47.39

[Reserved]

§§ 47.34[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
D. Objecting to Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.40

§ 47.40 Losing Party Has Right to Object to Bill of Costs

The losing party may object to the taxation of costs, either in whole or in part, in favor of the prevailing party.

In general, the failure to object to the taxation of costs properly claimed in the bill of costs is a concession to each and every item contained in the bill, unless the clerk abused its discretion in taxing items without statutory authorization. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. *United States v. Local No. 1804-1, No. 90-C0963, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 611, at 2 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 25, 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
D. Objecting to Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.41

§ 47.41 Deadline for Objecting to Bill of Costs

Objections to a bill of costs must be filed prior to the time at which the clerk may properly tax costs.

The losing party is entitled to 14 days' advance notice of the proposed bill of costs. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1); see § 47.33.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
D. Objecting to Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.42

§ 47.42 Particular Objections

[1] Challenging Court Reporter Fees Not Necessarily Obtained

Fees of the court reporter are taxable only if necessarily obtained for use in the case. n1

For discussion of the types of fees recoverable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2), see § 47.05.

The party opposing the application for taxation of court reporter fees should focus on whether those fees were necessarily obtained for use in the case. For example, if the fees incurred served no purpose other than counsel's convenience (for example, expedited daily transcript fees), taxation of that expense as a cost will be denied. n2

[2] Challenging Trial Witness Fees

In general, taxation of daily witness attendance fees is limited to $40 per day, irrespective of whether the witness is a lay witness of an expert witness. n3

[3] Challenging Production of Copies or Documentary Evidence Not Necessarily Obtained

"Fees for exemplification and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use in the case" are taxable, unless the court otherwise directs. n4

For discussion of the types of fees recoverable under this provision, see § 47.09.

The party opposing the application for taxation of 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4) fees should focus on whether those fees were necessarily obtained for use in the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersCourt ReportersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney

FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. McIlveen v. Stone Container Corp., 910 F.2d 1581, 1582-1583 (7th Cir. 1990) ; U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Touche Ross & Co., 854 F.2d 1223, 1247-1248 (10th Cir. 1988) ; McDowell v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 758 F.2d 1293, 1294 (8th Cir. 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 441-445, 107 S. Ct. 2494, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1987) ; Stryker Corp. v. Intermedics Orthopedics, Inc., 898 F. Supp. 116, 121-122 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) ; see § 47.08[1.--2].

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4); see Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

28 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
D. Objecting to Bill of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.43 through 47.49

[Reserved]

§§ 47.43[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
E. Seeking Review of Clerk's Taxation of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.50

§ 47.50 Clerk's Action Subject to De Novo Review

If a timely motion for review by the court is filed [see § 47.51], the district court should make a de novo determination of the costs issue. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction CostsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Farmer v. Arabian Am. Oil Co., 379 U.S. 227, 233, 85 S. Ct. 411, 13 L. Ed. 2d 248 (1964) .

30 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
E. Seeking Review of Clerk's Taxation of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.51

§ 47.51 Motion Required Within Seven Days of Clerk's Action

A party seeking review of the clerk's taxation of costs must file a motion with the court within seven days of the clerk's action. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
E. Seeking Review of Clerk's Taxation of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.52

§ 47.52 Failure to File Motion Waives Any Objection to Clerk's Taxation of Costs

If the party against whom costs were taxed fails to file a timely motion to review the clerk's action, any objections are waived, and the district court is not obliged to review the taxation of costs. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Prince v. Poulos, 876 F.2d 30, 33-34 (5th Cir. 1989) ; Rowe v. Maremount Corp., 850 F.2d 1226, 1244 (7th Cir. 1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
E. Seeking Review of Clerk's Taxation of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.53

§ 47.53 Time May Be Extended

The seven-day period within which a motion to review the clerk's taxation of costs must be filed [see § 47.51] may be extended, or alternatively, the court in its discretion may consider an untimely motion. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsDepositions & TranscriptsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsReproduction Costs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Lorenz v. Valley Forge Ins. Co., 23 F.3d 1259, 1260 (7th Cir. 1994) ; McLeod, Alexander, Powel & Apfell, P.C. v. Quarles 894 F.2d 1482, 1488 n.6 (5th Cir. 1990) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
E. Seeking Review of Clerk's Taxation of Costs

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.54 through 47.59

[Reserved]

§§ 47.54 [Reserved]

34 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.60

§ 47.60 Grounds for Recovering Attorney's Fees Must Be Found in Fee-Shifting Statute

Although Rule 54(d)(2) provides the procedure for the recovery of attorney's fees in federal court, that rule does not and cannot provide a basis for the recovery of those fees. Instead, the legal ground for fee recovery must be found in the substantive law governing the action. In general, the so-called American Rule prohibits the recovery of fees in federal court, absent a specific congressional authorization of fee-shifting. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 504 (2010); Alyeska Pipeline Serv. Co. v. Wilderness Soc'y, 421 U.S. 240, 257-261, 95 S. Ct. 1612, 44 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1975) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.61

§ 47.61 Determining Whether Statute Authorizes Fee-Shifting

[1] Statute Must Expressly Mention Attorney's Fees

Hundreds of federal statutes explicitly provide for an award of attorney's fees in a federal action. The vast majority of those are true fee-shifting statutes, in which the losing party is required to pay the entire litigation expense of the prevailing party. Thus, in every action in which a federal claim is presented, it is incumbent upon the attorneys to determine whether one or more fee-shifting statutes attach to the claims presented.

The statute at issue must expressly mention attorney's fees, because the statutory abrogation of the American Rule cannot be inferred. n1

[2] Invoking State Law in Diversity Actions

State fee-shifting statutes are to be applied in federal actions in which diversity of citizenship forms the basis for the court's subject matter jurisdiction. n2

However, the federal bad faith exception [see § 47.63[3]] is applicable even in diversity actions. n3

If state law claims are brought as claims within the federal court's supplementaljurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367, a party prevailing on pendent state claims may rely on a state fee-shifting provision to recover attorney's fees, so long as the state law has not been preempted by contrary federal law. n4

In most cases, however, the federal claim to which the state claims are pendent will also authorize fee-shifting, so that there will be no need to rely on the state law. If, however, the federal claims are dismissed prior to trial, the federal fee-shifting statute will not support an award of attorney's fees for prevailing on only the pendent state claims; instead, fees are available only if the pendent state claims authorize fee-shifting. n5

[3] Discretionary Fee-Shifting Statutes

Some fee-shifting statutes provide for a mandatory award of attorney's fees by stating that a prevailing party is entitled to recover attorney's fees. Most fee-shifting statutes, however, are discretionary in nature.

Many discretionary fee-shifting statutes expressly contain the criteria to be applied by the court. Others, however, are entirely a matter of judicial construction. In every case it is incumbent on the attorneys to research the applicable criteria.

[4] Pro Se Party Not Entitled to Fee Award

Obtaining an award of attorney's fees is contingent upon the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Accordingly, a pro se party, whether a lay person or attorney representing himself or herself, may not collect attorney's fees under a fee-shifting statute. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Key Tronic Corp. v. United States, 511 U.S. 809, 815, 114 S. Ct. 1960, 128 L. Ed. 2d 797 (1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Sioux County v. National Surety Co., 276 U.S. 238, 239-241, 48 S. Ct. 239, 72 L. Ed. 547 (1928) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 51-55, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 2136-2138, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. E.g., Milwe v. Cavuoto, 653 F.2d 80, 84 (2d Cir. 1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Lightfoot v. Union Carbide Corp., 110 F.3d 898, 913-914 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Kay v. Ehrler, 499 U.S. 432, 435-436, 111 S. Ct. 1435, 113 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1991) ; Krecioch v. United States, 316 F.3d 684, 687-688 (7th Cir. 2003) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.62

§ 47.62 Determining Prevailing Party

[1] Plaintiff Is Prevailing Party If Success on Issues Achieves Some of Benefit Sought and Changes Relationship Between Plaintiff and Defendant

Although the various federal fee-shifting statutes employ a variety of wording, the most common formulation simply states that the prevailing party may be entitled to collect attorney's fees from the losing party.

The plaintiff is considered to be the prevailing party under a fee-shifting statute if the plaintiff succeeds on any significant issue in litigation which achieves some of the benefit the parties sought in bringing suit, and the suit is resolved in a way that changes the legal relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. n1

Because the prevailing party test requires only that the suit obtain some of the benefit sought, the fact that the entire relief sought in the action was not obtained does not preclude prevailing party status. n2

A decision by a court that the defendant has violated the law, but that the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief, does not make the plaintiff a prevailing party for purposes of recovering attorney's fees. n3

A preliminary injunction that grants only temporary relief that merely maintains the status quo pendente lite is not, without more, a judicially sanctioned material alteration of the parties' legal relationship that confers "prevailing party" status for purposes of awarding attorney's fees. n4

A plaintiff who gains a preliminary injunction does not qualify for an award of attorney fees as the prevailing party if the merits of the case are ultimately decided against the plaintiff. The Supreme Court has held that prevailing party status does not result from a preliminary injunction that is reversed, dissolved, or otherwise undone by the court's final decision. n5

[2] Plaintiff May Be Prevailing Party Even If Relief Obtained Is Only Nominal Damages

An award of nominal damages is sufficient under the "achievement of benefit" test [(see [1], above), because it changes the legal relationship between the plaintiff and defendant by forcing the defendant to pay money to the plaintiff. However, because the relief obtained is so limited, a recovery of nominal damages generally results in denial of attorney's fees. n6

If the plaintiff can point to some benefit derived from the action other than the award of nominal damages, a fully compensatory award of attorney's fees may nevertheless be obtained. n7

[3] Plaintiff Is Prevailing Party If Case Is Dismissed Pursuant to Settlement

If the plaintiff secures some of the relief sought through settlement, the plaintiff generally is the prevailing party even though no formal judgment of the court on the merits finds the defendant liable. n8 However, some courts have held that a plaintiff who obtains an out-of-court settlement and then voluntarily dismisses his or her action is not a "prevailing party" for purposes of obtaining an award of attorney's fees. n9 A settlement that is executed before the commencement of any administrative or judicial proceeding does not allow one to bring an independent action for the attorney's fees which were incurred to obtain the settlement agreement. n10

[4] Determining Prevailing Party If Suit Was Catalyst for Unilateral Action of Defendant That Mooted Case

The Supreme Court has rejected the "catalyst theory" and held that a plaintiff who fails to secure a favorable judgment is not a "prevailing party" for purposes of federal fee-shifting statutes. The Court thus overruled the majority of circuits, which had held under the "catalyst theory" that a plaintiff who failed to secure a favorable judgment could nevertheless be treated as the prevailing party if the plaintiff's lawsuit achieved the desired result by bringing about a voluntary change in the defendant's conduct. n11

However, applying the fee provision of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, the Fourth Circuit held that the catalyst theory remains available to recover attorney's fees in a mooted action under environmental fee statutes that do not contain an express "prevailing party" requirement. n12 The Federal Circuit, on the other hand, held that because mootness is a jurisdictional doctrine, the court must dismiss a mooted action, and may not enter judgment for the plaintiff merely to preserve a plaintiff's eligibility for attorney's fees under a "prevailing party" fee-shifting statute such as the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA). n13

[5] Defeating Suit on Merits Makes Defendant Prevailing Party

Because a plaintiff establishes prevailing party status by achieving some of the benefit sought in bringing suit (see [1], above), a defendant can be a prevailing party only if the plaintiff obtains absolutely no relief whatsoever from the litigation, and the suit is resolved in a way that does not change the legal relationship between the plaintiff and defendant. Because a resolution of the case without a determination on the merits generally leaves the plaintiff free to refile the suit, no change in the legal relationship occurs, and the defendant is not the prevailing party. n14

On the other hand, if the case is resolved on the merits in favor of the defendant and the plaintiff obtains no relief, the defendant is the prevailing party. n15

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Texas State Teachers Ass'n v. Garland Indep. School Dist., 489 U.S. 782, 792-793, 109 S. Ct. 1486, 103 L. Ed. 2d 866 (1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Armster v. United States Dist. Court, 817 F.2d 480, 482-483 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Sierra Club v. City of Little Rock, 351 F.3d 840, 845-846 (8th Cir. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Northern Cheyenne Tribe v. Jackson, 433 F.3d 1083, 1086 (8th Cir. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Sole v. Wyner, 551 U.S. 74, 86, 127 S. Ct. 2188, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1069 (2007) ; see also UFO Chuting of Hawaii Inc. v. Smith, 508 F.3d 1189, 1197-1198 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 108-111, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992) ; Benton v. Oregon Student Assistance Comm'n, 421 F.3d 901, 908 (9th Cir. 2005) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Cabrera v. Jakabovitz, 24 F.3d 372, 393 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Maher v. Gagne, 448 U.S. 122, 129, 100 S. Ct. 2570, 65 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1980) ; Richard S. v. Department of Developmental Servs., 317 F.3d 1080, 1086-1088 (9th Cir. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See John T. v. Delaware County Intermediate Unit, 318 F.3d 545, 560-561 (3d Cir. 2003) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See P.N. v. Seattle School Dist., 474 F.3d 1165, 1173-1174 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Resources, 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855, 862-863 (2001) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ohio River Valley Environmental Coalition, Inc. v. Green Valley Coal Co., 511 F.3d 407, 414-416 (4th Cir. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Chapman Law Firm Co. v. Greenleaf Constr. Co., 490 F.3d 934, 939-940 (Fed. Cir. 2007) .

(n14)Footnote 14. W.G. v. Senatore, 18 F.3d 60, 64-65 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Szabo Food Serv. v. Canteen Corp., 823 F.2d 1073 (7th Cir. 1987) ; Evers v. County of Custer 745 F.2d 1196, 1204-1205 (9th Cir. 1984) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 419, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1978) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.63

§ 47.63 Determining Applicability of Federal Equitable Principles

[1] Obtaining Award if Class Action, Interpleader, or Other Action Creates Common Fund

The common fund exception to the American Rule permits recovery of attorney's fees from a fund created by the litigation. The common fund exception applies when the fund created benefits both the fee movant and others who are not named parties to the action, and a fee assessment against the fund would serve to spread the cost of the litigation to all of those beneficiaries. Class actions and interpleader actions are the most frequent type of common fund actions. n1

Under the common fund exception, only the legal services that benefit the fund may be compensated. n2

However, if a fund is created, the fact that some or most of the beneficiaries have rejected the benefit derived does not prevent an award of fees. n3

[2] Obtaining Award if Action Confers Substantial Benefit and Award Spreads Cost of Suit Among Beneficiaries

The substantial benefit exception to the American Rule permits the recovery of attorney's fees from the losing party when a substantial benefit is conferred upon non-parties by the action, and the losing party is a collective representative of the class of beneficiaries. The most common types of suits are shareholder derivative suits, and suits against labor unions in which the award will serve to spread the cost of the litigation to all shareholders or union members. n4

A substantial benefit may be conferred merely by demonstrating that the defendant violated the law. n5

The fact that the plaintiff derived some greater benefit from the action than the absent beneficiaries does not defeat application of the substantial benefit exception. n6

[3] Obtaining Award When Subjective Bad Faith of Party Merits Sanctions

If a party has "acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons," a federal court may award attorney's fees as sanctions under the bad faith exception to the American Rule. The fact that the conduct might be punished under some federal rule or statute does not curtail the inherent equitable power of the federal court to award attorney's fees under this bad faith exception. n7

In general, in determining whether the requisite bad faith is present, the court may consider only the conduct relating to the litigation, and not the conduct leading to the cause of action. Additionally, subjective bad faith must be shown, but may be inferred when the actions lack any reasonable basis. n8

Bad faith attorney's fees may be awarded even against the prevailing party. n9

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Boeing Co. v. Van Gemert, 444 U.S. 472, 478, 100 S. Ct. 745, 749, 62 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1980) ; see also Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 121-123 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. 110- 118 Riverside Tenants Corp., 5 F.3d 645, 646-647 (2d Cir. 1993) (per curiam); Capital Bancshares v. United States, 957 F.2d 203, 208 (5th Cir. 1992) ; In re Hill, 775 F.2d 1037, 1041 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Holbrook v. Pitt, 748 F.2d 1168, 1176 (7th Cir. 1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Koppel v. Wien, 743 F.2d 129, 134 (2d Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Hall v. Cole, 412 U.S. 1, 5, 93 S. Ct. 1943, 36 L. Ed. 2d 702 (1973) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 54 F.3d 69, 71-72 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Rodonich v. Senyshyn, 52 F.3d 28, 34-35 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Aguinaga v. United Food & Commercial Workers Int'l Union, 993 F.2d 1480, 1483 (10th Cir. 1993) ; Guidry v. International Union of Operating Engr's, Local 406, 882 F.2d 929, 944 (5th Cir. 1989) , vacated on other grounds, 494 U.S. 1022 (1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 45-46, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) , quoting F.D. Rich Co. v. United States ex rel. Industrial Lumber Co., 417 U.S. 116, 129, 94 S. Ct. 2157, 40 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1974) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Association of Flight Attendants v. Horizon Air Indus. Inc., 976 F.2d 541 (9th Cir. 1992) ; Sanchez v. Rowe, 870 F.2d 291, 295 (5th Cir. 1989) ; Dow Chem. Pac. Ltd. v. Rascator Maritime, S.A., 782 F.2d 329, 342-345 (2d Cir. 1986) ; Shimman v. International Union Eng'rs, Local 18, 744 F.2d 1226, 1232-1233 (6th Cir. 1984) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 53, 111 S.Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27 (1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.64

§ 47.64 Determining Whether Contract Between Parties Authorizes Fees

Contracts often provide that in litigation arising from the contract, the prevailing litigant will be entitled to collect reasonable attorney's fees incurred. Such contractual clauses are valid. Therefore, in litigation over a contract, the winning litigant may collect attorney's fees from the loser if the contract expressly so provides. n1

A claim for contractual attorney's fees must be made as provided in the applicable substantive law of contracts. If the attorney's fees are defined by that substantive law as an element of damages in the action, as they often will be, the provisions of Rule 54(d)(2) providing for a post-judgment motion to collect the fees are inapplicable. Instead, the fee must be claimed in the pleadings. In general, the right to the fee is a legal issue properly triable by the jury, while the amount of the fee is reserved for decision by the court. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesFee Agreements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Franklin Fed. v. Resolution Trust Corp., 53 F.3d 268, 273 (9th Cir. 1995) ; In re Auto Specialities Mfg. Co., 18 F.3d 358, 361 (6th Cir. 1994) ; McGuire v. Russell Miller, Inc., 1 F.3d 1306, 1312-1313 (2d Cir. 1993) ; General Elec. Credit Corp. v. The Oil Screw Triton, VI, 712 F.2d 991, 994 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. McGuire v. Russell Miller, Inc., 1 F.3d 1306, 1315-1316 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Resolution Trust Corp. v. Marshall, 939 F.2d 274, 279 (5th Cir. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.65

§ 47.65 Determining Whether Attorney's Fees May Be Recovered From Governmental Litigants

[1] Federal Government Liable for Attorney's Fees Whenever Private Litigant Would Be Liable Under Same Circumstances

Under the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA), the federal government is liable for attorney's fees "to the same extent that any other party would be liable under the common law or under the terms of any statute which specifically provides for such an award." n1 A prevailing party that satisfies the EAJA's other requirements may recover its paralegal fees from the government at prevailing market rates. n2 The Tenth Circuit has held that the right to an EAJA fee award belongs to the client not to counsel, so neither the party nor the attorney may request that the fee be paid directly to counsel. n3

This provision rarely comes into play, however, because under most federal fee-shifting statutes, the government is already either specifically liable or specifically exempt from a fee assessment.

[2] Federal Government Liable for Fees Unless Position Was Substantially Justified or Special Circumstances Make Award Unjust

[2.--1] Imposition of Fees Is Mandatory

The government is actually more vulnerable than private parties to an assessment of fees; 28 U.S.C. § 2812(d) provides for a mandatory assessment of fees against the United States in favor of a prevailing party in any civil action (except an action sounding in tort), unless the position of the government was substantially justified, or special circumstances made an award unjust.

[2.--2] Qualification for Fee Award Based on Net Worth of Litigant

To qualify for attorney's fees under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d) [see [2.--1], above], a litigant cannot exceed certain net worth requirements that do not apply to fee awards under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b).

In general, individuals must have a net worth not more than two million dollars, and corporations or other organizations must have a net worth not more than seven million dollars. n4

The fee movant must allege eligibility, which will often be conceded by the government. If challenged, however, the fee movant must show eligibility. The movant may comply by submitting a formal affidavit, or may do so through a more informal process of pointing to other evidence already in the record. n5

[2.--3] Government Bears Burden on Substantial Justification Issue

Under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d), attorney's fees may be denied to a prevailing party if the position of the United States was substantially justified. The government bears the burden of establishing that its position was substantially justified. n6

Substantial justification is present whenever the government's position is justified to a degree that could satisfy a reasonable person. n7

The substantial justification issue is to be determined on the basis of the record. Additional evidentiary submissions by the movant or the government are unnecessary. n8

[3] Obtaining Fees from State and Local Governmental Units, Agencies, and Officers

[3.--1] Obtaining Fees from State When Eleventh Amendment Immunity Has Been Waived or Abrogated

If the Eleventh Amendment immunity of the states has been waived by the state or validly abrogated by Congress, the state may be held liable both on the merits, and for attorney's fees. n9

In the absence of such a waiver or abrogation, however, the states retain their immunity, and may not be sued for any kind of relief, either on the merits or for attorney's fees. n10

[3.--2] Obtaining Fees From State When Officer Sued in Official Capacity

The general Eleventh Amendment immunity of the states does not preclude any suit to force compliance with federal law. The plaintiff may effectively bring such an action by requesting prospective relief in a suit against an officer of the state in that officer's official capacity. When such an action is brought, a federal court may award attorney's fees payable by the state as relief incidental to the prospective relief obtained in the action. n11

[3.--3] Obtaining Fees From Local Governmental Unit

Local governmental units are not states within the purview of the Eleventh Amendment, so that any such unit properly held liable on the merits may also be charged with attorney's fees under an applicable fee-shifting statute. n12

In some cases, however, the local governmental unit is not expressly named as a defendant, because the action is brought against an officer of that government. If the suit names the officer in an official capacity, the local governmental unit is responsible for any award of damages or attorney's fees, even if not named as a defendant. n13

[3.--4] Obtaining Fees From Officer in Individual Capacity

A suit against a state officer in an official capacity is effectively a suit against the state, which is solely liable for any damages or attorney's fee award [see [3.--3], above]. A suit against an officer in an individual capacity, however, is a suit against that officer personally. Therefore, if relief on the merits is obtained, the officer is personally liable for any recovery of either damages or attorney's fees. The state cannot be compelled to satisfy the officer's liability when the suit is brought against the officer in an individual capacity. n14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsClaims By & Against

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b); see Wells v. Bowen, 855 F.2d 37, 46 (2d Cir. 1988) ; see also Vacchio v. Ashcroft, 404 F.3d 663, 667-672 (2d Cir. 2005) (petition for writ of habeas corpus challenging immigration detention qualifies as "civil action" for purposes of the Equal Access to Justice Act).

(n2)Footnote 2. Richlin Security Service Co. v. Chertoff, 553 U.S. 571, 128 S. Ct. 2007, 170 L. Ed. 2d 960, 974 (2008) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Manning v. Astrue, 510 F.3d 1246, 1249-1255 (10th Cir. 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(2)(B); United States v. 27.09 Acres of Land in Town of Harrison, 43 F.3d 769, 774, n.3 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Sosebee v. Astrue, 494 F.3d 583, 587-590 (7th Cir. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Flores v. Shalala, 49 F.3d 562, 567 (9th Cir. 1995) ; United States v. One Parcel of Real Property, 960 F.2d 200, 208 (1st Cir. 1992) ; Eames v. Bowen, 864 F.2d 251, 252 (2d Cir. 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Pierce v. Underwood, 487 U.S. 552, 566-568, 108 S. Ct. 2541, 101 L. Ed. 2d 490 (1988) ; but cf. Lauer v. Barnhart, 321 F.3d 762, 765 (8th Cir. 2003) (fees award justified even though governement persuaded one of three circuit judges that it was right).

(n8)Footnote 8. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(B).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fitzpatrick v. Bitzer, 427 U.S. 445, 456, 96 S. Ct. 2666, 49 L. Ed. 2d 614 (1976) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Quern v. Jordan, 440 U.S. 332, 338-340, 99 S. Ct. 1139, 59 L. Ed. 2d 358 (1979) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Hutto v. Finney, 437 U.S. 678, 689-698, 98 S. Ct. 2565, 57 L. Ed. 2d 522 (1978) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 667, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1978) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Brandon v. Holt, 469 U.S. 464, 469-471, 105 S. Ct. 873, 83 L. Ed. 2d 878 (1985) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 165, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
F. Determining Whether Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.66 through 47.69

[Reserved]

§§ 47.66[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.70

§ 47.70 Lodestar Method Generally Required

A fee award under any federal fee-shifting statute proving for fees to the prevailing party should be calculated under the lodestar methodology. n1

A lodestar attorney's fee award is calculated by: n2

- Determining the number of hours reasonably spent on the litigation (see § 47.72), and
- Multiplying that figure by a reasonable hourly rate (see § 47.73)

Some courts have endorsed the abandonment of the term "lodestar" in favor of the more modern and more accurate "presumptively reasonable fee." n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesExcessive Fees

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 504 (2010); Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 901, n.16, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 433, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Arbor Hill Concerned Citizens Neighborhood Ass'n v. County of Albany, 493 F.3d 110, 114-121 (2d Cir. 2007) .

42 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.71

§ 47.71 Statutory Cap on Hourly Rate Recoverable

Generally, $125 per hour is the highest rate that may be recovered, with adjustments for the costs of living. n1

If, however, the prevailing party can demonstrate the limited availability of qualified attorneys to handle the proceeding or some other special factor [see §§ 47.74, 47.75], the court may award market rates that exceed the cap of $125 per hour. The special factor of limited availability is restricted to "distinctive knowledge or specialized skill needful for the litigation in question". n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d); Harris v. Sullivan, 968 F.2d 263, 265-266 (2d Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Pierce v. Underwood, 487 U.S. 552, 572, 108 S. Ct. 2541, 101 L. Ed. 2d 490 (1988) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.72

§ 47.72 Proving Hours Reasonably Spent

[1] Submitting Contemporaneously Prepared Time Sheets Provides Best Proof of Hours Claimed

When submitting evidentiary proof of the claimed hours, the fee movant should submit contemporaneously prepared time sheets; the failure to keep such records is sufficient ground for a substantial reduction in the claimed hours. n1

A summary of time records may be submitted in lieu of the records themselves. n2

[2] Any Time Appropriately Billed to Client May Be Recovered

The guiding principle in determining which hours may be compensable in a court awarded attorney's fee is that any hours appropriately billed to a client are recoverable; but that if the time could not have properly been billed to the client, it may not be charged against the losing party. n3

Thus, for example, attorney time spent in necessary travel is generally billed to the client, and is therefore appropriately compensated as part of the attorney's fee award. n4 However, some courts have determined that travel time should be reimbursed at half of the hourly prevailing rate. n5

[3] Time Spent in Fee Litigation Generally Recoverable

As a general rule, time expended solely on the fee issue itself is properly included in the fee award. Such time is often referred to as fees on fees, and because that time is billable to a client, it is properly charged to the losing party. n6

However, the applicable substantive law may preclude recovery of fees on fees. For example, if attorney's fees are sought pursuant to the provisions of a contract to which the law of the state of New York is applicable, only the attorney's fees for the litigation on the merits are recoverable, and not the fees for the fee litigation. n7

Similarly, if attorney's fees are sought under the equitable common fund exception [see § 47.63[1]], fees on fees are inappropriate because that work does not benefit the fund. n8

[4] Time Spent on Unsuccessful Claims

In many cases, a prevailing plaintiff will not have succeeded on all claims in the action, but will nevertheless be seeking an attorney's fee for all time expended in the action. Despite the limited success of the suit, all time reasonably spent may be compensated if the unsuccessful claims are related to the successful ones, and the results of the suit are nevertheless excellent. n9

If the claims on which the plaintiff prevailed are unrelated to the unsuccessful claims, time spent on the unsuccessful claims did not contribute to the success of the suit, and should be excluded from the fee award. n10

If the successful and unsuccessful claims are related, so that division of the hours on a claim-by-claim basis is impractical, the claimed hours should be reduced if the award of a fully compensatory lodestar figure would be excessive in view of the limited results of the suit. n11

When there are multiple unsuccessful claims, some of which are related while others are unrelated to the victorious fee claims, the court should eliminate all the hours dedicated to the unrelated claims, and then make a further reduction to account for the limited success as to the related claims. n12

[5] Time Spent in Other Forums

[5.--1] Express Statutory Language Controls

Occasionally a prevailing party will seek to recover attorney's fees expended not in the actual litigation in federal court, but in prior administrative or other proceedings that preceded the federal action. Whether time spent in connection with those proceedings is compensable depends first on the statutory language. n13

In most cases, however, the statutory language will not definitively resolve the issue. In that event, the statute is subject to interpretation. If the statute permits recovery for any proceeding, it generally will be interpreted to embrace prior administrative work. n14

[5.--2] Fees in Connection With Mandatory Administrative Proceedings

If a plaintiff is obligated to exhaust administrative remedies before filing a federal civil action, the fees incurred in connection with those administrative proceedings are generally compensable when the plaintiff prevails in the federal action, unless the language of the fee-shifting statute precludes such an award. n15 However, the Third Circuit has held that the fee provision of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, 29 U.S.C. 1132(g)(1), which authorizes the court to award attorney's fees to either party in "any action" precludes an award for pre-litigation administrative proceedings, even if those proceedings were mandatory and therefore a prerequisite to an ERISA suit. n16

The Ninth Circuit applied the fee provision of the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, 33 U.S.C. § 928(c), which provides that the "court may approve an attorney's fee for the work done before it." The court held that this language separates administrative and judicial proceedings, and precludes a court from awarding attorney's fees for work not done "before" the court awarding fees, such as preparatory administrative work. n17

The Second Circuit held that when arbitration of a federal claim is required by contract, and that claim is subject to a federal fee-shifting statute, an arbitrator or arbitration panel must award attorney's fees to the prevailing party in the arbitration to the same extent and in the same manner that a court would award those fees in litigation over the claim. n18

[5.--3] Fees in Connection With Optional Administrative Proceedings

If administrative proceedings are optional, the analysis is more complex. Attorney's fees may be collected for the time expended in voluntary administrative proceedings only if the work was "useful and of a type ordinarily necessary" to success of a later federal action. n19

[5.--4] Independent Action to Collect Attorney's Fees Prohibited Unless Permitted By Statute

In some cases, a party may obtain all desired relief in the administrative proceeding, so that no subsequent federal action is required. In general, an independent action in federal court to collect the attorney's fees incurred in such proceedings is not permissible. n20

If, however, the fee-shifting statute at issue expressly permits an independent action, that language, of course, controls. n21

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Louisiana Power & Light Co. v. Kellstrom, 50 F.3d 319, 326-327 (5th Cir. 1995) ; New York State Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Carey, 711 F.2d 1136, 1148 (2d Cir. 1983) ; Powers v. Commissioner, 43 F.3d 172, 181 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Frank Music Corp. v. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc., 886 F.2d 1545, 1557 (9th Cir. 1989) ; Pawlak v. Greenawalt, 713 F.2d 972, 979 (3d Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Powers v. Commissioner, 43 F.3d 172, 181 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Cruz v. Local Union No. 3, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 34 F.3d 1148, 1160 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Frank Music Corp. v. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc., 886 F.2d 1545, 1557 (9th Cir. 1989) ; Pawlak v. Greenawalt, 713 F.2d 972, 979 (3d Cir. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) , quoting, Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880, 891 (1980) (en banc).

(n4)Footnote 4. Telluride Mgt. Solutions, Inc. v. Telluride Inv. Corp., 55 F.3d 463, 467 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Cruz v. Local Union No. 3, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 34 F.3d 1148, 1161 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Patterson v. Julian, 250 F. Supp. 2d, 36, 45 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 6. INS v. Jean, 496 U.S. 154, 162, 110 S. Ct. 2316, 110 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. F.H. Krear & Co. v. Nineteen Named Trustees, 810 F.2d 1250, 1269 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Mautner v. Hirsch, 32 F.3d 37, 39 (2d Cir. 1994) ; but cf. Donovan v. CSEA Local Union 1000, 784 F.2d 98, 106 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 1940, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 1940, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 436-437, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 1940, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ; cf. Terminate Control Corp. v. Horowitz, 28 F.3d 1335, 1342-1343 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Bogan v. City of Boston, 489 F.3d 417, 428-430 (1st Cir. 2007) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Summit Valley Indus. v. Carpenters Local 112, 456 U.S. 717, 725, 102 S. Ct. 2112, 72 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1982) .

(n14)Footnote 14. New York Gaslight Club, Inc. v. Carey, 447 U.S. 54, 61, 100 S. Ct. 2024, 64 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1980) .

(n15)Footnote 15. New York Gaslight Club, Inc. v. Carey, 447 U.S. 54, 61, 100 S. Ct. 2024, 64 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1980) ; see also Rego v. Westvaco Corp., 319 F.3d 140, 150 (4th Cir. 2003) (under ERISA (29 U.S.C. § 1132(g)), attorney's fees are categorically unavailable for expenses incurred in exhausting administrative proceedings).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Hahnemann University Hosp. v. All Shore, Inc., 514 F.3d 300, 312-314 (3d Cir. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Tahara v. Matson Terminals, Inc., 511 F.3d 950, 955 (9th Cir. 2007) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Porzig v. Dresdner, Kleinwort, Benson, North America LLC, 497 F.3d 133, 138-143 (2d Cir. 2007) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Webb v. Board of Educ., 471 U.S. 234, 243, 105 S. Ct. 1923, 85 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1985) .

(n20)Footnote 20. North Carolina Dept. of Transp. v. Crest Street Community Council, 479 U.S. 6, 12, 107 S. Ct. 336, 93 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1986) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Johnson v. Bismarck Pub. Sch. Dist., 949 F.2d 1000, 1004 (8th Cir. 1991) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.73

§ 47.73 Proving Reasonable Hourly Rate

[1] Affidavit of Counsel's Customary Rates

When considering a statutory attorney's fee request, a federal court is to award the "prevailing market rate," which must be demonstrated by the evidentiary submissions of the fee movant. n1

If counsel is in private practice and charges hourly rates, the best evidence of the prevailing market rate is, of course, the actual rate customarily charged by the attorney in that market. n2

A reasonable hourly rate for purposes of awarding attorney's fees is not ordinarily ascertained simply by reference to rates awarded in previous cases. n3

[2] Affidavit to Prove Rate When Counsel's Work Not Customary

The recovery of customary billing rates is premised upon the notion that counsel is performing customary work within the market. However, many lawyers routinely practice outside of an immediate market, and practice across state boundaries is quite common. The relevant market for the determination of an appropriate hourly rate is the district in which the court sits. n4

Thus, if counsel provides services outside of the usual market or some other factor makes the lawyer's customary rates unrepresentative of the market rate, that latter rate should be proven by affidavit or other appropriate evidentiary submissions. n5

The district judge may rely upon his or her own personal knowledge of the legal market in the forum in setting an appropriate hourly rate. n6

The district court may depart from the strict application of the forum community rule under appropriate circumstances, such as when a party has made a reasonable decision to retain out-of-district counsel rather than local counsel. n7 The Third Circuit has held that if a prevailing party with a right to recover attorney's fees can show that it required the particular expertise of counsel from another community, or that local attorneys were unwilling to take on the litigation, then it will be entitled to compensation based on prevailing rates in the community in which the party's attorneys practice. n8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 895, n.11, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Barrow v. Falck, 977 F.2d 1100, 1105 (7th Cir. 1992) ; Moore v. Jas. H. Matthews & Co., 682 F.2d 830, 840 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Farbotko v. Clinton County, 433 F.3d 204, 208-209 (2d Cir. 2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Polk v. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs., 722 F.2d 23, 25 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Brewer v. Protexall, Inc., 50 F.3d 453, 459 (7th Cir. 1995) ; Shlomchik v. Richmond 103 Equities Co., 763 F. Supp. 732, 743 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Chambless v. Masters, Mates & Pilots Pension Plan, 815 F.2d 869, 873 (2d Cir. 1987) , cert. denied, 496 U.S. 905 (1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Arbor Hill Concerned Citizens Neighborhood Assn v. County of Albany, 484 F.3d 162, 169-173 (2d Cir. 2007) (district court may use out-of-district hourly rate or some rate in between out-of-district rate sought and rates charged by local attorneys in calculating lodestar, if it is clear that a reasonable, paying client would have paid those higher rates).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Interfaith Cmty. Org. v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 426 F.3d 694, 704-705 (3d Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.74

§ 47.74 Post-Lodestar Adjustments

[1] Factors Not Reflected In Hours or Rate

The lodestar figure arrived at by multiplying the hours reasonably expended by a reasonable hourly rate is the amount that is presumed to be the reasonable fee to be awarded. Any adjustments made to the lodestar must be for factors not already subsumed within the factors of time or rate, and must be supported by specific and detailed findings as to why the lodestar figure did not include those factors. n1

[2] Prohibition Against Adjusting Lodestar for Contingency

Contingency enhancements to the lodestar calculation are not available under fee-shifting statutes. n2

[3] Adjusting Lodestar for Quality of Service Disfavored

The quality of the legal services of counsel is usually reflected in the lodestar component of the appropriate hourly rate to be awarded. Therefore, that factor normally cannot be a basis for a post-lodestar adjustment of the fee. n3

However, the Supreme Court has specifically declined to completely foreclose the possibility of an enhancement for quality of representation. Indeed, the Court has stated that such an enhancement is permissible in the "rare case" when the fee movant proves that the result of the suit was "exceptional," and that the quality of services rendered was superior to what one reasonably should expect in light of the hourly rates charged. n4

[4] Adjusting Lodestar for Limited Nature of Results Obtained

The fact that the suit was not entirely successful does not require a reduction in the fee request if the results of the suit are nevertheless excellent [see § 47.72[4]]. If, however, the relief obtained is limited in comparison to the scope of the litigation as a whole, the district court should reduce the fee request to account for this limited success. Although this often will be accomplished by the elimination of certain claimed hours, the court may also simply make a downward adjustment to the lodestar. n5

A recovery of only a fraction of the damages sought is not such "limited success" as to warrant a downward adjustment to the lodestar; the fee awarded under a fee-shifting statute need not be proportional to the damages obtained. n6

If, however, only nominal damages are recovered, a fee award is generally improper [see § 47.62[2]].

[5] Considering Factors Allowing for Lodestar Adjustment

The Supreme Court has held that the calculation of an attorney's fee based on the lodestar may be increased due to superior performance, but only in extraordinary circumstances. n7 Enhancements should not be awarded without specific evidence that the lodestar fee would not have been adequate to attract competent counsel. n8 The following factors may be considered for lodestar adjustments: n9

- Where the method used to determine the hourly rate does not adequately measure the attorney's true market value, as demonstrated in part during the litigatio--in such a case, the trial judge should adjust the hourly rate in accordance with specific proof comparing the attorney's ability to a prevailing market rate

- If the attorney's performance includes an extraordinary outlay of expenses and the litigation is exceptionally protracted--in such cases, the enhancement amount must be calculated using a method that is reasonable, objective, and capable of being reviewed on appeal, such as by applying a standard interest rate to the qualifying expense outlays

- Where an attorney's performance involves exceptional delay in the payment of fees--in such a case, the enhancement should be calculated by a method similar to that used for an exceptional delay in expense reimbursement

Enhancements cannot be justified on the ground that departures from hourly billing are becoming more common. Nor can they be based on a flawed analogy to the increasingly popular practice of paying attorneys a reduced hourly rate with a bonus for obtaining specified results. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 506 (2010); Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 565-568, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 560-566, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 565-568, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 899, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 440, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n6)Footnote 6. City of Riverside v. Rivera, 477 U.S. 561, 574, 106 S. Ct. 2686, 91 L. Ed. 2d 466 (1986) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 505 (2010).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 505 (2010).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Perdue v. Kenny A., __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 508 (2010).

46 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.75

§ 47.75 Obtaining Current Rates In Lengthy Cases

If a case is particularly lengthy, the fee movant may be harmed by the delay in the receipt of the fee award because of the time value of money. Recognizing this, the Supreme Court has approved of the practice of awarding counsel's current market rates, rather than the attorney's lower market rate at the time the services were rendered. n1

If, however, the fee payor is the federal government, an enhancement to account for delay is prohibited by the doctrine of sovereign immunity. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 283-284, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Library of Congress v. Shaw, 478 U.S. 310, 315, 106 S. Ct. 2957, 92 L. Ed. 2d 950 (1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.76

§ 47.76 Recovering Other Expenses

[1] Recovering Out-of-Pocket Expenses Generally Billed to Client

Any time properly billed to the client may be included in a court-awarded attorney's fee [see § 47.72[2]]. This same principle applies to other items billed to the client that are neither taxable as costs, nor literally within the concept of an attorney's fee. Expenses that are paid out-of-pocket by the attorney, such as postage and delivery charges, long-distance telephone calls, computer-assisted legal research, copying, travel, meals, and similar charges that are properly billed to the client as attributable specifically to the client's case may be recovered as a component of the attorney's fees in the case. n1

Expert witness fees, however, even if routinely billed to the client, may only be recovered to the statutory maximum of $40 per day expressed in 28 U.S.C. § 1823, unless the fee-shifting statute relied on expressly authorizes a fully compensatory award of expert fees [see §§ 47.60, 47.61]. n2

[2] Expenses That Comprise Attorney Overhead Are Not Recoverable

To recover out-of-pocket expenses as part of a court-awarded attorney's fee, the expenses must be attributable solely to the client's case. If the expenses are part of attorney overhead in merely running an ongoing legal practice, those expenses cannot be attributed to the client's case, and so they are not recoverable. Thus, the salaries of employees of the law firm, rent, utility bills, and the like that would have been incurred in any event are part of overhead, and may not be recovered. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 1940, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Stryker Corp. v. Intermedics Orthopedics, Inc., 898 F. Supp. 116, 121-122 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Tucker Leasing Capital Corp. v. Farber, 882 F. Supp. 1290, 1292 (E.D.N.Y. 1995) .

48 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.77

§ 47.77 Awarding Percentage of Recovery in Common Fund Actions

When fees are awarded under the equitable common fund exception to the American Rule [see § 47.63[1]], the court may, in its discretion, set the amount of the fee by awarding an appropriate percentage of the fund obtained. n1

In determining a reasonable fee under the "percentage of the fund" method, a court must consider the following factors: n2

- The time and labor expended by counsel
- The magnitude and complexities of the litigation
- The risk involved in the litigation
- The quality of representation
- The requested fee in relation to the settlement
- Public policy considerations

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 900 n. 16, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 121-123 (2d Cir. 2005) , cert. denied, 125 S. Ct. 2277, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1080 (2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.78

§ 47.78 Effect of Client's Contract With Counsel

The fact that the prevailing party agreed to pay a particular sum to counsel does not limit that party to recovering only that amount from the opponent under a fee-shifting statute. Instead, a reasonable fee should be calculated under the lodestar analysis. Should the statutory fee prove to be higher than the contractual fee, the losing party must nevertheless pay the higher statutory award. n1

However, some federal fee-shifting statutes provide for recovery of attorney's fees incurred in connection with the action. If an award of attorney's fees is sought under one of these statutes, the contract does provide an upper limit on the amount of the fee awarded, because the only fees incurred are those that the client is obligated to pay. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesFee Agreements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 91-96, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Marre v. United States, 38 F.3d 823, 829 (5th Cir. 1994) ; cf. F.H. Krear & Co. v. Nineteen Named Trustees, 810 F.2d 1250, 1269 (2d Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
G. Determining Proper Amount of Fee Award

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.79 through 47.89

[Reserved]

§§ 47.79[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.90

§ 47.90 Motion Generally Required Within 14 Days of Judgment

A claim for attorney's fees must be made by motion served no later than 14 days after entry of judgment. n1

For exceptions to the 14-day requirement, see § 47.92.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Rule 54(d)(2)(B); Mints v. Educ. Testing Serv., 99 F.3d 1253, 1259 (2d Cir. 1996) .

52 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.91

§ 47.91 Court May Extend Deadline or Permit Untimely Motion

The 14-day deadline for filing a motion for attorney's fees [see § 47.91] is not jurisdictional, so the court may extend the time for filing the motion, or may permit an untimely motion. n1

The court is not required to grant such an extension, however, so that the failure to make the motion within 14 days is sufficient reason to deny any request for attorney's fees. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. E.g., Labrie v. Secretary of Health & Human Servs., 976 F.2d 779, 785-786 (1st Cir. 1992) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Sol Salins, Inc. v. W.M. Ercanbrack Co., 155 F.R.D. 4, 4-5 (D.D.C. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.92

§ 47.92 Exceptions to 14-Day Requirement

[1] Motion Seeking Attorney's Fees as Sanctions

Motions seeking an award of attorney's fees as sanctions for the violation of any of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, or under 28 U.S.C. § 1927 (counsel's liability for excessive costs), are not subject to the provisions of Rule 54(d)(2), including the 14-day filing period. n1

[2] Motion for Fees Against Federal Government Based on 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)

A party seeking fees against the federal government under the Equal Access to Justice Act based on 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d) [see § 47.65] must move for attorney's fees "within thirty days of final judgment in the action". n2

The statutory term final judgment is expressly defined as a judgment that is "final and not appealable" n3 so that the time to move for fees does not begin to rununtil an appellate mandate is issued, or the time to appeal the judgment has expired. n4

An application for attorney's fees and expenses must set out all of the statutory prerequisites for a fee award. However, a timely application for attorney's fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act may be amended, after the initial 30-day filing period has run, to cure an initial failure to allege that the position of the United States was "not substantially justified." n4.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsExtensionsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(E).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(2)(G).

(n4)Footnote 4. Shalala v. Schaefer, 509 U.S. 292, 295-297, 113 S. Ct. 2625, 125 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1993) .

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Scarborough v. Principi, 541 U.S. 401, 414-421 124 S. Ct. 1856, 158 L. Ed. 2d 674, (2004) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.93

§ 47.93 Complying With Requirements of Form of Motion and Submission of Evidentiary Materials

[1] Motion Need Only State Basis For Fee Award and Fee Estimate

A motion for attorney's fees must: n1

- Specify the judgment entitling the movant to fees
- Specify the statute, rule, or other grounds entitling the moving party to the award
- State or estimate the amount of the fee sought

[2] Submitting Evidentiary Materials to Justify Fee Award

The fee movant bears the burden of establishing both the right to the fee, as well as the amount of the fee, and must submit adequate evidentiary proof. n2

Rule 54(d)(2) does not require the submitted motion to be accompanied by evidentiary materials to justify the fee; instead, those materials must be submitted in due course as directed by the court. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Rule 54(d)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., In re Central Ice Cream Co., 836 F.2d 1068, 1074 (7th Cir. 1987) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.94

§ 47.94 Attorney's Fees as an Element of Damages

If the substantive law provides for attorney's fees as an element of damages, the fees must be sought as provided in that substantive law, and not by a post-judgment motion. n1

If the substantive law provides for the recovery of attorney's fees as an element of damages, the 14-day period provided by Rule 54(d)(2)(B) within which to file a motion for attorney's fees is inapplicable. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(A); Stochastic Decisions, Inc. v. DiDomenico, 995 F.2d 1158, 1166-1167 (2d Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 114 S. Ct. 385 (1995) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(A).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.95

§ 47.95 Motion Must Be Brought in Client's Name

The right to claim an award of attorney's fees under a fee-shifting statute belongs to the prevailing litigant, and not the attorney for that party. Therefore, a motion for attorney's fees must be brought in the name of the client, unless the client has assigned the right to the fee to the attorney as part of the fee contract between attorney and client. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesFee Agreements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 727-728, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.96

§ 47.96 Claim for Expert Witness Fees Requires Motion Within 14 Days of Judgment

Rule 54(d)(2)(A) applies not only to claims for attorney's fees, but to claims for "related nontaxable expenses" as well.

This language refers to items that are neither attorney's fees nor taxable costs under Rule 54(d)(1), such as an award of fully compensatory expert witness fees when such fees are authorized by the substantive law [see § 47.08[2]].

For example, 42 U.S.C. § 1988(c) authorizes an award of expert witness fees in addition to attorney's fees in civil rights litigation. Rule 54(d)(2) in turn provides that the method for seeking an award of those fees is a motion filed within 14 days of the entry of judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsWitnesses

58 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.97

§ 47.97 Motion Does Not Suspend Time to Appeal Judgment on Merits

The filing of a post-judgment motion for attorney's fees does not affect the finality of the underlying judgment on the merits, or suspend the time to appeal that judgment. If the judgment on the merits is not timely appealed, any notice of appeal filed after the decision on the attorney's fee motion is effective, but only to appeal the dispensation of that motion. n1

The court has discretion under Rule 58 to suspend the finality of the judgment on the merits pending a decision on the motion for attorney's fees. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Budinich v. Becton Dickinson and Co., 486 U.S. 196, 199-203, 108 S. Ct. 1717, 100 L. Ed. 2d 178 (1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 58; Heldman v. Sobol, 846 F. Supp. 285, 288 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.98

§ 47.98 Appeal Does Not Divest Court of Jurisdiction to Award Fees

If an appeal is taken from the underlying judgment, the district court retains jurisdiction to decide a Rule 54(d)(2) motion for attorney's fees. n1

If, however, a single judgment addresses both the merits and attorney's fees, an appeal taken from that judgment brings up both issues to the court of appeals, and ousts the district court of jurisdiction to reconsider its ruling on attorney's fees. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionLower Court JurisdictionCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. *Chalais v. Milton Bradley Co., No. 95-C0737, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13438, at 3 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Ramsey v. Colonial Life Ins. Co. of Am., 12 F.3d 472, 476 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Toliver v. County of Sullivan, 957 F.2d 47, 49 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
H. Employing Proper Procedure for Recovering Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 47.99 through 47.109

[Reserved]

§§ 47.99[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.110

§ 47.110 Requesting Opportunity for Adversary Submissions

On request of a party, the court must afford an opportunity for adversary submissions with respect to the motion. n1

Rule 54(d)(2)(C) does not state how or when a request to oppose a fee request should be made; consult applicable local district court rules.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.111

§ 47.111 Determining Time Within Which to Oppose Motion

If the request to oppose the fees motion is granted [see § 47.110], the court generally will either specify the date by which opposing papers must be submitted, or will set the matter down for an evidentiary hearing.

In the absence of any such court direction, opposing papers should be served as provided in the local district court rules or judge's individual orders governing general motion procedures.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.112

§ 47.112 Obtaining Evidentiary Hearing

Although Rule 54(d)(2) provides an opportunity to submit opposing evidentiary materials on a motion for attorney's fees, the rule does not guarantee the right to an evidentiary hearing. n1

If an evidentiary hearing is sought, it generally should be requested in the motion or in the opposing papers, and must comply with any applicable local district court rules.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Bingham v. Zolt, 66 F.3d 553, 565 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Building Serv. Local 47 v. Grandview Raceway, 46 F.3d 1392, 1402 (6th Cir. 1995) ; In re Thirteen Appeals, 56 F.3d 295, 301 (1st Cir. 1995) .

64 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.113

§ 47.113 Raising Specific Objections

Specific objections should be stated and contradictory evidence should be offered. Unsubstantiated allegations that the fee request is overstated are insufficient. n1

Any argument not raised before the court by the opposing party is waived on appeal. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Sheets v. Salt Lake City, 45 F.3d 1383, 1391 (10th Cir. 1995) ; Gates v. Rowland, 39 F.3d 1439, 1449 (9th Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 54 F.3d 69, 73 (2d Cir. 1995) ; Scarfo v. Cabletron Sys., Inc., 54 F.3d 931, 941 (1st Cir. 1995) ; Formby v. Farmers & Merchant Bank, 904 F.2d 627, 631 (11th Cir. 1990) .

65 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.114

§ 47.114 Obtaining Discovery On Fee Issue Requires Exceptional Circumstances

If the evidentiary submissions of the fee movant and the opponent raise disputedissues of material fact, and discovery would be useful in resolving those issues, the district court may exercise its discretion to permit discovery on the question of attorney's fees. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Gucci America, Inc. v. Rebecca Gold Enterprises, 802 F. Supp. 1048, 1051-1052 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; see, e.g., Henson v. Columbus Bank & Trust Co., 770 F.2d 1566, 1574 (11th Cir. 1985) .

66 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.115

§ 47.115 Right to Fee and Amount of Fee May Be Separately Resolved

When a motion for attorney's fees is made, the district court may first decide whether fees are available before receiving evidence on the amount of the fee. n1

If fees are quickly denied, the necessity for resolving the amount of the fee is obviated. Accordingly, this bifurcated procedure may be desirable if the fee computation issues are particularly complex. Whether to employ this procedure is within the discretion of the district court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(C).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 47 Costs
I. Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees

4-47 Federal Litigation Guide § 47.116

§ 47.116 Court May Refer to Master or Magistrate Judge

The court may refer issues relating to the value of legal services to a special master. Similarly, the court may refer a motion for attorney's fees to a magistrate judge under Rule 72(b) as if it were a dispositive pretrial matter. n1

Pursuant to Rule 72(b), the magistrate judge may not actually decide the motion, but may only make recommendations as to whether fees should be awarded and in what amount, with the ultimate decision reserved to the district judge. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMagistratesPretrial OrdersCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesReasonable FeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory Awards

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide 48.syn

§ 48.syn Synopsis to Chapter 48: Appeals to Court of Appeals *

§ 48.01 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts

§ 48.02 Jurisdiction to Review of Decisions of Administrative Agencies

§ 48.03 Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Appellate Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

§ 48.04 Liberal Construction of Appellate Rules

§§ 48.05 through 48.09 [Reserved]

§ 48.10 Litigants Must Preserve Record for Appeal

§ 48.11 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Pretrial Motion

§ 48.12 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Motion in Limine or Motion During Trial

§ 48.13 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Evidentiary Objections During Trial

§ 48.14 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Offers of Proof During Trial

§ 48.15 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Objecting to Jury Instructions

§ 48.16 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Objecting to Proposed Findings

§ 48.17 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Post-Trial Motion

§§ 48.18 through 48.29 [Reserved]

§ 48.30 All Final Decisions Are Appealable as of Right

§ 48.31 Types of Interlocutory Orders Appealable as of Right

§ 48.32 Considering Whether to Appeal from Appelable Interlocutory Order

§ 48.33 Partial Final Judgment May Be Appealable as of Right

§ 48.34 The Cohen Doctrine: Appealable Collateral Orders

§ 48.35 Appellate Review by Prerogative Writ

§ 48.36 Appellant Must Have Standing to Appeal as of Right
[1] Appellant Must Have Been a Party of Record at Time Order or Judgment Was Entered
[2] Appellant Must Be Aggrieved by Order or Judgment

§ 48.37 Joinder and Consolidation of Appeals

§ 48.38 Drafting, Filing, and Serving the Notice of Appeal
[1] Appeals in Which Notice of Appeal Must be Filed
[2] Deadline for Appealing as of Right
[2.--1] General Rule: Notice of Appeal Must Be Filed Within 30 Days After Entry of Judgment or Order
[2.--2] United States as Party; 60 Day Deadline
[2.--3] Certain Motions Filed in District Court May Extend Appeal Deadline
[2.--4] Extension of Time for Good Cause or Excusable Neglect
[2.--5] Extension of Time on Grounds of Lack of Notice
[2.--6] Deadline for Filing Cross-Appeal
[2.--7] Checklist: Timeline for Appeal from Final Judgment
[3] Notice of Appeal Must Specify Parties Taking the Appeal
[4] Notice of Appeal Must Designate Order From Which Appeal Is Taken
[5] Notice of Appeal Must Name Court to Which Appeal is Taken
[6] Sample Form Notice of Appeal Included in Appendix of Forms to Appellate Rules
[7] Filing the Notice of Appeal; Payment of Fees
[8] Appellant Is Not Required to Serve Notice of Appeal on Other Parties

§§ 48.39 through 48.49 [Reserved]

§ 48.50 Petition for Permission to Appeal Must Be Filed With Circuit Court

§ 48.51 Contents of Petition for Permission to File Appeal

§ 48.52 Response to Petition for Permission to File Appeal

§ 48.53 Circuit Court May Require Bond to Cover Costs of Appeal

§§ 48.54 through 48.59 [Reserved]

§ 48.60 Enforcement of Non-Exempt Judgments Automatically Stayed 14 Days Following Entry

§ 48.61 Obtaining Stay of Enforcement of Non-Exempt Judgment Pending Appeal by Posting Bond

§§ 48.62 through 48.69 [Reserved]

§ 48.70 Record on Appeal is Official Compilation of Proceedings as Presented to District Court

§ 48.71 Items That Must be Included in Record on Appeal
[1] Record on Appeal Must Include Original Papers and Exhibits
[2] Record on Appeal Must Include Transcript of Proceedings
[3] Statement of Evidence When Transcript Unavailable

[4] Record on Appeal Must Include Certified Copy of Docket Entries

§ 48.72 Agreed Statement in Lieu of Record on Appeal

§ 48.73 Correction or Modification of Record on Appeal

§§ 48.74 through 48.79 [Reserved]

§ 48.80 Rules Governing Procedure for Review or Enforcement of Administrative Order

§ 48.81 Nature of Proceedings for Review or Enforcement of Administrative Order

§ 48.82 Petition for Review of Administrative Order
[1] Review of Agency Order Is Initiated by Filing Petition for Review
[2] Contents of Petition for Review

§ 48.83 Application for Enforcement of Administrative Order
[1] Filing Application and Answer
[2] Contents of Application for Enforcement

§ 48.84 Serving Petition for Review or Application for Enforcement

§ 48.85 No Automatic Stay of Administrative Order Pending Review

§§ 48.86 through 48.89 [Reserved]

§ 48.90 Required Contents of Appellant's and Appellee's Briefs

§ 48.91 Contents of Reply Brief

§ 48.92 Cross-Appellate Briefs; Briefs in Cases Involving Multiple Appellants or Appellees

§ 48.93 References to Record on Appeal; Reproduction of Statutes, Rules, Regulations, and Other Laws

§ 48.94 Page Limitations and Formatting Requirements

§ 48.95 Local Rules Often Include Additional Requirements for Appellate Briefs

§ 48.96 Appendix to Brief
[1] Contents of Appendix
[2] Appendix Filing Requirements
[3] Format of Appendix

§ 48.97 Deadline for Serving and Filing Appellate Briefs

§ 48.98 Practical Guidelines for Writing Appellate Briefs

§ 48.99 Sanctions for Frivolous Appeal
[1] Circuit Court Has Discretion to Award Damages and Costs to Appellee
[2] Determination of Frivolousness

§§ 48.100 through 48.109 [Reserved]

§ 48.110 Right to Oral Argument

§ 48.111 Oral Argument Procedure

§§ 48.112 through 48.119 [Reserved]

§ 48.120 Including Statement of Standard of Review in Appeal

§ 48.121 Jury Verdicts Reviewed for Sufficiency of Evidence
[1] Understanding Substantial Evidence Rule
[2] Evaluating Sufficiency of Evidence in Civil Cases

§ 48.122 Trial Court's Findings of Fact Reviewed for Clear Error
[1] Understanding the Clear Error Standard
[2] Rationale for Deference to Trial Court
[3] Plausible Finding Cannot Be Error
[4] Considering Basis of Trial Court's Findings
[5] Absent or Inadequate Findings
[6] Determining Clear Error

§ 48.123 Conclusions of Law Reviewed Independently
[1] Evaluating De Novo Review
[2] Understanding Rationale for De Novo Review
[3] Review of Mixed Questions of Law and Fact

§ 48.124 Discretionary Determinations Reviewed for Abuse of Discretion
[1] Abuse of Discretion by Trial Court
[2] Abuse of Discretion by Administrative Agency

§ 48.125 Reviewing Harmless Error
[1] Understanding Harmless Error Rule and Its Rational
[2] Determining Whether Error is Harmless
[3] Fundamentally Harmful Errors

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

This chapter discusses appeals from the federal district courts to the circuit courts of appeals, as well as review and enforcement of administrative agency orders. The following topics are covered:

- Jurisdiction of the the circuit courts of appeal
- Importance of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, local rules, and manuals of internal operating procedures
- Appellate strategy in the trial court, including how to preserve issues for appeal
- Orders appealable as of right, and orders with respect to which permission to appeal must be obtained
- Notice of appeal deadlines and content requirements
- Stays pending appeal
- Appellate brief deadlines and content requirements
- Record on appeal content requirements
- Oral argument
- Standards of review

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
A. Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts; Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.01

§ 48.01 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts

There are 13 federal circuit courts of appeals. Each circuit has jurisdiction to review decisions of "district and territorial" courts within its geographic or subject matter area. n1

Only the Federal Circuit is limited in subject matter jurisdiction. Specifically, the Federal Circuit deals primarily with patents, copyright, trademark, and contract and property claims against the United States. n2

Appeals to the courts of appeals from final judgments and orders of the district courts or of bankruptcy appellate panels are governed by Rule 6 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Review of Tax Court decisions is with the circuit court; the proper circuit depends on the status of the petitioner and the nature of the action. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n2)Footnote 2. Federal Courts Improvements Act of 1982, Pub. L. 97-164.

(n3)Footnote 3. 26 U.S.C. § 7482(b).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
A. Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts; Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.02

§ 48.02 Jurisdiction to Review of Decisions of Administrative Agencies

The courts of appeals also have jurisdiction to review decisions of administrative agencies. n1 The appropriate circuit for review is determined by statute. Judicial review of federal administrative agency action is based on either a specific grant of jurisdiction in the statute creating the agency, or federal question jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331. The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) provides that a person who is "adversely affected ... by agency action ... is entitled to judicial review thereof," and that "final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court [is] subject to judicial review." n2 Often, more than one circuit may have jurisdiction over the appeal--commonly the District of Columbia Circuit, and the circuit in which the adversely affected party resides. n3 If agency action affects more than one party, and there is no exclusive venue for judicial review, the parties may race to different circuits seeking what they perceive to be a more hospitable forum. Certain circuit courts, for example, have acquired the reputation of being pro-business or pro-consumer. The winner of the race to the courthouse may have an advantage because the agency must file the record in the court where the first petition for review is filed if the second petition is filed more than 10 days after the agency order is issued. Potential unfairness is alleviated by a statute that allows transfer to another court of appeals "for the convenience of the parties in the interest of justice." n4

For complete discussion of review or enforcement of administrative orders, see §§ 48.80 -48.85.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n2)Footnote 2. 5 U.S.C. §§ 702, 704.

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1294.

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 2112(a).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

72 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
A. Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts; Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.03

§ 48.03 Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Appellate Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

Proceedings in the courts of appeals are generally governed by the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. Those rules outline the entire appeal process, and should be studied with care.

Fed. R. App. P. 1 provides that to the extent the procedure is not specified, it is governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. Although the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply strictly only in the district courts, when necessary, they apply equally to the courts of appeals. n1 Accordingly, when the appellate rules provide for filing a motion or other document in the district court, the procedure must comply with the practice of the district court. n2

In addition, Fed. R. App. P. 47 authorizes each circuit to establish rules governing its own procedures that are not inconsistent with the general rules. Each of the circuits has implemented local appellate rules.

Appellate practitioners should also be aware of the manuals of internal operating procedures (IOP) or practitioner's guides which most circuits have prepared. While not rules of procedure, those manuals or guides provide valuable assistance. For example, the Third Circuit's internal operating procedures provide that briefs and appendices are distributed to judges four weeks prior to oral argument, and the judges read the briefs at least 10 days before argument. The Fourth Circuit's IOP sets out detailed guidelines for handling death penalty cases. The Fifth Circuit's IOP informs practitioners of the manner in which cases are screened for oral argument.

Various statistics as to each of the circuits are published annually in the Annual Report of the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. Those statistics include the number of filings, terminations and pending cases; the distribution of cases by type; and the average time it takes to complete an appeal in each circuit.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Balgowan v. New Jersey, 115 F.3d 214, 216-217 (3d Cir. 1997) (provision of Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 that parties may be dropped or added by order of court on motion of any party or on its own initiative at any stage of action and on such terms as are just, has been relied on by appellate courts to both dismiss and add parties for jurisdictional purposes).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 1(a)(2).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
A. Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts; Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.04

§ 48.04 Liberal Construction of Appellate Rules

Courts must give the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure a liberal construction in light of the Congressional intent to promote simplicity in procedure, fairness in administration, the just determination of litigation, and the elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay. n1

The appellate rules expressly state that they may not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of the circuit courts. n2 Rather, the appellate rules govern only procedure. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 331; see also In re Orbitec Corp., 520 F.2d 358, 362 (2d Cir. 1975) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 1(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. For a more complete discussion, see 20 Moore's Federal Practice, § 301.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
A. Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts; Importance of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Local Rules, and Manuals of Internal Operating Procedures

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.05 through 48.09

[Reserved]

§§ 48.05[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.10

§ 48.10 Litigants Must Preserve Record for Appeal

A litigant's appellate strategy should start when preparing for trial. An appellate court does not try cases anew, but as a general matter, sits to review the errors of the trial court. Generally, while review of legal error is de novo, the "clearly erroneous" standard controls an appellate court's review of findings of fact by the trial judge. The findings will not be set aside unless they are unsupported by substantial evidence. n1

Even when error is conceded or found, the harmless error rule will often bar relief. The party asserting error has the burden of proving that the error was harmful. That party must show that substantial rights were affected by the error. n2 Error is not harmful unless a party is unjustly prejudiced, n3 substantial rights are affected, n4 or affirmance is inconsistent with substantial justice. n5

Moreover, even as to issues of law, it is insufficient merely to argue that the law requires reversal. An appellant must also show that the question was raised in the trial court. The general rule is that a litigant may not present as a ground for reversal an issue that was not presented to the trial court and that it, therefore, had no opportunity to decide. n6 That rule establishes the basic principle of appellate strategy in the trial court: an appellant must preserve the record for appeal by raising and securing rulings on each of the issues to be argued on appeal. It is nightmarish to realize during the process of writing the appellate brief that a key issue or exchange is not in the record.

There is no single or best way to preserve an issue for appeal. There are a number of different methods of presenting an issue to the trial court, and which method should be used will depend on the case and the issue. The key is to ensure the following:

- The issue is presented to the trial court
- A ruling is made on it
- The presentation and resolution of the issue are a part of the record that will go to the court of appeals

If any one of these requirements is absent, the litigant runs a substantial risk that the appellate court will decline to consider the merits of the issue.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364, 395, 68 S. Ct. 525, 92 L. Ed. 746 (1948) ; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 2111; Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n3)Footnote 3. Asbill v. Housing Auth., 726 F.2d 1499 (10th Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Bickerstaff v. South Cent. Bell, 676 F.2d 163 (5th Cir. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Miller v. Princess Anne Volunteer Fire Co., Inc., 853 F.2d 1130 (4th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Polys v. Trans-Colorado Airlines, Inc., 941 F.2d 1404 (10th Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.11

§ 48.11 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Pretrial Motion

One of the most effective means of preserving an issue for appeal is through an appropriate pretrial motion. A motion provides a clear written statement of the issue, and the ruling on it provides a concrete basis for urging judicial error. The following motions may provide a proper basis for claiming legal error:

- Motions to dismiss
- Motions for judgment on the pleadings
- Motions to strike
- Motions for summary judgment

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.12

§ 48.12 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Motion in Limine or Motion During Trial

Motions in limine and motions during trial, especially motions for mistrial or for judgment as a matter of law, provide a means of preserving issues for appeal. Such motions may be directed at virtually any important legal issue, including the admissibility of evidence. Like pretrial motions, they can generally be prepared in advance and presented in such a way as to minimize disruption of the trial, and to maximize clarity in the record. A motion in limine may suffice to preserve an issue for appellate review even if no contemporaneous objection is raised at trial. n1

Motions during trial are particularly effective when the issue concerns whether a plaintiff has proved all of the essential elements of a claim for relief. In the absence of a motion for a judgment as a matter of law (formerly, a motion for a directed verdict), for example, the court of appeals will be foreclosed from any challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersMotions in LimineCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. American Home Assurance Co. v. Sunshine Supermarket, Inc., 753 F.2d 321 (3d Cir. 1985) (noting split among the circuits regarding whether an objection at trial is also necessary to preserve the issue for appeal).

(n2)Footnote 2. Alston v. Bowins, 733 F.2d 161 (D.C. Cir. 1984) ; Yohannon v. Keene Corp., 924 F.2d 1255 (3d Cir. 1991) ; Jones v. Lewis, 957 F.2d 260 (6th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 841, 113 S. Ct. 125, 121 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1992) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.13

§ 48.13 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Evidentiary Objections During Trial

Objections during the course of trial are the traditional way to preserve issues for appeal. n1 Objections are most useful in raising evidentiary issues but may be an inefficient way to raise legal issues.

When an issue is raised by objection at trial, the party must state "the specific ground of objection, if the specific ground was not apparent from the context." n2 Except in extraordinary cases, in which "plain errors affecting substantial rights" are committed n3 the failure to properly object risks waiver of the objection on appeal. n4

Even though it is important to preserve the record, minimizing the number of objections made in the jury's presence, and clearly stating the basis for the objections is an equally important concern. One way to keep the jury from learning that an objection is being made is to request permission to approach the bench for a "sidebar" conference. Counsel and the judge can then discuss the matter out of the jury's hearing. An attorney requesting a sidebar conference should be sure that the court reporter transcribes the sidebar.

Whenever possible, the issue should be addressed in writing to the trial court, even if the writing is in a supplementary memorandum of law after the court has overruled the objection. A written argument will be more persuasive to the court than an off-hand, vague reference to undocumented precedent. Additionally, preparing post-trial motions and an appellate brief will be easier because much of the research will already have been completed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsRulings on Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Evid. 103(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.14

§ 48.14 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Offers of Proof During Trial

When evidence is excluded, absent plain error, appellate review ordinarily requires an "offer of proof" unless the substance of the evidence was "apparent from the context." n1 Although there are no specific requirements, and some circuits are more lenient than others, an offer of proof should be specific enough for the appellate court to determine the admissibility and importance of the excluded evidence. n2 The offer must be complete enough to show that it was error to reject the proof. n3

The best way to make an offer of proof is to specify what the evidence will be, and to state why and how it is critical to the case. Naturally, this must be done on the record so that the appellate court can consider it. n4 The offer is one of "proof," not conclusion, and therefore a mere statement as to the legal effect of a witness' testimony may be insufficient. The offer should state what the testimony itself would be. Indeed, the trial court may require the offer to be in question and answer form. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsObjections & Offers of ProofOffers of Proof

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Armour & Co. v. Nard, 463 F.2d 8, 12 (8th Cir. 1972) (refusing to consider exclusion of evidence when offer not specific and appellate court could not determine whether appellant was deprived of opportunity to prove point).

(n3)Footnote 3. Reese v. Mercury Marine Div. of Brunswick Corp., 793 F.2d 1416 , reh'g denied, 797 F.2d 977 (5th Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. United States v. Rayco, 616 F.2d 462 (10th Cir. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. Evid. 103(b).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

80 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.15

§ 48.15 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Objecting to Jury Instructions

Instructions given to the jury, and proposed instructions rejected by the trial court, provide fertile ground for appeal, provided the issues are properly reserved. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51 requires the trial court, before closing argument, to inform counsel of its proposed action on requested instructions. This enables the attorneys to conform their arguments to the charge the jury will hear, and to plan their closing arguments more effectively.

An erroneous charge to the jury, however, does not automatically constitute a viable appellate issue. As with other errors, it generally may not be raised on appeal unless the party specifically presented the issue to the trial court. Objections to proposed jury instructions must distinctly state the matter objected to, the grounds for the objection, and must be made "before the jury retires to consider its verdict." n1 Moreover, error may be assigned only if the proffered instruction is accurate in every respect. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 51.

(n2)Footnote 2. Ruggiero v. Krzeminski, 928 F.2d 558 (2d Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.16

§ 48.16 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Objecting to Proposed Findings

The trial court is required to make specific findings of fact "in an action tried on the facts without a jury or with an advisory jury." n1 A trial court's findings of fact will not be overturned unless they are "clearly erroneous"--i.e., they are unsupported by substantial evidence, or if they have some evidentiary support, the appellate court is left with "the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed." n2 Accordingly, in most non-jury cases, the facts on appeal will be those as found by the trial court; the content of those findings is therefore of critical importance to the appellate advocate.

Frequently, the trial court will ask the parties to prepare findings, and will hold a hearing before entering findings. If it does not, counsel may make their views known through a motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 52(b) to amend or to make additional findings. In a non-jury case, however, Rule 52(a) explicitly states that neither the failure to object to the findings nor the failure to seek amendment of them will waive the right to challenge "the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the findings." n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364, 395, 68 S. Ct. 525, 92 L. Ed. 746 (1948) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a)(5).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.17

§ 48.17 Preserving Issues for Appeal by Post-Trial Motion

Motions made after trial present another limited opportunity to raise issues in the trial court. Generally, the failure to raise an issue earlier will preclude it from being raised after trial. Nevertheless, post-trial motions are valuable, not only because they may persuade the trial court, but also because they help clarify the record for the appellate court. Moreover, some issues, such as a challenge to subject matter jurisdiction, may be raised at any time.

Finally, although a post-trial motion is generally unnecessary to preserve issues for appeal, there are some exceptions, such as a claim in a jury trial that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewSubstantial EvidenceSufficiency of Evidence

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See La Amiga del Pueblo, Inc. v. Robles, 937 F.2d 689 (1st Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
B. Appellate Strategy in the District Court

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.18 through 48.29

[Reserved]

§§ 48.18[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.30

§ 48.30 All Final Decisions Are Appealable as of Right

In civil cases, a party may take an appeal as of right to the circuit court of any final decision of the district court, except those that are appealable directly to the Supreme Court. n1

Accordingly, when considering a possible appeal, the first issue to be analyzed is whether the decision involved is "final" within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1291. The basic idea is that appellate review of a single controversy should be done at one time, and not in fragments. Thus, generally speaking, under Section 1291 a "final" decision is one which, by its own force, terminates the case on the merits as to all the parties and leaves nothing to be done except to enforce or implement it. n2 When an appeal is taken from such a final judgment, all the prior interlocutory rulings in the case may be considered by the appellate court at the same time.

A judgment is not "final" and appealable as of right under 28 U.S.C. § 1291 unless and until it is effective. Therefore, it must be determined whether the decision to be reviewed complies with the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 58 concerning separate document requirements for some types of judgments, and Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a) that judgments be entered by the clerk.

Moreover, a final appealable judgment loses its finality (at least temporarily) upon timely filing of any of the following post-trial motions:

- Motion for judgment as a matter of law pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)
- Motion to amend or add to the findings of fact pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(b)
- Motion for a new trial pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(b)
- Motion to alter or amend the judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(e)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

(n2)Footnote 2. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wetzel, 424 U.S. 737, 96 S. Ct. 1202, 47 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1976) ; Donovan v. Hayden, Stone, Inc., 434 F.2d 619 (6th Cir. 1970) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.31

§ 48.31 Types of Interlocutory Orders Appealable as of Right

Appeals as of right may be taken from some interlocutory orders, such as:

- An order granting, continuing, modifying, or refusing to grant an injunction n1
- Certain orders in receivership proceedings n2
- An interlocutory decree that determines a right and liability of the parties to an admiralty case n3
- Judgments in actions for patent infringement that are final except for an accounting n4

When an interlocutory order is not appealable as of right, it may nonetheless be immediately appealed if the party obtains permission of the circuit court. n5 To obtain permission, the party must have the district judge certify that the order involves a controlling question of law as to which there is a substantial ground for difference of opinion, and that an immediate appeal may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation. n6 The petition must be filed within the time specified by the statute or rule authorizing the appeal, or if no such time is specified, within the time provided by Rule 4(a) for filing a notice of appeal. n7

For complete discussion of appeals by permission from interlocutory orders not appealable as of right, see §§ 48.50 -48.53.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(c)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292.

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1292(b), (d)(1), (2).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. App. P. 5(a)(2); see Fed. R. App. P. 4(a) (typically providing 30-day period for filing notice of appeal); see also § 48.38[2].

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.32

§ 48.32 Considering Whether to Appeal from Appelable Interlocutory Order

Although the orders specified in 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a), like final judgments, are subject to appeal as a matter of right, the consequences of failing to exercise that right are very different. A failure to prosecute a timely appeal from a final judgment results in a permanent loss of the right to question the judgment (other than for some extraordinary reason). Failure to file a timely appeal from an appealable interlocutory order, however, does not preclude the aggrieved party from attacking the order during the course of appeal from a subsequent final judgment. n1 Moreover, if no appeal is taken from an interlocutory order, the district court retains full power to dissolve or modify the order even after the time for appeal has run. n2

It does not follow from this that there is a right to appeal twice from one of the interlocutory orders specified in Section 1292(a). If an immediate appeal is taken and is unsuccessful, the law of the case rule precludes a second bite at the apple on a later appeal from the final judgment. n3

Thus, the entry of an appealable interlocutory order may present a difficult tactical question. Of course, if the order is sufficiently onerous, an immediate appeal may be required as a practical necessity. However, there will be many cases in which such an appeal will not enable the aggrieved party to present its position to the appellate court in the most persuasive form. This may be true, for example, when the record is not yet fully developed, or when the ability to present the merits of the entire case (not just the propriety of the interlocutory order) will enhance the party's overall position. In these circumstances it may be preferable not to appeal immediately, but to seek relief from the district court itself by some form of motion for reconsideration or modification.

The aggrieved party should also take into account the fact that an appeal from an interlocutory order divests the district court of jurisdiction only as to the matter on appeal; the district court remains free to proceed with other aspects of the case. n4 Moreover, Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(c) expressly provides the district court with authority to "suspend, modify, restore or grant an injunction" while an appeal is pending to protect the rights of the adverse party. Thus, deciding whether to take an immediate appeal from an interlocutory order should include consideration of both the desirability of proceeding separately with other aspects of the case, and the likelihood that the district court will stay such proceedings pending appellate disposition of the portion on appeal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Drayer v. Krasner, 572 F.2d 348, 353 (2d Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 436 U.S. 948 (1978) .

(n2)Footnote 2. I.A.M. National Pension Fund Plan A v. Cooper Indus., Inc., 789 F.2d 21 (D.C. Cir. 1986) , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 971 (1986) ; Ideal Toy Corp. v. Sayco Doll Corp., 302 F.2d 623, 625 (2d Cir. 1962) ; Hendler v. United States, 952 F.2d 1364 (Fed. Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Terrell v. Household Goods Carriers' Bureau, 494 F.2d 16, 19 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n4)Footnote 4. United States v. City of Chicago, 534 F.2d 708, 711 (7th Cir. 1976) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

87 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.33

§ 48.33 Partial Final Judgment May Be Appealable as of Right

In cases involving multiple claims or multiple parties, a decision that leaves one or more claims unresolved, or that does not apply to all the parties, is not a final judgment in the ordinary sense, and no appeal will lie from it. However, such a decision may become a final judgment that is appealable as of right if the district court makes an express determination that there is no just reason for delay, and expressly directs that a final judgment be entered. n1

Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) applies only in cases involving multiple claims or parties when a decision affects less than all the claims or parties. The Rule is not intended to allow any wholesale avoidance of the final judgment rule, and a Rule 54(b) determination should not be routinely requested or granted. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b); Gray v. Beverly Enterprises-Mississippi, Inc., 390 F.3d 400, 403-404 (5th Cir. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Advanced Magnetics, Inc. v. Bayfront Partners, Inc., 106 F.3d 11, 16 (2d Cir. 1997) (in light of historic federal policy against piecemeal appeals, court's authority under Rule 54(b) to enter final judgment before entire case is concluded should be exercised "sparingly"); Page v. Gulf Oil Corp., 775 F.2d 1311 (5th Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.34

§ 48.34 The Cohen Doctrine: Appealable Collateral Orders

Although the right to appeal is expressly governed by rule and statute, there is one judicially created exception to the final judgment rule. This judicial exception is known as the "Cohen doctrine" because it arises out of the Supreme Court's decision in Cohen v. Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp. n1 The doctrine permits an appeal to be taken from an order that finally disposes of a significant claim of right that is not part of the merits of the claim alleged, but rather is separable or "collateral" to that claim. An order is not appealable under the Cohen doctrine unless it presents an important unsettled question, and unless deferring appellate review until a final judgment is entered may cause the right asserted to be irretrievably lost. n2

The following types of orders have been found to satisfy the criteria of the Cohen doctrine:

- Orders denying prejudgment security n3
- Orders vacating an attachment n4
- Orders denying immunity from suit to a state under the Eleventh Amendment, n5 or denying qualified immunity to a government official in an action based on an alleged violation of the plaintiff's constitutional rights n6
- Orders refusing to approve settlement of a class action n7

An order found properly appealable under the collateral order doctrine is considered to be a "final" decision under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and thus appealable as a matter of right. n8 A failure to file a timely notice of appeal from such an order should not, however, mean that it cannot be reviewed later in an appeal from a subsequent final judgment. n9 As a practical matter, this problem should never arise, because if the order satisfies Cohen, a later appeal is, by definition, too late to do any good.

Moreover, unlike appeals from other "final" decisions, an appeal based on the Cohen rule does not remove the entire case from the district court's jurisdiction. Rather, as with interlocutory or partial appeals, the district court may proceed with the remainder of the case while the appellate process goes on. Finally, although an appealable collateral order is considered "final," there is apparently no need to satisfy the technical requirements for entry of judgment before an appeal may be taken. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order DoctrineCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionFinal Judgment RuleCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 69 S. Ct. 1221, 93 L. Ed. 1528 (1949) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 712-714, 116 S. Ct. 1712, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1996) (district court's order remanding on grounds of Burford abstention was appealable as it put the litigants in the case " 'effectively out of court,' " and it conclusively determined an issue separate from the merits); Gulfstream Aerospace Corp. v. Mayacamas Corp., 485 U.S. 271, 108 S. Ct. 1133, 99 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1988) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cohen v. Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 69 S. Ct. 1221 (1949) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Swift & Co. Packers v. Compania Colombiana Del Caribe, S.A., 339 U.S. 684, 70 S. Ct. 861, 94 L. Ed. 1206 (1950) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Puerto Rico Aqueduct and Sewer Auth. v. Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., 506 U.S. 139, 113 S. Ct. 684, 121 L. Ed. 2d 605 (1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Behrens v. Pelletier, 516 U.S. 299, 312, 116 S. Ct. 834, 133 L. Ed. 2d 773 (1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Norman v. McKee, 431 F.2d 769 (9th Cir. 1970) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Coopers & Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 468, 471, 98 S. Ct. 2454, 57 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1978) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Drayer v. Krasner, 572 F.2d 348, 353 n.6 (2d Cir. 1978) , cert. denied, 436 U.S. 948 (1978) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Stevens v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank, 538 F.2d 1387 (9th Cir. 1976) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.35

§ 48.35 Appellate Review by Prerogative Writ

If the decision does not fit within one of the categories of appealable orders, it may still be appealable under the All Writs Act, which provides that, "The Supreme Court and all courts established by Act of Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law." n1

Although the statute says the courts (including the courts of appeals) "may issue all writs," it does not mean they will. To the contrary, if anything is clear it is that the power to issue extraordinary writs conferred by Section 1651 should be exercised only in truly exceptional situations when there is no other adequate remedy by appeal. n2 In other words, an extraordinary writ will not be granted if there is a right to appeal, or if the decision is either within the district court's discretion or is routine.

However, there are areas in which review by mandamus seems to be relatively well established. In these areas, while a court of appeals may not grant the writ, it will at least consider it. These areas include interlocutory, non-appealable district court orders transferring or refusing to transfer a case to another district, n3 and orders relating to disqualification of the district judge. n4

The procedure for filing a petition for an extraordinary writ is not complicated. In any case in which an appeal would be direct to the Supreme Court, the petition is filed in the Supreme Court under the procedures specified in Supreme Court Rule 20. In all other cases, the petition is filed in the court of appeals that has responsibility for the district court making the order, and the procedure is governed by Fed. R. App. P. 21.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesWritsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 28 U.S.C. § 1651.

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Remington Arms, Inc., 952 F.2d 1029 (8th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 84 S. Ct. 805, 11 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1964) .

(n4)Footnote 4. In re Cement Antitrust Litig., 688 F.2d 1297 (9th Cir. 1982) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.36

§ 48.36 Appellant Must Have Standing to Appeal as of Right

[1] Appellant Must Have Been a Party of Record at Time Order or Judgment Was Entered

To have standing to appeal as of right, the appellant must generally have been a party of record at the time the order or judgment appealed from was entered. n1

The appellant need not have necessarily been a party to the suit at the time the complaint was filed. An appeal as of right may also be taken by a party who entered the original suit by intervention, n2 or by substitution. n3 Additionally, a party who enters a case as a result of a third-party claim has standing to appeal an adverse judgment on either the third-party claim or the main claim. n4

On the other hand, a person who is a party to an action in an official capacity only, ceases to be a party on leaving office, and does not have standing to appeal an adverse judgment. Rather, the right to appeal passes to the successor in office. n5

A court may permit postjudgment intervention for the purposes of appeal if the court deems intervention necessary to protect the interests of a person whose rights were represented by others before the district court. n6

In certain other limited circumstances, persons who were never a party of record at the time of judgment may be deemed to have standing to appeal. For example, standing has been recognized for a nonparty against whom an injunction was issued, for purposes of appealing the jurisdiction of the court to enter the injunction. n7 Another example of a nonparty with standing to appeal is an attorney who is sanctioned pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 11. n8

[2] Appellant Must Be Aggrieved by Order or Judgment

The second requirement for standing to appeal as of right is that the appellant must be aggrieved by the order or judgment. n9 A party is not aggrieved by a decision if the party does not have a direct interest that is affected by the decision. n10

Although a party who has fully prevailed may not usually appeal a judgment on the ground that the court has made an adverse finding, standing to appeal may be recognized if the finding could form the basis for collateral estoppel in later litigation. n11 However, this rarely occurs because a finding may form the basis for collateral estoppel only if it is necessary to the judgment, and a finding adverse to an otherwise fully prevailing party will rarely be necessary to the judgment. n12

Conversely, a party may lose its status as an aggrieved party, and therefore the right to appeal, by estoppel or waiver. For example, a party may not ordinarily appeal if the party has agreed to a settlement or consented to the entry of a judgment. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. SEC v. Wozniak, 33 F.3d 13, 14 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Alcan Aluminum, Inc., 25 F.3d 1174, 1185 (3d Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See United States v. LTV Corp., 746 F.2d 51, 53 (D.C. Cir. 1984) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Kicklighter v. Nails by Jannee, Inc., 616 F.2d 734, 739 n.1 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Karcher v. May, 484 U.S. 72, 79-81, 108 S. Ct. 388, 98 L. Ed. 2d 327 (1987) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United Airlines, Inc. v. McDonald, 432 U.S. 385, 394-395, 97 S. Ct. 2464, 53 L. Ed. 2d 423 (1977) (permitting intervention by member of putative class, in action brought as class action but later decertified after final judgment, for purpose of appealing decertification order); Heckethorn v. Sunan Corp., 992 F.2d 240, 241 (9th Cir. 1993) (plaintiff's former attorney could appeal district court order conditioning plaintiff's voluntary dismissal on former counsel's payment of attorney's fees to defendant).

(n7)Footnote 7. Commercial Sec. Bank v. Walker Bank & Trust Co., 456 F.2d 1352, 1354 (10th Cir. 1972) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Alla Med. Serv., Inc., 855 F.2d 1470, 1472 (9th Cir. 1988) (sanction orders issued solely against nonparty attorneys are immediately appealable).

(n9)Footnote 9. United States v. Good Samaritan Church, 29 F.3d 487, 488 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Armotek Indus. v. Employers Ins., 952 F.2d 756, 759 n.3 (3d Cir. 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Grinnell Mut. Reinsurance Co. v. Reinke, 43 F.3d 1152, 1154 (7th Cir. 1995) (victims of automobile accident did not have standing to appeal declaratory judgment holding that insurer does not have duty to defend alleged tortfeasor, because victims' contingent expectancy in cash value of duty to defend was not legal interest adversely affected by judgment).

(n11)Footnote 11. In re DES Litig., 7 F.3d 20, 23 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n12)Footnote 12. In re DES Litig., 7 F.3d 20, 24 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Justice v. CSX Transp., Inc., 908 F.2d 119, 125 (7th Cir. 1990) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.37

§ 48.37 Joinder and Consolidation of Appeals

When two or more parties are entitled to appeal from a district court judgment or order, and their interests make joinder practicable, they may proceed on appeal as a single appellant. n1 The parties may either file a joint notice of appeal, n2 or they may join after timely filing separate notices of appeal. n3 However, a party who has not timely filed a notice of appeal may not become an appellant by joining the appeal of a party who has timely filed a notice. n4

Fed. R. App. P. 3 does not provide any formal procedure for effecting joinder. However, if more than one party files a joint notice of appeal, they must ensure that they name the multiple appellants with specificity. The rule directs that the attorneys name each party in the caption or body of the notice, of if an attorney is representing more than one party, the attorney may describe those parties with such terms as "all plaintiffs," "the defendants," "the plaintiffs A, B, et al.," or "all defendants except X." n5 An attorney who files a notice of appeal representing more than one party must also name each party in the statement that must be filed with the circuit court clerk within 14 days after filing the notice of appeal. n6

After two or more parties effectively join in an appeal, either by filing a joint notice of appeal or by joining in appeal after timely filing separate notices of appeal, they may then proceed on appeal as a single appellant. n7 Thus, they may jointly perform any acts that the rules require of a single appellant. As examples, they may serve a single designation of parts of the transcript to be included in the record on appeal, and if necessary, a single statement of the issues to be presented on the appeal; n8 they may jointly seek an extension of time for transmitting the record and docketing the appeal; n9 and they may join in a single application for intermediate relief pending the appeal. n10 Once in the circuit court, they may file a joint brief and appendix, and they may offer a single argument. In fact, the court may require the parties who join in an appeal to seek leave of the circuit court if they wish to argue separately. n11

Consolidated appeals are different from joint appeals because in consolidated appeals the separate appeals do not merge into one, and the parties do not proceed as a single appellant. Furthermore, a court order is required for consolidation even if the parties stipulate to consolidation. n12

The court of appeals has discretion to consolidate appeals if it concludes that consolidation will serve the interests of justice. The court must, however, have jurisdiction over each matter to be consolidated. In most cases, the goal of promoting judicial efficiency and economy is served by placing all related issues before the circuit court at one time. n13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 3(b)(1); see United States v. Suarez, 880 F.2d 626, 629 (2d Cir. 1989) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 3(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Cook & Sons Equip., Inc. v. Killen, 277 F.2d 607, 609 (9th Cir. 1960) ; see Browning v. Navarro, 894 F.2d 99, 100 (5th Cir. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. App. P. 12(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(b)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. App. P. 10(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. App. P. 11(a), 12(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. App. P. 11(g).

(n11)Footnote 11. Cf. Fed. R. App. P. 34(b) allots a fixed time for argument to each side, and parties who join in an appeal constitute a single side.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(b)(2) advisory committee note (1998).

(n13)Footnote 13. Weaver v. University of Cincinnati, 970 F.2d 1523, 1528-1529 (6th Cir. 1992) , cert. denied, 507 U.S. 917 (1993) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.38

§ 48.38 Drafting, Filing, and Serving the Notice of Appeal

[1] Appeals in Which Notice of Appeal Must be Filed

The following appeals are taken by filing a notice of appeal in the district court: n1

- Appeals from final judgments
- Appeals from collateral orders appealable under the Cohen doctrine
- Appeals from the types of interlocutory orders appealable as of right pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)
- Appeals from partial judgments certified as final pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b)

[2] Deadline for Appealing as of Right

[2.--1] General Rule: Notice of Appeal Must Be Filed Within 30 Days After Entry of Judgment or Order

In a civil case, a notice of appeal generally must be filed with the district court clerk within 30 days after entry of the judgment or order from which the appeal is taken. n2 Although Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d) requires district court clerks to give all parties immediate notice of entry of judgments and orders, parties should not rely on receiving such notice. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d), the time to appeal runs from the date of entry, even if notice from the clerk is not received. The Rule specifically states that: Lack of notice of the entry does not affect the time for appeal or relieve -- or authorize the court to relieve -- a party for failing to appeal within the time allowed, except as allowed by Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure (4)(a). n3

[2.--2] United States as Party; 60 Day Deadline

If the United States or its officer or agency is a party, a notice of appeal must be filed with the district court clerk within 60 days after entry of the order or judgment from which the appeal is taken. n4 The 60-day appeal period applies even if the United States or one of its officers or agencies is not a party to the appeal. n5 Thus, any party to an action in which the United States is a party may avail itself of the 60-day appeal period. n6

[2.--3] Certain Motions Filed in District Court May Extend Appeal Deadline

If any party timely files one of the following six motions with the district court, the 30-day deadline to file a notice of appeal begins to run for all parties from the date of entry of the order disposing of the last such remaining motion: n7

1. Motion for judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b)

2. Motion to amend or make additional factual findings pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(b), irrespective of whether granting the motion would alter the judgment

3. Motion for attorney's fees pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 54, provided the district court extends the time to appeal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 58

4. Motion to alter or amend the judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59

5. Motion for a new trial pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59

6. Motion for relief pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 60, if the motion is filed no later than 28 days after the judgment is entered

If a party files a notice of appeal after the court announces or enters judgment, but before it disposes of any of the six motions listed above, the notice becomes effective to appeal the judgment or order when the order disposing of the last such remaining motion is entered. n8

[2.--4] Extension of Time for Good Cause or Excusable Neglect

The district court may extend the time to file a notice of appeal if a party files a motion for an extension no later than 30 days after the time prescribed by Fed. R. App. P. 4(a) expires, and demonstrates excusable neglect or good cause. n9 If the motion is filed before the expiration of the time for taking an appeal prescribed in Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1) or (3), the motion may be made ex parte unless the court requires otherwise. n10

A determination of "excusable" neglect is an equitable one, taking account of all relevant circumstances surrounding the party's omission. These include the danger of prejudice to the nonmovant, the length of the delay and its potential impact on judicial proceedings, the reason for the delay, including whether it was within the reasonable control of the movant, and whether the movant acted in good faith. The proper focus is whether the neglect of both the party and their counsel was excusable. n11

The "good cause" standard is more lenient than the "excusable neglect" standard, and is left to the discretion of the district court. n12

An extension of time within which to appeal may not exceed 30 days from the original deadline, or 14 days from the date when the order granting the motion is entered, whichever is later. n13

[2.--5] Extension of Time on Grounds of Lack of Notice

The appellate rules provide a method for a party to reopen the time for appeal if the party did not receive timely notice of the entry of the court's decision. Specifically, the district court may reopen the time to file an appeal for a period of 14 days from the date of entry of the order to reopen, provided all of the following conditions are satisfied:

- The party files the motion within 180 days after the judgment or order is entered, or within 14 days after the moving party receives notice of the entry, whichever is earlier n14

- The court finds that the moving party was entitled to notice of the entry of the judgment or order from which the appeal is taken, but did not receive the notice from the district court or any party within 21 days after entry n15

- The court finds that no party would be prejudiced n16

[2.--6] Deadline for Filing Cross-Appeal

If one party timely files a notice of appeal, any other party may file a notice of appeal within 14 days after the date when the first notice was filed, or within the time otherwise prescribed by Fed. R. App. P. 4(a), whichever period ends later. n17

The purpose of this provision, which allows additional time for an appeal that is taken after an initial appeal, is simply to permit each party to a judgment to decide on the advisability of an appeal with full knowledge of the intentions of all other parties with respect to an appeal. n18

[2.--7] Checklist: Timeline for Appeal from Final Judgment

Preparing an appeals timetable at the outset will save time in the long run, and may avoid a costly oversight. A sample checklist for an appeal from a final judgment in a civil case might be:

Deadline	To Do	Where	Authority
30 days from entry of judgment	File Notice of Appeal	District Court	Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)
	Pay fees for appeal	District Court	Fed. R. App. P. 3(e); 28 U.S.C. §§ 1913, 1917
	Obtain stay of enforcement of judgment (supersedeas bond)	District Court	Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(d); Fed. R. App. P. 8
	File bond for costs on appeal, if required	District Court	Fed. R. App. P. 7
No later than 14 days after filing notice of appeal	Order Reporter's Transcript	From reporter in writing	Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)
	File copy of order for Reporter's Transcript	District Court	Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)

[3] Notice of Appeal Must Specify Parties Taking the Appeal

A notice of appeal must specify the party or parties taking the appeal. n19 However, the court may not dismiss an appeal for failure to name a party whose intent to appeal is otherwise clear from the notice. n20 In a class action, irrespective of whether the class has been certified, the notice of appeal is sufficient if it names one person qualified to bring the appeal as representative of the class. n21

To prevent the loss of a right to appeal through inadvertent omission of a party's name, and based on the liberal construction of the appellate rules, an attorney representing more than one party has the flexibility to indicate which parties are appealing without naming them individually. The test established by the rule for determining whether such designations are sufficient is whether it is objectively clear that a party intended to appeal. n22

Although the requirements of Fed. R. App. 3 are construed liberally, a complete failure to identify the party taking the appeal deprives the appellate court of jurisdiction. n23

The party taking an appeal is not required in the notice of appeal to set forth the names of the appellees. n24

[4] Notice of Appeal Must Designate Order From Which Appeal Is Taken

The notice of appeal must contain a designation of the judgment, order, or part of the judgment or order, that is being appealed. n25 This requirement is particularly important in a case in which the appellant wishes to appeal only one part of the judgment or order, because it informs the appellate court of the issues that will be presented in the appeal. n26 The appeal will not be dismissed for mere technicalities if the intent to appeal from a specific ruling can be fairly inferred, and the opposing party is not prejudiced. n27

[5] Notice of Appeal Must Name Court to Which Appeal is Taken

The notice of appeal must name the court to which the appeal is taken. n28 Failure to comply strictly with this requirement will not preclude consideration of the appeal provided the intention to appeal to a particular court may be inferred from the notice, and the defect has not prejudiced the appellee. n29

If an appeal is improperly noticed to a court that lacks jurisdiction, that court may nevertheless transfer the appeal to the proper court, provided the notice would have been timely if filed in the proper court. n30

[6] Sample Form Notice of Appeal Included in Appendix of Forms to Appellate Rules

The simplest way to ensure that all the requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 3 are met is to utilize the form Notice of Appeal provided in the Appendix of Forms to the appellate rules. n31

[7] Filing the Notice of Appeal; Payment of Fees

The appellant must initiate all appeals taken as of right by timely filing a notice of appeal with the district court clerk. n32 If the appellant mistakenly files a timely notice in the circuit court rather than the district court, the notice will be treated as if it had been properly filed in the district court. n33

There are several steps required to complete the process of initiating an appeal by filing. However, an appellant's failure to take any step other than the timely filing of a notice of appeal does not affect the validity of the appeal but is grounds only for the court of appeals to act as it considers appropriate, including dismissing the appeal. n34 Furthermore, the court may impose sanctions short of dismissal. For example, the court may impose costs on the party n35 or directly on counsel. n36

At the time of filing a notice of appeal, the appellant must furnish the clerk with sufficient copies of the notice of appeal to enable the clerk to comply promptly with the service requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 3(d). n37 Specifically, appellant's counsel must furnish enough copies for the district court clerk to serve counsel of record for all parties other than the appellant, to send a copy to the circuit court clerk, and in an appeal by a defendant in a criminal case, to serve the defendant. While a failure to furnish the clerk with a sufficient number of copies at the time of filing does not affect the validity of the appeal, it could subject the appellant to dismissal if the copies are not eventually supplied. Therefore, the prudent course is to supply the clerk with all necessary copies at the time of filing. n38

When an appellant files a notice of appeal, the appellant must pay the district court clerk all required fees. n39

[8] Appellant Is Not Required to Serve Notice of Appeal on Other Parties

The appellant is not required to serve the notice of appeal on the other parties to the action. n40 Rather, the appellant is required to furnish the district court clerk with sufficient copies of the notice of appeal to enable the clerk to serve it in the manner specified in Fed. R. App. P. 3(d). n41 The precise number of copies required will vary, depending on the number of parties, and whether they are represented by separate counsel. n42

The district court clerk must serve notice of the filing of a notice of appeal by mailing a copy to each party's counsel of record (excluding the appellant's), or if a party is proceeding pro se, to the party's last known address. The clerk must also promptly send a copy of the notice of appeal and of all current and future docket entries to the clerk of the court of appeals named in the notice. The district court clerk must note on each copy the date when the notice of appeal was filed. n43 The clerk must note on the docket the names of the parties to whom the clerk mails copies, with the date of mailing. n44

The clerk's failure to serve a notice of appeal does not affect the validity of the appeal. n45 However, if an appellee has not received notice of the appeal, but would be affected by the appeal, the circuit court should not determine the appeal before the appellee is given actual notice. n46 On the other hand, an appeal may proceed if the court of appeals determines that the appellee received actual notice from a source other than the clerk. n47

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for Review

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 3(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)(B).

(n5)Footnote 5. Montelongo v. Meese, 777 F.2d 1097, 1098 (5th Cir. 1985) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)(B) (notice of appeal may be filed by any party within 60 days).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(B)(i).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(5)(A).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(5)(B).

(n11)Footnote 11. Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 507 U.S. 380, 395-397, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1993) ; Reynolds v. Wagner, 55 F.3d 1426, 1428-1429 (9th Cir. 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 932 (1995) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Parke-Chapley Constr. Co. v. Cherrington, 865 F.2d 907, 909-910 n.5 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(5)(C).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6)(B); see Zimmer St. Louis v. Zimmer Co., 32 F.3d 357, 360-361 (8th Cir. 1994) if appellant did not receive notice of the entry of judgment, the motion to extend the time for appeal must be made within 180 days after the entry of judgment).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6)(A).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6)(C).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(3); In re Julien Co., 146 F.3d 420, 423 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Kurdziel v. Pittsburgh Tube Co., 416 F.2d 882, 885 (6th Cir. 1969) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(1)(A).

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(4).

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(3).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(1), (4) advisory committee note (1993); see also In re Continental Airlines, 125 F.3d 120, 128-129 (3d Cir. 1997) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Billino v. Citibank, N.A., 123 F.3d 723, 725-726 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Thomas v. Gunter, 32 F.3d 1258, 1262 (8th Cir. 1994) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(1)(B).

(n26)Footnote 26. Bach v. Coughlin, 508 F.2d 303, 307 (7th Cir. 1974) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Torres v. Oakland Scavenger Co., 487 U.S. 312, 316, 108 S. Ct. 2405, 101 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1988) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(1)(C).

(n29)Footnote 29. Donovan v. Richland County Ass'n for Retarded Citizens, 454 U.S. 389, 389-390, 102 S. Ct. 713, 70 L. Ed. 2d 570 (1982) (circuit court lacked jurisdiction because appellee was prejudiced by failure to properly designate court).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 28 U.S.C. § 1631.

(n31)Footnote 31. Fed. R. App. P. 3(c)(5).

(n32)Footnote 32. Fed. R. App. P. 3(a)(1).

(n33)Footnote 33. Fed. R. App. P. 4(d).

(n34)Footnote 34. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(2).

(n35)Footnote 35. Oliver v. Michigan State Bd. of Educ., 519 F.2d 619, 622 (6th Cir. 1975) (costs assessed for unnecessary printing of 3311 pages in appendix).

(n36)Footnote 36. Blount v. State Bank & Trust Co., 425 F.2d 266, 266 (4th Cir. 1970) (costs taxed against appellant's attorney for unnecessary expenses incurred because appellant failed to comply with rules).

(n37)Footnote 37. Fed. R. App. P. 3(a)(1).

(n38)Footnote 38. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(a)(2).

(n39)Footnote 39. Fed. R. App. P. 3(e).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(d)(1) (clerk required to serve notice).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(a)(1).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Fed. R. App. P. 3(d)(1).

(n43)Footnote 43. Fed. R. App. P. 3(d)(1).

(n44)Footnote 44. Fed. R. App. P. 3(d)(3).

(n45)Footnote 45. Fed. R. App. P. 3(d)(3).

(n46)Footnote 46. Pike v. Ruby Foo's Den, Inc., 232 F.2d 683, 684 (D.C. Cir. 1956) ; Beecher v. Leavenworth State Bank, 184 F.2d 498, 501 (9th Cir. 1950) .

(n47)Footnote 47. Caspar v. Devine, 257 F.2d 197, 198 (D.C. Cir. 1958) (although notice of appeal was not served on appellee, appellant's brief and motion to expand time to docket record were mailed to appellee).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
C. Orders Appealable as of Right; Notice of Appeal Requirements

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.39 through 48.49

[Reserved]

§§ 48.39[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
D. Appeal by Permission from Interlocutory Orders Not Appealable as of Right

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.50

§ 48.50 Petition for Permission to Appeal Must Be Filed With Circuit Court

Certain orders may be appealed as a matter of right even though they are plainly interlocutory. The principal source of this jurisdiction is 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a). That statute gives the courts of appeals jurisdiction over appeals from interlocutory orders relating to injunctions, receiverships, or the determination of rights and liabilities of parties to admiralty cases. n1

If an appeal is within the discretion of the court of appeals, a party seeking to appeal must file a petition for permission to appeal. The petition must be filed with the circuit court clerk, together with proof of service on all other parties to the district court action. n2 The appellant must file an original petition together with three copies, unless the court requires a different number by local rule or by order in the particular case. n3

The petition must be filed within the time specified by the statute or rule authorizing the appeal, or if no such time is specified, within the time provided by Rule 4(a) for filing a notice of appeal. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityPreservation for ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 5(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 5(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 5(a)(2); see Fed. R. App. P. 4(a) (typically providing 30-day period for filing notice of appeal); see also § 48.38[2].

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
D. Appeal by Permission from Interlocutory Orders Not Appealable as of Right

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.51

§ 48.51 Contents of Petition for Permission to File Appeal

The petition for permission to file an appeal must include all of the following elements:

- The facts necessary to understand the question presented n1
- The question itself n2
- The relief sought n3
- The reasons why the appeal should be allowed and is authorized by a statute or rule n4
- A copy of the order, decree, or judgment complained of and any related opinion or memorandum, and any order stating the district court's permission to appeal or finding that the necessary conditions are met n5

In addition to the five required items specified above, counsel should consider including in the petition a statement of any exceptional circumstances because some circuits have held that appeals of interlocutory orders should be granted only in exceptional circumstances in which an immediate appeal would avoid protracted and expensive litigation. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory OrdersCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(1)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(1)(C).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(1)(D).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(1)(E).

(n6)Footnote 6. See United States Rubber Co. v. Wright, 359 F.2d 784, 785 (9th Cir. 1966) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
D. Appeal by Permission from Interlocutory Orders Not Appealable as of Right

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.52

§ 48.52 Response to Petition for Permission to File Appeal

A party may file a response or cross-petition to a petition for permission to file an appeal. The response or cross-petition must be filed within 10 days after the petition is served, n1 together with proof of service on all other parties to the district court action. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 5(b)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 25(d).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
D. Appeal by Permission from Interlocutory Orders Not Appealable as of Right

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.53

§ 48.53 Circuit Court May Require Bond to Cover Costs of Appeal

If the circuit court grants the petition for permission to appeal, the moving party must do the following within 14 days of entry of the order granting the petition:

- Pay the required fees to the district court clerk n1
- File a bond for any costs required pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 7. n2

The district court has considerable discretion in determining the amount and nature of the bond for costs on appeal. n3 The amount of the bond imposed may be in any amount necessary to cover the costs of defending the appeal. n4

The court should generally not consider attorney's fees in determining the amount of a bond. n5 However, a district court may make a bond larger in cases in which the applicable substantive law makes an attorney's fee recoverable as part of the costs of suit. For example, the Copyright Act allows attorney's fees to be levied "as part of the costs." n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsCosts & Attorney FeesCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed R. App. P. 5(d)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed R. App. P. 5(d)(1)(B); see Fed R. App. P. 7.

(n3)Footnote 3. Sckolnick v. Harlow, 820 F.2d 13, 15 (1st Cir. 1987) ; Terry Inv. Co. v. United Funding & Investors Inc., 800 F. Supp. 879, 882 (E.D. Cal. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. In re American President Lines, Inc., 779 F.2d 714, 716 (D.C. Cir. 1985) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Terry Inv. Co. v. United Funding & Investors Inc., 800 F. Supp. 879, 882 (E.D. Cal. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 17 U.S.C. § 505.

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
D. Appeal by Permission from Interlocutory Orders Not Appealable as of Right

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.54 through 48.59

[Reserved]

§§ 48.54[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
E. Seeking a Stay or Injunction Pending Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.60

§ 48.60 Enforcement of Non-Exempt Judgments Automatically Stayed 14 Days Following Entry

Generally, a judgment is automatically stayed for 14 days following entry. n1 The automatic 14-day stay gives the losing party time to determine what steps, if any, are available to attack the judgment.

The following types of judgments are exempt from the 14-day automatic stay provision, and are subject to immediate enforcement: n2

- An interlocutory or final judgment in an action seeking injunctive relief
- An interlocutory or final judgment in a receivership action
- A judgment or order directing an accounting in an action for patent infringement

A stay of enforcement pending appeal from these types of judgments is discretionary with the district court. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays Pending AppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Beaver Cloth Cutting Machs., Inc. v. H. Maimin Co., 37 F.R.D. 47 (S.D.N.Y. 1964) , rev'd on other grounds, 343 F.2d 442 (2d Cir. 1965) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
E. Seeking a Stay or Injunction Pending Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.61

§ 48.61 Obtaining Stay of Enforcement of Non-Exempt Judgment Pending Appeal by Posting Bond

Ordinarily, a stay pending appeal may be obtained as of right by posting a supersedeas bond in an amount adequate to protect the interests of the appellee. n1

The following types of judgments are not automatically stayed by posting a supersedeas bond: n2

- An interlocutory or final judgment in an action seeking injunctive relief
- An interlocutory or final judgment in a receivership action
- A judgment or order directing an accounting in an action for patent infringement

Instead, if any appeal is taken from an interlocutory or final judgment granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction pending appeal on such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party. n3 If the motion in the district court is unsuccessful, a motion may be made to the court of appeals or to one of its judges. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays Pending AppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays Pending AppealsSupersedeas BondsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. 8(a)(2).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
E. Seeking a Stay or Injunction Pending Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.62 through 48.69

[Reserved]

§§ 48.62[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
F. The Record on Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.70

§ 48.70 Record on Appeal is Official Compilation of Proceedings as Presented to District Court

The record on appeal is the official compilation of the documents, evidence, and transcript of proceedings as they were presented to the district court. n1 The record on appeal does not include all district court material. Rather, it includes only the material which is needed for review of the issues to be presented on appeal. n2 The record on appeal consists of the original papers and exhibits filed in the district court, the transcript of proceedings, and a certified copy of the district court's docket entries. n3

The record on appeal as it is presented to the circuit court determines and limits the issues that may be addressed on appeal. Because the function of the circuit court is to review district court decisions, the record is limited to the material that was presented to the district court, with limited exceptions. n4 Failure to include portions of the record that are necessary to review any particular issue raised on appeal may result in the circuit court's refusing to address that issue, n5 or even dismissing the appeal. n6

A record is required for interlocutory appeals, as well as appeals in wherein a final judgment has been entered. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Controlled Demolition v. F. A. Wilhelm Constr. Co., 84 F.3d 263, 269 (7th Cir. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 10(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. McClendon v. Indiana Sugars, Inc., 108 F.3d 789, 795 (7th Cir. 1997) (evidence not admitted in district court is not part of record and may not be included in appellate brief); Dakota Indus., Inc. v. Dakota Sportswear Inc., 988 F.2d 61, 63-64 (8th Cir. 1993) (generally, appellate court may consider only record made before district court).

(n5)Footnote 5. Carter v. Jacobsen, 748 F.2d 487, 488-89 (8th Cir. 1984) (when trial transcript was not included in record, claim that district court erred in admitting certain evidence could not be reviewed).

(n6)Footnote 6. LaFollette v. Savage, 63 F.3d 540, 546 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. In re All Maine Asbestos Litig. (PNS Cases), 772 F.2d 1023, 1026 n.5 (1st Cir. 1985) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
F. The Record on Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.71

§ 48.71 Items That Must be Included in Record on Appeal

[1] Record on Appeal Must Include Original Papers and Exhibits

The record on appeal must include the original papers and exhibits filed in the district court. n1

The following nonexhaustive list includes examples of documents that are classified as original papers:

- Material pleadings n2
- Process and proof of service n3
- Pretrial orders n4
- Court memoranda n5
- Affidavits n6

While the definition of original papers includes documentary evidence, a document does not become part of the record merely because it was filed with the district court. Rather, the document must have been offered into evidence. n7

The record on appeal also must include exhibits filed in the district court. n8 This includes all documentary and physical exhibits filed and offered into evidence, irrespective of whether they were ultimately admitted into evidence. n9 An exhibit offered into evidence, but excluded by the court, is a necessary part of the record if the circuit court will be called on to rule regarding its admissibility. n10

[2] Record on Appeal Must Include Transcript of Proceedings

The transcript, if any, of the district court proceedings must be included in the record on appeal. n11

Within 14 days after the notice of appeal if filed, or an order is entered disposing of the last timely remaining motion of a type specified in Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(4)(A), whichever is later, the appellant must either order a transcript, n12 or file a certificate stating that no transcript will be ordered. n13

Unless the entire transcript is ordered, the appellant must within the 14 days provided in Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(1) file a statement of the issues that the appellant intends to present on the appeal, and must serve on the appellee copies of both the order of transcript (or certificate that it will not be ordered), and the statement of issues. n14 If the entire transcript is not ordered, and the appellee considers it necessary to have a transcript of other parts of the proceedings, the appellee must, within 14 days after the service of the order or certificate and the statement of the issues, file and serve on the appellant a designation of additional parts to be ordered. n15

At the time of ordering a transcript, the ordering party must make satisfactory arrangements with the reporter for paying the cost of the transcript. n16 By statute, the reporter may require any party requesting a transcript to prepay the estimated fee. n17

[3] Statement of Evidence When Transcript Unavailable

If the transcript of a hearing or trial is unavailable, the appellant may prepare a statement of the evidence or proceedings from the best available means, including the appellant's recollection. The statement must be served on the appellee, who may serve objections or proposed amendments within 14 days after being served. The statement and any objections or proposed amendments must then be submitted to the district court for settlement and approval. As settled and approved, the statement must be included by the district court clerk in the record on appeal. n18

The term "unavailable" is not defined in the rule but includes the failure to record portions of a trial, n19 and inadvertent destruction of reporter's notes before transcription. n20

[4] Record on Appeal Must Include Certified Copy of Docket Entries

The final part of the record on appeal is a certified copy of the docket entries prepared by the district court clerk. n21 Docket entries include, in chronological order, brief descriptions of the following: n22

- All documents filed with the clerk
- Oral and written orders made by the district court
- Processes issued and returned
- Appearances
- Verdicts and judgments rendered

The basic purpose behind the rule is to establish those entries that were actually docketed by the district court clerk, and to prevent parties from attempting to argue that entries were included in the docket when such entries were not docketed by the clerk. n23

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealEvidenceDocumentary EvidenceWritingsTranscripts & TranslationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Gilbertson, 111 F.2d 978 (7th Cir. 1940) .

(n3)Footnote 3. United States v. International Business Mach. Corp., 67 F.R.D. 618, 619 (S.D. N.Y. 1975) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Kori Corp. v. Wilco Marsh Buggies and Draglines, Inc., 761 F.2d 649, 653 (Fed. Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 902 (1985) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Brown v. United States, 277 F.2d 201, 202 (8th Cir. 1960) .

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. Sclafani, 487 F.2d 245, 253 n.7 (2d Cir. 1973) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1023 (1974) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fleming v. Gulf Oil Corp., 547 F.2d 908, 911 (10th Cir. 1977) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. United States v. Burke, 781 F.2d 1234, 1242 (7th Cir. 1985) (excluded transcripts of taped conversations marked as exhibits allowed as part of record).

(n10)Footnote 10. Texas & Pacific Ry. v. Buckles, 232 F.2d 257, 261 (5th Cir. 1956) , cert. denied, 351 U.S. 984 (1956) (hospital record offered in evidence but not brought forward in record on appeal was not reviewable by court).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(1)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(1)(B).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(3)(A).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(3)(B).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. App. P. 10(b)(4).

(n17)Footnote 17. 28 U.S.C. § 753(f).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. App. P. 10(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. Cameo Convalescent Ctr., Inc. v. Senn, 738 F.2d 836, 842 (7th Cir. 1984) , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1106 (1985) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Murphy v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 314 F.2d 30, 31 (5th Cir. 1963) , cert. denied, 375 U.S. 906 (1963) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(3).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 79(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. Waldorf v. Shuta, 142 F.3d 601, 620 (3rd Cir. 1998) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

104 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
F. The Record on Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.72

§ 48.72 Agreed Statement in Lieu of Record on Appeal

In place of the record on appeal, the parties may prepare, sign, and submit to the district court a statement of the case showing how the issues presented by the appeal arose and were decided in the district court. The statement must set forth only those facts averred and proved, or sought to be proved, that are essential to the court's resolution of the issues. If the statement is truthful, the statement (and any additions that the district court may consider necessary to a full presentation of the issues on appeal) must be approved by the district court, and must then be certified to the court of appeals as the record on appeal. A copy of the agreed statement may be filed in place of the appendix required by Fed. R. App. P. 30. n1

The purpose of the agreed statement is to provide an inexpensive method of bringing the record before the circuit court in cases where the only questions presented depend on facts or evidence that is not in dispute. n2 An agreed statement may make unnecessary an expensive transcription.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 10(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ocasio v. Bryan, 374 F.2d 11, 14 (3d Cir. 1967) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
F. The Record on Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.73

§ 48.73 Correction or Modification of Record on Appeal

If any difference arises about whether the record truly discloses what occurred in the district court, the difference must be submitted to and settled by the district court, and the record conformed accordingly. n1 The district court's disposition of the dispute is conclusive, unless a party can establish that the district court misrepresented the contents of the record. n2

If anything material to either party is omitted from or misstated in the record by error or accident, the omission or misstatement may be corrected, and a supplemental record may be certified and forwarded in any one of the following ways: n3

- By stipulation of the parties
- By the district court before or after the record has been forwarded
- By the court of appeals

All other questions as to the form an content of the record must be presented to the court of appeals. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 10(e)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. United States v. Mori, 444 F.2d 240, 246 (5th Cir. 1971) , cert. denied, 404 U.S. 913 (1971) (determination of trial judge in correcting record is conclusive absent showing of intentional misrepresentation of contents of record).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 10(e)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 10(e)(3).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
F. The Record on Appeal

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.74 through 48.79

[Reserved]

§§ 48.74[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.80

§ 48.80 Rules Governing Procedure for Review or Enforcement of Administrative Order

Fed. R. App. P. 15-20 govern the procedure for the review or enforcement by a circuit court of an order of an agency, board, commission, or officer. n1 All other provisions of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure apply to the review or enforcement of an administrative order by a court of appeals, except for the following rules: n2

- Fed. R. App. P. 3-14, which govern appeals from judgments or orders of the district court, and appeals from decisions of the Tax Court
- Fed. R. App. P. 22-23, which govern habeas corpus proceedings

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 15.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 14.

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.81

§ 48.81 Nature of Proceedings for Review or Enforcement of Administrative Order

There are two general types of proceedings governed by Fed. R. App. P. 15-20: a petition for review of an agency order, and an application for enforcement of an agency order. n1

Fed. R. App. P. 15 does not in itself give the circuit court jurisdiction to review or enforce an agency decision. n2 Jurisdiction is established for review and enforcement of administrative proceedings by the particular statute that governs the powers of each individual agency. n3 Furthermore, the Judicial Review Act grants to the circuit court exclusive jurisdiction to enjoin, set aside, suspend, or determine the validity of final orders of several agencies, including the Federal Communications Commission, Federal Maritime Commission or Maritime Administration, Atomic Energy Commission, and the Interstate Commerce Commission. n4 In the absence of a statutory provision granting jurisdiction to the circuit courts to review administrative proceedings, district courts have jurisdiction to review agency decisions. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 15.

(n2)Footnote 2. Office of Governor v. Department of Health & Human Servs., 997 F.2d 1290, 1292 (9th Cir. 1993) (Fed. R. App. P. 15 merely prescribes procedure for review of agency action by court of appeals authorized by statute to make review).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 160(e), (f) (giving jurisdiction to circuit courts to enforce or review orders of National Labor Relations Board).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 28 U.S.C. § 2342.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.82

§ 48.82 Petition for Review of Administrative Order

[1] Review of Agency Order Is Initiated by Filing Petition for Review

Review of an agency order is initiated by filing a petition for review. n1 The petition may seek review of an order of an agency, board, commission, or officer, and a petition for review may be denominated as a petition to enjoin, a petition to suspend, a petition to modify, or a notice of appeal, whichever form is indicated by the applicable statute. n2 The petition for review must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court that is authorized to review the agency order. If their interests make joinder practicable, two or more persons may join in a petition to the same court to review the same order. n3

The applicable statutes provide time limits for filing the petition for review. n4 If the applicable statute does not specify a time limit, the time for filing for review is subject only to the doctrine of laches. n5

[2] Contents of Petition for Review

Form 3 in the Appendix of Forms to the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure is a suggested form of a petition for review. n6

The petition must include the following information: n7

1. The petition must name each party seeking review either in the caption or the body of the petition; using such terms as "et al.," "petitioners," or "respondents" does not effectively name the parties. n8

2. The petition must name the agency as a respondent. Even though not named in the petition, the United States is a respondent if required by statute.

3. The petition must specify the order or part of the order to be reviewed.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefs

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(4).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 2344 (providing for 60-day time limit for petitions to review).

(n5)Footnote 5. Griffith Co. v. NLRB, 545 F.2d 1194, 1197 n.3 (9th Cir. 1976) , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 854 (1977) (petition to review NLRB order was timely filed under doctrine of laches).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. App. P. 15(a)(2)(A).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

110 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.83

§ 48.83 Application for Enforcement of Administrative Order

[1] Filing Application and Answer

An application for enforcement of an administrative order must be filed with the clerk of a court of appeals authorized to enforce the order. n1 If a petition is filed to review an agency order that the court may enforce, a party opposing the petition may file a cross-application for enforcement. n2

Although neither Fed. R. App. P. 15 nor any of the statutes governing the various administrative agencies specify a time limit for filing an application for enforcement, the doctrine of laches applies. n3 Within 21 days after an application for enforcement is filed, the respondent must serve an answer on the petitioner, and file it with the clerk. If the respondent fails to answer within this time, judgment will be awarded for the relief sought. n4

[2] Contents of Application for Enforcement

The application for enforcement must include the following information: n5

- A concise statement of the proceedings in which the order was entered.
- The facts on which venue is based. Venue is generally provided by the statutes governing the particular agency involved. Many statutes governing the powers and procedures of the individual agencies specify that an application for enforcement of an agency decision may be brought in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in addition to whichever circuit court has personal and subject matter jurisdiction over the matter. n6
- The relief requested.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral

Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 15(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 15(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. NLRB v. Searle Auto Glass, Inc., 762 F.2d 769, 772 (9th Cir. 1985) (in absence of statutory time limit, party asserting that application is untimely must establish that more time has elapsed than was necessary, and that party was prejudiced by delay).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 15(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 15(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 160(e), (f).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.84

§ 48.84 Serving Petition for Review or Application for Enforcement

At the time of filing, the petitioner or applicant must give the clerk enough copies of the petition or application to serve each respondent. n1 The petitioner or applicant is responsible for serving a copy of the petition or application on all other parties admitted to participate in the agency proceedings. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 15(c)(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 15(c)(1).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.85

§ 48.85 No Automatic Stay of Administrative Order Pending Review

Ordinarily, if a petitioner seeks to suspend the implementation of an agency decision or order pending review in the circuit court, the petitioner must file a motion with the agency for a stay of the order. n1 If the statute creating the agency expressly covers the conditions under which the agency will grant a stay, those conditions control. n2 Absent any specific statutory regulation, a general statute governs stays of administrative orders pending review, and provides that an agency may postpone the effective date of an action taken by it when required by justice. n3

If a motion for a stay pending review has been denied by the agency, the petitioner may file a motion to the court of appeals or one of its judges.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewStandards of ReviewGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsAutomatic StaysCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 18(a)(1); see Superior Trucking Co. v. United States, 614 F.2d 481, 485 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Superior Trucking Co. v. United States, 614 F.2d 481, 485 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 5 U.S.C. § 705.

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
G. Review or Enforcement of Administrative Orders

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.86 through 48.89

[Reserved]

§§ 48.86[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.90

§ 48.90 Required Contents of Appellant's and Appellee's Briefs

An appellant's brief must contain all of the following items, under appropriate headings, and in the order indicated:

1. A corporate disclosure statement, if required by Fed. R. App. P. 26.1. n1

2. A table of contents, with page references. n2

3. A table of authorities, with cases alphabetically arranged, statutes, and other authorities. Each item must have references to the pages of the brief where they are cited. n3

4. A jurisdictional statement, including each of the following:

(a) The basis for the district court's or agency's subject matter jurisdiction, with citations to applicable statutory provisions, and stating relevant facts establishing jurisdiction. n4

(b) The basis for the court of appeals' jurisdiction, with citations to applicable statutory provisions, and stating relevant facts establishing jurisdiction. n5

(c) The filing dates establishing the timeliness of the appeal or petition for review. n6

(d) An assertion that the appeal is from a final order or judgment that disposes of all parties' claims, or information establishing the court of appeals' jurisdiction on some other basis. n7

5. A statement of the issues presented for review. n8

6. A statement of the case, briefly indicating the nature of the case, the course of proceedings, and the disposition below. n9

7. A statement of facts relevant to the issues submitted for review, with appropriate references to the record. n10

8. A summary of the argument, which must contain a succinct, clear, and accurate statement of the arguments made in the body of the brief, and which must not merely repeat the argument headings. n11

9. The argument, which must contain the appellant's contentions and the reasons for them, with citations to the authorities and parts of the record on which the appellant relies. n12 For each issue, the brief must include a concise statement of the applicable standard of review, which may appear in the discussion of the issue or under a separate heading placed before the discussion of the issues. n13

10. A short conclusion stating the precise relief sought. n14

11. A certificate of compliance with type-volume and page limitations, if required by Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7). n15

The appellee's brief must include the same contents as the appellant's brief, except that the following do not need to be included unless the appellee is dissatisfied with the appellant's statement:

1. A jurisdictional statement. n16

2. A statement of the issues on appeal. n17

3. A statement of the case. n18

4. A statement of the facts. n19

5. A statement of the standard of review. n20

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(4)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(4)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(4)(C).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(4)(D).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(5).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(6).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(7).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(8).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(9)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(9)(B); see Harris v. Folk Constr. Co., 138 F.3d 365, 367 n.1 (8th Cir. 1998) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(10).

(n15)Footnote 15. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(11).

(n16)Footnote 16. Fed. R. App. P. 28(b)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. Fed. R. App. P. 28(b)(2).

(n18)Footnote 18. Fed. R. App. P. 28(b)(3).

(n19)Footnote 19. Fed. R. App. P. 28(b)(4).

(n20)Footnote 20. Fed. R. App. P. 28(b)(5).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.91

§ 48.91 Contents of Reply Brief

The appellant may file a brief in reply to the appellee's brief. An appellee who has cross-appealed may file a supplemental brief in reply to the appellant's response to the issues presented by the cross-appeal. Unless the court permits, no further briefs may be filed. A reply brief must contain a table of contents and a table of authorities. n1

If an issue is raised for the first time in a reply brief, that issue will not be considered by the court. n2 However, the appellant may respond to arguments raised for the first time in the appellee's brief. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefs

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 28(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Sands v. Runyon, 28 F.3d 1323, 1332 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. EEOC v. Union Bank, 408 F.2d 867, 868-869 (9th Cir. 1969) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.92

§ 48.92 Cross-Appellate Briefs; Briefs in Cases Involving Multiple Appellants or Appellees

If a cross-appeal is filed, the party who files a notice of appeal first is deemed the appellant. If notices are filed on the same day, the plaintiff in the lower court proceeding is deemed the appellant. These designations may be modified by agreement of the parties or by court order. n1 Filing the first notice of appeal has import implications because the appellant (the party who files the notice of appeal first) files the first brief, is responsible for preparing the Appendix pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 30, and is entitled to open and close the oral argument. n2 While Fed. R. App. P. 28(g) and (h) do not permit the appellee's brief to be lengthier because it includes a cross-appeal, the appellee, as cross-appellant, can have the last word at the briefing stage by filing a reply to the appellant-cross-appellee's answering brief. n3

With respect to an appellee's cross-appeal and response to appellant's brief, the appellee's brief must conform to the requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(1)-(11). However, an appellee who is satisfied with appellant's statement need not include a statement of the case or of the facts. n4

If a case involves more than one appellant or appellee, including consolidated cases, any number of appellants or appellees may join in a brief, and any party may adopt by reference a part of another's brief. Parties may also join in reply briefs. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 28(h); see also Fed. R. App. P. 15.1.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 28(h), 30, 31, 34(c)-(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 28(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 28(h).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 28(i).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.93

§ 48.93 References to Record on Appeal; Reproduction of Statutes, Rules, Regulations, and Other Laws

When necessary, the litigants must refer specifically to those parts of the record that support the facts and arguments relied on. n1 Failure to cite to the record may result in a waiver of the argument. n2

If the court's determination of the issues presented requires the study of statutes, rules, regulations, etc., the relevant parts must be set out in the brief or in an addendum, or may be supplied to the court in pamphlet form. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(9)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. McGoldrick Oil Co. v. Campbell, Athey & Zukowski, 793 F.2d 649, 653 (5th Cir. 1986) (appellant's argument in brief stricken because argument was without any references to supporting evidence in record).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 28(f).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.94

§ 48.94 Page Limitations and Formatting Requirements

If a brief does not conform to the technical formatting requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32 or applicable local rules, adverse consequences may result, such as dismissal of the appeal, rejection of the brief, or imposition of a monetary sanction. n1

All briefs must comply with the following page limitations and formatting requirements: n2

- Page limitations. A principal brief may not exceed 30 pages, and a reply brief 15 pages. Alternatively, a principal brief is acceptable if it contains no more than 14,000 words; if it uses a monospaced face, it is acceptable if it contains no more than 1,300 lines of text. A reply brief is acceptable if it contains no more than half of the type volume specified in Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7)(B)(i). Headings, footnotes, and quotations count toward the word and line limitations. The corporate disclosure statement, table of contents, table of citations, statement with respect to oral argument, any addendum containing statutes, rules or regulations, and any certificates of counsel do not count toward the limitation. Only one side of the paper may be used.

- Spacing and margins. Text must be double-spaced, but quotations more than two lines long may be indented and single-spaced. Headings and footnotes may be single-spaced. Margins must be at least one inch on all four sides. Page numbers may be placed in the margins, but no text may appear there.

- Typeface. A brief must be set in a plain, roman style, although italics or boldface may be used for emphasis. Case names must be italicized or underlined. The brief may use either a proportionally spaced or a monospaced face. A monospaced face may not contain more than 10 1/2 characters per inch. A proportionally spaced face must include serifs, but sans-serif type may be used in headings and captions. A proportionally spaced face must be 14-point or larger.

- Type of paper. The brief may be reproduced by any process that yields a clear black image on light paper. The paper must be 8 1/2 by 11 inches, opaque and unglazed.

- Clarity. Text must be reproduced with a clarity that equals or exceeds the output of a laser printer. Photographs, illustrations, and tables may be reproduced by any method that results in a good copy of the original; a glossy finish is acceptable if the original is glossy.

- Cover. Except for filings by unrepresented parties, the cover of the appellant's brief must be blue; the appellee's red; an intervenor's or amicus curiae's green; and any reply brief gray. The front cover of a brief must contain:
  - The number of the case centered at the top
  - The name of the court
  - The title of the case
  - The nature of the proceeding (e.g., Appeal, Petition for Review), and the name of the court, agency, or board below
  - The title of the brief, identifying the party or parties for whom the brief is filed
  - The name, office address, and telephone number of counsel representing the party for whom the brief is filed
- Binding. The brief may be bound in any manner that is secure, does not obscure the text, and permits the brief to lie reasonably flat when open.
- Local variation. Every court of appeals must accept a brief that complies with the form requirements listed above. By local rule or order in a particular case, a court of appeals may accept a brief that does not meet all of the form requirements. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Doyle v. Hasbro, Inc., 103 F.3d 186, 196 (1st Cir. 1996) (because appellants' single-spaced brief violated Fed. R. App. P. 32(a) and violated page limit imposed by Fed. R. App. P. 28(g), court awarded double costs); Hamblen v. County of L.A., 803 F.2d 462, 464 (9th Cir. 1986) (appeal dismissed for multiple violations, including cover that failed to identify nature of proceeding or lower court decision that was subject of appeal).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 32(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 32(d).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.95

§ 48.95 Local Rules Often Include Additional Requirements for Appellate Briefs

Each of the requirements for appellate briefs set forth in the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure may be modified by a circuit's local rules. n1

Although it is by no means an exhaustive list, the following are some common examples of required portions of the brief which have been added by local rule:

- A brief summary of the argument
- A statement setting forth any pending case which is related to the case on appeal
- A certificate of counsel setting forth all persons interested in the outcome of the appeal

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 28(g), 47.

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.96

§ 48.96 Appendix to Brief

[1] Contents of Appendix

The appellant must prepare and file an appendix to a brief containing all of the following: n1

- The relevant docket entries in the proceeding below.
- The relevant portions of the pleadings, charge, findings, or opinion.
- The judgment, order, or decision in question.
- Other parts of the record to which the parties wish to direct the court's attention.

The appellant should not include in the appendix memoranda of law in the district court unless they have independent relevance. n2 However, exhibits not entered into evidence should be included as part of the appendix if their admissibility is in issue. Alternatively, exhibits designated for inclusion in the appendix may be reproduced in a separate volume, or volumes, suitably indexed. Four copies must be filed with the appendix, and one copy must be served on counsel for each separately represented party. n3

[2] Appendix Filing Requirements

Unless filing is deferred under Fed. R. App. P. 30(c), the appellant must file 10 copies of the appendix with the brief, and must serve one copy on counsel for each party separately represented. An unrepresented party proceeding in forma pauperis must file four legible copies with the clerk, and one copy must be served on counsel for each separately represented party. The court may by local rule or by order in a particular case require the filing or service of a different number. n4

[3] Format of Appendix

The appendix must begin with a table of contents identifying the page at which each part begins. The relevant docket entries must follow the table of contents. Other parts of the record must follow chronologically. When pages from the transcript of proceedings are included in the appendix, the transcript page numbers must be shown in brackets immediately before the included pages. Omissions in the text of papers or of the transcript must be indicated by asterisks. Immaterial formal matters, such as captions, subscriptions, and acknowledgments should be omitted. n5

An appendix must comply with the formatting requirements for a brief, as specified in Fed. R. App. P. 32(a), with the following exceptions: n6

- The cover of a separately bound appendix must be white.

- An appendix may include a legible photocopy of any document found in the record or of a printed judicial or agency decision.

- When necessary to facilitate inclusion of odd-sized documents such as technical drawings, an appendix may be a size other than 8 1/2 by 11 inches, and need not lie reasonably flat when opened.

Every court of appeals must accept an appendix to a brief that complies with the form requirements listed above. By local rule or order in a particular case, a court of appeals may accept an appendix to a brief that does not meet all of the form requirements. n7

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 30(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 30(a)(2); United States v. Noall, 587 F.2d 123, 125 n.1 (2d Cir. 1978) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 30(e).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 30(a)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Fed. R. App. P. 30(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fed. R. App. P. 32(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fed. R. App. P. 32(d).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.97

§ 48.97 Deadline for Serving and Filing Appellate Briefs

The appellant must serve and file a brief within 40 days after the record is filed. n1 The appellee must serve and file a brief within 30 days after the appellant's brief is served. The appellant may serve and file a reply brief within 14 days after service of the appellee's brief, and must file it at least seven days prior to oral argument. The court of appeals may shorten this schedule for all cases, for classes of cases, or by order for specific cases. n2 For good cause, the court may extend any of the briefing deadlines. n3

The appellant and appellee must each file 25 copies of their respective briefs, and must serve two copies on counsel for each separately represented party. An unrepresented party proceeding in forma pauperis must file four legible copies with the clerk, and one copy must be served on counsel for each separately represented party. The court may by local rule or by order in a particular case require the filing or service of a different number. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 31(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 31(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 26(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 31(c).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.98

§ 48.98 Practical Guidelines for Writing Appellate Briefs

The following guidelines should be considered when writing an appellate brief:

- Arguments should be decisive. Each argument should either win the case on its own, or materially advance the client's position. Based on the arguments in the brief, the court should be able to decide and write an opinion in favor of the client.

- Arguments should be sound. It makes no sense to present arguments in which the attorney has little or no confidence. They will detract from the other arguments, cost the client additional fees unnecessarily, and waste the time of the appellate court. Particularly if there are a number of possible arguments to make, eliminate the weaker arguments, and present only the most compelling ones in the brief.

- Arguments should be complete. The arguments should cover each issue raised on appeal. They should also answer any arguments that the other side has raised or inevitably will raise. Very little, if anything, should be left to the court's imagination.

- Arguments should reflect the appropriate standard of review. In most cases, appellate courts will accept the factual findings of the court below unless the attorney persuades the court that the findings are "clearly erroneous." Thus, arguments on the facts usually will not prevail. n1

- Arguments should be material. The error raised in the court of appeals must be prejudicial error; it must have affected the final result at trial. Otherwise, the court of appeals is without power to help the client. An appeal cannot be won unless correction of the errors raised would be likely to change the result below. For example, a particular jury instruction may be erroneous, but if it is on an immaterial issue or was corrected by other instructions, the court of appeals will not reverse the judgment because of that error.

- Arguments should ordinarily not be newly-raised on appeal. An appellant ordinarily may not present as a ground for reversal "an issue which was not presented to the trial court and which it, therefore, had no opportunity to decide." n2 This rule is not, however, a bar to reanalyzing trial issues, to modifying them somewhat, or to using new legal theories to support an argument which has been raised below. But the attorney should be able to make a logical connection between the modified argument and one presented below.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Marx v. Loral Corp., 87 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir. 1996) (appellate court will not consider arguments not raised in district court unless there are exceptional circumstances).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

123 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.99

§ 48.99 Sanctions for Frivolous Appeal

[1] Circuit Court Has Discretion to Award Damages and Costs to Appellee

"If a court of appeals determines that an appeal is frivolous, it may, after a separately filed motion or notice from the court and reasonable opportunity to respond, award just damages and single or double costs to the appellee." n1 Damages may be in the form of attorney's fees or a lump-sum monetary penalty. Single or double costs are calculated under the provisions of Fed. R. App. P. 39.

By its terms, Fed. R. App. P. 38 applies only to appellees. Accordingly, it may not be used by an appellant to recover damages and costs from an appellee. n2

A statement or request in a brief does not constitute adequate notice. Only a separately filed, timely motion is sufficient. n3 Absent such a motion, notice must be sent to the appellant by the circuit court. n4

[2] Determination of Frivolousness

A court may impose sanctions under Fed. R. App. P. 38 only if it determines that the appeal is frivolous. There is no precise formula for determining whether an appeal is frivolous. Generally, the circuit court will determine first if the arguments advanced on appeal have any merit. If the result of the appeal is obvious, and the arguments advanced are entirely without merit, the appeal is frivolous. n5 If the appellant's brief and oral argument fail to address the issues presented on appeal, the court will also find the appeal frivolous. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsCosts & Attorney FeesCivil ProcedureAppealsFrivolous Appeals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 38.

(n2)Footnote 2. Walker v. City of Bogalusa, 168 F.3d 237, 240 (5th Cir. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Sims v. Great-West Life Assurance Co., 941 F.2d 368, 371 (5th Cir. 1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See In re Bero, 110 F.3d 462, 466-467 (7th Cir. 1997) (even though appellee's brief on merits requested sanctions for frivolous appeal, and appellant's brief replied to that request, because no separate motion for sanctions was made, circuit court was required to send appellant notice of probable sanctions and opportunity to respond).

(n5)Footnote 5. Evenow v. M/V Neptune, 163 F.3d 1108, 1119 (9th Cir. 1998) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Kurzweg v. Marple, 841 F.2d 635, 641 (5th Cir. 1988) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
H. Preparing Appellate Briefs

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.100 through 48.109

[Reserved]

§§ 48.100[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
I. Oral Argument

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.110

§ 48.110 Right to Oral Argument

Oral argument must be allowed in every case it is requested, unless a panel of three judges who have examined the briefs and record unanimously agree that oral argument is unnecessary for any one of the following reasons: n1

- The appeal is frivolous
- The dispositive issue or issues have been authoritatively decided
- The facts and legal arguments are adequately presented in the briefs and record, and the decisional process would not be significantly aided by oral argument

If no party requests oral argument, the case may be decided on the record and briefs. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsFrivolous Appeals

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Black, 606 F.2d 650, 653 (5th Cir. 1979) (case decided on brief because oral argument not requested).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

126 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
I. Oral Argument

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.111

§ 48.111 Oral Argument Procedure

The clerk must advise all parties whether oral argument will be scheduled, and if so, the date, time, and place, as well as the time allowed for each side. A motion to postpone the argument or to allow longer argument must be filed reasonably in advance of the hearing date. n1

If the appellee fails to appear for argument, the court must hear the appellant's argument. If the appellant fails to appear for argument, the court may hear the appellee's argument. If neither party appears, the case will be decided on the briefs, unless the court orders otherwise. n2

The appellant opens and concludes the argument. Counsel must not read at length from briefs, records, or authorities. n3 If there is a cross-appeal, Fed. R. App. P. 28(h) determines which party is the appellant and which is the appellee for purposes of oral argument. Unless the court directs otherwise, a cross-appeal or separate appeal must be argued when the initial appeal is argued. Separate parties should avoid duplicative argument. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. App. P. 34(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. App. P. 34(e).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. App. P. 34(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. App. P. 34(d); see also § 48.92 (discussing Rule 28(h).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
I. Oral Argument

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 48.112 through 48.119

[Reserved]

§§ 48.112[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.120

§ 48.120 Including Statement of Standard of Review in Appeal

Standards of review frame issues on appeal by defining the level and the limits of a circuit court's power of review. The appellate rules now require a brief to include a statement of the standard of review for each issue. n1

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. App. P. 28(a)(9)(B).

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.121

§ 48.121 Jury Verdicts Reviewed for Sufficiency of Evidence

[1] Understanding Substantial Evidence Rule

A jury verdict supported by substantial evidence must stand. The issue of whether there was substantial evidence to support the verdict must be preserved for appeal. If preserved, the circuit court reviews jury findings for sufficiency of the evidence. n1

In making its determination, the jury need not exclude every reasonable hypothesis and may choose between alternative constructions of the evidence.

The reviewing court may not reweigh the evidence or reassess the credibility of witnesses. Rather, it must view all the evidence, all reasonable inferences, and all credibility determinations in the light most favorable to the verdict. If, in that light, the evidence is such that a rational finder of fact could come to the same conclusion, then there is sufficient evidence to support the verdict. n2

This standard is highly deferential to the jury's collective judgment, affirming one of the most important principles of democracy. n3

Based upon its honored position, a jury has the sole power to determine the facts before it; the power of the trial court is limited to determining the law. Of course, a circuit court may reverse a jury verdict if there has been procedural or legal error, or if the verdict was brought about by improper extrinsic influences on the jurors; but the courts generally refuse to look into the deliberation process itself. The jury brings to the matter the needed finality as well as the collective judgment of the community which demand the court's deference. n4

[2] Evaluating Sufficiency of Evidence in Civil Cases

In civil cases, due process principles mandate that the standard of review for sufficiency of the evidence for a finding of fact is based on whether any rational trier of fact could have reached the same conclusion based on the evidence in the record. n5

Trial by jury is a fundamental guaranty of the rights of the people, and judges should not search the evidence with meticulous care to deprive litigants of jury trials. n6

Thus, where the facts are genuinely disputed, a trial court may not take the case from the jury absent waiver by the parties, legal insufficiency of the pleadings, or complete failure of proof; a circuit court may affirm or reverse a finding for legal error or for insufficiency of evidence, but it may not reweigh the evidence or substitute its conclusions for the findings of the jury. n7

This rule precludes a federal court from entering a judgment that ignores or negates any relevant finding by the jury. If a verdict contains inconsistent findings, a federal court is powerless to correct it. Instead, the trial court is limited to viewing the verdict so as to harmonize the conflicting answers, if possible. If that is not possible, there must be a new trial. n8

The same rule precludes a federal court from increasing an inadequate jury award of damages, although the trial court may, by remittitur, reduce an excessive award on consent of the plaintiff. n9

If the award is inadequate or the parties do not accept a remission of excess damages, a court is powerless to impose a different award on the parties, and there must be a new trial. n10 The circuit court has the power to review a denial of a motion to set aside a verdict as excessive. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Three Boys Music Corp. v. Bolton, 212 F.3d 477, 482 (9th Cir. 2000) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Porous Media Corp. v. Pall Corp., 110 F.3d 1329, 1337-1338 (8th Cir. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 485-486, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See United States v. Powell, 469 U.S. 57, 67, 105 S. Ct. 471, 83 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Leblanc-Sternberg v. Fletcher, 67 F.3d 412, 429 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Galloway v. United States, 319 U.S. 372, 406-407, 63 S. Ct. 1077, 87 L. Ed. 1458 (1945) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Galloway v. United States, 319 U.S. 372, 401-405, 63 S. Ct. 1077, 87 L. Ed. 1458 (1945) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Leblanc-Sternberg v. Fletcher, 67 F.3d 412, 428 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 486-487, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Dimick v. Schiedt, 293 U.S. 474, 486-487, 55 S. Ct. 296, 79 L. Ed. 603 (1935) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Eiland v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 58 F.3d 176, 183 (5th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.122

§ 48.122 Trial Court's Findings of Fact Reviewed for Clear Error

[1] Understanding the Clear Error Standard

Findings of fact, whether based on oral or documentary evidence, shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous, and due regard shall be given to the opportunity of the trial court to judge of the credibility of the witnesses. n1

Absent exceptional circumstances, the Supreme Court applies a clearly erroneous standard of review to factual findings made by a state court, even when those findings relate to a constitutional issue. n2

A factual finding is clearly erroneous when the appellate court, after reviewing the complete record, is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed. n3 A mistake has been committed if the factual finding seems so improbable as to belie belief, n4or is incredible on the admitted facts, n5 or is inconceivable, n6 or is internally inconsistent. n7

When the Supreme Court is the only court of review, it will review the district courts factual findings for clear error. This is particularly so if the key evidence in the case consisted primarily of documents and expert testimony, and credibility evaluations played a minor role in the district courts finding. On the other hand, in a case in which a trial court's factual findings have been reviewed and affirmed by an intermediate appellate court, the Supreme Court will not lightly overturn the concurrent findings of the two lower courts. n8

The clearly erroneous rule does not apply to conclusions of law. n9

[2] Rationale for Deference to Trial Court

The requirement of deference to the trial court's findings of fact rests upon the expertise of the trial court. Since it presides at the trial, a trial court is in a better position than an appellate court to determine credibility and to weigh the evidence. A trial court's role is to hear the evidence and then to determine the facts proven. With experience in fulfilling that role comes expertise. n10 Given that expertise, permitting a less-expert appellate court to retry the facts would risk having less accuracy in findings and would waste valuable appellate-court expertise and resources. n11

Further, the litigants have already marshaled their proof for trial to persuade the trial court of the merit of their position. To require the prevailing party to expend additional resources to persuade another panel of judges and to permit the losing party to have a second chance is requiring too much. n12

[3] Plausible Finding Cannot Be Error

In reviewing a trial court's factual findings, the reviewing court may not retry issues of fact or substitute its judgment for the trial court's findings. The reviewing court is proscribed from reviewing the record de novo as though it were sitting on the bench of the trial court. If there are two possible views of the evidence, the trial court's preference for one of them cannot be clearly erroneous. Even if the appellate court believes that it would have found differently, so long as the trial court's factual finding is plausible, the appellate court may not reverse it. n13

A circuit court may not avoid deference to the trial court's factual finding by making its own finding but denominating it something else for example, an independent determination of discriminatory purpose, a mixed question, dividing ultimate facts from subsidiary facts, or a conclusion of law. n14 In such a case, a circuit court would usurp the power of a trial court. n15

[4] Considering Basis of Trial Court's Findings

Findings based upon oral testimony and, therefore, the credibility of witnesses command great respect from an appellate court. It is the trial court's province to judge credibility of witnesses, resolve conflicts in testimony, assess the weight of the testimony, and determine the meaning of ambiguous testimony. It is the trial court which is uniquely in a position to evaluate the variations in demeanor, tone, and responsiveness to questions that serve as the basis for credibility determinations. When a trial court decides to credit one or another of the witnesses, each of whom has told a coherent and facially plausible story that is not contradicted by extrinsic evidence, and bases its findings on that witness's testimony, the trial court's finding can almost never be clear error. n16

However, the trial court may not insulate its factual findings from review by denominating them credibility determinations. For example, if the record reveals extrinsic evidence, such as documents or other objective evidence, which shows that testimony is inconsistent or incredible and that a reasonable fact finder would not believe it, then there is clear error. n17

Other factors than demeanor may underlie determinations of credibility, and thus permit an appellate court to review the propriety of a trial courts evaluation of testimony. Documents or other direct evidence may contradict the testimony of the witness relied upon by the trial court, or the witness's testimony may be so inconsistent or implausible that it should not be credited. In those cases an appellate court may find clear error. n18

Ordinarily, a trial court's exclusion of evidence is reviewed for abuse of discretion. However, if the exclusion rests upon a trial court's erroneous interpretation of law and the evidence, if admitted, would have been material to the finding, then there is clear error. n19

The clearly erroneous standard also applies to findings made by the trial court that are based upon documents, or undisputed or stipulated facts, and the inferences drawn by the trial court from those documents or facts. n20

A trial court adopts or rejects the findings of fact made by a referred factfinder, such as a magistrate judge or special master, under the clearly erroneous standard. Similarly, on appeal, the trial court's adoption or rejection of findings made by a referred factfinder, as well as the findings actually made, are reviewed for clear error. n21

The Supreme Court has criticized courts for their verbatim adoption of findings of fact prepared by prevailing parties, particularly when those findings have taken the form of conclusory statements unsupported by citations to the record. n22 In these cases, there is concern for overreaching and exaggeration by the attorneys who prepare the proposed findings. However, even if the trial court adopts findings of fact proposed by a party without change, the Supreme Court has indicated that if there is no reason for the reviewing court to believe that the trial court accepted the proposed findings uncritically, then there is no basis for a more stringent review. n23

[5] Absent or Inadequate Findings

Given absent or inadequate findings of fact by the trial court, an appellate court may nevertheless review the result so long as it can obtain a full understanding of the issues and there is no prejudice to any party. A full understanding is available when the record provides sufficient detail for the appellate court to discern the factual basis of the trial court's decision or when the appeal turns on questions of law rather than fact. In those cases, an appellate court need not remand to supplement the record. n24

However, if the record omits a crucial finding, such as a finding on an element required for proof of the claim, an appellate court may not supply that finding. Similarly, if the record lacks sufficient information to indicate the factual basis for the trial court's finding, then no review is possible since the circuit court cannot determine if the finding was erroneous. A remand to the trial court to supply the absent finding, to supplement the record, or to clarify the finding is required. n25

[6] Determining Clear Error

The clearly erroneous standard of review does not require the conclusion that no reasonable person would make the same determination, only that the appellate court is firmly convinced that it would have decided differently. A finding of fact is clearly erroneous if the finding does not meet the correct legal standard, or if it is based upon an incorrect understanding of the substantive law. A factual finding will also be clearly erroneous if there is no evidence tending to show a required element of the claim, or if there is no basis in the record to support the finding, or if it is based on a fundamental confusion of the facts as revealed by the record. n26

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 366, 111 S. Ct. 1859, 114 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Thornton v. Brown, 47 F.3d 194, 196 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Mar Oil, S.A. v. Morrissey, 982 F.2d 830, 842 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Carr v. Allison Gas Turbine Div. Gen. Motors, 32 F.3d 1007, 1011 (7th Cir. 1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See United States v. Fidelity Capital Corp., 920 F.2d 827, 840 (11th Cir. 1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Todd v. Corporation Life Ins. Co., 945 F.2d 204, 208 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Hunt v. Cromartie, 532 U.S. 234, 121 S. Ct. 1452, 1458-1459, 149 L. Ed. 2d 430, 444 (2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 287, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 574-575, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 575, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 575, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Thornton v. Brown, 47 F.3d 194, 196-197 (7th Cir. 1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 285-288, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Amadeo v. Zant, 486 U.S. 214, 228, 108 S. Ct. 1771, 100 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1988) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Sedor v. Frank, 42 F.3d 741, 746 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Metzen v. United States, 19 F.3d 795, 797-798 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 575, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Mobil Exploration v. Cajun Constr. Servs., 45 F.3d 96, 99 (5th Cir. 1995) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc. v. Kirk Line, 30 F.3d 1370, 1376 (11th Cir. 1994) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Sockwell v. Phelps, 20 F.3d 187, 190 (5th Cir. 1994) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 572, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Lamb v. Emhart Corp., 47 F.3d 551, 557 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See Savic v. United States, 918 F.2d 696, 700 (7th Cir. 1990) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Banker v. Nighswander, Martin & Mitchell, 37 F.3d 866, 871-872 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Mobil Exploration v. Cajun Constr. Servs., 45 F.3d 96, 99 (5th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.123

§ 48.123 Conclusions of Law Reviewed Independently

[1] Evaluating De Novo Review

A trial court's conclusions on questions of the application, interpretation, and construction of law are reviewed de novo on appeal. n1 The de novo standard has often been termed plenary or independent review. n2

However it is characterized, the de novo standard of review means not only that the conclusions of law made by a trial court are not binding on the circuit court, but also that the appellate court owes no deference to the trial court's conclusions. n3 Rather, the circuit court, in reviewing the record, is empowered to make its own determination as to the meaning and correct application of any particular question of law. So a circuit court may substitute its own judgment regarding a conclusion of law made by the trial court. n4

However, a circuit court may not retry the evidence or make new findings of fact. n5

[2] Understanding Rationale for De Novo Review

Unfettered review of legal questions by appellate courts best serves the dual goals of doctrinal coherence and economy of judicial administration. n6 Independent appellate review of lower court's conclusions of law also promotes convergent development of the law among the federal courts, encourages consistent application of the law across federal jurisdictions, and prevents forum shopping. n7

[3] Review of Mixed Questions of Law and Fact

Since the distinction between questions of law and questions of fact is vexing and there may be no principle that can unerringly distinguish between them, n8 some questions blur any distinction entirely and are denominated mixed questions of law and fact. Mixed questions are described as: questions in which the historical facts are admitted or established, the rule of law is undisputed, and the issue is whether the facts satisfy the statutory standard, or to put it another way, whether the rule of law as applied to the established facts is or is not violated. n9

To complicate the matter, the characterization of a mixed question of law and fact for one purpose does not govern its characterization for all purposes. n10

There is some authority from the Supreme Court that, in general, mixed questions of law and fact are reviewed de novo. n11

In the context of constitutional claims, an appellate court may independently review the underlying facts if the conclusion of the existence of a constitutional right is so intermingled with a factual finding that an analysis of the facts is necessary. n12

On the other hand, the Supreme Court has held that deferential review rather than de novo review is warranted when it appears that the trial court is better positioned to decide the issue in question or that probing appellate scrutiny will not contribute to the clarity of legal doctrine. n13 The Supreme Court has not settled on the much-mooted issue of the appropriate standard of review for mixed questions, n14 and continues to decide the appropriate standard for review of a particular mixed question on an ad hoc basis. n15

The circuit courts differ on the question of the appropriate standard of review for mixed questions of law and fact. In the majority of circuits, mixed questions are generally reviewed de novo since they require the consideration of legal concepts and the correct application of the law to the facts by the fact finder. However, if the applicable legal standard provides for a strictly factual test, such as a question of state of mind or reasonableness, the standard of review of the factual findings is clearly erroneous, but the application of the law to the facts is reviewed de novo. n16

In a few circuits, there is no general rule. Rather, the standard of review of a mixed question depends on where the mixed question falls along a degree-of-deference continuum; the more fact dominated the mixed question, the more deference given to the trial court. n17 In the Seventh Circuit, mixed questions are reviewed for clear error. n18

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 287-288, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Salve Regina College v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 231-232, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Salve Regina College v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 238, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Banker v. Nighswander, Martin & Mitchell, 37 F.3d 866, 873 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, N.C., 470 U.S. 564, 573-574, 105 S. Ct. 1504, 84 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1985) (standard is clear error)

(n6)Footnote 6. See Salve Regina College v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 231, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Salve Regina College v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 234, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 288, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 289 n.19, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See United States v. Gaudin, 515 U.S. 506, 522, 115 S. Ct. 2310, 132 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1995) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 698, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union of the United States, 466 U.S. 485, 513-514, 104 S. Ct.

1949, 80 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1984) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Salve Regina College v. Russell, 499 U.S. 225, 233, 111 S. Ct. 1217, 113 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1991) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint, 456 U.S. 273, 289 n.19, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1982) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Cooper Indus. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 121 S. Ct. 1678, 1683-1688, 149 L. Ed. 2d 674, 683-691 (2001) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine, 48 F.3d 365, 369 (8th Cir. 1995) ; Banker v. Nighswander, Martin & Mitchell, 37 F.3d 866, 870 (2d Cir. 1994) ; Sweatman v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 39 F.3d 594, 600 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Keys Jet Ski, Inc. v. Kays, 893 F.2d 1225, 1227 (11th Cir. 1990) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Sierra Fria Corp. v. Donald J. Evans, P.C., 127 F.3d 175, 181 (1st Cir. 1997) ; Feder v. Evans-Feder, 63 F.3d 217, 223-224 (3d Cir. 1995) ; Sandberg v. Virginia Bankshares, 979 F.2d 332, 344 (4th Cir. 1992) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See G.J. Leasing Co. v. Union Elec. Co., 54 F.3d 379, 382 (7th Cir. 1995) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.124

§ 48.124 Discretionary Determinations Reviewed for Abuse of Discretion

[1] Abuse of Discretion by Trial Court

Federal district courts have discretion in managing cases and in controlling litigation before them. However, discretionary choices are not left to a court's inclination, but to its judgment; and its judgment is to be guided by sound legal principles and is not unfettered by meaningful standards or shielded from thorough appellate review. n1 Discretionary rulings and determinations made by a district court are reviewed for abuse of discretion.

The standard is deferential to the district court's familiarity with the proceedings and evidence in the case. The court presiding over the proceedings likely has insights not found in the record as to the credibility of witnesses and the quality of the evidence. n2

Moreover, it is impractical to formulate a rule because the questions at issue involve multifarious, fleeting, special, narrow facts that utterly resist generalization. n3 Since the district court is in a better position to decide than the circuit court, its decision must be given deference. n4

On the other hand, because of the seriousness of a default judgment, the district court's exercise of discretion in entering a default judgment is subject to careful review, and even a slight abuse of discretion may justify reversal. n5

Abuse of discretion is found if the district court's decision rests upon a clearly erroneous finding of fact, upon an errant conclusion of law, or upon improper application of law to the facts. n6

[2] Abuse of Discretion by Administrative Agency

The standard of review for an agency's determination is prescribed by the statute in the relevant enabling act. n7 The Administrative Procedure Act, governing the majority of agency determinations, provides that an agency decision, to the extent that it is reviewable, may be set aside only if it is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, not in accordance with law, unconstitutional, in excess of agency authority, unsupported by substantial evidence after a hearing on the record, or unwarranted by facts that are subject to trial de novo by a reviewing court. n8 Most importantly, it remains the reviewing court's role ultimately to determine questions of law, interpretations of constitutionality, and the meaning and applicability of agency action. n9

The standard is deferential to the expertise of the agency, its familiarity with the proceedings before it, and the scant record developed in most instances. Thus, a reviewing court may not substitute its judgment for that of the agency, must limit its review to the record at the time the agency acted, and may not consider subsequent matters. n10 Nevertheless, a reviewing court should make a thorough, probing, in-depth review of the agency action, n11 and must judge the propriety of an agency's determination solely by the grounds invoked by the agency. n12 If those grounds are inadequate or improper, the court is powerless to affirm the administrative action.

In reviewing a statutory interpretation by an agency, a court must give effect to any congressional intent that can be ascertained; if the record is silent on congressional intent, the agency interpretation must be a permissible construction or a reasonable interpretation of the statute or the agency has abused its discretion. n13 Moreover, if Congress has expressly delegated to the agency the authority to elucidate a specific statutory provision, the courts must accept the agency's interpretation unless it is arbitrary, capricious, or manifestly contrary to the statute. n14 In such a situation, the agency's interpretation is not displaced by a prior judicial decision construing the statute, unless the prior court decision holds that its construction follows from the unambiguous terms of the statute and thus leaves no room for agency discretion. n15

In reviewing an agency action, a circuit court will find that the agency has abused its discretion if it relied on factors the enabling act did not intend for it to rely on, failed to consider important aspects of the matter, gave an explanation that was either counter to the evidence or too implausible to be derived from the evidence, n16 or made a clear error in judgment. n17 An agency has the duty to follow its own regulations, and a failure to follow applicable regulations may lead to reversal of the agency action. n18

If an agency interpretation of ambiguous regulations is first put forward in the course of litigation, a court will defer to that interpretation only if the interpretation reflects the agency's fair and considered judgment. n19

A circuit court of appeals reviewing an administrative decision is not generally empowered to conduct a de novo inquiry into the matter being reviewed and to reach its own conclusions based on such an inquiry. Rather, if the administrative agency has not decided an issue that is necessary to resolve the matter, the proper course usually is to remand to the agency for additional investigation or explanation. n20

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody, 422 U.S. 405, 416, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (1975) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Schlumberger Techs., Inc. v. Wiley, 113 F. 3d 1553, 1557-1558 (11th Cir. 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Pierce v. Underwood, 487 U.S. 552, 560-562, 108 S. Ct. 2541, 101 L. Ed. 2d 490 (1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 399-405, 110 S. Ct. 2447, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lacy v. Sitel Corp., 227 F.3d 290, 293 (5th Cir. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Paolella v. Browning-Ferris, Inc., 158 F.3d 183, 189 (3d Cir. 1998) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See 5 U.S.C. 706.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 5 U.S.C. 706.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 5 U.S.C. 706.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Citizens to Preserve Overton Park v. Volpe, 401 U.S. 402, 414, 91 S. Ct. 814, 28 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1971) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Citizens to Preserve Overton Park v. Volpe, 401 U.S. 402, 415, 91 S. Ct. 814, 28 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1971) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See ICC v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Engrs, 482 U.S. 270, 290, 107 S. Ct. 2360, 96 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1987) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Barnhart v. Thomas, 540 U.S. 20, 124 S. Ct. 376, 157 L. Ed. 2d 333, 338-342 (2003) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Long Island Care at Home, Ltd. v. Coke, 551 U.S. 158, 170-171, 127 S. Ct. 2339, 168 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2007) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See National Cable & Telecomm. Assn v. Brand X Internet Servs., 545 U.S. 967, 980-984, 125 S. Ct. 2688, 162 L. Ed. 2d 820 (2005) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass'n v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43, 103 S. Ct. 2856, 77 L. Ed. 2d 443 (1983) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Blanco v. INS, 68 F.3d 642, 646-647 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Nelson v. INS, 232 F.3d 258, 262 (1st Cir. 2000) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Akzo Nobel Salt, Inc. v. Federal Mine Safety & Health Review Commn, 212 F.3d 1301, 1304 (D.C. Cir. 2000) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Gonzales v. Thomas, 547 U.S. 183, 185-186, 126 S. Ct. 1613, 164 L. Ed. 2d 358 (2006) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 48 Appeals to Court of Appeals *
J. Standards of Review

4-48 Federal Litigation Guide § 48.125

§ 48.125 Reviewing Harmless Error

[1] Understanding Harmless Error Rule and Its Rational

On review, a circuit court must ignore any error that does not affect a substantial right of the party complaining of the error. n1

The purpose of the harmless-error rule is to avoid reversal after trial based upon a rigid, mechanical, or technical application of the rules of appellate review given significant evidence of liability. n2 A verdict may not be set aside for insignificant errors that likely did not influence the outcome of the trial and that, if corrected, likely would not change the result of a new trial. n3

Errors that have been properly raised at trial and properly preserved for appeal are reviewed for harmlessness. n4

[2] Determining Whether Error is Harmless

An error is a deviation from a legal rule. n5 An error is harmless if it caused no prejudice to a substantial right of the party complaining of the error. n6 If the error could not have affected the fairness of the trial or influenced the verdict, it cannot be harmful. n7

In civil cases, if the error is not preserved for review, it is deemed waived. n8 Once an error is preserved for review, the reviewing court will not reach it unless it finds that the error affected a substantial right and was harmful. This places the burden of persuasion that the error was harmless upon the party who benefited from the error. n9

[3] Fundamentally Harmful Errors

There are some errors that are not subject to harmless error analysis because they are so fundamentally harmful that they amount to reversible error per se. These include:

- Denial of right to jury trial for serious offense n10
- Denial of right to public trial n11

- Denial of right to counsel at trial n12
- Denial of right to self-representation at trial n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Evid. 103.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Kotteakos v. United States, 328 U.S. 750, 760, 66 S. Ct. 1239, 90 L. Ed. 1557 (1946) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Chapman v. California, 386 U.S. 18, 21, 87 S. Ct. 824, 17 L. Ed. 2d 705 (1967) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61.

(n5)Footnote 5. See United States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 732-733, 113 S. Ct. 1770, 123 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See United States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 734, 113 S. Ct. 1770, 123 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1993) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See United States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 733, 113 S. Ct. 1770, 123 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1993) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See United States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 733, 113 S. Ct. 1770, 123 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1993) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Chapman v. California, 386 U.S. 18, 24, 87 S. Ct. 824, 17 L. Ed. 2d 705 (1967) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145, 156-158, 88 S. Ct. 1444, 20 L. Ed. 2d 491 (1968) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 49-50 n.9, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1984) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 344-345, 83 S. Ct. 792, 9 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1963) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See McKaskle v. Wiggins, 465 U.S. 168, 177 n.8, 104 S. Ct. 944, 79 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1984) .

* Chapter 48 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide 49.syn

§ 49.syn Synopsis to Chapter 49: Settlements

§ 49.01 General Settlement Incentives

§ 49.02 Alternative Dispute Resolution in Aid of Settlement

§ 49.03 Counsel Must Prepare for Settlement Discussions
[1] Understanding Issues, Facts, Law, and Client Objectives
[2] Understanding Client Objectives
[3] Injecting Reality Into Client Expectations
[4] Understanding Opponent's Objectives
[5] Valuing the Case

§ 49.04 Attorney's Ethical Duties and Considerations During Settlement
[1] Obtaining Client's Authority to Settle
[2] Communicating Offers and Demands to Client
[3] Refraining From Communicating With Represented Parties
[4] Avoiding Conflicts of Interest
[5] Confidentiality of Settlement Negotiations

§ 49.05 CHECKLIST: Preparing for Settlement Discussions

§§ 49.06 through 49.09 [Reserved]

§ 49.10 Preparing for and Attending Initial Pretrial Conference

§ 49.11 Role of Judicial Officer in Settlement Conference

§ 49.12 Sanctions for Failing to Obey Settlement Conference Rules or Orders

§§ 49.13 through 49.19 [Reserved]

§ 49.20 Rule 68 Provisions Regarding Offers of Judgment

§ 49.21 Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs

§ 49.22 Types of Costs Contemplated by Rule 68

§ 49.23 Offer of Judgment Does Not Need to Refer to Costs

§ 49.24 Judgment for Plaintiff Required

§ 49.25 Determining Whether Judgment Is More Favorable

§ 49.26 Only Defending Parties May Make Offers of Judgment

§ 49.27 Deadline for Making Offer of Judgment

§ 49.28 Offer of Judgment Must Be in Writing and Served on All Parties

§ 49.29 Subsequent Offers of Judgment

§ 49.30 Effect of Ambiguity in Offer of Judgment
[1] Ordinary Contract Principles Govern
[2] Ambiguities May Invalidate Offer
[3] Seeking Clarification of Offer of Judgment

§ 49.31 Motion to Strike Offer of Judgment
[1] Appropriate for Procedural or Substantive Defects
[2] Deadline for Filing Motion
[3] Procedure for Filing Motion to Strike Offer of Judgment

§ 49.32 Rejected Offer of Judgment Inadmissible as Evidence at Trial

§ 49.33 Deadline for Accepting Offer of Judgment

§ 49.34 Acceptance Must Be Written and Unconditional

§ 49.35 Filing Offer and Acceptance

§§ 49.36 through 49.39 [Reserved]

§ 49.40 Types of Settlements
[1] Lump Sum Payment
[1.--1] Description of Lump Sum Settlement
[1.--2] Advantages of Lump Sum Settlement
[1.--3] Disadvantages of Lump Sum Settlement
[2] Structured Settlement
[2.--1] Description of Structured Settlement
[2.--2] Advantages of Structured Settlement
[2.--3] Disadvantages of Structured Settlement
[3] Partial Settlement
[4] Sliding Scale Settlement
[5] Consent Decree

§ 49.41 Common Settlement Agreement Provisions
[1] Description of Parties
[2] Recitation of Disputed Matters
[3] Recitation of Parties' Obligations

[4] Release Provisions
[5] Other Settlement Provisions
[6] Signatures

§ 49.42 Putting Oral Settlement on Record

§ 49.43 Filing Stipulation of Dismissal--Action Not Terminated Until Stipulation of Dismissal Filed With Court

§ 49.44 Court Approval of Settlement

§ 49.45 CHECKLIST: Drafting Settlement Agreement

§§ 49.46 through 49.59 [Reserved]

§ 49.60 Settlement Agreement Is Enforceable Contract

§ 49.61 Court Must Have Jurisdiction Before It May Enforce Settlement Agreement
[1] Enforcement While Case Still Pending Before Court
[2] Post-Dismissal Enforcement of Settlement Agreement
[2.--1] Post-Dismissal Enforcement Requires Basis for Jurisdiction
[2.--2] Party Seeking Enforcement May Bring Separate Action

§ 49.62 Establishing Existence of Valid Agreement and Authority of Counsel

§§ 49.63 through 49.99 [Reserved]

§ 49.100 Offer of Judgment
[1] FORM
Offer of Judgment
[2] Use of Form
[3] Timing of Offer and Acceptance of Offer
[4] Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs
[5] Practice Tip: Offer of Judgment Should Affirmatively State That Costs Are Included

§ 49.101 Acceptance of Offer of Judgment
[1] FORM
Acceptance of Offer of Judgment
[2] Use of Form
[3] Timing of Offer and Acceptance of Offer
[4] Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs
[5] Recovering Costs

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

The ability to negotiate a successful settlement is an important aspect of an attorney's job. This chapter explores the procedures and techniques involved in settling a dispute.

The chapter initially addresses the legal and ethical limitations placed on counsel's conduct regarding settlement. These limitations affect (1) relationships with clients, with opposing counsel, and with the opposing party, (2) the settlement agreement itself, and (3) counsel's conduct when negotiating the settlement.

The chapter then discusses the basic techniques of negotiating a settlement, including setting the time for settlement negotiation, establishing credibility as an adversary, initiating the negotiations, and making and reacting to counter-offers. Also analyzed is the use of settlement conferences and pretrial procedures, motions, and discovery in facilitating settlement.

After examining the confidentiality of settlement negotiations, the chapter covers the drafting of the settlement agreement, providing many examples of specific clauses that might be included in the agreement. The chapter then highlights the problem of contribution as it relates to settlements.

Completing the chapter is an exploration of offers of judgment, the effect of the tax laws on settlements, and the use of structured settlements.

Appendices containing a survey of local district court rules pertaining to discovery and settlement case histories appear at the end of the chapter.

The chapter includes a sample form of Offer of Judgement, as well as a sample Acceptance of Offer of Judgement.

For expanded coverage of offers of judgment, see MOORE'S Federal Practice, Ch. 68, Offer of Judgment (Matthew Bender 3d ed.).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.01

§ 49.01 General Settlement Incentives

In all litigation, the adverse consequences of potential defeat provide the parties with an incentive to settle in advance of trial; settlement provides certainty. n1

Settlement serves the interests of plaintiffs as well as defendants, in that it allows each to avoid the financial costs, burdens, stress, and time associated with litigation. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 352, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc., 995 F.2d 1138, 1143 (2d Cir. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.02

§ 49.02 Alternative Dispute Resolution in Aid of Settlement

In view of the serious case backlog in the federal court system, judicial intervention in the settlement process is considered a necessity. Without such intervention, the federal courts would be hopelessly congested with little chance for civil litigants to get a trial within a reasonable time; conversely, judicial intervention frequently helps to avoid the expense of litigation. n1

Federal courts have joined in the general movement seeking methods other than litigation for resolving disputes. As a result, a party filing suit in federal court today will likely be asked to consider some form of settlement assistance, from participating in a pretrial settlement conference, to submitting to alternative dispute resolution (ADR) procedures such as mediation or arbitration.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Bilello v. Abbott Lab., 825 F. Supp. 475, 481 (E.D.N.Y. 1993) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.03

§ 49.03 Counsel Must Prepare for Settlement Discussions

[1] Understanding Issues, Facts, Law, and Client Objectives

As with the rest of the litigation process, success in settling a case requires that counsel engage in extensive preparation. Prior to settlement discussions, counsel must research, understand, and be able to articulate the following:

- Issues in controversy
- Facts surrounding the controverted issues
- Law applicable to the facts and issues in controversy
- Client's objectives n1
- Objectives of the opposing party and opposing counsel n2
- Monetary value of the case n3

[2] Understanding Client Objectives

It is essential that counsel understand the client's objectives in initiating or defending against litigation. Toward that end, counsel should ask the client to answer the following questions:

- At a minimum, what must the client obtain to agree to settle the case?
- Ideally, what would the client like to achieve in settling the case?

Money rather than principle usually matters most to clients. However, counsel should be aware that clients may have non-monetary goals as well. For example, a client alleging gender-based employment discrimination may be willing to accept a smaller monetary settlement in exchange for the ability to publicize the fact and terms of the settlement. Counsel should therefore be prepared to look for innovative solutions such as structured pay-outs, payment in kind, future commercial relations, concessions, apologies, admissions, establishment of training or recruiting programs, or correction of a defect. Be wary of hidden personal goals that will interfere with settlement. Revenge and spite do not lend themselves to compromise.

[3] Injecting Reality Into Client Expectations

Counsel must be prepared to inject reality into the client's objectives. Unrealistic expectations prevent wise settlements. Thus, before engaging in settlement discussions, counsel should provide the client with an honest assessment of:

- The likelihood of success at trial
- The amount of damages likely to be awarded
- The time and expenses likely to be incurred if the case settles later or goes to trial
- The physical and emotional toll litigation may exact on the client
- The difficulties of enforcing a judgment against the opposing party
- The likelihood of an appeal by the opposing party if the client prevails at trial

[4] Understanding Opponent's Objectives

Understanding an opposing party's thinking and feelings regarding a case may be as important as analyzing the issues. The opposing party's real objectives in litigation may not always be what they seem on the face of the pleadings, or what opposing counsel says.

Accordingly, counsel should be alert for indications of the real objectives of the opposing party in initiating or defending against litigation. The potential for successful settlement increases when at least some of the objectives of all the parties are met by the terms of the settlement.

[5] Valuing the Case

After evaluating the facts, issues, and law applicable in the case, counsel must determine its monetary value. Though every case is unique, some general factors to be considered in attempting to place a value on the claims at issue include:

- Present economic damages suffered by the plaintiff, including:
  - Lost income
  - Medical or other bills incurred as a result of the conduct at issue
  - Lost profits
  - Replacement costs
  - Interest
- Future damages reasonably certain to be incurred by the plaintiff

- Nonmonetary damages such as pain and suffering, or loss of goodwill incurred by the plaintiff
- The economic cost of protracted litigation
- Whether the plaintiff will be seen as sympathetic by the court or jury
- The defendant's ability to pay, both actual and apparent
- Case venue: whether in a"liberal" or"conservative" award geographic area
- The reputation, ability, and experience of the attorneys in the case

To get a further idea of the potential value of the case, counsel should also consider reviewing cases reported in jury verdict reporters with similar fact patterns. Examples of such jury verdict reporters include the Association of Trial Lawyers of America ATLA Record, LRP's Jury Verdict and Settlement Summaries, and Shepard's Verdicts, Settlements & Tactics. Counsel should also consider discussing the case discretely with attorneys experienced in the type of litigation involved to get an idea of how those attorneys would value the case; client confidences and privileged communications must be preserved. n4

These factors should be continually reviewed as the case progresses. Discovery results and motion practice can dramatically alter a valuation upward or downward.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See [2], [3], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See [4], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See [5], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 49.04.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.04

§ 49.04 Attorney's Ethical Duties and Considerations During Settlement

[1] Obtaining Client's Authority to Settle

The decision to settle a case rests with the client, not the attorney. n1 An attorney must have either actual or apparent authority from the client to settle a case. n2 A client does not automatically bestow the authority to settle a case merely by retaining counsel. n3

[2] Communicating Offers and Demands to Client

An attorney has an obligation to promptly submit nonfrivolous offers of settlement to the client, unless prior discussions between the attorney and client make it clear that the proposal will be unacceptable to the client. n4

Even delay in finalizing a settlement agreement has been sanctioned under federal law. n5

[3] Refraining From Communicating With Represented Parties

Attorneys may not communicate directly with a party represented by counsel absent that counsel's presence or consent. n6

Though the parties themselves are free to engage in direct settlement discussions without their attorneys, it may be an ethical violation for an attorney to use the client or a third party to violate the prohibition on direct communication with represented parties. n7

[4] Avoiding Conflicts of Interest

An attorney is not to allow his or her own interests, financial or otherwise, to influence the attorney's professional advice. Accordingly, an attorney is required to evaluate a settlement offer on the basis of the client's interest, without regard to the attorney's own interest in obtaining a fee. n8

The attorney should identify and avoid conflicts that may arise during settlement discussions.

[5] Confidentiality of Settlement Negotiations

Evidence concerning efforts to settle or compromise a dispute is generally inadmissible to prove the existence or amount of liability. n9

However, otherwise discoverable evidence is not excludable merely because it is presented in the course of settlement negotiations. Likewise, exclusion is not required when the evidence is offered for another purpose, such as proving bias or prejudice of a witness, negating a contention of undue delay, or proving an effort to obstruct a criminal investigation or prosecution. n10

Both the timing of the settlement offer and the existence of a disputed claim are relevant in determining whether an offer is made to settle or compromise a claim. n11 Thus, counsel should seek a written agreement specifying ground rules of confidentiality.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See A.B.A., Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 1.2(a); A.B.A., Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-7; A.B.A., Informal Ethics Opinion No. 925.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Garabedian v. Allstates Eng. Co., 811 F.2d 802, 803 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Fennell v. TLB Kent Co., 865 F.2d 498, 501-502 (2d Cir. 1989) ; Edwards v. Born, Inc., 792 F.2d 387, 390 (3d Cir. 1986) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See A.B.A., Model Rules of Professional Conduct 1.2(a), 1.4.

(n5)Footnote 5. Forman v. Mount Sinai Medical Ctr., 128 F.R.D. 591, 605-606 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. A.B.A., Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-104; A.B.A., Model Rules of Professional Conduct 4.2.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Miano v. AC&R Advertising, Inc., 148 F.R.D. 68, 82 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; A.B.A., Model Rules of Professional Conduct 8.4(a) and comment.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 728, n.14, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986) (citing A.B.A., Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-7-EC 7-9; A.B.A., Model Rules of Professional Conduct 1.2(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fed. R. Evid. 408; see also Fed. R. Evid. 409.

(n10)Footnote 10. Fed. R. Evid. 408.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Pierce v. F.R. Tripler & Co., 955 F.2d 820, 827 (2d Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.05

§ 49.05 CHECKLIST: Preparing for Settlement Discussions

As plaintiff's counsel, taking the following steps and determining a settlement strategy may significantly increase the amount of damage exposure. As defendant's counsel, the amount of damage exposure may be significantly reduced:

- ☐ Research the following prior to any settlement discussions:
  - ☐ Issues in controversy.
  - ☐ Facts surrounding issues in controversy.
  - ☐ Law applicable to facts and issues in controversy.
  - ☐ Client's objectives in initiating or defending against litigation.
- ☐ Determine what the settlement agreement must contain to obtain the client's authority to settle the case.
- ☐ Provide client with honest assessment of:
  - ☐ Likelihood of success at trial.
  - ☐ Amount of damages likely to be awarded at trial.
  - ☐ Time and expenses likely to be incurred if case goes to trial.

- ☐ Physical and emotional toll litigation may exact on client.
- ☐ Difficulties of enforcing judgment against opposing party.
- ☐ Likelihood of an appeal by opposing party if client prevails at trial.

☐ Determine objectives of opposing party in initiating or defending against action.

☐ Determine monetary value of case by considering:

- ☐ Present economic damages suffered by plaintiff.
- ☐ Future damages reasonably certain to be incurred by plaintiff.
- ☐ Noneconomic damages incurred by plaintiff.
- ☐ Economic cost of protracted litigation.

☐ Whether plaintiff is sympathetic.

☐ Defendant's actual and apparent ability to pay.

☐ Case venue.

☐ Reputation, ability, and experience of attorneys in case.

☐ Review cases reported in jury verdict reporters with similar fact patterns to assist in determining potential monetary value of case.

☐ Counsel may wish to discuss the case discretely with attorneys experienced in the type of litigation involved to get an idea of how those attorneys would value the case; client confidences and privileged communications must be preserved.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
A Preparing for Settlement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 49.06 through 49.09

[Reserved]

§§ 49.06[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
B. Preparing for and Attending Initial Pretrial Conference and Subsequent Settlement Conferences

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.10

§ 49.10 Preparing for and Attending Initial Pretrial Conference

The court has the discretion to direct the attorneys for the parties and any unrepresented parties to attend a pretrial conference or conferences for the purpose of, among other things, facilitating settlement of the case. At any pretrial conference, the court may take appropriate action regarding settlement and the use of special procedures to assist in resolving the dispute when authorized by statute or local rule. n1

Counsel should consult the rules of the assigned judge regarding pretrial and settlement conferences.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a)(5); Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(2)(I).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.11

§ 49.11 Role of Judicial Officer in Settlement Conference

If the case is to be tried without a jury, the district judge will rarely get involved in actual settlement discussions. Occasionally, the district judge will seek the consent of all parties for direct involvement, in which event the parties have a difficult choice to make. Before giving or withholding consent, efforts should be made to determine the judge's methods of dealing with settlement negotiations, particularly when they fail. Even if the case will be tried with a jury, it can be dangerous to involve the district judge in settlement negotiations, as well as worrisome to withhold consent if requested. Many lawyers prefer a nonjudicial mediator that the parties choose.

The judge's role in the settlement process varies based on his or her temperament, style, philosophy, and the nature of the case. Examples of typical judicial activity during a settlement conference include:

- Meeting with counsel for all sides at once
- Meeting separately with counsel for each side for candid evaluation of the parties' prospects and the costs of continuing litigation
- Bringing the parties into negotiations when that appears productive
- Requiring or requesting the presence of the person who will pay, such as an insurer
- Staying proceedings or continuing the trial pending negotiations in expectation of a settlement agreement

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial Conferences

144 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
B. Preparing for and Attending Initial Pretrial Conference and Subsequent Settlement Conferences

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.12

§ 49.12 Sanctions for Failing to Obey Settlement Conference Rules or Orders

A district court judge may not force the parties to settle. n1

However, the judge may impose sanctions, including default or dismissal, for failure by a party or the party's attorney to obey pretrial conference rules and orders. n2

Sanctions may be awarded if a settlement conference participant attends the conference substantially unprepared. Parties and their counsel may also be sanctioned if they fail in their obligation to participate in good faith at the settlement conference. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersConferencesPretrial ConferencesLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Dawson v. United States, 68 F.3d 886, 896-897 (5th Cir. 1995) ; Kothe v. Smith, 771 F.2d 667, 669 (2d Cir. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(f); see also Guillory v. Domtar Industries Inc., 95 F.3d 1320 (5th Cir. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
B. Preparing for and Attending Initial Pretrial Conference and Subsequent Settlement Conferences

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 49.13 through 49.19

[Reserved]

§§ 49.13[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.20

§ 49.20 Rule 68 Provisions Regarding Offers of Judgment

Any time more than 14 days before the date set for trial, a party defending against a claim may serve on the adverse party an offer to allow judgment to be taken against the defending party as specified in the offer. If, within 14 days after service of the offer, the adverse party serves written notice of acceptance of the offer, and either party files the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service, the clerk must then enter judgment. n1

However, if the adverse party does not accept the offer, and the judgment finally obtained by the adverse party is less favorable than the offer, the offeree must pay the costs incurred by the defending party after making the offer. n2 The primary purpose of the offer of judgment rule is to promote settlements and avoid protracted litigation--an offer that is accepted terminates the case. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d); see also Bogan v. City of Boston, 489 F.3d 417, 430-431 (1st Cir. 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Pastor v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 487 F.3d 1042, 1043 (7th Cir. 2007) .

147 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.21

§ 49.21 Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs

Rule 68 offers of judgment serve as cost-shifting tools designed to encourage settlement by forcing a plaintiff to weigh the risk of incurring post-offer costs and fees even if the plaintiff is successful on the claim. n1

Normally, a prevailing plaintiff is allowed to recover costs as a matter of course. n2

Rule 68 varies this general rule by providing that if the judgment or settlement ultimately obtained by the plaintiff is less than the Rule 68 offer, the plaintiff:

- Cannot recover costs from the date the offer was made to the end of suit n3
- Must pay costs incurred by the defendant after the rejected offer was made n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 352 , & n.8, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) (citing Moore's).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 8-9, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 352, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.22

§ 49.22 Types of Costs Contemplated by Rule 68

As used in Rule 68, the term costs refers to all costs properly awardable in an action under the relevant substantive statute or other authority. In addition, absent congressional expressions to the contrary, where the underlying statute defines costs to include attorney's fees, those fees must be included as costs for purposes of the cost-shifting provisions of Rule 68. Accordingly, plaintiffs in such actions cannot recover attorney's fees for post-offer services after rejecting a Rule 68 offer that is more favorable than the ultimate verdict at trial. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 6, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.23

§ 49.23 Offer of Judgment Does Not Need to Refer to Costs

Lump sum offers of judgment are permissible. It is immaterial whether the offer of judgment recites that costs are included, whether it specifies the amount the defendant is allowing for costs, or whether it refers to costs at all. As long as the offer does not implicitly or explicitly provide that it does not include costs, it is a valid Rule 68 offer of judgment. If the offer does not state that costs are included, and an amount for costs is not specified, the court will be obliged by the terms of Rule 68 to include in its judgment an additional amount sufficient to cover costs. If an offer recites that costs are included, or specifies an amount for costs, its acceptance prohibits an additional claim for costs. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 7-9, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.24

§ 49.24 Judgment for Plaintiff Required

The cost-shifting penalty of Rule 68 n1 applies only if the judgment obtained is less favorable to the plaintiff than the offer of judgment made by the defendant. n2 This includes judgments obtained through summary judgment as well as at trial. n3

If judgment is awarded in favor of the defendant, Rule 68 does not apply. n4

Courts are split as to whether Rule 68 applies to cases that end in settlement and a stipulated dismissal. n5

Accordingly, attorneys representing parties to a stipulated dismissal should insist on a clear written agreement on this subject.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 49.21.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. EEOC, 691 F.2d 438, 442 (9th Cir. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 354, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Compare Johnston v. Penrod Drilling Co., 803 F.2d 867, 870 (5th Cir. 1986) (in case involving joint offer by two defendants followed by settlement with one and judgment against the other, Rule 68's reference to "the judgment finally obtained" does not permit consideration of amount received in settlement); Good Timez v. Phoenix Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 754 F. Supp. 459, 462-463 (D.V.I. 1991) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 68 not applicable to action settled without trial); Hutchison v. Wells, 719 F. Supp. 1435, 1442-1444 (S.D. Ind. 1989) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 68 not applicable to action settled without trial); EEOC v. Hamilton Standard Div., 637 F. Supp. 1155, 1158 (D. Conn. 1986) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 68 not applicable to settlement and stipulated dismissal) with People v. Operation Rescue Nat'l, 80 F.3d 64, 72 (2d. Cir. 1996) (noting split of authority without deciding the issue); Lang v. Gates, 36 F.3d 73, 75-77 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied sub nom., Yagman & Yagman v. Gates, 513 U.S. 1017 (1994) (failure to apply Fed. R. Civ. P. 68 to settlements would contradict intent of rule); Alcan Elec. & Eng'g Co. v. United States, 27 Fed. Cl. 327, 328-329 (1992) (holding Court of Federal Claims Rule 68, identical in relevant respects to Federal Rule 68, applicable to judgments entered upon stipulation).

151 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.25

§ 49.25 Determining Whether Judgment Is More Favorable

The cost-shifting provisions of Rule 68 apply only where the judgment recovered by the plaintiff is not more favorable than the defendant's offer of judgment. n1

In determining whether a judgment was less favorable than the offer, courts consider all relief awarded, n2 including:

- Monetary recovery, including punitive and compensatory damages and monetary awards such as back pay n3

- Pre-offer costs n4

When non-monetary relief is included in determining whether the judgment was less favorable than an offer, valuation of the non-monetary relief may be problematic. n5

A plaintiff's rejection of a Rule 68 offer that would provide the plaintiff with all the relief he or she could possibly recover at trial, under the condition that the judgment be kept confidential, does not justify the district court's entry of a judgment in favor of the defendant. n6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Garrity v. Sununu, 752 F.2d 727 (1st Cir. 1984) ; Domanski v. Funtime, Inc., 149 F.R.D. 556, 557-558 (N.D. Ohio 1993) ; Lish v. Harper's Magazine Found., 148 F.R.D. 516, 520 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) ; Chestnut Hill Gulf, Inc. v. Cumberland Farms, Inc., 749 F. Supp. 331, 333 (D. Mass. 1990) , aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 940 F.2d 744 (1st Cir. 1991); Association for Retarded Citizens v. Olson, 561 F. Supp. 495,

498-499 (D.N.D. 1982) , aff'd as modified on other grounds, 713 F.2d 1384 (8th Cir. 1983) ; but see Real v. Continental Group, Inc., 653 F. Supp. 736, 738-739 (N.D. Cal. 1987) (because of difficulties of quantifying value of injunctive relief, "the better course is to compare monetary awards only").

(n3)Footnote 3. See Real v. Continental Group, Inc., 653 F. Supp. 736, 738-739 (N.D. Cal. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Corder v. Gates, 947 F.2d 374, 380-381 (9th Cir. 1991) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Compare BIC Leisure Prod., Inc. v. Windsurfing Int'l, Inc., 850 F. Supp. 224, 235 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) with Lish v. Harper's Magazine Found., 148 F.R.D. 516, 520 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See McCauley v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 402 F.3d 340, 341-342 (2d Cir. 2005) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.26

§ 49.26 Only Defending Parties May Make Offers of Judgment

Only defending parties may make Rule 68 offers of judgment. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not provide a similar procedure for settlement demands by claimants. n1

If a counterclaim for money damages is asserted against a plaintiff, the plaintiff may make a Rule 68 offer as to that claim, in view of the fact that the plaintiff is the defending party as to the counterclaim. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. August, 450 U.S. 346, 350, 101 S. Ct. 1146, 67 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Simon v. Intercontinental Transp. (ICT) B.V., 882 F.2d 1435, 1439 (9th Cir. 1989) .

153 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.27

§ 49.27 Deadline for Making Offer of Judgment

A Rule 68 offer of judgment must be made at least 14 days before the date set for trial. n1

In computing the 14-day period, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays are counted. n2

In bifurcated trials where liability is established first, the party found liable may make a Rule 68 offer within a reasonable time not less than 14 days before the date set for a hearing to determine the extent of liability. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(c).

154 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.28

§ 49.28 Offer of Judgment Must Be in Writing and Served on All Parties

Rule 68 requires the defendants to serve the offer on adverse parties, and thus only a written offer of judgment satisfies Rule 68. n1

The party making the offer of judgment must serve the offer on all parties by delivering a copy to each party's attorney (or if a party is not represented by counsel, by delivering a copy to the party). n2

Offers of judgment are not filed with the court unless and until they are accepted. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of OffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Clark v. Sims, 28 F.3d 420, 424 (4th Cir. 1994) ; Grosvenor v. Brienen, 801 F.2d 944, 948-949 (7th Cir. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(a), (b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a); Kason v. Amphenol Corp., 132 F.R.D. 197 (N.D. Ill. 1990) ; § 49.35.

155 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.29

§ 49.29 Subsequent Offers of Judgment

The fact that a defending party makes a Rule 68 offer of judgment that the plaintiff does not accept does not preclude a subsequent offer of judgment, provided the subsequent offer meets the requirements of Rule 68. n1

In general, courts have held that Rule 68 offers of judgment may not be revoked during the 14 day period set by the Rule. n2 However, some courts permit revocation or rescission of an offer of judgment before acceptance for good cause shown. Examples might include fraudulent conduct by the offeree, n3 or an obvious mistake promptly communicated to the offeree. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentRejectionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ramming v. Natural Gas Pipeline Co., 390 F.3d 366, 370 (6th Cir. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Colonial Penn Ins. Co. v. Coil, 887 F.2d 1236, 1240 (4th Cir. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Cesar v. Rubie's Costume Co., 219 F.R.D. 257, 259 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) .

156 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.30

§ 49.30 Effect of Ambiguity in Offer of Judgment

[1] Ordinary Contract Principles Govern

Offers of judgment are construed in accordance with ordinary contract principles. n1

There must be a "meeting of the minds" and a clear understanding of the terms of the offer for there to be a valid acceptance. In view of the fact that a Rule 68 offer of judgment has significant implications whether it is accepted or rejected, the plaintiff must have a clear understanding of the terms of an offer to be able to make an informed decision whether to accept it. n2

[2] Ambiguities May Invalidate Offer

Ambiguities in an offer may invalidate the offer, or may be construed against the offeror. n3

A common ambiguity in offers of judgment is tracking the language of Rule 68 by using the term with costs or with costs and attorney fees. Use of such terminology may result in an ambiguity as to whether the offer is in addition to or includes costs. n4

The safer practice is to refrain from using such terms, unless they are accompanied by clarifying language.

[3] Seeking Clarification of Offer of Judgment

A plaintiff may seek clarification of an ambiguous offer of judgment. n5

Initially, the plaintiff should seek clarification from the offering defendant. If clarification is not forthcoming, the plaintiff should consider filing a motion to strike the offer of judgment, n6 and should contemporaneously seek a tolling of the period within which an acceptance would otherwise be required.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil

ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentRejectionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Goodheart Clothing Co. v. Laura Goodman Enters., 962 F.2d 268, 272 (2d Cir. 1992) ; Radecki v. Amoco Oil Co., 858 F.2d 397, 400 (8th Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Whitaker v. Associated Credit Servs., Inc., 946 F.2d 1222, 1226 (6th Cir. 1991) ; Radecki v. Amoco Oil Co., 858 F.2d 397, 400 (8th Cir. 1988) ; Johnson v. University College, 706 F.2d 1205, 1209 (11th Cir.) , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 994 (1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Holland v. Roeser, 37 F.3d 501, 504 (9th Cir. 1994) ; Arkla Energy Resources v. Roye Realty & Dev., Inc., 9 F.3d 855, 867 (10th Cir. 1993) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Robins v. Scholastic Book Fairs, 928 F. Supp. 1027, 1031 (D. Or. 1996) , aff'd, 1997 U.S. App. Lexis 13964 (9th Cir. June 12, 1997) ; Kyreakakis v. Paternoster, 732 F. Supp. 1287, 1292 (D.N.J. 1990) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Radecki v. Amoco Oil Co., 858 F.2d 397, 402 (8th Cir. 1988) ; Boorstein v. City of New York, 107 F.R.D. 31, 35 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) ; Cf. Shorter v. Valley Bank & Trust Co., 678 F. Supp. 714, 719-720 (N.D. Ill. 1988) (court refused to look to extrinsic evidence on intent of offeror when language of offer had clear enough legal meaning).

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 49.31.

157 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.31

§ 49.31 Motion to Strike Offer of Judgment

[1] Appropriate for Procedural or Substantive Defects

Because an offer of judgment has a binding effect when refused as well as when accepted, defective offers should be stricken to protect the ability of parties to make reasonable decisions regarding the conduct of litigation. n1

A plaintiff may move to strike a Rule 68 offer of judgment for:

- Procedural defects n2
- Substantive defects n3

[2] Deadline for Filing Motion

The court may consider a motion to strike filed after the expiration of the 14-day period for accepting the offer. Indeed, the validity and effect of a Rule 68 offer is usually not determined until the close of the lawsuit, and the filing of the attorney's fee applications. n4

However, the better practice is to file the motion to strike within the 14-day period for accepting the offer, and to contemporaneously seek a tolling of the period within which an acceptance would otherwise be required. Otherwise, the moving party runs the risk that the offer of judgment will be enforced.

[3] Procedure for Filing Motion to Strike Offer of Judgment

A party seeking an order to strike an offer of judgment must make a formal motion to the court. Likewise, the opposing party may file opposing papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentRejectionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of

JudgmentWithdrawalsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Boorstein v. City of New York, 107 F.R.D. 31, 34 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Klawes v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 572 F. Supp. 116, 118 (E.D. Wis. 1983) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Boorstein v. City of New York, 107 F.R.D. 31, 35 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Boorstein v. City of New York, 107 F.R.D. 31, 34 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) .

158 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.32

§ 49.32 Rejected Offer of Judgment Inadmissible as Evidence at Trial

An unaccepted Rule 68 offer of judgment is not admissible as evidence at trial, except in a proceeding to determine costs. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentCounteroffersCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentRejectionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentWithdrawalsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b).

159 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.33

§ 49.33 Deadline for Accepting Offer of Judgment

A notice of acceptance of a Rule 68 offer of judgment must be served on the offering party within 14 days of service of the offer itself. If the offer of judgment is not accepted within that time period, the offer is deemed withdrawn. n1

If the offer of judgment is served to the court clerk, or by mail or by electronic or other means consented to in writing, the deadline for accepting the offer is extended by three additional days. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 6(d).

160 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.34

§ 49.34 Acceptance Must Be Written and Unconditional

An effective notice of acceptance must be in writing. n1

To be effective, the acceptance must be unconditional. A partial acceptance of an offer of judgment is invalid. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentTime Limitations

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Whitcher v. Town of Matthews, 136 F.R.D. 582, 584 (W.D.N.C. 1991) ; Freeman v. B&B Assocs., 790 F.2d 145, 152 (D.C. Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.35

§ 49.35 Filing Offer and Acceptance

After a claimant timely accepts a valid offer either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance plus proof of service of the offer and notice of acceptance, and then the clerk is required to enter judgment. n1 Therefore, Rule 68 judgments are self-executing, and once the parties agree on the terms of a Rule 68 judgment, the court has no discretion to withhold its entry or otherwise to modify the terms of the agreement. The clerks function in entering judgment on an accepted offer under the Rule is clerical, and it is an abuse of discretion for the district court to do anything but enter judgment once an offer has been accepted. n2 For the parties, acceptance of a Rule 68 offer and entry of judgment has the effect of cutting off the right to appeal from an earlier action by the district court. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentAcceptancesCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentMaking of Offers

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Mallory v. Eyrich, 922 F.2d 1273, 1279 (6th Cir. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Dugas v. Trans Union Corp., 99 F.3d 724, 728-729 (5th Cir. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
C. Making or Responding to Offer of Judgment

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 49.36 through 49.39

[Reserved]

§§ 49.36[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.40

§ 49.40 Types of Settlements

[1] Lump Sum Payment

[1.--1] Description of Lump Sum Settlement

The most common type of settlement is a lump sum settlement. In lump sum settlements, the defendant agrees to pay the plaintiff with a single check or cash payment, in consideration of which the plaintiff executes a release of the plaintiff's claims. n1

[1.--2] Advantages of Lump Sum Settlement

The major advantage of lump sum settlements is their ease of execution, in that:

- The agreement may be quickly performed by the parties with an exchange of documents
- The court need not monitor performance of the agreement
- Once completed, the parties need not have further contact

[1.--3] Disadvantages of Lump Sum Settlement

The disadvantages of lump sum settlements include the following:

- The defendant is typically required to have immediate access to the necessary monetary amount
- The plaintiff may be required to manage large sums of money with little or no expertise
- The plaintiff may incur tax liability on the lump sum settlement amount n2

[2] Structured Settlement

[2.--1] Description of Structured Settlement

In a structured settlement, the claimant typically receives periodic payments over a period of time, rather than a lump sum, in return for a release of the plaintiff's claims. To provide a source of funds from which to satisfy the defendant's obligation to the plaintiff, the defendant or its liability carrier typically purchases an annuity contract from a life insurance company with the plaintiff as the beneficiary. n3

[2.--2] Advantages of Structured Settlement

Advantages of structured settlements include:

- Allowing the plaintiff a larger total settlement than might be available in a lump sum settlement, while requiring less cash outlay from the defendant than is typically required with a lump sum payment
- Providing the plaintiff with a guaranteed source of income over a period of time, thus relieving the plaintiff of the need to perform financial planning
- If properly implemented, structured settlement payments may result in no (or diminished) tax liability

[2.--3] Disadvantages of Structured Settlement

Disadvantages of structured settlements include:

- The plaintiff's inability to immediately access the total settlement amount on settlement
- The fixed nature of the periodic payments, thus precluding adjustments for inflation or cost of living
- The importance of ensuring the financial stability of any life insurance carrier providing an annuity
- Problems with valuation of structured settlements for purposes of computing attorney's fees

[3] Partial Settlement

A partial settlement is an agreement settling some but not all claims, or an agreement settling claims against some but not all defendants. Once a judgment is entered on the settled claims or defendants, the plaintiff continues the suit as to remaining claims or defendants. n4

Partial settlements present important issues for both settling and nonsettling parties. For example, the plaintiff's counsel must ensure that the agreement releases only those claims or defendants to be discharged. Counsel for the defendants must ensure that the settlement represents their clients' entire responsibility for the plaintiff's claims, particularly when the law provides, in the event the plaintiff prevails in the action, that nonsettling defendants are entitled to a set off from settling defendants.

[4] Sliding Scale Settlement

A sliding scale settlement, or "Mary Carter" agreement, is a partial settlement of amulti-party case in which the liability of a settling defendant is limited in comparison to that of nonsettling defendants. These agreements take their name from the case of Booth v. Mary Carter Paint Co., 202 So.2d 8 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1967) . A typical Mary Carter agreement usually has the following features: n5

- Secrecy

- Contracting defendant remains in the lawsuit
- Contracting defendant guarantees plaintiff a certain monetary recovery
- Contracting defendant's liability is decreased in direct proportion to the increase in the non-settling defendants' liability

The key characteristic of a Mary Carter agreement is its secrecy from the nonsettling defendants. If not disclosed to all parties, such settlements may create unfair prejudice to the nonsettling defendants, possibly denying their right to a fair trial, and requiring a new trial. n6

Counsel for the defendants in multi-defendant cases should consider making a discovery motion or request for disclosure of any agreements between the plaintiff and other defendants. In the alternative, counsel may seek a court order imposing a continuing duty on the plaintiff's counsel to promptly disclose all such agreements without the necessity of a motion or discovery request.

[5] Consent Decree

A consent decree usually is a settlement containing an injunction. n7 Unlike typical settlements, the court in a consent decree exercises continuing authority and supervision to ensure that the parties fulfill their express obligations under the decree. n8

The relief provided by a consent decree may properly be broader than what a court could have awarded after trial. A consent decree is valid as long as the agreement resolves a dispute within the court's subject matter jurisdiction, comes within the general scope of the case, and furthers objectives of the law. n9

If a consent judgment resolves a suit affecting the public interest, the court must be satisfied of the fairness of the settlement. n10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsSettlement AgreementsTortsProcedureSettlementsJudicial Approval

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Blumel v. Mylander, 165 F.R.D. 113, 116 (M.D. Fla 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See 26 U.S.C. § 61(a) (gross income means all income from whatever source derived); 26 U.S.C. § 104(a)(2) (damages received in suit or settlement for personal injuries or sickness excludable from taxable income).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Legal Economic Evaluations, Inc. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 39 F.3d 951, 953 (9th Cir. 1994) , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1044 (1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Bank of New York v. Amoco Oil Co., 35 F.3d 643, 649 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Hoops v. Watermelon City Trucking, Inc., 846 F.2d 637, 640 (10th Cir. 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Minpeco, S.A. v. Hunt, 127 F.R.D. 460, 463 (S.D.N.Y. 1989) .

(n7)Footnote 7. In re Masters Mates & Pilots Pension Plan & IRAP Litig., 957 F.2d 1020, 1025 (2d Cir. 1992) ; Hook v. Arizona, 972 F.2d 1012, 1014 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Hook v. Arizona, 972 F.2d 1012, 1014 (9th Cir. 1992) ; EEOC v. Local 580, Int'l Ass'n of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Ironworkers, 925 F.2d 588, 593 (2d Cir. 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Local Number 93 Int'l Assoc. of Firefighters v. City of Cleveland, 478 U.S. 501, 525, 106 S. Ct. 3063, 92 L. Ed. 2d 405 (1986) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Janus Films, Inc. v. Miller, 801 F.2d 578, 582 (2d Cir. 1986) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.41

§ 49.41 Common Settlement Agreement Provisions

[1] Description of Parties

All settlement agreements should contain a section or paragraph naming and describing the parties to the agreement, and naming their counsel. In addition, it is wise to include a clause binding the parties successors, assigns, employees, and representatives.

If any party acts in a representative capacity, the clause describing that party should delineate the capacity in which the representative serves. Similarly, in actions in which a corporate party's representative is signing the agreement on the corporation's behalf, the agreement should describe the corporate representative's authority to bind the corporation.

[2] Recitation of Disputed Matters

The settlement agreement should generally include a recitation of the disputed matters in the case, together with enough facts to clarify the nature of those claims. The agreement should also include the case name, court, and docket number for any litigation settled by the agreement.

[3] Recitation of Parties' Obligations

Settlement agreements should detail the obligations assumed by each party in settlement of disputed claims. For instance, in a lump sum settlement, n1 the agreement might recite that the defendant agrees to give the plaintiff a check or cash in a specified amount, in return for which the plaintiff agrees to execute a release of the plaintiff's claims.

Attempt to anticipate all possible issues regarding settlement terms, and avoid ambiguity. Post-settlement litigation is common.

Counsel for the plaintiff should ensure that the settlement agreement specifies a deadline within which the defendant must make its settlement payments. If a settlement agreement does not provide any specific time for payment, the law implies a requirement to pay within a reasonable time. n2

[4] Release Provisions

The settlement agreement should include a list of the rights, claims, interests, or obligations released as part of the settlement. In addition, the agreement should specify those claims or obligations, if any, not included in the settlement.

While counsel for the defendant may wish to include a release using broad, generallanguage, counsel for the plaintiff should exercise caution in agreeing to such general language. For example:

- Release of "any and all claims," if not limited to the matters at issue in the particular action, may bar later actions related to the same conduct n3

- A party may express an intent to waive attorney's fees by employing broad release language, regardless of whether the release explicitly mentions attorney's fees n4

[5] Other Settlement Provisions

Other provisions typically contained in settlement agreements include:

- Disclaimer by the defendant providing that the settlement is not an admission of the defendant's guilt or liability n5

- Confidentiality clause precluding the parties from divulging all or part of the settlement terms n6

- Choice of law clause specifying the law governing construction of the settlement agreement n7

- Clause providing that the settlement agreement represents the final agreement between the parties, thus precluding introduction of extrinsic evidence to contradict the terms of the agreement n8

- Agreement that the court retains jurisdiction of the case for purposes of enforcement of the settlement; n9 alternatively, restoration of the case if specific settlement terms are not met

- Attorney's fee clause providing that the prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees in any action to enforce or construe the settlement agreement n10

[6] Signatures

It is wise to have the attorneys as well as the parties themselves execute the settlement agreement. Securing the parties' signatures may forestall later arguments that the settlement was negotiated without a particular party's consent or authority.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsSettlement Agreements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See § 49.40[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. Janneh v. GAF Corp., 887 F.2d 432, 436 (2d Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 865 (1990) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Union Pacific R.R. Co. v. Mullen, 996 F.2d 348, 351 (8th Cir. 1992) ; Sheehan v.

Atlanta Int'l Ins. Co., 812 F.2d 465 (9th Cir. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Erdman v. Chchise Couty, 926 F.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1991) ; Brown v. General Motors Corp., 722 F.2d 1009, 1012 (2d Cir. 1983) ; but see Valley Disposal, Inc. v. Central Vt. Solid Waste Management Dist., 71 F.3d 1053, 1058 (2d Cir. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Huertas v. East River Hous. Corp., 992 F.2d 1263, 1268 (2d Cir. 1993) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Doe v. City of New York, 15 F.3d 264, 265 (2d Cir. 1994) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Nacional Financiera, S.N.C. v. Americom Airlease, Inc., 803 F. Supp. 886, 892 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ; but see Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 481-482, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1985) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Health-Chem Corp. v. Baker, 915 F.2d 805, 811 (2d Cir. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 381-382, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Torres v. Costich, 935 F. Supp. 232, 236 (W.D.N.Y. 1996) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.42

§ 49.42 Putting Oral Settlement on Record

Lawsuits may be settled by oral contracts, which are enforceable under federal law. n1

To avoid disputes concerning the existence or terms of an oral settlement agreement, counsel may request or the judge may require that the agreement be "put on the record" by stating the terms of the settlement in open court where they are transcribed by a court reporter, or entered into the minutes of the court. The court may then dismiss the case, or may indicate that it will wait to dismiss the case until the parties submit written documents memorializing the settlement and requesting dismissal. n2 The transcript may be used as the written agreement, and signed by the parties and counsel.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsOffers of JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsIncorporation in Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Moore v. Beaufort County, 936 F.2d 159, 163 (4th Cir. 1991) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Janus Films, Inc. v. Miller, 801 F.2d 578, 583 (2d Cir. 1986) .

166 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.43

§ 49.43 Filing Stipulation of Dismissal--Action Not Terminated Until Stipulation of Dismissal Filed With Court

Settlements are usually implemented by filing with the court a stipulation of dismissal signed by the settling parties. n1

A stipulation of dismissal is not self-executing. Rather, until the stipulation is filed with the court, the action is not terminated. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsIncorporation in Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Camacho v. Mancuso, 53 F.3d 48, 51 (4th Cir. 1995) ; Morris v. City of Hobart, 39 F.3d 1105, 1109 (10th Cir. 1994) ; Orsini v. Kugel, 9 F.3d 1042, 1045 (2d Cir. 1993) ; Broadcast Music, Inc. v. M.T.S. Enterprises, Inc., 811 F.2d 278, 279 280 n.1 (5th Cir. 1987) ; Eitel v. McCool, 782 F.2d 1470, 1472 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1986) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.44

§ 49.44 Court Approval of Settlement

Typically, settlement rests solely in the discretion of the parties. However, some types of settlements require judicial approval before suit may be dismissed. Court approval of settlements is required in the following actions:

- Class actions n1
- Shareholder derivative suits n2
- Consent decrees n3

Counsel should consult the local district court rules, or state law in a diversity case, for any other types of settlements requiring court approval.

If court approval of the settlement is required, the court typically schedules a hearing, and notifies persons such as class members affected by the proposed settlement of their right to object to its terms at the hearing. After the hearing, the court must decide whether to accept the proposed settlement. The rationale for requiring court approval is to ensure the settlement is fair to all, though the standard for court approval varies depending on the type of action involved. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsIncorporation in Judgments

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. County of Suffolk v. Stone & Webster Engineering Corp., 106 F.3d 1112, 1117 (2d Cir. 1997) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Weinberger v. Kendrick, 698 F.2d 61, 73 (2d Cir. 1982) ; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23, 23.1 (class actions).

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.45

§ 49.45 CHECKLIST: Drafting Settlement Agreement

The following provisions should be considered for inclusion in all settlement agreements:

- ☐ Names and description of parties to agreement.
- ☐ Clause binding parties' successors, assigns, employees, and representatives.
- ☐ For parties acting in representative capacity, description of capacity in which representative serves.
- ☐ For corporate party, description of corporate representative's authority to bind corporation.
- ☐ Recitation of disputed matters in the case, including facts necessary to clarify nature of parties' claims, as well as case name, court, and docket number for litigation settled by agreement.
- ☐ Obligations assumed by each party in settlement of disputed claims, including a time frame within which obligations must be performed.
- ☐ List of rights, claims, interests, or obligations released as part of settlement.
- ☐ Specific list of claims or obligations, if any, not included in settlement.
- ☐ Other provisions may include:
  - ☐ Defendant's disclaimer of guilt or liability.

☐ Confidentiality clause precluding parties from divulging all or part of settlement terms.

☐ Choice of law clause specifying law governing settlement agreement.

☐ Clause providing settlement agreement represents final agreement between parties.

☐ Agreement allowing court to retain jurisdiction of case for purposes of enforcement of settlement, or alternatively, restoration of case if settlement terms are not met.

☐ Clause allowing attorney's fees to prevailing party in action to enforce or construe settlement agreement.

☐ Signature lines for attorneys and parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsReleases From LiabilityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsIncorporation in JudgmentsContracts LawTypes of ContractsSettlement Agreements

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
D. Drafting Settlement Agreements

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 49.46 through 49.59

[Reserved]

§§ 49.46[Reserved]

170 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
E. Enforcing Settlement Agreement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.60

§ 49.60 Settlement Agreement Is Enforceable Contract

A voluntary settlement agreement is a contract that is binding, and its enforceability is determined under state law. n1

On motion, a district court has the power to summarily enforce a settlement agreement in a case still pending before it. n2

Alternatively, an aggrieved party may bring a separate action for breach of a settlement agreement. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementBreach of Contract ActionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementContemptContracts LawTypes of ContractsSettlement Agreements

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Botefur v. City of Eagle Point, 7 F.3d 152, 156 (9th Cir. 1993) ; Davis v. Huskipower Outdoor Equip. Corp., 936 F.2d 193, 196 (5th Cir. 1991) ; see, e.g., Shlensky v. Dorsey, 574 F.2d 131, 144 (3d Cir. 1978) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 49.61[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 381-382, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) ; See § 49.61[2][b].

171 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
E. Enforcing Settlement Agreement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.61

§ 49.61 Court Must Have Jurisdiction Before It May Enforce Settlement Agreement

[1] Enforcement While Case Still Pending Before Court

A district court has authority to summarily enforce a settlement agreement in a case still pending before it. n1

For example, the case may have been settled with respect to some but not all claims or defendants. A settlement agreement may be summarily enforced as long as the case is still pending.

[2] Post-Dismissal Enforcement of Settlement Agreement

[2.--1] Post-Dismissal Enforcement Requires Basis for Jurisdiction

Post-dismissal enforcement of a settlement agreement requires its own basis for jurisdiction. The fact that the settled action was properly in federal court is irrelevant. A federal court has post-dismissal jurisdiction to enforce a settlement agreement only if the party seeking enforcement can demonstrate either that: n2

- The court's dismissal order specifically reserves such authority n3
- The court's order incorporates the terms of the settlement n4

[2.--2] Party Seeking Enforcement May Bring Separate Action

If post-enforcement jurisdiction to enforce the settlement agreement does not exist, n5 the party seeking enforcement of the settlement agreement may bring a separate action for breach of the settlement agreement. If enforcement is sought in federal court, an independent basis for jurisdiction must be established. n6

If an independent basis for federal court jurisdiction cannot be established, enforcement may still be available in state court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementBreach of Contract ActionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementContempt

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Ozyagcilar v. Davis, 701 F.2d 306 (4th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 377, 381-382, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Confederated Tribes & Bands of Yakima Indian Nation, 898 F. Supp. 1477, 1483 (W.D. Wash. 1995) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Beckless v. Chater, 909 F. Supp. 575, 579 (N.D. Ill. 1995) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See [a], above.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hagestad v. Tragesser, 49 F.3d 1430, 1432 (9th Cir. 1995) ; Langley v. Jackson State Univ., 14 F.3d 1070, 1073 (5th Cir. 1994) ; Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 378, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994) .

172 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
E. Enforcing Settlement Agreement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.62

§ 49.62 Establishing Existence of Valid Agreement and Authority of Counsel

A party seeking to enforce a settlement agreement must establish:

- The existence of a complete, valid settlement agreement n1
- That counsel negotiating the settlement had their respective clients' actual or apparent authority to do so n2

Courts presume that an attorney of record who enters into a settlement agreement purportedly on behalf of a client has the authority to do so. A party seeking to avoid enforcement of a settlement on the basis of lack of authority must show by clear evidence that the settlement was made without the client's authority. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementBreach of Contract ActionsCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsEnforcementContemptCivil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsValidity

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See United States v. Ward Baking Co., 376 U.S. 327, 334, 84 S. Ct. 763, 11 L. Ed. 2d 743 (1964) ; Monaghan v. SZS 33 Assocs., 73 F.3d 1276, 1282-1283 (2d Cir. 1996) ; Harrop v. Western Airlines, Inc., 550 F.2d 1143, 1145 (9th Cir. 1977) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Garabedian v. Allstates Eng. Co., 811 F.2d 802, 803 (3d Cir. 1987) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Larson v. Heritage Square Associates, 952 F.2d 1533, 1537 (8th Cir. 1992) .

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
E. Enforcing Settlement Agreement

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide §§ 49.63 through 49.99

[Reserved]

§§ 49.63[Reserved]

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
F. Forms

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.100

§ 49.100 Offer of Judgment

[1] FORM

Offer of Judgment

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 68, defendant [insert name of defendant making offer] offers to allow judgment to be taken against [insert either him, her or it, as appropriate] in this action in the amount of $ [insert amount of offer], inclusive of costs and attorney's fees.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that this offer of judgment is made for the purposes specified in Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 68, and is not to be construed either as an admission that the defendant is liable in this action, or that the plaintiff has suffered any damages.

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Defendant [name of defendant]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of offer of judgment by a defendant pursuant to Rule 68. The form can be modified for use by a plaintiff to offer judgment to a defendant on a counterclaim.

Counsel should consult the court clerk in the particular district to ascertain whether the court distributes sample offer of judgment forms.

[3] Timing of Offer and Acceptance of Offer

Any time more than 14 days before the date set for trial, a party defending against a claim may serve on the adverse party an offer to allow judgment to be taken against the defending party as specified in the offer. If, within 14 days after the service of the offer, the adverse party serves written notice that the offer is accepted, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service, and the clerk must enter judgment accordingly. n1

[4] Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs

Normally, a prevailing plaintiff is allowed to recover costs as a matter of course. n2 Rule 68 varies this general rule by providing that if the judgment or settlement ultimately obtained by the plaintiff is less than the Rule 68 offer, the plaintiff: n3

- Cannot recover costs from the date the offer was made to the end of suit
- Must pay costs incurred by the defendant after the rejected offer was made

[5] Practice Tip: Offer of Judgment Should Affirmatively State That Costs Are Included

If the offer of judgment does not state that costs are included, and an amount for costs is not specified, the court will be obliged by the terms of Rule 68 to include in its judgment an additional amount sufficient to cover costs. n4

If an offer recites that costs are included, or specifies an amount for costs, its acceptance prohibits an additional claim for costs. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a); see § 49.33.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 49.21.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 49.23.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 49.23.

175 of 175 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 49 Settlements
F. Forms

4-49 Federal Litigation Guide § 49.101

§ 49.101 Acceptance of Offer of Judgment

[1] FORM

Acceptance of Offer of Judgment

[Insert caption of action and title of document pursuant to local district court rule requirements]

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 68, plaintiff [insert name of plaintiff accepting offer] accepts the offer of judgment of defendant [insert name of defendant] dated [date of offer], allowing plaintiff to take judgment in this action in the amount of $ [insert amount of offer] [add one of the following: "inclusive of costs" or "together with costs accrued up to the making of said offer"].

[Date]

[Signature of attorney]

[Typed or printed name of attorney]

[Firm name, if applicable]

Attorney for Plaintiff [name of plaintiff]

[Attorney's or firm's address, e-mail address, telephone number, and any other identifying information required by local district court rules]

TO: [Name of opposing counsel], Attorney for [name of party]

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of acceptance of offer of judgment by a plaintiff pursuant to Rule 68. The form can be modified for use by a defendant to accept an offer of judgment made by a plaintiff on a counterclaim.

[3] Timing of Offer and Acceptance of Offer

Any time more than 14 days before the date set for trial, a party defending against a claim may serve on the adverse party an offer to allow judgment to be taken against the defending party as specified in the offer. If, within 14 days after the service of the offer, the adverse party serves written notice that the offer is accepted, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service, and the clerk must enter judgment accordingly. n1

[4] Rule 68 Varies General Rule Permitting Prevailing Plaintiff to Recover Costs

Normally, a prevailing plaintiff is allowed to recover costs as a matter of course. n2 Rule 68 varies this general rule by providing that if the judgment or settlement ultimately obtained by the plaintiff is less than the Rule 68 offer, the plaintiff: n3

- Cannot recover costs from the date the offer was made to the end of suit
- Must pay costs incurred by the defendant after the rejected offer was made

[5] Recovering Costs

If the offer of judgment does not state that costs are included, and an amount for costs is not specified, the court will be obliged by the terms of Rule 68 to include in its judgment an additional amount sufficient to cover costs. n4

If an offer recites that costs are included, or specifies an amount for costs, its acceptance prohibits an additional claim for costs. n5

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68(a); see § 49.20.

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 49.21.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 49.23.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 49.23.

1 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide 50.syn

§ 50.syn Synopsis to Chapter 50: Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

§ 50.01 Understanding the Purpose of Alternative Dispute Resolution

§ 50.02 ADR Act of 1998 Requires Every District Court to Implement an ADR Program

§ 50.03 Using Court-Sponsored Mediation to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.04 Evaluating the Role of the Mediator

§ 50.05 Determining Who Should Attend Mediation Session

§ 50.06 Permitting Client to Vent at Mediation Session

§ 50.07 Speaking Candidly With the Mediator

§ 50.08 Seeking Resolution Through Creative Means

§ 50.09 Using Early Neutral Evaluation to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.10 Timing of Participation in Early Neutral Evaluation

§ 50.11 Preparing for Participation in Early Neutral Evaluation

§ 50.12 Participating in the Early Neutral Evaluation Session

§ 50.13 Maintaining Confidentiality of Early Neutral Evaluation Proceedings

§ 50.14 Using Special Masters to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.15 Determining Who May Serve as Special Master

§ 50.16 Mediating Disputes With Aid of Special Master

§ 50.17 Advantages of Using Special Masters

§ 50.18 Using Court-Annexed Arbitration to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.19 Evaluating Validity of Court-Annexed Arbitration

§ 50.20 Understanding Basic Characteristics of Court-Annexed Arbitration

§ 50.21 Using The Mini-Trial to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.22 Negotiating an Agreement to Participate in a Mini-Trial

§ 50.23 Determining Scope of Discovery Before Mini-Trial

§ 50.24 Determining Length of Mini-Trial

§ 50.25 Determining Who Should Serve as Mini-Trial Panelists

§ 50.26 Maintaining Confidentiality of Mini-Trial Proceedings

§ 50.27 Reaching Settlement After the Mini-Trial
[1] Determining When Settlement Negotiations Should Occur
[2] Determining How the Settlement Process Should Be Structured

§ 50.28 Choosing the Mini-Trial Judge

§ 50.29 Evaluating the Case for Mini-Trial Potential

§ 50.30 Using Mini-Trials in Specific Types of Cases
[1] Using Mini-Trials in Cases With Few Parties
[2] Using Mini-Trials in Cases Where the Parties Have an Ongoing Business Relationship
[3] Using Mini-Trials to Resolve Common Commercial Disputes

§ 50.31 Using Variations on the Mini-Trial to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.32 Using the Summary Jury Trial to Facilitate Settlement

§ 50.33 Comparing the Summary Jury Trial to the Mini-Trial

§ 50.34 Understanding Summary Jury Trial Procedures

§ 50.35 Determining Who Must Attend Summary Jury Trial

§ 50.36 Understanding the Role of the Jury in Summary Jury Trials

§ 50.37 Evaluating a Case's Potential for Summary Jury Trial

§ 50.38 Considering Possible Reasons Not to Engage in Alternative Dispute Resolution

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Court annexed alternative dispute resolution programs have become more prevalent since the passage of the Civil Justice Reform Act in 1990. Indeed, the Alternative Dispute Resolution Act of 1998 requires every federal district court to devise and implement an ADR program to be used in civil actions, including adversary proceedings in bankruptcy. Each district court will administer its own ADR program. As a result of the ADR Act of 1998, most federal civil lawsuits will be referred to some type of ADR process during the litigation. This chapter provides an introduction to the various ADR procedures currently being used in the federal court system, including the following:

- Court-sponsored mediation
- Early neutral evaluation
- Special masters to facilitate settlement
- Court-annexed arbitration
- Mini-trial
- Summary Jury Trial

3 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.01

§ 50.01 Understanding the Purpose of Alternative Dispute Resolution

The purpose of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) is to provide an efficient and economical means of resolving disputes between parties who might otherwise be involved in lengthy and expensive court proceedings.

Alternative dispute resolution has become increasingly popular in resolving controversies as litigation costs escalate, and court dockets swell. Parties often have their disputes determined before private arbitration and mediation tribunals, such as the American Arbitration Association. This type of private adjudication is favored by the courts. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrability

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See David L. Threlkeld & Co. v. Metallgesellschaft Ltd., 923 F.2d 245, 248 (2d Cir. 1991) .

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

4 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.02

§ 50.02 ADR Act of 1998 Requires Every District Court to Implement an ADR Program

Court annexed alternative dispute resolution has become more prevalent since the passage of the Civil Justice Reform Act in 1990. n1 The Act specifically encourages the reference of appropriate cases to alternative dispute resolution programs, such as mediation, mini-trial, and summary jury trial. n2

Thus, district courts around the country have adopted various court annexed alternative dispute resolution programs in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Justice Reform Act.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Act of 1998 requires every federal district court to devise and implement an ADR program to be used in civil actions, including adversary proceedings in bankruptcy. n3 Each district court will administer its own ADR program. As a result of the ADR Act of 1998, most federal civil lawsuits will be referred to some type of ADR process during the litigation. At a minimum, every federal litigator will need to be familiar with the local district court ADR processes and rules.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury Trials

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 471-482.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 473(a)(6)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. Alternative Dispute Resolution Act of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105-315, 112 Stat. 2993 (amending 28 U.S.C. §§ 651-658); effective 10/30/98.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

5 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.03

§ 50.03 Using Court-Sponsored Mediation to Facilitate Settlement

Mediation is a process by which an impartial person, the mediator, facilitates communication between disputing parties to promote understanding, reconciliation, and settlement. Typically, the mediator is an advocate for settlement, and uses the mediation process to help the parties fully explore any potential area of agreement. The mediator generally does not serve as a judge or arbitrator, and has no authority to render any decision on any disputed issue, or to force a settlement. Rather, the parties themselves are responsible for negotiating any resolutions to their dispute.

The proceedings during a mediation session generally are confidential and absolutely privileged. In proceedings to enforce a settlement agreement, state law governs whether and to what extent communications and conduct occurring during mediation are protected from disclosure or subsequent evidentiary use when state substantive law is the source of the rule of decision on the claim to which the proffered evidence from the mediation is relevant. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Olam v. Congress Mortgage Co., 68 F. Supp. 2d 1110, 1125 (N.D. Cal. 1999) .

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

6 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.04

§ 50.04 Evaluating the Role of the Mediator

Mediation is distinguished from adjudication by the role played by the "neutral." In its simplest terms, mediation is a process of negotiation among the parties to a dispute which is "facilitated" by a neutral third party who is experienced in communication and negotiation techniques. Unlike a judge or arbitrator, the neutral mediator has no power to impose a solution on the parties. The mediator's only function is to help the parties find a way to resolve their differences consensually.

The role of the specially court-trained mediators in these court-sponsored programs is to work with the parties and their counsel to improve communication across party lines, to help the parties clarify their understanding of their own and their opponent's interests, to probe the strength and weaknesses of each party's legal position, to identify areas of agreement, and to come up with options for a mutually agreeable resolution to the dispute.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

7 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.05

§ 50.05 Determining Who Should Attend Mediation Session

Often, the rules of the particular Civil Justice Expense and Delay Reduction Plan dictate who must attend the mediation session. Even though the parties themselves might not be required to attend, counsel nevertheless should consider having the parties attend, particularly if counsel has determined that settlement is desirable.

There is no substitute for giving the parties themselves a first-hand look at the case from the point of view of the opposing party. The parties often have a stilted view of the case; appearing before a neutral generally acts as a reality check.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

8 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.06

§ 50.06 Permitting Client to Vent at Mediation Session

One of the benefits of appearing before a neutral for a mediation in an informal setting is that the clients are given an opportunity to vent their anger and frustration over the facts surrounding the underlying litigation. Often, the only obstacle to settlement may be the client's need to express his or her view of the situation directly to the opposing party, without interruption by counsel.

Counsel should not seek to restrict the parties from talking at the mediation. Of course, counsel will want to advise their clients not to make damaging admissions, even though mediation proceedings are confidential, and communications made in connection with the sessions generally may not be used for any purpose in any pending or future proceeding.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

9 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.07

§ 50.07 Speaking Candidly With the Mediator

It is important to keep in mind that the sole function of the mediator is to facilitate a settlement. The mediator has no authority to render decisions, or to disclose to the judge anything regarding the mediation session. Whereas the practitioner justifiably might tend not to divulge to a judge or magistrate judge the client's true bottom-line settlement position for fear that it might impact the client's case on the merits, those same considerations generally should not come into play with non-judicial neutrals.

The practitioner should seek assurances that the mediator will not disclose to opposing counsel those matters that are requested to be kept confidential. Provided the neutral agrees, counsel should then feel free to speak candidly with the neutral regarding the clients' true bottom-line settlement positions. If those positions are far apart, the neutral can save time and call a halt to the sessions. On the other hand, if the positions are within a reasonable range, the neutral can rely upon his or her training to bring the parties to a resolution.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.08

§ 50.08 Seeking Resolution Through Creative Means

Mediators are often trained to be creative in problem-solving. In actions seeking monetary damages, mediators often will seek non-monetary concessions from the parties in an effort to resolve the case. For example, in a sexual harassment suit, the alleged wrongdoer might be asked to apologize. Likewise, in a commercial breach of contract dispute between a supplier and a buyer, the parties might be asked to consider an agreement regarding future business dealings.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.09

§ 50.09 Using Early Neutral Evaluation to Facilitate Settlement

Early neutral evaluation (ENE) is a process in which the parties obtain from an experienced neutral evaluator a nonbinding, reasoned, oral evaluation of the merits of the case, which was developed under the aegis of Chief Judge Robert F. Peckham and Magistrate Judge Wayne D. Brazil of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California. n1

While the procedure was developed primarily as a means of making litigation more streamlined and less expensive, it has the potential for being an important settlement tool as well. Through ENE, the parties have an opportunity to narrow and clarify the issues in dispute and to submit the dispute to a neutral third party for assessment early in the proceedings.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Brazil, Kahn, Newman & Gold, Early Neutral Evaluation: An Experimental Effort to Expedite Dispute Resolution, 69 Judicature 279 (1986); Peckham, A Judicial Response to the Cost of Litigation: Case Management, Two-Stage Discovery Planning and Alternative Dispute Resolution, 37 Rutgers L. Rev. 253, 275-277 (1985).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

12 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.10

§ 50.10 Timing of Participation in Early Neutral Evaluation

ENE generally takes place at a very early stage of the litigation, often within three or four months after the complaint has been filed. The evaluation session, which usually lasts several hours, is held on neutral territory (generally at the evaluator's office) at a time agreed upon by all participants.

ENE is similar to court-annexed mediation, but the neutral evaluator's principal focus is to help the parties to identify and evaluate the key issues of the case. It is not unusual, however, for the evaluator to be asked by the parties to assist them in settlement discussions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.11

§ 50.11 Preparing for Participation in Early Neutral Evaluation

Parties participating in ENE are generally required to deliver a written evaluation statement to the neutral evaluator and to the other parties before the ENE session. The statement should identify any legal or factual issues whose early resolution might reduce the scope of the dispute or contribute significantly to the productivity of settlement discussions and should indicate what discovery will expedite case preparation and help in assessing the strengths and weaknesses of the parties' positions. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Brazil, Kahn, Newman & Gold, Early Neutral Evaluation: An Experimental Effort to Expedite Dispute Resolution, 69 Judicature 279, 281 (1986).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.12

§ 50.12 Participating in the Early Neutral Evaluation Session

The parties generally must be in attendance at the ENE session, accompanied by the lawyer expected to be handling the trial of the case. After the evaluator's opening statement, each party generally makes a brief (15-30 minute) presentation of its case, setting forth the facts and describing the evidence needed to support its view of the case. During a presentation, the evaluator may interrupt or pose questions.

After all presentations are concluded, the evaluator attempts to identify areas where there is no real dispute and to probe the reasons for disagreement where a dispute actually exists. The evaluator also attempts to identify the facts needed to resolve the dispute, dividing those facts into two categories: those that are as yet unknown to the parties, and those as to which the parties disagree. The evaluator may also attempt to develop a "discovery plan" in order to ascertain the unknown facts and may explore the nature of the evidence that each party claims it will present to support its view of the facts that are in dispute.

Finally, the evaluator offers to give the parties an opinion of the strengths and weaknesses of each party's case and, if possible, offers a valuation, stating an assessment of the likelihood of a finding of liability and the amount of damages that could be awarded if the matter proceeded to trial. Often at this stage, and before giving the evaluation, the evaluator will ask the parties if they are interested in exploring settlement. If they are, the parties may decide to meet on their own or they may continue to work towards a settlement with the assistance of the evaluator. If the parties do not wish to discuss settlement as a result of the evaluation session, the evaluator works with the parties in an attempt to develop a case management plan which will enable the litigants to proceed with the case as efficiently and economically as possible.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

15 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.13

§ 50.13 Maintaining Confidentiality of Early Neutral Evaluation Proceedings

The proceedings during a neutral evaluation session generally are confidential and absolutely privileged. Neither the litigants nor the evaluator generally may disclose to the court or to anyone else what occurred during the session. This assurance of confidentiality encourages candor on the part of the participants and discourages posturing and game-playing which are often time consuming and counter-productive to reaching a resolution of the dispute.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of Information

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

16 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.14

§ 50.14 Using Special Masters to Facilitate Settlement

A special master appointed by the court may serve a useful function in helping litigants to resolve the dispute between the parties and facilitating the settlement of a case. Under Rule 53(a), the court is authorized to appoint a special master to address pretrial matters that cannot be addressed effectively and in a timely manner by an available district judge or magistrate judge. n1 A master's pretrial duties may include some forms of settlement negotiations that a judge may not otherwise undertake. n2 The parties may also consent to the appointment of a special master, in which case the parties will be given greater latitude in determining the precise role the special master will play in the case. n3 Whether appointed on the court's initiative or by consent of the parties, the special master's duties will be specifically set forth in the order appointing the master. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersAppointmentsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C).

(n2)Footnote 2. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53 Committee Note (2003).

(n3)Footnote 3. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(A).

(n4)Footnote 4. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(b).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

17 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.15

§ 50.15 Determining Who May Serve as Special Master

One of the benefits of the special master procedure is that Rule 53 does not limit who may serve as the special master. Thus, while the court may appoint a magistrate judge or a private practitioner, the court may also appoint a retired judge, a law professor or any other individual the court believes (or the parties agree) would be of assistance in the case. This would include, for example, non-lawyers with specialized expertise in a technical area key to the resolution of the dispute.

Similarly, there is no limitation on the number of special masters who may be appointed (it would be possible, for instance, for the court to appoint a technical expert to assist a mediation professional as special master in a case). Compensation of the special master is set by the court and must be paid either by a party or parties, or from a fund or subject matter of the action within the court's control. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(2).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

18 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.16

§ 50.16 Mediating Disputes With Aid of Special Master

Special masters may be appointed to perform a variety of duties in a case, including the mediation of disputes in a deliberate attempt to achieve settlement. This may occur in cases that do not involve particularly technical or complex issues. n1

Because the settlement master in such cases acts as a mediator and does not adjudicate the dispute, the appointment on the court's own initiative does not run afoul of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53's limitations on the special master's role in the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Cooley, Query: Could Settlement Masters Help Reduce the Cost of Litigation and the Workload of Federal Courts?, 88 Judicature 59 (1984).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

19 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.17

§ 50.17 Advantages of Using Special Masters

Because special masters can be empowered under Rule 53 to take evidence, subpoena witnesses, hold hearings, rule on evidentiary objections and make findings of fact, there can be advantages to also using the special master as a "settlement judge." n1 To the extent a particular question of fact becomes an obstacle to settlement, the specialmaster can take evidence on the issue and issue a finding of fact. n2

In addition, if a special master has been appointed to supervise discovery and other pretrial aspects of a case, the special master's close familiarity with the issues may make it possible for the special master to play a particularly effective role in settlement discussions. Finally, the special master's expertise in a particular area, or availability to accommodate lengthy settlement discussions, may provide significant benefits to the parties during the settlement process.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(g)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(c).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

20 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.18

§ 50.18 Using Court-Annexed Arbitration to Facilitate Settlement

For years many disputes have been resolved by arbitration, either because the parties have contractually agreed to it or because courts have required or strongly encouraged the litigants to engage in the process. n1 A number of districts around the country have implemented mandatory or voluntary arbitration programs for certain types of cases.

Unlike private arbitration which occurs based on the agreement of the parties, court-annexed arbitration is mandatory for certain types of cases, depending on the eligibility rules applicable in particular jurisdictions. Generally, eligible cases are those that involve claims for $150,000 or less, exclusive of punitive damages, interest and costs, and do not involve significant equity claims.

The arbitration awards in such programs are not binding, and the losing party generally may seek a trial de novo within 30 days after the filing of the arbitration award. n2 If the party requesting the trial de novo fails to obtain a more favorable judgment at the conclusion of trial, however, costs may be assessed against that party under local rules. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionJudicial ReviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMandatory ADRCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Under the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 1-14, arbitration agreements are enforceable in federal court and motions or applications can be made for orders requiring arbitration under private agreements between the parties. Section 15 of the Act was passed in 1988 as a pro-arbitration measure to speed judicial decisions of arbitrability so the benefits derived from prompt arbitration are not lost in the appeal process. See, e.g., PaineWebber Inc. v. Elahi, 87 F.3d 589, 600 (1st Cir. 1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See 28 U.S.C. § 655(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., M.D. Fla. R. 8.06(d). This mirrors Fed. R. Civ. P. 68, which provides that if after trial a party obtains less than the amount for which the other side made an offer to settle certain costs may be assessed against the party who rejected the offer.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

21 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.19

§ 50.19 Evaluating Validity of Court-Annexed Arbitration

One of the first federal programs for court-annexed arbitration was challenged in Kimbrough v. Holiday Inn n1 on the ground that the program violated the litigants' right to a jury trial as guaranteed by the Seventh Amendment and that it violated the equal protection clause of the Fifth Amendment.

The Kimbrough court rejected these challenges, reasoning that the Seventh Amendment does not prohibit the courts from developing new methods of introducing evidence or finding facts. Moreover, because the compulsory arbitration program under attack provided for trial de novo upon the request of either party, the program was not a final determination of the disputants' rights, and therefore, there was no violation of the Seventh Amendment.

The Kimbrough court further reasoned that differential treatment afforded litigants by virtue of the jurisdictional limits of the program, procedural differences from one program to another, and by disincentives imposed to discourage filing for a trial de novo did not violate the litigants' equal protection rights because theywere rationally related to the government's strong interest in promoting a fast and efficient system of resolving disputes. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionValidity of ADR MethodsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsRight to Jury Trial

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. 478 F. Supp. 566 (E.D. Pa. 1979) . See also Tiedel v. Northwestern Mich. College, 865 F.2d 88 (6th Cir. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 478 F. Supp. at 575-576 . See Levin & Golash, Alternative Dispute Resolution in Federal District Courts, 37 U. Fla. L. Rev. 29, 45-48 (1985).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

22 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.20

§ 50.20 Understanding Basic Characteristics of Court-Annexed Arbitration

While the precise characteristics of court-annexed arbitration programs differ from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, most share the following basic characteristics: n1

- Eligibility Requirements. Most programs are limited to civil actions for damages and do not deal with actions seeking equitable remedies. The jurisdictional amounts range up to $150,000. n2

- Pre-Hearing Stage. The parties conduct discovery which is usually limited because of time constraints. The parties also select the arbitrator or the arbitration panel. Parties either select the arbitrator from an approved list or have one selected for them by the program administrator. In some jurisdictions parties may stipulate to the number of arbitrators who will hear the case. n3

- The Hearing and Decision. The hearing is usually brief and informal with time limits between one and three hours imposed by most rules. Evidentiary rules vary but are often less formal than those employed at trial. Some jurisdictions prohibit testimony of witnesses entirely, while others admit written statements by witnesses upon advance notice to the opposing party or parties. Some programs provide that the arbitrator must issue a decision immediately at the conclusion of the hearing while others allow the arbitrator from seven to thirty days to do so. n4

- Trial De Novo. The arbitrator's decision is never final and binding in court-annexed programs because all court-annexed arbitration programs provide that either party may request a trial de novo after the decision. To discourage unnecessary or frivolous appeals, however, many programs provide some sort of disincentive to requesting trial de novo. For example, in some jurisdictions if the requesting party fails to better its award after trial de novo, it must pay all or part of the opposing party's costs, and in some cases must also pay the opposing party's attorneys' fees. n5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Ebiner & Betancourt, Court-Annexed Arbitration: The National Picture, The Rand Corporation, Institute for Civil Justice (1985) [hereinafter Ebiner & Betancourt, Court-Annexed Arbitration]; Hubble, Court-Annexed Arbitration: The Trend Toward Mandatory Arbitration Travels Across the Country and Into Oklahoma's Western District, 57 Okla. B.J. 3179, 3180-3181 (1986).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ebiner & Betancourt, Court-Annexed Arbitration, supra n.7, at 9-10.

(n3)Footnote 3. Id. at 8, 9-10.

(n4)Footnote 4. Id. at 16.

(n5)Footnote 5. Ebiner & Betancourt, Court-Annexed Arbitration, n.7, supra at 9-10, 11.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.21

§ 50.21 Using The Mini-Trial to Facilitate Settlement

The mini-trial is a voluntary, private, nonbinding procedure in which counsel and experts provide summary presentations before top management representatives for each of the parties. The mini-trial is presided over by a neutral third party or judge chosen by the parties. The neutral may have specialized expertise regarding the nature of the dispute. The representatives or panelists chosen by each side are present to facilitate settlement after the proceedings. The precise rules for the mini-trial are agreed upon in advance between the parties. n1 The purpose of a mini-trial is to present the theories, strengths, and weaknesses of the parties' claims, as an aid to resolving the dispute. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Center for Public Resources, The CPR Legal Program Mini-Trial Handbook, Corporate Dispute Management, at MH-1-MH-126 (1982).

(n2)Footnote 2. See generally Nelson, Common Problems on the Road to a Successful Mini-Trial, 2 Current Problems in Fed. Civ. Prac. (PLI) at 127-140 (1986).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

24 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.22

§ 50.22 Negotiating an Agreement to Participate in a Mini-Trial

Participation in a mini-trial generally will require the parties to reach agreement regarding the mini trial proceedings. The parties may choose to utilize form mini-trial agreements which have been prepared for general use by such organizations as the American Arbitration Association and the Center for Public Resources. However, even these form agreements provide choices with respect to certain fundamental aspects of the mini-trial. n1 The following are several of the most important issues which the parties will confront:

- How much discovery should be permitted before the proceedings?
- How much time should the parties allow for the mini-trial hearing?
- Who should serve as panelists?
- Should the proceedings be confidential?
- When should settlement negotiations occur?
- How should the settlement process be structured?
- How should the neutral judge be chosen?

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Center for Public Resources, The CPR Legal Program Mini-Trial Handbook, Corporate Dispute Management, at MH-102-MH-114 (1982). See also 3 Alternatives, May, 1985, at 8 for a model mini-trial agreement developed by the Center for Public Resources for use in resolving business disputes.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

25 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.23

§ 50.23 Determining Scope of Discovery Before Mini-Trial

In many instances, only limited pretrial discovery is permitted before the mini-trial takes place. For example, the parties may agree that each side will have only a limited number of pretrial depositions before the mini-trial, but without prejudice to their right to do additional pretrial discovery if the case is not resolved at the mini-trial stage. The parties generally should exchange briefs or summaries and outlines to assist both sides in evaluating the case. This will also eliminate surprise and confusion during the limited time scheduled for the conduct of the proceeding.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.24

§ 50.24 Determining Length of Mini-Trial

The mini-trial itself is very limited in time and scope. Generally, the attorneys will argue the matter and a few key witnesses will be presented for each side. The attorneys' arguments must have some factual support or they are subject to objection, although the supporting facts themselves need not all be introduced in evidence.

One day is sufficient for most mini-trials. n1 In extremely complex cases, the mini-trial proceeding may take several days depending on the nature of the claims and the willingness of the parties to commit the time and resources to the process.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Comm. on Corp. Couns., Subcomm. on Alternative Means of Dispute Resolution Rep., A.B.A. Sec. of Litigation, at 27-28.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

27 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.25

§ 50.25 Determining Who Should Serve as Mini-Trial Panelists

The selection of the client representatives to serve as panelists with the neutral judge is a very important component of the process. These are the individuals who will actually be involved in attempting to settle the dispute. While each case may suggest the need for a particular expertise or qualification, the most important factor is the authority of the panelists to bind their party to the settlement. In selecting the representatives for the panel, counsel should bear in mind three general rules:

- The panelists should generally be business people and not lawyers. Lawyers may act in a narrower or less conciliatory manner than business people would, and this may limit, rather than expand, settlement prospects.

- It is preferable to select business people who were not directly involved in the underlying dispute. Prior involvement in the dispute could color their judgment on settlement issues.

- The business people should come from a division of the client whose "bottom line" will not be affected by a settlement. Objectivity is the key.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

28 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.26

§ 50.26 Maintaining Confidentiality of Mini-Trial Proceedings

The mini-trial proceedings are private and generally not recorded or transcribed. The proceedings themselves probably are confidential under Federal Rule of Evidence 408 as part of settlement negotiations. However, there are two problems in relying on Rule 408 for confidentiality of the mini-trial procedure or any ADR technique. First, the rule may not prevent the discovery of materials or statements made in the course of settlement negotiations, even if otherwise inadmissible. n1 Second, such evidence may be admissible for impeachment. n2

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewEvidenceRelevanceCompromise & Settlement NegotiationsLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of Information

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Morse/Diesel, Inc. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 122 F.R.D. 447, 449 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) .

(n2)Footnote 2. E.g., Stainton v. Tarantino, 637 F. Supp. 1051, 1081-1082 (E.D. Pa. 1986) .

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.27

§ 50.27 Reaching Settlement After the Mini-Trial

[1] Determining When Settlement Negotiations Should Occur

At the conclusion of the mini-trial, the panelists who have attended the proceeding on behalf of the parties will normally attempt to settle the dispute. Negotiations should begin immediately, while the case is fresh in everyone's mind. The mini-trial presumably will have given them a better idea than they had originally of what the disputed issues are, what the facts underlying the issues may be, and how the matter might come out at the conclusion of a real trial. If the parties do not settle on their own, the neutral judge will talk to them separately or together and give them ideas of how the case likely would be decided at trial, suggesting ways in which the case might be settled.

[2] Determining How the Settlement Process Should Be Structured

Two important questions must be considered with regard to the structure of the settlement negotiations that follow the mini-trial:

> Should the parties' lawyer be present? While it is difficult to generalize, it is often best if only the business people "panelists" participate in the settlement discussions. Having just played the role of the advocate, the lawyer may find it difficult to serve effectively as a conciliator. In addition, the lawyer and the clients may have different views regarding the settlement value of the case after the mini-trial is concluded, and it may be easier for the business client to reach a settlement acting "privately," without the presence of counsel.
>
> Should the neutral judge be present? This is a more difficult issue to analyze. If the representatives of the parties have developed rapport with that individual, the judge's presence may be very helpful. On the other hand, if the parties are not familiar with the neutral judge, the presence may inhibit the sort of give and take which can be instrumental to a creative settlement. The neutral judge may be more effective if called on only when the panelists have a major disagreement or have reached a deadlock. At the least, the neutral judge must be available to give an opinion concerning legal issues involved in the case or an opinion based upon an experience in trying cases, either as a lawyer or judge.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

30 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.28

§ 50.28 Choosing the Mini-Trial Judge

The quality of the neutral judge, and the respect the parties have for him or her, are crucial to the effectiveness of the overall proceeding. The judge needs to understand and have an instinct for the real issues in the case and the respective needs of the parties. In addition, the neutral judge must be skilled at facilitating settlement discussions.

In those instances where the selection is difficult, it may be best to select a neutral judge who is well known and whose credibility and qualifications are unquestioned. Various panels of well respected lawyers or retired judges are available from which third party neutrals may be chosen. n1

In some cases, it may make sense to retain a well known or well respected individual at an early stage merely to assist the parties in negotiating and implementing the mini-trial procedures. Yet another "neutral" may be selected later to hear the controversy. While this would increase the parties' expense, it may be a small price to pay if it means the difference between success or failure in settling the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. For example, the Center for Public Resources has compiled a Judicial Panel consisting of well-known lawyers, former judges and academics.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

31 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.29

§ 50.29 Evaluating the Case for Mini-Trial Potential

The issues most often confronted in negotiating and conducting a mini-trial are the following:

- How should the parties evaluate a dispute for mini-trial potential?
- How should one party attempt to convince another that a mini-trial makes sense?
- How should the mini-trial proceeding itself be structured?
- How should the parties choose the third party neutral?
- How should the parties structure the settlement discussions which follow the "information exchange?"

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.30

§ 50.30 Using Mini-Trials in Specific Types of Cases

[1] Using Mini-Trials in Cases With Few Parties

While it is certainly possible to conduct a mini-trial when numerous parties are involved, the difficulties encountered in multi-party cases may be more substantial than in two party litigation. Convincing two parties (and their counsel) to conduct a mini-trial is likely to be easier than convincing multiple parties to do so. Also, the likelihood of reaching a settlement is inversely proportional to the number of parties involved. The more parties involved, the greater the chances of complications in reaching a resolution of the dispute.

[2] Using Mini-Trials in Cases Where the Parties Have an Ongoing Business Relationship

Mini-trials are most likely to succeed when the parties are highly motivated to reach a settlement. One important motivating force may be the existence of an on-going business relationship. The mini-trial offers a means to resolve a dispute quickly, before animosities get out of control, and to preserve those relationships in the process.

[3] Using Mini-Trials to Resolve Common Commercial Disputes

Claims of fraud, dishonesty, or "bad faith" may make a mini-trial less likely to succeed. If the case is a straight-forward commercial dispute, however, the parties may preserve their dignity and resolve the matter on a sensible, economic basis. Again, the motivation to settle may be greater if reputation or "personal" issues are not at the heart of the dispute.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.31

§ 50.31 Using Variations on the Mini-Trial to Facilitate Settlement

One variation of the mini-trial that is used occasionally involves conducting the trial with the parties' "executives" present but without any judge at all. n1 The objective then is simply to use the mini-trial to enlighten the executives as to the issues in the case and possibly to persuade them to settle.

Two additional variations have been developed to adapt the mini-trial procedure for use by a court. One was developed by Chief Judge Sherman G. Finesilver of the United States District Court in Denver to aid in settlement of large, complex cases involving issues that require technical expertise. In Judge Finesilver's variation, the court appoints a special master to conduct settlement negotiations using the mini-trial format. n2 The other variation was developed by Judge Robert E. Keeton of the United States District Court in Boston. n3 In Judge Keeton's procedure, which he calls a conditional summary trial, the attorneys make brief presentations to a panel consisting of the judge and an executive from each party who has settlement authority. After the presentation, the party representatives negotiate, with or without the judge. If they reach agreement they submit the settlement to the judge. If they do not reach agreement, each party submits a proposed resolution and the judge picks one of the proposals. This last feature transforms the process into a version of what is known as "baseball arbitration." In "baseball arbitration" the decision-maker cannot propose his own solution but must choose between the resolutions proposed by the disputants. In theory this will motivate the disputants to take more reasoned positions and tone down their proposed resolutions in the hope that the decision-maker will adopt their proposal as the method for resolving the existing dispute. n4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Center for Public Resources, The CPR Legal Program Mini-Trial Handbook, Corporate Dispute Management, at MH-45-MH-48 (1982).

(n2)Footnote 2. A Federal Judge's ADR Technique: Mini-Trials with Special Masters, 5 Alternatives, Jan., 1987, at 9-10.

(n3)Footnote 3. Id. at 10. See also Boston Lawyers Assess Two "Court Mini-Trials," 4 Alternatives, Nov., 1986, at 1, 11.

(n4)Footnote 4. Boston Lawyers Assess Two "Court Mini-Trials," 4 Alternatives, Nov., 1986, at 11.

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.32

§ 50.32 Using the Summary Jury Trial to Facilitate Settlement

The summary jury trial has been called "the courtroom equivalent of the mini-trial." n1 It is designed to give the attorneys and their clients an indication of what they may expect at the conclusion of a full blown trial. At the summary jury trial, there is no testimony from witnesses. Rather, counsel for the parties give verbal presentations to the jury in which they summarize the anticipated testimony of witnesses, and present exhibits. After being given an abbreviated charge, the jury deliberates and renders an advisory verdict. n2 In large number, cases that go through summary jury trial (SJT) are settled. n3

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Henry & Lieberman, The Manager's Guide to Resolving Legal Disputes, at 436 (1985). See, Posner,The Summary Jury Trial and Other Methods of Alternative Dispute Resolution: Some Cautionary Observations, 53 U. Chi. L. Rev. 366, 387 (1986).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lambros, The Summary Jury Trial and Other Alternative Methods of Dispute Resolution, 103 F.R.D. 465, 470-471 (1984).

(n3)Footnote 3. Note, Summary Jury Trials: A "Settlement Technique" That Places a Shroud of Secrecy on our Courtrooms?, 23 Ind. L. Rev. 949, 970 (1990).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

35 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.33

§ 50.33 Comparing the Summary Jury Trial to the Mini-Trial

There are two primary differences between the SJT and the mini-trial. First, the SJT is a court-annexed procedure conducted before an actual judge or magistrate judge, rather than a private procedure conducted outside the court before a neutral third party selected by the litigants. Second, the summary jury trial, as the name indicates, involves the use of actual jurors as fact-finders rather than relying on the neutral third party. The involvement of a jury makes this device especially useful where the only obstacle to settlement is the parties' uncertainty regarding how a jury might assess liability and damages or where the parties emotionally need a "day in court" to air their sides of the controversy.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

36 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.34

§ 50.34 Understanding Summary Jury Trial Procedures

While the procedural rules governing the summary jury trial will vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, those employed in the Northern District of Ohio, where the technique originated, provide a good prototype. n1

After the completion of discovery and at the point when the case would be ready to go to trial with no motions pending, there occurs a much abbreviated--usually no more than one day--non-binding "trial," presided over by a judge or magistrate judge. No later than three court days before the beginning of the SJT, counsel must submit trial briefs on issues of law and jury instructions. The parties also exchange evidence to be presented before the SJT commences. In addition, there may be a pretrial conference in advance of the SJT, at which the judge hears motions in limine.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Lambros, The Summary Jury Trial and Other Alternative Methods of Dispute Resolution, 103 F.R.D. 461, 481-489 (1984).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

37 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.35

§ 50.35 Determining Who Must Attend Summary Jury Trial

Clients generally are required to be in attendance at the SJT. The participation of the parties allows them to see first hand the strengths and weaknesses of their respective cases, to evaluate the chance of success, and to determine the costs and benefits of fully litigating the case. Note that while a SJT may be considered to be part of the settlement process and therefore confidential, the secrecy of such proceedings has repeatedly been attacked on First Amendment grounds and is by no means assured. n1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. See Day v. NLO, Inc., 147 F.R.D. 148, 152 (S.D. Ohio 1993) (trial judge's discretion whether or not to hold the SJT in open or closed court).

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.36

§ 50.36 Understanding the Role of the Jury in Summary Jury Trials

The jury generally is selected from the court's regular jury pool. n1 Once the jury is impaneled, counsel for both parties present their respective case, combining the opening and closing statements and summarizing the evidence which would be presented and admissible at a trial on the merits. No live testimony is permitted at the SJT and no evidence can be used which has not previously been exchanged or disclosed to the other side. After the case has been presented, the jury is then charged with the law and asked to retire to consider and render a verdict, which need not be unanimous.

While counsel may stipulate that a consensus verdict will be binding, if no such agreement is reached in advance and the parties do not settle the case after the SJT, they may then proceed to an actual trial which is generally scheduled to take place at a relatively early date. In any event, the jurors who are selected for the SJT are not told until after they have rendered a verdict (if they are told at all) that their verdict is not binding on the parties, so as to ensure that their evaluation of the respective merits of each party's case is realistic.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. The debate also continues as to whether the federal courts lack authority to compel jurors for SJT proceedings. See Hume v. M & C Management, 129 F.R.D. 506, 510 (N.D. Ohio 1990) ; United States v. Exum, 744 F. Supp. 803, 805 (N.D. Ohio 1990) .

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.37

§ 50.37 Evaluating a Case's Potential for Summary Jury Trial

There is no single type of case that is best suited for the SJT. The procedure has been used in cases involving multiple parties as well as those involving two parties, and in cases involving issues ranging from price fixing and antitrust through age, race and gender discrimination to product liability, personal injury, land use and "takings." n1

The characteristic uniting cases that are particularly amenable to resolution by SJT is the reluctance of one or more of the parties to settle because of their uncertainty as to how a jury might perceive the case. Where the desire to "get to the jury" is the principal obstacle to settlement, the SJT provides litigants with an expeditious and relatively low-cost, no-risk way to assess their prospects for success and may motivate them to reassess their offers and demands and to resolve the dispute without resort to a full-blown trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionSummary Jury TrialsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:
(n1)Footnote 1. Lambros, The Summary Jury Trial and Other Alternative Methods of Dispute Resolution, 103 F.R.D. 463, 472 (1984); 5 Alternatives., Jan. 1987, at 1; In re Shell Oil Refinery, No. 88-1935, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5357 (E.D. La. April 9, 1992) ; Negin v. City of Mentor, 601 F. Supp. 1502 (N.D. Ohio 1985) .

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 50 Court-Sponsored Alternative Dispute Resolution *

4-50 Federal Litigation Guide § 50.38

§ 50.38 Considering Possible Reasons Not to Engage in Alternative Dispute Resolution

Alternative dispute resolution may not work in the following situations:

- A precedent needs to be established (e.g., a company has a network of dealers who distribute the company's products pursuant to a standard form dealer agreement, and a court decision as to the enforceability of such an agreement is desired)

- The action is of great importance to the party involved, and the party wants to go all out in defending its rights

- A defendant wants to send a message to other potential plaintiffs in the same subject matter area that the party is not an easy settlement mark (e.g., vigorous defense of a trademark to reduce the risk of further misappropriation of the mark)

- A party is suspicious of malfeasance, but does not have solid evidence to prove its case without the benefit of liberal discovery that can only be obtained through litigation

In the event that a case ill-suited for ADR is nevertheless referred for ADR, counsel should advise the neutral of the reasons why the process likely will not be productive. In that event, an experienced neutral generally will shortcut the process so that the parties do not spend unnecessary time and money.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

* Chapter 50 was rewritten in 2000 by Andrew E. Westley, Esq., of San Francisco, California.

41 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

OFFICIAL FORMS

4-App Federal Litigation Guide Appendix.syn

§ App.syn Synopsis to Appendix App: OFFICIAL FORMS

APPENDIX OF FORMS, FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE
Form 1. Caption.
Form 2. Date, Signature, Address, E-mail Address, and Telephone Number.
Form 3. Summons.
Form 4. Summons on a Third-Party Complaint.
Form 5. Notice of a Lawsuit and Request to Waive Service of a Summons.
Form 6. Waiver of the Service of Summons.
Form 7. Statement of Jurisdiction.
Form 8. Statement of Reasons for Omitting a Party.
Form 9. Statement Noting a Party's Death.
Form 10. Complaint to Recover a Sum Certain.
Form 11. Complaint for Negligence.
Form 12. Complaint for Negligence When the Plaintiff Does Not Know Who Is Responsible.
Form 13. Complaint for Negligence Under the Federal Employers' Liability Act.
Form 14. Complaint for Damages Under the Merchant Marine Act.
Form 15. Complaint for the Conversion of Property.
Form 16. Third-Party Complaint.
Form 17. Complaint for Specific Performance of a Contract to Convey Land.
Form 18. Complaint for Patent Infringement.
Form 19. Complaint for Copyright Infringement and Unfair Competition.
Form 20. Complaint for Interpleader and Declaratory Relief.
Form 21. Complaint on a Claim for a Debt and to Set Aside a Fraudulent Conveyance Under Rule 18(b).
Form 30. Answer Presenting Defenses Under Rule 12(b).
Form 31. Answer to a Complaint for Money Had and Received with a Counterclaim for Interpleader.
Form 40. Motion to Dismiss Under Rule 12(b) for Lack of Jurisdiction, Improper Venue, Insufficient Service of Process, or Failure to State a Claim.
Form 41. Motion to Bring in a Third-Party Defendant.
Form 42. Motion to Intervene as a Defendant Under Rule 24.
Form 50. Request to Produce Documents and Tangible Things, or to Enter onto Land Under Rule 34.
Form 51. Request for Admissions Under Rule 36.
Form 52. Report of the Parties' Planning Meeting.

Form 60. Notice of Condemnation.
Form 61. Complaint for Condemnation.
Form 70. Judgment on a Jury Verdict.
Form 71. Judgment by the Court without a Jury.
Form 80. Notice of a Magistrate Judge's Availability.
Form 81. Consent to an Assignment to a Magistrate Judge.
Form 82. Order of Assignment to a Magistrate Judge.

42 of 42 DOCUMENTS

Federal Litigation Guide
Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

OFFICIAL FORMS

4-App Federal Litigation Guide

APPENDIX OF FORMS, FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

[Official] Introductory Statement

1. The following forms are intended for illustration only. They are limited in number. No attempt is made to furnish a manual of forms. Each form assumes the action to be brought in the Southern District of New York. If the district in which an action is brought has divisions, the division should be indicated in the caption.

2. Except where otherwise indicated each pleading, motion, and other paper should have a caption similar to that of the summons, with the designation of the particular paper substituted for the word "Summons." In the caption of the summons and in the caption of the complaint all parties must be named but in other pleadings and papers, it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on either side, with an appropriate indication of other parties. See Rule 4(b), 7(b)(2) and 10(a).

3. In Form 3 and the forms following, the words, "Allegation of jurisdiction," are used to indicate the appropriate allegation in Form 2.

4. Each pleading, motion and other paper is to be signed in his individual name by at least one attorney of record (Rule 11). The attorney's name is to be followed by his address as indicated in Form 3. In forms following Form 3 the signature and address are not indicated.

5. If a party is not represented by an attorney, the signature and address of the party are required in place of those of the attorney.

Form 1. Caption.

(Use on every summons, complaint, answer, motion, or other document.)

United States District Court for the _____ District of _____

A B, Plaintiff	)
v. C D, Defendant	)
v. E F, Third-Party Defendant	)	Civil Action No. _____
(Use if needed.)	)
	)
	)
	)

(Name of Document)

Form 2. Date, Signature, Address, E-mail Address, and Telephone Number.

(Use at the conclusion of pleadings and other papers that require a signature.)

Date _____ _____

(Signature of the attorney or unrepresented party)

_____

(Printed name)

_____

(Address)

_____

(E-mail address)

_____

(Telephone number)

Form 3. Summons.

(Caption--See Form 1.) To name the defendant :

A lawsuit has been filed against you.

Within 21 days after service of this summons on you (not counting the day you received it), you must serve on the plaintiff an answer to the attached complaint or a motion under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The answer or motion must be served on the plaintiff's attorney, _____, whose address is _____. If you fail to do so, judgment by default will be entered against you for the relief demanded in the complaint. You also must file your answer or motion with the court.

Date _____ _____

Clerk of Court

(Court Seal)

(Use 60 days if the defendant is the United States or a United States agency, or is an officer or employee of the United States allowed 60 days by Rule 12(a)(3).)

Form 4. Summons on a Third-Party Complaint.

(Caption--See Form 1.) To name the third-party defendant :

A lawsuit has been filed against defendant _____, who as third-party plaintiff is making this claim against you to pay part or all of what [he] may owe to the plaintiff _____.

Within 21 days after service of this summons on you (not counting the day you received it), you must serve on the plaintiff and on the defendant an answer to the attached third-party complaint or a motion under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The answer or motion must be served on the defendant's attorney, _____, whose address is, _____, and also on the plaintiff's attorney, _____, whose address is, _____. If you fail to do so, judgment by default will be entered against you for the relief demanded in the third-party complaint. You also must file the answer or motion with the court and serve it on any other parties.

A copy of the plaintiff's complaint is also attached. You may--but are not required to--respond to it.

Date _____ _____

Clerk of Court

(Court Seal)

Form 5. Notice of a Lawsuit and Request to Waive Service of a Summons.

(Caption--See Form 1.) To (name the defendant--or if the defendant is a corporation, partnership, or association name an officer or agent authorized to receive service):

Why are you getting this?

A lawsuit has been filed against you, or the entity you represent, in this court under the number shown above. A copy of the complaint is attached.

This is not a summons, or an official notice from the court. It is a request that, to avoid expenses, you waive formal service of a summons by signing and returning the enclosed waiver. To avoid these expenses, you must return the signed waiver within (give at least 30 days or at least 60 days if the defendant is outside any judicial district of the United States) from the date shown below, which is the date this notice was sent. Two copies of the waiver form are enclosed, along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope or other prepaid means for returning one copy. You may keep the other copy.

What happens next?

If you return the signed waiver, I will file it with the court. The action will then proceed as if you had been served on the date the waiver is filed, but no summons will be served on you and you will have 60 days from the date this notice is sent (see the date below) to answer the complaint (or 90 days if this notice is sent to you outside any judicial district of the United States).

If you do not return the signed waiver within the time indicated, I will arrange to have the summons and complaint served on you. And I will ask the court to require you, or the entity you represent, to pay the expenses of making service.

Please read the enclosed statement about the duty to avoid unnecessary expenses.

I certify that this request is being sent to you on the date below.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 6. Waiver of the Service of Summons.

(Caption--See Form 1.) To name the plaintiff's attorney or the unrepresented plaintiff:

I have received your request to waive service of a summons in this action along with a copy of the complaint, two copies of this waiver form, and a prepaid means of returning one signed copy of the form to you.

I, or the entity I represent, agree to save the expense of serving a summons and complaint in this case.

I understand that I, or the entity I represent, will keep all defenses or objections to the lawsuit, the court's jurisdiction, and the venue of the action, but that I waive any objections to the absence of a summons or of service.

I also understand that I, or the entity I represent, must file and serve an answer or a motion under Rule 12 within 60 days from _____, the date when this request was sent (or 90 days if it was sent outside the United States). If I fail to do so, a default judgment will be entered against me or the entity I represent.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

(Attach the following to Form 6.)

Duty to Avoid Unnecessary Expenses of Serving a Summons

Rule 4 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires certain defendants to cooperate in saving unnecessary expenses of serving a summons and complaint. A defendant who is located in the United States and who fails to return a signed waiver of service requested by a plaintiff located in the United States will be required to pay the expenses of service, unless the defendant shows good cause for the failure.

"Good cause" does not include a belief that the lawsuit is groundless, or that it has been brought in an improper venue, or that the court has no jurisdiction over this matter or over the defendant or the defendant's property.

If the waiver is signed and returned, you can still make these and all other defenses and objections, but you cannot object to the absence of a summons or of service.

If you waive service, then you must, within the time specified on the waiver form, serve an answer or a motion under Rule 12 on the plaintiff and file a copy with the court. By signing and returning the waiver form, you are allowed more time to respond than if a summons had been served.

Form 7. Statement of Jurisdiction.

a. (For diversity-of-citizenship jurisdiction.) The plaintiff is [a citizen of Michigan] [a corporation incorporated under the laws of Michigan with its principal place of business in Michigan]. The defendant is [a citizen of New York] [a corporation incorporated under the laws of New York with its principal place of business in New York]. The amount in controversy, without interest and costs, exceeds the sum or value specified by 28 U.S.C. § 1332 .

b. (For federal-question jurisdiction.) This action arises under [the United States Constitution, specify the article or amendment and the section] [a United States treaty, specify] [a federal statute, -- U.S.C. § --].

c. (For a claim in the admiralty or maritime jurisdiction.) This is a case of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction. (To invoke admiralty status under Rule 9(h) use the following: This is an admiralty or maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9(h).)

Form 8. Statement of Reasons for Omitting a Party.

(If a person who ought to be made a party under Rule 19(a) is not named, include this statement in accordance with Rule 19(c).)

This complaint does not join as a party name who [is not subject to this court's personal jurisdiction] [cannot be made a party without depriving this court of subject-matter jurisdiction] because state the reason .

Form 9. Statement Noting a Party's Death.

(Caption--See Form 1.) In accordance with Rule 25(a), name the person , who is [a party to this action] [a representative of or successor to the deceased party] notes the death during the pendency of this action of name , [describe as party in this action].

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 10. Complaint to Recover a Sum Certain.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

(Use one or more of the following as appropriate and include a demand for judgment.)

(a) On a Promissory Note

2. On date , the defendant executed and delivered a note promising to pay the plaintiff on -- date the sum of $_____ with interest at the rate of _____ percent. A copy of the note [is attached as Exhibit A] [is summarized as follows: _____.]

3. The defendant has not paid the amount owed.

(b) On an Account

2. The defendant owes the plaintiff $_____ according to the account set out in Exhibit A.

(c) For Goods Sold and Delivered

2. The defendant owes the plaintiff $_____ for goods sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant from date to date .

(d) For Money Lent

2. The defendant owes the plaintiff $_____ for money lent by the plaintiff to the defendant on date .

(e) For Money Paid by Mistake

2. The defendant owes the plaintiff $_____ for money paid by mistake to the defendant on date under these circumstances: describe with particularity in accordance with Rule 9(b).

(f) For Money Had and Received

2. The defendant owes the plaintiff $_____ for money that was received from name on date to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff.

Demand for Judgment

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant for $_____, plus interest and costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 11. Complaint for Negligence.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , at place , the defendant negligently drove a motor vehicle against the plaintiff.

3. As a result, the plaintiff was physically injured, lost wages or income, suffered physical and mental pain, and incurred medical expenses of $_____.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant for $_____, plus costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 12. Complaint for Negligence When the Plaintiff Does Not Know Who Is Responsible.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , at place , defendant name or defendant name or both of them willfully or recklessly or negligently drove, or caused to be driven, a motor vehicle against the plaintiff.

3. As a result, the plaintiff was physically injured, lost wages or income, suffered mental and physical pain, and incurred medical expenses of $_____.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against one or both defendants for $_____, plus costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 13. Complaint for Negligence Under the Federal Employers' Liability Act.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. At the times below, the defendant owned and operated in interstate commerce a railroad line that passed through a tunnel located at _____.

3. On date , the plaintiff was working to repair and enlarge the tunnel to make it convenient and safe for use in interstate commerce.

4. During this work, the defendant, as the employer, negligently put the plaintiff to work in a section of the tunnel that the defendant had left unprotected and unsupported.

5. The defendant's negligence caused the plaintiff to be injured by a rock that fell from an unsupported portion of the tunnel.

6. As a result, the plaintiff was physically injured, lost wages or income, suffered mental and physical pain, and incurred medical expenses of $_____.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant for $_____, and costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 14. Complaint for Damages Under the Merchant Marine Act.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. At the times below, the defendant owned and operated the vessel name and used it to transport cargo for hire by water in interstate and foreign commerce.

3. On date , at place, the defendant hired the plaintiff under seamen's articles of customary form for a voyage from _____ to _____ and return at a wage of $_____ a month and found, which is equal to a shore worker's wage of $_____ a month.

4. On date , the vessel was at sea on the return voyage. (Describe the weather and the condition of the vessel.)

5. (Describe as in Form 11 the defendant's negligent conduct.)

6. As a result of the defendant's negligent conduct and the unseaworthiness of the vessel, the plaintiff was physically injured, has been incapable of any gainful activity, suffered mental and physical pain, and has incurred medical expenses of $_____.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant for $_____, plus costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 15. Complaint for the Conversion of Property.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , at place , the defendant converted to the defendant's own use property owned by the plaintiff. The property converted consists of describe.

3. The property is worth $_____.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant for $_____, plus costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 16. Third-Party Complaint.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. Plaintiff name has filed against defendant name a complaint, a copy of which is attached.

2. (State grounds entitling defendant's name to recover from third-party defendant's name for (all or an identified share) of any judgment for plaintiff's name against defendant's name.)

Therefore, the defendant demands judgment against third-party defendant's name for all or an identified share of sums that may be adjudged against the defendant in the plaintiff's favor.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 17. Complaint for Specific Performance of a Contract to Convey Land.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , the parties agreed to the contract [attached as Exhibit A] [summarize the contract].

3. As agreed, the plaintiff tendered the purchase price and requested a conveyance of the land, but the defendant refused to accept the money or make a conveyance.

4. The plaintiff now offers to pay the purchase price.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands that:

(a) the defendant be required to specifically perform the agreement and pay damages of $_____, plus interest and costs, or

(b) if specific performance is not ordered, the defendant be required to pay damages of $_____, plus interest and costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 18. Complaint for Patent Infringement.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , United States Letters Patent No. _____ were issued to the plaintiff for an invention in an-- electric motor . The plaintiff owned the patent throughout the period of the defendant's infringing acts and still owns the patent.

3. The defendant has infringed and is still infringing the Letters Patent by making, selling, and using electric motors that embody the patented invention, and the defendant will continue to do so unless enjoined by this court.

4. The plaintiff has complied with the statutory requirement of placing a notice of the Letters Patent on all electric motors it manufactures and sells and has given the defendant written notice of the infringement.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands:

(a) a preliminary and final injunction against the continuing infringement;

(b) an accounting for damages; and

(c) interest and costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 19. Complaint for Copyright Infringement and Unfair Competition.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. Before date , the plaintiff, a United States citizen, wrote a book entitled _____.

3. The book is an original work that may be copyrighted under United States law. A copy of the book is attached as Exhibit A.

4. Between date and date , the plaintiff applied to the copyright office and received a certificate of registration dated _____ and identified as date, class, number .

5. Since date , the plaintiff has either published or licensed for publication all copies of the book in compliance with the copyright laws and has remained the sole owner of the copyright.

6. After the copyright was issued, the defendant infringed the copyright by publishing and selling a book entitled _____, which was copied largely from the plaintiff's book. A copy of the defendant's book is attached as Exhibit B.

7. The plaintiff has notified the defendant in writing of the infringement.

8. The defendant continues to infringe the copyright by continuing to publish and sell the infringing book in violation of the copyright, and further has engaged in unfair trade practices and unfair competition in connection with its publication and sale of the infringing book, thus causing irreparable damage.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands that:

(a) until this case is decided the defendant and the defendant's agents be enjoined from disposing of any copies of the defendant's book by sale or otherwise;

(b) the defendant account for and pay as damages to the plaintiff all profits and advantages gained from unfair trade practices and unfair competition in selling the defendant's book, and all profits and advantages gained from infringing the plaintiff's copyright (but no less than the statutory minimum);

(c) the defendant deliver for impoundment all copies of the book in the defendant's possession or control and deliver for destruction all infringing copies and all plates, molds, and other materials for making infringing copies;

(d) the defendant pay the plaintiff interest, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees; and

(e) the plaintiff be awarded any other just relief.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 20. Complaint for Interpleader and Declaratory Relief.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , the plaintiff issued a life insurance policy on the life of name with name as the named beneficiary.

3. As a condition for keeping the policy in force, the policy required payment of a premium during the first year and then annually.

4. The premium due on date was never paid, and the policy lapsed after that date.

5. On date , after the policy had lapsed, both the insured and the named beneficiary died in an automobile collision.

6. Defendant name claims to be the beneficiary in place of name and has filed a claim to be paid the policy's full amount.

7. The other two defendants are representatives of the deceased persons' estates. Each defendant has filed a claim on behalf of each estate to receive payment of the policy's full amount.

8. If the policy was in force at the time of death, the plaintiff is in doubt about who should be paid.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands that:

(a) each defendant be restrained from commencing any action against the plaintiff on the policy;

(b) a judgment be entered that no defendant is entitled to the proceeds of the policy or any part of it, but if the court determines that the policy was in effect at the time of the insured's death, that the defendants be required to interplead and settle among themselves their rights to the proceeds, and that the plaintiff be discharged from all liability except to the defendant determined to be entitled to the proceeds; and

(c) the plaintiff recover its costs.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 21. Complaint on a Claim for a Debt and to Set Aside a Fraudulent Conveyance Under Rule 18(b).

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. On date , defendant name signed a note promising to pay to the plaintiff on date the sum of $_____ with interest at the rate of _____ percent. [The pleader may, but need not, attach a copy or plead the note verbatim.]

3. Defendant name owes the plaintiff the amount of the note and interest.

4. On date , defendant name conveyed all defendant's real and personal property if less than all, describe it fully to defendant name for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiff and hindering or delaying the collection of the debt.

Therefore, the plaintiff demands that:

(a) judgment for $_____, plus costs, be entered against defendant(s) name(s) ; and

(b) the conveyance to defendant name be declared void and any judgment granted be made a lien on the property.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 30. Answer Presenting Defenses Under Rule 12(b).

(Caption--See Form 1.)

Responding to Allegations in the Complaint

1. Defendant admits the allegations in paragraphs _____.

2. Defendant lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief about the truth of the allegations in paragraphs _____.

3. Defendant admits identify part of the allegation in paragraph _____ and denies or lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief about the truth of the rest of the paragraph.

Failure to State a Claim

4. The complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Failure to Join a Required Party

5. If there is a debt, it is owed jointly by the defendant and name , who is a citizen of _____. This person can be made a party without depriving this court of jurisdiction over the existing parties.

Affirmative Defense--Statute of Limitations

6. The plaintiff's claim is barred by the statute of limitations because it arose more than _____ years before this action was commenced.

Counterclaim

7. (Set forth any counterclaim in the same way a claim is pleaded in a complaint. Include a further statement of jurisdiction if needed.)

Crossclaim

8. (Set forth a crossclaim against a coparty in the same way a claim is pleaded in a complaint. Include a further statement of jurisdiction if needed.)

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 31. Answer to a Complaint for Money Had and Received with a Counterclaim for Interpleader.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

Response to the Allegations in the Complaint

(See Form 30.)

Counterclaim for Interpleader

1. The defendant received from name a deposit of $_____.

2. The plaintiff demands payment of the deposit because of a purported assignment from name , who has notified the defendant that the assignment is not valid and who continues to hold the defendant responsible for the deposit.

Therefore, the defendant demands that:

(a) name be made a party to this action;

(b) the plaintiff and name be required to interplead their respective claims;

(c) the court decide whether the plaintiff or name or either of them is entitled to the deposit and discharge the defendant of any liability except to the person entitled to the deposit; and

(d) the defendant recover costs and attorney's fees.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 40. Motion to Dismiss Under Rule 12(b) for Lack of Jurisdiction, Improper Venue, Insufficient Service of Process, or Failure to State a Claim.

(Caption--See Form 1.) The defendant moves to dismiss the action because:

1. the amount in controversy is less than the sum or value specified by 28 U.S.C. § 1332 ;

2. the defendant is not subject to the personal jurisdiction of this court;

3. venue is improper (this defendant does not reside in this district and no part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred in the district);

4. the defendant has not been properly served, as shown by the attached affidavits of _____; or

5. the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 41. Motion to Bring in a Third-Party Defendant.

(Caption--See Form 1.) The defendant, as third-party plaintiff, moves for leave to serve on name a summons and third-party complaint, copies of which are attached.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 42. Motion to Intervene as a Defendant Under Rule 24.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. name moves for leave to intervene as a defendant in this action and to file the attached answer.

(State grounds under Rule 24(a) or (b).)

2. The plaintiff alleges patent infringement. We manufacture and sell to the defendant the articles involved, and we have a defense to the plaintiff's claim.

3. Our defense presents questions of law and fact that are common to this action.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

[An Intervener's Answer must be attached. See Form 30.]

Form 50. Request to Produce Documents and Tangible Things, or to Enter onto Land Under Rule 34.

(Caption--See Form 1.) The plaintiff name requests that the defendant name respond within _____ days to the following requests:

1. To produce and permit the plaintiff to inspect and copy and to test or sample the following documents, including electronically stored information:

(Describe each document and the electronically stored information, either individually or by category.)

(State the time, place, and manner of the inspection and any related acts.)

2. To produce and permit the plaintiff to inspect and copy--and to test or sample--the following tangible things:

(Describe each thing, either individually or by category.)

(State the time, place, and manner of the inspection and any related acts.)

3. To permit the plaintiff to enter onto the following land to inspect, photograph, test, or sample the property or an object or operation on the property.

(Describe the property and each object or operation.)

(State the time and manner of the inspection and any related acts.)

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 51. Request for Admissions Under Rule 36.

(Caption--See Form 1.) The plaintiff name asks the defendant name to respond within 30 days to these requests by admitting, for purposes of this action only and subject to objections to admissibility at trial:

1. The genuineness of the following documents, copies of which [are attached] [are or have been furnished or made available for inspection and copying].

(List each document.)

2. The truth of each of the following statements:

(List each statement.)

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 52. Report of the Parties' Planning Meeting.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. The following persons participated in a Rule 26(f) conference on date by state the method of conferring :

(e.g., name representing the plaintiff.)

2. Initial Disclosures. The parties [have completed] [will complete by date] the initial disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1).

3. Discovery Plan. The parties propose this discovery plan:

(Use separate paragraphs or subparagraphs if the parties disagree.)

(a) Discovery will be needed on these subjects: (describe.)

(b) Disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information should be handled as follows: (briefly describe the parties' proposals, including the form or forms for production.)

(c) The parties have agreed to an order regarding claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material asserted after production, as follows: (briefly describe the provisions of the proposed order.)

(d) (Dates for commencing and completing discovery, including discovery to be commenced or completed before other discovery.)

(e) (Maximum number of interrogatories by each party to another party, along with dates the answers are due.)

(f) (Maximum number of requests for admission, along with the dates responses are due.)

(g) (Maximum number of depositions for each party.)

(h) (Limits on the length of depositions, in hours.)

(i) (Dates for exchanging reports of expert witnesses.)

4. Other Items:

(a) (A date if the parties ask to meet with the court before a scheduling order.)

(b) (Requested dates for pretrial conferences.)

(c) (Final dates for the plaintiff to amend pleadings or to join parties.)

(d) (Final dates for the defendant to amend pleadings or to join parties.)

(e) (Final dates to file dispositive motions.)

(f) (State the prospects for settlement.)

(g) (Identify any alternative dispute resolution procedure that may enhance settlement prospects.)

(h) (Final dates for submitting Rule 26(a)(3) witness lists, designations of witnesses whose testimony will be presented by deposition, and exhibit lists.)

(i) (Final dates to file objections under Rule 26(a)(3).)

(j) (Suggested trial date and estimate of trial length.)

(k) (Other matters.)

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 60. Notice of Condemnation.

(Caption--See Form 1.) To name the defendant .

1. A complaint in condemnation has been filed in the United States District Court for the _____ District of _____, to take property to use for purpose . The interest to be taken is describe . The court is located in the United States courthouse at this address: _____.

2. The property to be taken is described below. You have or claim an interest in it.

(Describe the property.)

3. The authority for taking this property is cite .

4. If you want to object or present any defense to the taking you must serve an answer on the plaintiff's attorney within 21 days [after being served with this notice] [from insert the date of the last publication of notice]. Send your answer to this address: _____.

5. Your answer must identify the property in which you claim an interest, state the nature and extent of that interest, and state all your objections and defenses to the taking. Objections and defenses not presented are waived.

6. If you fail to answer you consent to the taking and the court will enter a judgment that takes your described property interest.

7. Instead of answering, you may serve on the plaintiff's attorney a notice of appearance that designates the property in which you claim an interest. After you do that, you will receive a notice of any proceedings that affect you. Whether or not you have previously appeared or answered, you may present evidence at a trial to determine compensation for the property and share in the overall award.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 61. Complaint for Condemnation.

(Caption--See Form 1.)

1. (Statement of Jurisdiction--See Form 7.)

2. This is an action to take property under the power of eminent domain and to determine just compensation to be paid to the owners and parties in interest.

3. The authority for the taking is _____.

4. The property is to be used for _____.

5. The property to be taken is (describe in enough detail for identification--or attach the description and state "is described in Exhibit A, attached").

6. The interest to be acquired is _____.

7. The persons known to the plaintiff to have or claim an interest in the property are: _____. (For each person include the interest claimed.)

8. There may be other persons who have or claim an interest in the property and whose names could not be found after a reasonably diligent search. They are made parties under the designation "Unknown Owners."

Therefore, the plaintiff demands judgment:

(a) condemning the property;

(b) determining and awarding just compensation; and

(c) granting any other lawful and proper relief.

(Date and sign--See Form 2.)

Form 70. Judgment on a Jury Verdict.

(Caption--See Form 1.) This action was tried by a jury with Judge _____ presiding, and the jury has rendered a verdict.

It is ordered that:

[the plaintiff name recover from the defendant name the amount of $_____ with interest at the rate of ----%, along with costs.]

[the plaintiff recover nothing, the action be dismissed on the merits, and the defendant name recover costs from the plaintiff name .]

Date _____ _____

Clerk of Court

Form 71. Judgment by the Court without a Jury.

(Caption--See Form 1.) This action was tried by Judge _____ without a jury and the following decision was reached:

It is ordered that [the plaintiff name recover from the defendant name the amount of $_____, with prejudgment interest at the rate of _____%, postjudgment interest at the rate of _____%, along with costs.] [the plaintiff recover nothing, the action be dismissed on the merits, and the defendant name recover costs from the plaintiff name .]

Date _____ _____

Clerk of Court

Form 80. Notice of a Magistrate Judge's Availability.

1. A magistrate judge is available under title 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) to conduct the proceedings in this case, including a jury or nonjury trial and the entry of final judgment. But a magistrate judge can be assigned only if all parties voluntarily consent.

2. You may withhold your consent without adverse substantive consequences. The identity of any party consenting or withholding consent will not be disclosed to the judge to whom the case is assigned or to any magistrate judge.

3. If a magistrate judge does hear your case, you may appeal directly to a United States court of appeals as you would if a district judge heard it.

A form called Consent to an Assignment to a United States Magistrate Judge is available from the court clerk's office.

Form 81. Consent to an Assignment to a Magistrate Judge.

(Caption--See Form 1.) I voluntarily consent to have a United States magistrate judge conduct all further proceedings in this case, including a trial, and order the entry of final judgment. (Return this form to the court clerk--not to a judge or magistrate judge.)

Date _____ _____

Signature of the Party

Form 82. Order of Assignment to a Magistrate Judge.

(Caption--See Form 1.) With the parties' consent, it is ordered that this case be assigned to United States Magistrate Judge _____ of this district to conduct all proceedings and enter final judgment in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) .

Date _____ _____

United States District Judge